Postseason Record: 13-9-0 (.591)
Record vs. TEN: 2-0 (1.000)

The Los Angeles Chargers hired Jim Harbaugh as the 19th head coach in franchise history, returning the former Bolts quarterback from the 1999 and 2000 seasons to Southern California. Harbaugh posted a 144-52 record as a collegiate head coach and has a 60-29-1 record as an NFL head coach. As head coach, Harbaugh led the Michigan Wolverines to a National Championship, while previously coaching the San Francisco 49ers to three-straight NFC Championship Games, including an appearance in Super Bowl XLVII.

In five seasons as an NFL head coach, Harbaugh has coached 21 players to a combined 34 Pro Bowl appearances. Among coaches with at least 60 games coached, his .685 winning percentage in the regular season (55-25-1 record) is the eighth-best in NFL history. Harbaugh's teams have allowed just 17.5 points per game in those five seasons, the fifth-best mark for any NFL head coach with at least 75 games coached since the 1970 NFL-AFL Merger.

Harbaugh played quarterback at the University of Michigan, finishing his career as one of the most efficient passers in college football history. He posted a 21-3-1 record as a starter for the Wolverines, earning first-team All-American honors and finishing third in voting for the Heisman Trophy in 1986. Harbaugh paced the nation in 1985 in passing efficiency rating, while his career passing efficiency rating ranked as the best in NCAA history for more than 12 years following his time at Michigan.

A native of Toledo, Ohio, Harbaugh and his wife, Sarah, have two daughters — Addison and Katherine — and two sons — Jack and John. He also has three adult children — Jay, James Jr., and Grace. Harbaugh's son, Jay, is the special teams coordinator for the Seattle Seahawks. He is also the younger brother of Baltimore Ravens Head Coach John Harbaugh, and the two are sons of Jack and Jackie Harbaugh.

he Titans named Mike McCoy interim head coach on Monday, Oct. 13, 2025. McCoy is in his first season with the Titans, previously serving as senior offensive assistant, and his 23rd season as a coach in the NFL. He arrived in Tennessee in 2025 after three seasons with the Jacksonville Jaguars as quarterbacks coach.

While in Jacksonville, McCoy helped quarterback Trevor Lawrence register consecutive 4,000-yard passing seasons in 2022 (4,113) and 2023 (4,016). During those two seasons, Lawrence's 8,129 passing yards ranked fifth in the NFL, and his 46 touchdown passes ranked 10th. In 2024, injuries limited Lawrence to 10 games, during which time he passed for 2,045 yards and 11 touchdowns.

From 2013 to 2016, McCoy was the head coach of the San Diego Chargers. During that time, San Diego ranked ninth in the league in total offense (365.9 yards per game) and second in offensive third-down percentage (44.6 percent). In addition, McCoy's group had a top-10 passing attack each season. San Diego qualified for the postseason in McCoy's first campaign at the helm (2013) and beat the Bengals in the Wild Card round.

A college quarterback, McCoy spent his first two years at Long Beach State (1990-91) before spending his last two years at Utah (1993-94). He signed with the Broncos as an undrafted rookie free agent in 1995 and spent his rookie season on Green Bay's practice squad. JOE HORTIZ

PLAYER OF THE WEEK HONORS

One of the NFL's top talent evaluators for the last quarter century, Joe Hortiz brought his shrewd eye for talent and roster construction to the Chargers in his first season as General Manager — as the Bolts featured a pair of players acquired or extended by Hortiz that earned AFC Player of the Week recognition.

In his first draft as GM, Hortiz selected CB Tarheeb Still in the fifth round. The Maryland product turned in a breakout performance in Los Angeles' Week 13 victory over Atlanta, becoming the first Chargers rookie to win AFC Defensive Player of the Week since 2007. He led all NFL players in Week 13 with two interceptions, including one that he returned 61 yards for a touchdown that proved to be the winning score.

Hortiz extended K Cameron Dicker right before the 2024 season, locking in the most accurate kicker in NFL history for the Bolts for the foreseeable future. Dicker capped his 2024 campaign with back-to-back AFC Special Teams Player of the Week awards in Weeks 17 and 18. He was the only player in 2024 to win any Player of the Week honor in back-to-back weeks. Over those two games, Dicker led all NFL players with 30 points scored and eight field goals made.

This season, Dicker continued his excellence by making each of his first 15 field goals and all 14 extra point attempts. He was named AFC Special Teams Player of the Week after a Week 6 victory in Miami that saw him nail all five field goals, including a 33-yard game-winner in the game's waning seconds.

PFWA SUPERLATIVES

Joe Hortiz made his first draft choice as a general manager with the No. 5 overall pick of the 2024 NFL Draft, selecting T Joe Alt. Alt turned in a stellar rookie campaign, becoming one of the top tackles in the AFC, earning All-Rookie recognition from the Professional Football Writers of America.

Below is a look at Hortiz's draft picks that have been recognized by the PFWA as All-NFL, All-AFC or All-Rookie:

JIM HARBAUGH

A PROVEN WINNER

Fresh off coaching his alma mater, the University of Michigan, to a 15-0 season and CFP National Championship in 2023, Jim Harbaugh continued his culture of winning with the Bolts, leading the Chargers to an 11-6 record in his first season as head coach. He began his second season with a 3-0 record in the first three weeks, with all three wins coming against AFC West foes. Harbaugh now has six consecutive victories on Kickoff Weekend, the longest winning streak on Kickoff Weekend among active NFL head coaches.

He has a 60-28-1 record (.680 pct.) as an NFL head coach, the ninth-best winning percentage in history among NFL head coaches with at least 60 games coached.

MACK DROPS SIX SACKS IN VICTORY

Khalil Mack had a historic performance in the team's 2023 Week 4 win over the Raiders. He set a single-game team record and career high with six sacks, including a pair of strip-sacks. It was the first six-sack performance by any NFL player since 2017 and just the sixth since the stat began being tracked in 1982.

Mack added 10 tackles (eight solo), five tackles for loss, four quarterback hits and a pass defended. He was the only player since at least 2000 to have six sacks and at least 10 tackles in a single game. He was recognized as AFC Defensive Player of the Week for his performance, the fourth weekly award of his career.

Along with his five-sack performance in 2015, Mack joined Hall of Fame LB Derrick Thomas as the only players with multiple games of five or more sacks since the stat started being tracked in 1982.

DICKER MAKES HISTORY

Cameron Dicker made history multiple times in 2024 — most recently in the Week 16 home victory over Denver. At the end of the first half, Dicker attempted a fair catch free kick field goal after a fair catch on the previous play and drilled the 57-yard attempt.

The kick is believed to be the longest fair catch free kick field goal in NFL history and first make since K Ray Wersching, who made a 45-yard attempt for the Bolts in 1976. The last confirmed fair catch free kick field goal attempt was in 2019.

In Week 7 at Arizona, Dicker tied a franchise record with a career-long 59-yard field goal in the second quarter. This season, the Texas product has made nine out of 10 field goals of 50-plus yards (90.0 pct.), the best field goal percentage in the NFL in 2024 from 50-plus yards (min. 10 attempts).

Through the 2025 season, Dicker has five made field goals of 55-plus yards, accounting for five of the eight longest made field goals in franchise history.

Former Chargers tight end Antonio Gates voted into Pro Football Hall of Fame

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press
February 7, 2025

NEW ORLEANS — Former Chargers tight end Antonio Gates was voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in the smallest induction class in 20 years following offseason rule changes meant to make it harder to get inducted.

Gates, elected in his second year of eligibility, will be joined by defensive end Jared Allen, cornerback Eric Allen and wide receiver Sterling Sharpe.

Gates spent his entire 16-year career with the Chargers, becoming one of the best at his position with 116 touchdown catches. Gates played only basketball in college at Kent State, but the undrafted free agent and former power forward became the Chargers' franchise leader in receptions, yards receiving, and touchdown catches and was selected to eight Pro Bowls.

"The opportunity I got speaks volumes of how (the Chargers) believed in me," Gates said. "I'm happy it all paid off."

Gates, who has served as the Chargers' legends ambassador since retiring in 2018, was introduced in New Orleans' Saenger Theatre by his former Chargers teammate and fellow Hall of Famer, LaDainian Tomlinson.

"It's really so hard to describe in words," Gates told reporters after the announcement. "I'm so happy. It's like a world of weight off my shoulders. I finally made it. I finally reached the pinnacle of sports."

He became an All-Pro in just his second season in 2004. He was an All-Pro again the next two seasons and went on to have a 16-year career with the Chargers. Gates finished with 955 catches for 11,841 yards and an NFL record for tight ends with his 116 touchdown catches. He ranks seventh all-time in touchdown receptions.

Gates transferred to Kent State after Nick Saban, then the football coach at Michigan State, discouraged him from playing both sports for the Spartans. Gates helped the Golden Flashes reach the Elite Eight of the NCAA Tournament as a junior. He earned Associated Press All-American honorable mention accolades as a senior, averaging 20.6 points and 7.7 rebounds per game, but NFL scouts kept tabs on him and the rest is history.

"Antonio is an amazing human being who also happens to be one of the greatest players in NFL history. I'm thrilled to see him get the recognition he so deeply deserves," Chargers owner Dean Spanos said in a statement on the team's website. "To accomplish what Antonio has, never having played college football and going undrafted, is a testament to perseverance, hard work and maximizing your God-given ability. ... He redefined the tight end position in a way no one has since Kellen Winslow, and I can't wait to see him put on that gold jacket for the first time this summer in Canton."

Gates will be the 12th Charger to be enshrined, joining wide receivers Lance Alworth and Charline Joiner, offensive tackle Ron Mix, coaches Sid Gillman and Don Coryell, quarterback Dan Fouts, tight end Kellen Winslow, defensive end Fred Dean, linebacker Junior Seau, Tomlinson (running back) and executive Bobby Beathard.

Sharpe got in as a seniors candidate in voting announced Thursday night at the NFL Honors and will join younger brother Shannon as the first siblings ever inducted into the Hall. Two-time Super Bowl MVP Eli Manning fell short and won't join older brother Peyton in Canton, Ohio, this year. Neither will former Rams receiver Torrey Holt, who was a finalist for the sixth consecutive year.

Shannon delivered the news directly to Sterling, and they will be together forever at the Hall after the induction ceremony on Aug. 2.

"I don't think that has really set in yet," Sterling Sharpe said. "It's one of those situations where the closer it gets to having the same color jacket he has and standing in same place he stood and being able to have a conv about the journey to get there I think it will set in. But right now it hasn't hit home yet."

While the small class is a change from past years when at least seven people got inducted in each of the previous 12 classes, it isn't unprecedented.

There were only four inductees in the 2005 class and there were 18 other years with three or four inductees since the first class of 17 was enshrined in 1963.

"You almost appreciate it more," Jared Allen said. "Nothing comes easy. When I found out it was only four, it became more special. There's a true emphasis on what it means to be a Hall of Famer. Clearly we fit that. For me, it was kind of a sigh of relief."

New rules were instituted this year after a push by Hall of Famers to make the Hall more exclusive, and that led directly to the smaller class. The modern era candidates were voted from 15 down to seven in the final stage, instead of five in past years.

The 49 voters then got to vote for five of the seven with anyone reaching 80% or finishing in the top three getting into the Hall. In past years, the five finalists all got an up-or-down vote with all five getting in for the past 17 years.

The candidates from the seniors, coach and contributor categories were then all placed in a group with voters picking three. Candidates also needed 80% support with the top finisher automatically getting in even if he fell short.

Hall of Fame spokesman Rich Desrosiers said no decision was made on whether to keep this system in place for 2026 but said one year might be too soon to draw any conclusions.

Jared Allen was a four-time All-Pro who finished his career with 136 sacks, including a league-leading 22 in 2011 for Minnesota. He also led the league in sacks with 15½ for Kansas City in 2007 and reached double digits in seven straight seasons. His final game was a Super Bowl loss for Carolina against Denver in the 2015 season.

Eric Allen starred for 14 seasons as a top cornerback in the NFL and never had to move to safety as he aged. Allen's career spanned from the "Fog Bowl" game in 1988 when he starred for Philadelphia as a rookie to the "Tuck Rule" game in the 2001 season for Oakland in his final game.

Allen finished with 54 interceptions, including eight returned for touchdowns. He was a first-team All-Pro in 1989 and had two other seasons as a second-team selection.

He got in on his 19th year of eligibility.

"Rarely does life play out like you want it to," Eric Allen said. "There's always some curves and bends. But time always reveals the truth. ... It took maybe time for people to see the complexity of my situation."

Sharpe had a short but productive career for the Green Bay Packers from 1988-94. His best season came in 1992, when he became the sixth player to win the receiving triple crown, setting an NFL record with 108 catches for 1,461 yards and 13 touchdowns.

He broke his own record with 112 catches in 1993 and led the NFL with 18 touchdown receptions in his final season, 1994, before a neck injury cut his career short.

Sharpe was a three-time All-Pro and had 595 catches for 8,134 yards and 65 TDs. He trailed only Jerry Rice over his seven-year career in receptions and TD catches.

The Sharpe brothers will join three father-son tandems in the Hall: Tim and Wellington Mara; Art Rooney Sr. and Dan Rooney; and Ed and Steve Sabol.

The four other modern-era candidates who reached the final stage but fell short were offensive tackle Willie Anderson, linebacker Luke Kuechly, kicker Adam Vinatieri and Holt. Those four automatically advance to the final 15 for next year's voting.

The other eight finalists who got cut earlier were Manning, offensive lineman Jahri Evans, receiver Steve Smith Sr., defensive end/linebacker Terrell Suggs, running back Fred Taylor, receiver Reggie Wayne, safety Darren Woodson and offensive lineman Marshal Yanda.

The seniors candidates who fell short were linebacker Maxie Baughan and offensive lineman Jim Tyrer, with Mike Holmgren falling short as the coach and Ralph Hay as the contributor.

Chargers to host Week 1 game in São Paulo, Brazil

By Kris Rhim
ESPN
February 19, 2025

LOS ANGELES -- The Chargers will host the NFL's second regular-season game in Brazil, the NFL announced Wednesday, making the franchise the first to play on five continents.

The Chargers will face an opponent to be announced in São Paulo on Friday, Sept. 5, the day after the NFL season kicks off on Thursday night.

This game will be the Chargers' first international competition since hosting the Kansas City Chiefs in Mexico City in 2019. The Bolts lost that game 24-19. L.A. has also played two games at London's Wembley Stadium, against the Tennessee Titans in 2018 and against New Orleans in 2008, as well as games in Tokyo, Berlin and Sydney.

"It's an honor to once again represent the NFL on an international stage," Chargers president of business operations A.G. Spanos wrote in a statement. "It's also a tremendous opportunity to help grow the game and bring the Chargers brand to millions of sports fans across Brazil and Latin America."

The NFL's first game in Brazil, which featured the Philadelphia Eagles against the Green Bay Packers last season, was overshadowed by poor field conditions. Players struggled to find their footing throughout the game at Brazil's Arena Corinthians, normally a soccer stadium. The Eagles won the game 34-29.

"I mean, y'all saw out there that it was kind of rough to get traction," Eagles quarterback Jalen Hurts said. "Definitely challenging on that field. It's not the type of field we're used to playing on."

NFL's Global Markets Program adds four new clubs, two new markets in 2025

NFL.com
March 31, 2025

The National Football League announced an expansion of its Global Markets Program (GMP), with four new clubs set to participate in 2025 and two new markets added.

Launched in 2022, the Global Markets Program awards NFL clubs international marketing rights to build brand awareness and fandom beyond the U.S., through fan engagement, events, commercial opportunities and NFL Flag development.

In total, 29 clubs will participate in the program across 21 international markets -- up from 25 clubs across 19 markets in 2024 -- as the NFL continues to prioritize global growth and connecting with more fans across markets around the world.

"The expansion of the Global Markets Program in 2025 reflects the NFL's continued focus to grow the game and connect with fans on a global scale," said Peter O'Reilly, NFL executive vice president, club business, major events and international. "With more clubs entering the program and existing clubs adding to their global rights, and as the program expands to new markets, we are seeing strong momentum and impact in growing fandom worldwide together."

Global Markets Program updates for 2025 include:

FOUR NEW CLUBS:

Baltimore Ravens: Granted rights in the United Kingdom.

Green Bay Packers: Granted rights across Germany, Ireland and the United Kingdom.

Los Angeles Chargers: Granted rights in Greece.
Washington Commanders: Granted rights in the United Arab Emirates.

TWO NEW MARKETS:

Greece: Los Angeles Chargers.
United Arab Emirates: Los Angeles Rams, San Francisco 49ers and Washington Commanders

EXISTING EXPANSION: In 2025, nine clubs that currently hold GMP rights will expand to additional countries, acquiring between one and three territories per club (see full club rights chart below).

Arizona Cardinals: Adding Canada.

Detroit Lions: Adding Brazil.

Indianapolis Colts: Adding Switzerland (now across entire DACH region).

Kansas City Chiefs: Adding Spain, Ireland and United Kingdom.

Las Vegas Raiders: Adding Australia and New Zealand.

Los Angeles Rams: Adding United Arab Emirates.

Philadelphia Eagles: Adding Brazil.

San Francisco 49ers: Adding United Arab Emirates.

Seattle Seahawks: Adding Australia and New Zealand.

NFL clubs can apply for rights to international markets by submitting proposals to the International Committee for review each spring. Clubs are awarded rights for a five-year term through the program and during this period can pursue activities that are consistent with what they can do in their home domestic market, in their awarded international markets.

NFL International Games:

The NFL has confirmed the following regular season international games to be played in 2025:

Two regular season games in London at Tottenham Hotspur Stadium -- the only purpose-built NFL stadium outside of the U.S. -- featuring the New York Jets and the Cleveland Browns as designated teams.

One game in Berlin, Germany at the Olympic Stadium Berlin, with the Indianapolis Colts as the designated team.

One game in Madrid, Spain at the Bernabéu Stadium -- Home to Real Madrid C.F., featuring the Miami Dolphins.

A first-ever regular season game in Dublin, Ireland with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

A return to São Paulo, Brazil and Corinthians Arena during Week 1 of the 2025 regular season, featuring the Los Angeles Chargers as the designated team.

The Jacksonville Jaguars will also return to Wembley Stadium in London to operate a home game as part of their multi-year commitment to playing a game in the U.K.

The NFL recently announced its first international game for the 2026 regular season, which will be hosted in Melbourne, Australia featuring the Los Angeles Rams.

Fifty-five regular season NFL games have been played around the world throughout the league's history, with London, Munich, Frankfurt, São Paulo, Mexico City and Toronto all hosting games to date.

Joe Hortiz

‘Let the draft come to you’: Chargers’ free-agency haul informed their NFL draft needs

By Thuc Nhi Nguyen
Los Angeles Times
April 23, 2025

Compared to his first NFL draft as a general manager when he owned the fifth overall pick, Joe Hortiz’s phone has been eerily silent this draft season. That’s how the Chargers GM knows his strategy is working.

“We’re going to try to pick as late as we can every year,” Hortiz said.

The 22nd pick in Thursday’s draft has attracted fewer trade propositions than last year’s selection, Hortiz acknowledged, but he’s happy to keep picking later in the first round if it means the Chargers can build on last season’s success. Hortiz set the table for the Chargers’ 11-win season by acing his first draft and hopes for an equally impressive encore this week.

The three-day draft brings a rarely seen sparkle to the eye of the former Baltimore Ravens scout. This is, as Hortiz called it, “the scout Super Bowl.”

With 10 picks, Hortiz’s plan for his big game is determined by the Chargers’ first wave of free agency that brought in 12 players. While the transactions didn’t make national headlines, they gave the Chargers a solid foundation entering the draft, in which they could add talent in several key areas including offensive and defensive line, receiver, running back, edge rusher and tight end.

“You gotta make smart decisions, calculated decisions, trying to build your roster as deep as you can going into the draft,” Hortiz said, “so you can sit there, kind of let the draft come to you and pick the best player available.”

The Chargers addressed questions on the interior of their offensive line by signing right guard Mekhi Becton and former Las Vegas Raiders starting center Andre James. By re-signing returning center Bradley Bozeman, Hortiz hopes to have a competitive offseason to strengthen an offensive line that gave up four sacks in a playoff loss to the Houston Texans.

The defensive line that lost Poona Ford and Morgan Fox in free agency reloaded with Naquan Jones and Da’Shawn Hand. But just because Hortiz signed proven veterans doesn’t mean he won’t stockpile more talent at the same positions through the draft.

“Maybe it’s not a need. Two weeks later, it can be a need,” Hortiz said. “So you just take the best player available and he’s going to be here for four or five years or even longer and he’s going to help win games.”

Instead of having to hunt for position-specific help in the unpredictable draft, Hortiz and assistant general manager Chad Alexander learned to focus their strategy on the best prospects while working for the Ravens. It worked flawlessly last year when the Chargers raised eyebrows by picking two cornerbacks in the fifth round. Tarheeb Still and Cam Hart proved to be worthy starters when injuries decimated the secondary.

After signing former Pittsburgh Steelers star Najee Harris in free agency, the Chargers could add another running back in a draft that’s especially deep at the position. Besides Harris, the team’s only running backs are special teams stalwart Hassan Haskins, former sixth-round pick Kimani Vidal and practice squad member Jaret Patterson.

For the third consecutive year the Chargers could take another wide receiver in the first two days of the draft with hopes of giving quarterback Justin Herbert more weapons. Last year’s second-round pick, Ladd McConkey, set Chargers rookie records for receptions and receiving yards while Quentin Johnston showed marked improvement in all statistical categories in his second season, but the former first-round pick still struggled with consistency in big games.

Receivers Tetairoa McMillan and Matthew Golden were among the prospects who reportedly visited the Chargers ahead of the draft. McMillan, a towering 6-foot-4, 219-pound prospect, is a Servite High alumnus who caught 84 passes for 1,319 yards at Arizona last season. The 5-11, 191-pound Golden clocked 4.29 seconds in the 40-yard dash at the NFL combine, the fastest among receivers.

Although the Chargers zeroed in on the receivers among their 30 in-person visits allowed by the NFL, it’s no sure indication of Hortiz’s plans for draft day. The Chargers didn’t host Joe Alt before they chose the right tackle with the No. 5 pick last year.

They’re still beaming about that decision.

Chargers' Jim Harbaugh says he had hip replacement, heart procedure during offseason

By Jenna West
The Athletic
June 11, 2025

Los Angeles Chargers coach Jim Harbaugh said he had successful hip replacement surgery and a cardiac ablation during the offseason.

"Now the doctors can't find anything wrong with me," Harbaugh said at Tuesday's minicamp. "Got an 'A' grade."

Harbaugh's health update comes after he exited a Week 6 game against the Denver Broncos last year while dealing with atrial flutter, a type of arrhythmia. The 61-year-old left in the first quarter and initially entered Los Angeles' medical tent before heading to the locker room for treatment, which included an IV and an EKG. He returned to the sideline in the first quarter and coached the remainder of the game.

After the Chargers' 23-16 win over the Broncos, Harbaugh said it was his third atrial flutter episode. He had one in 1999 as a player and another while coaching for the San Francisco 49ers in 2012. Harbaugh said he received an ablation to treat each of those two episodes.

A cardiac ablation is a procedure that "uses heat or cold energy to create tiny scars in the heart," according to the Mayo Clinic. Those scars "block faulty heart signals and restore a typical heartbeat."

Harbaugh saw a cardiologist after the Broncos game. The coach had to wear a heart monitor for two weeks and was placed on medication.

This offseason, Harbaugh also underwent a hip replacement after walking with a significant limp for years. He did not provide any additional details on the procedure at minicamp Tuesday and said "everything's good" when asked about his offseason health updates.

The many quirks of Jim Harbaugh: From saving a life to saving his pants

Jim Harbaugh's life plan has always been pretty simple.

He detailed it succinctly in February 2024 while standing on a theater stage inside SoFi Stadium. That day, Harbaugh was introduced as head coach of the Los Angeles Chargers, a team he had quarterbacked in the twilight seasons of his 14-year NFL playing career. Harbaugh was reminiscing about his playing days in San Diego, and he provided a window into his mentality.

"I'm going to play as long as I can," Harbaugh remembers thinking, "then coach, then die."

Harbaugh played until he was 38 years old, from Palo Alto High School to the University of Michigan to the Chicago Bears, Indianapolis Colts, Baltimore Ravens, Chargers and, in 2001, the Carolina Panthers. He transitioned into Phase 2 right away. In 2002, he joined the Oakland Raiders staff as Al Davis' quarterbacks coach. It was Harbaugh's first coaching job. He made $50,000 a year. Harbaugh spent two years with the Raiders, whom the Chargers face in Las Vegas on Monday night. He compared his Raiders years to "working on a master's degree or a PhD" in football.

Harbaugh's coaching career is now in its 24th season. As he always hoped, his life has been devoted to football. The plan is simple to speak. The process of living out that plan has been anything but.

That is because Harbaugh is one of one, a unique and authentic character who has left a mountain of unique and authentic stories in his wake.

Here are some of those stories.

'I was wetting my pants ... Jim was just laughing at them'

If the whole football thing hadn't worked out, Harbaugh would have fit well with the rugged NBA of the 1990s. He averaged about 20 points and 10 rebounds and flashed his "Bad Boy" potential as a high school hoopster willing to fight an entire opposing crowd.

Consider the melee at a road game in 1982, when tensions ran high from the moment Palo Alto High arrived. A menacing throng at Santa Clara High gave Harbaugh and company a hostile welcome as players stepped out of the team bus.

David Feldman, a prep teammate of Harbaugh's who grew up to become an ESPN broadcaster, remembers the reception well.

"I was wetting my pants," he said, "and Jim was just laughing at them."

Soon after tipoff, there were so many cheap shots and hard fouls that Jack Harbaugh — Jim's father and Stanford's defensive coordinator at the time — approached the opposing coach with a warning: Get this under control or you're going to have a problem.

But things continued to unravel. And when a blindside elbow knocked a Palo Alto player to the hardwood, the player sprang up ready to throw haymakers. From there, it was on. Fans ran down from the stands eager to join the saloon-style brawl, including a quartet of angry strangers making a beeline for Jim Harbaugh.

"Just mayhem," Harbaugh told me in 2012. "I remember being backed into the wall on the baseline. There were four people there — not players, but people who had come out of the stands. They were all coming at me (with raised fists). And I'm squared up getting ready to defend myself and throw."

But Jack Harbaugh, as promised, was at the ready.

"My dad comes in — whoosh! — just like that and cleared everybody out like a wrecking ball," Jim said. "It was like a superhero moment. Jack Harbaugh, legendary status." — Daniel Brown, staff writer / editor

'Mike Tyson came roaring out'

A few hours remained before the ball would drop at Times Square, but across the country, as 1995's last gasp played out in a since-demolished stadium, Jim Harbaugh was getting a jump start on the happiest new year of them all.

Harbaugh, at 32, had found new life with the Indianapolis Colts after some tumultuous years with the Chicago Bears and was in the process of reinventing himself as "Captain Comeback." Having just quarterbacked the underdog Colts to a first-round playoff upset of the San Diego Chargers, Harbaugh couldn't stop smiling when I saw him after the game in the visitors' locker room at Qualcomm Stadium.

"I've never had so much fun," Harbaugh said. "Good stuff like this never happens to me. I'm just so lucky to be able to play football, and I'm enjoying every moment."

Two weeks later, after another shocking road playoff upset (over the Kansas City Chiefs), I traveled to Pittsburgh for Sports Illustrated and saw Captain Comeback add to his legend. Trailing the favored Steelers by four points in the final minutes of the AFC Championship Game, Harbaugh habitually bought time by scrambling away from defenders, fired a clutch fourth-down completion, dislocated the index finger on his throwing hand, popped it back into place between plays and reached the Pittsburgh 29-yard-line with six seconds to go. He then unleashed a glorious Hail Mary that hung between three Steelers defenders — and came within inches of ending up in the hands of Colts receiver Aaron Bailey.

The storybook ending didn't quite happen, but Harbaugh's defiant grin remained. Afterward, citing a recent heavyweight title matchup between an indomitable champion and an overmatched opponent, Harbaugh lauded the way his teammates had silenced their skeptics by taking the fight to the home team: "A lot of people expected Peter McNeeley," he said proudly. "But Mike Tyson came roaring out of the locker room." — Michael Silver, NFL senior writer

'We got laaaaaahts of peanut butter'

My first real interaction with Jim Harbaugh came during his first year coaching at Stanford. His brother-in-law, Tom Crean, had become a huge advocate for my recruiting book, "Meat Market," that had just been published. Crean was the basketball coach at Marquette at the time and reached out to me through a colleague of mine at ESPN, Pat Forde. Crean ended up helping me promote the book even more than the publisher did.

At one point, he suggested I go up to Stanford and spend some time with Jim and his staff. I set it up with someone I think Tom connected me to at Stanford.

I got up there for spring ball. When I walked into the staff room, Jim didn't seem to recall that I was coming. Or know who I was. After a few minutes of me explaining my visit, Harbaugh had this look on his face. It's that same expression that some of his co-workers later told me they've referred to as the “Shark” — this kind of blank stare with his mouth slightly agape.

I suspect because he heard that Tom had told me to come, Jim tried to be hospitable. He walked me over to their kitchenette area and asked if I like peanut butter. (I do.)

“We got laaaaaahts of peanut butter,” he said, opening up a cabinet where they had some Costco-sized vats of it. He motioned over to a few loaves of white bread.

“Make as much as you like.”

‘He just saved my life’

Some vintage Harbaugh moments came at the Holiday Inn in Boardman, Ohio, in 2011, Harbaugh’s first year with the San Francisco 49ers. The 49ers were staying there — it’s right outside the team owners’ hometown of Youngstown — between games in Cincinnati and Philadelphia.

The area wasn’t exactly replete with resources. Harbaugh even held a walk-through practice in the hotel’s parking lot, making sure to have the team buses help form a barrier between the team and any nosy citizens. Harbaugh, always, is in constant fear of enemy spies learning his plays and plans.

It was decidedly un-fancy and Harbaugh loved it.

“That big slab of cement even had lines and tall trees around it,” he gushed at the time. “That was one of the finer walk-through spots I’ve been associated with.”

The real action came during a team meal held in one of the hotel’s crowded conference rooms. Steak was on the menu and guard Adam Snyder started choking on a piece.

“It’s happened before where it just goes down the wrong pipe,” Snyder recalled years later. “And panic sets in real quick. And when you’re panicking, you’re not breathing. There was something lodged in my throat. I couldn’t even drink water.”

Harbaugh was seated and in mid-conversation on the other side of the conference room.

He saw the commotion and immediately popped up and began making his way to his choking guard, pushing through groups of people and knocking aside tables like a Secret Service agent rushing to aid the president.

The other offensive linemen had risen to try to help Snyder, but Harbaugh pushed through them, too. Then he began beating on the 300-pound lineman’s back.

“And it’s like — boom! — he punches him in the back so hard you could hear it,” tackle Joe Staley said.

Said Snyder: “He was just smacking the heck out of me, just smashing my back. At one point, he picked me up and it was like — blew! — it went down (my throat). And it was, ‘Oh my God! He just saved my life!’”

And as soon as the event was over? Harbaugh calmly walked back to where he was sitting and finished his meal, like it was something that happened every day.

“He pushed through guys to get to Adam and then he literally saved his life,” center Daniel Kilgore said. “And then he just went back to his conversation.” — Matt Barrows, 49ers beat writer

‘Is Jim Kelly in town?’

Harbaugh once spoke to the San Jose State football team, which practices a few miles from the 49ers’ facility. The college stadium is near my home, so I rushed over to get some offseason quotes. When I got there, I saw Harbaugh had a massive gash across his forehead.

I couldn’t resist.

“Is Jim Kelly in town?” I asked, a reference to the former Buffalo Bills quarterback whom Harbaugh once punched — breaking his hand in the process — during a pregame production meeting after Kelly, then in broadcasting, had questioned his toughness on a pregame show.

“You’re not the first person to say that this morning,” Harbaugh replied. — Barrows

No sleep needed in Rome

I was actually on Harbaugh’s flight to Italy when he took Michigan to Rome in 2017.

Michigan flew commercial and most of the team was on the one direct flight from Detroit, which got to Rome at around 8 a.m. local time. If Harbaugh wasn’t the last person to board, he was in the final five. I walked off the 10-hour flight, six hours into a new time zone, barely able to stand. I don’t know if Harbaugh slept more than a few minutes. Though when I saw him in the customs line, he looked exactly the same as he always does. His cap was straight, his shirt was tucked, his lip was packed and he was somehow effortlessly hauling the luggage of his entire family as if the previous 10 hours hadn’t happened.

The players were exhausted. Harbaugh was invigorated. When he saw me, he didn’t really say hello as much as he immediately went into a comment about something random I’d said on the radio he agreed with several weeks prior. Then, almost without blinking, he rounded up his family (toddler-heavy back then) and pulled up one of those side ropes toward the outside of the customs line. He told the whole crew to follow him and wandered off in search those lines that let people with kids through first. If that didn’t exist, he’d make his own.

Waiting isn’t his thing.

Nobody from the team went to a hotel after we landed. Harbaugh, his coaches and players immediately got on shuttles and drove to Villa Borghese — almost the direct middle of Rome — to eat in the park before spending the entire rest of that day walking the streets of the city. Still on zero sleep. He never slowed down. The players did! I did! He did not. Not even after tipping a street musician on a park bridge who had absolutely no idea who he was.

Apart from getting to sit near the pope, Harbaugh’s celebrity was irrelevant in Italy. Most of the randomness we met on the street thought Michigan was some sort of gigantic high school soccer team. Harbaugh loved it. I’ve never seen a person gain more energy from those in his orbit the way he does. He played paintball with the team over there — at nearly 55 years old — for probably four hours. If he limped the rest of the week, it was in private. I don’t know if he slept that entire trip. Not sure he needed it.

People think he’s a gimmick. He’s not. He’s easily one of the most authentic (for good and bad) people I’ve ever met. — Nick Baumgardner, NFL Draft analyst

‘Those are pretty expensive pants’

In 2021, Michigan was playing at Penn State on a cold, windy November day. An important detail is that, by that time, Harbaugh had stopped wearing Walmart khakis and switched to blue athleisure pants from Lululemon, which are significantly nicer and more expensive but apparently not flame-resistant. The gist of the story is that Harbaugh was so engrossed in the game that he stood too close to a space heater and caught his pants on fire. Daylen Baldwin, one of Michigan’s wide receivers, was the first person to notice. Harbaugh was able to extinguish the flames, but not before they burned through the outer layer of his pants.

When he recounted the incident to a local TV station, Harbaugh said Baldwin was so nonchalant about the flaming pants that it took him a moment to realize what was happening.

“Maybe a little coaching point to Daylen Baldwin: If somebody’s on fire, man, (be) like, ‘Hey, Coach!’” Harbaugh said. “Maybe just grab me, get me out of the way or something. Be a little more emphatic about the fact that somebody’s on fire.”

Harbaugh said he planned to keep the pants, cut off the legs and convert them into shorts.

“Those are pretty expensive pants, those Lululemons,” he said. — Austin Meek, Michigan beat writer

‘Alas, I did not go to law school’

It’s impossible to talk about Harbaugh’s final season at Michigan without mentioning his battles with the NCAA and the Big Ten. Michigan was being investigated for hosting recruits on campus during the COVID-19 dead period and the school imposed a three-game suspension on Harbaugh to open the season. The suspension turned into a weekly game of “Where’s Jim Harbaugh now?” He mowed his lawn, went to McDonald’s, worked the chains for his son’s youth football team and attended a funeral for one of his former players at Stanford.

There was no levity to the second suspension, handed down by the Big Ten in response to the Connor Stalions sign-stealing investigation, which eventually led to a 10-year show-cause penalty for Harbaugh on top of an earlier four-year show-cause penalty. Michigan went to court seeking a temporary restraining order that would have allowed Harbaugh to coach while the school challenged the suspension. Right up to kickoff of Michigan’s next game against Penn State, the school was hoping a judge would intervene on Harbaugh’s behalf. Instead, the judge scheduled a hearing for the following week. For a moment, it appeared that Harbaugh might end up on the witness stand in a Washtenaw County courtroom, testifying about why the Big Ten’s suspension was misguided.

“I’m not an attorney, but I always wanted to be,” Harbaugh said. “I watched a lot of shows, watched ‘Judge Judy.’ I always felt like it would be cool to get up there and thunder away at a jury like Tom Cruise in 'A Few Good Men' or be a judge like Judge Judy. Alas, I did not go to law school."

Harbaugh's moment in court never happened. Michigan dropped its legal challenge, and Harbaugh missed the final three regular-season games before returning for Michigan's postseason run. — Meek

'Multiple championships'

Covering Jim Harbaugh is a fascinating experience. Every day presents an opportunity to observe or uncover something as outrageous as it is meaningful.

And that is an important point to remember with Harbaugh: No matter how silly it may seem in the moment, every action and every word has a purpose.

"Multiple championships," Harbaugh said at his introductory news conference last year. "We're going to be humble and hungry, but that's our goal."

When he first moved back to Southern California in the early months of 2024, Harbaugh lived in an RV alongside offensive coordinator Greg Roman at the Waterfront RV Park in Huntington Beach. He was channeling Jim Rockford, one of his favorite television characters from the 1970s show "The Rockford Files." Harbaugh is an avid consumer of TV and movies. During his playing days, he guest-starred on the sitcom "Saved By The Bell" as Screech's cousin.

On the day before he was introduced as Chargers head coach, Harbaugh drove to Home Depot with Ben Herbert, the team's executive director of player performance, and bought a Shop-Vac. Harbaugh and Herbert used that Shop-Vac to vacuum out the weight room at the Chargers' former facility in Costa Mesa.

When the Chargers got on the practice field in spring of 2024, players were shocked to see Harbaugh, wearing black Jordan cleats, participating in strength and conditioning drills. "You got to be on your stuff because coach is doing it right there with you," safety Alohi Gilman told me last season.

Harbaugh continued this through training camp, when the strength and conditioning drills were held at the end of the practice. Harbaugh calls these "fourth-quarter finishers."

One day last year, Harbaugh had a media engagement right after a training camp practice, so he could not participate with the players. After the media appearance, Harbaugh walked back onto the empty field and, by himself, flipped a weighted sled back and forth for several minutes. A young Chargers fan was standing in a tent on the sideline yelling to Harbaugh. "Coach! Coach! Can you sign an autograph?" Harbaugh paid him no mind until he was done with his sets. It might seem comical or even performative, but players notice the commitment.

Harbaugh's meetings are now the stuff of legend in the Chargers' locker room. On the night before a Week 10 win over the Tennessee Titans last season, Harbaugh read the lyrics to the 1976 song "The Wreck of the Edmund Fitzgerald" by Gordon Lightfoot. The song tells the story of a shipwreck in Lake Superior, and the Sunday the Chargers played the Titans was the 49th anniversary of the disaster. In another meeting last season, Harbaugh read the lyrics to the 2009 hit "I Gotta Feeling" by the Black Eyed Peas. Before the season finale against the Raiders last year, Harbaugh reached into his pants during a team meeting and pulled out a back-scratcher.

"You need to have your own back sometimes," Harbaugh said to the players. "There's not always going to be somebody there to scratch your back for you, so you do it yourself."

He then gifted a personalized back-scratcher to each player emblazoned with their name and number.

Harbaugh often talks about waking up in the early-morning hours thinking about the team, the team, the team. He targets his idiosyncrasies toward the ultimate goal in his life right now. "The Lombardi Trophy, that's my mission," Harbaugh said.

He had a chance in the 2012 season when his San Francisco 49ers lost to the Baltimore Ravens in the Super Bowl. Harbaugh faced his brother John in that game. Last season, the Chargers played the Ravens on "Monday Night Football." In the lead-up to another brotherly rematch, Harbaugh recalled what he was thinking after that Super Bowl loss.

"Walking off the field at that Super Bowl, it was like, there will be another day," Harbaugh said. "And then there wasn't for many years, and it looked like I wouldn't have a chance for another day. But by the grace of God ... we're back in it and back on a team that has a chance to do that."

It is perhaps the only accomplishment still missing from what has been a monumental football life.

"We're going for the Super Bowl," Harbaugh said. "That's our goal, and we're gonna do it or die trying." — Daniel Popper, Chargers beat writer

Jim Harbaugh's coaching evolution, from NCAA to the NFL

*By Kris Rhim
ESPN
September 5, 2025*

Former San Francisco 49ers tight end Delanie Walker remembers a 2012 training camp practice beginning as practice always had -- until coach Jim Harbaugh called the team to midfield.

"We thinking, 'Oh yeah, he's about to cancel practice,'" Walker said. "'We going to go to a water park or something.'"

Harbaugh began speaking to the team about its NFC West rivals. The Seattle Seahawks were at an amusement park, Harbaugh told the team. The St. Louis Rams and Arizona Cardinals were also enjoying a day off, he said. "Guess what the 49ers are going to do today?" Harbaugh asked.

They would practice -- intensely. At least a hundred plays: "Everybody else takes breaks, the 49ers don't," Harbaugh said.

"Everybody was kind of pissed that day," Walker said while laughing.

This was the Jim Harbaugh way: working his players to the brink of exhaustion and then some. The method was effective -- until it infuriated everyone. But Harbaugh ushered in a period of renaissance for the 49ers; that season, San Francisco reached Super Bowl XLVII.

"There won't be any magic formulas," Harbaugh promised Los Angeles Chargers fans at his introductory news conference in 2024. "The only ones that I know are just good, old-fashioned hard work."

While Harbaugh largely operates in the same fashion, the Chargers' version of the coach has evolved. He's traded in the khakis for gray trousers. His training camp practices have gone from the intensity of a game day to what his former players see as nearing a version of flag football that prioritizes keeping the team healthy.

"That's where he's different. Now it's like, 'Yeah, let's take that break.' It's like, damn, 'Who is this dude?'" said Walker, who was a volunteer coach with the Chargers during last year's training camp. "This Jim Harbaugh, he got nicer for sure. So when people say he changed, I would say he changed for the better of the game."

The old Harbaugh upset some players, coaches and execs. This Harbaugh, now 61 years old, hardened by the failures and lessons of his first NFL stint and early struggles in the college ranks, is approaching the job differently. It could be the difference in whether Harbaugh reaches the goal of winning a Super Bowl -- and how long the Chargers can tolerate him. The second year of Harbaugh in Los Angeles begins Friday, when the Chargers face the Kansas City Chiefs in São Paulo (8 p.m. ET, YouTube).

"You don't want things to get stale," Harbaugh said. "That's like overripe fruit, stale bread, burnt meat, you got to change things up."

OVER HIS TWO decades of coaching, there are two factions of Harbaugh's former players and coaches: those who despise him -- often publicly -- and those who are staunch supporters. The words "insane" or "crazy" to describe Harbaugh are commonplace among both groups, but the meaning depends on who is talking.

Look no further than San Francisco. Despite three straight NFC Championship Games and a Super Bowl appearance, Harbaugh's approach incensed the front office. And players were tired of Harbaugh, too.

"He just pushed guys too far," former 49ers offensive lineman Alex Boone said on HBO's "Real Sports with Bryant Gumbel" in April. "He wanted too much, demanded too much, expected too much. ... And you'd be like, 'This guy might be clinically insane. He's crazy.'"

The amount Harbaugh asks from his players now is his most significant shift. That's been clear with the Chargers' practices. This season, the NFL selected the Chargers for the Hall of Fame Game, giving them an additional preseason matchup and added practice time. Because of that, Harbaugh reduced the required time at the facility to avoid fatigue.

Harbaugh communicates strict tempos to players ahead of each practice. It's commonplace to see defensive backs raising both hands instead of trying to deflect a pass or linemen stopping in the middle of a pass rush, obeying Harbaugh's rules. There are loud yells and reprimands from coaches and players alike when players stray from the tempo.

Veterans, who have played elsewhere, routinely praise Harbaugh for his current approach to practice: "It's not super common around the league, it's different, I like it," cornerback Donte Jackson said.

But that doesn't mean Harbaugh's practices are easy.

"Six days a week and every day's just intense," safety Elijah Molden said.

J.T. Rogan, who worked for Harbaugh as director of communications/operations for two years at Michigan, has perhaps the best vantage point for Harbaugh's evolution. Rogan was an All-American running back for Harbaugh at the University of San Diego, worked for him at Stanford and tried out for him as a player in San Francisco.

Rogan said Harbaugh's time at Michigan was transformative, pointing to Harbaugh's struggles to beat rival Ohio State and his use of analytics, which altered his coaching style and helped Michigan win the 2023 national championship in Harbaugh's final season.

The legitimacy of that championship, however, will forever be roiled in controversy after various NCAA sanctions were levied against Harbaugh for breaking rules.

"He's taken that feedback, and he's got really high emotional intelligence, even though you might not call him emotional," Rogan said.

He continued: "For people who are like, 'Who wears the same clothes every day all the time?' Or 'Who wears cleats on the airplane?' As if that would cheapen his intellect and his ability to take feedback and then evolve, but he has."

HARBAUGH'S FIRST YEAR in Los Angeles was about changing the culture of a franchise synonymous with disappointment. The Chargers' Week 11 matchup with the Cincinnati Bengals seemed to be a turning point.

L.A. had built a 27-6 lead over the Bengals early in the third quarter, then the game began to unravel in a way Chargers fans are accustomed to. (The fan base has an adverb for this recurring dread called "Chargerling"). The Bengals scored 21 unanswered points, as quarterback Joe Burrow found wide receiver Ja'Marr Chase for a touchdown to tie the score at 27 with 12:12 left.

But the Chargers won the game, thanks to two 27-yard-plus catches from wide receiver Ladd McConkey and a touchdown by running back J.K. Dobbins on the final drive. The victory appeared to be a watershed moment for the franchise, and the first clear stamp of Harbaugh's impact in L.A.

"There's been a lot of games through the years where we've been put in that position and came up short," said former Chargers edge rusher Joey Bosa, who developed into a star as the No. 3 pick in 2016 but was released after a disappointing 2024 season and is now with the Buffalo Bills. "There was kind of a lack of belief in being able to pull off in situations before."

But there were the Chargers eight weeks later against the Houston Texans -- in their first playoff appearance since one of the most embarrassing playoff losses in team history in 2023 -- looking like the Chargers of old.

Star quarterback Justin Herbert, who threw a league-low three interceptions during the regular season, tossed four that day. He became the first NFL player to throw more picks in a playoff game than in the regular season. The Texans pressured Herbert on 50% of his dropbacks, and the Chargers suffered a 32-12 beatdown -- another playoff embarrassment.

Los Angeles is hopeful, however, that Houston was an anomaly and Cincinnati was the standard.

"We didn't achieve the ultimate success that's reserved for the world champion," Harbaugh said earlier this offseason. "But [there's] so much good to build on, that creates a lot of excitement for me and [general manager] Joe [Hortiz] as we build version 2.0."

Increased win totals and postseason success have historically defined second years under Harbaugh-led teams. He went from 7-4 in his first season at the University of San Diego to 11-1 the following year, winning the Pioneer Football League. After taking over a 1-11 Stanford team in 2007, the Cardinal were 5-7 in his second season, narrowly missing out on a bowl game. Harbaugh's 49ers went to the Super Bowl in his second season. (In his first two seasons at Michigan, Harbaugh led the Wolverines to back-to-back 10-3 seasons.)

But Harbaugh already has an uphill battle to replicate that second-year jump in L.A. Pro Bowl left tackle Rashawn Slater suffered a season-ending patellar tendon tear. Running back Najee Harris missed all of training camp after a July 4th fireworks mishap damaged his eye. L.A. travels the most miles in the NFL this season, beginning with the Chiefs in Brazil, followed by two divisional matchups against the Raiders and Broncos.

Regardless of how difficult the outlook seems for this season, the Chargers appear confident, believing in Harbaugh's process.

But that's how it always begins for Harbaugh's teams, before tension, frustration, and at Michigan, sanctions happen. The Chargers hope this version of Harbaugh keeps them in the honeymoon phase long term.

"We're going for the Super Bowl," Harbaugh said. "That's our goal. We're going to do it or die trying."

The making of Chargers DC Jesse Minter: 'He always wanted to be one step ahead'

By Daniel Popper
The Athletic
September 2, 2025

Two decades later, Jesse Minter still has the rejection letters.

They are tucked away in a box at his family's house in Cincinnati, a memento of how far he has come. There are 98 of them. Not 99. Not about 100. "Exactly" 98, Minter says. He has never forgotten the number of college football programs that politely declined his services — on official university letterhead — in the early months of 2006.

Minter is sitting in a conference room in the Los Angeles Chargers' practice facility in late July as he reveals the existence of these letters. Minter is decked out in Chargers gear. In a few minutes, he will head out to the practice field and coach a unit he revived and revitalized in his first season as an NFL defensive coordinator. If Minter follows up his debut with another stingy defensive season, he could become one of the most sought-after head-coaching candidates in the next cycle. Nearly all of Minter's 42 years have been spent in and around coaching, and now, with the Chargers set to open their season against Patrick Mahomes and the Kansas City Chiefs on Friday in São Paulo, Brazil, he is one realistic step from the pinnacle of the profession.

So why does he still have these rejections?

"Because that's just how I operate," Minter says. "It's just that reminder of the joy that it is, the blessing that it is, the opportunity that you have, not to take it for granted and not to ever feel like you've arrived."

The letters used to drive Minter. His father, Rick Minter, now a defensive analyst with the Chargers, has coached in college and the NFL for nearly 50 years, and Jesse wanted to prove he could chart his own path.

Now, the letters ground him to a mentality that he lives and breathes and instills in his defensive culture.

"A lot of coaches have crazy egos, and I think there's a difference in being confident in yourself and sure of yourself, and then having an ego," Jesse says. "I've always tried really, really hard to not have an ego, to really try to build a situation where everybody feels like they have value, where everybody feels like they're part of the success."

Football gives, and it takes. Those who become obsessed with the game — who grow up with it, devote their lives to it — understand that truth. They sign up for the chance at accomplishment. They also sign up for the threat of failure. One is not possible without the other.

Jesse learned this lesson through his winding journey.

The letters are a physical manifestation of what can be taken away.

What can be given, however, is all around him.

"He's much more the complete man than I ever was," Rick says.

Rick Minter thought his coaching career was over when his son, Jesse, arrived.

It was 1983, and Rick was out of football. He started coaching seven years earlier and spent the last three seasons at North Carolina State with Monte Kiffin on a staff that also included Pete Carroll. They were all fired after the 1982 season. Jesse's mother, Ellen McEwen, and Rick had moved to Little Rock, Ark., after the sudden death of Ellen's father. Rick got a job as a stock-broking account executive at Merrill Lynch. Ellen and Rick welcomed Jesse on May 9.

The time away from the game was short-lived. Rick broke back into the business in 1984 at New Mexico State. The family — Rick, Ellen, Jesse and Jesse's older brother, Josh — moved there for a season. In 1985, Rick got his first opportunity as a defensive coordinator at Ball State. The family settled in Muncie, Ind., and Jesse's football exposure began.

Jesse attended Ball State football games and practices in full uniform — red jersey, shoulder pads, red pants, white cleats and "this big old helmet that was too big for his head," Ellen remembers with a laugh.

Ellen and Rick divorced when Jesse was in kindergarten. "We went through that pretty amicably," Ellen says. Rick, a self-described "grinder," was committed to his coaching career. Home at midnight, back in the office by 5 a.m.

Football gives, and it takes.

It took away father-son time when Jesse was a child.

"We didn't get to see him a ton," Jesse says.

It gave Ellen a deeper connection with her sons. She called the divorce "one of the best things that ever happened."

Ellen, a college tennis player at Henderson State in Arkansas, loves sports as much as Jesse does. After moving the boys to Yorktown, Ind., which borders Muncie, Ellen coached Jesse's youth teams in T-ball, soccer and basketball, all while working multiple jobs. She sold new construction homes for a local company, TK Constructors. At Yorktown High School, she coached girls and boys tennis and was an assistant coach for the girls' basketball team. She also taught part time in the Muncie school system.

Jesse credits his mom with helping develop his "inclusive traits."

"The sacrifices that she always made as a single mom with me and my brother, having to work all the time but yet always giving us everything," Jesse says. "We weren't rich, but always giving us exactly what we needed."

Football also became the means by which Jesse saw and connected with his dad.

"The weekends were our time with him," Jesse says.

Rick stayed at Ball State through the 1991 season. He is grateful the family had a "little bit of a gradual adjustment" while he was "an in-town father, but out-of-house father." In 1992, Rick took a job at Notre Dame as defensive coordinator for Lou Holtz, and he moved 140 miles north to South Bend.

Jesse was 9 years old. He can still vividly picture the packed stands at Notre Dame Stadium, including for The Game of the Century, when the No. 2 Fighting Irish beat No. 1 Florida State in a battle of undefeated teams.

"Holy cow," Jesse remembers thinking, "what my dad's doing is pretty cool."

After two seasons at Notre Dame, Rick was hired as the head coach at the University of Cincinnati. He was slightly closer to the family, and over the next decade, Jesse had "all access" to a college program. These were his formative football years, and he was around an impressive group of Rick's assistant coaches, from Rex Ryan to John Harbaugh to Wink Martindale to Mike Tomlin.

Tomlin was Rick's defensive backs coach for two seasons, 1999 and 2000. Jesse was in high school in Yorktown, where he played receiver and defensive back, and gravitated to Tomlin, who was then 27 years old.

"He just had this presence about him," Jesse says.

Jesse would come around for Cincinnati practices and work out with Tomlin's DBs group.

"I feel like I've known him all his life," Tomlin said last season before his Pittsburgh Steelers played Jesse's Chargers in Week 3.

Tomlin would always remember who Yorktown High had played the previous week and ask how his game went.

"It was real," Jesse says. "It made me feel like this is how I want to be."

As he finished high school, Jesse had opportunities to play Division III football at local Indiana schools like Anderson College and Wabash College. Rick offered him two options: keep playing, or come to Cincinnati and start working his way up Rick's staff. Rick had curated a four-year undergraduate program for Jesse, who would start as a freshman field manager before eventually earning graduate assistant responsibilities as a senior.

Jesse enrolled at Cincinnati and arrived on campus in the fall of 2001.

Rick remembers the tears in Jesse's eyes and the emotion in his son's voice.

"Dad," Jesse said, "I want to play football."

The first semester of Jesse's freshman year at Cincinnati, by all accounts, had been a success. He liked the coaching track he was on, and he was learning from his father and others on staff.

But Jesse had that incomparable itch — one that can only be scratched by pads and a helmet, grass and contact.

Football gives, and it takes.

It took Jesse briefly off his coaching track, only to give him so much more.

Jesse transferred to Mount St. Joseph, a Division III college outside Cincinnati. The Mount, as it is known locally, was founded as an all-female school. It did not become coeducational until 1986. The Mount joined the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference in 1998. When Jesse arrived, the Lions had yet to put together a winning season. They had gone 0-10 in 2001.

Jesse showed up for transfer orientation. His love for football had brought him to The Mount. It also led him to the love of his life. He met his wife, Rachelle, who had transferred in from Cincinnati State, in his orientation group.

"Serendipity," Rachelle says.

As Rachelle recalls, she just kept running into Jesse over that first week at The Mount. The college held a boat ride down the Ohio River, and Jesse and Rachelle chatted on the water — though Rachelle admits now that she thought Jesse was interested in a different girl.

Transfers had to pick up their school-commissioned laptops during that first week. Jesse and Rachelle went at the same time.

Rachelle's childhood friend, PJ Volker, had transferred to The Mount to play football after a season at Wittenberg University in Springfield, Ohio. Volker was living in an off-campus house and, at a small school of only 2,000 students, that was a hot commodity. He was having a party.

"Are you going to PJ's?" Rachelle asked Jesse.

"Yeah!" Jesse replied.

Another run-in. They were dating by the end of the week.

"Pretty much inseparable ever since," says Volker, now the defensive coordinator at Navy.

Jesse found his wife in Rachelle — and a best friend to this day in Volker.

However, the "unfortunate part of the game," as Volker puts it, kept Jesse off the field.

Football gives, and it takes.

Jesse broke his leg in his first season at The Mount. He was lined up as the slot receiver, and he was tasked with blocking a stretch run play to his side. The pile collapsed on his lower half.

In his third season, Jesse was again playing slot receiver. He ran a slant over the middle. Volker was playing linebacker. The ball was thrown Jesse's way. Volker turned and ran. In the process, he collided with Jesse, who fell awkwardly to the ground. He snapped his humerus bone in half.

"That's about as crappy as I've ever felt on the football field," Volker said.

Sandwiched between those two injuries was a medical scare. It was 2003, and Rick was in what would be his final season as the head coach at Cincinnati. Rick was staying in a high-rise condo in the city on the Ohio River. Jesse was waiting for the lease to begin on his off-campus house at

The Mount, so he spent two summer months living with his dad.

One Sunday, Rick came home, and Jesse was on his bed, in pain.

Jesse went to the hospital, where he was diagnosed with Crohn's disease. He stayed overnight. The next morning, doctors performed emergency surgery. Jesse had 18 inches of his colon removed. He missed the entire season.

"Knock on wood," Rick says, "he hasn't had any repercussions since."

Jesse returned for the 2005 season as The Mount went 9-2. He graduated in December and took a job at a local facility called Acceleration Training, working out middle schoolers. He applied to graduate assistant jobs across the country. He got back those 98 rejections.

He eventually got job offers from Wake Forest and Division III Defiance College in Ohio. Rick had returned to Notre Dame as Charlie Weis' defensive coordinator in 2005. Weis was adding to his staff that offseason and had an opening. Jesse had been determined to find a job "on his own," as Ellen put it. But this was Notre Dame.

"Coolest job ever," Jesse says, "right out of college."

The reality of the coaching industry set in almost immediately.

The Minters spent the 2006 season at Notre Dame, Rick as DC and Jesse as his defensive intern. Weis fired father and son after back-to-back losses to close the year — at rival USC and to LSU in the Sugar Bowl.

Jesse and Rick had been living together in a house in South Bend. They sat on the couch at that house and pondered what was next.

Then Rick had an idea.

Rachelle was still in Cincinnati working as an accountant. Brian Kelly had just taken over as head coach at Cincinnati and was building out his staff. Rick had introduced himself to Kelly at a football coaching convention the year prior. He would give Kelly a call.

The only problem: Rick didn't have Kelly's cell number.

Rick, however, had spent nine seasons as the Cincinnati head coach, and he had only been fired three years prior. He still had the phone number for the landline in the head coach's office at the football facility. What was the worst that could happen?

So Jesse watched and listened as his dad threw the ultimate Hail Mary and dialed the number.

Kelly picked up.

"Holy s—," Jesse remembers thinking, "somebody answered."

Kelly told Rick that he would be looking to fill a graduate assistant position in March. In the spring, Jesse went in for an interview with defensive coordinator Joe Tresey.

Jesse got his first full-time college coaching job for the 2007 season.

"I can remember the interview like it was yesterday," Tresey says.

Football gives, and it takes.

"As I got into coaching," Jesse says of his father, "he would always look out for me."

Jesse was in Tresey's hip pocket for two years. Over pizza, Jesse and Tresey would spend late nights watching film on potential recruits, cutting up video for their players, writing scripts for practice and bouncing ideas off each other.

"He always wanted to be one step ahead if he could be," Tresey says. "You knew he had a shot."

Jesse's year at Notre Dame was a whirlwind. He admits he did not "learn enough football" while he was figuring out clerical responsibilities like diagramming plays. Under Tresey, Jesse says, he learned how to "break down teams" and "how to try to attack people."

"When you trust somebody like that at a young age," Tresey says, "your gut kind of tells you."

After two seasons, Jesse joined Trent Miles' staff at Indiana State. Jesse spent the next eight seasons coaching under Miles — four at Indiana State and four at Georgia State.

In Jesse's second season at Indiana State, Rick — who had spent the 2009 season as Marshall's defensive coordinator before the staff was let go — joined Miles' Indiana State staff as linebackers coach and defensive play caller. Jesse moved to the secondary. Volker joined the staff as a defensive assistant.

"That whole crew," Miles said, "that's like family."

Rick left to take the defensive coordinator job at Kentucky after the 2010 season. Before he departed, he gave Miles a suggestion.

"You got one move," Rick remembers telling Miles. "You need to name Jesse the defensive coordinator."

"Jesse," Miles says, "he had it in him all along."

In Jesse's first season calling plays at any level, Indiana State defeated FBS Western Kentucky on the road 44-16.

"We got after them," Miles said.

The next season, the Sycamores went on the road and beat North Dakota State, then the No. 1 team in FCS. Indiana State had two pick sixes in a 17-14 win. It was Volker's 30th birthday. Jesse still ranks these two wins — North Dakota State and Western Kentucky — in his top 10 games of all time.

"He was just a brilliant play caller from the get-go," Volker says.

Miles, who took the head job at George State in 2012 and brought Jesse and Volker with him, got the band back together in 2016, hiring Rick as his defensive line coach. And for the first time, the roles changed. Rick worked under Jesse.

Georgia State went 3-9 that season, and once again, Rick and Jesse were looking for jobs.

Football gives, and it takes.

There have been so many turning points in Jesse Minter's football life, but none were more consequential than the 2018 offseason.

Jesse was entering his second season on John Harbaugh's Baltimore Ravens staff. Rick had placed a call to Harbaugh, his former special teams coordinator at Cincinnati, after things ended at Georgia State.

"John," Rick remembers saying, "Jesse is just like you."

Rick got Jesse in the door. Jesse earned himself a contract as a defensive assistant.

"Sometimes you have to rely on your resources and the connections that your family members have made," Rachelle says. "But it's what you do once you get there (that decides) if you stay or go."

Harbaugh had four defensive coordinators in his first 10 seasons with the Ravens — Rex Ryan, Greg Mattison, Chuck Pagano and Dean Peas. Entering the 2018 offseason, he promoted Wink Martindale from linebackers coach to defensive coordinator. Martindale's assistants included Jesse and now-Seattle Seahawks head coach Mike Macdonald, among other future star defensive coaches.

Harbaugh saw the coaching talent, and he challenged Martindale to lead a defensive overhaul.

Over the next three months, the staff room in Baltimore became a think tank for defensive innovation.

"Let's take everything that we've done and let's recreate this system that works, that's more modern, that's more teachable, more learnable," Jesse remembers.

The goal was to create a defense that was conceptually driven. As Martindale puts it, "playing, basically, offense on defense."

Offensive coaches teach concepts. Take four verticals — an offensive concept in which four eligible receivers run downfield routes — as an example. The concept is not tied to a specific formation. An offense can run it out of trips. An offense can run it out of two-by-two. And even within the different formations, there are additional possible variations in the splits and spacing of eligible receivers.

Martindale applied this same logic to defensive concepts. The pressure or blitz is the concept. The Ravens could then run that concept in various defensive fronts.

"Everything was a fresh start," Martindale says.

The coaches rewrote the defensive terminology. They gave ownership to players that included safety Eric Weddle, edge rusher Terrell Suggs and linebacker C.J. Mosley. That included the freedom to make pre-snap checks during games. Martindale even asked Weddle to call the plays for the entire second half of a preseason game.

Over what Martindale called a "painstaking three months," a new system was born. It was the genesis of a system that has now proliferated around the league.

"As a coordinator or a position of leadership, I think it's not only your job to develop players, but it's your job to develop coaches," Martindale said.

Macdonald calls a version of the system in Seattle.

Drew Wilkins, who was on the 2018 staff, was hired away by Sean McVay to be the Rams' pass-rush coordinator. Chris Hewitt, now the Indianapolis Colts' pass game coordinator, and Joe Cullen, now the Kansas City Chiefs' defensive line coach, were on the 2018 staff.

Zach Orr was a part of the 2018 Ravens staff. He is now Baltimore's DC.

Anthony Weaver joined the Ravens staff in 2021. He is now the Miami Dolphins' DC.

Dennard Wilson coached for the Ravens under Macdonald in 2023. He is calling defensive plays with the Tennessee Titans.

And, of course, Jesse brought a version of the system with him to Vanderbilt in 2021, then to Michigan in 2022 and now to the Chargers.

"That's what molded him," Rick says of those four seasons with the Ravens.

Jesse Minter holds two prongs at the core of his defensive philosophy.

1. What you play

2. How you play

What you play is the scheme, which he has honed over his 19-year coaching career. How you play comes down to fundamentals.

The honing of those originated on a dark and quiet flight back from Glendale, Ariz., on New Year's Eve, 2022.

After a year at Vanderbilt in 2021, Jesse received a call from Michigan head coach Jim Harbaugh. Macdonald had left the Ravens after the 2020 season, the same as Jesse. He coordinated Harbaugh's Michigan defense for one season. He was now jumping back to John Harbaugh and the NFL to be the Ravens' DC. Michigan had an opening, and Jim Harbaugh filled it with Jesse.

The Wolverines started the 2022 season 13-0 and earned a berth in the College Football Playoff. They played TCU in the semifinal at State Farm Stadium and lost 51-45. Minter's defense gave up 488 yards.

"The glaring things that showed up to me were just fundamental flaws of how we were playing," Jesse says.

On the flight back, Jesse asked himself a question: How can we go from not quite good enough to being good enough?

"It was almost just a lightbulb moment," Jesse says. "It's not because we put in a new coverage or a new call. It's because we play harder and more physical than these other teams."

What resulted was what Jesse called the pillars.

He introduced them to his defensive staff at the first meeting ahead of spring practices in 2023.

Mike Elston, who joined the Michigan staff in 2022 and moved to the Chargers with Minter in 2024, remembers the messaging clearly.

"We're gonna do this 50-50," Jesse said in the meeting, according to Elston. "We're going to have the best scheme in college football, but we're also going to have the best fundamentals."

The four pillars started as: block destruction, communication, effort and ball disruption.

"What we do is exotic, it's different, it's awesome, it's creative," says Steve Clinkscale, who was the co-defensive coordinator and defensive backs coach with Michigan in 2022 and 2023 and is now the Chargers' defensive backs coach. "But we weren't executing it — not because they didn't know what to do, it's because we weren't tearing off blocks, we didn't communicate ... we didn't tackle very well, we were not able to disrupt the quarterback and get the ball from the receivers or the running backs, and our effort and angles were not up to par."

The genius was in how Jesse divided the tasks. Each pillar was assigned to an assistant coach, and that coach was tasked with presenting film of that pillar every day.

Elston says the impact was "immediate."

"There was a total buy-in to every position on the field," Elston says. "When you sit down and watch film in front of your peers and you show positive and negative, it has a huge impact on growth."

The next season, Michigan led the country in scoring defense. And, of course, the Wolverines won the national championship.

Jesse brought the philosophy to the Chargers in 2024, when Jim Harbaugh was hired as head coach. They rebranded the pillars as the separators. And they added a fifth separator to assign one to each assistant coach, creating one category for effort and angles and one for tackling.

Elston covers block destruction. Clinkscale does communication. Edge rushers coach Dylan Roney presents effort and angles. Linebackers coach Navarro Bowman is on tackling. Last season, safeties coach Chris O'Leary was in charge of ball disruption. O'Leary departed in the offseason to take a job at Central Michigan. This season, safeties coach Adam Fuller takes over ball disruption.

"What happened was all the players now developed a level of respect for each coach," Jesse says. "We were so much closer and more powerful when we were all together that way."

The Chargers allowed the fewest points in the league last season. They made the playoffs in Harbaugh's first year. And Jesse showed off a trait essential for any successful head coach: the willingness to delegate.

"The thing that makes him great is, just like coach Harbaugh, he's not OK with just doing what he did to get there," Clinkscale said of Jesse. "What are we doing to make it better? And this is not like a seasonal thing. It's a daily thing."

Two weeks ago, Rachelle was getting the kids ready for their first day of school.

Now well into their second year together in Los Angeles, Rachelle and Jesse have carved out a life in their new hometown. They have three children — daughter Millie, 9, and sons Monte, 7, and Mac, 4.

On the first day of school last year, Rachelle, a Cincinnati native, felt out of place. She wore an athleisure outfit, hoping to squeeze in a workout later in the day between her motherly duties. When she arrived, the other moms were in dresses.

“Oh my gosh, we don’t fit in here,” Rachelle remembers thinking. “We’re from the Midwest.”

So this year, she posed a question to Jesse before heading back for another first day: “Should I wear a dress?”

“Nope,” Jesse replied. “That’s not who we are. I’m wearing my hooded sweatshirt and gym shorts that I wear every day. I am going to the office to get a workout in. Just be who you are.”

Grounded, always, to where he once was and how far he has come.

Grounded, always, to what those rejection letters represent.

Remember where you came from. Be grateful for what you have. Be who you are.

In this moment, football has given Jesse things it can never take.

A loving wife. A beautiful family. The gift of fatherhood.

“He’s a football coach, that’s what he does,” Volker says, “but that’s not who he is.”

Jesse attends flag football games and volleyball practices. If he hears his kids in the backyard when he gets home from work, he bursts through the gate and joins the fun. He takes the kids out for ice cream after every Chargers win. Millie, Monte and Mac jump into his arms after he finishes news conferences at the practice facility.

“He understands the value of a father being in there,” Ellen says. “He wants to be close to his kids.”

Rick laments missing the “everyday moments” back in Indiana.

“If I had it to do over, I probably would have arranged life differently,” he says.

Now, Rick has a front row seat to it all — not just as a father, but as a grandfather.

“A blessing and a privilege,” he says.

Football gives. Yes, football gives.

“It’s all family, and he is very dedicated to that,” Ellen says of Jesse. “I’m more proud of him for that than anything else.”

Devin Woodhouse

Chargers vs. Chiefs a family affair with Andy Reid's son-in-law in L.A.'s corner

SÃO PAULO, Brazil — Turns out, the marquee matchup Friday night between the Chargers and Kansas City Chiefs isn't just a season-opening showdown between two premier quarterbacks and legitimate Super Bowl hopefuls.

It's also a family feud — minus the bad blood.

Devin Woodhouse, head strength and conditioning coach for the Chargers, is the son-in-law of Chiefs coach Andy Reid, an under-the-radar connection that further hems these AFC West rivals.

"In our first game last year, I was a little anxious playing them," Woodhouse told The Times. "It felt weird rooting against him at times."

Reid understands, and he loves the fact that before bringing Woodhouse with him from the University of Michigan, Chargers coach Jim Harbaugh called his Kansas City counterpart and asked him if that would be OK.

"I said, 'Heck, yeah, I'm honored that he's got an opportunity to work for you,'" Reid said. "I got the biggest kick out of that, that Jim would even think of that. ... What a class act."

Woodhouse, modest and focused on his Chargers responsibilities, was initially reluctant to sit down for an interview. But Harbaugh and Reid nudged him to talk, as did his direct boss, Ben Herbert, executive director of player performance.

"I don't want to dim that light on him," Herbert said. "I want that light brighter."

Woodhouse, 34, who grew up in Rancho Cucamonga, met his future wife, Drew Ann Reid, when they were members of the same ward of their church in Provo, Utah. They had mutual friends, an instant connection and were married in 2013.

The couple was further bonded by tragedy. Drew Ann's older brother, Garrett, who struggled with drug abuse for years, died in 2012. The twin brother of Woodhouse, Chaz, who was confined to a wheelchair with cerebral palsy, died a year later.

"As our relationship was growing, her brother passed away," Woodhouse said. "We grew even closer together."

The two now have four children, two boys and two girls, all of whom refer to Reid as "Gramps." Woodhouse doesn't call his father-in-law anything but "Coach."

"I would say he's a better man than he is a coach, and he's a pretty dang good coach," Woodhouse said. "And [mother-in-law] Tammy is the head coach of the head coach, so that's how good they both are. I just love them, and not just the people they are for my wife, but for my kids and their grandkids.

"One of the things I love most about Coach Reid is how much I feel people love to play for him. It's a cool thing to witness and I respect it a lot."

Woodhouse feels the same way about Harbaugh, for whom he and Herbert worked at the University of Michigan.

"Ben Herbert found Dev," Harbaugh said. "When Herb recommends somebody, I already know it's going to be good. He doesn't bring in anybody who doesn't have a tremendous work ethic. Devin came in, and Herb was right."

Herbert is meticulous down to the smallest detail. For instance, each dumbbell at the Chargers facility is emblazoned with the club's lightning-bolt logo. Not only is that wall of weights always precisely arranged, but every lightning bolt is arched in an identical way. To ensure there's never a speck of dust on the floor, Herbert and his crew use electric leaf blowers each day to clean the massive space.

Helping oversee the physical well-being of so many elite athletes is a challenging assignment, particularly for a franchise that has an unfortunate history of losing key players to injuries — as the Chargers did in August with left tackle Rashawn Slater, who sustained a season-ending knee injury.

The way Harbaugh sees it, no one is better equipped to train an NFL team than Herbert.

"We are the tip of the spear," said Herbert, who is not related to Chargers quarterback Justin Herbert. "Our job is to impact the mental and physical capability of the players. The physical part is much easier. The mental part — emotional stability, consistency — that's the separator. And trust is everything."

Woodhouse has a knack for building and maintaining those trusts.

"He has an ability to build relationships across a melting pot of personalities," Herbert said. "He's also versatile across range-of-motion, tissue and joint, strength, power and movement traits. So much so that with my 14-year-old, twice a week I want Coach Woodhouse to work with him."

Woodhouse has a particularly keen eye when it comes to evaluating the tiniest aspects of a person in motion, helping players make subtle adjustments to the way they run in order to improve their speed.

"Dev's someone who's going to support you, but he's going to tell it like it is," Chargers receiver Ladd McConkey said. "I'll be running a route, and Dev's over there with his phone recording me. Then we'll look at it in slo-mo and break it down."

During games, Woodhouse is on the sideline as a "get-back" coach — a term he doesn't particularly like — making sure players and coaches keep a sufficient distance from the field.

As for his own emotions, he figures he will have them in check, even with his father-in-law on the opposite sideline.

Family is family, true. But football is football.

Keenan Allen

Ageless Keenan Allen on the verge of an incredible feat for Chargers

By Sam Farmer
Los Angeles Times
September 25, 2025

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Raw speed was never his game, and maybe that helps explain why Keenan Allen has aged so gracefully in his NFL receiving career.

"Father Time isn't really nipping at his heels because he was never a 4.3 guy," said Hall of Fame receiver James Lofton, referring to Allen's time in the 40-yard dash. "He's like a designated hitter in baseball or a great three-point shooter in basketball. Those players are always going to be there, and he has the ability to make them."

Allen, who could make NFL history Sunday when the Chargers play at the New York Giants, runs his routes with surgical precision and has Houdini hands, typically emerging with the football even when a defender is superglued to him.

"I don't count on my speed to get open," said Allen, 33. "It's more like, in close spaces I've got to win."

In another sense, he might be the fastest pass catcher in NFL history. He needs seven more receptions to reach 1,000 for his career, likely doing so in fewer games than any player ever. Sunday will be his 158th game. As it stands, the fastest to 1,000 is Marvin Harrison in 167.

Allen has caught touchdown passes in all three games for the undefeated Chargers, including a 20-yarder against Denver last Sunday that was astounding on both ends — Matrix-like sidearmed sling by Justin Herbert and jaw-dropping catch by Allen who was wearing a defender like an overcoat.

"I was in the end-zone family section right behind him," Zach Maynard said. "I was in shock. I didn't even know how to celebrate. It was one of those plays where you sit there and say, 'Oh, my God, did that actually just happen?'"

If Maynard was in shock, that's saying something. He's Allen's half-brother and his first quarterback, so he's intimately familiar with what the football world now knows: never underestimate No. 13.

"It's kind of like watching LeBron still dunking at 40," Maynard said. "Keenan's still competing at the highest level."

Allen, whose NFL seasons match his jersey number, is plenty youthful too. He doesn't "talk old," as coach Jim Harbaugh likes to say.

"You start talking old, you start playing old," Harbaugh said. "It's an obvious mindset. I don't see any difference [in him], just Keenan Allen doing Keenan Allen things that he's always done. Never once heard him talk old, so there's a pretty good chance he's not thinking it."

And to think Allen would have been OK calling it a career had the Chargers not reached out to him in August after the surprise retirement of Mike Williams. That's when Allen ran a comeback pattern, signing a one-year deal with the Chargers, where he spent his first 11 seasons before they traded him to Chicago last year.

"I just wanted to be back here playing with the guys I came up with and the colors I started with," he said.

Thirty-three isn't old to the outside world, but by NFL receiving standards, it's a flip phone in the age of Androids. With that long beard, Allen is Grip Van Winkle.

Hall of Fame receiver Tim Brown, who retired at 38, says elite receivers have two elevators. When the physical elevator goes down, the mental elevator rises, allowing the player new and crafty ways to get open.

"It's about working smarter, not harder," Brown said. "If I could avoid that fight at the line of scrimmage, or at the top of my route, then in my mind it just gave me the energy to play another play."

"The great thing about Keenan is he's an excellent route runner. He knows how to put his foot in the ground, and even being a big guy, get out and make things happen."

Allen, listed at 6-foot-2 and 211 pounds, appears even more solid than that. He played all sorts of positions growing up in North Carolina, and was recruited to Alabama as a safety. Maynard is three years older, and when he decided to transfer from Buffalo to the University of California, his younger brother decided to follow him to Berkeley.

In 2011, Allen's sophomore season, NFL scouts converged on a USC-Cal game in part to scout receivers such as Robert Woods, Marqise Lee and Marvin Jones. Cal lost, 30-9, but Allen had 13 catches for 160 yards.

Tom Telesco, who would be general manager of the Chargers two years later, was in the Indianapolis Colts personnel department at the time, working under the legendary GM Bill Polian.

"We're walking out of the stadium and Bill looks at me and he's like, 'Are you thinking what I'm thinking?'" Telesco recalled. "And I look at him like, 'You mean that sophomore receiver who was the best player on the field?' That was Keenan. Bill looked at me and said, 'He's Andre Reed.'"

That was lofty praise, considering Reed, a Hall of Fame receiver, was such an integral part of those Buffalo Bills who reached four consecutive Super Bowls. Polian was instrumental in assembling those teams.

"Andre was a little heavier — he was a tight end in college — but with great route runners like both of them are, guys I would term natural receivers, they're capable of adjusting to that loss of a step or half-step with the way they run their routes," Polian said. "Also, the way they work with their quarterbacks in terms of ball positioning."

Philip Rivers, longtime Chargers quarterback, was on the same wavelength as Allen. Similar to the relationship Allen now has with Herbert.

"There would be times where I'd holler at him out there like, 'Hey!'" Rivers said. "And he'd kind of nod at me like, 'I see it. We're good. Don't say anymore or we'll give it away.'"

Much of their communication was wordless.

"You could throw behind him and almost talk to him with the ball," Rivers said. "Depending where I threw it, he'd be able to throttle it on or off and make the catch."

Allen is particularly adept at having "late hands," waiting until the last possible moment to reach up and latch onto the football, rather than giving the defender ample time beforehand to prepare for the incoming pass.

"It's just repetition," said Allen, sitting at his locker while speaking to a reporter. "I could reach up my hands right now and catch a ball and you'd have never seen it coming. It just appears."

The memory of the USC-Cal game was still fresh in Telesco's mind when he was in the Chargers draft room in 2013. The team had a first-round grade on Allen but wasn't really looking for a receiver. Yet when the third round came around and Allen was still on the board...

"Keenan's card is sitting up there and [scout] JoJo Wooden tapped me and said, 'What about Keenan here?'" Telesco said. "I said, 'Look, we can do it but he's probably going to be inactive for the whole year and be a developmental player.' And JoJo said, 'Dude, just take him. Don't overthink this.'"

The Chargers did, and Allen played early because of various injuries at receiver. He led all NFL rookies with 71 receptions and broke multiple team rookie records.

"I had no idea the Chargers were going to take me," he said. "Never talked to them. Never took a visit."

The Chargers fooled everyone. They had late hands.

Why Keenan Allen's return to Chargers has been team's best offseason move

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — On the morning of Aug. 1, Keenan Allen took the field at the Los Angeles Chargers' practice facility for a private workout. Coach Jim Harbaugh and general manager Joe Hortiz looked on as Allen ran routes.

Workouts like these happen daily across the NFL. Some decision-makers like to get eyes on potential signings to see firsthand how they move. Harbaugh and Hortiz fall in this category. Even so, there was something different and rare about this workout — beyond the fact Allen had spent his first 11 seasons playing for the organization.

Starting quarterback Justin Herbert was throwing the passes.

Allen said he called Herbert to let him know he was arriving at the facility to work out at 9 a.m. The two, of course, had spent four seasons together with the Chargers from 2020 to 2023. “Yes, cool, I’ll be there at 9,” Herbert replied, according to Allen. The Chargers also encouraged Herbert to throw to Allen in the workout.

One of Herbert’s favorite receivers was going to be back on his practice field? Herbert did not hesitate. Allen acknowledges now that catching passes from the starting quarterback in a workout was “abnormal.”

“I didn’t imagine myself ever doing (another) workout,” he said. “It didn’t even feel like a workout. It felt like routes on air.”

The connection returned immediately. Herbert translated the route verbiage of the new offense, which has changed since the three offenses over their four seasons together. “It was just easy,” Herbert said. Five days later, the Chargers signed Allen to a one-year deal. And through three games, Allen has emerged as perhaps the most important and impactful addition Harbaugh and Hortiz made to their 2025 roster.

Allen leads the Chargers with 19 receptions, none more important than the 20-yard touchdown he caught in the fourth quarter of Sunday’s victory over the Denver Broncos. The Chargers, who play the New York Giants this weekend, improved to 3-0 with the win.

The catch tied the score at 20 with 2:37 remaining. Herbert bounced off a sack attempt from Broncos defensive tackle Zach Allen. He escaped to his left. With Broncos edge rusher Nik Bonitto closing in, Herbert changed his arm slot and threw off his back foot through contact. Allen was covered in the end zone by Broncos cornerback Riley Moss, who had his back turned to Herbert. Allen flashed his hands at the last second to prevent Moss from making a play on the ball.

“I’m putting the ball in harm’s way on a play like that,” Herbert said, “and it’s saying that I trust him to go up there and get it.”

This trust was forged over four seasons. Herbert and Allen have always formed a symbiotic relationship on the field — Herbert elevating Allen; Allen elevating Herbert. Herbert believed Allen would make this play in this situation because he had done it before.

In Week 2 of 2023 against the Tennessee Titans, Herbert threw a touchdown to Allen on a fourth down on an almost identical play. Defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons won instantly up the middle and hit Herbert in the pocket. Herbert bounced off the sack attempt. He escaped to his left. He threw off his back foot through contact from an oncoming edge rusher.

Allen was waiting on the left side of the end zone. He flashed late hands and came down with the touchdown through a helpless cornerback.

“It feels normal,” Allen said. “Just doing what I do.”

It’s what he does with Herbert, and that is being reliable in clutch moments.

From 2020 to 2023, Allen had 100 conversion receptions on third and fourth downs, according to TruMedia. Only Tyreek Hill had more such receptions in that span with 102.

Allen already has six conversion receptions on third and fourth downs through three games this season. Safety Derwin James Jr., who played with Allen for six seasons, coined the phrase “third-and-Keenan.”

Allen’s productivity in this phase was one of the differences in the Chargers’ win over the Broncos. Allen had two third-down conversions in the fourth quarter, including a third-and-10 on the tying touchdown drive.

Allen also beat man coverage for a 9-yard reception on the winning two-minute field goal drive.

“The plays that he made in the second half were amazing,” offensive coordinator Greg Roman said.

Allen is one of the smartest receivers in football. He has a thorough understanding of how to attack the leverage of defenders — an understanding he passed on to Herbert. That transfer of knowledge started happening as soon as Herbert took over as the starter in Week 2 of his rookie season in 2020.

Allen would pull Herbert aside and provide valuable lessons on how to stem routes to take advantage of defenders’ body positioning.

As Herbert told me in 2021, “Hearing that from him, it taught me a lot about it.”

On a third-and-3 in the fourth quarter against the Broncos, Allen sat a route down in between two zone defenders. Herbert knew where Allen was going, how he was attacking the space. Herbert fired a missile to Allen’s right shoulder, away from the sitting linebacker. Catch. Conversion.

This chemistry never left Herbert and Allen, even though they spent a year apart. Two of Allen’s three touchdowns this season have come in off-script situations, with Herbert escaping the pocket and looking to create.

“To have a veteran like that who knows that and is able to see that,” Herbert said, “it makes my job so much easier.”

In a different universe, Allen would have spent 2024 with the Chargers instead of with the Chicago Bears. The Chargers approached Allen about taking a pay cut. Allen had no intention of doing so, as he made clear in August after he re-signed. The Chargers then traded Allen to the Bears for a fourth-round pick.

Allen had 70 catches for 744 yards and seven touchdowns as the Bears lost 12 games.

“The plan was to do better than I did, obviously,” Allen said. “But for whatever reason, that didn’t happen.”

Allen hit free agency. He had hopes of returning to the Chargers. But they had signed Mike Williams, Allen’s former Chargers teammate and good friend, in March. The Chargers also drafted two receivers in April. The writing was on the wall.

Allen said he considered retirement. He also considered trying to play for the Los Angeles Rams to remain in Southern California, where he kept his house and family during his one year in Chicago.

Then, on the eve of training camp in July, Williams shockingly retired. Allen said he called Williams.

“You’re done? Like, done done?” Allen asked.

Williams confirmed. Allen let Williams know he could be returning to the Chargers. Then came the workout, and the signing — “at a lower cost,” as Allen jokingly points out.

“Still wish Mike could have been here,” Allen said, “but definitely happy I can be back.”

During training camp in 2021, Herbert was sitting in a conference room at the team hotel in Irvine, Calif. He was discussing the impact Allen had on his record-setting rookie season.

“I want to play with him for as long as I can,” Herbert said of Allen then.

For a year, it looked like their time together had ended.

Now the Chargers are undefeated, and Herbert and Allen’s most significant snaps as a duo could very well be ahead of them.

Keenan Allen is back: Why Chargers signed him now, and how he fits into WR room

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — Los Angeles Chargers undrafted rookie quarterback DJ Uiagalelei had been wearing No. 13 through the first three weeks of training camp, including in the Hall of Fame Game last week. It never quite felt right. Of course, that number had belonged to receiver Keenan Allen for 11 seasons, from 2013 to ’23, as Allen became the leading wide receiver in franchise history.

On Tuesday evening at The Bolt, Uiagalelei jogged onto the practice fields wearing a different jersey, No. 7. Something was up. Moments later, the Chargers announced the reason: Allen had agreed to terms to return to the Chargers for a 14th season.

He is back.

“This is where he grew up,” general manager Joe Hortiz said of Allen on the practice sidelines about an hour later. “This is where he became Keenan Allen.”

Allen was under contract with the Chargers when coach Jim Harbaugh and Hortiz took over in early February 2024. Harbaugh mentioned Allen by name at his introductory news conference at SoFi Stadium, including him in the exciting “pros on this team.” Six weeks later, the Chargers traded Allen to the Chicago Bears for a fourth-round pick. The Chargers were cap-crunched. They needed to clear space. They initially approached Allen about taking a pay cut, but the two sides could not come to terms. The Bears swooped in and offered a quality return.

Earlier this week, Harbaugh hinted at those comments he made at his introductory news conference. “You probably know my feelings on that, pretty much dating back to when I first took the job," he said. "The interest has always been in there in Keenan."

The Chargers brought Allen in for a visit on Friday. Harbaugh said that visit "went well."

"He did a lot of Keenan things," Harbaugh said. "It was an impressive workout."

Allen was in the final year of his deal when he was traded to the Bears. He became a free agent in March.

"We know how good he's been throughout his career, and he was out there on the open market still," Hortiz said. "A chance to bring someone of his caliber back (who) we think can help us win games, so we're fired up to have him."

The Chargers opted for an alternate reunion earlier this offseason when they signed Mike Williams to a one-year deal. Williams had spent the first seven seasons of his career with the Chargers. Like Allen, Williams was in the final year of his deal with the Chargers in the 2024 offseason. The Chargers cut him to save cap space.

Williams filled a more logical role for the current Chargers roster. He had proven with the Chargers and quarterback Justin Herbert that he could be a down-the-field threat outside the numbers, particularly in contested-catch situations. That was a skill the Chargers were lacking, especially before the draft.

Williams, though, shockingly announced his retirement on the eve of training camp. That left a vacuum of sorts in the Chargers receiver room. They had talent, sure. Ladd McConkey emerged as true No. 1 option as a rookie. The drafted Tre Harris in the second round and KeAndre Lambert-Smith in the fifth round. But this was a very young group. After Williams' retirement, Quentin Johnston was the career receptions leader in the room with 93.

Allen has 974 career receptions.

Hortiz admitted that Williams retiring "opened up more opportunity."

"We know Keenan brings veteran presence, and I think everyone knows that," Hortiz said. "What he's done in this league, all the peltis he has on the wall, you get a chance to add someone like that, you do it."

Where does Allen fit into the current makeup of the Chargers receiver room?

McConkey played a vast majority of his snaps in the slot last season. According to TruMedia, he ran 340 routes from the slot and 135 routes from the outside. He was also more productive in the slot, both in terms of total production and efficiency. McConkey averaged .08 expected points added per route on the outside and .14 EPA per route in the slot in 2024, according to TruMedia. He caught 29 passes for 385 yards and two touchdowns on the outside in 2024. He caught 52 passes for 761 yards and five touchdowns from the slot.

TruMedia's alignment data only goes back to 2019. So Allen's splits do not cover his entire career. He has played more in the slot in that span, the past six seasons. From 2019 to '24, Allen ran 1,810 routes from the slot and 1,344 routes on the outside. He caught 287 passes for 3,020 yards and 20 touchdowns from the slot. He caught 261 passes for 3,008 yards and 18 touchdowns on the outside. From an efficiency standpoint, Allen averaged .06 EPA per route from the slot and .08 EPA per route from the outside.

"I think he can help us in multiple roles," Hortiz said. "I really believe that. I think he's been that way his whole career, and I don't see that being any different now. ... You guys know how Keenan has been used everywhere he's been, and you'll see the same thing. A lot of versatility."

Hortiz added: "You get good players on the field, and you play them. So you can get creative with a lot of different players. Ladd's played a lot of slot. Ladd's also been productive outside. Keenan's played a lot of slot. Keenan's been productive outside."

McConkey and Allen now become interchangeable pieces. At the same time, there is a reason the Chargers focused primarily on outside receiver as they added in the offseason, from Williams to Harris to Lambert-Smith. It seemed like a concerted effort to create complementary pieces around what McConkey brings in the slot.

Will the Chargers be getting the absolute most out of both McConkey and Allen if only one of the two can play in the slot in three-receiver packages? That is to be determined. Both players have certainly shown the ability to produce on the outside. Both players have also spent the majority of their time in the slot.

In the end, the Chargers needed a proven player at this position after Williams retired. And they brought back the most proven wide receiver in the history of the organization.

"You got a lot of good football players on the field that help you win games," Hortiz said, "and that makes you tough to beat."

Keenan Allen's journey back home to the Chargers

*By Fernando Ramirez

September 4, 2025*

It is no secret that Keenan Allen didn't want to leave the Chargers. He envisioned himself spending his entire career in powder blue.

Last offseason, Jim Harbaugh and Joe Hortiz came in and knew they had to fix the salary cap. Allen was asked to take a pay cut—something he shouldn't have had to do after posting 108 receptions, 1,243 yards, and seven touchdowns.

Instead, the Chargers traded him to the Chicago Bears for the 110th pick in the fourth round. Hortiz later packaged that pick, along with a second-rounder, in a deal with the New England Patriots to move up and select Georgia receiver Ladd McConkey. With the 137th pick in the fifth round, the Chargers also added Maryland cornerback Tarheeb Still, who went on to lead the team with four interceptions.

While the rookies shined in Los Angeles, Allen was in Chicago adjusting to a new offensive system, two different head coaches, and a rookie quarterback in Caleb Williams.

He played in 15 games, recording 70 catches for 744 yards and seven touchdowns, but the Bears finished just 5-12. It wasn't an easy year.

"I needed my team with me," Allen said.

By "team," he wasn't referring to his teammates but to his wife, Ciara, and their four children, who stayed in Southern California while he lived in Chicago. The family decided not to uproot for five months, choosing instead to let the kids remain in school and stay close to their friends.

Even from the Midwest, Allen kept tabs on the Chargers, watching how they fared throughout the season. He noticed McConkey's breakout rookie year—one that saw him break many of Allen's own franchise rookie records.

"He had a couple more games," Allen said with a laugh.

Allen also kept a close eye on Quentin Johnston, who had been a rookie during his final year in Los Angeles. At the time, Allen had been vocal about advising Johnston to block out outside noise and focus on his development.

That growth showed in 2024, as Johnston nearly doubled his rookie-year production with 55 receptions for 711 yards and eight touchdowns.

"His confidence is building," Allen said of Johnston. "I think he's ready to show this year even more."

He even watched the Houston Texans eliminate the Chargers in a 32-12 loss—a game where McConkey was the only real receiving threat, finishing with 197 yards and a touchdown. The next-best receiver that day was tight end Will Dissly, who managed just 16 yards.

"They could have used me," Allen said.

Allen admitted it hurt to watch his old team go down like that after such a solid year under Harbaugh. His mind, as always, was breaking down defenses and imagining where he could have taken advantage of their weak spots.

Even though he had nothing to do with the matchup against Houston, Allen instantly recognized how he could have helped.

"Just because of the way Houston plays—they play run man so much," Allen said. "Definitely could have been a help."

The Free-Agent Wait

He entered the offseason as a free agent for the first time in his career but didn't receive the kind of offers he felt matched his value.

"I think I got down played," Allen said. "That is part of the chip."

That chip on his shoulder has fueled him throughout his career—whether it was Mike McCoy rarely giving him first-team reps as a rookie in training camp, his Madden rating, or top receiver lists. Allen has always thrived when doubted.

He stayed in shape, continued his workouts, and waited for the phone to ring—hoping it would be the Chargers calling.

But instead, the Chargers went younger, drafting Tre Harris and KeAndre Lambert-Smith while also bringing back Allen's former teammate, Mike Williams.

During his first press conference, Williams expressed his desire to reunite with Allen and quarterback Justin Herbert.

"We ain't gonna speak on that. We ain't gonna talk about that," Williams said with a few laughs. "I'd love that, though. I would love that... That's my dog. We'd be together every other day. Yea, I love that. Why not?"

On the first day of training camp, however, the Chargers announced that Williams would be retiring after the numerous injuries he had sustained throughout his career.

The Call Back Home

A couple of weeks later, Allen finally received the call he had been waiting for—the Chargers wanted to bring him in for a workout.

Before moving forward, Allen reached out to Williams out of respect, letting him know he might be returning to the team.

"I ain't tripping bro, go do your thing," Williams responded to Allen.

Allen admitted that if Williams hadn't retired, he doesn't believe he would be back. But as he put it, things happen for a reason.

He also credited the fans for playing a role in his return. Throughout the process, they flooded social media with calls for the team to bring him back.

"Grateful, feeling the love for sure," Allen said of the support. "The whole way through the process last year, this year. Like I said, I always wanted to be back."

Reunited with Herbert

From 2020 to 2023, Allen shared a unique relationship with Herbert—so strong that he once joked that if they both went on the field blindfolded, the quarterback could still find his receiver. That connection translated into 376 completions for 4,088 yards and 25 touchdowns over 52 games.

Allen noticed during workouts and the first few practices back that the chemistry was still there, though some areas still needed work.

"For me, the pitch and catch stuff has been picking up where we left off," Allen said. "Just learning a new offense where they like the spots, the splits and stuff like that. That's where we are just trying to build the chemistry on that."

Safety Derwin James is one of the players who lights up every time Allen's return comes up. He knows firsthand how dangerous Allen is on third down.

"They already have the connection," James said. "It's like having your boy back with you."

In Allen's absence, Herbert developed a strong rapport with rookie receiver Ladd McConkey, connecting on 82 passes for 1,149 yards and seven touchdowns while throwing only three interceptions. Allen has noticed Herbert's growth heading into their fifth season together.

"He's more confident, he's more composed," Allen said. "He knows this offense like the back of his hand. So I'm excited about it."

Mentoring the Young Guns

Before Allen's return, some NFL experts questioned whether he and McConkey could coexist in the same offensive scheme, given that both primarily play in the slot. Allen dismissed the concern.

"You got two guys that know how to play football, love to play football and compete," Allen said. "I think you can put us anywhere. I'm a guy who can be anywhere on the field and obviously he showed last year he can do it all, too."

McConkey agreed, noting the flexibility of the system offensive coordinator Greg Roman runs.

"The great thing about our offense is we can all move around," McConkey said. "One by three formations, whoever it might be, me, Q, Keenan, [Reagar], whoever is out there, we can all rotate and be in different positions and scheme it up the way they want and have whoever run what route then we can rotate and run another way."

Roman also feels confident it will work.

"There is great communication going on there too, so that's great as well," Roman said. "He scoffed at it. I scoff at it. There we are."

Even after only a month back with the Chargers, Allen was already voted a team captain.

"The respect he has from his teammates spoke volumes," Harbaugh said of Allen being voted captain.

The Chargers' receiving room features a mix of young, talented players—some experienced, some not—but all capable of making plays for Herbert. Allen has watched them closely in practice and preseason games. His first opportunity came in the Rams preseason matchup, where Tre Harris caught six passes for 85 yards and KLS had two catches for 66 yards and a touchdown.

"Definitely impressed by the young guys," Allen explained. "Just how polished they are, the techniques that they already have, the speed of the game, and the confidence."

With the receiving room's inexperience, a veteran presence was needed. While Mike Williams had been brought back, his retirement made Allen the obvious choice due to his familiarity with the team and desire to help elevate those around him.

"He's been doing it for a long, long time," Harris said. "I've even talked to him about his career, just like all the ups and downs he's gone through. It's great to have a vet like that in your room."

Before Allen returned, McConkey told the "Kay Adams Show" that he would have loved to have Allen as a teammate to pick his brain. He even tracked down Allen's past practice tape to study his route running. Now, Allen is right there in the room.

"He's a student in the game," McConkey said. "He's been around a lot, seen tons of different looks and ran tons of different routes. Asking him that it's been helpful, and it's been huge for not only for me, but our entire receiver room."

Allen, in turn, has observed how McConkey approaches preparation and game day. He quickly noticed the rookie's dedication.

"Just seeing it in person speaks volumes to his work ethic," Allen said of McConkey. "He does it day in and day out. He comes in and he works. He's one of the first guys here. He's always getting the extra body work."

Another player Allen sought out was second-year cornerback Tarheeb Still, who came to the Chargers via the Allen-to-Bears trade through the Patriots.

Allen noticed Still's number, 29, flashing on the screen last year and didn't hesitate to call him out.

"We going to get after your ass," Allen told the second-year cornerback.

Still, not usually a trash-talker, admitted that the veteran receiver's challenge excited him to face Allen in practice.

"I really took it as 'Okay, let's go. I get to compete against one of the best to play receiver. So, I took it as a challenge," Still said. "Kind of got me going a little bit. Kind of got me fired up."

Still knows that going up against Allen isn't for the faint of heart and views it as a chance to improve.

"It's really fun to go against him in practice," Still said. "He talks a lot, so you get to go at it. You get to compete. He runs great routes, so you get great looks. You really get to get better. So I appreciate all the work."

The young receivers aren't the only ones seeking Allen's guidance. After plays where they face each other, Still said he goes to the veteran to learn how to improve.

"He tells me what he sees when he's attacking, how he's going to attack certain routes, what kind of look he's going to give—so stuff like that, stuff I can learn from," Still said.

At this point in his career, Allen is focused on winning. He has been coached by Mike McCoy, Anthony Lynn, Brandon Staley, Matt Eberflus, along with Giff Smith and Thomas Brown (interim head coaches).

He's experienced great wins, ugly losses, and everything in between.

Allen believes the team can succeed under Harbaugh.

"I think so, he has a different approach," Allen said of Harbaugh. "He just gets it off in a different way, and it just means a little different. It's coming from a different place. So I think it's good."

He also feels the young players feed off the culture Harbaugh has instilled.

"Everybody wants to win," Allen said of the team. "Everybody wants to get their job done. The culture is unmatched."

Allen's focus is clear: make an impact, play football, and win a Super Bowl. On paper, this Chargers squad has the best chance to do so because of the talent and depth around it in all the years Allen has been a pro..

The team boasts more depth than big names—a mix of veterans and young players, with Herbert at quarterback and strength across all skill positions.

Allen knows his role with this Chargers team: it's the same one he's had since being drafted in 2013, the same role he believes could finally help the Chargers overcome their playoff slump.

"I don't think it changes for me," Allen said. "Be Keenan Allen, do what you do. Get open, catch the ball."

Cameron Dicker

Chargers' Cameron Dicker at the forefront of a redefining era for NFL kickers

By Sam Farmer
Los Angeles Times
October 17, 2025

When the Chargers are successful — and they have won four of six games this season — you can most often trace the results back to two elite components: the arm of Justin Herbert and the leg of Cameron Dicker.

The football world celebrates the former. Herbert has pinpoint precision, even when draped in defenders. But the latter, Dicker's record-breaking reliability, has almost become an afterthought. He's going to make his kicks.

Nearly 80% of NFL games were decided by one possession last season, underscoring the value of a kicker who can deliver three points time after time. For instance, Dicker tied a career high by kicking five field goals in the 29-27 win at the Dolphins, including the 33-yard clincher — and in his five seasons he has never missed a field goal of 40 yards or fewer.

"Boiled down to the base level, yeah, you kick a ball through the pipes," said Dicker, 25, whose team plays host Sunday to the Indianapolis Colts. "But a lot goes into it. You've got to have a great holder, a great snapper, and then great field-goal protection. And then you have to be able to do your job at a high level to keep a job here in the NFL nowadays."

Dicker has made 105 of 111 career field-goal attempts, giving him the best career percentage (94.6) in league history by a player with at least 100 attempts.

"This is a guy that, just under the radar, has continued to be absolutely excellent throughout his career," said retired NFL kicker Jay Feely, who spent a decade as a CBS analyst. "He continually makes his kicks in the big moments and is becoming one of the best kickers in the NFL."

Some of the league's most significant changes are happening in the kicking game. Coaches are increasingly comfortable with long field-goal attempts, making 60 yards feel like the new 50.

The numbers back this up. Field-goal attempts of 50 yards or longer have nearly tripled since 2010, when there were 108 in the entire season. Through six weeks this season, there have been precisely that many, 108, meaning the league is on pace for almost 300.

What's more, the accuracy of those long kicks has risen dramatically. Kickers made 54.6% of those attempts in 2010 but are currently making them at a 71.3% clip.

That has changed strategies. Now, drives that stall around midfield are no longer automatic punting situations but true scoring opportunities.

The NFL record for the longest field goal stood at 63 yards for 43 years — set first by Tom Dempsey, then tied by a handful of others — before Matt Prater made a 64-yarder in 2013.

Longtime Baltimore kicker Justin Tucker has the record at 66 yards, but the booming Brandon Aubrey of the Dallas Cowboys has kicks of 65 and 64 yards. This past summer, Jacksonville's Cam Little made a 70-yarder in a preseason game.

"I think there's an increased confidence in coaches giving players the opportunity to go out there..." said Dicker, whose longest made kick is 59 yards. "I think guys in the past have had the ability to make long kicks and that some coaches haven't trusted it at times. But you're seeing a little bit of a change in that."

Longtime NFL kicker turned kicking coach Michael Husted points to a number of factors in the evolution of the position. Players are starting younger and specializing in kicking, he said, as opposed to sampling other sports. Technology and analytics have made training more efficient and effective. Private coaching, which used to be somewhat exotic, is now commonplace. And people are taking the mental aspect of the game far more seriously.

"Back then, seeing a sports psychologist was, 'What's wrong with you?'" Husted said. "Now, mental training is part of a three-pronged approach: weight room, on-field and between the ears."

Feely knew that life from two different angles. He played 14 seasons in the NFL, then watched his son, Jace, who kicked for Arizona State then Colorado.

"Kicking still comes down to your ability to handle failure," Jay Feely said. "Every kicker is going to miss, and they're going to miss critical kicks. Can you handle failure? Can you come back and not allow that to break you?"

"A lot of kickers I've talked to didn't retire because they couldn't do it physically anymore. They were just done with the mental grind."

As for Dicker, in those high-pressure moments, he leans heavily into his faith as a Christian for perspective.

"For me, at the end of the day, I know I'm loved regardless of what happens," he said. "So I don't really care if I make or miss kicks. I've got to go out there and do the best I can. And once I kick it, it's off my hands."

He finds it helpful to keep gratitude front and center.

"There's a study I read that gratitude and anxiety come from the same place in your brain, and the two cannot coexist," he said. "It's an either-or situation."

No matter the faith, Dicker delivers religiously.

Justin Eboigbe

With a heavy heart, Justin Eboigbe delivers career game for Chargers

*By Fernando Ramirez
The Sporting Tribune
October 24, 2025*

INGLEWOOD, Calif. -- Last Sunday, Chargers defensive lineman Justin Eboigbe walked off the field feeling like he had played the worst game of his young NFL career.

He didn't record a single tackle, pressure, or stat.

"I felt like I played my worst game this past game and the news I got even worse," he admitted.

The Chargers went on to lose 38-24 to the Indianapolis Colts, with the defense managing just five quarterback hits and one sack. It was an ugly performance in all phases.

But the news Eboigbe received after the game was even more devastating.

"Hearing that my grandma, passed away after the game," Eboigbe said. "At the end of the day it's tough."

His grandmother meant the world to him, and though it was a short week, he knew he needed to lock in.

"Just knowing the woman that she was," Eboigbe said. "She wouldn't want me to be down. She would want me to give it all I got. One thing I just kept saying this whole weekend, especially during the game I just want her be with me."

Eboigbe responded with the best performance of his young career. He recorded two sacks, three tackles, three quarterback hits, two tackles for loss, and four total pressures in their 37-10 victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

He was all over Vikings quarterback Carson Wentz. On the second drive of the game, Wentz dropped back on 3rd-and-11, and Eboigbe split between the center and guard, driving the left guard to the ground before sacking Wentz to force a punt.

His second sack came right before halftime. After Odafe Oweh sacked Wentz to force a 2nd-and-11, Eboigbe pushed the right guard into the center, freeing up Tuli Tuipulotu. Wentz escaped Tuipulotu's grasp, but the Alabama product cleaned it up for the sack.

"I think I mentioned it earlier, some of our young players are really doing a great job and Justin Eboigbe, how about him?" Chargers head coach Jim Harbaugh said. "Two sacks, Justin Eboigbe, there was another great performance by him."

It was a dominant showing played with a heavy heart — a performance Eboigbe dedicated to his late grandmother.

The second-year defensive lineman has taken a significant step forward in 2025. Drafted in the fourth round last year, he appeared in just five games as a rookie. That experience fueled him.

"I felt bad last year," Eboigbe said. "I felt like I didn't help the team, being an inactive guy, but progress must progress. I just feel like, man, you just keep standing up there, getting better each and every day. Don't let the outside noise or external factors out there affect your mindset."

This season, he's played in all eight games, recording 18 tackles, four tackles for loss, six quarterback hits, and four sacks — the second most on the team.

Eboigbe said he plans to continue honoring his grandmother and believes the best is yet to come for the Chargers defense.

"Man, it was special," Mack said of Eboigbe. "But it's a testament to all 11 guys working hard together, man, trying to make plays and dominate a football game."

Oronde Gadsden II

Chargers' early riser Oronde Gadsden II making a good first impression

EL SEGUNDO — Rookie tight end Oronde Gadsden II usually wakes up at first light, which these days in Southern California is about 5 a.m. He hasn't adjusted to the Pacific Time Zone after living all of his life in the Eastern Time Zone, so it's been difficult to get back to sleep in an unfamiliar hotel room. Then he's out the door and on his bike for an 8-minute ride to the Chargers' practice facility.

Is anyone else around The Bolt at that unspeakable hour?

"The security guy," Gadsden said.

It's too early for breakfast.

The locker room is empty.

So is the training room.

And the weight room is, too, although strength and conditioning coach Ben Herbert usually isn't far behind.

Gadsden, 21, then heads onto one of the three practice fields hours before the sun breaks through the marine layer and well before he's required to be on hand for the last of the Chargers' organized team activities this week before a nearly monthlong break before the start of training camp on July 17.

So far, perhaps the most difficult part of practices and workouts for Gadsden since the Chargers drafted him in the fifth round in April has been adjusting to the different time zone. He's been early for practice, for workouts, for meetings, for breakfast, for every aspect of his rookie year.

"Being around when my dad was playing kind of taught me the ins and outs and how everything is going to go," Gadsden said of his father, also named Oronde, who spent six seasons as a wide receiver with the Miami Dolphins between 1998 and 2003. "Most of it has gone how I expected."

The elder Gadsden also drilled one very important lesson into his son's head.

"My dad always told me that you should show up early," Gadsden said.

In addition to impressing Chargers coach Jim Harbaugh, tight ends coach Andy Bischoff and veteran teammates such as fellow tight ends Tyler Conklin and Will Dissly, Gadsden's early arrivals have had another benefit. Gadsden has walked through the playbook on his own on the field.

"Coach Herb," as the Chargers call him to distinguish him from quarterback Justin Herbert, suggested Gadsden hit the field early in order to drill down on the plays and better prepare for team walk-throughs and practices that often don't start until noon or later. It's been very helpful.

"He was really the one that came up with that," Gadsden said of Ben Herbert.

Conklin and Dissly have been helpful in mentoring Gadsden as he makes the transition from Syracuse University to the Chargers. The tight end's job isn't just about catching spirals from Justin Herbert. It's also about blocking and clearing space for running backs Najee Harris and Omarion Hampton.

"He wants to listen, he wants to learn," Bischoff said of Gadsden. "All you ever ask of a blocker is a willingness, and we can take it from there. If they have a willingness, then you've got to hone in on the fundamentals and help them grow. If they don't have a willingness, that's a challenge."

"He has a willingness."

Gadsden also has shown in spring practices that he can make plays, which in addition to his 6-foot-5, 236-pound frame, was what attracted Chargers general manager Joe Hortiz to him before the draft. The Chargers believe he can be another reliable target for Justin Herbert.

Last season at Syracuse, Gadsden caught 73 passes for 934 yards and seven touchdowns in 13 games. He was a third-team AP All-America selection and a first-team all-Atlantic Coast Conference pick in 2024 and 2022 after moving to tight end from wide receiver before the '22 season.

"It's way early, way early, but he's twitchy," Bischoff said in evaluating Gadsden's play so far. "He separates. He does some really good things in the passing game, and I think, as he's become more comfortable in our system in the last four or five days, people are beginning to see that."

Now, if the Chargers can just get him to sleep past the crack of dawn.

Omarion Hampton

The Inside Story of How the Chargers Drafted Omarion Hampton

By Eric Smith

The night before Round 1 of the 2025 NFL Draft, the Chargers held a gathering at a restaurant in El Segundo.

Chargers General Manager Joe Hortiz was there, as was Head Coach Jim Harbaugh and his staff, the entire scouting and personnel team and several other departments within the Bolts front office.

The event was to celebrate months of hard work and commitment that would culminate over the next three days beginning with the No. 22 overall pick, which the Chargers held in the first round.

"It's a cool thing to just bring people together," Chargers assistant general manager Chad Alexander said of the get together. "After going through the process and debating with each other about this player or that player in our draft meetings, we're still all in this thing together. It always comes from a good place. Everyone was excited. You look around at each other and it's like, 'We're going to go all in this weekend!'"

As he mingled about at the get together, Alexander couldn't shake a premonition that Omarion Hampton was going to end up as a Los Angeles Charger the next night.

Alexander, of course, knew that the uber-talented and productive North Carolina running back might not even be available at No. 22 overall.

Others in the front office felt the same way.

"You hope," said James MacPherson, a Chargers regional scout whose area includes North Carolina.

"But there was no certainty and no guarantee because other teams are looking at the same film and same things we're looking at," MacPherson added. "I felt like he was an elite player, and those guys usually go early."

Even so, Alexander simply had a hunch and wanted to find a way to pass the intuition along to Hortiz.

Alexander was slated to give Hortiz a ride back to the team facility after the event and figured that was as good a time as ever.

"We were at the restaurant and I was thinking, 'OK, how can I tell Joe this?' But he actually brought Hampton up on the way home first," Alexander recalled with a laugh.

"I was dropping him off back at the facility and said, 'I think it's going to be Hampton.' We all just loved him," Alexander added.

Roughly 24 hours later, the Chargers turned in a card that made Hampton their first-round pick in 2025.

"When it was him, we were thrilled," Alexander said.

"Fired up to get him," Hortiz said in a press conference after the first round.

Over the past few weeks, Chargers.com spoke to various scouts within the Bolts front office for a deep dive on Hampton as a player and a person.

Here's the inside story of how Hampton ended up in powder blue.

'Who the heck is that?'

Let's go back to the beginning.

MacPherson's region is made up of eight states — Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee and New York — meaning he must be strategic on how he handles school visits and which games to attend.

As fate would have it, MacPherson was in Chapel Hill on August 27, 2022, to watch North Carolina open the season against Florida A&M.

It was the very first college game for Hampton, a four-star prospect who played high school ball roughly 50 miles from UNC.

Hampton's first impression on MacPherson was a notable one as the running back scampered for 101 yards with two touchdowns in his college debut. It was the first time a UNC true freshman had hit 100 rushing yards in his first college game since 1946.

"He was a true freshman, and they were already excited about him," MacPherson said. "He kind of stood out and I was like, 'Alright, I'm going to be following this guy.'"

"I was scouting some of the older players but even as a true freshman he looked like he was a junior," MacPherson added. "You're looking at a line and it's like, 'Who the heck is that?' He was one of the biggest, strongest-looking backs they had."

MacPherson later caught two of Hampton's games in 2023 when the running back was a sophomore.

Hampton scored twice in the 2023 season opener against South Carolina and rumbled for 234 yards and three touchdowns on just 26 carries the following week against Appalachian State.

"You star those guys," MacPherson said of his scouting process.

Alexander also saw Hampton play in 2023 when he was the Director of Player Personnel for the New York Jets.

Hampton went off against Miami that October night as he racked up 217 total yards and three scores, including 197 rushing yards and two touchdowns on the ground.

By the end of the 2023 season, and even into the spring of 2024, everybody in the NFL scouting world knew about the rising running back from North Carolina.

A season with 1,504 rushing yards and 15 touchdowns will do that.

But Hampton also wasn't eligible for the draft yet, and scouts also wanted to see if he could replicate that success again in 2024.

A repeat performance

North Carolina spent much of the 2023 season as a Top 25 ranked team.

Experts credited their strong season to quarterback Drake Maye, who threw for 3,608 yards and 24 scores and went on to be the No. 3 overall pick in the 2024 NFL Draft.

As Hampton geared up for his junior season, many wondered how Hampton would fare without a surefire first-round pick at quarterback next to him in the backfield.

"When a team has a big-time quarterback like Drake Maye, who could throw it all over the field, defenses are going to kind of try to defend that," MacPherson said. "So, they're going to probably play some extra defenders in coverage to basically stop the pass, and that probably opened up some more run lanes, lighter boxes on defense for Omarion to run through."

With Maye in New England, Hampton thrived as the focal point of the Tar Heel's offense.

He matched his rushing touchdown total (15) from the season before but had more rushing yards (1,660) and more yards from scrimmage (2,033) — all while North Carolina rotated at quarterback after Max Johnson, the starter to open the season, was lost for the year in Week 1 with a leg injury.

Add it up and Hampton actually tallied more 100-yard games as a junior (10) than he did as a sophomore (eight).

Hampton had 1,726 total yards as a sophomore, which accounted for 27 percent of UNC's offense. That output shot up to 38.5 percent last season when he tallied 2,033 of the offense's 5,287 yards.

Hortiz compared the two seasons unprompted at his press conference after the Chargers selected him at No. 22 overall.

"I go back to last year when I was evaluating Drake Maye and other players in North Carolina in the Fall. He stood out back then," Hortiz said. "There was just this big physical runner with breakaway speed and punishing people and making guys miss. It was like, 'Wow, this is a heck of a back.'"

"And to watch him do it again this year — two years of production, durability, high character, work ethic off the charts — everything about him, that's what makes him stand out," Hortiz added.

Hampton, who averaged exactly 5.9 yards per carry in each of his final two seasons in college, made the same impression on others, too.

"I factored it in a lot," Alexander said. "You have to factor in not only who he's playing against but also who he's playing with. The year before, he was playing with a top five quarterback and was extremely productive."

"This past season he was the focal point of the offense and found a way to be productive," Alexander added. "You turn on the tape every time and see the same thing. That's just a credit to him."

MacPherson said: "That also checked another box for us in terms of, 'Hey, was it just the quarterback?' No, this guy had back-to-back productive years with and without an NFL quarterback.

"To be honest, I would say he had a better year [in 2024] because he had to run against some heavier boxes and probably break a few more tackles than he did in the past," MacPherson added.

All eyes on Hampton

The scouting process for an NFL prospect is about more than on-field production, of course.

That's the starting point, to be sure, and it's an area Hampton excelled at as he put up gaudy stats during his time at North Carolina.

"When you watch him, he's physical, he's explosive, he's tough, he's got great balance, he's got excellent speed, gets outside, finishes long runs, breaks off long runs," Hortiz said. "When you watch him in the secondary, he just lowers the shoulder and runs through tackles ... he also has value as a pass receiver."

Hortiz later added: "A three-down back. And probably a four-down back."

Alexander couldn't agree more.

"This is a grown man's sport, and he plays the game like a grown man. That's probably the highest compliment you can give to a back like him," Alexander said. "He has a style that is tailor-made for the league and that's why we were excited to get him."

But when a team decides to spend a draft pick on a player, especially in the first round, they want to make sure that prospect will fit into their team in more ways than one.

MacPherson described something called 'The Charger Mentality,' a mantra that Hortiz and Harbaugh brought to the organization when they arrived last January.

In simple terms, this mentality measures what football means to a player. Is he just in it for the fame and financial security? Or is there a hunger there that will help him succeed at the next level?

"Does he love football, and does he love the process? Is he a guy that's going to do what it takes to be successful and help his team be successful in terms of doing the little things?" MacPherson said. "Sometimes those are hard and tedious but that's what it takes to be a successful player or an elite player that can compete at the NFL level.

"He certainly was doing all those things on the field and off the field. I don't think [his production] was by accident. He very much trains like a pro already, which was great to hear," MacPherson added.

Part of MacPherson's job is to go into schools in his area and talk to staff members about prospects.

This could be a head coach, sure, but also other coaches, members of the football staff or academic advisors.

MacPherson recently recalled what he learned about Hampton as he learned more about him as both a person and a player.

"No matter who we talked to throughout this entire process, we couldn't find anybody to say anything bad about this kid. Nobody," MacPherson said. "That's rare but, every once in a while, you do find a guy who checks every box."

While MacPherson was doing his homework on Hampton, Ethan Brodsky was, too.

Brodsky is also a regional scout for the Bolts who primarily covers the Northeast.

But Hortiz recently introduced a crosschecking measure of sorts to the Chargers scouting department where regional scouts have a state or two that a pair of them will work on.

MacPherson, for example, crosses over into Maryland and West Virginia with Brodsky, who in turn will go into North Carolina on his own.

"Joe is big on overlap. Getting more eyes on players is the most important thing, and that definitely helped," Brodsky said.

The result?

A clean and thorough evaluation from multiple scouts on Hampton.

"It very much aligned, the type of player he is, the type of person he is," Brodsky said of his collaboration with MacPherson.

And while Brodsky didn't see Hampton play in person, he had an in-depth conversation with Natrone Means, North Carolina's running backs coach and a former Chargers Pro Bowl running back.

Means raved about Hampton's work ethic and training habits, as well as the fact that he was a standout person off the field and in the community.

Brodsky got an up-close look at Hampton in practice and came away impressed.

"I went there in October, and it was a walk-through day, a Thursday before they played Florida State," Brodsky said. "He was the first one in line in every drill. It's only a walk-through and these are things he's done probably 1,000 times but the way he worked was incredible.

"It was an over-the-top work ethic. That speaks volumes," Brodsky added.

MacPherson came away with the exact same vibe.

"You watch him in practice, and he was always doing something. And it wasn't like he was drawing attention to himself and distracting players," MacPherson said. "He was their No. 1 back so if it's special teams and field goals, he's over in the corner catching balls or working through the ropes.

"He was constantly doing something on the side to try and improve his game," MacPherson continued. "You saw some of those practice habits right away. It's like when you go to our practice and you see Khalil [Mack] working on the bags during special teams. He's always working on something.

"I could tell Omarion just loves ball and wasn't resting on his laurels. And that was every practice I saw him at. He just wouldn't stay still, even punching the bag in pass pro," MacPherson added. "It wasn't like he was sitting on the bench and sipping on Gatorade. I knew this was a guy who would fit right in on our practice field."

By the time the 2024 season ended, it was clear that Hampton was among the top prospects in the 2025 draft class.

And as the Chargers prepped to meet with Hampton in person, they would continue to be blown away by him.

A Bolt & Hammer

Kiel McDonald was more than excited to add Hampton to the Bolts running back room this offseason.

But truth be told, the Chargers running back coach had hoped to coach Hampton earlier in his career, too.

McDonald formerly coach running backs at the University of Utah and at USC. Even then he had heard about a high school running back all the way over in North Carolina.

"There was this running back that they said looks like Herschel Walker and he's all the way out in Carolina," McDonald said. "I'm like, 'I don't know if we're going to get a kid on the West Coast from Carolina.' I got a chance to see the tape, see the workouts and he's always been a big, strong, physical specimen.

"As the years continued to progress, that dude has 'it'. There's that 'it' factor you see in a back, whether it's things you can pull out of somebody or things he already has," McDonald added.

Fast forward to the spring of 2025 when McDonald finally got the chance to meet Hampton at the NFL Scouting Combine.

Already impressed with Hampton's play on film, the Chargers contingent in Indianapolis swooned after his in-person interview.

"I thought he could regurgitate his scheme, his offense and what he was taught," McDonald said. "We threw some random plays from his season on the TV screen and wanted him to talk us through it.

"What's the running back read here, what's his footwork, what's his track? He knew exactly what to say," McDonald added. "Talked about blitz pickup, how he was taught there, understanding how to scan. Just being able to tell us exactly how he's been taught, that was impressive. He is a smart dude, and he is a hard worker."

By that point, MacPherson and Brodsky had already submitted their year-end reports to the front office.

The Chargers host their regional scouts in December for meetings and the chance for them to attend a home game.

Scouts submit their Top 30 reports to Hortiz and Alexander, which is a list of the best players in their region.

Was Hampton the No. 1 player on MacPherson's list?

"He was," MacPherson said with a laugh. "And he stayed there."

With Hampton squarely on the Chargers radar, it was time for others in the scouting department to evaluate Hampton, too.

Jaylen Bannerman-Oden is a college and pro scout for the Chargers, meaning he dabbles in both worlds.

During the season, he will work on advance scouting reports for upcoming opponents. But he also visits a few schools for another cross-checking measure.

Additionally, under Hortiz, each scout in the front office is assigned a position group to evaluate ahead of the Draft.

Bannerman-Oden was tasked with looking at the running backs.

One of the first steps of that process was going to Hampton's Combine weigh-in with McDonald.

"With Omarion, I had a little star next to him. He looked rocked up. It looked like my man had been in the gym," Bannerman-Oden said.

Over the next few weeks after the Combine, Bannerman-Oden dove into dozens of running back prospects.

He looked at their touchdowns, simple plays, fumbles, pass protection, routes. Everything.

"Omarion might have the highest ceiling of anybody in this class, just off of his size, he can run inside and outside, has solid hands to catch the ball," Bannerman-Oden said.

"Everything he does, he's a natural at it. Some guys work really hard and they get stuff done. He works really hard and he's naturally gifted," Bannerman-Oden added. "He's breaking tackles and people are bouncing off him, it's like a man versus boys sometimes. He's got some of that stuff you can't teach."

McDonald echoed a similar sentiment when asked about his pre-draft evaluation of the 2025 running back class.

"We look at who's going to fit our skillset and what we're looking for, fit our offense, fit our scheme," McDonald said. "[Hampton] was up there at the top."

The final piece of the pre-draft puzzle?

North Carolina's Pro Day, which was held on March 24 in Chapel Hill.

MacPherson made sure to be as close to Hampton as possible for his final impression.

"You talk about him passing every phase, the last phase was his Pro Day. I was there in Chapel Hill helping the running backs coach from the Saints in the drills," MacPherson said. "We call it 'smelling their breath.' And it's like, 'OK, let me get up on this kid and watch him and see how he responds to being coached in drills and how he's working.'"

"He's a nice, humble, quiet kid off the field but there's a switch," MacPherson added. "He attacked his Pro Day and getting over the bags and making cuts — I was one of the scouts giving him a secondary reaction in a drill — and he just attacked it with a different level of intensity. It was like a game. It was just bags, but he was ready to run through a guy."

As the draft neared and the Bolts front office set their board, Hampton had differentiated himself.

The Chargers have certain icons they put on players for their digital draft board. Some are for medical issues or character concerns, sure.

But some are reflected in a positive light, too.

There's a Bolt, which highlights a player's overall standout character. And there's a Hammer, which echoes a brand of physicality that you know Harbaugh loves to see on game days.

MacPherson explained what the symbols represent.

"It's a high bar to be a Bolt. When you put that Charger Bolt on a guy, you're saying he checks a lot of boxes in terms of being a pro on and off the field just as an elite guy," MacPherson said.

"And a Hammer, when they hit somebody, the other guy is going backwards," MacPherson added.

You can guess which player received both designations when the Chargers final draft board was set.

"He was a Bolt and a Hammer," MacPherson said of Hampton. "A lot of times, guys get one or the other. But the special ones get both."

A bright future

It's a special feeling for a scout when a player they've watched for more than a year gets selected to their team.

Especially in Round 1.

"It's rewarding, I'm not going to lie," MacPherson said. "You put in a lot of hard work, a lot of extra effort. We put in a lot of time as scouts watching and observing guys, watching extra film and then talking to extra people and doing as much background research as you can."

"Sometimes you don't leave a school until 7 p.m. at night and then you still have to type up all the work you did that day," MacPherson continued.

"Of course, it feels good when a guy you put a lot of work into gets picked, but scouts are team guys. And make no mistake, it was a total team effort. Everybody liked him and saw his game as a fit. There was just some really good consensus."

Consensus.

Unanimous.

Those two words came up a lot in April both before and after the Chargers drafted Hampton at No. 22 overall.

And even though Hortiz and Alexander chatted about the running back the night before the draft, everyone also knew there was a reality where Hampton was long gone before the Bolts' pick.

"Did I think Omarion was going to be there? No," Hortiz said. "Because he was one of those unanimous guys, and you kind of anticipate unanimous guys being gone. But we're fired up he was there.

"We go through all the guys, and it was unanimous," Hortiz added. "If he's there, would we take him at No. 22? Absolutely."

And that was even with the Bolts getting multiple strong trade offers to move away from No. 22 and to the latter part of the first round.

"He was designated by us as a player before the draft where we were going to have to be blown away by a trade," Alexander said. "We listen to any trade offer; that's just part of our jobs. But we weren't going to move away from this caliber of player."

"Happy as hell to get him. Offensive coaches were happy, defensive coaches were happy," Alexander added. "We're going to control the ball more and that will help our defense. It was just a consensus. Everybody was excited to get him."

Instead of trading back, the Chargers added a dynamic young running back to the offense.

Can Hampton run the ball? Check.

The two-time Doak Walker Award Finalist finished with 3,600-plus rushing yards and 36 touchdowns at North Carolina.

Can Hampton catch the ball? Check.

He had 73 career catches in college.

And can Hampton protect his quarterback? Check.

The 22-year-old will gladly use his 6-foot and 220-pound frame to wall off pass rushers.

"This is a player that can play on third down really well," said Harbaugh. "Gives Justin [Herbert] somebody to throw to out of the backfield, he's also a really good pass protector. His game is really well-rounded."

Hortiz and Harbaugh now have two drafts under their belt in Southern California.

A year ago, they took a mammoth right tackle in Joe Alt (6-foot-7 and 323 pounds) who already showed Pro Bowl potential as a rookie.

Now you add Hampton, who joins a running back room that also includes Najee Harris, a 6-1, 242-pound back that has run for 1,00-plus yards in each of his four NFL seasons.

"They complement each other well. They both have a bruising style of running and wear defenses down over four quarters," Alexander said. "It's an identity we want to bring. We are trying to build a bully here and that's how you do that."

McDonald added of Hampton: "We'll see what part he's going to play, but I can see him helping out the Chargers in a big way."

Is there any question what kind of team the Chargers are trying to assemble?

"[Hampton] is like a humble beast. And Joe Alt was like that, too," Bannerman-Oden said. "Not a flashy guy ... but that's two years in a row where we've gotten these humble savages that are just about the work and not about all the extra pomp and circumstance."

"They're not flashy guys themselves. They're about the work and they want a team that reflects that," Bannerman-Oden said of Hortiz and Harbaugh. "They want guys that will compete and, when you get into December or the fourth quarter, will want it more."

Hampton will wear No. 8 with the Chargers and has already made the transition from Carolina blue to powder blue.

And as his rookie season approaches, he can't wait to produce for his new team.

"[The NFL] has been a dream ever since I touched a football," Hampton said. "I'm excited for it."

"It's better than I thought, to be honest," Hampton later added about getting drafted. "Surreal feeling just to get that phone call knowing that the team is trusting you to join their program."

Daiyan Henley

Can Daiyan Henley be a key to Chargers' Super Bowl push?

By Kris Rhim
ESPN
April 15, 2025

LOS ANGELES -- When Chargers linebacker Daiyan Henley realized his NFL dream in 2023, it was almost akin to the script of a Hollywood movie.

Henley grew up in the shadows of SoFi Stadium in Los Angeles, playing high school football at Crenshaw High with dreams of playing in the pros. He changed positions twice -- from quarterback in high school to wide receiver at the University of Nevada and then moving to defense his junior year. After spending his senior year at Washington State, Henley was drafted in the third round (No. 85) of the 2023 NFL draft by his hometown team, the Chargers.

If this were a movie with a storybook ending, Henley would have gone on to dominate as a rookie. Instead, Henley's first season was a disappointment. He played 51 defensive snaps -- spending most of his time on special teams -- as a depth player behind linebackers Kenneth Murray Jr., Eric Kendricks and Nick Niemann, who all played at least 230 defensive snaps.

"I chased this dream for so long to be here, from outside looking in, that probably seemed like it was enough," Henley told ESPN.

"But that wasn't my end-all-be-all goal to be a special teamer. ... So that was where my embarrassment was, but it was also my interior motivation."

Henley found a new opportunity in 2024 when Murray and Kendricks didn't return and with the hiring of coach Jim Harbaugh, who brought in a new defensive staff.

Last offseason, the Chargers signed linebackers Denzel Perryman and Troy Dye and drafted Junior Colson in the third round. Colson had played for Harbaugh and defensive coordinator Jesse Minter at Michigan -- his familiarity with the scheme, system and coaches made Colson a likely candidate to see a significant role in year one.

But appendicitis kept Colson out of most of training camp and Henley emerged as one of the Chargers' best linebackers during camp.

When the season began, Henley and Perryman started but would rotate with Colson and other linebackers on defense. Over time, that rotation decreased, with Henley staying on the field more often. From Weeks 8 to 16, he played at least 60 snaps in all but one game and became a vocal part of the Chargers defense.

"I think he's really just become a great calming force and leader in the middle of the defense," Minter said during the season.

The season didn't come without bumps, though. In Week 4 against the Kansas City Chiefs, Henley suffered a torn labrum in his left shoulder while making a tackle. His season would have been over if he had opted for surgery, but instead Henley played Week 5 against the Cardinals with a shoulder strap and another arm restraint to prevent further injury.

Henley had what he described as the worst game of his career that day. The Chargers defense missed 16 tackles, many of which Henley took the blame for. Cardinals running back James Conner rushed for 101 yards on 19 carries.

After that game, Henley worked with the Chargers staff to adjust his shoulder contraption.

"They said I am at a much higher chance of dislocating my shoulder with the adjustments that I made, but at that point, I was like, 'Bro, I'll take the risk,'" Henley said. "And if you look at my gameplay after Arizona, I went on a run."

He then had double-digit tackles in eight of his next nine games, including a career-high 15 tackles against the Tennessee Titans. His performance caught the attention of Harbaugh.

"The growth, the leadership, the tackling ability, that's been great," Harbaugh said. "... Elite pass defense, driving into the zone and just finding the receivers and plugging the holes and then reacting to the ball in the air that was elite."

Henley finished his sophomore season ranking eighth in the NFL in total tackles (147).

"I can truly say I don't feel embarrassed," Henley said while laughing. "I feel much better about my football life and my football journey. I feel like I did accomplish a lot, but I just know I haven't gotten to where I wanna be."

Shortly after the season ended, Henley had surgery for his labrum. As part of his recovery process, Henley said he is at the Chargers facility daily for rehab before strength training and began training his upper body again about a week ago.

After uncertainty following an uneventful rookie season, with a new coaching staff, Henley heads into his third season as the Chargers top linebacker. He expects to be 100% by training camp for a season where he feels more motivated than ever.

"Looking around the league, I feel bits of just longing for more. I see guys, and I feel like I should have that opportunity, and why didn't I?" Henley said.

"Ultimately, I'm telling myself, 'You haven't done anything yet,' and that right there motivates me. So that's where I'm at mentally. I feel like I still haven't had my moment yet."

‘You gotta move on’: Chargers’ Justin Herbert focusing on future, not playoff failure

By Thuc Nhi Nguyen

No one in the Chargers’ locker room felt as bad as Justin Herbert. At least that’s what the quarterback said after a career-high four interceptions in January cost the Chargers an opportunity for their first playoff win since 2018.

But the disappointment that rendered Herbert motionless on the sideline in Houston had faded in his memory, he said. Offseasons tend to have that rejuvenating effect.

“If I spend any more time worrying or focusing on a loss like that, I would be doing a disservice to my teammates,” Herbert said Wednesday on the second day of Chargers minicamp. “Obviously it didn’t go the way we wanted it to, like I said at the end of the year, but you gotta move on.”

Despite the crushing wild-card loss that prolonged the Chargers’ seven-year playoff win drought, Herbert maintained that his offseason has been business as usual.

Meeting with local reporters for the first time in five months, Herbert recited the typical offseason lines with a stone-faced expression. His new teammates are picking up the offense quickly. He wants to continue mastering the scheme in his second season under the coaching staff.

Herbert instead makes stronger statements on the practice field and in the weight room, where his determined nature has earned him a spot in coach Jim Harbaugh’s “Elite Nine” club of the team’s hardest workers.

“I know it motivates me every day to get up out of bed, like I gotta rise up to his level,” Harbaugh said. “He’s doing anything and everything he can possibly do. Now it’s up to the rest of us.”

During the offseason, the Chargers focused on adding weapons around Herbert to elevate a sputtering offense that ranked 20th in the NFL in yards per game.

Even without pads, the athleticism and instincts of running back Najee Harris and rookie Omarion Hampton have impressed Herbert. Rookie tight end Oronde Gadsden is showing his receiving capabilities as Syracuse’s all-time leader for receptions and receiving yards by a tight end when he had the most catches of any player during team drills Wednesday. Gadsden, a converted wide receiver, will team with free-agent acquisition Tyler Conklin, who has had at least 50 catches in each of the last four seasons, to boost the tight end position.

The biggest offseason move was the addition of a familiar name. Mike Williams, after one year away from the franchise that drafted him in 2017, returned on a one-year contract to reunite with Herbert. The 6-foot-4 receiver, who has been working primarily with trainers during minicamp practices, “changes the way you play football when he’s on your team,” Herbert said.

“50-50 balls are not quite 50-50 as we’ve seen with Mike,” the quarterback added.

The receivers could use the boost. Ladd McConkey was the group’s only consistent force last year. The former second-round pick dominated against Houston with an NFL rookie playoff-record 197 yards receiving, nine catches and one touchdown. The rest of his teammates combined for five receptions and 45 yards. Still without a playoff win in two appearances entering his sixth NFL season, Herbert completed a career-low 43.7% of his passes and was sacked four times.

Getting Williams and rookie receivers Tre’ Harris and KeAndre Lambert-Smith, who were selected in the second and fifth rounds, respectively, on the field could open up a more aggressive deep passing game, offensive coordinator Greg Roman said.

The stacked room also could put more pressure on Quentin Johnston to live up to the billing of a former first-round pick. The receiver entering his third year is “owning the system now,” said Roman, who predicted another major step for Johnston this season.

The former Texas Christian star shook off a disappointing rookie season with 711 yards receiving and eight touchdowns on 55 catches last year. He torched the Las Vegas Raiders in a playoff seed-clinching Week 18 win for 13 receptions and 186 yards receiving. Even Johnston estimated that it was the best game he’d ever had at any level of football.

Yet he followed with a major disappointment in the biggest moment with no catches on five targets in the wild-card loss. Johnston went without a catch in two games last season, both coming in marquee matchups. He was also shut out against the Baltimore Ravens in a “Monday Night Football” showcase in which he also dropped a crucial third-down pass. To pile on, fellow receiver Zay Flowers, who the Ravens picked one spot behind Johnston in the 2022 draft, led Baltimore with 62 yards receiving on five catches.

Learning a second offense in as many years in the NFL, Johnston had to play “a game of catchup last season,” Roman said. But with consistent practices in organized team activities and minicamp, the coach said Johnston is “starting to come out of the other end of the tunnel.”

“Justin, he’s throwing to him a lot,” Roman said, “and Q’s answering the call.”

Tony Jefferson

Jim Harbaugh praises Tony Jefferson's leadership as Chargers bolster defense

EL SEGUNDO — As the Los Angeles Chargers prepare for their crucial Week 3 matchup against the Denver Broncos, the team has made key roster moves to reinforce its defense. The Chargers signed safety Tony Jefferson to the active roster on Thursday, filling the spot left by outside linebacker Khalil Mack, who was placed on the IR list. Additionally, the Bolts have added outside linebackers Clelin Ferrell and Rashad Weaver to the practice squad, further strengthening their defensive depth.

Tony Jefferson's Impactful Return

Jefferson, who came out of retirement to rejoin the Chargers in 2024, has quickly become a critical piece of the team's defensive and special teams units. Over the last two seasons, Jefferson has been a steady presence on the field, playing in nine games and starting six, including a pivotal role in the team's victory over the Las Vegas Raiders last Monday.

After initially being released during final roster cuts, Jefferson re-signed with the team on a one-year contract in March 2025 and was promoted to the active roster on Thursday. His timely return has already paid dividends, as Jefferson was elevated to the active roster for the Chargers' Week 2 game against the Raiders. In that game, he posted an impressive stat line: five tackles, two pass deflections, and an interception.

Jefferson, now 33, has had a storied 11-year career across five NFL teams—Arizona, Baltimore, San Francisco, the New York Giants, and the Chargers. Over the course of his career, he has started 72 of 122 regular-season games, compiling 500 tackles (370 solo), 9.5 sacks, 35 tackles for loss, five interceptions, 26 passes defended, eight forced fumbles, and four fumble recoveries.

A Leader and Versatile Contributor

What stands out most about Jefferson, however, is not just his statistics but his leadership and versatility. Chargers head coach Jim Harbaugh spoke highly of the veteran safety's all-around contributions to the team.

"What do I like about Tony? There's a long list," Harbaugh said. "I think it starts with he's always in the right place. And I also love that we're doing special teams, we're doing punt, return, and he's the scout team personal protector. He just does whatever is needed."

Harbaugh praised Jefferson for his ability to make an impact in all facets of the game, especially on special teams. The Chargers have utilized Jefferson's skills in multiple roles, knowing that his experience and knowledge are invaluable both on defense and in helping other areas of the team.

"He's a great leader," Harbaugh said. "Long list of things I like about Tony Jefferson, real football player."

Veteran Presence in the Locker Room

One of Jefferson's greatest strengths is his ability to guide younger players and lead by example. Having returned to the NFL after stepping away, he understands the significance of competing for playing time with a younger, hungry group. Despite his extensive experience, Jefferson relishes the competition for snaps and cherishes the opportunity to battle alongside the younger players. His leadership both on and off the field provides the Chargers with a solid foundation as they navigate their way through the season.

At 33, Jefferson has shown that he is not just a player who fills a roster spot but a true football player with a mentality and commitment that any team would value. His experience, leadership, and willingness to contribute wherever needed make him a valuable and irreplaceable asset for the Chargers.

As the Chargers head into their Week 3 contest against the Broncos, the bolstered defensive lineup will look to build on Jefferson's strong performance and leadership. With the loss of Khalil Mack to injury, the team will rely on both the veteran presence of players like Jefferson and the depth added through signings like Ferrell and Weaver. Together, these additions give the Chargers a well-rounded defensive unit that is ready to step up and face the challenges ahead.

Jefferson's continued presence will be crucial in the coming weeks as the Chargers aim to remain competitive in a tough AFC West division. With his blend of leadership, versatility, and experience, the 33-year-old safety is proving that he still has a lot to offer, and his impact on the team will only continue to grow.

Quentin Johnston

He Was the NFL's Laughingstock. Now He's Its Breakout Star.

By Andrew Beaton
The Wall Street Journal
October 2, 2025

Over his first two years in the NFL, Los Angeles Chargers wide receiver Quentin Johnston had developed a reputation—and it wasn't a good one.

He was known for all the big plays he somehow failed to make.

In key moments, Johnston's hands seemed like they transformed into cinder blocks. There were instances when he was wide open, with the game on the line, and perfect throws from quarterback Justin Herbert would slip through his fingers.

For someone who entered the league with lofty expectations as a first-round pick, Johnston had instead become a player who was widely mocked.

But nobody is laughing at him now. Four weeks into the new NFL season, he's the breakout sensation that the rest of the league is trying to figure out how to stop.

After an offseason focused on ironing out the kinks in his game, Johnston is finally showing why he was such a highly regarded prospect coming out of college. Week after week, Johnston has been making highlight-reel plays that few of his peers can match. The 24-year-old ranks third in the NFL in both receiving yards and touchdowns for a Chargers team that's 3-1 and sitting in first place in the AFC West.

Altogether, he's shedding his reputation as a bust and putting his preternatural talent on full display. At 6-foot-2, Johnston towers over most defensive backs. Yet he also cuts with the quick twitch movement of a small speedster—an uncommon combination that is now turning him into a nightmare to defend.

"That's not normal," says David Robinson, a private wide receivers coach who has worked with Johnston since his college days. "It's very rare to see a big receiver like that move at his size."

After initially committing to Texas, Johnston ultimately decided to go to TCU, where he was one of the highest-rated recruits in the program's history. Even as a true freshman, he led the Horned Frogs in receiving yards, but it wasn't until his junior year that he attracted national praise.

During that 2022 season, a resurgent TCU reached the national championship game while Johnston tallied 1,069 yards. Tens of millions saw his talent in full force when he posted 163 yards and a score in a semifinal upset over Michigan.

To be sure, Johnston was still considered somewhat raw as an NFL prospect. His production could be inconsistent, with dominant displays one week and quiet showings the next.

His hand placement could also be awkward, which gave him trouble hauling in some throws.

The Chargers ultimately selected him with the 21st pick in the draft, hoping he'd turn into the top weapon in Herbert's arsenal. But even as a rookie, Johnston became a target of derision for their fans. He struggled to produce early, and when he did garner attention it was usually for the wrong reasons.

In one instance, in the final minute of a game trailing down by three to the Green Bay Packers, Johnston broke free down the field and Herbert delivered a ball that looked like it would go for a 70-yard score. Instead, the Chargers lost after the ball bounced off Johnston's hands in what he chalked up to a "lack of concentration."

Another high-profile debacle followed the next season. This time, in a nationally televised matchup with the Baltimore Ravens, Johnston dropped a fourth-quarter pass that would've converted a critical third down. It proved to be the pivotal play in another Chargers defeat as Johnston finished the game without a single catch.

At the same time, his natural talent hadn't completely vanished. Every now and then, there were flashes of his tantalizing potential. Later that same season, Johnston reeled in a high-difficulty laser from Herbert to convert a 3rd-and-16 against the Kansas City Chiefs, hanging onto the ball despite absorbing a hit that was flagged for unnecessary roughness.

"It was mainly just focus," Robinson says. "He would make spectacular, hard, difficult catches, and then the regular routine catches that you expect him to make, he was letting them get away from him."

This offseason, Robinson and Johnston zeroed in on fixing that. During their training sessions, before doing any route running or footwork, they'd spend 30 minutes together catching the ball from every possible angle. The idea is that once it comes to gametime, passes can come from any direction and hauling them in becomes second nature because it's such a familiar process. In other drills, Robinson would have people tugging on Johnston's jersey or hitting him with a bag while he was running and preparing to make the catch, hoping it would distract him less when similar things happen during a game.

That work came before a season when the expectations surrounding Johnston were lower than ever. Ladd McConkey, a second-round pick in 2024, had emerged as the team's leading receiver. The Chargers also brought back veteran Keenan Allen, who had six 1,000-yard seasons with the franchise.

Yet Robinson had a hunch that his protégé was about to prove the doubters wrong. Other receivers he trains, such as the Chiefs' Rashee Rice, came up to say that Johnston looked like an entirely different player.

The Chargers' opponents were about to learn that the hard way.

In Los Angeles's season-opening win over the Chiefs, Johnston was on the receiving end of two touchdown passes. He now has four on the season, while his 84.3 yards per game are more than double his average from his first two years.

Even more critically, Johnston hasn't been charged with a single drop.

The performance has been a delicious reward for a Chargers team that stuck with Johnston and even heaped praise on him, even when he underwhelmed.

After that superb opening game, coach Jim Harbaugh had a message for everyone who had ridiculed his young receiver over the years: "In your face," he said.

Chargers' Quentin Johnston looks to use past struggles as fuel in 2025

By Kris Rhim
ESPN
September 8, 2025

Since Quentin Johnston entered the NFL in 2023 as the Los Angeles Chargers' first-round pick, he has struggled to meet the expectations of being a top pick.

Johnston's play has fluctuated between good and abysmal. His biggest flaw comes in drops, particularly in big moments. That first showed in his rookie season during the Week 11 matchup against the Green Bay Packers when he dropped a wide-open pass that would have put the Chargers in field goal range with 23 seconds left in the game. The Packers won, 23-20, and Los Angeles fell to 4-6.

It continued in his second season. In perhaps the Chargers' biggest game of the 2024 season, a Week 12 "Monday Night Football" matchup against the Baltimore Ravens, Johnston had one of the worst games of his career. He had five targets with no catches, but his most significant error came in the fourth quarter.

On third-and-6 with 10:56 minutes remaining and the Chargers down 23-16, Johnston ran wide open on a crossing route but dropped the ball. Los Angeles punted on fourth down and the Ravens scored on the next drive, effectively putting the game away.

Johnston's drops in big moments have led him to be one of the Chargers' most maligned players, whether from media pundits or fans on social media. It's all criticisms that Johnston sees, and he had struggled to deal with earlier in his career.

"I don't really talk about it to nobody. I feel like I just have to step up, deal with it on my own, get better each year," Johnston told ESPN. "So that's what I'm doing, that's what I'm continuing to do. I feel like my therapist is the field, so that's where I take everything."

The Chargers have continued to give Johnston opportunities. Coach Jim Harbaugh and general manager Joe Hortiz -- who didn't draft Johnston -- have praised his potential, and he entered this season as a starter. "Quentin, just every part of his game is elite," Harbaugh said this offseason.

In the 27-21 win over the Kansas City Chiefs on Friday night, Johnston proved Hortiz and Harbaugh right. He led the Chargers in yards (79) and touchdowns (2), showing the potential that made him the No. 21 pick two years ago. There's a long way to go for Johnston and the Chargers, but Friday's game was the kind of performance he needed.

"I'm just honestly at this point trying to prove myself right. I know a lot of people don't really look at me as ... " Johnston said, before pausing to collect his thoughts. He continued: "I still see myself as a good football player. Everybody's not going to hit their peak at the same time. ... I'm just staying down and working until my time comes."

The Chargers will travel to face the Las Vegas Raiders for Week 2 on Monday, a team Johnston has had success against. The last time the Chargers played the Raiders, Week 18 of this past season, Johnston had the best game of his career, catching 13 passes for 186 yards.

"I want to have many more of these," Johnston said then.

Johnston almost didn't make it to Week 1 against the Chiefs. In the Chargers' third preseason game against the Rams, he was concussed after a hit that left him unconscious for nearly a minute. But Johnston quickly returned to practice and was back on the field after clearing protocol in a matter of days.

Many players push through injuries at any given point in a season, but that's been a theme of Johnston's career so far. Last year in the Chargers' Week 14 game against the Chiefs, for instance, Kansas City's linebacker Nick Bolton leveled Johnston while he caught a 20-yard pass.

"Quentin Johnston, who has had drop problems, catches one of the toughest ones he's seen all year," broadcaster Mike Tirico said.

Johnston quickly bounced up and signaled a first down celebration but was in significant pain. He had sustained a left AC joint sprain on the play, which impacted how he slept and put him in a shoulder brace for the remainder of the season.

"My main thing is just to pop up and at least fake it and make it seem like I'm cool, and I deal with everything else after that," he said.

While the Chargers have preached faith in Johnston publicly, their offseason moves -- drafting wide receiver Tre' Harris in the second round and KeAndre Lambert-Smith in the fifth -- signal an organization hedging its bet if Johnston doesn't develop.

Johnston appeared on track in Week 1, and he hopes to stay that way.

"The past few years I have been having a lot of ups and downs, but I used that to kind of fuel me," Johnston said postgame. "I had a pretty good game today, so hopefully I can keep that going for the rest of the season."

Khalil Mack ‘couldn’t give up on that dream’ of winning with the Chargers

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Khalil Mack mulled retirement early in the offseason. It didn’t take long for him to decide to return to the Los Angeles Chargers.

He agreed on a contract extension in March, never becoming an unrestricted free agent.

“Got tremendous leadership here, very familiar with guys already here,” he said Wednesday at minicamp. “It was a no-brainer.”

Mack, who turned 34 in February, is in his 12th season in the league and fourth with the Chargers. Despite nine Pro Bowl selections and a Defensive Player of the Year honor, he has never won a playoff game in five appearances.

“You’re chasing that feeling of wanting to win,” Mack said. “I couldn’t give up on that dream and that goal for myself and the franchise.”

Defensive coordinator Jesse Minter said having Mack return “means everything.”

“Khalil is one of the best ever to do it,” he said.

Mack was at the Chargers facility to train in February and March, setting a tone for his teammates.

“The impact that he had on other people to train at his level is pretty incredible,” Minter said. “For young guys to have him around, it just makes everybody better.”

Around the same time Mack re-signed, the Chargers released defensive end Joey Bosa. He later signed with the Buffalo Bills.

“I texted him the other day saying it was weird not having him in the room breaking the silence with his little awkward jokes,” Mack said.

Second-year cornerback Tarheeb Still influenced Mack’s decision to stay.

Ladd McConkey

How the Chargers' 'uncoverable' Ladd McConkey is poised to reach greater heights in Year 2

By Daniel Popper
The Athletic
August 18, 2025

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — The Los Angeles Chargers passing offense is going to flow through Ladd McConkey in 2025.

That is not any sort of groundbreaking statement, but it is worth repeating now that the Chargers are less than three weeks away from their season opener in Brazil.

The receivers around McConkey have garnered quite a bit of attention through training camp and the preseason — from Tre' Harris to KeAndre Lambert-Smith to Keenan Allen. Monday's practice, the Chargers' 21st of camp, was a very loud reminder: This is McConkey's room. And after breaking franchise records as a rookie, the 2024 second-round pick is poised to reach even greater heights in his second season.

McConkey carved up the Chargers' reserve defense Monday for six catches, all of them from quarterback Justin Herbert. The Chargers are holding another mock game week this week in practice, as they did last week. So starters on both sides of the ball are facing scout teams composed of backups.

Coach Jim Harbaugh said earlier this camp that McConkey has become "uncoverable" in one-on-one situations. Monday featured example after example of that.

McConkey created separation at all three levels of the field in team drills. His first catch from Herbert went for an explosive gain on an over route in seven-on-seven. Two plays later, he beat defensive back Myles Purchase off the line of scrimmage on a slant route.

Tre' Harris had six catches for 85 yards, KeAndre Lambert-Smith had two explosive receptions and Luke Grimm had a punt return for a TD. In 11-on-11, McConkey ran a go route down the left sideline. Herbert identified the coverage and fit a throw in between an underneath cornerback and an over-the-top safety for another explosive gain. Later in that period, McConkey sprinted horizontally on a crossing route. Herbert threw his way again. McConkey waited until he was past a zone defender to flash his hands late and haul in the reception.

McConkey beat safety Jaylen Jones on an out route for his fifth catch of the practice, showing off his sharp and deceptive route running. On his sixth catch, McConkey displayed his down-the-field speed, separating from Purchase on a go route down the left sideline for a deep-ball reception.

The only down moment in an otherwise dominant day from McConkey was a drop in the end zone during red zone 11-on-11. He was wide open again on the play.

Last week, McConkey admitted that his "head's not spinning as much" compared to his rookie training camp.

"Last year, (I was) trying to figure it out, whether it's the plays, decisions on your routes, whatever it is," McConkey said. "Now I have a year under my belt. I know what they're expecting for me, a little bit more of what Justin expects. So I feel like just being on the same page and just being able to play fast and more free, I think that's probably the biggest change in my game."

McConkey missed two weeks of practice earlier in camp with an undisclosed injury. He returned to 11-on-11 drills on Aug. 12. McConkey said after that practice that his focus was on "building everything back up, getting in the swing of things, getting my conditioning back where it needs to be."

He had some flashes last week, including four catches from Herbert on Aug. 12 and a red zone touchdown catch on Aug. 13. McConkey then started Saturday's preseason loss to the Los Angeles Rams and had one catch from Herbert for 17 yards.

With Monday's electric practice, the injury feels firmly behind McConkey.

"Excited to keep building," he said.

Chargers training camp, Day 10: Jamaree Salyer working with first team after weight-loss ‘journey’

By Daniel Popper
The Athletic
July 28, 2025

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — On Jan. 11, the Los Angeles Chargers lost to the Houston Texans in the first round of the playoffs. The next morning, players returned to the facility to clean out their lockers, attend exit meetings, pack their bags and say their goodbyes before leaving for the offseason.

Offensive lineman Jamaree Salyer was heading east to spend time at home with his family in Atlanta. Before departing, though, Salyer had a conversation that might change the trajectory of his football life.

Chargers executive director of player performance Ben Herbert challenged Salyer to lose weight.

“It’s for your career. It’s for you,” Herbert said, as Salyer recalled. “This is what I would like for you, but it’s up to you. It’s your career. You control it. It’s your destiny.”

Those words rang in Salyer’s head as he made sweeping changes to his offseason routine, most notably with his diet. He cut out sweets, sugary drinks, late-night eating — “all the stuff that everybody loves,” as Salyer described it after a training camp practice last week at The Bolt.

From January to July, Salyer lost 35 pounds. He called it a “journey.” According to offensive coordinator Greg Roman, Salyer “made a commitment to being in the best shape he can possibly be.” The transformation is leading to improvement, and Salyer is now making a case to start in 2025.

Monday, Salyer was at left guard in team drills with the starting offensive line. Zion Johnson, who had played exclusively with the first team through the first nine practices of camp, played center with the second team. Bradley Bozeman was the first-team center.

“He’s a different guy when you subtract 35 pounds of bad weight,” Roman said of Salyer. “His ability to move laterally (and) change direction quickly is so much better. ... He’s got some really good playing experience. He’s got good instincts. He’s a big, physical guy that last year, quite frankly, was held back by just the shape he was in.”

Salyer started at right guard in the Chargers’ playoff loss. It was his fifth start of the season. He had been primarily a depth piece in 2024 while rotating in periodically in short-yardage situations. Starting right guard Trey Pipkins III was unable to play in Houston because of an injury. Salyer was the next man up.

What started as an immense opportunity turned into a tough, grueling learning experience for the 2022 sixth-round pick.

The Chargers offensive line played its worst game of the season. All five starters allowed at least three pressures. Salyer allowed three, including a sack. At times, he looked overmatched by the Houston front, particularly by veteran defensive lineman Denico Autry. As Roman said, “There were a couple plays he’d like to have back.”

Salyer, who is entering the final year of his rookie deal, used that film as motivation.

“Everybody plays bad games,” said Salyer, who has started 37 games for the Chargers at guard and tackle. “I looked at it, I learned from it, and I just grew. Obviously, I would love for my best games to be in the biggest moments like that, but sometimes that’s life. So, taking a situation like that and not letting the Houston game turn into Year 4, and then ‘what the hell happened?’ and then the end of your career. That’s really my biggest thing.”

After a couple of weeks of family time, Salyer got to work. Coming from one of the best college programs in football at Georgia, Salyer has never shied away from training. The key was changing his diet.

Salyer would train in the mornings in the Atlanta heat. “You go outside, you start sweating — for big guys,” he quipped. He would eat his first meal at noon after his training session. All meals would come between noon and 6 p.m. After that, he would not eat another meal until the following day at noon. At night, Salyer limited his intake to hydration and some occasional fruit.

From Jan. 12 to April 22, when the Chargers reported for Phase 1 of the offseason program, Salyer lost 25 pounds. He lost an additional 10 pounds after returning to the facility and resuming training with Herbert. Salyer is now playing at 332 pounds.

“A new Jamaree,” left tackle Rashawn Slater said.

At the facility, the Chargers use an InBody scanner to measure body fat percentage. Salyer bought one to use in Atlanta and track his progress during the offseason.

Salyer has added lean muscle mass and lost body fat. His conditioning has improved dramatically. Salyer believes it will help him “play better later in games.”

“I know I can play, obviously. I can play football,” Salyer said. “I never worried about that. It’s just a matter of being able to play at a high level for four quarters.”

Salyer said he is already seeing results in practice. Instead of focusing simply on making it through the exhausting days of training camp, Salyer can home in on the finer details of offensive line play. His conditioning was a hindrance. Now it is an enhancement.

“I got this play, this rep. I know I can give it my best,” Salyer said. “What is my assignment? What do I need to be? Where do my hands need to be, my feet? It allows me to break the game down instead of being like, ‘Oh, f—, I’m tired. How do I keep pushing?’”

Salyer is just one example of what can be characterized as the Herb Effect. Herbert has now been with the Chargers for a full offseason, and they are starting to see an impact. Salyer said he has learned the most from Herbert’s approach “mentally and psychologically.”

“Some things just are, and some things just aren’t,” Salyer explained. “Life is that simple sometimes. ... You’re good or you’re not. It was good or it was bad. That’s kind of how coach Herb is.”

The Chargers have a lot of depth on the interior of their offensive line. Three spots on the line are set. Slater will be at left tackle. Joe Alt will be at right tackle. Mekhi Becton will be at right guard. The other two spots are open. Salyer has planted himself in the mix for the starting left guard job.

“The credit all goes to him,” Roman said.

Salyer was challenged, and he accepted.

“I’m proud of where I’m at,” he said. “Now it’s just maintaining it.”

Tuli Tuipulotu

Tuli Tuipulotu has arrived for the Chargers, right when they needed him most

By Daniel Popper
The Athletic
October 3, 2025

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — The Tuli Tuipulotu breakout is happening.

Through four games this season, the Los Angeles Chargers edge rusher is performing like one of the best players in the league at his position. Tuipulotu had a career-high four sacks in Sunday's loss at the New York Giants, but the jump he is making in his third NFL season stretches beyond the simple box-score stats.

His flashes of dominance have turned into sustained dominance, particularly as a pass rusher.

After releasing Joey Bosa this past offseason, the Chargers hoped Tuipulotu would move into a more prominent role and emerge as a true star. Tuipulotu is delivering on that hope — and doing so while top Chargers edge rusher Khalil Mack has been sidelined for the last two games with an elbow injury.

"He's a complete player," Mack said this week of Tuipulotu. "He does everything at a high level."

Tuipulotu enters Sunday's game against the Washington Commanders tied for third among edge rushers with 23 pressures this season, according to Pro Football Focus. Only the Green Bay Packers' Micah Parsons and the Houston Texans' Will Anderson have more.

Tuipulotu's pass-rushing efficiency has also skyrocketed. As a rookie in 2023, Tuipulotu produced pressure on 11.9 percent of his pass-rushing snaps, according to TruMedia. That efficiency dropped slightly in 2024 to 10.8 percent. Through four games this season, Tuipulotu is producing pressure on 19.3 percent of his pass-rushing snaps. That ranks eighth among 105 players with at least 75 pass-rush snaps this season, according to TruMedia.

"My mindset, to be honest, is just to play hard," Tuipulotu said this week.

That shows up in how relentless Tuipulotu is in all phases of the game. His best traits are his power and his motor, and he uses them to his advantage. On his first sack Sunday, Tuipulotu drove Giants right tackle Jermaine Eluemunor five yards into the backfield with a ferocious bull rush. Quarterback Jaxson Dart felt the pressure, stepped up and escaped left. Tuipulotu shed Eluemunor and tracked Dart from behind before smothering him with a leaping tackle.

"Sprinting to the ball," Tuipulotu said.

Tuipulotu has been seeing more attention with Mack sidelined. Mack injured his elbow in the first quarter of the Chargers' Week 2 win over the Las Vegas Raiders.

The bona fide elite edge rushers can still perform in these situations — when teams are building their protection plans around neutralizing a single opposing pass rusher. On Tuipulotu's fourth sack Sunday, the Giants slid their protection to his side. Two players, right guard Greg Van Roten and Eluemunor, were blocking Tuipulotu. He powered through both offensive linemen and sacked quarterback Russell Wilson, who had briefly replaced Dart. Tuipulotu also jarred the ball loose for a fumble.

"Power sets the tone," Tuipulotu said.

It looked like a play Mack would make. And in so many ways, Mack has been the perfect mentor for Tuipulotu. They are both immensely powerful players. Mack shapes his pass rush toolbox around his bull rush, his sharpest tool. Tuipulotu has followed the same blueprint.

Tuipulotu is now seeing how impactful his power can be — how it can turn him into a dominant force down to down.

Mack said seeing that vision materialize on the field is the "special sauce" in becoming an elite edge rusher.

"It's a pocket, it's a groove," Mack said. "He found it, and he's going to stay in it now."

Tuipulotu has always been a physical and disruptive run defender. That has continued this season. On Sunday, he stuffed a rush attempt from Dart on a third-and-goal from the 1-yard line, a key play in the Chargers' fourth-quarter goal-line stand.

Now he is that same consistently disruptive player as a pass rusher. The Chargers are moving him all over the defensive front, and Tuipulotu has been creating pressure as an interior rusher, as well.

"He can do kind of whatever he wants to do out there," Mack said. "Taking whatever they're giving you at the moment, he's great at that, whether it's the power, whether it's the speed rushes, whether it's the counters inside."

Bosa was another mentor for Tuipulotu over his first two seasons. Bosa is one of the best hand-usage technicians in the game. Tuipulotu would ask Bosa for tips to refine his technique.

"I just did it so much that it kind of just happens now," Bosa would reply.

The message: Repetitions cultivate the necessary muscle memory.

With enough banked experience now, Tuipulotu is starting to feel that muscle memory within his own game. He is not thinking about when to swipe to dislodge the hand placement of his opponent. He is just doing it.

"The more I do it," Tuipulotu said, "the more it will work."

Tuipulotu has also refined his preparation. When he first got into the league as a second-round pick in 2023, Tuipulotu heard veterans tell him to "practice like a pro." Initially, Tuipulotu said, he took that "the wrong way."

"That means don't go too hard," Tuipulotu said. "But then now I'm like, I can go hard, I just got to be smart about it."

"You practice how you play," he added. "I'm a true believer in that."

Tuipulotu's practice habits have made an impression on his coaches.

"Guys that do that stuff on a consistent basis — the way they prepare, the way they practice, the way they play — that's the focal point for us," defensive coordinator Jesse Minter said. "So just really trying to get everybody on the page of Tuli, who does this all the time."

Mack has seen Tuipulotu evolve his eating habits, his recovery routine and how he takes care of his body.

"I just believe now that he prepares how he sees himself as a player, which is at an elite level," Minter said. "Tuli is one of our top guys running to the ball every day, one of our top guys in preparation and communication. When you become like that, when you prepare like that, oftentimes it leads to performance like that."

Mack has now been on injured reserve for two games. He must miss two more before he is eligible to return.

When that happens, the Chargers will have a frightening edge-rushing duo.

"It's no secret," Mack said. "It's just hard work, and then when the opportunity comes, going out and displaying what you've been working so hard to do. ... He puts it on film. That's what you want to see."

Tuipulotu has arrived. Just as the Chargers envisioned this offseason.
