CASE STUDY: VICTIMS OF CRIME ACT (VOCA)

The federal Crime Victims Fund was established in 1984 under the Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) to provide funding for state victim compensation and assistance programs. Deposits to the CVF come from federal criminal fines, forfeited appearance bonds, and financial penalties and special assessments collected by the U.S. Attorneys' Offices, federal courts, and Federal Bureau of Prisons.

How much federal money is available every year in the CVF is determined by a complex three-year average of court fees, fines and penalties that have accumulated — a number that has plummeted by billions during the past seven years.

The fluctuating balance of the CVF affects the grant amounts that are made available for states and territories.

KEY STRATEGIES FOR SECURING GOVERNMENT FUNDING

WRITE

- Align funding priorities with your mission
- Write measurable objectives and outcomes.

RELATIONSHIPS

- Importance of networking
- Attend government-hosted information sessions and workshops

COMPLIANCE

- Review grant requirements, including financial reporting and auditing requirements
- Importance of maintaining transparency and proper documentation

COLLABORATION

Can you team up with another organization on funding opportunities?

DIVERSIFY

Government funding should not be primary source of funding for your nonprofit!
