ALAMEDA, Calif. – The Oakland Raiders' 2018 preseason schedule will feature home games against the Detroit Lions and Green Bay Packers, with road contests at the Los Angeles Rams and Seattle Seahawks, the National Football League announced Wednesday.

Preseason Week	Opponent	Time

The Raiders will open the preseason with the Detroit Lions at home, hosting the Lions for the first time since 2014. For their second contest, the Silver and Black will travel to Los Angeles to face the Rams, marking the first meeting between the two clubs in Los Angeles since the Rams returned in 2016.

The Silver and Black will then host the Packers for their third preseason game, the third time since 2014 that the Packers and Raiders will play in the preseason. Oakland will finish up its preseason slate against the Seattle Seahawks for the 13th straight season. Nine of those 13 games to close the preseason have come in Seattle, but this will be the first time since 2015 that the Raiders have finished up the preseason at the Seahawks.
