GAME PREVIEW

The Oakland Raiders (12-4) will begin their postseason run in the Wild Card Playoff this weekend against the Houston Texans (9-7) on Saturday, Jan. 7, 2017 at 1:35 p.m. PT at NRG Stadium. Saturday's game will mark the 44th all-time postseason game for the Silver and Black, who carry a 25-18 all-time mark (21 trips to the playoffs) into the game. The two teams will meet for the second time this season, as the Raiders defeated the Texans, 27-20, on Nov. 21 in Mexico City.

The Raiders closed out the 2016 regular season with their first 12-win season since 2000. Head Coach Jack Del Rio directed a team that finished second in the AFC West and had seven players selected to the Pro Bowl. The team tied for the NFL lead with a +16 turnover differential and finished 11th in the NFL with a +31 point differential.

On offense, the unit finished sixth in the NFL in yards per game (373.3), sixth in rushing yards per game (120.1) and seventh in points per game (26.0). The team committed just 14 turnovers on the year, good for fourth fewest in the NFL. The offensive line was the best in the league at protecting the quarterback in 2016, allowing just 18 sacks on the year. QB Derek Carr, WR Amari Cooper, C Rodney Hudson, G/T Kelechi Osemele and T Donald Penn were all named to the Pro Bowl.

The defense strengthened as the season progressed, as the unit ranked 11th in the NFL in total yards allowed per game from Week 7 to the end of the year. The team also ranked second in the NFL in takeaways, forcing 30 turnovers on the year. Defensive Player of the Year candidate DE Khalil Mack earned his second consecutive Pro Bowl selection and newcomer S Reggie Nelson also received a Pro Bowl nod.

P Marquette King and K Sebastian Janikowski turned in solid campaigns on special teams, with King placing 34 punts inside opponents' 20-yard line and Janikowski leading the team with 124 points.

NFL WILD CARD

RAIDERS IN THE POSTSEASON

On Saturday, the Raiders will play in their first postseason game since Jan. 26, 2003, when they played the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in Super Bowl XXXVII. The Raiders bring a 25-18 all-time postseason record into the contest, including three Super Bowl titles (Super Bowls XI, XV and XVIII). Against AFC playoff teams, the Raiders are 1-2 vs. New England, 1-2 vs. Kansas City, 3-3 vs. Pittsburgh and 3-1 vs. Miami in postseason play. The Texans are the only AFC playoff team that the Raiders have not faced in the postseason.

TEXANS SNAPSHOT

Overview: Head Coach Bill O'Brien finished his third regular season with the Houston Texans in 2016, leading the team to their third consecutive 9-7 season and earning back-to-back AFC South titles. The Texans' division title assured them a home game against the Raiders. Both teams enter the Wild Card Playoff following a Week 17 loss to their respective opponents.

Offense: QB Brock Osweiler joined Houston as a free agent during last offseason and took on the starting role to begin the 2016 regular season. In 15 games played and 14 starts, Osweiler threw for 2,957 yards and tossed 15 touchdowns to 16 interceptions. The Texans recently turned to third-year QB Tom Savage, who has not thrown an interception in his three games played and helped clinch the team's AFC South division title in his first start of the year, a Week 16 victory over the Bengals. WR DeAndre Hopkins led the team in 2016 with 78 receptions for 954 yards and tied for the team lead in touchdown receptions (four). Their lead back, RB Lamar Miller, paced the rushing attack and earned his second career 1,000-yard season on the ground while adding five scores.

Defense: Even with the absence of the three-time NFL Defensive Player of the Year DE J.J. Watt, the unit finished as the number one ranked defense in the NFL, allowing just 301.3 yards per game. In just 13 games played, S Quintin Demps set a new career high and led the team with six takeaways in 2016. Pressuring passers are LB Whitney Mercilus and DE Jadeveon Clowney, who finished first and second on the team with 7.5 and six sacks, respectively. Their team leader in tackles during the regular season was LB Benardrick McKinney, whose 129 total stops (70 solo) were good for 11th most in the NFL.

Captains: #4 Derek Carr, #27 Reggie Nelson, #41 Brynden Trawick, #52 Khalil Mack, #61 Rodney Hudson, #72 Donald Penn

Raiders 27, Texans 20
- The Raiders won 27-20 in Mexico City to bring their record to 8-2, their first such start since 2001 when they advanced to the AFC Divisional Round of the playoffs and the Silver and Black's first regular season victory during international play.
- The Silver and Black recorded their first four-game winning streak since the 2002 season.
- The win marked the third win in the last four games against Houston, and brought the all-time series record to 4-6.

Game Themes
- The Raiders, who gave up just three points in the opening quarter against the Texans, have allowed a league-low 19 points in the first quarter play this season. Oakland has allowed just six points in the last four games.
- The Raiders offensive line registered a sack-free day for the fourth time. Oakland's pass protectors led the NFL in sacks allowed (11).
- The running backs led the way for the Raiders' receiving game, hauling in 11 receptions for 199 yards on the evening.

WR Amari Cooper
- With the game tied at 20, WR Amari Cooper took a first-down pass 35 yards to the end zone with 4:51 remaining in the game. The touchdown gave the Raiders their fourth fourth-quarter comeback of the year.
- Cooper finished with four receptions for 57 yards and a touchdown.

DE Khalil Mack
- For the first time in his career, DE Khalil Mack recorded a sack in five consecutive weeks when he took down Brock Osweiler on the final play of the first half for a 9-yard loss.

FB/RB Jamize Olawale
- With 10:57 left in the game, FB/RB Jamize Olawale set a new career high, grabbing a 75-yard touchdown reception from QB Derek Carr to even the score at 20 apiece. Olawale's touchdown reception was the longest by a Raiders running back since 1995.

RB Jalen Richard
- On the opening play of the second quarter, RB Jalen Richard hauled in a QB Derek Carr pass for a 17-yard touchdown.
- Richard totaled three catches for 50 yards with one touchdown and a long of 29 yards.

HEAD COACHING MATCHUP

JACK DEL RIO

Jack Del Rio was named the 19th head coach in the 56-year history of the Oakland Raiders franchise on Jan. 15, 2015. The appointment marked a homecoming for Del Rio, who was raised in nearby Hayward, Calif.

In his first season with the Raiders, Del Rio oversaw significant improvements as the Raiders more than doubled the previous year's win total. Oakland moved up 15 spots in the NFL rankings in turnover ratio, finishing 17th in the league (+1) after ranking 32nd in 2014 (-15). The team improved in five major statistical categories on offense alone, making gains in total offense, rushing, passing, points per game and third-down efficiency. On defense, the Raiders improved in rushing defense, points per game allowed and third-down defense. Six Raiders were selected for the Pro Bowl, matching a franchise record set in 1994.

As defensive coordinator with the Denver Broncos from 2012-14, Del Rio was part of three-straight AFC West titles and helped lead Denver to an AFC Championship and appearance in Super Bowl XLVIII following the 2013 campaign. It marked his second stint under Head Coach John Fox, as the two also spent the 2002 season together in Carolina. In all, he has coached 24 players to a total of 33 Pro Bowl selections.

Prior to joining the Broncos in 2012, Del Rio spent nine seasons at the helm in Jacksonville. During his head coaching tenure (2003 to 2011) with the Jaguars, the club ranked sixth in the NFL in yards per game allowed (317.3) and eighth in points per game allowed (20.3).

Under Del Rio, the Jaguars made two playoff appearances in 2005 and 2007, highlighted by the club's first postseason win in eight seasons with a 31-29 road victory against the Pittsburgh Steelers in a 2007 AFC Wild Card Game.

During his lone season as a defensive coordinator with Carolina in 2002, he inherited the NFL's worst defense statistically (371.4 yards per game allowed) and turned it into the league's second-ranked unit (290.4 yards per game allowed).

As linebackers coach for the Baltimore Ravens from 1999-2001, Del Rio tutored a talented group that included Peter Boulware, Ray Lewis and Jamie Sharper. Baltimore's 2000 team set the NFL 16-game record by allowing only 165 points while recording four shutouts and forcing a league-best 49 turnovers.

A veteran of 11 seasons as an NFL linebacker, he was selected in the third round (68th overall) of the 1985 NFL Draft by New Orleans and went on to make the NFL's All-Rookie Team and earn the Saints' Rookie of the Year award. For his career, he played 160 games in the regular season and totaled 1,078 tackles, 12 sacks and 13 interceptions.

Del Rio was a four-year starter at the University of Southern California, where he earned consensus All-American honors as a senior and was runner-up for the Lombardi Award, given to the nation's best lineman or linebacker. Named co-MVP of the 1985 Rose Bowl, Del Rio recorded 340 career defensive stops, including 58 tackles for a loss. A standout catcher on the USC baseball team, Del Rio was drafted by the Toronto Blue Jays in 1981. He was inducted into the USC Athletic Hall of Fame in May 2015.

Del Rio was a three-sport star in football, baseball and basketball at Hayward High School in Hayward, Calif. He earned a degree in political science from the University of Kansas while playing for the Chiefs.

Born on April 4, 1963, in Castro Valley, Calif., Del Rio and his wife, Linda, have three daughters, Lauren, Hope and Aubrey, and a son, Luke, who is a quarterback at the University of Florida.

BILL O'BRIEN

In his first two seasons as head coach (2014-15), Bill O'Brien led the Houston Texans to consecutive 9-7 records and an AFC South Division Championship in 2015, the team's first since 2012.

In 2015, Houston became the only NFL team since 1950 to make the playoffs with four different starting quarterbacks winning a game during the regular season.

O'Brien led the Texans to a 9-7 record in his first year as the franchise's head coach in 2014. Houston's seven-win improvement from 2013 led the NFL and made the Texans the sixth team since 1978 to post a winning season following a season in which it won two or less games. The Texans just missed the playoffs as the last team out in the AFC and O'Brien finished second in NFL AP Coach of the Year voting to Arizona Cardinals Head Coach Bruce Arians.

O'Brien was named the third head coach in Texans franchise history on Jan. 3, 2014. He brought 21 years of collegiate and NFL coaching experience to the Bayou City, along with a tireless work ethic, relentless tenacity, exceptional football acumen and a well-earned reputation for succeeding against all odds.

Prior to joining the Texans, O'Brien spent two years leading Penn State through one of the greatest periods of strife any major college program has endured, garnering national and conference coach-of-the-year awards in the process. In the five years prior to his tenure at Penn State, O'Brien helped lead the New England Patriots to a pair of Super Bowl berths, first as an offensive assistant in 2007 and then again in 2011 as offensive coordinator.

A member of the Patriots' coaching staff from 2007-11, O'Brien rose from offensive assistant to wide receivers coach in 2008 and then quarterbacks coach from 2009-10 prior to being named offensive coordinator/quarterbacks coach in 2011.

O'Brien began his coaching career at Brown in 1993 as a tight ends coach before serving as inside linebackers coach in 1994. He joined George O'Leary's Georgia Tech staff in 1995 as a graduate assistant, helping the Yellow Jackets to bowl appearances in each of his last six seasons. Working with offensive coordinator Ralph Friedgen, O'Brien coached running backs from 1998-2000 before being promoted to offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach in 2001 and assistant head coach in 2002.

O'Brien joined Friedgen's staff at Maryland in 2003 as running backs coach. Following two years in College Park, O'Brien served as offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach at Duke from 2005-06.

Born in Dorchester, Mass., O'Brien grew up in Andover and graduated from St. John's Preparatory School in Danvers. O'Brien went on to play linebacker and defensive end at Brown from 1990-92. O'Brien and his wife, Colleen, have two sons: Jack, 14, and Michael, 11.

---------- A RAIDERS WIN WOULD... ----------

...give the Raiders their first playoff win since 2002, the same year the Silver and Black made it to Super Bowl XXXVII.

...mark the Raiders' first AFC Wild Card victory since 2001 when Oakland defeated the New York Jets by a score of 38-24.

...improve the Raiders' all-time playoff record to 26-18, while earning a win in their first postseason matchup against the Texans. Oakland cut Houston's lead in the all-time regular season series to 6-4 after winning in Week 11 of the regular season in Mexico City.

REGULAR SEASON RECAP

Offensive Highlights

• (9/11) at NO – The Week 1 victory for the Raiders was the first opening-day win since 2011, when the club defeated the Broncos at Mile High Stadium by a score of 23-20.

• (9/11) at NO – After trailing by 11 in the final quarter of play, Raiders QB Derek Carr orchestrated the team's fourth touchdown drive of the day, an 11-play, 75-yard drive to bring the Raiders to within one point with just 52 seconds left on the clock. Choosing not to kick the extra point, Carr and WR Michael Crabtree converted a two-point conversion that would be the game-winning score.

• (9/11) at NO – The Raiders were the fourth team in NFL history to score game-winning points on a two-point conversion in the game's final minute (first in season opener).

• (9/11) at NO – The Raiders' 35 points scored were the most in a season-opener since 1989, when the Silver and Black beat the San Diego Chargers by a score of 40-14.

• (9/18) vs. Atl. – After recording just four 90-plus yard scoring drives in 2015, Carr orchestrated a seven-play, 91-yard scoring drive in the second quarter, the Raiders' second 90-plus yard scoring drive of the 2016 season.

• (9/25) at Ten. – The Raiders opened on offense with a five-play, 60-yard scoring drive that lasted 1:31. The touchdown for the Raiders' offense was the first on an opening drive of the 2016 season and first opening-drive score since Dec. 6, 2015.

• (9/25) at Ten. – The Raiders converted on their third 90-plus yard scoring drive of the season, an eight-play, 91-yard drive that lasted 3:44.

• (9/25) at Ten. – With another rushing score today, the Raiders' five rushing touchdowns on the season were tied for most in the NFL.

• (10/23) at Jac. – The Raiders recorded their third game of the season without a turnover.

• (10/30) at TB – The offense led the way for the Raiders, tallying 626 total yards and tying a franchise record set on Oct. 25, 1964 against Denver.

• (10/30) at TB – The Raiders overcame a 10-point deficit to win for the second time this season, the first coming in the season-opener against the Saints.

• (10/30) at TB – The Raiders finished with 500-yard passer and two 100-yard receivers. It marked the first time in franchise history a player has surpassed 500 yards through the air and first time the Raiders have had two 100-yard receiving performances in the same game since WR Amari Cooper and WR Seth Roberts did so on Nov. 29, 2015.

• (10/30) at TB – The Raiders were the only team in 2016 to have a 500-yard passer and two 100-yard receivers in the same game.

• (10/30) at TB – Carr became the third quarterback since 1991, age 25-or-under, to begin the season 5-0 on the road.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – The Raiders' 41:28 time of possession was the most the team had in a regulation game since 1993.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – The rookie running back tandem of Jalen Richard and DeAndré Washington led the NFL with six rushes of 25-plus yards.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – The Raiders managed 124 yards on the ground in the first half, the most by the franchise since Week 8 of 2013.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – The Raiders' 20 first-half points against the Broncos were the most the Broncos have allowed since playing the Bengals in Week 16 of the 2014 season.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – The team totaled 218 yards on the ground, the most by the Silver and Black this season and most by the franchise since Week 2 of 2013 when the team rushed for 226 against the Jaguars.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – RB Latavius Murray scored three times on the ground, tying a franchise record for rushing touchdowns in a game. His last score gave the Raiders a 30-13 lead, as Murray finished with 114 yards on 20 carries (5.7 yard avg.).

• (11/21) vs. Hou. – The Raiders offensive line registered a sack-free day for the fourth time this season. Oakland's pass protectors led the NFL in total sacks allowed (11).

• (11/27) vs. Car. – The Raiders opened the first half with 24 points scored, the most in the first half of play by the club this season.

• (11/27) vs. Car. – For the fifth time this season, Carr recorded a fourth-quarter comeback to lead his team to victory. Carr had nine such victories over the last two seasons, second most in the NFL, and tallied 10 total in his three-year career thus far.

• (12/4) vs. Buf. – Carr completed his sixth fourth-quarter comeback/game-winning drive this season, a franchise record. Carr had 10 such games since 2015 and 11 in his career.

• (12/4) vs. Buf. – Carr became the first quarterback in NFL history with five game-winning touchdown passes in the fourth quarter or overtime in a season.

• (12/8) at KC – Carr became the fourth player in NFL history with 1,000 completions through his first three seasons, joining Peyton Manning, Ryan Tannehill and Andrew Luck.

2016 TEAM HIGHLIGHTS

• (12/8) at KC – Cooper eclipsed 1,000 receiving yards for the second consecutive season, and was the first Raider in franchise history and seventh player in since 1970 to start his career with two such seasons.

• (12/8) at KC – Murray scored his 12th touchdown of the season on the ground, tying him for third most in a single season in franchise history with Marcus Allen (1990).

• (12/8) at KC – Cooper and Crabtree became the first Raider teammates with 70 catches in back-to-back seasons since Tim Brown, Jerry Rice and Charlie Garner did so in 2001-02.

• (12/18) at SD – With one touchdown against the Chargers, Oakland recorded its 40th on the season, the first time the Raiders have registered at least 40 touchdowns in two consecutive seasons since 1999-2002.

• (12/18) at SD – Carr earned his seventh fourth-quarter comeback win of the season, which led the AFC and was tied for second in the NFL.

• (1/1/17) at Den. – Crabtree and Cooper became the first Raiders' receiving duo to both record at least 1,000 yards in the same season since Jerry Rice and Tim Brown did so in 2001.

• (1/1/17) at Den. – The Raiders finished the regular season recording the fewest turnovers in franchise history with 14, besting their previous record of 19, set in 2002.

• (1/1/17) at Den. – The Raiders allowed two sacks in the game to total 18 on the season, the fewest by the team since sacks became an official statistic in 1982.

Defensive Highlights

• (9/25) at Ten. – The defense forced three turnovers (two interceptions and one fumble recovery) for the first time since Week 4 of the 2015 season.

• (10/9) vs. SD – The defense posted another opening-quarter shutout, their third of the season. They were tied for first with the Seahawks for the fewest points allowed in the first quarter of play this season (six) through Week 5.

• (10/9) vs. SD – The Raiders' defense forced three turnovers in the opening half of play for the first time since doing so against the Chargers in Week 16 of 2013.

• (10/23) at Jac. – Added another three takeaways in the victory. With zero turnovers by the offense, it marked the sixth game of the season in which the team has finished on the plus side of the turnover column. The Raiders were plus eight on the season.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – Posted their fifth first-quarter shutout of the season. They were tied for second in the NFL this season with 16 total points allowed during the first quarter of action.

2016 HIGHLIGHTS

Special Teams Highlights

• (9/11) at NO – With K Sebastian Janikowski's appearance in the Week 1 victory against the Saints, Janikowski became the Raiders All-Time leader in seasons of service for the franchise, officially making 2016 his 17th year wearing the Silver and Black (2002-2016), and surpassing Raiders legend Tim Brown's 16 seasons (1988-2003).

• (9/11) at NO – Janikowski's 47 and 31-yard field goals put him ahead of Phil Dawson and David Akers (386) for 9th on the NFL's all-time list of field goals made and has now made 401 field goals in the regular season and postseason combined.

• (10/16) vs. KC – On the final play before halftime, Janikowski recorded a 46-yard field goal to pass Nick Lowery's mark of 1,711 and move into 12th on the NFL's all-time scoring list.

• (10/23) at Jac. - After a 40-yard punt to the Jacksonville 13-yard line, Jacksonville returner Rashad Green fumbled the return and WR Andre Holmes was there to recover for the Raiders. The Raiders' 11th takeaway of the season resulted in a 32-yard field goal by Janikowski.

• (10/23) at Jac. – Janikowski's third field goal of the day, a 44-yarder, helped him pass David Akers (1,721) for 11th on the NFL's all-time scoring list.

• (10/23) at Jac. – Janikowski's 52-yard field goal in the fourth quarter marked his fourth of the day, the 21st time in his career recording at least four field goals made in a game. Finished with 15 points scored on the day (four field goals and three PATs).

• (10/23) at Jac. – With 3:42 left in regulation, a botched snap led to a P Marquette King 27-yard rush, the longest by a punter since 2010, to convert on fourth-and-24. The fourth-down conversion extended Raiders' drive which culminated in a 9-yard touchdown run by RB Latavius Murray.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – With his 24-yard field goal, Janikowski passed Norm Johnson (1,736) for ninth on the NFL's all-time scoring list.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – Janikowski ended with three field goals made, and three PATs, as he also recorded his 400th career field goal made on his second boot of the night, good for ninth most in NFL history.

• (11/27) vs. Car. – DL Denico Autry blocked the PAT following the Panthers second touchdown of the game. The blocked kick marks the Raiders' first of the season and the fourth of Autry's career.

• (12/18) at SD – Janikowski made four field goals on the day, the 22nd career game doing so, as his fourth field goal was also his 16th career game-winning boot.

• (1/1/17) at Den. – King pinned the Broncos inside the 20-yard line five times to mark a season high while also recording a season-best 56.5-yard average on high eight punts

• (1/1/17) at Den. – King had six punts travel more than 50 yards, three of them traveling over 60. His 38 punts of 50-yards-or-more in 2016 led the NFL.

• (10/16) vs. KC – On the final play before halftime, recorded a 46-yard field goal to pass Nick Lowery's mark of 1,711 and move in 12th on the NFL's all-time scoring list.

• (10/23) at Jac. – With his third field goal of the day, a 44-yarder, Janikowski passed David Akers (1,721) for 11th on the NFL's All-Time scoring list.

• (10/23) at Jac. – His 52-yard field goal in the fourth quarter marked his fourth of the day, the 21st time in his career recording at least four field goals made in a game. Finished with 15 points scored on the day (four FGs and three PATs).

• (11/6) vs. Den. – With his 24-yard field goal, passed Norm Johnson (1,736) for ninth on the NFL's all-time scoring list.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – Janikowski ended with three field goals made, and three PATs, as he also recorded his 400th career field goal made on his second make of the night, good for ninth most in NFL history.

• (12/18) at SD – Made four field goals on the day, the 22nd career game doing so, as his fourth field goal was also his 16th career game-winning boot.

P Marquette King

• (9/18) vs. Atl. – With 7:16 left in the first quarter, P Marquette King recorded the 281st punt of his career with a 64-yard kick, passing Leo Araguz for fifth all-time in franchise history. King finished the day with four punts for 211 yards (52.8 yard avg.) and placed three punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line.

• (9/25) at Ten. – Turned in another impressive day with seven punts totaling 326 yards (46.6 yard avg.), including a career-long 72-yard punt in the third quarter. King also pinned the Titans inside the 20-yard line three times.

• (10/2) at Bal. – Was crucial in helping the Raiders win the field position battle in the win. King pinned the Ravens deep in the first half with four of his five punts being inside the 20-yard line.

• (10/2) at Bal. – King leads the league with seven punts downed inside the 10-yard line. King finished with eight punts for 414 yards (51.8 avg.) with four punts inside the 20-yard line.

• (10/9) vs. SD – Became the fifth Raider in franchise history to notch 300 punts.

• (10/23) at Jac. – With 3:42 left in regulation, a botched snap led to a 27-yard rush by King, the longest by a punter since 2010, to convert on fourth-and-24. The fourth-down conversion extended Raiders' drive which culminated in a 9-yard touchdown run by RB Latavius Murray.

• (10/23) at Jac. – King kept the Jaguars deep all game, placing four of his five punts inside the 20-yard line without a touchback, totaling 273 yards (54.6 avg.) with a long of 60 yards.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – Added another 50-plus yard punt to his 2016 campaign. His 21 punts of 50-plus yards led the NFL.

• (11/6) vs. Den. – Midway through the third quarter, King placed his NFL-leading fifth punt inside the 10-yard line, leading to yet another Broncos' three-and-out.

• (11/21) vs. Hou. – With a punt of 51 yards in the first quarter and a 59-yarder in the second quarter, King extended his league-leading punts of 50-yards-or-more to 23.

• (11/27) vs. Car. – Entered Week 12 with an NFL-leading 23 punts of 50-yards-or-more. He added punts of 56 yard and 51 yard to his stat sheet in the third quarter.

• (12/4) vs. Buf. – Had another solid day on special teams, pinning the Bills inside the 10-yard line for his NFL-leading 14th time. Finished the day with five punts for 221 yards (44.2 avg.) and two downed inside the 20.

• (1/1/17) at Den. – Pinned the Broncos inside the 20-yard line five times to mark a season high while also recording a season-best 56.5-yard average on high eight punts

• (1/1/17) at Den. – Had six punts travel more than fifty yards, three of them traveling over 60. His 38 punts of 50-yards-or-more in 2016 led the NFL.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

The Raiders — who began play in the American Football League in 1960 — are in their 57th year of professional football competition, including the last 46 as a member of the National Football League.

In five memorable decades — the 1960s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the 2000s — the Raiders have been dominant in professional football since Al Davis first pledged in 1963 to build the finest organization in pro sports.

During these decades of dominance, the Raiders have won an AFL championship, four American Football Conference championships, and three world championships of professional football, participated in five Super Bowls, played in 14 championship games, won or tied for 17 division championships, had 21 playoff seasons, finished 34 seasons at .500 or better and played in 40 postseason games.

Pro football's dynamic organization placed first in the AFC West in 2000, 2001 and 2002 despite playing among the toughest schedules in the NFL in each of those seasons. With their appearance in Super Bowl XXXVII, the Raiders became the first NFL team to have had a season end in the Super Bowl in four different decades.

The Raiders are the only team to have been in Super Bowls in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s and the 2000s.

The Silver and Black are the only AFC team — and one of just two NFL teams (Minnesota) — to have a season that advanced to the conference championship game in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s, the '90s and the 2000s.

The Raiders are one of only three original AFL teams to have captured three world championships of professional football with Super Bowl victories. The Raiders are one of only four AFC teams to have won more than one Super Bowl since 1980.

In their five Super Bowl appearances, the Raiders have been led by four head coaches and started four quarterbacks.

With four postseason victories, the Raiders were the first of the AFC West teams to win multiple postseason contests in the new millennium by six years.

Since 1963, when Al Davis first took over the failing Oakland franchise that had struggled to win only nine of 42 league games in the initial three seasons of the new AFL and pledged to build the finest organization in sports, the Raiders have dominated professional football in terms of consistent victory. During those memorable 56 years in Oakland and Los Angeles, the Raiders have won 456 league games, tied 11 and lost 401.

"Commitment to Excellence" has never been an idle phrase to those who have proudly represented the Raiders organization during the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium as shown by their domination of pro football.

More than 20 of the great players who proudly wore the Silver and Black, as well as Owner-Leader Al Davis and legendary Head Coach John Madden, have been enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. The Raiders have also produced five Coaches of the Year.

In addition, 66 Pro Bowl players have made 188 Pro Bowl appearances representing the Silver and Black. In 1970, as the Raiders began their second decade of play, the merger between the AFL and NFL became a reality on the field. In the 1970 through 2012 period of interconference play, the Raiders have compiled a remarkable 92-77-1 record against present National Football Conference rivals.

Another innovation came to professional football in 1970 — "Monday Night Football." The Raiders' domination of this prime-time television series has seen the Silver and Black build an incredible 37-27-1 record in Monday night play. In the 43 years of this series, the Raiders are 15-8-0 in "Monday Night Football" games at home.

Through the decades — the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and now the 2000s — the Raiders have had the greatest players, the greatest coaches, the greatest plays and participated in the greatest games in the annals of professional sports.

Challengers to Raider domination of professional football will arise as they have in the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium. The Raider organization will continue to meet these challenges.

REGGIE McKENZIE

THE GENERAL MANAGER

Reggie McKenzie, a former draft pick by Raiders Owner Al Davis as a player, enters his 30th season in the National Football League and his fourth as General Manager of the Silver and Black. McKenzie was named to the position by Owner Mark Davis on Jan. 10, 2012, becoming the first General Manager of the franchise since Al Davis was hired as Head Coach and General Manager in 1963. Owner Mark Davis rewarded McKenzie with a four-year contract extension in July 2016.

Now in his his fifth season as General Manager, McKenzie has overseen significant changes in the organization's scouting, player personnel and football operations departments, while bringing refined football acumen to the Silver and Black. Adhering to a strategy of building a competitive roster through the draft while making strategic acquisitions via free agency and trades, McKenzie enters his fifth season at the helm having already earned plaudits from some of the most respected voices in football.

UNDRAFTED GEMS

Every preseason, hundreds of undrafted free agents vie for a spot on their team's 53-man roster. Reggie McKenzie has brought in numerous players that were not drafted, developing them into significant contributors for the Silver and Black.

- WR Andre Holmes, originally an undrafted free agent with the Minnesota Vikings in 2011, is just the third undrafted player to record at least 10 touchdown receptions for the Raiders.

- In 2015, P Marquette King set a franchise record by placing 40 punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. In 2014, King set Raider franchise records in punts (109) and punting yards (4,930).

- On RB Jalen Richard's first career carry, he rushed 75 yards for a touchdown. With his 75-yard touchdown, Richard became just the fourth player ever to record a 75-or-more-yard rushing touchdown in his NFL debut, joining Oran Pape (1930), Alan Ameche (1955) and Ottis Anderson (1979).

- WR Seth Roberts has totaled four game-winning touchdowns in his career (Week 2 of 2015 vs. Baltimore, Week 12 of 2015 at Tennessee and Week 1 of 2016 at New Orleans). The Raiders are 9-0 in games when he records a touchdown reception.

Below are some of the notable current Raiders who entered the NFL as undrafted free agents:

| Player | School | Year | Team |
|---|---|---|---|
| DL Denico Autry | Mississippi State | 2014 | Oakland |
| LS Jon Condo | Maryland | 2005 | Dallas |
| WR Andre Holmes | Hillsdale | 2011 | Minnesota |
| WR Johnny Holton | Cincinnati | 2016 | Oakland |
| G/T Austin Howard | Northern Iowa | 2010 | Philadelphia |
| P Marquette King | Fort Valley State | 2012 | Oakland |
| DT Darius Latham | Indiana | 2016 | Oakland |
| QB Matt McGloin | Penn State | 2013 | Oakland |
| FB/RB Jamize Olawale | North Texas | 2012 | Dallas |
| T Donald Penn | Utah State | 2006 | Minnesota |
| RB Jalen Richard | Southern Mississippi | 2016 | Oakland |
| WR Seth Roberts | West Alabama | 2014 | Oakland |

Since McKenzie took over as GM in 2012, the Raiders have had 10 undrafted free agents make the initial 53-man roster. Here is the yearly breakdown:

| Year | UDFAs on Inital 53 |
| 2012 | 2 |
| 2013 | 2 |
| 2014 | 0 |
| 2015 | 2 |

LATE-ROUND STEALS

"It definitely helps. When you play on Sunday and a guy goes down and that player that you have running on special teams now can play a position and you're not afraid to put him in, it gives you depth. They may not be the starter. These young guys, you really have to give them a couple of years to figure out what they really are. Some of them, you have to throw them in because of where you are as a team. Let's all hope that not only the guys at the top of the draft but the guys at the bottom, if we can get a couple of those guys to give us some production within the first three years, that would be great." - Raiders GM Regge McKenzie on getting production from lower-level draft picks

GM Reggie McKenzie's philosophy of building his roster through the draft includes standout players from the top of the board like DE Khalil Mack, QB Derek Carr and WR Amari Cooper. But a good drafting team will make all of their picks count, and McKenzie has done that of late. Here is a look at some players that McKenzie has drafted in the fourth round or later since 2013 and have provided solid production:

| Player | Year | Round |
|---|---|---|
| RB Latavius Murray^ | 2013 | 6 |
| TE Mychal Rivera^ | 2013 | 6 |
| DT Stacy McGee^ | 2013 | 6 |
| DT Justin Ellis^ | 2014 | 4 |
| CB TJ Carrie^ | 2014 | 7 |
| G/C Jon Feliciano^ | 2015 | 4 |
| LB Ben Heeney^ | 2015 | 5 |
| RB DeAndré Washington^ | 2016 | 5 |
| LB Cory James^ | 2016 | 6 |

THAT'S WHAT THEY SAID...

"My approach is old school. I'm a roll up the sleeves type of guy that wakes up early in the morning like iron workers, and comes prepared to get the job done." - Reggie McKenzie, introductory press conference, Jan. 10, 2012

"He has the courage of his convictions about players that Ron Wolf had, including blunt assessments of their talent. But Reggie also has the patience of Ted Thompson; he adheres to the draft-and-develop model of team-building. The latter means trusting scouts to constantly fill a pipeline of young talent, empowering coaches to play and develop young players, and identifying core players to secure contractually for the future." - Andrew Brandt, Monday Morning Quarterback (MMQB), March 12, 2014

"He is an exceptional evaluator of talent. Just has a great skill for it, especially for guys already in the NFL who might be flying under the radar. He was my right-hand man for all those years, a big reason why the Packers were good all those years." - Ron Wolf, April 24, 2012

"You can see this foundation starting to build there with the things Reggie [McKenzie] has done. He goes and hires Jack Del Rio, and I think that's a pretty good situation. They have a ton of cap space and an opportunity to build. All of a sudden you look at the AFC West, and they're kind of on the rise and you're very familiar with the AFC West so you know. It's very competitive." - Andy Reid, March 24, 2015

PRO BOWL RAIDERS

Oakland Raiders QB Derek Carr, WR Amari Cooper, C Rodney Hudson, DE Khalil Mack, S Reggie Nelson, G/T Kelechi Osemele and T Donald Penn have been named to the 2017 Pro Bowl, the NFL announced on Dec. 20.

WR Michael Crabtree, G Gabe Jackson, K Sebastian Janikowski, P Marquette King, RB Latavius Murray, FB/RB Jamize Olawale and RB Jalen Richard (return specialist) were named as alternates for the annual all-star game, scheduled to be played at Camping World Stadium in Orlando, Fla., on Jan. 29, 2017.

The seven Raiders selected to the Pro Bowl are the most since the team had eight players named in 1991.

Carr earns his second selection to the Pro Bowl, having been named in 2015. This year, he started 15 games, throwing for 3,933 yards on 356-of-559 passing (63.7 percent) with 28 touchdowns to only six interceptions for a passer rating of 96.7. Carr has led the Raiders to seven fourth-quarter comebacks and game-winning drives this year, and his five game-winning touchdown passes in the fourth quarter or overtime are a single-season NFL record. In Week 8 against Tampa Bay, Carr was named the AFC Offensive Player of the Week for his performance, posting a franchise-record 513 passing yards on 40-of-59 passing with four touchdowns and a 117.4 passer rating.

Cooper, earning a Pro Bowl selection for the second time in his two NFL seasons. He has four 100-yard receiving games on the year, including a career-high 173 yards in Week 8 against Tampa Bay.

Mack has been named to his second consecutive Pro Bowl after being selected to the squad last year as well. Mack was named the AFC Defensive Player of the Month for November to go along with two AFC Defensive Player of the Week Awards (Weeks 9 and 12). Mack's 11 sacks are tied for fifth in the NFL this year, and from Week 6-14, he tied an NFL single-season record by collecting a sack in eight consecutive games. In Week 12 vs. Carolina, Mack became the first player since 2009 to record a sack, interception returned for a touchdown, forced fumble and fumble recovery in the same game.

Nelson's selection is the second of his 10-year career and second consecutive honor.

Hudson, Osemele and Penn anchor an offensive line that has paved the way for one of the league's top offenses this year. For Hudson and Osemele, it is their first selection, while Penn earns his second selection after getting the nod in 2010.

RAIDERS EXCELLENCE

Each season, Raiders players vote on which teammate should receive the prestigious Commitment to Excellence Award, given to the Raider who best exemplifies hard work, leadership, and excellence on and off the field throughout the season. This year, QB Derek Carr was presented with the award following a standout season on the field, as well as impressive list of off-the-field work. It started as the Gorman Award in 1967 and was later renamed the Commitment to Excellence Award in 1983. Here is a look at the winners of the award since 1967:

'COOP' AND 'CRAB'

Carrying over their success from last year, WRs Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree have continued to give NFL secondaries trouble in their second year together. In the Silver and Black's Week 8 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the two combined for 281 receiving yards (Cooper, 173 and Crabtree, 108) on 20 receptions.

In the Raiders' Week 2 win against the Baltimore Ravens last season, Cooper (seven receptions, 109 yards and one touchdown) and Crabtree (nine receptions, 111 yards and one touchdown) became the first pair of Raiders receivers to each post 100 receiving yards in a game since Jan. 1, 2012. This also marked the first time since Dec. 31, 2005 that the Raiders had two receivers with 100 receiving yards and one touchdown each. Coupled with the duo's effort this season in Week 8, Cooper and Crabtree now have two games where they have both gone over 100 yards.

Together, "Coop" and "Crab" averaged 10.8 receptions and 137.7 yards per game in 2016. Here is a look at their combined production:

Notes

- Between the two of them, they have 15 100-yard receiving games since 2015 (Cooper has nine and Crabtree has six).
- Both players have caught at least four passes in 22 of the team's 32 games since 2015. The Raiders are 12-4 when they have combined for at least 10 receptions in a game.

GOING FOR 2

After the Raiders scored a touchdown to pull within one point of the Saints with 47 seconds left in Week 1, Head Coach Jack Del Rio decided to go for the two-point conversion and the win. On the ensuing try, QB Derek Carr connected with WR Michael Crabtree on the game-winning two-point conversion to give the Raiders the lead that they would hold onto.

The Raiders are the fourth team in NFL history to score the game-winning points on a two-point conversion in the final minute of the fourth quarter and the first to do so in a season opener. The other three teams to accomplish the feat are the 2002 Minnesota Vikings (December 15, 2002), 2005 Tampa Bay Buccaneers (November 13, 2005) and 2008 Denver Broncos (September 14, 2008).

SPREADING IT AROUND

This season, 13 different receivers have caught a pass from QB Derek Carr. Those who have caught passes for the Silver and Black this season include WR Amari Cooper, WR Michael Crabtree, WR Andre Holmes, WR Johnny Holton, RB Taiwan Jones, RB Latavius Murray, FB/RB Jamize Olawale, RB Jalen Richard, TE Mychal Rivera, WR Seth Roberts, TE Lee Smith, TE Clive Walford and RB DeAndré Washington.

Carr is the first quarterback in franchise history to complete a pass to 11 different players in a game three separate times (11/9/14 vs. Denver, 12/6/15 vs. Kansas City and 9/18/16 vs. Atlanta). Carr is also the only active quarterback with three such games. Only three other active quarterbacks that have accomplished the feat in two games are Drew Brees, Teddy Bridgewater and Carson Palmer.

2016 HONORS AND AWARDS

QB Derek Carr

- Named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week for his Week 1 game-winning drive against the New Orleans Saints, leading Oakland to a 35-34 victory. After throwing a 10-yard TD pass to WR Seth Roberts with less than a minute left in the game, Carr then found WR Michael Crabtree for a two-point conversion to take the lead for good.

- Named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week in Week 4 at Baltimore, leading Oakland to a 28-27 win. Carr led the Raiders on a 6-play, 66-yard drive in 1:24, culminating with a 23-yard, game-winning TD pass to WR Michael Crabtree.

- Named the AFC Offensive Player of the Week, Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week and FedEx Air Player of the Week for his record-setting performance at Tampa Bay in Week 8, lifting the Raiders to a 30-24 win. Carr threw for a franchise-record 513 yards, including a 41-yard TD pass to WR Seth Roberts with 1:45 remaining in overtime, completing 40-of-59 passes with four TDs for a 117.4 passer rating.

- Named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week in Week 12 vs. Carolina, leading the Raiders to a 35-32 comeback win. Carr led the Raiders back from an 8-point deficit in the fourth quarter, leading the Raiders on a 10-play, 75-yard drive in 4:49. He connected with TE Clive Walford on a 12-yard pass for the touchdown and WR Seth Roberts on the ensuing two-point conversion.

WR Amari Cooper

- Named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week in Week 11 vs. Houston, recording the game-winning 35-yard touchdown reception, juking multiple Texans defenders in the process. Cooper finished with four receptions for 57 yards and one touchdown.

LB Bruce Irvin

- Named the AFC Defensive Player of the Week for his Week 15 performance at San Diego. Irvin totaled six tackles (four solo), two sacks and one forced fumble. His second sack came on the game's final drive as the Chargers were attempting to tie or win the game.

K Sebastian Janikowski

- Named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week for his Week 15 performance at San Diego, connecting on 4-of-4 field goals, including the game-winning 44-yarder with 2:40 remaining.

P Marquette King

- Named the AFC Special Teams Player of the Week for his Week 7 effort in the win against the Jacksonville Jaguars. King punted 5 times for 273 yards (54.6 gross avg. and 50.6 net avg.) with a 60-yard long and four punts placed inside the opponents' 20-yard line and one inside the 10-yard line, and one rush for 27 yards.

DE Khalil Mack

- Named the AFC Defensive Player of the Week for his Week 9 performance in the Raiders' 30-20 victory over the Denver Broncos. Mack recorded three tackles (two solo), two sacks (-17 yards), one tackle for loss, one quarterback hit, one forced fumble, one fumble recovery and one pass defensed.

- Named the AFC Defensive Player of the Week for his Week 12 performance in the Raiders' 35-32 win over the Carolina Panthers. Mack posted seven tackles (five solo), one sack, one interception, one touchdown, one pass defensed, one forced fumble and one fumble recovery. He became the first player since 2009 to have an interception, sack, forced fumble, fumble recovery and a touchdown in the same game

- Named the AFC Defensive Player of the Month for November after posting 13 tackles (10 solo), four sacks, two forced fumbles, two fumble recoveries, two passes defensed, one interception and one touchdown, helping the Raiders go 3-0 in November.

- Named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week in Week 13 vs. Buffalo in the Raiders' 38-24 win over the Buffalo Bills. Mack registered a sack-fumble of QB Tyrod Taylor and recovered the fumble, sealing Oakland's victory.

RB Latavius Murray

- Named the FedEx Ground Player of the Week in Week 9 against the Denver Broncos, leading the run game in the 30-20 win. Murray rushed for 114 yards on 20 carries (5.7 avg.) and tied a franchise record with three TDs.

- Named the FedEx Ground Player of the Week in the Raiders' Week 13 38-24 victory over the Buffalo Bills. Murray rushed for 82 on 20 carries and two touchdowns.

RAIDERS OFF THE FIELD/INTERESTING FACTS

- General Manager Reggie McKenzie has an identical twin brother, Raleigh, who is a college scout for the team. He also has a son, Kahlil, who is a sophomore defensive lineman at Tennessee, his father's alma mater.
- Head Coach Jack Del Rio, who grew up in nearby Hayward, Calif., was a standout catcher on USC's baseball team, where he was teammates with Mark McGwire and Randy Johnson, and was drafted by the Toronto Blue Jays in 1981. Del Rio's son, Luke, is also a quarterback for the University of Florida.
- Assistant linebackers coach Brent Vieselmeyer coached Jack Del Rio's son, Luke, when he was the head coach at Valor Christian High School in Highlands Ranch, Colo., when Luke was the team's starting quarterback.
- QB Derek Carr is the brother of former No. 1 overall pick of the Houston Texans, David. The two brothers started a training facility for all athletes in Southern California called Carr Elite.
- CB DJ Hayden suffered a scary injury in a practice during his final year at Houston. Hayden, who collided with a teammate, tore his inferior vena cava, the major vein that flows blood from the lower body to the heart. The injury is mostly associated with high-speed vehicle accidents.
- WR Andre Holmes' brother, Jason, is a member of St. Kilda Football Club of the Australian Football League.
- K Sebastian Janikowski is a former member of the Polish national under-17 soccer team and turned down various pro soccer offers to enroll at Florida State.
- T Donald Penn was a Raider fan growing up in Inglewood, Calif., going to Raiders games as a kid in Los Angeles.
- TE Mychal Rivera's sister, Naya, was an actress on the hit TV show "Glee."
- T Menelik Watson was born in Manchester, England and was raised there before attending Marist College to play basketball.

KHALIL MACK

SILVER AND MACK

As the Raiders' first-round pick in the 2014 NFL Draft, DE Khalil Mack had lofty expectations in his rookie season and he met them all and more. Mack finished third in Associated Press Defensive Rookie of the Year voting, falling to St. Louis' DT Aaron Donald. Proving to be one of the NFL's best run defenders and generating pressure on quarterbacks that didn't always show up on the stat sheet, Mack was selected to the Pro Football Writers of America, Sports Illustrated and NFL.com All-Rookie Teams.

In 2015, Mack significantly surpassed the totals from his rookie year. After setting a new career high with his fifth sack in Week 10, he more than tripled his career high in sacks.

KHALIL MACK CAREER STATS

FIVE SACK GAME

Mack tied a franchise record set more than 32 years ago and set a career high with five sacks in Week 14 at Denver last year. His incredible performance matched Howie Long's five sacks on Oct. 2, 1983. Below is a look at the top single-game sack performances in franchise history:

| Player | Sacks | Date |
|---|---|---|
| Khalil Mack | 5.0 | 12/13/15 |
| Howie Long | 5.0 | 10/2/83 |
| Kamerion Wimbley | 4.0 | 11/10/11 |
| Anthony Smith | 4.0 | 9/12/93 |
| Anthony Smith | 4.0 | 10/18/92 |

Mack became the first player with five sacks in a game in which his team won by three points or fewer since sacks became and official stat in 1982. All of Mack's five sacks came in the second half against Denver, tying for the most sacks in a half since 1991. Here is a look at the most sacks in a half since 1991:

| Player | Sacks | Date |
|---|---|---|
| Khalil Mack (Oak.) | 5.0 | 12/13/15 |
| Vonnie Holliday (GB) | 5.0 | 12/22/02 |
| 10 Tied | 4.0 | - |

Since sacks became and official stat in 1982, only six other players have recorded more than five sacks in a game in NFL history. Mack is the sixth player to record five sacks and one forced fumble in a game. The last player to do so was Aldon Smith for the San Francisco 49ers in 2012. Below is a look at the six players to record five sacks and one forced fumble in game:

| Player | Date | Sacks | FF |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chuck Smith (Atl.) | 10/12/97 | 5.0 | 3 |
| Derrick Thomas (KC) | 9/6/98 | 6.0 | 1 |
| Vonnie Holliday (GB) | 12/22/02 | 5.0 | 3 |
| Osi Umenyiora (NYG) | 9/30/07 | 6.0 | 2 |
| Aldon Smith (SF) | 11/19/12 | 5.5 | 2 |

MACK ATTACK

Mack is the first Raiders player since 2005-06 to record double-digit sacks in back-to-back seasons, the last being Derrick Burgess. Mack has also recorded an NFL-best 26.0 sacks since the start of the 2015 season.

----- NFL SACK LEADERS SINCE 2015 -----

| Team | Player | Sacks |
|---|---|---|
| Oakland Raiders | Khalil Mack | 26.0 |
| Denver Broncos | Von Miller | 24.5 |
| NE Patriots | Chandler Jones | 23.5 |

It's no secret that Mack has thrived as the season goes on, as well as in the individual games themselves. His fourth-quarter sacks are atop the NFL charts amongst all premier pass rushers:

----- MACK'S FOURTH QUARTER SACKS SINCE 2015 -----

| Team | Player | Sacks |
|---|---|---|
| Oakland Raiders | Khalil Mack | 11.0 |
| Seattle Seahawks | Cliff Avril | 10.5 |
| Denver Broncos | Von Miller | 10.5 |

Mack's 14 career fourth-quarter sacks rank second in team history since becoming an official statistic in 1982. Additionally, his fourth-quarter forced fumbles and fumble recoveries top the NFL charts as well since 2015.

Mack's five multi-sack games tie Anthony Smith (1991-92) for the most by a Raider through his first two seasons. He is also the first Raider with two sacks in three straight games since Derrick Burgess in 2006.

CLASS RANKINGS

After totaling just four sacks in his rookie year, Mack propelled himself near the top of his class in his sophomore campaign and is at the top of his 2014 draft class with 30.0 career sacks.

DEREK CARR

CARR AT THE HELM

QB Derek Carr was named the Raiders' starting quarterback heading into the 2014 season, becoming the first rookie QB in team history to start in Week 1. He has since become the first Raiders offensive player to start 32 games over his first two seasons. Praised for his poise and maturity as a young signal caller, Carr has already shown growth in a number of key areas. Here is a look at his career statistics:

DEREK CARR CAREER STATISTICS

THROWING FOR SIX

Carr has enjoyed one of the most prolific starts to a career in NFL history, especially when it comes to finding the end zone. His 53 TDs are the second most by any NFL player through his first two seasons, trailing only Dan Marino (68). His 53 TDs are also tied for the ninth most in the NFL since 2014.

TOUCHDOWN PASSES THROUGH FIRST TWO NFL SEASONS

AMARI COOPER

FIRST-ROUNDER

WR Amari Cooper was tabbed as the Raiders' first-round draft pick in the 2015 NFL Draft and the fourth-overall selection. He was the highest wide receiver taken in the draft and the first receiver taken by Oakland in the first round since 2009. After enjoying one of the most dominant careers a wide receiver has ever had at the college level, Cooper saw that success translate to the NFL, as he became the first Raiders rookie to ever reach 1,000 receiving yards. Cooper also holds the franchise records for receptions and 100-yard games (five) by a rookie.

AMARI COOPER CAREER STATISTICS

Age Not a Factor

- In Week 2 of 2015, Cooper became the youngest Raiders wide receiver and second youngest player in franchise history to catch a TD pass.

NINE 100-YARD GAMES

Cooper posted five 100-yard outings as a rookie, a franchise rookie record and tied with Keenan Allen (2013) for the most by any player 21-years-old or younger.

His five 100-yard games are tied for the second most by a rookie since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger (leader: Odell Beckham Jr., seven in 2014).

Cooper became the first NFL rookie since 1961 (Mike Ditka) with three 100-yard receiving games in his team's first six games.

Cooper joins DeSean Jackson (2008) as the only NFL rookies in the past 30 years with two 100-yard receiving games in their team's first three games.

In Week 3 at Cleveland (8 rec., 134 yds), Cooper became the first Raiders rookie with 100 receiving yards in back-to-back games since James Jett (Nov. 21-28, 1993).

EXPLOSIVE AFTER CATCH

In 2015, Cooper ranked 12th among NFL WRs in yards after catch (YAC) with 386 and 18th among WRs in yards after contact with 112, according to TruMedia.

- Cooper had the most yards after catch (386) and second most yards after contact (112) of any rookie wide receiver in 2015.
- Cooper is tied for the sixth most yards after catch by a rookie WR since 2001.

21 OR YOUNGER

Cooper was 21 years old for the duration of his rookie season, making him one of the most electric receivers his age to play in the NFL. He holds the all-time record for receptions by a wide receiver 21 or younger.

- Cooper's 72 receptions are the most ever by a wide receiver 21 or younger. Only RB Reggie Bush (88) and TE Aaron Hernandez (74) posted more.
- Cooper's 1,070 receiving yards are the second most by any NFL player 21 or younger, trailing Randy Moss' 1,313 yards in 1998.
- Cooper's six receiving touchdowns are tied for the eighth most by an NFL player 21-or-younger (record: Randy Moss, 17, 1998).

|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 2016 | Oakland | 16 | 14 | 83 | 1,153 | 13.9 | 64t | 5 |

This season, Cooper has achieved multiple milestones:

- Set the franchise mark for receptions in a player's first two seasons
- Set the franchise mark for receiving yards in a player's first two seasons
- Set career highs with 12 receptions for 174 receiving yards on Oct. 30 at Tampa Bay
- Was named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week in Week 11 vs. Houston, recording the game-winning 35-yard touchdown reception, juking multiple Texans defenders in the process
- Eclipsed 2,000 receiving yards for his career, making him the seventh player in NFL history to record 2,000 yards before turning 23 years old
- Became the eighth player in NFL history to start his career with back-to-back 70-catch seasons
- Became the seventh player since 1970 to begin his career with back-to-back 1,000-yard receiving seasons
- Became the first Raider since Jerry Rice in 2001-02 to post consecutive seasons with at least 1,000 receiving yards
- Became the third player in NFL history with 70 receptions and 1,000 receiving yards in each of his first two seasons

MICHAEL CRABTREE

'CRAB' CROSSES THE BAY

When the Raiders signed WR Michael Crabtree in April 2015, they immediately upgraded their offense with a proven performer. After being selected by the San Francisco 49ers in the first round (10th overall) of the 2009 NFL Draft, Crabtree has caught at least one pass in each of his 109 games played. Before joining the NFL ranks, "Crab" turned in one of the most prolific receiving careers in college football history, winning the Biletnikoff Award - given to the nation's most outstanding wide receiver - in each of his two seasons at Texas Tech. He was the first and only player to win the coveted award twice.

Career Highlights

- Became the first 49ers player since WR Terrell Owens in 2003 to post a 1,000-yard receiving season, tallying a career year in 2012 with 85 receptions for 1,105 yards and nine touchdowns.
- Registered two 100-yard receiving games in the 2012 postseason with three touchdown receptions.
- Has registered at least three receptions in 94 of his 109 career games, and at least four receptions in 75 of his 109 career games.

Awards and Honors

- Named to USA Today's All-Joe Team in 2012.

SEBASTIAN JANIKOWSKI

ALL-TIME RAIDER

In Week 5 last year vs. Denver, K Sebastian Janikowski passed Hall of Famer and former Raiders WR Tim Brown and moved into first place on the Raiders' all-time games played list. Janikowski, who has played in 268 games, was originally drafted by the team in the first round (17th overall) of the 2000 NFL Draft. With 2016 being his 17th season, he became the first Raider to play 17 seasons for the Silver and Black in Week 1. Since 2000, Janikowski has missed only four games over his career (two in 2000, one in 2001 and one in 2011). Including postseason play, Janikowski has played in 270 games in Silver and Black for his career.

In Week 15 of 2015, Janikowski became the ninth NFL player and the only active player to reach 250 regular season games played with a single team.

Moving up the all-time games played list for a franchise as historic as the Raiders takes longevity, and Janikowski has it. Here is the top two Raiders on the franchise's all-time games played list heading into this week's game:

| Rank | Player | Years | Games |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | Sebastian Janikowski | 2000-16 | 268 |
| 2. | Tim Brown | 1988-2003 | 240 |

HITTING FROM A DISTANCE

Known for his booming leg, K Sebastian Janikowski is in historic company when it comes to long-distance field goals. In Week 3 of this season, he connected on his 53rd field goal from 50-plus yards out, passing Jason Hanson for the NFL's all-time record.

In Week 11 of 2015 at Detroit, Janikowski connected on a 56-yard field goal for his third 50-yarder of the season. He has now connected on at least three field goals of 50-plus yards in an NFL-record 11 straight seasons (2006-16).

In his 17 NFL seasons, Janikowski has made at least two field goals of 50-or-more yards 12 times. His career percentage from 50-plus yards is 55.0 percent (55-of-100), including connecting on 3-of-8 from distance this season.

GAME-WINNERS

So far in 2016, Janikowski has booted two game-winning field goals, coming in Week 12 vs. Carolina and Week 15 at San Diego. They marked the 14th and 15th career game-winners for Janikowski:

RACKING UP THE POINTS

K Sebastian Janikowski is the Raiders' all-time scoring leader with 1,799 career points, which ranks 12th on the NFL's all-time scoring list.

Janikowski has posted nine seasons of 100-or-more points in his career, including a personal- and franchise-high 142 in 2010. He has never totaled less than 70 points in any campaign.

He has scored in at least 80 consecutive games twice in his career, tallying at least one point in 93 straight games from 2000-05 and 83 straight games from 2009-14.

As a rookie in 2000, Janikowski set the franchise's rookie scoring record with 112 points.

PINPOINT ACCURACY

K Sebastian Janikowski has been nearly automatic throughout his career, connecting on 80.4 percent of his career field goal attempts, which is the 14th best field goal percentage of any kicker with at least 400 career field goal attempts.

Including 2015, Janikowski's career boasts 10 seasons with at least an 80 percent field goal conversion rate, including a high of 91.2 percent in 2012, when he was named a first alternate for the Pro Bowl.

Janikowski connected on 225 straight extra point attempts from Dec. 14, 2008 - Dec. 6, 2015, including the 2015 season at the new extra point attempt distance. He finished 2015 with a 38-of-39 mark (97.4 percent) on extra points.

MARQUETTE KING

PUNTING KING

Since entering the NFL as an undrafted free agent, P Marquette King has put up numbers among the NFL's best in both gross average and punting yards. With 4,107 punting yards in 2013, King finished sixth in the league and led the NFL in gross punting with an average of 48.9.

King continued his punting success into 2014, ranking at the top of the league in punts, punting yards and punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. In 2014, he set Raider franchise records for punts (109) and punting yards (4,930).

In 2016, King continued to be one of the league's elite punters, ranking tied for fifth in punts placed inside the opponents' 20-yard line. King also ranks second in the NFL in gross punting with an average of 48.6 and eighth in net average at 41.4.

PLAYER OF THE WEEK

After his impressive performance in Week 7 against the Jacksonville Jaguars, P Marquette King earned AFC Special Teams Player of the Week honors. In Week 7, King ranked first in gross average (54.6) and net average (50.6), second in punts inside the 20-yard line (four) and fourth in longest punt (60). It marked his second career Player of the Week Award for King, as he also won it in Week 16 of 2015 vs. San Diego.

King also rushed 27-yards, the longest by a punter since 2010, on fourth-and-24 off a bad snap in the fourth quarter to extend the game-winning touchdown.

LONGEST PUNT

In Week 3 against the Tennessee Titans, P Marquette King boomed a career-long 72-yard punt late in the third quarter, tying the seventh longest punt in franchise history. The punt marked just the second time King has recorded a punt of 70-plus yarder. His previous long was 70 yards which he set last year in Week 2 against the Baltimore Ravens.

| Date | Player | Yards |
|---|---|---|
| Nov. 27, 2011 | Shane Lechler | 80 |
| Oct. 29, 1961 | Wayne Crow | 77 |
| Sept. 12, 2011 | Shane Lechler | 77 |

| Oct. 30, 1977 | Ray Guy | 74 |
| Sept. 28, 2003 | Shane Lechler | 73 |
| Sept. 25, 2016 | Marquette King | 72 |

INSIDE THE 20

In 2015, P Marquette King set a franchise record by placing 40 punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. With just four touchbacks, King became the third NFL player since 1976 with at least 40 punts inside the 20 and four-or-fewer touchbacks.

King's 40 punts inside the 20 marked the second time he cracked the top-five on the all-time franchise list after doing so in 2014:

| Punts | Player | Season |
|---|---|---|
| 40 | Marquette King | 2015 |
| 33 | Shane Lechler | 2008 |
| 32 | Shane Lechler | 1985 |
| 31 | Marquette King | 2014 |
| 30 | Shane Lechler | 2009 |

King continues to impress with his control in 2016, having pinned opponents inside the 20-yard line 21 times thus far.

HISTORICAL PUNTER

In 2013, P Marquette King became the third punter in franchise history to lead the league in gross punting with an average of 48.9. It was the eighth time since 1974 that a Raiders punter has led the league in the category. Shane Lechler accomplished the feat four times, and newly-inducted Hall of Famer Ray Guy did it three times. Below is a look at the seasons a Raiders punter has led the league in gross average:

| Season | Player | Avg. |
|---|---|---|
| 2013 | Marquette King | 48.9 |
| 2009 | Shane Lechler | 51.1 |
| 2007 | Shane Lechler | 49.1 |

Raiders must regroup after loss to Broncos costs them AFC West title

By Jimmy Durkin
January 1, 2017

DENVER — The Raiders have to regroup, and regroup fast.

Oakland picked a bad time to play its worst game of the season. With a quarterback situation now more fragile than ever, the Raiders delivered a stinker in a 24-6 loss to the Denver Broncos on Sunday.

The cost was massive. With Kansas City winning, the Chiefs captured the AFC West title. Instead of a first-round bye and a home playoff game, the Raiders (12-4) will hit the road to play the Houston Texans next week in the Wild Card round of the playoffs.

“I tell the guys all the time you get what you earn in this league,” Raiders coach Jack Del Rio said. “We didn’t do enough to earn a win tonight and didn’t do enough to earn an opportunity to clinch the division.”

The Raiders are heading to the playoffs for the first time since 2002, a fact they and their fan base would’ve gladly taken at the start of the year. But the vibe is completely different than it was before Derek Carr broke his leg on Christmas Eve and the Super Bowl hopes took a deep southern dive.

“It’s huge for us to pick ourselves up and get prepared for next week,” Del Rio said. “Obviously we came into the game with big expectations, but we have to be able to bounce back and move onto the next.”

The Raiders have a huge question mark at quarterback after Matt McGloin, making his first start since 2013, injured his left shoulder late in the second quarter and didn’t return. He hadn’t played well up until that point — he completed 6 of 11 passes for 21 yards — and rookie Connor Cook had some solid flashes after replacing him.

Del Rio left open the possibility that Cook could be the starter against the Texans regardless of the health of McGloin, who for his part vowed that he’d be back to 100 percent by next week.

“We’ll be back and regroup tomorrow and look at everybody and see where they are and make a determination,” Del Rio said.

The Raiders were down 10-0 and had generated nothing on offense in McGloin’s first three drives. They opened his fourth taking a shot deep to Amari Cooper, who got free past Aqib Talib with a nicely run route. It had touchdown written all over it but the pass sailed off target.

McGloin called it a miscommunication before blaming it on himself. Cooper thought maybe McGloin was pressured on the throw (he wasn’t). Either way, it was a badly missed pass that could’ve got the Raiders right back in the game and delivered some rhythm to the offense that was sorely lacking.

McGloin followed with two more passes that sailed high and over his target, the second of which had him getting crunched after his release by Denver’ Jared Crick. His shoulder got driven into the ground and he stayed on the turf for a couple seconds before getting back up. Crick was called for a penalty and that kept the Raiders' drive alive and McGloin gutted it out for the next three plays. But once he hit the sideline and was examined, Cook started warming up and McGloin was done.

"I felt like that was best for the team at the time, for Connor to get in there," McGloin said. "My left arm just wasn't feeling good. It wasn't good. I couldn't throw in the motion that I'm used to."

The Raiders were down 17-0 by the time Cook took the field and trailed by that margin at halftime. They opened the third quarter by getting a 20-yard run from DeAndre Washington and a 13-yard pass from Cook to Michael Crabtree to finally reach Denver territory for the first time. But Cook was sacked by Shane Ray on the next play and fumbled and it was recovered by the Broncos. Oakland's turnstile defense allowed Denver to convert that into another touchdown that made it 24-0.

The little glimmer of hope came when Cook executed a nice three-play scoring drive. He hit Latavius Murray for a 14-yard pass in the flat, then Clive Walford for 17 yards. The shutout finally ended when he threw a nice ball to Cooper, who tip-toed the sideline and reached out for the pylon to get in the end zone.

Raiders safety Brynden Trawick, forced into his first defensive action of the season when Nate Allen left with a concussion and Keith McGill struggled, got his first career interception on the first play of Denver's next drive to create some thoughts of a comeback.

But Oakland couldn't take advantage and went three-and-out, turned it over twice in the fourth quarter and watched their dreams of an AFC West title evaporate. Now they have to find a way to rally behind whichever quarterback is called upon and see if they can get it done next week in Houston.

"Any time you lose, I think there's some sort of regrouping," Hudson said. "Let's get back to what we're doing good or let's find out what's working for us."

Del Rio says he believes.

"I'm confident in this group," he said. "They really care about each other. They care about this team and are really prideful. I think we'll find a way to bounce back and we'll be ready to roll next week."

Raiders' playoff hopes take a wild turn
By Vic Tafur
January 1, 2017

DENVER — When rookie Connor Cook replaced a battered Raiders quarterback Matt McGloin late in the first half Sunday, it was too little, too late. Way too late. For as bad as McGloin was before he injured his shoulder, Oakland's defense was worse.

The Raiders needed Cook to play safety, too.

On a sunny New Year's Day, when Oakland was playing for the AFC West crown and Denver for pride, pride won big, 24-6. The Raiders couldn't run the ball and McGloin, starting for an injured Derek Carr, looked unsteady. They were down 17-0 and out before Cook entered with 1:44 left in the second quarter.

Oakland (12-4) lost its chance at a home playoff game — Kansas City won its game in San Diego to clinch the division title — and now must travel to Houston for a first-round game Saturday.

"We started slow and I am disappointed, especially considering what was at stake," Raiders defensive end Khalil Mack said. "It would have been really special. That wasn't championship-level football from us. At all."

There's a decent chance the Raiders will go into Houston with Cook, a fourth-round pick from Michigan State who hadn't played in the NFL before Sunday, as their starting quarterback. Cook did lose a fumble and threw an interception, but he looked more confident than McGloin did in the pocket and had a pretty 32-yard touchdown pass to Amari Cooper late in the third quarter.

"I don't have a sense of Matt's availability for next week," Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio said. "Obviously, he has more experience in our system, but I thought Connor did a nice job with the opportunities that he had."

Cook's touchdown pass couldn't put any shine on a very sloppy performance by the Raiders. And unlike in its loss in Kansas City last month, Oakland couldn't use Carr's dislocated finger or bad weather as an excuse. The Raiders had more penalties (nine) than first downs (three) in the first half and were outgained by 204 yards (254-50) before intermission.

While the offense slept, the defense looked hungover. The Broncos, who had only three touchdowns in 50 possessions in their previous four games, marched down the field to open the game. Trevor Siemian completed passes of 19 and 14 yards, and Devontae Booker skipped in for an 11-yard touchdown.

Denver apparently was upset with how the Raiders ran over it nearly two months ago at the Coliseum, and the defending Super Bowl champ played with an edge. Cornerback Aqib Talib ripped off Oakland receiver Michael Crabtree's gold necklace after a play early, and the Broncos' running backs were equally tough.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

One play after Oakland safety Nate Allen left the game with a concussion, backup Keith McGill was trucked by Booker on a 10-yard run. Two plays later, Justin Forsett broke free, and with McGill and cornerback TJ Carrie in front of him, ran over them and went for 64 yards. That set up a 22-yard field goal and 10-0 lead.

“We didn’t align properly and misfit it and allowed them to go 64 yards,” Del Rio said. “That was a killer.”

The defense’s worst play came later in the first half, on a 3rd-and-18, when Siemian threw a screen pass to Booker. He made one move to make linebacker Bruce Irvin miss, then there was nothing but green turf ahead of him on a 43-yard score.

Mack was asked what happened.

“I have no freakin’ clue,” he said. “Those are plays we can’t give up. We have to play fundamentally sound, and that wasn’t the effort we needed today.”

Seventeen were more than enough points against the Raiders. The Broncos had given up 218 yards rushing against the Raiders in a 30-20 loss Nov. 6, and made sure that didn’t happen again. Denver stacked the box on defense, and dared McGloin to beat its cornerbacks.

He couldn’t do it, finishing 6-for-11 for 21 yards. The worst for McGloin came just before the end. With 6:40 left in the second quarter, Cooper broke free deep, but McGloin overthrew him.

“I thought he was doing one thing and he did another thing,” McGloin said. “It was a big miscommunication. … At the end of the day, it’s my fault, though.”

Next, McGloin sailed passes 5 feet over Crabtree’s head on back-to-back plays. McGloin was hit late after the last one, with his left arm driven into the ground by defensive end Jared Crick. The Raiders punted four plays later, and McGloin’s return was labeled as questionable. He didn’t play again.

Similarly, the Raiders’ Super Bowl hopes — promising less than two weeks ago — have to be considered questionable.

“I’m confident in this group,” Del Rio said. “I feel like it’s a really good group. They really care about each other … and are really prideful. I think we’ll find a way to bounce back and will be ready to roll next week.”

INSTANT REPLAY: RAIDERS COUGH UP AFC WEST, HEAD TO HOUSTON AS NO. 5 SEED

By Scott Bair

DENVER – The Raiders miss Derek Carr. Really, really bad.

Their first game without their starting quarterback was a complete disaster that goes down as a 24-6 loss to the Denver Broncos at Sports Authority Field.

The Raiders came unglued early and never came back together, clearly still reeling from Carr's broken fibula in last week's win over Indianapolis.

He's likely done for the season, leaving little hope the Raiders can recover and win a playoff game.

That will have to come on the road. The Raiders blew an opportunity to win the AFC West, secure the AFC's No. 2 seed and a first-round bye. A win in Denver would've sealed the deal. A Kansas City loss would've done the same, but the Chiefs stayed in the race by beating San Diego.

Now they're a No. 5 seed, headed to Houston for a playoff showdown with the Texans.

The Raiders will have to remedy their quarterback situation if there's any hope of winning in the postseason.

Matt McGloin was in charge filling in for Carr, but his first start of the season didn't last long. He suffered a shoulder injury late in the second quarter and did not return.

It became clear why Carr was an MVP candidate in the first half, when the Raiders offense struggled mightily with McGloin calling signals. He was inaccurate most of the day, and was worse after getting hit in the shoulder and neck area by Broncos defensive end Jared Crick.

Connor Cook took over late in the second quarter, and finished by completing 12-of-21 passes for 150 yards. He lost a fumble in the third quarter that led to more Denver points.

Cook was solid in spurts, especially on a three-play, 63-yard drive that ended with a 32-yard touchdown strike to Amari Cooper. It was Cook's first professional touchdown, which came in his first NFL game on the active roster.

Cook made some rookie mistakes including his fumble and a poorly thrown interception midway through the fourth quarter.

The rookie showed some arm talent but wasn't able to get the Raiders going consistently, though a fumble lost by Johnny Holton hindered positive momentum after the Cooper touchdown.

It wasn't just offense still unsettled after Carr's injury. The defense seemed rattled as well. They didn't tackle well, and got lethargic as the offense struggled. They were penalized heavily in their worst showing of the year.

The Raiders were never in this important game, and limp into the playoffs following an embarrassing display to end the regular season.

Crabtree over 1,000: Michael Crabtree went over 1,000 yards in the fourth quarter, making him and Amari Cooper the first Raiders receiving tandem to exceed 1,000 yards since 2001. Jerry Rice and Tim Brown accomplished the feat then.

Raiders weak at strong safety: Veteran safety Nate Allen suffered a concussion in the first half, which left the Raiders without quality options at strong safety.

Karl Joseph was inactive with a toe injury and Keith McGill was terrible stepping in for Allen. The Raiders turned to Brynden Trawick, primarily a special teams player, after that.

What's next: The Raiders head on the road to play the Houston Texans in the wild card round of the AFC playoffs.

Raiders lose AFC West, another QB in 24-6 loss to Broncos
By Pat Graham
January 1, 2017

DENVER (AP) — The Oakland Raiders had a lot to lose Sunday — and they did.

Another quarterback.

The division.

A week off.

In a game that couldn't have gone much worse, Oakland lost starting quarterback Matt McGloin to a shoulder injury in the first half and then fell 24-6 to a Denver Broncos team with nothing to play for and now in need of a new coach.

Gary Kubiak informed his players in an emotional postgame locker room that he's stepping away for health reasons.

Combined with Kansas City's win over San Diego, the Raiders (12-4) squandered the AFC West title and the first-round bye that went with it — and instead fell to the No. 5 seed, where they travel to Houston.

"I tell guys all the time: You get what you earn in this league," Raiders coach Jack Del Rio said. "And we didn't do enough to earn a win tonight."

Leading Oakland into next week's game could be rookie Connor Cook if the injury to McGloin proves serious.

McGloin, who got the start when Derek Carr broke his leg last week, left late in the second quarter. He completed six passes for 21 yards, missing virtually every throw downfield.

A fourth-year player out of Penn State, McGloin was making his first start since 2013. He was hurt when Jared Crick slammed him to the turf, drawing a roughing-the-passer penalty. Moments before that play, McGloin overthrew a wide-open Amari Cooper.

"I wanted to play out there tonight," McGloin said. "If I'm not 100 percent healthy, that's not what this team needs. I plan on being 100 percent healthy (for Houston)."

Cook was 14 of 21 with a touchdown to Cooper , an interception and a lost fumble against the defending Super Bowl champion Broncos (9-7), who ended a three-game slide.

"It was fast," Cook said of his first NFL action. "Felt pretty good to get out there and get some reps, trying to get the timing down with the receivers, but obviously not the way we wanted it to go."

Should Cook start at Houston, he would become the first QB in the Super Bowl era whose first career start came in a playoff game, according to NFL Research.

Ready for that sort of challenge?

"For sure," Cook said.

Devontae Booker became the first Broncos rookie with a rushing and receiving touchdown in the same game since Clinton Portis in 2002.

The speculation that Kubiak was stepping away from the game was circulating all day. He's 11 months removed from leading Denver to a Super Bowl win over Carolina. The 55-year-old Kubiak suffered a complex migraine on Oct. 9 following Denver's loss to Atlanta.

Kubiak didn't want to overshadow the win, so he didn't address his situation: "Today is about the team and the players."

His players spoke up for him.

"It was emotional," said quarterback Trevor Siemian, who threw two TDs passes and an interception. "Glad we sent him off with a win."

Justin Forsett's 64-yard run in the second quarter was the longest of the season by a Broncos running back. ... Oakland had 13 penalties for 125 yards.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

Raiders receiver Michael Crabtree was none too pleased with Broncos cornerback Aqib Talib swatting off his gold chain.

After breaking up a pass in the first half, Talib jawed with the Oakland receiver and then swiped at his chest. The clasp on Crabtree's chain appeared to break.

"That makes you tough?" Crabtree said. "You snatch the chain in front of the police (referee) and take off running? Childish, man."

Talib's explanation was simple: "He's just been wearing that chain all year man, it's just been growing on me. I said, 'If you wear that chain in front of me, I'm going to snatch it off.' He wore it in front of me, so I had to snatch it off."

INJURIES

Raiders: Safety Nate Allen was evaluated for a concussion.

Broncos: Special teamer Zaire Anderson was strapped to a backboard and carted off the field after being injured on punt coverage in the third quarter. Kubiak said Anderson was moving his extremities.

BEST FOR LAST

The Broncos outgained the Raiders by a 349-221 margin and forced three turnovers.

"We should have been clicking like this four weeks ago," cornerback Chris Harris Jr. said.

UP NEXT

Raiders: Face the Texans (9-7), who have an unsettled QB situation as well.

Broncos: Head into the offseason looking for a new head coach.

THE SACRAMENTO BEE

Raiders' Reggie McKenzie learned tricks from one of trade's best
By Andy Furillo
September 4, 2016

Reggie McKenzie knew where to apply when it was time to pursue a career as a pro football executive.

It was 1994, and McKenzie – his playing days over and looking to become a scout – sent his résumé to the evaluator who first evaluated him.

As a scout for the then-Los Angeles Raiders in 1985, Ron Wolf recommended to Al Davis, the team's managing general partner, that the team draft McKenzie when he was a linebacker coming out of Tennessee. So when Wolf became the general manager of the Green Bay Packers, he had a fairly good idea what to expect in McKenzie – a hard worker who knew, loved and respected the game.

Wolf barely finished interviewing McKenzie for a scouting position when he'd made up his mind.

"I think I hired him on the spot," Wolf said last month.

McKenzie didn't know it at the time, but he was stepping into a hothouse where Wolf was growing a crop of future NFL player personnel executives.

The same year Wolf brought in McKenzie, he also hired Scot McCloughan as a scout. The staff already included John Schneider and John Dorsey, and the director of pro personnel was Ted Thompson.

Within four years, the Packers were rebuilt into Super Bowl champions. As a testament to Wolf's greatness, all five became NFL general managers, and Wolf later was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Thompson, who succeeded Wolf at Green Bay, and Schneider, now the general manager with the Seattle Seahawks, both created Super Bowl championship teams, like their former boss. Dorsey took a Kansas City Chiefs franchise that had endured five losing seasons in its last six and turned it into one that has made the playoffs twice in his three years. McCloughan, from Alameda, improved the losing Washington Redskins into a divisional champion in one year. It was McCloughan's second stint as a general manager – 49ers fans will remember him during the team's mediocre 2008 and 2009 seasons.

With his other protégés having experienced varying degrees of success, Wolf thinks McKenzie's time has come "to get on with it."

In four years, the Raiders are just 18-46, but Wolf gives McKenzie something of a mulligan. McKenzie walked into the job in 2012 with the franchise suffering under the weight of several years of bad drafts and lousy contracts that left it short of talent, and it has taken him a few years to work through the mess and mold the team into his own.

McKenzie has had three consecutive productive drafts and two strong offseasons of free-agent acquisitions. He also hired coach Jack Del Rio, who created a new energy and sense of confidence around the team. Now, in McKenzie's fifth year, the Raiders have a decent chance of winning the AFC West.

"You had to turn that whole thing around, and evidently he's been able to do that – to the satisfaction of the ownership there," Wolf said. "That's a really big plus for him. And nobody's rooting for him harder than I am. He's a heck of a person."

BRINGING STABILITY TO RAIDERS

McKenzie became the Raiders' general manager less than a year after the death of Davis, who saved the franchise in 1963 as head coach and later ruled it for 39years. With Davis having complete and unchallenged authority, his teams won three Super Bowls. It had become almost inconceivable to think of the Raiders without Davis in charge. And in 2012, that inconceivability for McKenzie was topped off by the unsettling realization that he, of all people, had been named as the replacement.

"You had to step back and let it all sink in," McKenzie said.

While nobody knows where the Raiders will play home games over the long term, the team is moving ahead with a sense of stability. It starts with McKenzie, and Al Davis' son, Mark, now the chief executive of the team, acknowledged as much just before training camp began in late July when he signed McKenzie to a four-year contract extension.

"A lot of hard work went into it," McKenzie said of the drafts and player acquisitions that elevated the Raiders from laughingstock to contenders. "Hopefully, we can reap some benefits. It's good to see that Mark Davis sees the vision coming into play. We're on the same page, moving forward with this great organization. So I really feel good about the future of the Raiders."

With McKenzie at the controls, the Raiders in 2014 drafted defensive end Khalil Mack, now an All Pro. They also went for a second-rounder, Derek Carr, who looks like a future star at quarterback. In 2015, McKenzie drafted Amari Cooper, a potentially great wide receiver, and used the draft to load the team from front to back on both sides of the ball with talent and potential.

McKenzie's most prominent free-agent acquisition probably was wide receiver Michael Crabtree, who revived his career with the Raiders after falling out of favor with the 49ers. McKenzie stocked the offensive line with free agents, including Kelechi Osemele and Rodney Hudson. On defense, he signed lineman Dan Williams and linebackers Bruce Irvin and Malcolm Smith and defensive backs Sean Smith and Reggie Nelson.

McKenzie says he also looks for character in every rookie he drafts and every free agent he signs. The result is the most tangible of the intangibles – chemistry.

Del Rio thinks the Raiders have it, and he credits McKenzie.

"We're very pleased the way it has worked out for us," Del Rio said. "We feel like the guys who have come in really fit in well. They're good teammates, and the chemistry appears to be really good."

FINDING DIAMONDS IN DRAFT

Chemistry is great, but there has to be talent, too. The Raiders don't like to discuss their evaluation process, but the guru who spotted the ability that McKenzie brings to the job says it's pretty simple.

“What makes a good evaluator,” Ron Wolf said, “is the ability to determine who can and cannot play.”

Anybody can spot an Aaron Rodgers or a Peyton Manning, Wolf said. The genius is in finding a starter with a lower-round draft pick, such as running back Latavius Murray and tight end Mychal Rivera (both sixth round), linebacker Ben Heeney (fifth round) and defensive tackle Justin Ellis (fourth round). It takes hundreds of hours, Wolf said, sitting in the dark, studying film, to separate who can help from who cannot.

“Reggie had an advantage because he was a player, and he could fall back on his memory of who the good players were and the attributes they had,” Wolf said. “Eventually, he became my right-hand man with the Packers. He was a guy I trusted implicitly with running our football operation, our scouting operation. He did a masterful job of that. He had a knack of being able to pick out the guys who could play. He also had a command of all the other people who were playing in the league, and that was really beneficial.”

In 17 years with the Packers, McKenzie moved up from scout to director of pro personnel under Wolf and then to director of football operations under Thompson. The Packers made the playoffs 13 times, played in three Super Bowls and won two of them.

McKenzie watched and learned from Wolf, came to know him as one of the best talent evaluators in the history of the league. Wolf also knew how to scout a scout and what went into becoming a good one. Then, from the ones he hired, the Hall of Famer molded a wave of future executives who are among the most successful in the league.

Is McKenzie poised to join them? If so, it will probably be from the one thing he remembers the most from Wolf.

“No matter how anybody else sees it, he sees things with his own eyes,” McKenzie said of Wolf. “That’s what he told me – ‘Trust your own eyes.’ You can’t see for anyone else. You can only see for your own self.”

The man behind the Raiders' revival

While the Oakland Raiders enjoy a bye week, the man who assembled the roster that has led the revival of a once-storied franchise continues to plow ahead with the personnel duties that are never-ceasing and wisely suggest, "Work in progress."

At least Reggie McKenzie, the Raiders' general manager, has the tools that have equipped him for the job.

Ron Wolf, the Hall of Fame general manager associated with restoring the Green Bay Packers' prominence, saw it coming after he hired McKenzie as a pro personnel assistant in 1994. McKenzie remained with the Packers in the player personnel department until he was selected as the Raiders' GM in 2012, less than a year after Al Davis died. Wolf recommended McKenzie to Raiders owner Mark Davis without hesitation.

"I thought he was exceptional at what he did -- that is, to evaluate talent," Wolf said. "He had a rare feel for evaluating players properly. He really was a cut above. I think that came from him being a player. He was smart, he was tough, he was strong and he understood the game. I hate to say this, but maybe the best thing for pro football is that he got hurt, couldn't play anymore, and he went into talent evaluation."

Wolf was a mainstay in personnel under Davis when Raiders selected McKenzie, a linebacker for the University of Tennessee, in the 10th round of the 1984 NFL draft. That season, he started all 16 games and was named to the all-rookie team after the Raiders went 12-4.

McKenzie played next to Matt Millen, an All-Pro linebacker -- yes, that Matt Millen, the former general manager of the Detroit Lions.

"I tried to hire Reggie in Detroit but he stayed put," Millen said. "The thing you valued is he thinks like Ron did. Ron trained him and Reggie was a great student, which if you know Reggie's background, he was always a great student in high school and college. Reggie has his own instincts, like Ron. He has his own unique way of looking at things, but he also is grounded in the fundamentals of the job."

Among those fundamentals, Wolf and Millen both agree, is finding a franchise quarterback. Wolf succeeded when he landed Brett Favre. Millen landed Joey Harrington.

"The bottom line is if you don't find that quarterback, then you don't have much a chance to go where you want to go," Millen said.

McKenzie spent his first two years in Oakland with few draft picks and a bloated payroll that led to massive salary-cap cuts of established players who were on the down side, before he pounced on Fresno State quarterback Derek Carr in the second round of the 2014 draft. McKenzie also scored big that year in the first round when he took University of Buffalo linebacker Khalil Mack.

"Reggie found the quarterback, he found a dynamic pass-rusher and he is using all the tools available to build through the draft, free agency, the trade market if necessary," Wolf said. "Just look at the offensive line. It's one of the best in football. He's used free agency and the draft to build it pretty quickly. If you don't have five of those guys up front, your quarterback won't have a chance to display those skills.

"The exciting part is that Reggie has built a strong personnel department, and because of his own skills, what he is doing is very sustainable. He weathered the storm of those first two years. I'm just delighted for him. It's exciting. It's exciting for the Raiders. It's exciting for the NFL."

Raiders GM Reggie McKenzie has proud franchise back in spotlight
By Jerry McDonald
November 18, 2016

ALAMEDA — The deliberate walk by general manager Reggie McKenzie en route to the practice field isn't much different than the way he resurrected the Raiders.

It takes patience to reduce a franchise to rubble and rebuild it into a contender.

McKenzie thinks the Raiders can get much better and is focused on the future. Yet the effect of beating the Broncos was undeniable for a team which had compiled its record against suspect opposition.

"It was significant because it was a team we beat with a winning record, the Super Bowl champs," McKenzie told this newspaper. "Any time you beat the good teams, that gives you confidence. The players are excited and we're moving where we need to be."

Next up are the Houston Texans, with the stage going from national to international on Monday night.

McKenzie understands the Denver win put the Raiders in another realm. With that comes recognition for the G.M., no matter how much McKenzie wants to ignore it.

Considering where the Raiders have been, McKenzie is a prime candidate to be the NFL's executive of the year. McKenzie and Jerry Jones of the Dallas Cowboys are the front-runners, and the contrast couldn't be more striking.

Jones speaks to the media regularly, even on daily personnel moves which are usually addressed by the head coach. McKenzie, although friendly in casual conversation, is seldom on the record and often on the road scouting talent, leaving coach Jack Del Rio to be the face of the franchise.

If Jones had landed franchise cornerstones such as edge rusher Khalil Mack and quarterback Derek Carr with his first two picks of a draft, he would be telling it to the world and posing for magazine covers.

McKenzie just smiles and shakes his head, the same personality at 7-2 as when the Raiders were 11-37 in his first three years. It was at that point owner Mark Davis was being criticized for hiring McKenzie away from the Green Bay Packers, where he had been second in command but had never run his own team.

McKenzie's in-week practice attire is sweatshirts and shorts with a ball cap. He could fit in with the equipment staff and often mixes in almost anonymously with players for meals at the training table.

"He can do the suit and tie thing when he needs to, but basically, he just seems like one of the players," defensive tackle Justin Ellis said.

Aside from beating a good team, the Denver win underscored McKenzie's vision of having a big, powerful team that can flex its collective muscle. The Raiders rushed for 218 yards and had a staggering time of possession advantage of 41:28 to 18:32.

Every member of the offensive line was acquired by McKenzie — guard Kelechi Osemele and center Rodney Hudson were high-priced free agent signings in 2016 and 2015. Guard Gabe Jackson was a third-round draft pick in 2014. Tackle Austin Howard came aboard in 2013.

“Playing physical ball is what we set out to do from Day 1 and our staff believes in that,” McKenzie said before pausing to make a point. “We’re not big and slow and we don’t want people to mistakenly think that. We believe in being a threat with our speed.”

Overall, McKenzie’s losses have more often been offset by bigger wins. McKenzie fired Hue Jackson and hired Dennis Allen but then brought in Del Rio. He lost left tackle Jared Veldheer but signed Donald Penn.

The Raiders’ defense, which gave up staggering amounts of yardage and points through six games, has been much better over the past three.

One steadying influence was middle linebacker Perry Riley Jr., picked up by McKenzie as a street free agent after six years in Washington.

“It took time, but I’m sure the players were down on themselves, got together with the coaches and said, ‘Let’s fix the problems,’ ” McKenzie said. “You fix that stuff week to week, hopefully you go in the right direction and it gets better and better.”

The beauty of the way McKenzie has structured the Raiders’ finances is most contracts are on a pay-as-you go basis without enormous salary cap hits for players who don’t work out.

No roster has upgraded its talent as much as the Raiders, yet they’re only one of two teams playing below the 89 percent threshold mandated by the collective bargaining agreement from the seasons 2013-16.

McKenzie, signed to a contract extension during training camp, will rectify that by locking up key players long-term, which could include Carr, Mack and Latavius Murray.

In a year-by-year culture, McKenzie has built the Raiders to last. It’s what he had in mind when he jettisoned bad contracts early on and took the cap hits to build for the long haul, absorbing the on-field losses for the long-term gain.

“I always felt confident in what I was doing,” McKenzie said. “I was used to going to the playoffs, having good teams. I had to take a step back and say, `How are we going to build this into a perennial playoff team?’ I knew it wasn’t going to be a quick fix. I did not ever panic. I just wanted to make sure I made the right decisions to get to this point.”

Raiders GM Reggie McKenzie: 'We built this thing to last'
By Josh Dubow
December 1, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — Reggie McKenzie took a methodical approach to rebuilding the Oakland Raiders when he was hired as general manager in 2012.

He spent most of his first two seasons dismantling the roster to get the salary cap in order after years of mismanagement by late owner Al Davis before building the team back up again starting with the 2014 draft that netted franchise quarterback Derek Carr, elite pass rusher Khalil Mack and other key pieces.

The process has paid off handsomely. McKenzie's Raiders are off to a 9-2 start this season and stand in first place in the AFC West and tied for the top record in the conference with New England. Oakland is assured of its first winning record since 2002 and is closing in on clinching a playoff berth for the first time since that season, when the team went to the Super Bowl.

"We feel good about where we are," McKenzie said Thursday. "We think we built this thing to last."

But the speed of the turnaround from an 0-10 start in 2014 to possible Super Bowl contender two years later is somewhat staggering and a credit to the job McKenzie did building a roster and hiring Jack Del Rio as coach in 2015.

All but three of the team's starters were added since 2014 with McKenzie using successful high draft picks like Carr, Mack and Amari Cooper, key free agents like Michael Crabtree, Donald Penn, Rodney Hudson, Kelechi Osemele, Bruce Irvin and Sean Smith, and numerous finds late in the draft and off the street like David Amerson, Seth Roberts, Jalen Richard and Perry Riley Jr., to build a team able to compete with just about anybody.

"We knew we had some pieces to develop and if we could just add on that, we felt like we'd win some ballgames," McKenzie said. "We had those guys in 2014, they were young, being 0-10 is no fun, but we were 3-3 at the end of that stretch and we were moving in the right direction."

It has all paid off this season as a franchise that seemed to always find a way to lose is pulling out close games. Carr has led five fourth-quarter comebacks already this season as the players and management are confident each week that they will find a way to win.

McKenzie said that started when Del Rio decided to go for a 2-point conversion and a win instead of playing for overtime in a season-opening 35-34 win at New Orleans.

"As many heart attacks as I've had, absolutely," McKenzie said. "It goes without saying, the players, you can feel it. They have an air about them that they know they're going to win and it's good to be around."

The next step for McKenzie will be figuring out a way to keep all his young stars. He has structured most of his free-agent contracts with a pay-as-you-go philosophy meaning that the salary cap shouldn't hinder the team's chances of retaining Carr, Mack and Cooper. Carr can negotiate an extension this offseason and become a free agent in 2018, while Mack won't hit free agency until the following year and Cooper in 2020.

"The premiere players will get paid and we try to keep everything intact as much as we can," McKenzie said. "But that's what happens when you're talented players, play well and their contract comes up a certain time to where they can benefit from it, that's what free agency is all about."

In other topics, McKenzie said defensive lineman Mario Edwards Jr. resumed workouts on the field Thursday for the first time since injuring his hip in the preseason opener on Aug. 12.

Edwards was placed on injured reserve with hopes that he would be able to come back after about eight weeks but the injury has taken longer to heal than originally thought. The next step will be to see how Edwards responds to the workout before deciding whether to allow him back to practice.

"It's a day to day thing for him now," McKenzie said. "See how he comes in in the morning after he did some work today. He's been working out. He's had a good week."

McKenzie also had no update on the status of suspended pass rusher Aldon Smith, who is waiting to be reinstated by the league after serving a one-year suspension for violating the substance-abuse policy.

"They'll let us know in due time," McKenzie said. "I'm sure they're in communication with each other with that. But they don't fill us in on anything in that process."

McKenzie still believes Smith could contribute this season despite being out so long as long as he is in good shape physically and in a good state of mind.

Playing career earns Jack Del Rio respect
By Vic Tafur
September 7, 2016

There are photos of his wife and kids, of big fish caught, of him at USC — both as a young baseball player and at last year's Hall of Fame ceremony. But the biggest and most prominent pictures in Jack Del Rio's office in Alameda are of John Madden and Tom Flores, the Raiders' two Super Bowl-winning head coaches.

"That's the goal," Del Rio said.

Del Rio sat down for a one-on-one interview recently, despite being focused on Sunday's season opener in New Orleans that can't come soon enough.

Oakland improved from 3-13 the year before to 7-9 in Del Rio's first season, but, he said, "We want more. A lot more."

So Del Rio and his staff keep pushing.

The players love that Del Rio played in the NFL — and at a high level — and that he can relate to them in a way many coaches can't. The energy at practice and in the halls between meetings at the team's practice facility is much different than it was a couple of years ago with stoic head coach Dennis Allen.

For that, Del Rio owes a debt of gratitude to former Baltimore linebacker Ray Lewis, who played for Del Rio when he was the Ravens' linebackers coach. Del Rio won a Super Bowl ring with that team.

"He said to me, and I thought it was a real compliment, 'You keep it real,'" Del Rio remembered. "And I always felt like I could keep it real, because I have been in the trenches, I have had that helmet on, those pads on, I've been in the meetings. I understand what it's like to get up and compete every day....

"I'm not asking them to do anything that I wouldn't do myself as a player."

If the players understand what a coach wants and believe it will get results, they will give it to him. So Del Rio works at having relationships with his players, and he enjoys the interaction.

To a point.

"I'm not trying to be anybody's friend," he said. "There is a respect for what they do and an appreciation for the fact that it's a player's game. As coaches, we provide a blueprint and a vision, and we want them to embrace that."

He even takes suggestions — quarterback Derek Carr said about 10 percent of the way things were done at training camp were changed after Del Rio met with the team's leaders.

At his first head-coaching stop, in Jacksonville, Del Rio might not have been so agreeable. He used to cringe when he was called “a player’s coach.”

“I felt I really had to fight that when I was a young coach,” he said. “Because I was so close to playing. There were so many guys still in the league that I had played with or against. Six years after I started coaching, I was a head coach.

“So I was very sensitive then. … Now, I am completely comfortable with that label. Being a player’s coach just means that you get it and you’re not so far removed.”

Speaking of labels, how about the “defensive coach” one?

“No, I don’t like that one,” Del Rio said. “I don’t like that because I am not. I mean, that’s what my background is, and if we’re going to talk X’s and O’s, I may have more to offer on that subject. But I am a head coach.”

Del Rio is heavily involved with everything, down to special teams.

“I am very much into the offense, very heavily invested in everything that makes up the team,” he said. “The weight room, strength and performance, how we’re feeding and training our guys, how we’re traveling. Everything that helps us be as good as we can be.”

A big key to the team’s improvement this year will be the free agents that Oakland signed. Del Rio thought the secondary was a glaring need, and the Raiders added former Kansas City cornerback Sean Smith and ex-Cincinnati safety Reggie Nelson. They also addressed the run game with former Baltimore guard Kelechi Osemele and the pass rush with ex-Seattle linebacker Bruce Irvin.

“The mystery with free agents you bring in is always the chemistry, how are they going to fit in,” Del Rio said. “You ask about guys beforehand, but you never really know until they’re in the building. But we’re very pleased with how everyone has fit in.”

The goal this year — as it was last year — is to win the AFC West, and that road goes through Denver and the Super Bowl-champion Broncos.

“Expectations are important,” Del Rio said.

That road is paved by 300-pounders, as Del Rio and general manager Reggie McKenzie agree that the foundation of a football team is the offensive and defensive lines.

“Being physical in the trenches is where it all starts for both of us,” Del Rio said.

The offensive line of (left to right) Donald Penn, Osemele, Rodney Hudson, Gabe Jackson and Menelik Watson should be one of the best in the league — which is good, because Del Rio wants to run a lot this season.

“An offensive line is a fist, and the fingers are starting to come together,” Del Rio said.

One can imagine Del Rio with his fists clenched on the sideline. He not only enjoys helping players reach their potential; coaching also feeds that competitive beast that still lies within.

“It’s very addictive to me, the thrill of going in there knowing that you’re putting your neck on the line,” he said. “And you know that there are going to be Sundays where it gets chopped off. There’s going to be pain. … But I love it.”

Del Rio is getting a fresh perspective now that his son, Luke, is going through that as a quarterback at Florida. Dad flew to see the sophomore’s first start Saturday.

“It’s awesome for him,” Jack said. “I’ve always told him that I am more concerned with his character than what he does in sports. I never pushed him to play or do anything, because I knew there would be a lot of pressure to live up to this whole thing and I didn’t want him to feel that. He still did.”

Luke transferred from Alabama to Oregon State to Florida to pursue his dream of being a starting quarterback.

“Most people would have given up by now,” Jack said. “He hung in there, kept the faith, kept grinding and kept paying the price.”

Luke grew up watching his dad’s game film, and then, about five years back, the script flipped.

“That was cool,” Jack said. “He wanted to start talking ball. We started watching his stuff, his next opponents, showing him what I was seeing on defense. We would have sessions on the plane rides home where he would draw up a play and I would show him how defenses would adjust to it.”

Jack attended Florida’s spring practice this year and brought along a special guest, Academy Award-winning actor Gene Hackman. Hackman’s wife and Del Rio were friends at USC.

“When he was doing ‘The Replacements’ in 2000, he came out to Baltimore and came to practice with her,” Del Rio said. “And the four of us, with my wife, hit it off.”

In “The Replacements,” quarterback Shane Falco (Keanu Reeves) says, “Pain heals, chicks dig scars, glory lasts forever.”

Del Rio couldn’t have said it better himself.

“Winning in this league is hard,” Del Rio said. “For us, it’s just about preparing our butts off and then competing our butts off. All that other stuff is just talk.

“When we get our opportunities, if they’re not going well, how is our resolve to bounce back? When they are going well, how do we put it behind us and move forward? One way or another, you’re going forward.”

The two things that pleased Del Rio the most this preseason were Carr’s continued development and his team’s work ethic.

“Last year, we showed them how we want to do things,” Del Rio said. “This year, guys that were new, whether they were free agents or draft picks, heard from the guys that were here, ‘Hey, this is how we do it.’”

Since-retired safety Charles Woodson was the team leader last season — "Him buying in was huge," Del Rio said — but Carr and All-Pro defensive end Khalil Mack, each 25, have taken over the heavy lifting.

"Those guys are really hard workers, always on point, and players see the leaders doing it so they do it," Del Rio said. "It's become part of the culture....

"That's your culture change."

Coach Jack Del Rio's confidence has rubbed off on Raiders
By Vic Tafur
December 17, 2016

SAN DIEGO — They may be a little ahead of schedule, but they don't care. The Raiders can clinch a playoff spot with a win over the Chargers on Sunday in just their second season with Jack Del Rio as head coach.

"This organization has a chance to do something special," cornerback David Amerson said. "We've got to get this game and go to the playoffs. That's something that hasn't happened here in a long time. It means a lot to us. We have to go in there, put our stamp on this, get to that next level and finish off this season right."

Amerson and the rest of the players will give you the one-game-at-a-time spiel at first, but there is no hiding the confidence that this 10-3 team has. It comes from the head coach, who took over a 3-13 team in 2015, won seven games last year and raised the bar a lot higher this season. Del Rio and his staff have taught the players how to win, and they have announced their presence with authority, as in a 5-1 road record this season.

"You want to teach situational awareness," Del Rio said. "You want to make sure that we have the basic fundamentals, harp on those, that we have the plays that we need to get to and take reps at them."

Then, and this is not easy, figure out what your opponent is going to do.

"How they'd counter it and what our answers are," Del Rio said. "It's really about having answers and then it's about the execution when you get to that moment. I think having the turns in the system and having the repetitions, practicing it and perfecting it, I think that really goes a long way."

It's gotten them here, able to clinch the Raiders' first playoff spot in 14 years. And if Oakland can win one more game than Kansas City does the last three weeks, it can win the AFC West and host a playoff game.

Del Rio's former boss, Ravens Super Bowl-winning coach and NFL Network analyst Brian Billick, is not surprised at how the Raiders have gone from 0-10 to 10-3 in two seasons.

"Jack is smart and tough," Billick said in a phone interview. "I couldn't bring in just anyone to coach Ray Lewis. Jack was a great player, and that goes a long way with players today. And he paid the price as an assistant coach, growing his knowledge and his resume."

A win Sunday would give Del Rio his third playoff appearance as a head coach, after two with the Jaguars from 2003 to 2011. He was 68-71 when he was fired in Jacksonville.

“There is a learning curve to this job,” Billick said. “People ask, ‘Why would you want to hire someone who was fired?’ Well, because, they grow and learn and now have a wealth of experience. There is no question that Jack would say he is a better coach now than he was the first time. It’s clear.”

The last time the Raiders were playing for a playoff spot late in the season was 2011, and their confident coach went by the name Hue Jackson. Oakland was 8-7 and just needed a win against a Chargers team playing out the string, much like quarterback Philip Rivers’ bunch this season. The Raiders lost 38-26, and Jackson was fired a month later.

“We didn’t have it that day for some reason,” running back Taiwan Jones said. “But that’s the past. We don’t worry about the past anymore.”

Allow us one more digression: Jackson was replaced by Dennis Allen for two seasons and change. When the ship was sinking and the Raiders were 0-4 two years ago, players shrugged when asked about the coach. Similar to reports out of San Diego this week about soon-to-walk-the-plank Chargers head coach Mike McCoy.

There are no mixed feelings or ambivalence about Del Rio. Players have totally bought in. To the point where when a player was asked about not getting the ball on 3rd-and-1 last game — and Del Rio admitted it was a mistake — the player laughed off the question.

“I trust in everything that he does,” running back Latavius Murray said. “If it had worked, everybody wouldn’t be talking about what we should have done. That’s how the game goes. I believe in this staff, the process, the team, so we’ll continue to do what we’ve been doing.”

Del Rio won with defense and a strong running game in Jacksonville, but he has relied on Derek Carr and an efficient passing game this season. The Raiders’ defense is ranked 30th in the NFL but is first in turnover margin, at plus-15. There’s luck involved, sure, but also some toughness and resilience.

Del Rio was asked last week how he reacts when people say he has changed the culture in Oakland.

“Well, I agree with them,” he said. “But it’s not me alone, it’s us, it’s what we have done. It’s what all the people in this building have done. ... I provided a vision, I provided that. But ... we’re all in it. We all play a small part in it, and together, collectively, we can do special things.”

Offensive Coordinator Bill Musgrave

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders' offense humming under Bill Musgrave's guidance
By Vic Taufr
November 14, 2016

Back when Bill Musgrave was a quarterback at the University of Oregon, 27 years ago, he used to play a lot of "Joust," the video-arcade game that featured combatants riding flying ostriches.

The offensive coordinator of the Raiders, an admitted arcade regular in those days, repeatedly would pound the button trying to flap his ostrich's wings harder and harder.

"I once developed a big blister on my finger and it was hard to throw a football around for a couple of days," he said.

Musgrave, 49, doesn't play "Joust" anymore, but he's having some familiar struggles regulating his desire to flap those wings. On game days with the Raiders, he would love to keep assaulting through the air with quarterback Derek Carr and receivers Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree. Then Musgrave tells that voice in his head to be quiet.

"There is always a push and pull there," Musgrave said. "You want to find that balance between being aggressive and being responsible."

Looks like Musgrave and the Raiders (7-2) have found that balance, resulting in some high-octane offense, including Carr's franchise record 513 yards passing at Tampa Bay on Oct. 30.

Oakland ranks fifth in the league with 27.2 points per game and 401.1 yards per game. And the Raiders lead the league in fewest times getting sacked (11) and are third in turnover margin (plus-9).

"The guys have really prepared well and competed exceptionally on game day," said Musgrave, who sat down for a one-on-one interview. "We've established a lot of good habits, dating back to offseason workouts and training camp. We're protecting the football, and when a play is not there to be made, we're minimizing negative plays."

Musgrave is using a diverse combination of formations, groupings and route trees to get the passing game going. The tandem of Cooper and Crabtree leads the NFL in first-down catches (70) and first-down catches on third down (26). The duo ranks second in yards (1,439) and receptions (107).

Cooper says Musgrave deserves a lot of the credit.

"I love Coach Musgrave," Cooper said. "He gets me in great position and in space where I can make plays. He calls the plays based on everyone's strengths, and there is more trust now that we're all in our second year together and we're going deeper into the playbook."

That continuity, with Musgrave and head coach Jack Del Rio together in their second season, definitely has helped Carr. The third-year quarterback has made another big leap this season, completing 66 percent of his passes for 2,505 yards, with 17 touchdowns and three interceptions.

“He is very steady, and that enables him to make these jumps every year,” Musgrave said. “He reminds me of (Minnesota running back) Adrian Peterson. Adrian only knows how to practice at full speed. There is no such thing as a walk-through for him. That’s the way Derek is.”

The Raiders had a practice Wednesday during the bye week and “Derek is letting it rip, right from the get-go, even though we don’t have an opponent,” Musgrave said. “That ball is flying during a walkthrough like it would be on a Sunday afternoon.”

Musgrave said Carr is the same man every day.

“So consistent, with the same approach,” Musgrave said. “Never down in the dumps or too giddy. Not even when he throws for over 500 yards.”

Not even when Musgrave allows him to check out of plays and call something else, like he did late in victories over New Orleans and San Diego.

“He wants me to take control, and he’s been slowly giving me more and more,” Carr said. “I told him that I can handle whatever you throw at me, and he’s been great at teaching me how to get things done, being a former quarterback himself.”

Carr said he has heard from other quarterbacks that Musgrave wasn’t as flexible in his first four stops as an NFL offensive coordinator, with the Eagles (1998), Panthers (2000), Jaguars (2003-04) and Vikings (2011-13), along with several stints as quarterbacks coach.

“He didn’t let things be changed at the line of scrimmage, but he is letting me do that more and more,” Carr said. “The cool thing is he loves to know my thoughts. A coordinator that loves to listen or run things that you feel comfortable with, that helps us all play confident because we like what we’re doing.”

They may start bouncing things off each other for the next game hours after the last one is over.

“The coaches get started a little earlier after road games, because we get to grade the film on the plane ride back,” Musgrave said. “We start by looking at first and second downs, all the formations on tape. Then the pressures.

”We look for trends and anomalies, looking to crack the code. See if we can find formations that might make the defense predictable, rather than having to prepare for the entire universe of defense.”

So, the Raiders are 5-0 on the road, but rather than celebrating with an adult beverage, Musgrave and the coaches are breaking down tape?

“I wish we were living it up,” Musgrave said. “There was a day back then, in the ’90s, when there would be coolers of beer in the aisle. You’d have to hop over them to get to your seat. But no more. Now it’s a bunch of guys on iPads. Have to keep up with the Joneses.”

This is Musgrave’s 17th year on an NFL staff, after he won a Super Bowl ring as a backup quarterback with the 49ers.

“The experience has been great for me, to learn from mistakes,” Musgrave said. “You learn from triumphs, too. We’re always looking for someone to exploit on their defense, and to somehow get one of our best players matched up against him.

“Hopefully, you get better each year at something you do over and over again.”

Kind of like the Raiders’ offense in their last win, over Denver, in which they kept running behind a mauling offensive line for 218 yards and three touchdowns. Musgrave used a lot of heavy sets, often with six offensive linemen, and showed a national-television audience that Oakland can beat teams in the air or on the ground.

“It was great to lead a game wire to wire,” Musgrave said. “We want to start fast and make the opposing offense one-dimensional.”

Musgrave’s offense is not one-dimensional. Where once you could call him a West Coast offense coach, using the short pass to set up everything, you can’t anymore.

“Being with the Niners and Broncos, it was the West Coach language from Bill Walsh,” Musgrave said. “Still used that language when I was with the Panthers and (the University of) Virginia and in Jacksonville the first time with Jack.”

Since then, the terminology changed in stints with the Falcons and Vikings, as well as with 49ers head coach Chip Kelly when both were with the Eagles.

So, the resulting offense, one with many different formations and tendencies, has no name.

Offensive Line Coach Mike Tice

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders credit Mike Tice for stellar line play
By Vic Tafur
October 13, 2016

The first-down chains have been moving for a while.

“It’s been a long journey,” Mike Tice said of his 14-year NFL playing career and 20-year coaching arc.

But as he drives into work from Dublin to the Raiders’ facility with his son, and gets to egg on one of the best offensive lines in the league, Tice knows he has made it to a pretty cool destination.

The former Vikings head coach isn’t looking for another shot at calling the shots.

“I don’t have any aspirations of being anything but being known as an excellent offensive line coach and a teacher of men,” Tice said. “My goal is to help young men grow and to win a Super Bowl. I have been in the league since 1981 and I don’t have a ring.”

Tice, 57, made it to four conference championship games, one as a player and three as a coach. And now, just maybe, he has another shot, with the Raiders sitting at 4-1.

Derek Carr is averaging 277 passing yards a game, with 11 touchdown passes and two interceptions, thanks in large part to a line that has allowed the fewest sacks (five) and quarterback hits (11) in the league.

And that has Tice’s fingerprints all over it.

“He’s a great coach,” center Rodney Hudson said. “He’s smart, he’s honest, he’s been around a long time and he always has an answer for you. He does a great job, throughout the game, of making adjustments. Because you don’t always make it to halftime to make adjustments.”

The Raiders also have run for 119 yards per game, ninth-best in the league. And they’ve done it while dealing with injuries, as Tice has had to plug in five right tackles.

“I’m proud of the fact that the guys were prepared and ready to go in and play at a high level,” Tice said. “They weren’t nervous and the group wasn’t worried.”

Tice is also a master at knowing when it’s time to be intense and when it’s time to be loose.

“He lets us know when we’re wrong and praises us when we’re right,” left tackle Donald Penn said. “The other thing that sets him apart, is when we work, we work and when it’s time to rest, we rest.

“A lot of O-line coaches just work you and work you. If we get down early in practice, Mike’s not going to add something just to fill the time.”

As with head coach Jack Del Rio, Tice benefits from his time as a player; he and Del Rio became friends when they were teammates with Minnesota (1992-95).

Tice was then on Del Rio's staff in Jacksonville, and when Del Rio became head coach in Oakland last year, the former linebacker called on the former tight end again. Tice is thankful the Falcons let him out of his contract as their line coach to join his friend early in the process, before an offensive coordinator was hired.

"Jack and I were able to put an offensive staff together," Tice said. "Jack had worked with (coordinator) Bill (Musgrave) before and I knew Bill well. We felt we put together a great teaching staff."

Tice inherited Penn and guard Gabe Jackson and right tackles Austin Howard and Menelik Watson. Then the past two years, the Raiders added prized free agents in Hudson and guard/bully Kelechi Osemele.

"I want the biggest, toughest guys I can get who can move," Tice said. "I want guys who can recover and react to a secondary move."

Or eliminate them. Osemele has been averaging 10 pancakes a game — "He's a knockdown specialist," Tice said.

This season has been more fun than usual for Tice.

His son, Nate, is working with the Raiders as a seasonal offensive assistant, a year after working in the Falcons' personnel department. Nate was once a backup quarterback (and Russell Wilson's roommate) at Wisconsin.

"It's been great working with my son, driving into work with him," Tice said. "We were at training camp and one day he just decided he wanted to coach."

Nate Tice, 27, joked that it goes beyond "free rent and free meals."

"I am spending 20 hours a day with one of my best friends," Nate Tice said. "My dad can relate to anybody. He adapts to his players and knows what to give them if they're smart or not so smart. In Chicago (when Tice was offensive coordinator), he called his offense 'a duh offense.'"

Keep it simple, and have a glass of wine — that could be his dad's motto. Mike and his wife, Dianne, fell in love with Napa on a trip there in 2010, and are quickly up to 1,000 bottles in their Seattle house cellar.

They have a special bottle saved for the Super Bowl win, but that goal isn't going to define Tice's career. He loves his job, after all.

"I love being in a group of brothers that pull for each other," he said. "I told my guys early on that if we're going to be a great offense, you're the engine and an engine has to be able to fire on all eight cylinders. The engine can't sputter.

"And I believe they buy into that."

Offensive Line

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Silver and Block: Huge line helps make Raiders' offense go
By Vic Tafur
December 4, 2016

Kelechi Osemele and Menelik Watson, two of the biggest and meanest guys on the largest offensive line in the NFL, are sitting in front of their lockers giggling like schoolgirls while hunched over a smartphone. Two days prior, the 9-2 Raiders had won a very physical game over the Panthers, and to the victors go the tweets.

Osemele hits the button and the video of right guard Gabe Jackson steamrolling Carolina linebacker David Mayo hits Twitter. On the footage, you can see Jackson driving Mayo straight back 6 yards, and then just as Mayo turned away to escape — with Osemele screeching on the audio, "Noooo, don't run away" — Jackson flattens Mayo, drives him into the ground and lies on him.

They're a nasty bunch, these Coliseum "Bouncers." The offensive line is a major reason the Raiders are in first place in the AFC West heading into Sunday's game against the Bills. The unit has allowed a league-low 13 sacks, which is even more impressive when you consider that Derek Carr has thrown the ball 423 times, sixth most in the NFL.

Carr has put up big numbers, thanks to an offensive line that is not only the largest in the NFL but also one of the most enormous in the history of the league. The five starting linemen average 322 pounds, with right tackle Austin Howard the tallest at 6-foot-7, Jackson the heaviest at 335 pounds and center Rodney Hudson the "smallest" at 6-foot-2, 300 pounds.

"Bully ball," receiver Andre Holmes says, smiling.

With all that size up front, the Del Rio Grandes can really assert their will in the running game, as a national television audience saw by the 218 yards rushing Oakland had in its win over Denver last month. But these Raiders are a pass-first team, and the playmakers are very thankful for the haymakers.

"I tell them before the game: You win, we win," Carr said. "They love that. They want to put it on them. … When your offensive line can do certain things, protect the quarterback, create running lanes, create blocks downfield for receivers, that inspires everybody. … It fuels our team."

Raiders Hall of Fame center Jim Otto is not on Twitter, but he watches all the games and replays the big blocks.

"I am very proud of those kids," Otto said. "I love to see the defensive linemen's heads snap back. That's the way I played. You have to have some meanness."

Osemele, the left guard, has done a great job of bringing out the bad guy in his teammates since being signed as a free agent this offseason. The former Raven got into multiple fights with defensive players at training camp, but he was just warming up. This season, Osemele has pancaked dozens of opponents, punished many and even simply tossed others aside like garbage bags.

“Everyone tries to do what K.O. does,” backup guard Jon Feliciano said. “But not everyone is as inhumanly strong as he is. Throwing defensive linemen to the ground is not as easy as he makes it look.”

The linemen all say they just don’t want Carr to be touched, but that doesn’t explain de-cleating defenders 10 yards down the field.

“If you don’t play with anger, you’re playing the wrong position,” said Donald Penn, who is the only starting left tackle in the NFL not to allow a sack this season. “Carr is the saint, in the back, and he doesn’t like it when we curse. But we can’t help that. ...

“Derek likes to say that we’re the engine, and without us there is no Carr.”

Hope they trademarked that one.

Raiders Hall of Fame tackle Art Shell agrees with Carr and Penn, and he takes it a step further. Without this offensive line, he thinks Oakland isn’t sniffing nine wins.

“They play the way you’re supposed to play, the way you have to play, to get after people,” Shell said. “And as that group goes, so goes the offense, and so goes the team.”

Both Otto and Shell laughed at the size of the group. The two guards, Osemele and Jackson, weigh a lot more than tackles used to, at 330 and 335 pounds, respectively.

“That’s a lot of beef,” Otto said.

Otto was 210 pounds when he started with the Raiders in 1960 and got as big as 270, thanks to “lifting weights and eating like a madman, and drinking my favorite beverage,” he said. “Now these guys are huge and they move so well, too.”

That they do, as most of them played basketball in high school — Penn was All-State at Saint Bernard Catholic High in Playa del Rey (Los Angeles County) — and two of them, Howard and Watson, played in college.

“We want the biggest guys we can find who can move,” offensive line coach Mike Tice said. “I have been blessed to work with some great lines in my career, and this one is up there. Intense, focused, athletic and smart. The players have bought in, and we’re playing fast and mean.”

Otto and Shell both credit head coach Jack Del Rio, offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave and Tice with utilizing their large assets well. Tice has been very good at making in-game adjustments.

“You have to have athletic guys to do what they want to do in that offense,” Shell said. “They do a lot of different things, a lot of different looks and packages, and you need guys with good feet and the ability to change directions. Being just big is not going to cut it.

“So you have to credit (owner) Mark Davis and (general manager) Reggie McKenzie, too, for opening up the pocketbook and getting the right guys.”

McKenzie signed free agents Howard and Penn before the 2014 season, and then drafted Jackson in the third round (after Carr and Khalil Mack) later that year. Last year, McKenzie broke the bank to get Hudson (five years for $44.5 million), then blew the bank up this spring when he signed free agent Osemele for five years and $58.5 million.

Not only did McKenzie have to overspend to get players to come to Oakland at that point — remember, the Raiders started the 2014 season with an 0-10 record — but sometimes one just has to have something, and money becomes no object.

“That’s where it all starts, up front — that’s what I believe, and I always have,” said McKenzie, a former linebacker in his NFL days. “The little people can’t play unless the big people are there to help. Your quarterback can have the greatest arm in the world, but if he is on the ground all the time, that’s not going to do anybody any good. Same goes on the defensive side. It starts in the trenches.

“Nobody wants to be bullied or pushed around.”

And don’t forget that there is order to the chaos, as Hudson directs the traffic, working with Carr to identify the defensive pressure and blitzes and calling out the adjustments.

“Rodney is the unsung hero in all of this,” McKenzie said. “He is so smart, and has quick hands and is strong enough.”

Hudson, one of the team captains, has been leaned on more heavily this season, as the Raiders had to use five right tackles in the first four weeks due to injuries to Howard and Watson, who was the starter at right tackle out of camp. Then, when tight end Lee Smith broke his leg and the Raiders started using six linemen a lot, Hudson had to make sure rookies Vadal Alexander, Denver Kirkland and now Watson have the right assignments and adjustments.

Oakland uses a sixth lineman 24 percent of the time, more than any other team in the league.

“It’s been fun,” Hudson said. “We all get along well and enjoy each other and Coach Tice. Everybody’s big and can move well, is prepared, and we know what we have to do. We dictate what happens on the field.”

And, again exactly, how do you do that?

“You keep hitting them until they don’t want to be hit anymore,” Osemele said. “Then you win.”

THE UNDEFEATED

Oakland Raiders offensive line: the Silver and Blackest

By Jason Reid
December 8, 2016

The locker room was getting crazy crowded. Beaming team officials milled about. Equipment guys hurried to pack and get out of the way. Reporters and television cameras were everywhere. The whole scene was a little too much for center Rodney Hudson. He wanted to bounce. After balling out again in the sizzling Oakland Raiders’ most recent victory last week over the Buffalo Bills, Hudson had earned the right to shut it down. Clearly, left tackle Donald Penn didn't care. As Penn opened up about being the anchor of the NFL's only all-black starting offensive line, he dragged Hudson into the interview, too. In the O-line's corner of the room, over the din of intensifying background chatter, Penn playfully went in on his dude, strongly encouraging Hudson to also share his feelings about the unit that has brought back the swagger to the Silver and Black. Properly motivated, Hudson agreed to remain on the clock a bit longer.

"It's something we know about. It's something we've talked about," said Hudson, who, after warming up, sounded as proud as Penn to roll with a one-of-a-kind group. "It is a little different. You know it's not like this everywhere. But this is the way it is here. And what we're doing is working for us."

Behind arguably the league's baddest – and without question, the blackest – O-line, the Raiders are no longer a hot mess. With four weeks remaining in the regular season, an organization synonymous with failure for most of this century is assured of having its first winning record in 14 seasons. The franchise's renaissance, however, could wind up being so much more. Oakland's bedrock O-line – Penn, Hudson, left guard Kelechi Osemele, right guard Gabe Jackson and right tackle Austin Howard – is the foundation of a first-place team. Third-year quarterback Derek Carr is looking every bit like an NFL MVP. And don't be surprised if the road to the Super Bowl in the AFC winds up going through Oaktown. The Raiders are counting on it. Even with a defense that won't remind anyone of the 1985 Chicago Bears (Oakland is less dope on the other side of the ball, to say the least), the Raiders could end the season holding their fourth Vince Lombardi Trophy. Their O-line is just that sick. Penn's crew will get many more opportunities to prove it.

Beginning with Thursday night's road game against AFC West rival Kansas City Chiefs, Oakland, which hasn't had many meaningful late-season matchups in a minute, faces a closing stretch that will show just how far it has come. At both 10-2, the Raiders and New England Patriots are tied for the AFC's best record. In the West, the Raiders are only a game ahead of the Chiefs. The conference's top seeding is still up for grabs. The grind doesn't stop.

Fortunately for the Raiders, they've got the right brothers bulldozing their path.

"Funny thing is, we're still a work in progress," Penn said. "We're still getting our timing down. We're still trying to get our momentum. We still ain't there yet. But we're getting better and better. That's how we've got to keep doing it. There's a lot we want to accomplish. A lot for a lot of reasons."

You can tell so much about people by what they hang on the walls of their homes. Artwork, pictures, notable quotes – it all provides a window into what's most important to them. In the NFL, a position group's meeting room is its "home" at team headquarters. At the Raiders' complex in Alameda, California, the offensive line celebrates black pioneers.

The Tuskegee Airmen are featured prominently in signs, Penn said. The World War II heroes from Tuskegee University exemplified bravery and excellence during an era in which most of those in power believed black people were incapable of displaying either. There's also a nod to the 1965-66 Texas Western men's basketball team, Hudson revealed. That squad (the school has since changed its name to the University of Texas at El Paso) became the first to win the Division I championship with an all-black starting lineup. Nowadays, a top-notch hoops starting five in college or NBA that isn't all-black is the outlier.

Throughout the Raiders' O-line room, black pride is apparent by design. "We've got those signs up and other signs like that about different things in [black] history," Penn said. "We have all those things on the wall because this is something that is different … and we're embracing it. We don't talk about it all the time. It's not that we really have to. We understand it. That's what is important."

Said Jackson, the pup of the group: "We don't shy away from it all."

The NFL is almost 70 percent black. Among tackles and guards, though, there's much more diversity. At those spots, African-Americans only slightly outnumber whites. Whites, however, overwhelmingly hold it down at center: They occupy more than 80 percent of the positions. What's up with that? Sociologist Harry Edwards, who has spent decades observing the NFL, has some ideas.

"It's not that NFL teams sit there and say, 'Oh, my God, he's black. We don't want him as a center,' " Edwards told The Undefeated recently. "What happens is, teams see a white center coming out of Wisconsin or coming out of Ohio State or coming out of Stanford, and say, 'Hey, that guy can call at this level.' It's not that they're excluding anybody.

"They're looking to be successful, according to the pattern that has worked. This is why it gets to be so difficult to shatter tradition. You can't just come in and show somebody that a black center is as good as a white center in order to displace that tradition. You've got to show that he is better, which is what cornerbacks did, which is what wide receivers did and, increasingly, is what quarterbacks are doing."

The Raiders didn't plan to assemble a soul squad along the line. It just happened in the process of fixing something that had been broken for years.

Problems along the O-line were as much a part of the Raiders' recent bleak history as the revolving door in the head coach's office. The once-dominant Raiders – during an eight-year stretch from 1976-83, they went 80-37 with three Super Bowl championships – had become a punchline. After he was hired in 2012, Reggie McKenzie, only one of seven African-American general managers in the 32-team league, set out to end the jokes.

Over the past three years, no team builder has invested more than McKenzie in assembling a successful offensive line. The Raiders have the cap numbers to prove it.

Jackson was part of McKenzie's lit 2014 draft, which was topped by superstar defensive end/linebacker Khalil Mack – with all due respect to Denver's Von Miller, no defensive player in the second half of the season has been more dominant than Mack – and also included the steal of the class: franchise quarterback Carr. To fill out the rest of the line, McKenzie put in work in free agency.

Before signing with the Raiders in 2014, Penn, in his 11th season the old head of the crew, played for Minnesota and Tampa Bay. He re-signed with Oakland in the offseason. Hudson left Kansas City for Oakland. Baltimore, which rarely makes glaring player-personnel mistakes, somehow let the uber-talented Osemele get away. Before landing with the Raiders in 2014, Howard spent time with three other teams. In particular, Hudson and Osemele have been high-impact additions. They were super in Oakland's stunning 38-24 come-from-behind victory in Week 13 at the Oakland Coliseum.

Trailing, 24-9, in the third quarter, the Raiders scored 29 unanswered points in their sixth consecutive win. Impressive on film, Hudson and Osemele are even better in person.

"Hudson really had them dialed in," Buffalo outside linebacker Lorenzo Alexander said. "As far as calling out our blitzes and getting them set, he did a good job. And Osemele, he's one of the best, if not the best, guards in the game. At his size [Osemele is listed at 6 feet 5, 330 pounds], he's like a tackle.

He's long and athletic. He does a great job of being a physical presence. Their whole line … they just work well together. They run the ball, they [pass] protect. They're just really good."

Dallas and Oakland.

Those teams have game's best O-lines, astute observers of NFL line play say. Which one is No. 1? For the past few years, the Cowboys were considered way ahead of the pack. Now, with how the Raiders run the ball and protect Carr so well, there's suddenly room for debate.

"You can make a compelling case for both," ESPN analyst Mark Schlereth said. "And they're built the opposite way."

The Cowboys have had as much success picking linemen in the draft as the Raiders have had in free agency.

With the 16th pick in the 2014 draft, Dallas selected Zack Martin, who played left tackle at Notre Dame, but was taken with guard in mind. They added Martin after taking left tackle Tyron Smith ninth in 2011 and center Travis Frederick with the next-to-last pick in the opening round in 2013. At 11-1, Dallas has the NFL's best record. The Cowboys rank among the top five in the league in total yards per game, rushing yards per game and points per game. The Raiders rank ahead of the Cowboys in passing yards per game and points per game. You get the idea: Both O-lines are loaded with ballers.

"From an addition standpoint with free agency, the Raiders have done a great job with what they're trying to accomplish, just as far as being able to play 'bully' football," said Schlereth, who played guard in the NFL for 12 years and was on three Super Bowl winners. "In this day and age, where everybody wants to spread you and throw the ball, to be able to condense formations and essentially beat you up at the line of scrimmage gives you dual-threat ability.

"It allows you to control tempo, control time of possession and wear a defense down. The crazy thing is, most of the time, if you have a really good offensive lineman, he doesn't hit the free-agent market. The Raiders have gotten some of the best free agents out there. It's pretty impressive what Reggie McKenzie has been able to do, in terms of basically picking the free agent market clean."

Some would tend to give Cowboys' O-line the edge over the Raiders because they seem to run the ball better (the Raiders are seventh in rushing yards per game). Not so fast, Schlereth says. There's no doubt that the Cowboys are the gold standard in the running game. But the Raiders match up well on the ground with any top 10 team.

With the running game, it's not necessarily about total yards. When you run the ball successfully is just as important as what shows up on that stat sheet.

"Just because a team averages 136 yards or whatever running the ball, a lot of people will say, 'Hey. This team is great at running the ball.' Then you go and look at the film, and 70 yards are 'empty yards,' " Schlereth said. "On third down and 19, yeah, we popped a 12-yard draw. And we did that three times. And we never converted a first down. We're going to talk about how well we run the ball?

"What really matters is to be able to run the ball in situations where you have to. To be able to dictate to teams. Third down and two, I'm gonna cram it down your throat. For the Raiders, that means we're gonna run it down the left side, which is outstanding with Penn and Osemele, and there's nothing you can do about it. Show me a team that can convert on third and two or third down and three, and I'll show you a team that knows how to freaking run the ball. And that's what sets Oakland and Dallas … apart from most everybody else in the NFL."

Don't mess with Carr. If you do, you'll have to answer to his dudes. The Raiders' O-line is fiercely protective of the young superstar. It shows in Carr's clean uniform.

The Raiders have given up only 13 sacks – the fewest in the NFL. They're second in pressure percentage, which takes into account a passer's percentage of dropbacks in which he is sacked, under duress or hit, according to ESPN Stats & Information.

Those numbers have helped Carr achieve these: 3,375 passing yards, a 65.5 completion percentage and 24 touchdowns with only five interceptions. Also, Carr this season has emerged as one of the game's best closers. You can't discount the safety he feels in his rise to the top.

The Raiders' O-line has every right to be proud about that.

"I see our quarterback playing better and better each week. He's looking like a guy who can be a Super Bowl MVP," Osemele said. "He's such a young guy, so it's incredible to see that. I also see an offensive line that's pretty hell-bent on protecting him. When you have the combination of those things, it's a special thing."

The Raiders' O-line hopes to pave the way for many more special things. "One of our goals at the beginning of the season," Jackson, the right guard said, "was to be the first all-minority group of linemen to be in and win a Super Bowl."

From watching Oakland's O-line, you get the feeling that that's a goal definitely within its reach. The group would have to break a whole lot of new ground for black folk along the way. Of course, that is exactly what it has been doing each week.

Raiders' offensive linemen have their own set of rules and it is working
By Jarrett Bell
December 8, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. – There are rules and then there are the grown-men rules that govern the meanest and baddest position group at the Oakland Raiders headquarters.

"Every time we watch film, everybody is going to get fined for something," Raiders right tackle Austin Howard said to USA TODAY Sports. "It's a way of life."

Fail to finish your block? Dock 'em.

Manage to go from whistle to whistle without engaging a defender? Uh-oh. That's violation of the "no-touch" rule.

This standard applies in a game or even in practice.

Guess they mean it when they say they want to be physical.

“You’ve got to touch something,” Howard said. “Sometimes as an offensive lineman it happens that you can’t touch a guy when the film is on you. We have fun with that.”

The so-called “fines” (of undisclosed amounts) are put into a pot that covers the cost of a big dinner for the unit at the end of the season. But that’s not the essential rub of this.

It’s about accountability to your fellow lineman.

As offensive line coach Mike Tice put it, “They’re just relentless with their attacks on each other.”

You can’t survive on this unit by having thin skin. And you surely don’t want to be the one getting slammed for a “kiss-butt” violation.

What’s that?

Said Tice, “They’re not allowed to tell me, ‘Coach, that’s a great idea!’ “

Maybe all of this in-your-face accountability somewhat explains why the unit – which heads into Thursday night’s AFC West showdown at the Kansas City Chiefs having allowed an NFL-low 12 sacks – is one of the best in the NFL.

On top of the talent, size, athleticism and chemistry, the group that GM Reggie McKenzie has assembled is overflowing with pride, which in turn in reinforced by the Kangaroo Court penalties.

“We have a bunch of grown men in our room,” said all-pro left guard Kelechi Osemele. “So we think it’s important to be the best at what we do. Otherwise, why are you really doing it? That’s everybody’s mentality.”

Osemele was a late scratch for Thursday's game due to illness. The timing is hardly ideal for Oakland.

The line needs to make a major statement at Arrowhead Stadium, when it will be matched up against one of the NFL’s best defensive fronts. The Chiefs – who lead the NFL with 25 takeaways -- create all sorts of matchup problems with the middle of the line anchored by nose tackle Dontari Poe, while superior rushers come off the edge in Dee Ford, Tamba Hali and Justin Houston.

“We know what they bring,” left tackle Donald Penn said. “It’s going to be tough.”

The line will miss the powerful Osemele, who stands out as the undeniable alpha male of the physical, violent unit. The offseason free agent additions of Osemele and center Rodney Hudson were critical in completing the unit.

Tice, with a history of coaching effective lines, calls Hudson one of the smartest linemen he’s had. It has made a difference in collaborating with quarterback Derek Carr in calling protections.

“He’s like a grumpy old man,” Tice said. “He’s yelling at all the guys bigger than he is. He’s the smallest one, but the smartest one, too.”

Tice recalled what he told McKenzie after last season when addressing how to improve the unit.

“When the one in the room who is most intense is me, that’s not good,” Tice said. “We were missing a guy with a certain intensity, an attitude, a will to finish. A jerk.”

Meaning that with all due respect, they have that in Osemele, who says he still carries a chip on his shoulder after being slighted as a recruit coming out of high school.

“You got to stay motivated, bro,” Osemele said.

The self-check system undoubtedly helps in that regard. Imagine the grief that a lineman gets if he allows Carr, the golden quarterback, to take a hit.

“Gabe (Jackson, right guard) tells me all the time, even if his guy came and brushed my shoulder pad, he tells me, ‘I’m sorry, man,’ “ Carr said.

Yet when it happens, you can be sure someone has to pay up.

QB Derek Carr

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders QB Derek Carr riding high, and taking team with him
By Vic Tafur
November 2, 2016

Derek Carr likes to say the game has slowed down for him this season, and his statistics and the Raiders' 6-2 record certainly bear out that assessment.

On the other hand, the national hype train is gaining speed and about to go off the tracks. The third-year quarterback is being called a favorite for the NFL MVP award by many of the hot-air bags.

ESPN's Stephen A. Smith even said Carr was the best QB in the league under 30 years old. When asked, "What about Russell Wilson?" — he of the Super Bowl ring — Smith said that Wilson was also in the conversation.

Pretty heady, if not a little premature, stuff for a QB who was 0-10 two years ago. Carr tries to tune out all of it, as the voices get louder and more excited leading to Sunday's prime-time tilt between Oakland and Denver (6-2).

"It means nothing," Carr said before practice Wednesday. "It's cool (since) as a little kid (you were) thinking about those kinds of things, but that's probably where it ends for me. …

"I would rather not hear anything. I would rather just go about my business and hang out with my family. ... Trust me, I'm very honored and thankful, don't get me wrong, but at this point in the year, that stuff is not for me."

Carr was named the AFC Offensive Player of the Week on Wednesday after becoming just the third quarterback in NFL history to throw for at least 500 yards (513) and four TDs in a game without an interception. He also broke Cotton Davidson's franchise record of 427 yards passing in a game.

For the season, Carr has completed 66.3 percent of his passes for 2,321 yards with 17 touchdowns against three interceptions.

"He's had glimpses," Denver linebacker Von Miller said. "All the success that he's having this season is really not a surprise to me. I've seen it in him. I've seen the type of quarterback that he can be."

Carr won't get into where he thought he would be at this stage of his career, in Year 3, but he does admit that he "was swimming" upstream against fast defenders and blitzes his rookie year. He focused on getting better, and didn't look at where he ranked then or now.

"I never really saw myself, put myself on a list … or anything like that," Carr said. "I just wanted to get better, I just didn't want to be the same and that's not only in football but just in life. I always want to get better at everything I do. You spend a lot of hours (training) that people don't see. … It's cool to see it paying off.

"But there's still so much that I want to do and get better at, so I'm just not going to stop."

Blessed with a great arm and an early NFL education (thanks to being the younger brother of former Texans and 49ers quarterback David), Carr has been working on getting his footwork down, making the right reads and letting plays develop.

Sunday's win over the Bucs was his best game yet, NFL Films senior producer Greg Cosell said.

"He was very settled in the pocket and threw on balance," Cosell told Yahoo. "He had clean footwork, with more consistency than he has had in that area to this point. The Buccaneers' lack of a pass rush helped, but Carr was disciplined in the pocket.

"While Carr has always had excellent throwing skills, he has a tendency to play a little fast in the pocket and he has had footwork issues."

Carr has thrown an excellent deep ball from the start, but sometimes would resort to the check-down — or shorter yardage and safer — option to avoid getting sacked. And his footwork would fail him when he did pull the trigger.

In his rookie season, Carr was 15-for-71 passes that traveled over 20 yards in the air for 565 yards and two touchdowns with two interceptions, according to Pro Football Focus. His 23.9 percent accuracy rate was the worst among quarterbacks who took at least half of their team's snaps.

Last season, Carr improved to 25-for-66 for 831 yards and 12 touchdowns with four interceptions.

And through eight games this season, he has connected on 14 of 27 deep passes for 469 yards and five touchdowns with one interception.

Carr might be the best in the league now at dropping high-arcing passes over the shoulders of receivers such as Amari Cooper — see the 34-yard touchdown pass Sunday — and Michael Crabtree.

And a lot of that credit goes to his offensive line, for giving him time and confidence that maybe he didn't have two years ago.

Offensive line coach Mike Tice "is doing a great job of protecting him," Denver head coach Gary Kubiak said. "The thing with Derek, he's throwing it more than anybody in football and he's turned it over less than anybody in football. That tells you the growth of him.

"That's what this league is about. Can you be aggressive? Can you go out there and throw it around? Can you keep us in games and not turn the ball over?"

Carr has been sacked nine times, the fewest in the NFL. After his game-winning 41-yard touchdown pass to Seth Roberts on Sunday, Carr first celebrated with linemen Donald Penn, Kelechi Osemele, Rodney Hudson, Gabe Jackson and Austin Howard before running downfield to hug Roberts.

"I love them," Carr said. "I am thankful for them. They work their tails off just so I can stand back there and throw the ball. … It just hit me like, man, I want to celebrate with them. Me and Seth, we will catch up later. Save my big guys from running all the way down there. They fought their tails off all game, so I thought I'd save them some time."

They haven't had much to celebrate against the Broncos, though the Raiders' defense did lead a 15-10 win in Denver in December. In four career starts against the Broncos, Carr has thrown for only 734 yards, with six touchdown passes and four interceptions.

“For the last however many years, they’ve been one of the best (defenses) we’ve ever seen in this league,” Carr said. “They’re always a good challenge for us, but we’re definitely looking forward to it.”

His teammates are, as they have long believed in Carr, maybe even more so this season. Carr has orchestrated seven fourth-quarter or overtime comebacks in his 40 starts, and three of them have come in the past two months.

Why wouldn’t the Raiders have confidence?

“We’ve got No. 4,” defensive end Khalil Mack said after Sunday’s win. “He’s going to let it rip, let it fly, and he’s got Coop and Crab.”

Mack went into a little more detail about his friend last week.

“You talk about the ultimate competitor,” Mack said. “Derek walks around with a fierceness in his eyes. It almost scares you a little bit if you look him in the eye because he is a fierce competitor. He is focused, will-driven and he is going to do anything to make the team win.

“So, to have a guy like that in the locker room, it only pumps you up more.”

That means more to Carr than any MVP chatter.

Derek Carr’s values, football savvy instilled by his family
By Ron Kroichick
December 23, 2016

BAKERSFIELD — Long before he became a revelation in Oakland, leading the Raiders to the NFL playoffs for the first time in 14 years, Derek Carr was a gregarious kid in this dusty Central Valley city, receiving a football education from his older brothers.

Derek was about 10 at the time of his first memorable lesson. He dived to tackle an opposing player, got the wind knocked out of him and retreated to the bench. He declared he was done for the day, an unacceptable outcome to David and Darren Carr.

David Carr, then Fresno State’s record-setting quarterback and soon to become the No. 1 overall pick in the 2002 NFL draft, approached his younger brother. So did Darren, an imposing man who later played defensive tackle at the University of Houston.

“He’s sitting there tearing up a little bit,” Darren recalled this month, in his office at Bakersfield Christian High. “We’re a Christian family, but what I told him was a little intense: You need to get your butt back out there, because you’re embarrassing yourself right now. I was just trying to toughen him up.”

This mission clearly worked. Derek Carr, now 25 and in his third season as Oakland’s starting quarterback, suddenly finds himself a fashionable Most Valuable Player candidate. He’s driving this Raiders renaissance, helping lift a proud franchise out of the sporting netherworld.

The Chronicle spent a day in Bakersfield recently with Derek Carr's parents, Sheryl and Rodger, and his brothers David (a former NFL quarterback) and Darren (head coach at Bakersfield Christian High School).

That counts as an exhilarating experience for Rodger Carr, Derek's dad and a Raiders fan dating to his childhood outside Santa Cruz. He recently greeted visitors to his Bakersfield home wearing a sleeveless Raiders T-shirt over his workout clothes, happy to share stories of his youngest son's rise to prominence.

Maturity? Rodger and his wife, Sheryl, couldn't find young Derek after one of David's games at Fresno State. They scoured the stadium, only to discover he had talked his way into the visiting locker room to console the losing quarterback.

Football savvy? Once, at age 9 or 10, Derek changed a play at the line of scrimmage. His coach didn't appreciate this improvisational bravado and abruptly removed him from the game. Rodger complimented Derek on his instincts, but reminded him to listen to his coach.

Arm strength? Another time, Derek played catch with David to help him loosen his arm. David was an NFL rookie at the time, flinging passes 50 yards — and 11-year-old Derek would fling them right back, the same 50 yards. "Dad, this ain't normal," David told Rodger.

Toughness? In one junior high basketball game, Derek prevented a breakaway layup with a football-like, takedown foul. David and Darren, watching from the bleachers and remembering the youth football moment a few years earlier, exulted.

"We were so pumped," David said. "We were like, 'OK, he's tough. He's going to be all right.'"

Derek Carr's flair for the dramatic also traces to his youth. David is 12 years older than Derek, Darren is 9 years older, and all three Carr boys had a superhero fixation. David loved Superman, Darren embraced the Incredible Hulk, and Derek was obsessed with Batman.

That's why life-size mannequins of each character are scattered around the 3,000-square-foot workout facility at the family's Bakersfield compound. Or consider the large painting in the living room of the parents' adjacent home, commissioned by David, showing each son's face on the body of his superhero.

Derek's affinity for Batman runs deep. He wore a Batman T-shirt under his uniform during games in high school and college, and his family dog these days is a Labrador named "Bruce Wayne."

His penchant for bold plays in high school — trying to run through or jump over prospective tacklers — also prompted an admonition, and Batman analogy, from David.

"I remember telling him, 'You don't need to wear the cape all the time,'" David said. "You can just be Bruce Wayne 90 percent of the time. Then, every once in a while, you'll need to throw on the cape and save the day."

Funny, that sounds like Derek's 2016 season with the Raiders.

Sheryl Carr, the music director at a Bakersfield church, is the daughter of a longtime pastor. Rodger, who stands 6-foot-5, averaged nearly 30 points per game at San Lorenzo Valley High in Felton (Santa Cruz County), then had his college basketball career at Cal State Bakersfield cut short by a back injury.

So it makes sense that Derek is deeply religious and found his calling in sports, much like his brothers. David, despite absorbing an NFL-record 76 sacks as a rookie with the expansion Houston Texans, lasted 10 years in the league. Darren didn't play professionally but now is the head coach at Bakersfield Christian; David is offensive coordinator and Rodger coaches the quarterbacks.

Derek always was outgoing and consumed by sports. Sheryl recalled taking him to a Los Angeles Dodgers game at age 3, watching in bemusement as he peppered the adult stranger sitting next to them with statistics about each player.

Similarly, he joined David for a Fresno television interview at age 10, lobbying for his brother to win the Heisman Trophy. The next spring, Derek attended the NFL draft in New York, introduced himself to then-Commissioner Paul Tagliabue and promised, "I'll be back."

All along, David and Darren alternately hassled and groomed their kid brother — from playfully locking him in closets to earnestly counseling him.

"They really protected me," Derek said. "I remember riding in the car to the mall, and one of them would have a talk with me to teach me something. It was cool to be that much younger, because I got to learn from them and everything they did."

The Carr family followed David to Houston in 2002, after the Texans drafted him. Derek attended junior high there and played his first two years of varsity football at Clemens High in Sugar Land, Texas. Later, the family returned to California, where he spent his senior season at Bakersfield Christian.

He sharpened his football education in an uncommon way while in Houston. Derek, even at age 11 and 12, sat in Texans quarterback meetings with David, asked questions and studied film with him after school. He often threw passes to All-Pro wide receiver Andre Johnson on the practice field.

"Then he'd go back and play with his 12-year-old buddies and say, 'This game's easy,'" David said, chuckling.

Now, in retrospect, it's clear: Derek was getting a jump on his own NFL career, not only in strategic knowledge but also in learning to interact with older people.

"He was always one step ahead of everybody that way," Darren said.

Rodger and Sheryl Carr preached faith and family ahead of football, but Derek wandered off course his first year at Fresno State, swept up in the party-heavy college life. This led to a stern conversation with his mother and candid letter from his girlfriend (now his wife, Heather).

Mom's message, essentially: To whom much is given, much is required.

By his family's account, Derek eventually got his act together. By his account, his strong spiritual beliefs were reinforced during a speaking appearance last offseason with David.

They spoke to nearly 1,000 people at an event outside Fresno, mostly sharing the Gospel and how they overcame their struggles — Derek's personal issues in college and David's bumpy NFL career (a 23-56 record as a starter). Then, as they were finishing, Derek told the group he felt like God had spoken to him and that someone in the crowd planned to commit suicide.

Derek encouraged the person to have hope. One young man soon ran up to Derek and hugged him; another followed suit with David. And, according to Derek, a third high school-age kid approached the Carrs in the parking lot and acknowledged he also was contemplating suicide.

"He felt like a failure — he didn't get good grades and felt like he had no purpose," David said. "That's what we talked about, his purpose. It was pretty powerful."

Said Derek: "I had never experienced anything like that. It was amazing."

Derek credits his mom for laying the foundation of his faith. And make no mistake, he connects his spirituality and success with the Raiders.

Last year, according to his father, Derek put it this way: "Dad, I have so much peace out there. I can't explain it, but I have absolute peace. Nothing fazes me."

That became evident this season, as Derek led a string of stirring second-half comebacks. Most memorably, he put on his proverbial cape and saved the day against New Orleans (14-point deficit) in the season opener Sept. 11 and against Buffalo (15-point deficit) on Dec. 4.

The quarterback, who wears No. 4 in honor of Brett Favre, also has rallied his team past Baltimore, Tampa Bay, Houston, Carolina and San Diego in the fourth quarter or overtime.

Do not dismiss the value of Carr's people skills in his leadership of Oakland's offense. He quickly earned the respect of older teammates, which didn't surprise Ryan Clanton, a good friend from his Bakersfield days.

"Derek makes everyone feel important," said Clanton, a former offensive lineman at Oregon. "Not a lot of guys do that. He will motivate people to pull more weight than they ever thought they could."

Or, as Raiders offensive tackle Donald Penn said, "He leads us like a 10-year guy."

Carr's brothers expect nothing less.

Clutch performances are latest step in Raiders QB Derek Carr's evolution

By Lindsay Jones
November 4, 2016

Derek Carr is developing a reputation — the kind that few NFL quarterbacks can boast — in his locker room.

“He's the guy that's going to lead us to that comeback win. He's been playing tremendous, just off the charts. We know with him, never to count us out late in games,” Oakland Raiders running back Latavius Murray told USA TODAY Sports.

That confidence has been hard earned. From throwing a game-winning two-point conversion with 47 seconds left in a Week 1 road win against the New Orleans Saints to his overtime touchdown pass to Seth Roberts that produced a thrilling and improbable win against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on Sunday, Carr is proving to be one of the league's most clutch performers.

But this isn’t a sudden development. It’s part of a gradual evolution from rookie starter in 2014, to a rising star last year, to MVP candidate now.

Carr has heard about his candidacy — only because strangers have brought it up to him. He's honored to be mentioned but doesn’t want to engage in any discussion about his credentials.

“I never really saw myself, put myself in a list or a ranking or anything like that. I just wanted to get better," Carr said Wednesday.

"You put the work in, you get up in the mornings before anyone else wants to and things like that. It’s cool to see it paying off, but there’s still so much on my mind and in my heart that I want to do and get better at, so I’m just not going to stop.”

“I think it’s a lot of things Derek is doing better," Oakland coach Jack Del Rio said. "The timing with receivers, another year in our system, executing plays and taking turns at plays and knowing what the issues are and where the answers are, mastering the protection and understanding how to get the ball out when he needs to or where he needs to.

"He’s more mature. He’s a year older and wiser, so I think he’s really played with great poise.”

Del Rio declined to engage in speculation that Carr could be in consideration for that MVP award, but his numbers and contributions to the Raiders’ 6-2 start say plenty.

Consider: No quarterback in the NFL has attempted more passes (323) than Carr, yet he’s thrown just four interceptions and been sacked only nine times. His 17 touchdown passes rank third in the league, behind only veterans Matt Ryan and Drew Brees. And Carr has earned the ultimate trust of his coach and teammates.

“Over the course of the game, we know we need to go out there and make plays. But when it's clutch time, his intensity is at an all-time high,” Murray said. “You can sense that when you're in the huddle, that this guy is going to do it once again.”

What the Raiders seem to have discovered is that Carr is the rare player who can almost single-handedly make up for shortcomings elsewhere. And to be sure, though the Raiders are off to their best start since 2001, they remain a flawed team. From committing an NFL-record 23 penalties last week, to a defense that’s ranked second-to-last in yards allowed, there are reasons why Oakland shouldn’t be atop the AFC West.

But that’s why Carr has become so valuable as part of a core of young players — it includes pass rusher Khalil Mack, receiver Amari Cooper and Murray — that seems to have changed the culture of the Raiders in the course of just three years. Oakland has also enjoyed the resurrection of receiver Michael Crabtree's career while benefiting from the emergence of other weapons like receiver Seth Roberts, who caught the game-winner against Tampa Bay, and tight end Mychal Rivera.

"Last year, we learned how to compete. And now we're learning how to make plays to close games out and make the plays that need to be made to win. Those guys are very key," Del Rio said. "The time they've spent, being on the same page in the critical moments, that often separates winning from losing. I've shown confidence in them a couple times, and they've rewarded it with their execution.

"It helps our football team build the belief that we're going to win."

Carr's biggest test comes Sunday night against the Denver Broncos and their top-ranked pass defense. Carr is 1-3 in four previous games against the Broncos but won the most recent meeting in Denver last year after throwing a pair of touchdowns.

It's the first of three prime-time games for the Raiders in the next six weeks, all chances for the rest of the country to see what Carr's teammates have been experiencing for weeks.

"Right now he's playing at a special level, and it separates him from a lot of other quarterbacks in this league right now and putting him in the conversation with the best of them," Murray said.

Derek Carr is so safe, he's dangerous
By Mina Kimes
November 22, 2016

Go back to Week 1. Raiders vs. Saints. It's the beginning of the fourth quarter, and Oakland is losing 24-13. Third-year quarterback Derek Carr takes a snap, drops back a few steps and then surveys the field--calmly, like a father waiting for his children to appear on the steps of their school. After a moment passes, he slings a beautifully arched pass to wide receiver Amari Cooper, who has somehow crept behind the Saints' secondary. It's a 43-yard gain and another highlight-reel throw for Carr.

Now go back and watch again. Instead of waiting for Carr to release the ball, pay attention to everything that happens beforehand. Watch the Raiders' tackles shoot their arms out and manhandle their defenders, while the guards refuse to cede an inch. Watch the chasm that opens up between the offensive line and the quarterback, an expanse of green that never seems to close. Watch the clock as the seconds tick by.

That's what Derek Carr remembers from that day. The time and the space and, more than anything, the smacking of pads and the crunching of bones and the terrible cries of mountain-sized men being knocked around by his blockers. He remembers dropping behind his offensive line as thunderous collisions unfolded in front of him, bearing witness to a level of violence that still leaves him awestruck.

"You can see it on film and you can see it on TV and you can see it in person," he says. "But when you're behind it?"

Behind 10-foot eyelashes, his blue eyes widen.

"You can hear it."

There comes a point in every story about Derek Carr when his older brother's name is invoked, typically as source material for the young quarterback's innate gifts -- and, until recently, his perceived flaws. David Carr, the Houston Texans' No. 1 overall pick in the 2002 draft, famously went bust. When Derek entered the draft in 2014, he had put up Heisman-worthy numbers at Fresno State, but David's story lingered in scouting reports like a bad Yelp review, and several QB-starved teams (including Houston) passed on the younger brother, sending him tumbling into the second round.

Their loss. After two and a half seasons with the Raiders, Derek has bloomed into a viable MVP candidate, steering his team to seven wins on the back of an exhilarating aerial attack. Heading into Monday night's tilt with the Texans in Mexico City, he has thrown 17 TDs and just three interceptions, a ratio that puts him in elite company and could set him up for a mammoth new deal. "When the ball is in his hands late in the game, everybody believes something big is gonna happen," says Matt Hasselbeck, a former NFL quarterback who now works as an ESPN analyst. "I saw that with Brett Favre when I was his teammate."

And so it is that Derek's story has finally subsumed his origin myth -- and that his brother's failure, once an indelible part of that record, has faded away like a discredited theory. But to ignore it would also be a mistake. Because while Carr has risen on the strength of his unique talents, he has soared because of the giants who stand in front of him -- those violent actors who buy him room to breathe, a luxury David never experienced as a young quarterback. "I've been able to see complete, total opposite sides of it," Carr says. "I saw my brother in Houston have nothing. And I have our offensive line, which I think is the best in the NFL."

The contrast is astonishing. David, who played behind a rotating cast of human turnstiles on the then newly formed Texans, was sacked a record 76 times during his rookie year, which is more than Derek has been taken down since entering the NFL. This year the Raiders' offensive line has allowed just 11 sacks and 21 quarterback hits, ranking first in the league through Week 10. They've held up against stiff competition. The Broncos' dominant front seven, which entered their Nov. 6 game against the Raiders with the best pressure percentage of any team since 2008, according to ESPN Stats & Information, hassled Carr on a mere 21 percent of his dropbacks, Denver's worst performance to that point of the season.

To hear Carr tell it, battling Von Miller & Co. was like flying over traffic in a private jet. "We just played the best pass rushers in the NFL and it was the most comfortable I've felt," he says. The Raiders began building the current iteration of the line in 2014, the year rookie Carr became the team's starter. Right tackle Menelik Watson was already on the roster; GM Reggie McKenzie added left tackle Donald Penn in free agency, then selected Gabe Jackson, the team's right guard, in the draft. The Raiders signed veteran center Rodney Hudson in 2015, then splurged a year later on Kelechi Osemele, arguably the league's most formidable guard. To ensure that Osemele could continue playing inside, McKenzie re-signed Penn, and the line that fans call Carr Insurance was born.

This influx of talent has come at a price. Thanks in part to their quarterback's cheap contract, the Raiders currently devote $37.7 million in cap dollars to the offensive line, $3 million more than what any other team pays. When asked if he's aware of how expensive his line is, Carr nods. "As it should be," he says. "Mr. McKenzie told me from the beginning, when I was named the starter, he said, 'We're gonna build this thing around you.' They see that I'm valuable to them. They want to protect me."

Donald Penn remembers the first time he saw Derek Carr at training camp. As he and the other starters looked on, the rookie quarterback fired bombs to the Raiders' backups, showing off his crisp, flawless throwing motion. "I was like, 'This kid's got something about him,'" Penn says. "He carried himself with a swagger."

Penn -- older, tattooed, a little brash -- would seem to have little in common with Carr, who is almost comically wholesome, the sort of athlete destined to star in ads for milk and comfortable jeans. "I've never heard him say a cuss word!" Penn says. But Carr, who grew up hanging around David in locker rooms for more than a decade (when he was 6, he says, he used to eat lunch with his brother in the high school cafeteria), has always slid into new groups with ease. When he became the Raiders' starter, he began attending the offensive line meetings and tagging along for their steakhouse dinners, gawking as his massive teammates overloaded the table with food. He can recite information about their hobbies and their families, and he's shared his strong Christian faith with them. He often tells them he loves them.

While Carr has bonded with the entire group, he's grown closest with Hudson, the center who sets protections during games. Carr says he always pulls up a chair next to Hudson during team meetings and that the two of them will often stay up late on Saturday nights, bouncing ideas off each other in the team hotel. "We just go to another level in our discussions -- stuff we don't want everyone to hear because their brains might explode," he says with a laugh.

Hudson, a soft-spoken Alabama native, says he'll be out at dinner, look at his phone and see that "DC" has been texting him videos of plays. "We're in constant communication," he says.

The Raiders' offensive line is unique in several ways, aside from being the most expensive. Its starting unit is composed entirely of black players; Penn says they've hung posters of the NCAA-championship-winning 1966 Texas Western basketball team and the Tuskegee Airmen, other groups that shared similar distinctions, in their practice room. It's also the heaviest line in football, with the average lineman weighing in at 324.2 pounds. That runs counter to the trend of teams employing lighter, more athletic linemen who can move side to side while blocking.

Raiders O-line coach Mike Tice says he wants blockers who are brainy and athletic, but he doesn't deny that he's assembled a group of road-grading sledgehammers. The line's muscle was on full display in the Denver game, when the Raiders averaged 5.1 yards per rush. At one point, the team ran the same play 10 times in a row, simply overpowering the Broncos' defensive line with brute force.

In addition to tallying knockdowns (Jackson, the right guard, is known for racking up pancake blocks), Tice also tracks takedowns, which occur when a lineman uses his hands to bring down a rusher. "People say you can't be physical pass-protecting -- they think you can only be physical in the run game. I disagree," he says. "Even if we're passing, I still want to knock guys down and keep the quarterback clean." Carr is known for his lightning-quick release, but Tice wants his line to buy him enough time so that he can set his feet before taking deep shots, especially against defenses that play tight coverage. "We pride ourselves on that," he says.

"When a quarterback can step into his throws and he's got an arm like Derek?" He chuckles. "People are in trouble."

When Carr tells stories about his linemen mauling defensive players, he omits the opponents' names "to be respectful." The 25-year-old is incredibly polite and relentlessly positive. It sometimes seems he was manufactured in a lab for franchise quarterbacks, designed to appeal to GMs and grandmothers alike. So it's a little jarring when he gets fired up in response to a question about his brother's career in Houston. "I feel so bad for him because their team sucked," he says. (If that seems milquetoast, consider that "sucked" might be the closest thing to profanity in Carr's vocabulary.) "That's a team you dream of playing. The Raiders, if we would've played that team -- it would've been ridiculous. We would've looked forward to that."

In high school, Carr was asked to write a paper making an argument on any topic. He elected to write about why the Texans shouldn't trade his brother. What quarterback wouldn't have struggled, young Derek wrote, with such a feeble supporting cast? He says David would've "absolutely" thrived behind the Raiders' line. "If I was on that Houston Texans team, I don't know if my body would've held up," he says. These days, when Carr sees quarterbacks like Russell Wilson and Sam Bradford scrambling behind slipshod protection, he cringes. "Honestly, I feel for them," he says. "I'm so thankful for what I have -- what we have."

It's impossible to overstate the impact that offensive line play has on the development of a young quarterback. Just look at Dallas, where rookie Dak Prescott is thriving. While Prescott is undeniably talented, he has also been blessed with the opportunity to throw passes behind a battalion of human tanks. Meanwhile, fellow rookie Carson Wentz struggled in Philadelphia after Lane Johnson, the Eagles' stud right tackle, was suspended and replaced with an inexperienced blocker.

David Carr, who now works for the NFL Network, says that, after being repeatedly sacked and hit, he grew wary of his protection and gradually developed a skittishness that took permanent hold in his psyche. He compares being an NFL rookie to childhood -- a little boy or girl who grows up without encountering danger is more likely to become fearless. "It's like that with quarterbacks," he says. "If you're never in a situation where it's a complete disaster, you can develop at a normal rate."

He sees that growth in Derek. In college, the younger Carr completed 72 percent of his passes in a clean pocket but just 29 percent when under duress, according to ESPN Stats & Information. During his first two years in the NFL, he posted QBR ratings of 9.7 when pressured and 7.8 under duress. This year his QBR when pressured has risen to 41.4, which was eighth best in the NFL heading into Week 11.

Because Carr mostly avoids contact, he's learned not to fear it, even during the rare plays when his linemen get pushed around. "They've brainwashed me," he says with a laugh. As he's grown more composed and intrepid, he's become comfortable making adjustments on the fly. Take, for example, that throw to Cooper, the 43-yard completion in the Saints game in Week 1. "Amari wasn't even supposed to get the ball," he says. "But because they protected me for so long, I saw that no one was going anywhere. So I looked off the safety for, like, three seconds, and he had to take the bait. That ball never should've been completed against that coverage."

Going forward, Carr says, he plans to continue taking more risks on the field, trying his hand at creative looks and passes. "It's helped me take my game to another level," he says. In Oakland, he has the freedom to experiment -- and the time, and the space.

Raiders star Amari Cooper learned to catch a football on this Miami blacktop
By Jimmy Durkin
October 28, 2016

MIAMI — Amari Cooper wanted the game-winning touchdown, no matter the consequences.

This wasn't a stadium packed with 70,000 NFL fans, but the blacktop basketball court at The Barnyard, an after-school program and summer camp in the Coconut Grove neighborhood of Miami where Cooper grew up.

The football games there were legendary, and Gary Wilcox, a counselor now in his 21st year at The Barnyard, was Cooper's first quarterback. He has a hint of guilt when he talks about his game-winning connection with the Raiders' star wide receiver.

"It was a slant. I think I threw the ball a little too hard," Wilcox said, walking himself and a reporter through the route on that very same blacktop on a visit during the Raiders weeklong stay in Florida.

The problem? A tree that stood tall and proud in the back of the makeshift end zone.

"I knew it was a little too far," Cooper said, recalling that pass this week. "I had a feel. I know the area we were playing in. I still wanted to go catch it because it gave me a good feeling to catch a ball at The Barnyard because everybody was so competitive."

Cooper made the catch and then … bam, he slammed right into the tree.

"I had the biggest knot on my face," Cooper said.

"He'll blame me for that," Wilcox said. "That was my bad, Amari. I led you a little too far. But he caught the ball."

Cooper caught a lot of balls here. Situated about a stone's throw from both his house and elementary school, Cooper attended The Barnyard from ages 5 to 12. The three-hour after-school program was enjoyable, but full-day summer camp was his favorite.

For his mother, Michelle Green, a single mother of five, the nonprofit center's free programs were a godsend.

"It was hard to afford after-school programs when I'm a working a low-wage job," Green said. "It meant a lot to me as far as giving them a place to go, knowing they would be safe and being able to do their homework."

Cooper never struggled to find inspiration to get his schoolwork done.

"We would always rush to do our homework because after work, we knew that it was football," Cooper said.

Wilcox and fellow Barnyard counselor Travis Swain — another one of Cooper's first quarterbacks — still remember meeting 5-year-old Amari.

"Very quiet, laidback, shy kid," Wilcox said. "Very observant at what his surroundings were."

"He would always be around with a football in his hand," Swain said. "Just throwing it up in the air, trying to see if he could get anybody to play with him."

That didn't prove difficult.

"We had so many kids that were super athletic," Wilcox said. "Every day or every other day when we had the opportunity to play sports, we would pick teams, and we'd be the quarterbacks just to see what the guys would do."

Fellow Raiders receiver Johnny Holton, a childhood friend of Cooper's who grew up in Coconut Grove, attended as well.

"That used to be the best times, playing football at The Barnyard," Holton said. "A lot of people running around trying to make plays."

"Amari wasn't the strongest or the fastest," Wilcox said, "but he was determined. He was always determined."

And he was never rattled.

"I do remember one incident," Swain said. "One kid was really downing him, 'Ah I'm better than you.' But Amari never gave any talk back. He never said anything. He just got back, lined up."

Within a few years, Wilcox started realizing they might be looking at something special.

"Between 8 and 9, he started transitioning," Wilcox said. "He starting doing some stuff that, you have an athletic gift that coaches can't coach — he had that. Some of the cuts, some of the instincts that he had, it was phenomenal."

Cooper's reserved nature has always been there.

"He was so quiet, and he never bragged about anything he did," Swain said. "You'd say, 'Great catch Amari,' and Amari would just throw you the football back and get ready to line up."

While notoriously stoic during interviews since he arrived in Alameda, Cooper's face lit up when he was asked about The Barnyard.

"They were great mentors to me," Cooper said of Wilcox and Swain. "They led me in the right direction. Gary was my first teacher of football. He taught me how to catch the ball and what to do with the ball after I caught it. It was really cool playing with them."

The football there was important, but the educational tools were a big deal as well.

Katie Oxenhorn, the center's current program director, said an emphasis is placed on teaching literacy and "always trying to work with them in ways that they're not working with them in the schools." That even includes psychological counseling.

The Barnyard has about 125 students, with a waiting list of 10-15 others hoping for a spot. For a low-income neighborhood like Coconut Grove, it's a saving grace.

"The area that we were from, it wasn't really bad at all back then," said Ashley Williams, the second-oldest of Cooper's three sisters, and a former Barnyard student as well. "But now, it's bad, and a lot of those guys are not really seeing the age that Amari's at now. They're either dead or in prison."

Cooper has shown his appreciation to The Barnyard. In January, he made a donation to a book drive that put two books in the hands of every student and delivered additional books to keep at the center. He's also in the process of selecting 25 children to receive a new pair of shoes — something near and dear to his heart.

"I didn't have any shoes growing up, and it was such an embarrassment," Cooper said.

But one time, in about the second grade, Wilcox gave Cooper his first pair of Jordans.

"That sticks with me forever," Cooper said.

As Wilcox explains it, "You just couldn't help but give back to Amari because he was a kid that he just clinged to you. He just had that type of spirit and motivation about himself."

Cooper still gives off that vibe. Those in the Raiders organization who see Cooper behind the scenes rave about him. In Coconut Grove, there's a definite pride in seeing that he's remained as down-to-earth as ever.

"I'm happy that he remained humble like that because it took him far," Williams said of her brother.

And to know the role The Barnyard played in his development brings an emotional connection to his former counselors.

"I have a tear of joy for him," Swain said, "and I share that tear as I watch on TV and remember all those days of him coming in and out of The Barnyard."

Wilcox is able to view Cooper's success as a confirmation for why he continues to pour his heart into his work.

"That's what you work for — to touch one life," Wilcox said. "And to touch that young man's life, and he still remembers that you were a part of his growing up, that's what you do it for."

And for Green, Cooper's mother: "It meant a lot to me," she said of The Barnyard. "They really enjoyed it."

But nothing shines through like Cooper's sincere appreciation for his time there.

"Most of my memories from being a young kid come from The Barnyard," Cooper said. "It's where I grew up. It's where I got my sense of everything."

Crabtree finds it's a blessing to give as well as receive

By Vic Tafur
October 13, 2016

After the students at the East Bay Center for the Performing Arts in Richmond sang and played instruments Monday night, Michael Crabtree walked to the stage and was dying to follow suit.

"Man, I wish I could sing," the Raiders' receiver said. "Oh, man ... I wish I could. Back in the day, my mom put me in choir but I was too nervous.

"My dad used to clean buildings, and there was a church and I would go with him. I would play the piano, the drums and sing ... because nobody was in there. I was a performer."

Crabtree's Crab5 Foundation helps inner city youth by promoting personal and professional development through the arts, music, sports and academics. Crabtree, in partnership with the Berklee City Music Network, visited the arts school along with Martin Shore, the director of the documentary, "Take Me to the River."

It's Crabtree's first charitable push in the Bay Area — he holds an annual camp extravaganza (there is a marching band) and other events for kids in his hometown of Dallas — as he develops a relationship with the East Bay Center for the Performing Arts.

"The sky is the limit," Crabtree told the 200 kids in attendance. "That sounds like a cliche, but I am proof. I work hard every day. Everything I want, I get it. I try hard, I try hard, I try hard and I get it. And I am motivated by you guys chasing your dreams, too. Let's do it."

Though he can't sing, Crabtree does have some dance moves, as seen by his footwork on catches in the back or side of the end zone. He dragged his feet perfectly before going out of bounds on a touchdown two weeks ago in Baltimore, and made a parallel-to-the-ground-while-tapping-down-the-toes TD catch Sunday. Crabtree is one of the big reasons the Raiders are 4-1 and one of the biggest surprises in the NFL.

Oakland head coach Jack Del Rio first rolled the dice in the season opener and went for a two-point conversion rather than a kick to tie with a minute left. It paid off when quarterback Derek Carr lobbed the ball up for Crabtree, who jumped over the defender and caught it for the 35-34 win in New Orleans.

"I am not new to it, man," Crabtree said. "We've had three games already that have come down to big plays on fourth down. You fight every down, and if you don't get it on second or third down, we have someone that believes in us in Coach. And I believe in Coach.

"Once he makes the call, it's just play ball."

Well ... not really. Carr checked out of offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave's call Sunday for a short slant route and — because of his confidence in Crabtree — instead had the receiver go for the end zone against San Diego cornerback Casey Hayward's single coverage.

“I just know that as soon as the ball goes up, I laugh,” Carr said Wednesday, “because I know what (the coaches) were thinking like, ‘We didn’t call that.’”

Some teammates even joke that the two-point call against the Saints was a run play, but Carr and Crabtree changed that one on the fly, too.

Crabtree doesn’t think that’s funny. This is serious business. He knows what Carr is thinking when they walk to the line of scrimmage, based on what the quarterback sees from the defense.

“We do it so much at practice, we don’t even have to look at each other,” Crabtree said. “We’re so competitive with each other, we’re just trying to win and I’m not trying to mess up his stats if I don’t catch it.”

Crabtree, 29, and Carr, 25, clicked when the receiver played with the quarterback’s brother, David, on the 49ers, and that friendship grew when they saw how much they enjoyed playing catch and wanting to be the best.

“Just two competitive guys playing ball together,” Crabtree said. “We’re so competitive, man, and I hold Derek up there and he holds me up in the same way.”

Crabtree is such a perfectionist at practice that Carr messes with him.

“I’ll try to throw it extra hard and early just to test him, because I want to see it, because it’s cool to me and he’ll just turn around and just catch it with one hand and it makes you feel like you can’t throw the ball hard at all,” Carr said. “It’s just effortless to him. Sometimes he’ll catch the ball and he’s not even looking. He’s already looking to make his move.

“He can get away with it because he’s gifted in that way. I wouldn’t tell little kids to try to catch like that.”

Crabtree tied his career high with 85 catches (for 922 yards) last year in his first season with the Raiders, and signed a four-year, $35 million extension. He is on pace for 93 catches, 1,136 yards and 16 touchdowns this season.

“He’s been tremendous,” Del Rio said. “He’s come in here from Day 1 and been a great teammate. He’s a leader in the locker room. He’s a tough guy. ... He’ll play when he’s banged up. He’s really a terrific competitor.”

Crabtree doesn’t talk about his injury-plagued six years with the 49ers, and there is no reason to do so.

“He’s got a fresh start, fresh opportunity here to show us what he’s about and that he loves football,” Del Rio said. “That’s all I’ve seen. I see a guy that loves football.”

And Crabtree loves the kids. His 2-year-old son, Michael III, helped Dad and belted out a note when they were on stage together for a minute Monday.

“It’s my first time attaching the Crab5 Foundation to anything here,” Crabtree said. “It’s only right that I get my feet in the dirt in the bay. Going to do all five, the sports, the education, the arts, the fashion and the music.

“Get some guidance, give it your all and have some fun with it. That’s how we do it in sports.”

Amari Johnny Holton, From Flag Football Talent To NFL Prospect
By Kyle Martin
August 11, 2016

Oakland Raiders wide receiver Johnny Holton grew up in Miami, Florida, along with friend and fellow Raiders wide receiver Amari Cooper. Holton attended Coconut Grove High School as a teenager, but wasn't focused on playing football. His priorities were elsewhere. As one of 11 children in his family, he focused on helping around the house, "By me working, I was just trying to make money to support my family," said Holton.

Holton put his family first, above his own personal desires, and felt obligated to contribute to his household. Although Holton was preoccupied with being a quality family member, he did enjoy playing flag football recreationally at a local park.

Holton's potential stood out to a college scout who happened to witness him play and offered him a chance to develop his talent at the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Ill. Recently, Cooper talked about watching Holton play at the park and their relationship on 95.7 The Game and watching him play. "The park is right across the street from his house and there would always be flag football tournaments," said Cooper, "I would go out there and watch sometimes…there was a junior college coach watching him play and he was impressed."

During his time in Junior College, Holton helped his team get to eighth overall in the NJCAA rankings. He was also named to the First Team All-Midwest Football Conference back in 2012 and had 23 catches for 548 yards including eight touchdowns. From one stage to the next Holton continued to progress as a player.

Holton credits that part of what made him successful in college was his ability to make plays after the catch. "The games I played in I had a big impression, I was leading the nation with 27.1 yards per catch," Holton said. After playing College of DuPage for two years, he was swooped up by the University of Cincinnati. In both of his years spent with the Bearcats, he had five receiving touchdowns and could've had a 99-yard kick return touchdown had it not been called back due to a penalty.

Coming out of college as an undrafted free agent, Holton reached out to Cooper and asked for his advice on what he should do. "He just told me I'm good enough to play anywhere in the NFL, just look at my options," said Holton, "I decided I wanted to be close to him and thought I had an opportunity here [with the Raiders]."

So far through training camp, Holton has opened the eyes of his coaches and peers. He's flashed a lot of athleticism and speed, while making impressive plays. Holton is putting his best foot forward to try to join his friend Cooper in the receiving corps. With the Raiders first preseason game scheduled for tomorrow night against the Arizona Cardinals, Holton will have plenty of opportunities to show what he's capable of.

With the next chapter in Holton's story set to begin, he'll be an interesting player to watch going forward.

Q&A: Bruce Irvin trying to take on Raiders' 'bully mentality'
By Vic Tafur
August 15, 2016

The number shines down on him just like the Napa sun.

"Fifteen sacks," Bruce Irvin said.

That's the number that Khalil Mack, Irvin's new teammate and opposite-end pass rusher, had for the Raiders last season.

"I hope they put three or four people on him and just let me run free," Irvin said, smiling.

Irvin is reunited with defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. after the Seahawks didn't pick up the fifth-year veteran's contract option. "I couldn't have been put in a better situation," Irvin said.

He sat down for a one-on-one interview after a recent training-camp practice. Among other things, he touched on leadership, being feared, Raiders tradition, Mack, his biggest surprise since joining the team and fights at training camp:

There has been a transfusion of new blood here with you, Sean Smith and Reggie Nelson on defense. What do you bring to the mix?

Irvin: Leadership. And not just talking about it, but leading by example. You have to get guys believing in one thing, and that's playing for each other. That, and try and get better every day.

When you guys take the field in the season opener against (New Orleans quarterback) Drew Brees, what do you want to be going through his mind when he looks across the field?

Irvin: Fear. We want to be feared. Not just on defense but as a team. We want to be physical and punish people. That's the biggest thing. We want people to look at the Raiders, and say, "That's a tough, nasty physical team. ... They're going to run the ball and they're going to play great defense."

Teams can take on the personalities of their coaches. Did you just describe Jack Del Rio and Ken a little bit?

Irvin: Definitely. They're a couple of bullies, and we're taking on that bully mentality. But that's just the Raiders, period. You look at the old teams here, and they would do a little extra after the play. It is what it is. That's the appearance you want to have, like you will do anything to win.

Did the young core of Mack, Derek Carr and Amari Cooper clinch it for you when you decided to sign here?

Irvin: It's a young team on the rise. And they added a lot of key pieces in the offseason. I looked at that, too. And playing in a familiar defense with one of the best players in the league in Khalil Mack.

What makes Mack special?

Irvin: Regardless of the success he's had his first two years in the league, he's always willing to learn, always willing to see it from my perspective or somebody else's. He is a very humble person who is going to continue to get better each and every year.

You mentioned the known things coming in. Anything surprise you about your teammates in the offseason workouts and camp?

Irvin: (Middle linebacker) Ben Heeney. I really like Ben. High-motor guy who's not very big but plays bigger than he is. One thing about Ben is he's going to leave it out there for you every play. I have a genuine appreciation for that.

A lot has been written about you and Ken. But you're also reunited with (linebacker) Malcolm Smith, who was the MVP of the Super Bowl you won in Seattle. Have you seen any changes in Malcolm?

Irvin: It's a new Malcolm, because he is getting an opportunity. He didn't get a lot of opportunities in Seattle. He's been given a chance to be a leader and big-time playmaker for us, and he is doing a great job at that.

Do you have a chip on your shoulder about how it ended in Seattle?

Irvin: That's water under the bridge. I could never thank (coach) Pete (Carroll) and (general manager) John (Schneider) enough for putting me in a great situation and helping me grow as a player and as a man. But it's time to move on. I feel like I didn't reach my full potential in Seattle, and I am going to take full advantage of that opportunity here.

You tweeted out that you didn't want teammates to read the clippings and believe the hype. But ... you peek a little, right?

Irvin: Yeah. ... It is always good to be talked about. You get tired of hearing about the other 31 teams. It's good to get loved on sometimes. But it doesn't mean anything. So remember that.

What's the secret to not losing it at training camp? Meetings all day, practices, having a roommate. ... How do you ease the grind?

Irvin: You have to go out of your way to make it fun, otherwise you'll be miserable. It's draining. So you have to crack a lot of jokes at each other's expense, shoot hoops ...

Who's the guy to beat in hoops?

Irvin: The defensive backs have a lot of shooters. We have shooting contests, 30 seconds for each guy to make as many as he can, each position group. The last three days, the defensive line has won. Me and Khalil, and Shilique Calhoun and Darius Latham can both shoot.

There have also been some boxing contests between some of your defensive teammates and guard Kelechi Osemele. Is that just part of the camp grind?

Irvin: That's just who he is. He's a physical, tough-nosed guy. We just have to get him to understand that we're all on the same team. You can't try and hurt your own guy. But he is on a new team. They may have practiced differently in Baltimore. ... He's a good guy. Going to be a great player for us. Can't wait to see him out there in the opener. Just another Raiders bully.

Raiders reunite Bruce Irvin, Perry Riley Jr.
By Vic Tafur
October 20, 2016

Bruce Irvin doesn't have the time or the temperament for trips down memory lane. But this one, the Raiders' outside linebacker admits, is too good to pass up.

Oakland signed inside linebacker Perry Riley Jr. two weeks ago. He and Irvin had met before.

"Fourth grade," Irvin says, without a hint of a smile. "We were enemies. We were both the biggest and the fastest in the school. Both trying to be the biggest guy on campus....

"We were enemies for a good little minute."

The Friday before he signed with the Raiders, Riley was talking to his mom about which team he wanted to play for. Surprised that he had been cut by Washington, Riley wanted to stay close to his Stone Mountain, Ga., home and told his mom he hoped the Atlanta Falcons or Carolina Panthers called.

Or the Oakland Raiders. Riley, 28, would play for the Raiders.

"You said you didn't want to go too far," said his mom, Fonda. "California is far."

"I would go that far to play with BJ," her son said.

BJ is what family and friends call Irvin.

"The Raiders called Monday," Fonda Riley said. "It was so amazing. Perry was so happy that he got to play with his best friend."

Irvin said he didn't like Riley until the seventh grade. And they saw each other often, living down the street from each other.

Finally, there was a spirited basketball game — "We used to go neighborhood versus neighborhood, serious stuff, like we were playing for money," Irvin said — and the two weren't roughing up each other, but on the same team.

"Ever since that day, we've been cool," Irvin said. "We still compete over everything, but that's just the kind of friendship we have. Real solid connection.

"He's a dawg, just like me."

Riley said Irvin and he would try to be on the same team in PE class, but "it was considered cheating. Being the fastest, strongest guys eventually brought us together and we became like brothers and the bond became unbreakable."

(At this point, Irvin, a few lockers down, yells out, “Stop talking about all this personal stuff. It’s time to play football now.”

Irvin might want to cover his ears for this one, then.)

Riley was asked who won the early-years matchups?

“Football, basketball, kickball … ask him. … I did. I won most of those,” Riley said, laughing.

Irvin was the quarterback and Riley the running back, with both playing linebacker on defense, in middle school and into high school.

“They rode to school together, had sleepovers, were always in each other’s yard,” Perry Riley Sr. said. “Both kids loved to compete and loved to win, and they pushed each other. All the way to the NFL.”

They played together one season at Stephenson High, with Irvin at receiver as the Jaguars lost in the quarterfinals of the state tournament. The next year, Irvin dropped out of high school to earn money to help his mother and spent three weeks in jail on larceny challenges.

Irvin passed his GED the following year and got his football career back on track at Mt. San Antonio College in Southern California. His athleticism got him a shot at West Virginia, where he led the nation in sacks.

Riley went to LSU, and the friends then discussed about one day playing together again.

“We always talked about that,” Riley said. “Then, when he was going through the draft process, I was already at Washington and we got our hopes up, but no. Then, he called me as soon as Washington cut me. And here I am.”

Irvin is the starting outside linebacker. Riley started in place of the injured Malcolm Smith and is competing with him now for snaps. They will both have a lot of family and friends in the stands when the Raiders (4-2) play at Jacksonville on Sunday and then at Tampa Bay the following Sunday.

“It will be like a home game for us,” Riley said “My family’s first chance to see me as a Raider. I am fired up. … I am just here to help. We’re 1-1 since I got here, and we want to get that losing taste out of our mouths.”

Irvin actually cracks a smile when asked about his new teammate as a player.

“He doesn’t shy away from contact,” Irvin said. “His presence is definitely felt on Sunday.”

Still standing: Sebastian Janikowski's unlikely path to Raiders royalty
By Don Banks
June 22, 2016

OAKLAND — You hear him coming down the hall before you see him, and by the time he breezes into the room and slowly slides himself into a chair, you're already starting to get why everybody here in Raiders country seems to adore Sebastian Janikowski.

He wears a perpetual bemused smile and a cap turned backwards in his trademark fashion, the look of a guy who hasn't had a real worry in years. At 38, and entering his 17th season as an NFL kicker, there are, to be sure, a few lines on his round, jowly face these days. But he laughs easily and often, and appears quite comfortable in his weathered skin. With more than a hint of his thick Polish accent still present, a playful manner that never goes out of style, and that Hall of Fame nickname, the man they affectionately call "Seabass" is regarded as royalty around the Raiders' complex. He's a walking, talking (and kicking) Oakland institution.

"He's one of my favorite teammates I've ever had, he really is," Raiders third-year quarterback Derek Carr says. "He's got such a good heart. I talk to him every morning, and he sits behind me at every team meeting. He means the world to me."

"He's the guy around here," says Oakland fullback Marcel Reece, a teammate of Janikowski's since 2008. "We treat him like he's one of one. An original. A living legend. He's been here so long he's like a statue in front of the building. But he's one of the greatest people I've met in football, and he's a warrior."

Adds veteran Raiders offensive tackle Donald Penn: "Who doesn't love Seabass? He's like a fixture here. I would love to give him a fairy tale ending, to see him go out with the Raiders on top. But knowing Seabass, he's probably still got at least three more years in him."

The mind boggles at the thought, but it's been 16-plus years since strong-willed Raiders owner Al Davis stunned the NFL world and elicited howls of derision by taking Janikowski 17th overall out of Florida State in the 2000 draft, the first kicker selected in the first round of a non-supplemental draft since the Saints' failed Russell Erxleben experiment in 1979. But who's laughing now, with the colorful and cannon-legged Janikowski about to give Oakland a 17th season of production in return for that gutsy No. 17 pick? How many clubs ever realize that rich of a return on a draft investment?

"I think it's a hell of a return," says Janikowski, as blunt as ever. "I'm still going strong. I don't know how many guys are even still playing from the Class of 2000 draft. I think I'm the only one." (Well, there is that Tom Brady character, too, along with Janikowski's old teammate Shane Lechler.) "Everybody was like, 'What's Al Davis doing?' But hey, 17 years later and I'm still kicking, so they did something right."

Not only is he still kicking, but for the majority of his first 16 seasons as a Raider, Janikowski was arguably Oakland's best player and only real star attraction, a beacon of steady production amid the franchise's long, painful stretch of ineptitude. And yet after all these years, how is it that we hear so little about Janikowski, maybe the most underappreciated great player in recent NFL history? Chalk it up perhaps to Oakland's desultory decade-plus of putrid play.

After reaching the playoffs in each of Janikowski's first three seasons, capped by that Super Bowl trip at the end of the 2002 season, the Raiders are mired in a 13-year postseason drought that trails only Buffalo's 16-year odyssey of frustration. In 10 of those seasons, Oakland mustered five or fewer wins, topping out at 8–8 in both '10 and '11. Unless No. 11 was taking the field to bang home another long-distance kick, the Silver and Black have rarely been worth watching.

"We've lost some games, that's true," Janikowski says. "After my first three years, when we went to the playoffs and the Super Bowl, in my mind, it was like, that's how it works. Every year, playoffs. Then 13 years later, still no playoffs, and suddenly you're in the desert. You're at home watching the damn playoffs and everybody else is playing in them. You're like, 'Man, we should be in it. We should be out there.' But I think that's going to change soon."

There is finally legitimate hope in Oakland after last season's four-game improvement to 7–9, and Janikowski is dying to kick for a winner again. His 252 career games are more than any other Raider has ever appeared in, and his powerful left leg is the stuff of legend, responsible for 385 field goals in 480 career tries (80.2%) and NFL records like longest overtime field goal (57 yards in 2008), most 50-yard-plus field goals in a game (three in '11), and most 60-yard-plus field goals in a career (two, tying him with Morten Andersen).

All that he lacks at this point is that amplifying blast of late-career glory that would come with team success, giving even greater meaning to his impressive statistical accomplishment and his revered status as the Raiders' long-time survivor, the sole remaining link to Oakland's last Super Bowl team.

It's easy to forget from the vantage point of 2016, now that he's a solid citizen and beloved member of the organization and Oakland community, but there were times early on when Janikowski's career seemed to be going off the rails, destined to end almost before it began.

"No way he was going to make it this long"

Back in 2000 and '01, Janikowski's catchy nickname was more likely to elicit eye rolls than smiles, especially for then Raiders coach Jon Gruden, who grew exasperated with his kicker's inconsistency and his insatiable love of the party scene.

With that gaudy first-round target on his back, Janikowski was supposed to come in and immediately shore up Oakland's bedeviled kicking game, which in 1999 saw free-agent signee Michael Husted struggle mightily before being released after 13 games. Davis is said to have pinpointed a half-dozen games in '99 that were lost in part due to kicking failures (Oakland finished 8–8), and thus decided to go big and bold in the 2000 draft, selecting both Janikowski and Lechler, the big-legged Texas A&M punter who went in the fifth round.

But the pressure of kicking in the NFL nearly broke Janikowski, a two-time All-America selection at Florida State. He was just 22 of 32 in field goals that season (68.8%), and struggles with injuries (a case of cellulitis cost him two games) and his shaky transition to the longer pro season made his debut an endurance test he nearly flunked. He missed seven of his first 13 field goal tries in 2000.

"It was rough, the whole season," Janikowski says. "I was nervous as hell. I didn't know what to expect. And because I was a first-round pick, the spotlight is on you. You want to show the guys you were worth that pick, but you've got to be perfect. I was a young guy coming out and dealing with a lot of problems. I had off-field issues in college and all that stuff, and there's so much pressure on you that sometimes you think maybe I should have just gone in the fourth round."

Those "off-field issues" at FSU, including a pair of bar fights, followed Janikowski to the NFL, where a string of incidents highlighted his immaturity and obvious issues with drugs and alcohol. Early in his Raiders career, Janikowski's behavior was erratic enough to pose a serious public relations problem for the organization, the type rarely caused by kickers. Two months after being drafted, he was arrested on suspicion of felony possession of the date-rape drug GHB (he was later found not guilty), and in October 2001 he needed to be taken to the hospital to close a cut on his face after passing out in a San Francisco nightclub where some witnesses had said they saw him take the drug. In June 2002, he was charged with reckless driving in Tallahassee, and he was arrested in October of that year on a drunken driving charge, serving three years of probation after pleading no contest.

Still months shy of his 25th birthday, Janikowski was already at a crossroads in his career, which was beginning to be defined by his off-field problems. He has credited that drunk driving arrest in 2002 as being the impetus he needed to make real changes in his behavior, and his career began to flourish after he got his drinking under control.

"I definitely went through some stuff," Janikowski says. "I stuck with the Raiders and they stuck with me. My life now is not what it used to be back in the day. I mellowed a long time ago. I've got family, my kids [twin girls], they're going to be four in September. You grow up, you move on. I still have fun, but now it's with my kids. Back in the day, I'd be out somewhere on the street."

Back in the day, Raiders Hall of Fame receiver Tim Brown didn't give Janikowski much of a chance of making it to year seven in the NFL, let alone year 17. He marvels at Janikowski's ability to re-write the narrative of his career.

"I'm shocked that he's made it this far, because I thought there was no way he was going to make it this long in the league," says Brown, who played with the kicker from 2000 to '03. "It's always amazing when I see Seabass now and see how much of a gentleman he is and how he talks about his wife and kids. My first reaction was, 'Oh, my God, his poor wife.' But I realize he's a different man, he's a changed man. He had a lot of pressure on him when he first got to Oakland, and I don't think he was handling it very well. And his way of handling things was to go out and do more of what he had been doing the night before. That was the big issue."

Because his teammates were well aware of his partying lifestyle, Janikowski often didn't receive the benefit of the doubt if he missed a kick or struggled through an off day.

"When mistakes happen, and everybody knows you've been out partying all night and you've been out doing all this crazy stuff, then people are not going to believe you're taking this thing seriously," Brown says. "I know there were several times when he missed field goals in games, and you heard guys wondering on the sideline, 'Well, yeah, he shouldn't have been out last night or Friday night, whatever.'

"I just think he was so talented as a kicker, he always felt like he was going to be O.K. He didn't believe in that karma thing. For a few years he just had a reputation that he just didn't care much about what was going on. Now, he would tell you he cared, and it's not like he didn't work hard in practice. But at the same time, he was working just as hard off the field on all that other stuff."

Lechler, now entering his fourth season with the Texans, was Janikowski's running partner early on, and he has seen the full arc of his friend and ex-teammate's journey from near calamity to respectability. To be young with too much disposable income and time on your hands in the NFL has long been a recipe for trouble, and Janikowski consistently found it.

"Bass came a long way, and everybody knows the Florida State stories, how [coach Bobby Bowden] treated him and gave him a long leash down there," says Lechler, who held for Janikowski at the 2000 NFL scouting combine and then throughout their 13 seasons together in Oakland. "But once we got to the NFL, and I even lived with him my first two years, I mean, we had some moments where you'd wake up the next morning like, 'Man, we've gotta quit this, you know? We've got to start focusing just on football.' Thank God there wasn't a whole lot of social media at the time and stuff like that."

In those days, Janikowski the partier was every bit as adept as Janikowski the kicker, Lechler recalls. Not that it was a sustainable career trajectory.

"It wasn't like we were out raising hell every night, but we had our times," Lechler says. "I get asked the question all the time: 'I bet that was crazy running with Seabass,' and I'm always like, 'Yeah, it was crazy, maybe like three nights a month. The rest of the time he was fine, just normal stuff. But we had a good time, and Bass of all people, he can have just as good a time as anybody you can find in this world. He can be a blast."

Janikowski has almost started to look like the old pirate in the Raiders' logo over the years––sans eye patch—but he's a 6' 1", 265-pound softie at heart, according to Lechler.

"He's a guy I would say that 90% of NFL fans would love to hang out with," Lechler says. "And I wish they all could, because for one it would get the bad reputation out of people's heads. He'll go and have a few beers with you, and he'll maybe miss a curfew now and then. But if you get to know deep down what the guy's like, he's a guy you'll want to be your friend, I promise you."

"There was nobody in the game better, and we knew it"

About the nickname: Janikowski came into the league with several monikers, but Seabass is the one that endured. He can tell you the wonderfully straightforward story behind it.

"Seabass is the best nickname, and it's stuck since [former FSU star receiver] Peter Warrick back in college," Janikowski says. "He said Sebastian was so long for him that he didn't want to say it. So he started calling me Seabass at Florida State and it stuck with me. That's all I'm ever called. I should [trademark] it."

If Janikowski does have a trademark of sorts, it's for playing with the psyche of the opposing team in pregame warmups. His booming left leg was always his trump card.

"This is how we approached every pregame warmup: No matter what, wherever their kicker kicked a field goal from, we went five yards further than them and kicked," Lechler says. "If we were in Denver, with that light air, we'd get back in the 68-69-70-yard range just to kind of get the upper edge in the mind games. I never even had to ask him, 'Where do you want to kick the next one from?' I just went five yards further than where the opposing kicker just kicked from, and that's where we lined up."

When it calls for classic Seabass stories, the ones that show him at his most colorful and quirkiest, Lechler is a human Wikipedia page. They didn't just live together those first two years in the NFL, they were practically inseparable as friends and fellow elite kickers. They were very, very good for a team that was usually very, very bad, and they shared that bond proudly.

“There was a stretch of four or five years there where there was nobody in the game better, and we knew it,” says Lechler, who went to seven Pro Bowls in his Oakland tenure. “We kind of had the same, I guess you’d say, attitude about toward the game. There was just a chemistry and approach to football that we shared. And we are both competitive as hell.”

Not that there weren’t annoying little differences between them that cropped up at regular intervals. Like on their rides together to Raiders home games, when Janikowski always insisted upon driving.

“I rode with Bass in his car to every home game we ever played together, and his music that he likes is way different than mine,” Lechler says. “He’s a big techno guy and I’m straight country. When we were riding, I’d get at least one of my songs in, but he’d never listen to one of mine as we were actually pulling into the stadium parking lot. Never once. It had to be his music.”

Kickers can be somewhat eccentric by nature, of course, and Janikowski developed more than a few idiosyncrasies, some of which drove his punter a little nuts.

“He had two things that bothered me,” Lechler says. “One, he wrote his number, No. 11, on his hat 11 times. It made every hat look awful. It just ruined every hat. I’d be like, ‘They just gave you that thing.’ I don’t why, but I like hats and that bugged me that he did that same thing every time. And it was No. 11, so it looked just like tally marks all over the hat. I’d be like, ‘What are you doing, man?’

“Then the other thing was no matter what kind of shape the kicking balls were in that day, he yelled at the ballboys. I actually told the ballboys, ‘Hey, listen, this is part of his routine. Those balls are probably the best balls I’ve kicked in five years, but he’s going to yell at you. I don’t care what you throw out there.’ It’s just what he does.”

As it turns out, Janikowski and Lechler don’t even agree when it comes to picking the biggest or best kick of Seabass’s storied career. Janikowski goes with his 57-yard game-winner in overtime to beat Brett Favre and the visiting Jets in October 2008, the longest OT field goal in NFL history.

“[Raiders coach Tom Cable] looked at me and said 'Go win it,’ like he really believed in me,” Janikowski says. “But if I don’t make that field goal, they were in such good field position that they could have made one play and they win it.”

Lechler has a different perspective. He’s convinced the 61-yarder that Janikowski somehow nailed in terrible conditions in Cleveland in December 2009 was his finest moment, even if it came in a 23–9 Raiders loss.

“The Jets kick was a big-time kick, but the 61-yarder in Cleveland in the snow, that was the best kick of his NFL career,” Lechler says. “I mean, the wind’s blowing and it’s kind of snowy mix, and it cold and miserable, just typical Cleveland in December. It’s one of the only times I ever jogged out there and thought, ‘He ain’t got a chance to make this one.’ But I put it down and he split the uprights, and I’m like, ‘Holy s---.’ ”

Going unselected by both, curiously, was the league-record-tying 63-yarder Janikowski converted at the end of the first half on a Monday night in Denver in September 2011, a mark since broken by the Broncos’ Matt Prater, who hit a 64-yarder in ’13.

“He couldn’t pick that one, because he mishit the 63-yarder in Denver,” Lechler said. “He didn’t even get it good.”

Adds Janikowski: “I didn’t even really hit it hard, because in Denver with the elevation, you don’t have to. I can’t even imagine what the record might be if I got to play my whole career in Denver. Seventy yards? I think so, I mean, I’ve got to say it.”

But perhaps the quintessential Janikowski highlight, the one that captures him in all his one-of-a-kind glory, took place in Kansas City’s Arrowhead Stadium on Christmas Eve 2011. The Chiefs and Raiders were tied 13–13 in overtime, but Oakland was driving for the game-winning field goal try. Then a Chiefs fan unwisely tried to get into Janikowski’s head. Or thereabouts.

“We’re warming up on the sideline, and in Kansas City the stands are like right on top of the visiting sideline, and there’s really no room to warm up,” Lechler says. “All of a sudden this big dude throws like a chili cheese nacho and hits Seabass pretty much right in the numbers. And we’re in our white road jerseys. It’s like right on his stomach. Now, he’s not a fat guy, but to have chili and cheese on you in a white uniform, when you’re built like that, it’s not a good look.

“So now he stopped warming up because he was pissed off at the guy, and I’m like, ‘Great, now he’s mad at this guy and distracted, we’re not going to make this kick.’ He’s got the trainers trying to get all that s--- off him and they’re spraying water on it. So now we go out there, and it’s not a deep kick [36 yards], and boom, he kicked it, gives me a quick high five, and then sprints right back to the warmup spot, right to that guy. I don’t know what he said over there but I can imagine what he said. I didn’t see him again until the locker room. That was a great moment right there. That was a fun one.”

“I wouldn’t want to be the next first-round kicker”

Sixteen years after the Raiders rolled the dice on Janikowski in the first round, there was an echo of their bold pick when the Buccaneers chose another Florida State kicker, Roberto Aguayo, in the second round with pick No. 59. That’s the highest selection used on a kicker since the Jets took Ohio State’s Mike Nugent in the second round in 2005 at No. 47. In the selection of Aguayo, the Bucs seemingly gave a vindicating nod to Seabass’s long and prolific career.

“Yeah, I’m still doing it, and if the Bucs get what the Raiders got out of me, that’s a great pick,” Janikowski says. “I still watch Florida State a lot, and he’s going to turn out to be one of the greatest kickers. I think he’s going to have a hell of a career, but I know how much pressure he’s under.”

Though Oakland once again has Italian-born kicker Giorgio Tavecchio on the roster and slated to compete with Janikowski in camp, there’s no sense that Seabass is in any real roster jeopardy, even with his pricey-for-a-kicker $3.96 million salary cap number and two years left on his contract. Janikowski seems energized by the Raiders’ return to competitiveness, and for the past two years he has taken part in Oakland’s off-season program at coach Jack Del Rio’s behest, rather than stay home in Florida until training camp, as was his custom.

He paces himself now, and tries to be smarter about his conditioning and kicking load, but he talks openly about his desire to kick into his mid-40s, as legendary kickers such as Jan Stenerud, Morten Andersen, Gary Anderson and Adam Vinatieri have done.

"I'm not even close to being done, the way I feel," Janikowski said. "I have always believed I have the potential to kick as long as I want to kick. I still feel good, and I still love running out there on the field and being under pressure, hearing the fans. Whether they're booing you or screaming for you, I just love it."

Just ahead on his career radar screen is the NFL record for most 50-yard-plus field goals, which he currently holds along with longtime Lions kicker Jason Hanson. Janikowski has made 52 such kicks, on a whopping 92 attempts, and he did it without ever playing in a climate-controlled dome, as Hanson did for his entire career in Detroit. Remember that when his Hall of Fame candidacy is being bantered about.

"Keep in mind, he's been kicking for 16 years outdoors in a stadium that's below sea level, and playing up to four home games a year on a field that still has infield dirt with the A's playing there," says Lechler, who is still punting as he approaches 40 in August. "And he's still top five in the game. He's done it at a high level in a place where it's not groomed for success. To hold on for all that time in Oakland, my hat's off to him. Could anybody else have done that? I don't know."

Those who know him best say Janikowski is fiercely proud, still driven by any slight, both real and imagined, and after being burned by friends as far back as his college days, he has always had difficulty trusting others. He may still be wary, but he's not wearied. And toward the end of his long, sometimes strange trip in the NFL, Seabass has become both a mainstay and an unlikely icon in Oakland, as admired for his perseverance as he is for his production as a Raider.

He revels in being Seabass, and it's not hard to notice that just being in his company puts the people around him in a good mood. If there's a gravitational center in the Oakland locker room, it's wherever No. 11 happens to be standing. In uniform, he's as relaxed and comfortable as an old shoe. Providing it's on his left foot, and laced up tight for kicking.

"We love the guy around here," Penn says. "And I know this, I wouldn't want to be the next first-round kicker to come into this league. Because that guy's got a lot to live up to after Seabass."

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

After many seasons and points, Sebastian Janikowski wants 1 ring
By Vic Tafur
October 29, 2016

TAMPA, Fla. — He remembers the sound as if it were yesterday.

Yesterday was 20 years ago, just up the road here in Florida.

There was a loud thud, then silence. The other players at Seabreeze High in Daytona Beach stopped what they were doing at football practice to see what had just happened. Some soccer player named Sebastian Janikowski was trying out at kicker.

Now the “booms” and 60-yard field goals happen at Raiders practices. Janikowski is 38 years old, in his 17th NFL season, and this year set the league record for most field goals from 50 yards or more (he has 55).

Janikowski, who usually treats media requests like footballs, took some time out last week to reflect on his journey and his future as the Raiders (5-2) prepared to play the Bucs (3-3) on Sunday.

“I don’t feel any difference now when I kick,” he said. “The leg strength … I am still the same.”

The 6-foot-1, 265-pound Janikowski was 50 pounds lighter back in Daytona Beach but still an imposing and fascinating character.

He had moved from Poland to Florida to be with his dad, who had come to this country to pump new life into his professional soccer career. Sebastian had played for Poland’s Under-17 national team and was offered a million-dollar deal to turn pro with San Lorenzo of Argentina’s First Division.

“I was 16 years old coming to a new country, and all I knew was playing soccer,” Janikowski said. “Didn’t know the language, didn’t know any of the kids, it was pretty tough.”

Soccer made the transition easier, as Janikowski starred for the Orlando Lions club team before moving to Daytona Beach to play for Lions coach Angelo Rossi’s Seabreeze High soccer team. Before trying his foot at football, he set the school record for goals and became one of the cool kids at school.

Come on, how many kids win games with bicycle kicks and 40-yard shots, or have an opposing player leave the game after blocking one of their kicks?

The football team came calling, and Janikowski was a natural.

“Kicking a soccer ball hard always felt simple to me, and I liked football right away. And kicking comes from soccer, so I enjoyed that and the reaction when football people saw me kick.”

He would practice his accuracy kicking footballs at light posts.

“I would kick first for football,” Janikowski said, “and then go run around for three hours at soccer practice. It was a lot of fun, playing, hanging out with my friends and being a kid.”

Janikowski would become quite the fun-seeker and partier at Seabreeze, Florida State and then with the Raiders. But his foot got him out of problems at Florida State (bar fights and a missed curfew before a bowl game) as it helped get coach Bobby Bowden wins. Janikowski became the first player to win the Lou Groza Award, given to the best kicker in college football, twice.

“Janikowski would be an excellent linebacker or tight end,” Bowden once said, “if I thought he wouldn’t hurt his foot.”

Janikowski never looked back on the sport he left behind.

“I made the right decision,” he said. “Love what I am doing. Have always loved what I am doing.”

He opted out of his senior year for the 2000 NFL draft and nearly fainted, like everyone else, when Raiders owner Al Davis took him in the first round.

“Was definitely surprised,” Janikowski said. “Being picked 17th. You just don’t see that. But when you look back, I think you can say it paid off. I am in my 17th year. Who would have thought it would go that long?

“I appreciate Al Davis and the Davis family a lot. They made the right choice, and hopefully I can keep going a while longer.”

The Bucs drafted Florida State’s Roberto Aguayo in the second round this year, the highest a kicker has gone since Janikowski. What advice would Janikowski give him?

“Just calm down and enjoy the game,” he said. “Because when you get drafted that high, there is a lot of pressure on you. Just take it one day at a time.”

Did Janikowski feel pressure?

“Definitely,” he said. “A lot of people were saying, ‘Why did you pick a kicker?’ It wasn’t an easy ride.”

Those questions grew louder when Janikowski was arrested twice in 2000 — he was acquitted of bribing a police officer and later of drug possession — and again for drunken driving in 2002 (he pleaded no contest).

Janikowski and former punter Shane Lechler had some legendary benders — before the days of social media, thankfully. Finally, the drunk-driving arrest and three years of probation slowed him down.

“You learn to be a professional,” Janikowski said. “And then you have kids.” (His twin girls turned 4 in September.)

And then you focus on getting in better shape, as he has the past few years.

“You work out more,” Janikowski said. “When you’re younger, you ride on talent. But in this league, everybody has talent. It’s not going to get you far. So, you work extra.”

Janikowski has played 259 games, the most by a Raider, and he could make a serious run at 300. He is the franchise’s all-time leading scorer with 1,728 points, 12th on the NFL scoring list.

“I just take it year by year,” he said. “See what happens. First you go five years and then you want to hit double digits. Now it’s all about winning the Super Bowl here. I want my ring.”

Lechler is gone, and the transition to new punter and holder Marquette King was not a smooth one. In 2013, Janikowski hit only 21 of 30 field-goal attempts, his lowest success rate since 2005.

“It takes time to get used to it,” Janikowski said. “I had the same holder for 13 years, so I didn’t have to tell him how to put the ball down, where, nothing. If it was windy, Shane knew what to do, knew all the different adjustments. Marquette has been working on that and has done a really good job.”

The past three years, Janikowski is back over 80 percent.

“He finally trusts me,” King said. “Seabass is one of the best to ever do it, and he is still doing it.”

General manager Reggie McKenzie not only kept Janikowski when he came on board in 2012, but also gave the kicker a four-year, $15.1 million extension in 2013.

“He still had that pop in his leg,” McKenzie said. “He had a couple spells where he was inconsistent, but he worked through those. He’s kept his weight down and become more coachable....

“He and Marquette, they had to make that work, and they learned how to communicate better.”

And as with Lechler, the Raiders again have one of the best kicking combinations in the league.

“Marquette can boom the ball,” Janikowski said. “He and Shane are two of the best legs I have ever seen in the game in my life.”

A former Raiders punter, Ray Guy, made the Hall of Fame last year. Did that get Janikowski thinking?

“It would be a spectacular honor,” he said. “But people mention it and I put up my hand. It matters … but I don’t think about it or talk about it. It’s not my choice, right?”

It is the choice of Clark Judge and the rest of the Pro Football Hall of Fame Selection Committee, and Judge, a former sportswriter who now works for the Talk of Fame Network on radio, thinks Janikowski doesn’t have much of a shot. Even if he plays for a while longer.

“Jan Stenerud and Ray Guy are the only kickers in, and it took Guy 25 years,” Judge said. “I mean, Morten Andersen is the all-time leading scorer in the league, and he’s not in. What other sport does that?

“Plus, Seabass didn’t play for any championship teams or have any signature kicks. Which is why Adam Vinatieri will have a better shot than him. But you never know. … Maybe longevity will make a difference.”

The reason Janikowski is sticking around, as he said, is simple. He wants a Super Bowl ring, and with the Raiders’ 5-2 record this season (and 4-0 on the road), that’s not ridiculous banter anymore.

Why is this year’s team better?

“Determination,” Janikowski said. “Guys want to win. It’s been so long since we’ve been able to do this, go into other teams’ stadiums and keep winning games. The coaches are doing a great job. They put us in great position to win games. And when you win, players watch extra film to get that feeling again next week.”

Janikowski has been coming back for that feeling for 20 years, since that day up the road in Daytona Beach.

THE PLAYERS' TRIBUNE

Can I Kick It?
By Marquette King
November 7, 2016

I'll never forget it.

August 2012. Oakland Coliseum. We were playing the Cowboys in my first preseason game. I wasn't even supposed to play in the first half, but our starter, Shane Lechler, got hurt in warmups and the coaches told me I would be the guy a few minutes before kickoff.

I remember standing on the sideline just staring at the Raiders logo on my teammates' helmets and feeling light-headed. It didn't seem real.

Before I ran out on the field with the punt team for the first time, one of the coaches said, "Whatever you do, don't look in the stands. Just go out and punt it."

So of course I run out there and immediately look up into the stands, and I see the thousands of people watching, and I'm just like, Oh s.

I'm standing back there getting ready for the snap, and I'm so nervous. Then the Cowboys are getting set to rush the punt, and all of a sudden I see one of their linebackers looking at me funny.

He yells out, "Yo, what is this?"

He's pointing at me. Then he's waving to his teammates. I'm just confused.

Then he yells, "A black punter? It's a fake! Yo, it's a fake!"

I just start laughing. That kills all my nerves, and I finally relax and boom it 57 yards for a fair catch.

I can still see the faces of those Cowboys players, looking at me like, What's up with this dude? Where'd he come from?

Well, lemme tell you....

Elementary school, 1995. Macon, Georgia.

We used to play with this big red rubber ball at recess. Not a football, but one of those thick, heavy-duty kickballs with a lot of bounce in them. Remember those? Do kids still play with those today, or are they just chilling on their phones? If you grew up in the '90s, you know what I'm talking about. I mean, this thing was heavy.

Recess was chaos. There was no organization. We didn't play kickball. We played "kick the ball." There was no object to the game other than 20 kids trying to kick it as high and as far as possible. Whoever could kick it the hardest always got the most tries, because all the kids wanted to watch the ball get clobbered and go flying. You didn't get points for it or anything. It was just cool to see a ball get kicked real high. (Again, this was the '90s.) If you managed to kick the ball both high and far, you might get all 20 kids to look up in the sky and go, "Ooooooooh!" all at once.

That was my whole motivation when I was 10. I gotta wow these kids.

So I started kicking every day after I got home from school, trying to find ways to get the ball higher in the sky. It sort of became my hobby. And I didn't want to just be good or even great at it. I wanted to be the undisputed best … at kicking a big red ball.

Don't ask me why.

But I wanted to kick that ball so hard and so far that it'd just disappear into the sky and never come down. When recess came, I wanted the ball passed only to me, and more important, I wanted everyone else to only want to pass to me. They had to know I was the guy with the good stuff.

It wasn't a complicated game, but it turned out to be a pretty important part of my life.

Now, I wish I could tell you that some football coach saw me kicking that red ball at recess and said, "Son, come with me. You're gonna be in the NFL some day."

But that's not how it went down. I didn't even like football all that much. I just liked to play, period. Sitting in front of a TV on Sunday afternoons and watching the Falcons wasn't for me. I loved being outside and moving around. In fact, to this day, standing on the sideline so much during games makes me go a little crazy. You can always see me pacing around or going to grab a drink of water or trying to talk to somebody.

The only thing I'd stay inside for was video games. Playing Madden on PlayStation with my friends is what actually got me into football. And that's especially funny because in Madden, nobody ever punts.

Maybe that's why I started out playing wide receiver. I was a better kicker than anybody on my high school team, so I was still the designated punter, too. But high schoolers aren't like little kids. They don't get as excited when they see a solid boot soar down the field. They want to see deep passes and touchdowns. I knew if I wanted a girlfriend, I was gonna have to get in that end zone. So for a little while my focus shifted from kicking to route-running, footwork and becoming the best all-around athlete I could be.

I knew if I wanted a girlfriend, I was gonna have to get in that end zone.

Then I remember one game when Pike County High came to play us. It started out like any other game until their punter took the field. I'll never forget him. He was this small, skinny guy, and every one of his kicks was just a perfect spiral. He was so consistent — like he had control over exactly where his punts landed, and even how they bounced when they hit the ground. It was the first time I had ever noticed someone with that level of control. His punting skill put our team at a huge disadvantage for pretty much the entire game. And it wasn't because of a giant leg, but because of his technique. I realized there was a lot more to punting than just raw power. I had to change my mindset to understand the technical side of punting. It was almost like having to learn to kick the ball all over again.

I started to take punting even more seriously in college, when I started doing it full-time for my team at Fort Valley State.

I don't know what it is, but kicking a ball is just my thing. It puts me at peace. I'd be up in the dorms hanging out with my friends on a Friday night, and they'd be pregaming and getting ready to go out to the club. I'd have a drink with them, listen to some Future mixtapes on the little laptop speakers for about an hour, then eventually they'd be like, "Come on, let's turn up. We gotta go soon."

I'd be like, "Alright, I'm gonna go get ready. I'll catch you guys later."

They knew I was lying.

I'd go back to my room, but instead of putting on some jeans and a button-down, I'd pull on my sweatpants and grab my headphones. Then I'd stuff three footballs into my gym bag and walk across campus to the football field. Only problem was, the field was closed after 9 p.m. Lights off, gate locked.

So what'd I do? I would hop the fence and make my way over to the fuse box, and from there I was just on my Jason Bourne. You gotta know the secrets. This was actually child's play. When I would break into the weight room after hours, I had to find a way to unscrew the bolt on the door and then put everything back together again when I left. The fuse box was nothing.

I'd make sure to only switch on a few lights on one side of the field, just so people passing by would figure it was a groundskeeper doing some work or something.

Once my lighting was right, I'd put on my headphones, start my playlist, unzip my duffel bag and feel the leather of the footballs. Then it was on.

I'd be out there for hours. Kick three balls, run and go get 'em. Kick three more. Sometimes the campus police would stroll by at like 11 p.m. and just be looking down at the field like, What's this about?

Then they'd see me kick one like 60 yards and I guess they must've thought, Alright, this guy is pretty legit.

They never said anything.

My friends would see me from their cars on their way back to campus. I know a lot of them wanted to pull over and say something to me, thinking that it was kind of strange for me to be out on the field punting all night. All I can say is that those people probably don't know what it feels like to rip a ball 60 yards into the night sky with only the sounds of Travis Porter bumping in your ears. For me, it was the best feeling.

Once again, I wish I could tell you some NFL scout saw me punting out there at midnight and said, "Son, you got it." But it didn't go down like that.

The week of the 2012 NFL draft, people wouldn't stop banging on my dorm room door asking me where I thought I would go. But I wasn't even sure if I'd get a call from a team. I wasn't coming from some big SEC school. I was at Fort Valley State. I was a punter. All the hype got so distracting that I went to stay at my friend Gary's house just to put my mind at ease. Then my dad picked me up in the morning so I could watch the draft with my family in our living room.

It was seriously like five seconds after the last pick of the draft that my phone rang. It was the Raiders. Finding out I was going to Oakland was one of the happiest moments of my life. I burst out of my house and just started walking up the street, calling up my friends on the phone to tell them that I was going to be in the National Football League.

I was so, so happy, right? I was going to punt for the Raiders.

Then I called my one friend. The honest friend. Everybody got one.

“Hey bro, doesn’t Oakland already have a good punter?” he said. “I mean, I think they have like the best punter in the league.”

Damn.

I didn’t really follow the NFL closely. I was too busy playing. Right away I started looking online to find out all I could about Shane Lechler. He averaged over 50 yards per punt for the Raiders the season before I was drafted. That meant he was really good, for all of you Madden players reading.

So I didn’t know what to expect anymore. I didn’t know if the Raiders were seriously interested in me, or just using me as a warm body to compete with Shane until the season started. Before training camp started, I felt like I had no chance to make the squad. But when I got to Oakland, I was determined to make the most of my opportunity. I told myself that even if I wasn’t going to be the starter, or even make the final cut, I’d use the opportunity to learn as much as I could from one of the best punters in the league.

So that’s what I did. I got in rep after rep until things started to come together. I wanted to show all the coaches and players watching that I was listening, and that I was for real. So every day I came in with a chip on my shoulder, trying to show everyone just how good I could be.

The bad news was that I got hurt in training camp and found out I would miss the entire 2012 season. The good news was, the Raiders put me on injured reserve and still kept me on the team. I was so grateful to the coaches who thought I was worth keeping around. That season, I watched everything Shane did on the field. I showed up at the practice facility every day just wanting to soak up as much as I could. By the time 2013 came around, Shane had signed with the Texans, and I was fully rehabbed and ready to show that I could hang with the best of them.

In the span of like two years I went from a raw, undrafted rookie to a starting NFL punter. Since then, I’ve just tried to get better every day and do my part. Maybe I don’t look like the average punter, but that’s cool with me, because I’m not trying to be average. I want kids watching the game on Sundays to look at me and say, “Hey, that dude is pretty cool. He’s got some swag. I want to be a punter, too.”

There’s a whole new generation of punters in the NFL who have a little swag.

Brad Wing? Swag.

Bryan Anger? Swag.

I know that, for a lot of fans, the punter running out onto the field is just a signal to get up and get some chips or check fantasy football scores. But the way I look at it, those four to five times I run out there could be the difference between us winning and losing.

Mentally, this position can be just as rough as any of 'em.

When we lose, I take it hard. It doesn't affect me at all when the clock is running, but in the locker room afterward — when I'm sitting beside guys who are exhausted and covered in dirt, sweat and sometimes even blood — I start to replay the game back: Could I have made the difference in the game just by moving my toe a millimeter to the left on that third quarter kick?

For me, fourth down is my chance to be a star. I know I'm not going to lead a comeback drive or create a turnover to swing the game. But I am proud of what I do. I want my teammates to know that I want those wins as bad as every one of them. Kickers don't have to deal with the same level of physical pain as position players, but we feel the same pressure to win as everybody else. Honestly, every time we lose, I have to call my mom on the drive back home just to calm down and stop my brain from wondering, What if I had just done this? Or this? What if?

To the average fan watching on TV, maybe it's only punting. But punting is my entire life. And I still just want to prove that I have the best leg in the neighborhood.

Raiders' Marquette King punts, dances, has fun
By Josh Peter
November 18, 2016

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Dressed in camouflage, Marquette King greeted a visitor at his offseason home this week with a request. He asked that the location of his bachelor pad remain undisclosed.

"I'm like Batman," King told USA TODAY Sports. "I don't want to let them know where I'm at."

But the NFL's only African-American punter, who occasionally dresses up as Superman and the Green Power Ranger, is perfectly happy that more people have discovered who he is. King, 28 and in his fifth year with the Oakland Raiders, has proven to be as adept at attracting attention as he is at punting footballs.

During Oakland's 30-20 victory over the Denver Broncos on Nov. 6, for example, King celebrated punts by mimicking a cowboy riding a horse and performing windmill-arm dance. Video of his dance moves went viral, and King suggested his celebrations are almost involuntary.

"It's like drinking a Coca-Cola," he said while enjoying a final day off during the Raiders' bye week. "You drink it and it's like, 'Ahhhh.' It's like a release."

For King, there's been plenty to celebrate of late.

With the Raiders off to a 7-2 start, he has continued to emerge as one of the best, and unquestionably the most entertaining, punters in the league. He signed a five-year, $16.5 million contract extension in February and then spent a chunk of that money here on his six-bedroom home.

In the living room, a stuffed Elmo sits nestled into the corner of a leather couch. King explained that he won the doll while playing a coin-operated, claw arcade game.

"First try," King said, beaming. "I remember (Elmo) from when I was little. So I felt like, 'He's familiar. He can chill.' "

On the walls of the house, King said, more than a half-dozen photos of him in his football uniform serve a purpose.

"Sometimes, it's like a dream," King said of his life. "Then I get a chance to look at the pictures and I'm like, 'Oh, yeah, I play for the Raiders.' "

His path to the pros was unlikely. King, one of only a handful of African-American punters in NFL history, played wide receiver while attending Rutland High School in Macon, Ga.

While practicing receiver routes on his own, King said, he grew bored and started punting. He fell in love and soon took over as his high school's team's punter.

"There'd be times in practice where he'd punt them so high and far, it would stop practice," said Lance Perlman, then head coach at Rutland High. "Guys would be looking and go, 'Holy cow.' He's putting them up in the atmosphere."

But King's powerful leg went largely overlooked by college coaches, partly because Rutland is a small high school that draws few recruiters and partly because Rutland's offense was so good King punted only five times his senior year.

So upon graduating in 2008, King walked on at Fort Valley (Ga.) State, a historically black college. He later earned a scholarship and celebrated after punts like the 80-yarder he once uncorked on his way to the NFL.

Signed in 2012 by the Raiders as an undrafted free agent, King won the starting job the next year. But he said he felt stifled until the arrival of Jack Del Rio, who took over as the Raiders head coach in 2015.

King, who said the previous coaching staff discouraged him from celebrating, got approval from Del Rio's staff to cut loose again.

"I felt like somebody put helium in my body or something because I felt so free," King said. "If you can be yourself, you play light. I feel more powerful on the field. I feel, I don't know, I'm just in a happy place."

Almost everybody seems to be happy with King these days. After all, he's averaging 48.4 yards per punt, fifth-best in the league; averaging 41.8 yards net per punt, tied for sixth-best in the league; and has landed 21 punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line, tied for third-best in the league.

And, of course, he leads the league in post-punt celebrations.

"I've always been dancing, man," King said. "I've had coaches in the past tell me, 'You need to calm down. The punter position, you just do your job and walk off the field.' And I'm like, 'What?'

"I mean, I just put this ball inside the 10 and you think I'm fixing to walk off the field like nothing ain't happened? Shoot, I'm fixing to enjoy this."

Greg Coleman, the first African-American punter in the NFL, said he approves of King's style.

"He has great talent and an ability and a personality to match," said Coleman, who played in the NFL from 1977-88. "You just love to see players have fun in the National Football League with so many restrictions (imposed by the league)."

Yet King said he knows some people object to his style — and he has no plans to change.

"Bro," he said, "I don't want to be like everybody else."

Raiders undrafted rookie Kirkland thrives as extra lineman
By Josh Dubow
November 16, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — After failing to hear his name called during last spring's NFL draft, Denver Kirkland's number is getting called quite often for the Oakland Raiders this season.

Kirkland has gone from the disappointment of being undrafted despite leaving Arkansas early to making the Raiders initially as a practice squad player to becoming a key contributor as Oakland's extra offensive lineman.

Kirkland played nearly half the offensive snaps against Denver on Nov. 6 as the sixth lineman for the Raiders (7-2), with each entry onto the field accompanied by the announcement by the referee that No. 79 is an eligible receiver.

"It's been fun," Kirkland said. "It's just nice to be out there going to war with the boys I practice with every week."

The season has been a lot more fun for Kirkland than the draft. He decided to leave Arkansas early but a poor performance at the combine led to him going undrafted.

Kirkland watched the draft with his family and tried not to get too discouraged.

"I just kept hope alive and I'm here now," he said. "I always had a positive attitude. I didn't want to get down on myself. Now I have to go even harder than ever."

The Raiders showed interest in Kirkland even before the end of the draft, calling him to tell him they wanted him as an undrafted free agent if no team took him.

Kirkland got calls from other teams after the draft but chose the Raiders because of their early interest. The coaching staff liked what they saw from Kirkland once he arrived.

"Denver's been a big, physical guy, tough guy," coach Jack Del Rio said. "We were drawn to him in camp, thought there were some things that were worth developing and that development, obviously, has been accelerated a little bit with him being on the field as much as he is now."

Kirkland got his chance after blocking tight end Lee Smith went on injured reserve with a lower-leg injury on Oct. 5. Kirkland had been promoted to the active roster the previous week because of injuries on the offensive line but didn't get a chance to play until Smith's injury.

With Oakland's other tight ends, Clive Walford and Mychal Rivera, more skilled as receivers than blockers, the Raiders started utilizing the six-lineman package more often.

Kirkland played 27 snaps in his first game against San Diego on Oct. 9 and has looked right at home on the field as part of a line that has been one of the league's best this season at both run and pass blocking.

"He's such a good dude, he's so quiet, and all he does is come to work and grind every single day," quarterback Derek Carr said. "We knew from the beginning, we were like, 'Man, this guy could be special. He could be a really good player.' And so far, he's come into games for us and he's played outstanding."

Kirkland got his most action against the Broncos when he played 42 snaps and was a key part of a running attack that gained 218 yards.

While Kirkland is being counted on mostly as an extra blocker, the Raiders do have a few pass plays in the playbook for him that he hopes get called soon.

"I got hands. I got good hands," he said. "I hope so. That would be a great moment for me."

DL Darius Latham

BAY AREA NEWS GROUP

Latham taking advantage of his undrafted opportunity
By Jimmy Durkin
August 22, 2016

ALAMEDA — Darius Latham never imagined not hearing his name called when he declared for the NFL draft following his junior season at Indiana.

"I probably would've stayed in school," Latham, the Raiders' rookie defensive tackle, said of the idea of him not being among the 253 draftees.

Latham was a projected late-round pick after a three-year Indiana career saw him accumulate 81 tackles and 7.5 sacks. But he didn't help his draft stock with a March arrest for operating a vehicle while intoxicated.

After being passed over, the 6-foot-5, 305-pound Latham had interest from several teams.

"I got a lot of calls, but I pretty much had my mind made up where I was going to go," Latham said.

The Raiders love versatile players on their defensive line, guys who can line up as a 5 technique (on the outside shoulder of the offensive tackle), 3 technique (in between the offensive guard and tackle) and nose (head up on the center). That fits Latham's game.

"I don't like being a one-dimensional player," he said. "I like being able to play on edges, get down and dirty in the trenches like 3 technique and nose, taking on combos and double teams. It's just a good look to be able to put those type of plays on film."

Latham played a team-high 37 snaps in last week's exhibition loss to the Green Bay Packers. Through two weeks of the preseason, the website Pro Football Focus has graded Latham as the top rookie defensive/nose tackle in the league — ahead of all 21 defensive tackles that were drafted.

"He's strong," Raiders defensive line coach Jethro Franklin said of Latham. "He plays with good pad level. He's got a little pass rush. He's still got work to do. Just take it day by day, continue to work the fundamentals and be disciplined in everything we do and see where it takes him from there."

Latham got valuable experience against the Packers when he rotated in with the starting defense during the first half. That allowed him to not only play alongside Raiders starters such as Khalil Mack, but go up against Green Bay's first-string offensive line.

"That's always good for him," Franklin said. "It's just part of the process. Guys periodically will have that opportunity. He's definitely earned it. He's just got to continue to build from that and get better."

The Raiders have an opening and need for some defensive line help with Mario Edwards Jr. sidelined for a few weeks with a hip injury. Latham said that hasn't changed his approach.

“I pretty much had the same mindset always from the start,” he said. “Just making plays when I’m in. Take advantage of every snap.”

As the snaps keep increasing, Latham’s chances of going from undrafted to the opening 53-man roster look pretty good. Latham isn’t blind to that fact, but is trying to clear the positive chatter about his play from his mind.

“Nothing’s guaranteed,” Latham said. “You’ve got to still go out and work every day. Zone those type of talks out and just keep doing what I’m doing — getting better every day.”

Joining Latham in the rotation with the starters last week was fellow tackle Dan Williams. The 15-game starter from last year got heavy over the offseason and had been relegated to second-team work until the Packers game.

Williams has slowly worked himself into better shape and Franklin is starting to see more of the player the Raiders had last year.

“He’s getting back,” Franklin said. “It’s a process. As time moves along, we’ve just got to make sure we stay ahead of the curve. That’s what we’re doing.

“Dan’s obviously concerned about what he needs to get done to be where he needs to be. And we’ve got a strong eye on him to make sure we’re doing what we can to make sure that he returns to where he needs to be as well.”

It happened, to the recollection of Khalil Mack, at a gas station along U.S. 1 near his home in Fort Pierce, Florida.

Sandy Mack, Khalil's father, spied a friend and colleague from the jail house where he worked.

"His name was Hucklebuck, and he was a big dude. My dad was a big dude," Khalil said following a training camp practice. "My dad was always telling people how many push-ups I could do, and Hucklebuck wanted to see. He said, 'I'll bet he can't do 20.'

"My dad says, 'OK, Khalil, go ahead.' So there I was — outside on the concrete at a gas station, maybe 7 years old. And I pumped out 60 push-ups."

Khalil's dad is hazy on the gas station exhibition, but has no doubt it's true — because such demonstrations were relatively commonplace.

"People didn't believe me when I said he could do push-ups — and I mean straight up, military-style push-ups," Sandy Sr. said. "No slouching — I don't go for that. People would hear about it, they'd ask me and I'd say, 'Khalil, show 'em.' And he'd bounce 'em out like nothing."

Going into his third NFL season, the push-up prodigy is all grown up, a bona fide star at age 25.

Mack is on anyone's short-list of the NFL's top defensive players, along with Houston defensive end J.J. Watt, Denver linebacker Von Miller and Los Angeles Rams defensive tackle Aaron Donald. He was named All-Pro at two different positions — defensive end and linebacker — and his 15 sacks included a five-sack explosion in an upset win over the eventual Super Bowl champion Broncos.

Within a year or two, general manager Reggie McKenzie will present Mack with a contract that is expected to make him the first defensive player in NFL history to average $20 million a season.

None of which Mack is comfortable discussing. Quarterback Derek Carr, the offensive cornerstone of the franchise and also in line for a major payday in the near future, uses humor to disarm teammates who joke about his impending wealth and stardom.

"I try and laugh it off because I'm not smart enough to not say anything," Carr said. "He just deflects it."

Mack's strategy is to give no discernable reaction. Without fuel, the fire will cease.

"He ignores every bit of it," fullback Marcel Reece said. "He just looks straight ahead."

In contrast to Watt, a cottage industry when it comes to commercials, media time and branding, Mack, according to his older brother, has turned down commercial opportunities as well as a guest appearance on HBO's "Ballers" starring Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson.

"He wants to be known as the best before he gets endorsements, and he doesn't feel like he's done anything yet," Sandy Jr. said.

Ask Mack about the pot of gold that awaits and he recoils like an adolescent being asked about his first girlfriend.

"I'm not comfortable talking about that stuff. That's just not me," Mack said. "I like to grind and not think too much about the good stuff. I like to focus on the stuff I need to get better at."

Toward that end, Mack agreed to pull out a laptop computer to give a mini-clinic to his interviewer. He did so on one condition: No game clips of him making sacks or tackles for losses. Mack would only show the plays where he made a mistake.

Out of a file labeled "KHALIL BAD," Mack cues up a play from last Nov. 15, a 30-14 loss to the Minnesota Vikings in Oakland.

Minnesota quarterback Teddy Bridgewater fakes a handoff to Adrian Peterson and rolls to his right.

Mack hesitates when confronted with right tackle T.J. Clemmings and tight end Kyle Rudolph, and Bridgewater rolls free to the right. The pass is completed for a short gain along the sideline.

"I could have gotten to the mesh point right there, the quarterback and running back exchange," Mack said. "My angle was bad, and I played it too flat. I could have made it a lot easier for our cornerback David Amerson out there on the edge."

Mack runs the same play back and forth, shaking his head slightly.

"I'm looking at my footwork, hand placement, I'm thinking about all those things," Mack said. "I know the next team will go right to this play to see the stuff you don't do too well."

Next, Mack slices inside the guard and tackle and has a clear shot at Bridgewater. One problem: He takes a swipe at the ball, and Bridgewater gets away.

"These are the ones you have nightmares about right here," Mack said. "I had the sack, and I let it go. You've got to make those, man. I was trying to reach for the ball instead of tackling. That could have been 16 sacks."

Another play, another split-second hesitation, another chance for Mack to self-correct.

"See, this is nasty right here," Mack said as Peterson takes a handoff for a short gain. "I thought it was going to be a play-action pass, and I waited instead of just blowing him up."

It goes on like this for a few more plays before he closes the laptop and ends the lesson. Mack has made his point. He could have been better. Should have been better. Much better.

“That would have been 17 sacks … 18 …,” Mack said. “When you’ve got a chance, you’ve got to capitalize.”

Khalil Mack arrived in a big way on Feb. 22, 1991, the second of three sons to Sandy and Yolanda Mack.

“He was 10 pounds, 8 ounces, and they thought he might be diabetic because he was such a big baby,” Yolanda said. “But he was just a healthy baby. There was no fat on him anywhere. He already had a muscular frame — he had muscles on his calves.”

As his older brother Sandy Jr. said, “He was ripped when he came out of the womb.”

It runs in the family. Sandy Sr. is a solid 6-foot-1, 285 pounds. Sandy Jr., once a powerful high school running back nicknamed “Mack Truck,” is working toward his certification as a personal trainer. Yolanda says LeDarius, the youngest of the three at age 19, more than holds his own in the weight room.

At the same time, church and Bible study were a constant presence in their life.

“We were expected to help others,” Sandy Jr. said. “My parents were big on believing God would open doors for us, and Khalil never took that for granted.”

Sandy Sr. worked in corrections and later as a program specialist for at-risk youth, while Yolanda was a teacher.

Through childhood and adolescence, Khalil’s personality remained consistent. He was quiet, humble and respectful. Yolanda said there was never an issue with teachers at school and that one day in his freshman year at Westwood High, Khalil came home wearing a T-shirt that said “Citizen of the Month.”

As Christmas neared, the more loquacious Sandy Jr. would make sure his parents knew his gift preferences in order of importance, while Khalil seemed fine with anything that came his way.

The only way his parents could tell if Khalil didn’t like a gift is if he didn’t use it or wear it, because he never complained.

“He was always content with what he had,” Yolanda said. “He was always a peacemaker and his own leader. He never followed the crowd. I didn’t have to worry with Khalil about peer pressure.”

Yet when it came to sports, the otherwise laid-back Khalil transformed into a fierce competitor. Dad made sure of that.

Whether it was push-ups, basketball or brain teasers, Yolanda said her husband wanted the boys competing and striving to be the best, never doing anything halfway.

“He told us all the time, ‘If you’re going to do something, be the best,’ ” Khalil said.

Sandy Mack grew up competing against his twin brother Sammie and wanted the same for his sons, even if Khalil at times would be a little overexuberant.

“When we played basketball when he was young, I had to remind him, ‘You can’t be jumping on top of my head. I have to go to work tomorrow,’ ” Sandy said. “He really wants to be very good at what he does, and he’s been like that since he was a little kid. Real quiet, but when we played basketball or football, he was like a Tasmanian devil. He has a focus that is out of this world when it comes to sports.”

While the Mack boys played youth football, Sandy was reticent for Khalil to play for fear he might hurt someone. He’d been toughened up in backyard sessions with Sandy Jr., who said he went “beast mode” on his younger sibling.

When Khalil did play youth football, he ended up breaking the collarbone of a 12-year-old opponent on a tackle.

Sandy Jr. recalled the time he and his brother promised their late grandfather they would play in the NFL. Yet as Khalil got into high school, basketball was his first love, and he didn’t play football until his senior year.

With his son recovering from a torn patellar tendon, Sandy wanted Khalil to concentrate on graduating rather than playing football.

“I was thinking maybe the military for Khalil,” Sandy Sr. said. “All I knew was I wanted him out of Fort Pierce.”

That changed when first-year Westwood coach Waides Ashmon got a look at Mack and inquired why an athlete with the most impressive physique in school was not playing football.

Khalil told Ashmon to call his father, and the coach instantly whipped out a cellphone and promised Sandy Sr. his son would go to college for free if he played football his senior year.

The late start hurt recruiting, but Ashmon’s promise was kept when Buffalo came through with a football scholarship.

So Mack went from Florida to freezing winters in Buffalo, as usual, without a whisper of complaint.

“He was 1,300 miles away from us, and he never once called to ask for anything. Not a dime,” Sandy Sr. said. “He’d always say, ‘No, I’m good, pop.’ “

Mack impressed his coaches by working diligently, arriving early for meetings and breaking out a highlighter to go over practice plans and defensive assignments.

On the field, Mack began to realize his football career wouldn’t necessarily end at Buffalo.

During one practice, Mack ran around the blocking attempt of James Starks, a running back who went on to play for the Green Bay Packers.

“He told me, ‘Man, you’re strong. You’re going to the league,’ ” Khalil said. “That started to get me thinking.”

Mack began comparing himself with other players from the Mid-America Conference and watching players such as Von Miller, the No. 2 pick in 2011, and Dion Jordan, taken No. 3 overall in 2013.

“I knew they were probably playing against better people, but the NFL looked like something I thought I could do,” Khalil said.

A big game in a nonconference loss to Ohio State removed any doubt, and when Mack was available when the Raiders picked at No. 5 in the first round in 2014, McKenzie didn’t hesitate.

Khalil impressed veteran teammates as much with his attitude as his work ethic, even as a rookie.

“Khalil came in, picking my brain as soon as he got in, wanted to be great, and wanted to put in the extra work,” left tackle Donald Penn said. “He’s not a ‘me’ guy. He’s a team guy.”

Said veteran Marcel Reece: “I’ve seen first-round picks come in here and think the world should be handed to them. They’re prima donnas. They don’t think they have to work. They don’t think they have to practice. Khalil does what everyone else does — and then some.”

As a rookie, Mack stood out as a run defender, and while he pressured the quarterback consistently, he had just four sacks.

The only glitch came when the Raiders finally won their first game of the season against Kansas City after starting the season 0-10. After Sio Moore sacked Alex Smith with 28 seconds to play, the linebacker and Mack were busy performing a dance while the Chiefs quarterback rushed to the line of scrimmage to run a play.

Justin Tuck called timeout to prevent the Raiders from receiving a potentially crippling penalty.

It was a scene entirely in character for Moore, who offered regret with one-liners following the game. Mack, on the other hand, was mortified and embarrassed.

“Now,” Sandy Jr. said, “you’ve got to beg him to celebrate.”

Khalil instantly made an impression on Jack Del Rio, who took over for Dennis Allen and interim coach Tony Sparano in 2015. Del Rio knows a self-starter when he sees one, having been the position coach for Ray Lewis with the Baltimore Ravens from 1999-2001.

“With Khalil, the beautiful thing is that he’s got natural humility,” Del Rio said. “He loves this game, and he’s driven to play great. He wants to develop the skill level. He’s working tirelessly to do that.”

If there were any doubts that Mack was making a bull rush to stardom, they were erased in 2015, when he consistently stuffed the run and finished second to Watt in sacks with 15.

As he enters this season, Mack is trying to be more vocal, but his voice still occasionally trails off to a whisper and his general demeanor has not changed.

Teammates are occasionally awe-struck.

“It’s funny: Khalil doesn’t trash talk, he’s a very humble person, and he’s a really good guy,” tackle Menelik Watson said. “But once he gets into football mode, he’s going to rip your head off. It’s just that he’ll rip it off in a polite way.”

During training camp, Penn had been working on a pass blocking maneuver he was convinced gives him leverage, a quick jab he was sure would put Mack on his heels. Instead, Mack simply went lower than seemed humanly possible and blew past Penn.

“This dude, he somehow kept his balance,” Penn said. “He was two inches off the ground and kept rushing. I was all set to fall on top of him, and he just kept going. I asked (line coach) Mike Tice what I should do. He said, ‘I don’t have anything … good luck.’ “

Former Raiders linebacker Bill Romanowski said Mack’s ability to play both the run and the pass sets him apart from other edge players.

“If I had to compare Mack to anyone, it would be Von Miller,” Romanowski said. “Von may have a tiny edge in the pass rush because he’s a little smaller and a little quicker, but he can’t play the run like Mack. I think Mack is the more complete player all-around.”

Miller, last year’s Super Bowl MVP, signed a six-year, $114.5 million contract with a reported $70 million guaranteed.

The Raiders have Mack under contract through the 2017 season, and it’s conceivable the four-year, $18.6 million deal he signed as a rookie will be extended as an annual salary at some point in the near future.

It’s a huge commitment, but unlike a risky free-agent signing, the Raiders know exactly what they’re getting in terms of character and commitment.

“You’ve got to keep your stars. You pay it, and then you adjust the salary structure from there,” NFL Network analyst and former general manager Charley Casserly said. “Sometimes you try and beat the market and sign a guy early, but I don’t think they’ll worry about that with Mack. You don’t worry about it when a guy’s worth it.”

Herm Edwards, a former NFL head coach and ESPN analyst, compares Mack’s skill on the edge with Hall of Fame outside linebacker Derrick Thomas, whom he coached in Kansas City.

“When you pay that kind of money, it’s great for the locker room if it’s a guy you drafted,” Edwards said. “The Raiders know what they have. They know what his DNA is about.”

Included in Khalil’s DNA, according to his mother, is a penchant for coming home to Fort Pierce, visiting with neighbors and the same tight circle of friends he’s always had.

“I know that what he does has a lot of pressure that comes with it,” Yolanda said. “He’s worked hard for his accomplishments and knows that what he has can be here today and gone tomorrow. Our wish for him has always been to be balanced — live a balanced life.”

Watson thinks the $20 million a year threshold may be a bargain when it comes to Mack.

“Shoot, with the effort, intensity and attention to detail he puts in, he might be a $30 million a year a guy,” Watson said. “I really don’t think there’s enough money (under the salary cap) to give him what he’s worth.”

McKenzie understands that his boss would not look kindly at the sight of Mack in another uniform.

"Mark (Davis) would come beat me across the head if I let some Hall of Fame-type player leave the building," McKenzie said.

Mack doesn't plan on changing any time soon, regardless of fame and fortune. Anyone who saw him doing push-ups at a gas station years ago wouldn't be surprised.

"It's how I was raised. My parents put me in a nice position, but that's all it is — a nice position," Mack said. "You've got to put in the work. You've got to humble yourself."

THE UNDEFEATED

Is Khalil Mack The New Lawrence Taylor?
By Jason Reid
September 23, 2016

Fletcher couldn't believe he was about to go there. It used to be that if reporters asked the former Pro Bowl linebacker to compare up-and-coming players with Hall of Famers, he'd shut them down quicker than ball carriers foolish enough to run at him. Over a 16-year NFL career, Fletcher never got caught up in the hype. But now Fletcher was about to break his own rule.

Toward the end of an interview Monday about Khalil Mack, the Oakland Raiders' outstanding third-year defensive end/outside linebacker, Fletcher delivered the money quote. "You can compare him to L.T.," he said.

Uh, New York Giants legend Lawrence Taylor? Arguably the greatest defensive player in league history? That L.T.?

"Yeah. You heard me," Fletcher said. "You know me, so you know I'm hesitant to say that. But, yeah, L.T. He did it for so long. And not just for so long, also the way L.T. did it. But you look at the film, there are similarities. So many similarities."

By dropping those initials, Fletcher essentially dropped the mic.

For a defensive player, there's no higher praise than to have your performance compared favorably with that of Taylor, the onetime iconic outside linebacker who helped the Giants win two Super Bowls. The thing is, Fletcher's assessment seems right on point. Mack is that good.

At only 25, Mack has rocketed to stardom. Following a strong rookie year, he changed positions in 2015 and emerged as one of the game's most productive pass-rushers. Even long-suffering Raiders fans have hope again. Oakland actually expects its playoff drought to end after 14 seasons, and Mack is at the forefront of the revival. He wouldn't want it any other way.

"We can't waste any time," Mack told The Undefeated recently at the Raiders' training facility in Alameda, California. "We're trying to get good right now. Today. Not tomorrow. So you just go out and do it."

Time after time, Fletcher stopped the film to focus on No. 52. He had to make sure his eyes weren't deceiving him.

Often on passing plays, Mack tossed aside left tackles en route to sacks. Running plays to Mack's side were similarly ineffective. Blockers couldn't move him. In countless hours of film study, Fletcher hadn't seen even a handful of defensive players with Mack's all-around game.

"What jumps out at you, what you really see on the film, is just how explosive and strong he is," said Fletcher, now a CBS Sports analyst. "He has that strong lower body. He's able to really get underneath pass-blockers. He's relentless. For a kid, and you have to remember he's still a kid, his strength is just phenomenal.

"There have been a ton of talented pass-rushers who've come into the league. There have been a lot of young guys who have had speed and quickness off the edge. But you don't see guys who have that combination of brute force as well as athleticism. That combination is just rare. That's why you start thinking of L.T."

Mack's statistics also conjure thoughts of L.T.

Last season, Mack finished second in the NFL with 15 sacks. No player had more sacks in one game than the five he totaled in Week 14 against the Denver Broncos. A deeper dive into the numbers further supports Fletcher's position.

Mack had 39.5 percent (15-of-38) of Oakland's sacks. Only Robert Ayers of the Giants (41.3) had a higher percentage of one team's sacks, according to ESPN's Stats & Information. Mack also had 17 disrupted dropbacks (sacks, interceptions, batted passes and passes defended). That was the eighth-highest total. All numbers that add up to one thing: dominance.

Mack became the first player named an Associated Press first-team All-Pro at two positions — defensive end and outside linebacker — in the same season. Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio wasn't surprised. "First, he's got the natural ability," Del Rio said. "And guys who have that natural gift, and work as hard as he does, will typically continue to improve. I thought he was that kind of player coming out of the draft."

Shortly after the Raiders hired Del Rio in January 2015, he met with Mack to discuss changing his position. It turned out to be a monologue more than a discussion.

Both Del Rio and new Oakland defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. had been Pro Bowl linebackers. Although Mack was impressive as an outside linebacker, especially against the run, after Oakland selected him with the fifth overall pick in the 2014 draft, Del Rio and Norton had other ideas. As a hand-down right end who rarely dropped into coverage, Del Rio explained, Mack could make a bigger impact for the Raiders. That's all Mack needed to hear.

"You've got a love for the game. And whatever you can do to help your team win, because that's what it's about, do it to the best of your ability," Mack said. "You always want to make that statement. Coach Jack came in and put me in that position.

"It was positive for me because I love to go forward, rush the quarterback and wreak havoc in the backfield. It's just a love for me. So the switch really wasn't even a switch for me, at least not mentally. It was just freeing me up to go forward a lot more."

Mack credits Raiders defensive line coach Jethro Franklin with his continued development. Each day after practice, they carve out time to refine Mack's pass-rushing technique, everything from footwork, hand placement and leverage. And Mack is still rock solid against the run. It's pretty much unfolding just as Del Rio envisioned.

"He really made a big step last year in his understanding of how to rush and finish, and Coach Franklin working with him on different rush moves has really helped," Del Rio said. "Because he's such a powerful guy, stacking up the run comes very natural for him. The area where we should continue to see growth is in his skill level at rushing the passer. It becomes more innate as you get reps. And he's definitely working at his trade."

That being said, the Raiders aren't exactly off to a fast start — Mack or no Mack.

Through two games, Oakland (1-1) has given up a whopping 1,014 net yards. Opponents are averaging 34.5 points. Part of the problem is that Mack has no sacks.

Clearly, Del Rio and Norton have some fine-tuning to do on defense. Not surprisingly, Mack has taken responsibility for the slow start. He plans to do more.

"I'm just always thinking about what I can do as a leader on this team," Mack said. "That's what I have to do."

The Raiders aren't concerned about Mack. After all, even L.T. had quiet stretches early in his career. Well, every once in a while, anyway.

"It's not about one or two games – it's about the whole season," Fletcher said. "Over a whole season, there just aren't a lot of football players who can do all the things he does, and at the level he does. Those are the guys you want."

Mack is the right guy for the Raiders. And before he's finished, he may be a guy who winds up in the same class as Taylor. Or at least closer to it than anyone else.

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Khalil Mack-of-all-trades does it all for Raiders' defense
By Vic Tafur
November 29, 2016

"Like Khalil says …"

It's one of the phrases you hear the most in the Raiders' locker room, especially after another game like Sunday's, when Oakland gave up 25 consecutive points but still won 35-32.

"Like Khalil (Mack) says, 'By any means,'" offensive tackle Donald Penn said.

Mack is not only the team's best defensive player, icing Sunday's win with a sack and a forced fumble, but the 25-year-old defensive end is also the team's leader and motto provider.

“We have to do whatever it takes to win,” fullback Jamize Olawale said. “Khalil says it before any game, ‘By any means,’ and that’s our mind-set. Go out there and take care control of the game, however we have to do it.”

The Raiders are 9-2 and in first place in the AFC West. Seven of those wins were by seven points or fewer, and five came after they trailed in the fourth quarter. Sunday’s came off a short week (after a Monday night game in Mexico) against a 4-6 Carolina team that was playing for its season, on extra rest.

Mack had a big play at the end of each half, his interception return for a touchdown capping a 17-0 Oakland second quarter, and then the strip sack and recovered fumble to finish off the Panthers on a 4th-and-10 play at the Raiders’ 44-yard line.

Mack told himself it was time to take over the game.

“You have to have that on your mind,” Mack said. “You want to change the game by any means. Knowing it’s fourth down and they’re going for it and it’s late in the game and they could possibly tie it up, you want to make that play to get the ball and end it.”

By any means …

“I’ve even borrowed it a couple of times. It rubs off,” head coach Jack Del Rio said of the motto. “You like it, right? It makes sense. Because whatever we have to do, by any means. It’s awesome and it’s really been what we’ve been about.”

Mack was groomed for leadership by Charles Woodson and Justin Tuck in his first two seasons, but the playmaking ability was why the Raiders drafted him fifth overall in 2014. He has nine sacks this season, and his 24 since the start of 2015 are the most in the NFL.

On the Panthers’ last play Sunday, receiver Amari Cooper said he was focused on only one player as the teams lined up.

“I was watching Khalil,” Cooper said. “I wanted to see what he was going to do. This guy is unusually talented, and he made a play.”

Tell the Panthers about it. They had three players focused on stopping Mack on the play. Mack overpowered tackle Trai Turner and was too fast for running back Fozzy Whittaker or guard Chris Scott to get a hand on him. Quarterback Cam Newton didn’t see him coming, and Mack swiped the ball loose right before Newton was going to throw.

“Great desire,” Del Rio said. “He just collapsed that tackle, really nullified the chip just by powering that guy and took the ball away and then recovered it. It was a great play.”

Del Rio wasn’t sure which play he liked better, that one or the interception, when Mack didn’t fall for a fake pass and then snatched a Newton pass and ran 6 yards for the touchdown. And then did a reverse spin-jump into the Black Hole stands.

“He reached up … it was like the reflexes (of) a tiger playing with a ball,” Del Rio said. “Somebody threw a ball, he just snatched it and goes in and scores and jumps rather easily. I know I couldn’t get halfway up that wall. He jumped into the Black Hole. That was pretty cool.”

By any means …

"That's a super athlete right there," wide receiver Michael Crabtree said of Mack. "Didn't surprise me. He can do anything he wants, catch, jump, throw ..."

And lead.

THE RINGER

The Thinker
By Kevin Clark
December 21, 2016

Oakland's Khalil Mack can get into the backfield with ease. "That shit is self-explanatory," fellow Raiders pass rusher Bruce Irvin says. Mack, the third-year outside linebacker and defensive end, is more powerful than most and faster than the rest. Those aren't the skills that Mack wants to rely upon on every play, however. Picasso could have painted sunsets and beaches, but that wouldn't have been the best use of his specific talents.

The other part of Mack is not self-explanatory, but it's what makes him one of the most feared players in football: He's a defensive genius, as cerebral as he is fast and strong. His vision before and after the snap is as unrivaled as his ludicrously high vertical jump. He can overpower and outsmart the opponent, and on any given play, he can choose to do both.

The 25-year-old defender has left a trail of embarrassed offensive linemen, quarterbacks, and offensive coordinators in his wake as he's helped to spark the first-place Raiders' renaissance. He ranks in the top five in the NFL in sacks (11), forced fumbles (five), and fumble recoveries (three). This month, he tied the franchise record by delivering a sack in his eighth straight game. Last season, he became the first player in NFL history to earn All-Pro honors at two positions (defensive end and outside linebacker). The no. 5 overall pick in the 2014 draft became a star the moment he entered the league, but this season he's forced more turnovers than ever, been a more consistent force from game to game (one-third of his sacks last season came in one contest), and been so disruptive that his eventual standing as a Raiders defensive stalwart seems all but assured. And this year's Raiders have risen along with him and fellow breakout star Derek Carr, last week clinching their first playoff spot since 2002. Mack is a gifted pass rusher, but labeling him a sack artist would be like describing Chance the Rapper as the guy in the hat. They're both so much more.

"He knows the angles, he knows which arm to reach out with based on where the quarterback likes to hold the ball, he knows exactly at what depth the quarterback will be," says Raiders defensive line coach Jethro Franklin. "He knows how many steps their drops are, their setup points. He has a great combination of strength, speed, and power. But the biggest thing is his knowledge."

Pass rushing can be simple—see the quarterback, try to hit him—but Mack employs an atypical philosophy that would make decades of hit-first-ask-questions-later rushers cringe: "I'm not looking for the big hit," Mack says. That's because he's not just seeking to disrupt a play; he's aiming to destroy an opponent's entire game plan using his blend of instincts, intellect, and raw athleticism.

While Mack's intentions are a constant, the specifics can vary from play to play. Earlier this month, for example, Mack needed to seal a game against the Buffalo Bills, who faced a first-and-10 from the Raiders' 17-yard line with 3:30 left in the fourth quarter and were threatening to making it a one-score game. Mack processes dozens of data points on each play (here's one: Tyrod Taylor typically sets to throw from about 5 yards behind the line of scrimmage, which Mack says is closer than almost any quarterback), but in that moment, one factor emerged supreme: After marching 58 yards down field on the drive, the Bills were tired. Their blocking scheme featured a running back patrolling the edge and not even pretending to run a route, so Mack knew he'd need to find a way to power through the inside of the line. But after nearly four full quarters of action, he was exhausted, too, so he started jogging casually after the snap. Only:

"It was a setup," Mack says. He wasn't tired at all, but his ruse had lulled the right tackle, Jordan Mills, into relaxing. "So I hit him with the bull rush."

Robert Wimberly, Mack's former University at Buffalo linebackers coach and current Liberty defensive coordinator, says that nearly every NFL scout he engages with asks the same question: How did bigger schools miss on Mack, whom Wimberly recruited as a two-star prospect out of Fort Pierce, Florida? Wimberly remains dumbfounded that teams failed to identify Mack's athletic prowess, but concedes that such oversights do occur, especially in a state like Florida that's so densely populated with elite high school football players. What's more, he's come to realize that what makes Mack great is hard to scout. He has natural vision and athleticism, yes, but the real key is that he chooses to pair those abilities with a fierce desire to watch film on every inch of the opposition until he identifies the most direct route for getting the ball back to his offense. Those differentiators first emerged during his college years at Buffalo.

Lou Tepper, Mack's college defensive coordinator, says that Mack possesses one physical gift that he cannot remember seeing in his years of coaching star pass rushers, including Hall of Famer Bruce Smith.

"None of them had the ability to see the ball while rushing the passer," Tepper says. "What Khalil does is uncanny. Pass rushers focus so much on the protection, the [offensive] tackle, the chip blocks, and you take it all as you go, and no one can do all that and focus on the football at the same time. He can. He was given a gift, and I've never seen anything quite like that."

When Mack paired that natural vision with NFL-style film study, something special happened: The fast, strong guy who had already proved capable of seeing everything as it was happening learned to see things before they happened, too.

"The most important thing after you make sure you know where the ball is," Mack says, "is to know where it's going." The result? The plays that have rocked the NFL this year, cementing Mack's status as one of the game's premier defensive forces and as a Raiders legend in the making. The team that has produced Ted Hendricks, Howie Long, Jack Tatum, and Charles Woodson has another potential all-time great in its ranks.

One of those season-defining plays came in a key November AFC West battle against the defending Super Bowl champions, when Mack pulled off a strip sack of Denver's Trevor Siemian. Mack could have simply tried to clobber Siemian once he began to close in on the QB, but there was a catch: "He could see me, and I could see that he saw that I could see him," Mack says. Thanks to his obsessive analysis of where quarterbacks will be, Mack knew how to adjust. He knew that Siemian preferred to set up about 7 yards back in the pocket, deeper than most quarterbacks, meaning it would take Mack slightly longer than usual to reach the passer. Mack also knew that Siemian would step forward hard in the pocket to try to avoid the rush. And finally, Mack knew that he could get a hand out, use Siemian's natural forward movement against him, and pop the ball out. So that's exactly what he did.

Mack's mental calculations also proved key a few weeks later against the team Denver beat in last season's Super Bowl. Mack knew that Carolina's Trai Turner, the tackle in front of him, had moved over from guard for the game and was playing "soft," leaving him susceptible to being pushed back quite easily. Mack suspected that the Panthers were going to rely on runs and quick passes to boost Turner's confidence. So just before the half, on a second down from the Carolina 13, Mack could have cut inside and chased Newton after the ball was snapped, but he weighed every factor and bided his time. Again, just landing the hit wasn't the point. He saw Newton cradle the ball low, indicating that the QB wasn't going to throw in the direction the play suggested: away from Mack. He deduced, both from his film study and innate feel, that Newton was going to turn and quickly throw the ball to the other side. Mack pushed Turner back easily, but did not try one of his pass-rush moves. Instead, he hovered near the line of scrimmage off to Newton's right. Mack put himself in the right spot: He picked off the pass and scored a touchdown.

Mack isn't just a challenge for offensive linemen and quarterbacks. He's a total conundrum: He's so smart about disrupting plays that he could get by on brains and hard work alone. But there is, of course, also the matter of his extreme athleticism.

One day this August, Donald Penn, the Raiders' 6-foot-5 Pro Bowl offensive tackle, finally thought he had figured Mack out. In training camp, Mack started to hit Penn with a devastating move to blow past him, bursting off the line then bending low around the lineman and toward the quarterback. For days, Penn could not stop it, but he kept working. "I was close to countering it and I was getting closer and closer," Penn says. "And one day, I knew it was coming and I was able to hit him with the counter."

There was just one problem: "It didn't work," Penn says. "He was able to keep his balance. Thank God it was a practice so [Carr] didn't get hurt."

Raiders coaches played the film that night during an offensive line meeting. Penn says that offensive line coach Mike Tice analyzed the sequence of events and announced that there was nothing to coach there, no lessons to take from that failure. "My coaching point," Penn remembers Tice saying, "is good luck."

In spring 2014, the owner of the Fort Pierce, Florida, car wash that Sandy Mack frequents started talking to him about the upcoming NFL draft. Sandy, Khalil's father, always pushed his son to be perfect, saying "I'm not going to go to a game to see you sit on the bench." He always warned him about the people working to take Khalil's spot: "There's someone out there practicing so if you are sleeping or relaxing, someone is coming to take your place, don't let that happen."

So when the car wash proprietor mentioned that he thought South Carolina's Jadeveon Clowney was a little better than Mack, "I had to step up on the guy," Sandy says. "I said, 'That's not right, that's not right, you'll find out when the games start. Clowney is good but you don't know what you're talking about with my son. He's always been the underdog. He's always been the guy everyone overlooks. You'll find out.'"

History has proven Sandy correct. Clowney, the no. 1 selection in the draft, has been a fine player for the Texans, but due in part to durability concerns has fewer sacks in his three-year career than Mack has since this October 16. "I see the guy all the time and I never say anything," Sandy says. "I'll let my son's play do the talking."

The Macks have heard these doubts for years, giving Khalil what Sandy calls a "quiet anger" and saying there's "no doubt it's fueled him." Mack was an unheralded prospect at Fort Pierce Westwood High School whose only FBS college offer came from Buffalo, and Sandy says there's "no doubt" that the recruitment process played a massive role in his son's competitive streak. There were hints of that spirit even before big colleges and NFL teams gave him more ammo, though: Sandy taught Khalil how to do military-style push-ups ("no slouching") when Khalil was in elementary school, and would challenge his son to see how many he could do, often in front of Sandy's friends, who Sandy says didn't believe how strong of a boy he had. "I'd say, 'I bet you can't do 30 push-ups,' and he'd do it. So I started saying 'I bet you can't do 35, 40' and he'd keep doing it and then would do more. It got to be where it was nothing."

The lore of Mack's self-improvement techniques never made it to major college circles, because Mack's name never did. He didn't play football as a freshman because he was focusing on basketball instead, and he lost his sophomore season to a torn patellar tendon that also kept him out junior year. Westwood coach Waides Ashmon convinced Mack that a college scholarship awaited if he pursued football once he returned to health; even before he hit the field as a senior, though, Ashmon told Wimberly, who was in his first stint with Liberty at the time, that Mack had the potential to be a college player. Wimberly marveled at the tape from Mack's senior season, his only campaign of competitive high school football, and offered him a spot at Liberty, which Mack accepted. When Wimberly took a job at Buffalo after Mack's senior season, Mack made the move up north, too.

Why no one else joined Wimberly in recruiting Mack still baffles the coach in some regards. The tape showed Mack's explosion; the ability to bend so low when running around the blocker that his shoulders nearly hit the ground; the capacity for both covering the pass plays and rushing the passer. Wimberly thought that Mack was about to enjoy the gilded rise toward recruiting stardom, but it never happened. Wimberly notes that the recruiting system has become so competitive that it works against late bloomers, which Mack's initial basketball focus and later injury ensured he'd be. "The way recruiting is now, most teams have their offers out by sophomore year," Wimberly says. "You can't blame the bigger schools, but a lot of times those guys are done with most of their class a year in advance."

When Mack arrived on the Buffalo campus, a buzz started building almost immediately among coaches. In his first scrimmage, Mack changed direction so quickly and with such athleticism that many coaches thought about playing him as a true freshman, but Wimberly says that head coach Turner Gill thought it would be a "disservice" to put Mack on the field so early because it could possibly hinder his long-term development. Mack put his redshirt season to good use, though, "doing a lot lot things you don't see in redshirts," Wimberly says. Typically, players spend their redshirt season trying to understand the general concepts of their side of the ball, which can take "a year or two," Wimberly says. Mack handled that within a few months and moved on to studying the habits of tackles he wasn't yet facing and the tendencies of opponents he wasn't yet playing.

When he got on the field he showed flashes of athleticism, recording 5.5 sacks as a redshirt sophomore and earning first-team All-MAC honors that year. But he still needed to perfect some fundamentals—no surprise for a player with such a short track record of playing organized football. Tepper, the defensive coordinator, says he had to teach Mack the small but crucial building blocks for success: Mack initially attacked blockers off the wrong foot and failed to exhibit maximum effort when pursuing the ball carrier, for example. His on-field practice habits, Tepper says, were "average." But once he nailed the fundamentals, he took a leap. As a redshirt junior, he recorded eight sacks and four forced fumbles. In the first game of his senior season, he recorded 2.5 sacks and scored a pick-six against Ohio State. That was the game, Tepper says, that launched Mack "from a third-round pick to a top-10 pick." He capped his college career by winning MAC Defensive Player of the Year. (Once it became clear that Mack would attend a MAC school, Sandy began joking that it would be the M-A-C-K conference before his son left.)

Mastering the fundamentals was a large part of Mack's jump toward superstardom, but so too was his competitive streak. In 2013, Tepper needed to make sure Mack could dominate a big UMass offensive tackle named Anthony Dima, who was one of the few MAC tackles that coaches thought might be able to contain Mack. Dima popped on film for not only blocking opponents, but mauling them. "Knocking them out left and right," Tepper says. So Tepper started to refer to Dima as "Drago," a reference to the Soviet boxer Ivan Drago in Rocky IV. It resonated with Mack: "I know Rocky like the back of my hand," he says.

Tepper found Dima's "knockout" clips and played them alongside Drago footage to get Mack as fired up as possible. Then, when Mack was most amped about taking down UMass's Drago, Tepper asked Mack if he wanted to flip the defense around to go against the other tackle instead. "And he looked and me and he started yelling: 'Coach, we can't do that!'" Tepper says. "So at that point I keep going, I'm really egging him on and I say, 'Just think about it—you can go against this other guy and get three sacks!' and he just had so much pride."

When Mack took the field, Tepper heard Mack scream "I'm coming for you!" at Dima. He wrecked Dima all afternoon and recorded a pick-six in the second quarter.

This time of year, Mack loves watching his favorite childhood movie, Mary Poppins. "'Spoonful of Sugar'—that joint will forever stick with me," Mack says. "And then you've got 'Feed the Birds'—'Feed the Birds,' now that's cool, too." Mack is musically inclined: He's told the Raiders' website that he's a Tim McGraw fan, and Sandy says that Khalil taught himself guitar in college, apparently just because he wanted to. He's also soft-spoken and laid-back. When asked how he responds to trash talk, he says he doesn't care, that he just wants to hit guys in the mouth. He quickly corrects himself. "On the field, the right way," he says. He's sincere.

Pulling the fire out of him requires digging deeper, which is why so many people around him—coaches, parents, teammates—like to appeal to his competitive side. Mack's competitiveness has led him to become a perfectionist, which has led him to become an NFL superstar and a Raiders icon. One recent example: After Mack recorded a pick-six against Carolina, his former defensive coordinator texted him to congratulate him. Mack replied, Tepper says, by requesting a list of things he could do better.

Tepper isn't the only one from whom Mack seeks council, because the thirst for constant improvement that Sandy instilled in his son at a young age has never diminished. Raiders great Woodson was still active during Mack's first two seasons, and Mack says that he'd seek advice from the franchise hero, who taught him how to tackle with the intent of stripping the ball by putting pressure on the ball carrier's shoulder. (Mack demonstrated the shoulder technique on this reporter, who can confirm its effectiveness.) Remember: For Mack, it's not about the big hit, but the right hit. "I'm looking for leverage in my hits," Mack says when describing his tackling philosophy today. Oakland defensive tackle Dan Williams says that Irvin, the former Seahawk who joined the Raiders over the summer, has given additional lessons to Mack and the team's other pass rushers on how to hit the elbow during the tackle, a tactic Irvin says Mack is employing well. Mack's five forced fumbles this season are two more than he managed in his first two seasons combined.

Franklin, the Raiders' defensive line coach, says that Mack is the perfect pass rusher for this era. For one, offenses are enjoying unprecedented levels of success, with the average quarterback throwing for 242 yards per game, up 18 percent from a decade ago. The best way to slow the competition in a league full of unstoppable offenses is to take the ball away from them. What's more, Mack's knack for pursuing the perfect angle tends to help him avoid the curse that afflicts many modern pass rushers: the dreaded helmet-to-helmet hits, however accidental, that often net 15-yard penalties. "You can't punish the quarterback like you used to," Franklin says. "You can go for the big hit now and it'll probably be helmet-to-helmet anyway and you won't even end up with a sack. Khalil is not looking for a kill shot."

Penn raves about Mack's ability to disguise looks in games, showing speed move after speed move just for the payoff: Right when the lineman goes back on his heels, Mack will switch to a power move. "That's the moment he comes right up and hits you," Penn says. Mack's creativity and versatility still shock his teammates. "Most pass rushers you say, 'OK, he's going to do a bull rush or he's going to do a spin,'" says Williams. "Khalil? You have no idea. None. He can dip [his shoulder] on you, he can use power, he can spin if he wants."

"You cannot label him."

Matt McGloin's unlikely journey to becoming the Raiders' playoff quarterback
By Kent Babb
December 28, 2016

The seasons and circumstances come and go, and one thing keeps being true: Nobody ever seems to pick Matt McGloin.

He is 27, a quarterback, a fill-in and an occasional overachiever for one team or another down on its luck. Now, again, the Oakland Raiders turn to him and hope.

This past weekend, Oakland starter Derek Carr broke a bone in his lower right leg, more than likely sidelining him for the season and bringing a promising year — with one game left, the Raiders are 12-3 and have a fragile hold on the AFC's No. 2 playoff seed — to a disappointing, uncertain end.

Coach Jack Del Rio told reporters Monday, two days after his team defeated the Indianapolis Colts and Carr fractured his fibula, that the Raiders are nonetheless a good team, poised to win the AFC West and make Oakland's first postseason appearance since reaching the Super Bowl following the 2002 season.

But now it's with Carr, one of the league's best young quarterbacks, on the sideline. Now it's with a backup who has attempted four passes this season. Now it's with McGloin, who in his fourth season remains largely unknown throughout the NFL — including, it seemed this week, to Del Rio, who said he's still "getting a sense of who [McGloin] is and what he is and what he likes and what he does."

He is a quarterback who took an unusual route to this point, who teams tend to get stuck with in times of great distress, who no team has chosen — at least in the traditional sense — since McGloin played high school football in Scranton, Pa.

"He relishes the role of the underdog," said Paul McGloin, the quarterback's older brother who also coached Matt McGloin's high school baseball team. "The more you feel like he can't do it, the more he wants to do it."

The Raiders didn't choose this late-season scenario, and in 2015 Del Rio inherited McGloin from the staff of his predecessor, Dennis Allen. The Raiders didn't select McGloin in the 2013 NFL draft, instead bringing him on as a rookie free agent and training camp long shot to compete with Terrelle Pryor and Matt Flynn. Now more than three years later, Pryor is a Cleveland wide receiver and Flynn is out of the league; McGloin, as he has quietly done for years now, just waited his turn.

That's what he did at Penn State, too. Not even the Nittany Lions picked him initially, though McGloin walked on, hung around and eventually led the Big Ten in passing as a redshirt senior in 2012. He had weathered the Joe Paterno storm, publicly supporting a coach who had supported McGloin, who later became an anchor of new Penn State Coach Bill O'Brien's offense after Paterno was fired. He would lead the Lions in a comeback thriller against Northwestern in 2010, McGloin turning a 21-0 deficit into a 35-21 win and Paterno's 400th victory. He would later lead Penn State to victories against Michigan, Iowa and Wisconsin.

McGloin wound up impressing O'Brien so much, had dedicated himself to learning a complicated scheme so thoroughly, had learned and followed instructions so willingly that O'Brien — who left State College after two seasons to take over the Houston Texans — seemed to make it his mission that McGloin would at least get a chance in the NFL.

McGloin indicated in 2013 that O'Brien had taught him to mind the details during their year together at Penn State. O'Brien, a former longtime New England assistant, had been a mentor to McGloin; he taught him the game as those at the highest level played and evaluated it, and the coach later wrote letters to NFL executives to vouch for McGloin.

"I didn't want them to judge a book by its cover," O'Brien was quoted as saying by Pennlive.com following a 2013 radio show appearance, and as much as anything, McGloin's success was O'Brien's success. The coach would parlay his reputation as a quarterbacks guru into an NFL head coaching job in 2014, and perhaps his most impressive student had been the 6-feet-1 former walk-on from Scranton.

And so Raiders General Manager Reggie McKenzie, architect of what has become the NFL's most impressive franchise turnaround, gave McGloin that chance as an undrafted free agent. Allen, the former Raiders coach, went with McGloin as his starter for six games in 2013. Though Oakland finished 4-12, leading them a few months later to select Carr in the draft's second round, McGloin had made enough of an impression that the team retained him as the young passer's backup.

Paul McGloin, the quarterback's brother, said Matt studied sports psychology and worked to mentally prepare himself in case of an emergency. He imagined himself under center and in the backfield, making reads and considering check-down options. He arrived at the team facility before most everyone, planning for this kind of scenario to play out yet again.

Paul McGloin said he has heard analysts express doubt the last few days that his brother can lead the Raiders into and through the playoffs. He has heard about how the team never picked this scenario and is surely in trouble with such an inexperienced passer now leading them.

If they get on a protective older brother's nerves, a young quarterback out in Oakland is motivated by the doubt. To Paul McGloin, these are all reactions he and his brother have heard — and seen proved wrong — before.

"A lot of people would've quit by now; a lot of people would've said to hell with it and chosen another career path," Paul McGloin said. "He's never going to be the sexy pick. But if you'd bet against him up until this point, you would've lost a lot."

Raiders QB Matt McGloin long ago warned NFL skeptics: 'All I have to say is this: Watch me'
By Daniel Brown
December 30, 2016

ALAMEDA — Sensing that he might be ignored in the 2013 draft, quarterback Matt McGloin wrote an open letter to the NFL community.

This was no diplomatic plea,  no polite request from a plucky dreamer. Instead, McGloin's street-tough message landed somewhere between a warning and a veiled threat.

"To those saying to me now 'You'll never make it,' all I have to say is this: 'Watch me,"' wrote McGloin, who went undrafted anyway. "You're damn right I live my life and play football with a chip on my shoulder, because there is honor and worthy achievement in proving wrong the myth of 'impossibility."'

McGloin, now 27, might as well dust off his laptop and thesaurus again. There's a whole new audience waiting for him to fail.

When star quarterback Derek Carr sustained a broken fibula during a Christmas Eve game, that sickening snap could just as well have applied to the Raiders' hopes of winning a championship.

Las Vegas oddsmaker Bovada listed Oakland as 12-to-1 shots to win the Super Bowl before Carr's injury. The mere idea of McGloin as the main man sent the stock tumbling to 28-to-1.

It's easy to see the logic: The Raiders are losing not only their talented MVP candidate but also their emotional leader. And they're replacing him with … well, what, exactly?

Even the quarterback's father, Paul McGloin, felt briefly overwhelmed in the aftermath of Carr's injury.

Paul, who lives in Scranton, Pennsylvania, calls his three sons each night to tell them that he loves them. But during a conversation with Matt last week, Paul let his guard down.

"I'm nervous," the father said.

"Why?" the son replied evenly.

And with that one-word answer, Paul McGloin snapped back to his senses. It was as if he'd forgotten that Matt has spent his lifetime taking your worries and sticking them in your ear.

"People are saying, 'Oh, the Raiders are doomed now,"' Paul said in phone interview Monday.  "I know my son. He just never quits. Never gives up. The bigger the game, the greater the chances he'll succeed."

But those who know the quarterback best say McGloin is living his life to the letter.

"When the world crashed down on Penn State in an ugly, horrifying cloud, the world around our team seemed to panic. 'Penn State football will never be the same,' is what everyone outside our locker room said. No way. Not as long as I was wearing the blue and white uniform." — Matt McGloin in his pre-draft letter to StateCollege.Com on March 11, 2013

McGloin was Penn State's first quarterback in the wake of the Joe Paterno scandal. He was also the most unlikely passer there in more than a half-century.

The Nittany Lions had no interest in recruiting the kid from West Scranton High. McGloin's best offer out of high school came from Lehigh University, a Division I-AA school.

As McGloin's college decision neared, dad tried to give him a reality check. Paul McGloin never doubted his son's ability or resolve, but he spelled out the equation: Matt could go to Lehigh and dominate or to Penn State, where he could vanish into obscurity.

"He said, 'I don't care. I'll compete. I want to play on the big stage,"' his dad said.

McGloin chose Penn State, where, he would later write, Paterno "handed me nothing but expected everything. He made me work, scratch and claw for anything I ever achieved."

McGloin pushed his way into the conversation and became the first walk-on to start at quarterback for the Nittany Lions in over 60 years.

As the full-fledged starter under new head coach Bill O'Brien in 2012, McGloin had a passer rating of at least 100.0 in all 12 games.

He left as Penn State's all-time leader in touchdown passes.

By the time he was done, Rep. Marty Flynn honored the quarterback on the floor of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, citing McGloin's "daily demonstration of grit and tenacity."

Reached by phone this week, Flynn doubled down on his endorsement. A former professional boxer (he went 10-2, five knockouts), Flynn said he has an affinity for "scrappers."

"This is one of the great sports stories of all time," Flynn said. "He wasn't supposed to see the field at Penn State, but he becomes the starter and sets all kinds of records. They made a movie after 'Rudy' — and he was only on the field for one play!

"He wasn't supposed to make the NFL, either, but he works his way into the league and he's still there.

"This (starting Raiders job) is a huge, huge weight. Nine out of 10 guys would fold. But this guy is made for these moments. He lives for it."

"My parents own a small business — a flower shop in Scranton. Life isn't easy for them, either. I watched how they dealt with challenges, and every time the world set them back, they just worked a little harder. In struggle, failure and setback, I learned strength, honor and determination. Just like everyone else in my town."

The client list for McGloin's Florist includes Hillary Clinton. Her father, Hugh Rodham, died shortly after Bill Clinton took office in 1993 and Paul McGloin has tended to the gravesite since.

Notable actors Martin Sheen and Richard Harris have also placed an order.

Mostly, though, the McGloins' clients are their fellow working stiffs. Michael DeAntona, still the coach at West Scranton High, said Matt's upbringing is part of the reason the quarterback blossomed.

"We believe in getting your butt out of bed in the morning and going out and earning a living," DeAntona said.

"That's kind of what's being instilled in our kids, after our parents instilled it in us. The way we go about our daily life in Northeastern Pennsylvania."

DeAntona loves to tell the story of McGloin's first big game: West Scranton High had a returning senior in line to start at quarterback, but McGloin came in as a sophomore and won an open competition. Then, in his first varsity start, McGloin threw three touchdown passes, including the game-winner in overtime, to knock off one of Pennsylvania's top high school teams.

"Matt doesn't feel pressure," DeAntona said. "And I mean that as a very positive thing. Because in any kind of sport, when you work hard and you prepare yourself, there really isn't pressure: You're ready."

So McGloin's been trying to buck the odds since high school?

"He's been doing it since midget football," DeAntona said.

"Apparently, none of this was good enough to receive an invitation to the NFL Combine, the most important showcase before the draft. The conventional wisdom is that I don't have the 'measurables.' … I'm not blind to the fact that history hasn't been kind to quarterbacks my size in the NFL draft. Who cares? That's been true my entire life."

People talk about McGloin (6-foot-1, 210 pounds) playing with a chip on his shoulder so often he ought to get an endorsement from Pringles.

But grit can't elude a pass rush. Heart can't rifle a throw into double coverage. That's why, with the notable exceptions of players like Tom Brady (sixth-round) and Kurt Warner (undrafted), the NFL playoffs tend to be the province of first-rounders and future Hall of Famers.

(Consider that the most recent Super Bowl featured a showdown between two former No. 1 overall picks: Peyton Manning and Cam Newton.)

So amid all this talk about McGloin's resolve, it must also be asked: Can he play? Or is he chum for the postseason sharks?

McGloin's coaches point out that for all the talk about his guile, it was his arm that got him this job in the first place.

After the draft, where 254 players went, including 11 quarterbacks, McGloin got a tryout with the Raiders. Working out in front of General Manager Reggie McKenzie, Director of Player Personnel Joey Clinkscales and then-offensive coordinator Greg Olson, the quarterback impressed with his accuracy and arm strength.

By the time he was done, all three men were in unison.

"It was an easy decision on the day we brought him in, just on his ability to throw from Point A to Point B. Extremely accurate player," Olson said in a Sports Illustrated podcast this week.

"It was arm talent, No. 1. You can have the most intelligent player in the world, but if you can't put the ball into tight windows, you're not going to have an opportunity to play."

Pressed into starting duty late in his rookie season of 2013, McGloin held his own over six games. He had 8 touchdown passes, 8 interceptions, and a 76.1 passer-rating. He went 1-5 as the starter for a crummy team en route to a 4-12 season.

He hasn't started since.

Now, McGloin inherits a 12-3 juggernaut that can clinch the AFC West division title and a first-round bye with a victory Sunday against the Denver Broncos.

This time, he'll be playing behind an offensive line that has allowed an NFL-low 16 sacks and with a receiving duo of Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree that averages 10.8 catches and 137.7 yards per game.

Though this is McGloin's first start in years, Raiders quarterbacks coach Todd Downing has no plans to use training wheels.

"He has the arm talent to attack all parts of the field. People don't realize that about him," Downing said. "He has a very strong arm. There aren't any throws that he can't make that Derek can make.

"I tell you, those receivers better have their gloves on, cause it's coming in hot."

While the Raiders coaches have full confidence in McGloin, they have little company these days. Skeptics have them outnumbered.

That's fine with the quarterback. He's so accustomed to being written off that he eventually wrote back.

"My entire life has been defined by the words, 'You'll never make it.' … Some people play football with a 'chip on their shoulder' — I live life that way because I have to."

Experience Keeps Latavius Murray Grounded: 'I Know How Fortunate I Am'
By Scott Bair
November 18, 2016

ALAMEDA – The Raiders made Josiah Moore an honorary captain prior to their Week 9 clash against the Denver Broncos. The boy battling an adverse heart condition became a Raider for a weekend via the Make-A-Wish Foundation, and attended a Saturday practice, a Sunday night game and was part of the pregame coin toss.

He spent time with several Raiders, including Derek Carr, Khalil Mack, Seth Roberts, Reggie Nelson and Latavius Murray. Before the game, he pulled Murray close and asked for a favor.

"He asked me to score some touchdowns for him, and I asked him how many he wanted," the Raiders running back said. "He said three."

That's a difficult request. The touchdown total isn't unrealistic or easily attained. Scoring three would be difficult, not impossible. Murray promised to give it a shot.

He first found the end zone from a yard out in the second quarter, extending the ball just across the goal line. Murray powered a second touchdown through from the same distance. The Raiders were a yard from pay dirt again in the fourth quarter, and Murray leaped over both lines to reach the end zone, giving his team a three-score lead and fulfill a promise.

It was a proud moment for Murray, who was awesome in a 30-20 victory over the Broncos. He finished with 20 carries for 114 yards and three touchdowns for Moore.

"I know how fortunate I am, and I know what kids in the Make-A-Wish program have to go through," Murray said on CSN California's Raiders Insider Podcast. "Any way that I can help make a kid's day, I'll do it. Just being a part of something bigger than myself is always important. You want to give back whenever you can.

"That's what it's all about, and it really meant something that I was able to do that for him."

Murray doesn't let these moments slip. He knows playing in the NFL's a privilege afforded to precious few, and that opportunities to play and produce should be cherished. That's why he's excited to contest the Houston Texans on Monday night in Mexico City, where he has acted as a team ambassador for promotional events.

That's why you won't hear complaints about lower carry counts or contract insecurity here. At his core, Murray's a guy grateful for this chance.

He still thinks about opportunities missed, which is why he didn't plan an exotic vacation last week during the Raiders bye. He went back to Onondaga, a small town in upstate New York, to watch his high school in the state playoffs. Onondaga Central hadn't reached these heights since Murray was a Tiger.

Murray had his number retired, but never won a state title. Onondaga Central didn't this year either. They lost a heartbreaker, but a homecoming was worth the long flight east. It's a place where Murray could recalibrate and mentally prepare for the season's home stretch. Onondaga is a comfort zone impossible to duplicate.

"I feel at home every time I go back there," Murray said. "The community and the high school there have shown great support, and that's why it was special to go back. That town is a part of the person and the player I am."

Onondaga's pull is strong, not just because he has close friends and family there. His rock resides there, too.

His mother Tawanna Wright is a stabilizing force in her son's life, and at times set him on the correct course. She wanted him to attend Central Florida over local options and pursue his preference to play running back despite also being recruited as a linebacker.

She also kept him upbeat after he tore a knee apart playing pickup basketball while at Central Florida, an injury that put Murray in a funk. He lost the 2010 season rehabbing multiple torn ligaments, which prompted a decision to come home and play for nearby Syracuse. Wright pushed hard for an about face and eventually got one. Murray went back to Central Florida, flourished and became a draftable impact starter.

"The best part of Latavius is his mom," UCF coach George O'Leary said, via the Orlando Sentinel. "She's a very sound, sturdy woman and that's why he's back here."

While Murray's ego doesn't overinflate, Wright tries to keep him centered and grounded to this day.

"It's a constant reminder for both of my sons but more so for Latavius because people in his position can become arrogant when fans put you on a pedestal," Wright said. "You have to always remind them to stay humble. You can be up one minute and down the next.

"Use your gifts as a tool, and always be humble about it. Success is a gift that isn't easy to come by. Staying humble will open the door for more blessings."

The door is open wider than a few years back.

Murray was a sixth round pick who spent his rookie year in Oakland sidelined with injury and most of his second season buried on the depth chart. His third year earned a Pro Bowl spot, and his fourth has featured decreased totals as the Raiders have split carries between Murray and rookies Jalen Richard and DeAndre Washington.

While some Pro Bowler may demand the rock, Murray likes the rotation. All three backs remain focused on being efficient with carries they get, though Murray paces that pack when healthy. He won't come close to last year's 306 touches, but doesn't mind considering the Raiders' steady production on the ground and his efficiency with ball in hand. The young additions, Murray says, have given the run game a jolt.

"DeAndre and Jalen continue to push me and do great things when they step on the field," Murray said. "They bring explosiveness and make guys miss. I'm trying to take things from them and continue to learn. We continue to compete in that running back room, and that's why I think we've had success."

That success has contributed to a 7-2 record that has the Raiders in position to make a playoff push. Murray was on terrible teams to start his pro career so, as you'd guess, he isn't taking these wins for granted.

"I still have those moments where I realize where I am in life and the opportunities I have in front of me," Murray said. "I was talking to Jalen about it during the (Broncos) game.

"We playing were in primetime, with the whole country watching. Here I am, a kid from Onondaga Central, from a little town in upstate New York. Jalen said he felt the same way. I said, 'never stop feeling that way, because it's going to separate you from guys in this league who may get comfortable. Always love the feeling, and revel in the knowledge that you're fortunate to be in such a great spot.'"

Unlikely Raider Reggie Nelson earns respect from peers
By Paul Gutierrez
September 9, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- The Oakland Raiders needed a veteran presence in the back of their secondary this spring in the wake of Charles Woodson's retirement. And while free safety Reggie Nelson was out there, blowing in the wind of free agency, he was not really seen as an option.

Not with his ties to the Cincinnati Bengals, for whom he had just played in his first career Pro Bowl after his eight interceptions tied for the league lead. And not with his relationship with new Miami Dolphins defensive coordinator Vance Joseph, who was Nelson's position coach in Cincinnati.

All of which is what made Raiders defensive backs coach Marcus Robertson's trip to USC's pro day to check out Su'a Cravens all the more fortuitous. Robertson ran into Joseph at the workout and the topic turned to Nelson, whom Robertson saw as "a Bengal, through and through."

Besides, if he was going to leave Cincinnati, surely he'd join Joseph in Miami, no?

That's when Robertson found Raiders defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. at the USC workout, and the two made a call to Oakland's front office to let brass know of Nelson's availability.

A two-year contract worth as much as $12 million later, and Nelson was the 32-year-old heir apparent to Woodson ... in more ways than one.

"I knew of him, respected the player, but now that I'm here with him every single day, I love the person even more," Robertson said of Nelson during camp. "When you think about losing a guy like Woodson, and then you get a guy with [Nelson's] type of experience in the football game, his ability to go out and make plays -- he's done it year in and year out -- and then on top of that, he's a team player?

"He gets these guys. He's an outstanding communicator and he does things right. I couldn't ask for anything more."

Nelson's influence has already been felt, even if he missed the entire offseason program and was slowed somewhat in the preseason as he rehabbed a knee injury.

While Nelson is entering his 10th season, it is his first in Oakland, yet his new teammates voted him one of four captains, along with quarterback Derek Carr, center Rodney Hudson and All-Pro defensive end/outside linebacker Khalil Mack.

"We hit it off pretty good," Nelson said this week with an understated smile. "It's a great group of guys around here. You know, I'm not a guy of too many words so I'll just lead by example and continue to keep my head down and work.

"I mean, it was a shocker when I found out I was a captain ... to be voted amongst your peers, that's a great thing. How they look at you."

Thus far, it's been in awe. Even on the other side of the ball.

"If you had to replace Charles Woodson, he's the guy you'd want to do it with," Carr said. "He's someone who's a leader on and off the field. He has no problem getting into anybody's face on the field, while at the same time, two seconds later, those same guys will listen to him and joke with him. That's a fine line that's hard to get and he has it.

"We all know his talents. I joked with him just like I did with C-Wood. I said, 'Hey man, back in the day, I was a big fan of yours back in college.'"

Carr laughed.

"He's a great player," Carr said. "But not only that, he's a great person [and now] he's a teammate of mine and not chasing me around like he did Week 1 last year."

Indeed, Nelson, who was a first-round pick of Raiders coach Jack Del Rio when he was with the Jacksonville Jaguars in 2007, picked off Carr's backup, Matt McGloin, in last season's opener after Carr left with a hand injury.

Del Rio talked about Nelson as a "calming influence" in the secondary.

"Communication is the No. 1 key," Nelson said. "When I got here, that was my thing: communicate with me. I'm new to the defense, so tell me if it's the wrong check or not. The guys have been doing that and I got it down pat, and that's the main thing that I emphasize when I'm back there with anybody, Karl [Joseph] or Nate [Allen] or Keith [McGill].

"Just communicate with me and we'll be all right. As long as we're on the same page, nobody can stop us."

"I just try to be Reggie, man," he said. "You can't replace a guy like Charles."

But the Raiders can lean on Nelson in Sunday's season opener at New Orleans, just as they leaned on Woodson. Besides, Nelson already has an interception of Saints quarterback Drew Brees.

"As far as starting fast, you're in control of that," Nelson said. "You've got to come out and hit people in the mouth and continue to do it. You can't just do it one down; you've got to continue to do it [or] they're just going to keep on coming back. When they come back, you've got to do it again."

G/T Kelechi Osemele

Raiders didn't sign guard Kelechi Osemele to be a nice guy
By Jerry McDonald
September 9, 2016

ALAMEDA — The name Kelechi Osemele used to bring a grimace in the defensive meeting room of the Raiders.

As the left guard of the Baltimore Ravens, Osemele won no friends with his penchant for picking unsuspecting defenders off when they least expect it.

"You watch K.O., and he's the guy that plays to the whistle and gets in the last shove," Raiders defensive tackle Justin Ellis said. "You don't really like him too much unless he's on your team."

Which is exactly what happened when the Raiders signed Osemele to a five-year, $58 million salary with $25.4 million guaranteed on the first day of free agency, an average salary of $11.7 million which is the highest ever paid to a guard.

Osemele makes his regular-season start Sunday when the Raiders visit the New Orleans Saints.

His mission is clear. At 6-foot-5, 330 pounds, Osemele is a big, powerful and at times malevolent addition who is expected to add toughness and an edge to the Raiders offensive line.

"We're going to try and finish, be in your face, intimidate you and let you know that it's going to be a real long day," Osemele said. "It's not going to be one of those things where you're going against some fat, lazy offensive lineman. You're going to get it to the whistle every time."

Line coach Mike Tice referred to Osemele in an unflattering term having to do with the posterior of the anatomy — except in this case he meant it as the highest of praise.

"We felt like in our room, we needed that," Tice said. "Adding a guy like Kelechi brings that. It permeates and it's contagious. Soon it spreads to through the room, the guys in the huddle, and we think it's real important."

With Osemele at left guard, in between left tackle Donald Penn and center Rodney Hudson, along with right guard Gabe Jackson and right tackle Menelik Watson, the Raiders are determined to not only protect Derek Carr but dramatically improve a running game that finished 29th in the NFL.

There have been growing pains in the preseason. Osemele's arrival pushed Jackson to the right side, and Watson missed all last season with a torn Achilles'.

In Week 3 of the preseason, there were glimpses of what the Raiders hoped to be — in particular a 31-yard burst by DeAndre Washington courtesy of a thoroughfare created by Osemele and Hudson.

"That was the first play where I thought, `That's what it's supposed to feel like,' " Osemele said.

Osemele said his playing style was formed at an early age.

"Since I was growing up in youth football in Texas, that's how we played," Osemele said. "If you're playing offensive line, you're supposed to be physical, you're supposed to be nasty, you're supposed to be aggressive.

"You're supposed to be stronger than the guy across from you, and he's supposed to be faster than you are. So what you do is get your hands on him make him pay for trying to run away from you the whole damn game."

The presence of Osemele should help Jackson, a third-year player who at 6-3, 335 making a seamless transition to playing on the right side after being a left guard throughout college and the NFL.

Osemele, a left tackle for the Super Bowl champion Ravens following the 2012 season, was moved to guard and watched Pro Bowl guard Marshall Yanda closely.

"The main thing is getting around Gabe and letting him see how I finish," Osemele said. "You feed off that as an offensive line. You see a guy get a pancake, and it's contagious energy. You have guys burying people at the whistle, diving around the pile. Everyone wants to be a part of the action."

Osemele's style is reminiscent of Steve Wisniewski, an eight-time Pro Bowl guard who was despised by opponents until the moment they joined the Raiders, at which point they made a beeline to shake his hand.

When Osemele came to the Raiders, the first player to greet him was defensive end Denico Autry.

"When we played the Raiders, there were a couple of times where I pancaked him, then he got up and I speared him," Osemele said. "He wanted to let me know not to do that to him in practice, that we're teammates now."

Autry declined to recount the skirmish before he broke into a smile and said, "He's just a rough, nasty, physical guy . . . and he's going to be great for us."

Raiders' Kelechi Osemele hopes to make big mark on ex-team
By Vic Tafur
September 28, 2016

The pancakes — made by the Raiders' Kelechi Osemele repeatedly knocking over defenders and lying on them — had become stale after a few weeks, so he tried something new in Nashville on Sunday.

On a fourth-quarter reverse run by receiver Johnny Holton, the 6-foot-5, 330-pound guard got in front and saw two safeties in his path. Osemele flung 216-pound Kevin Byard in the direction of 207-pound Da'Norris Searcy, who not only went down, but also was injured on the play.

"They looked like a couple of bowling pins," right tackle Vadal Alexander said, laughing.

For his next trick, Osemele might give a defensive player a noogie after a successful block.

“Yeah, you know, anytime you can get out there on somebody that’s 50 pounds, 100 pounds lighter, it’s exciting,” Osemele said. “It’s like picking on your little brother. You get out there and you want to do some damage, so it’s fun.”

Osemele gets to go against his former brothers Sunday, as the Raiders travel to Baltimore. Osemele played for the Ravens in his first four years and won a Super Bowl with them in his rookie season. Though the Ravens are 3-0, they are averaging only 82 rushing yards per game. Osemele is missed.

“K.O. is a special player,” Baltimore running back Justin Forsett said in a conference call. “He goes out, he tries to dominate every play. He’s physical. You’re going to see guys getting pancaked and he’s standing over them. He’s kind of that mouthpiece out there, that headhunter that you want on the offensive line.”

Osemele is one of the huge (pun intended) reasons that the Raiders are second in the NFL in rushing at 148 yards per game, a season after they were ranked 29th. Oakland also has allowed only two sacks.

“We bring it to you all game,” Osemele said. “When you go against us, you’re going to be relieved when the game is over.”

When Osemele is not pushing defensive linemen backward and then jumping on them when they hit the ground, he is letting the players who get away hear about it. On Sept. 18, Atlanta linebacker Sean Witherspoon saw Osemele coming on a Latavius Murray run and got out of the way.

“He made a business decision,” Osemele said. “And I reminded him of it the rest of the game.”

Osemele is the classic case of wanting someone on your team because you don’t want to go against him.

“He’s very violent,” quarterback Derek Carr said. “He’s a violent football player. One of, if not the most, violent football players I’ve ever been around, seen, played with, played against, all the above. You love for a guy like that to be protecting you.”

Osemele has been looking forward to this Sunday ever since he signed with the Raiders in t he spring.

“They’re a physical team,” Osemele said. “That’s a lot of where my playing demeanor came from, that ‘build a bully’ mentality and there’s some bullies out there. ... AFC North, smashmouth type of football, so that’s what we’re going to get. It’s going to be a physical game.”

Osemele, 27, signed a five-year, $58.5 million deal with Oakland after Baltimore essentially backed away from the negotiating table.

‘The numbers just didn’t come anywhere close,” Osemele said. “Yeah, it hurts your feelings a little bit because you spent the last four years there. There have been a lot of ups and downs, winning the Super Bowl there and to kind of find out that’s probably not where you’re going to end up can be a little emotional.”

That’s not the only thing bugging the giant. Osemele was only a two-star recruit coming out of Houston’s Langham Creek High School and was recruited by only a couple of schools before signing with Iowa State.

“Never made the playoffs, so it was hard for anyone to get noticed by a big school,” Osemele said. “I was just a two-star guy with schools like Rice and UTEP looking at me. I definitely have had a chip on my shoulder about that and carry it with me wherever I go.”

Retired Longham Creek coach Mac Woodfin said Osemele built up that chip — and those shoulders — after not getting through his freshman fitness test.

“He couldn’t get around the track one time.” Woodfin said. “He was a huge, clumsy kid. He couldn’t handle his body weight. And now he’s an animal. He was very smart, matured quickly and worked extremely hard.”

Woodfin said coaches would look in the weight room two hours after school and see Osemele still in there.

“I came in and worked on days we didn’t have to. I got better and better and some guys stayed the same,” Osemele said. “My mentality was always physical. I wanted to get as many knockdowns and pancakes in a game as possible.”

One can imagine high school players shaking in their cleats when they first saw Osemele on the other team. Raiders tight end Lee Smith said it’s the same now, in the NFL.

“I know the defensive guys didn’t like him too much during training camp; he doesn’t have that off switch.”

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Jalen Richard's ascent with Raiders a surprise even to him
By Vic Tafur
November 17, 2016

Jalen Richard says he is a perfectionist and his own harshest critic. So when the Raiders' running back was asked what the biggest surprise has been in his rookie season, he didn't hesitate.

"Me," Richard said. He was dead serious.

"I surprised myself and now I have reached a point where, 'OK, you can do this,'" Richard said. "I mean, I always had confidence in myself, but now I am at the top tier of the whole world that plays football. How do I measure up?"

At 5-foot-8, Richard has measured up just fine. He ran for a 75-yard touchdown on his first NFL carry, in the opener in New Orleans. He has 279 yards rushing and 123 receiving backing up starter Latavius Murray. And Richard has seized both the kick- and punt-returner jobs.

"It's caught me off guard how well I am doing," Richard said. "I was also surprised by how much confidence the team had in me so fast. I wasn't even on the radar going into training camp."

That he wasn't. The Southern Mississippi alum came to the Raiders' rookie camp in May on a tryout basis. The coaching staff liked his wiggle and burst and told him to stick around. And then he made the roster in September despite the fact that the Raiders had drafted DeAndre Washington, another 5-8 back who is very similar to Richard.

"A guy like Jalen, to step up and play as big as he has … (when) just to be here was a shock because it was a tryout," head coach Jack Del Rio said. "Then, he comes into camp and he tears it up. The opening game, he makes huge plays to help us win, and he hasn't looked back."

Richard didn't think the coaches were going to play him much when he made the roster.

"You drafted DeAndre, you have Taiwan (Jones), you've got Jamize (Olawale) that can play running back and you have" Murray, Richard said. "I didn't think I was going to get an opportunity … and then I didn't touch the ball in New Orleans until the fourth quarter.

"It just so happened I took it 75."

That run was made possible by a vicious block by guard Kelechi Osemele, who still might be shoving the defender into the ground if the team hadn't needed to fly home.

"Our linemen are enforcers," Richard said. "Especially K.O. He is out there just trying to whoop up on anybody. I am very thankful for this line because they make me look good."

Richard looks fast and has quickly gotten used to the speed of the NFL compared with college ball.

"When you settle down, the game still moves fast, but you're able to react better," he said. "It's like muscle memory; I'm moving along with the speed of the game and things are clicking. People don't get faster when they get to the league, they get smarter.

"Whether you're a running back or a linebacker, see it, hit it. No hesitation."

That's true times 10 in the kick-return game, when opposing players are sprinting downfield with one target in mind: the returner.

Richard had a 47-yard punt return — the longest by a Raider since 2012 — on Oct. 2 in Baltimore and a 50-yard kickoff return against Kansas City two weeks later. The past two games, he has looked one block or one move away from breaking one for a touchdown.

"I am getting closer and closer," Richard said. "I know I am due for one. Just steadily taking the coaching from (special-teams) coach (Brad) Seely, and going vertical first. Sometimes I have a bad habit of going lateral first, and then trying to get vertical."

Either way, it has been better than what the Raiders have had. Oakland's last punt return for a touchdown was Dec. 21, 2008, by Johnnie Lee Higgins, and the last kickoff return for a TD was Oct. 16, 2011, by Jacoby Ford.

"I hope I bust one really soon," Richard said. "Monday night in Mexico would be the perfect time."

Raiders' Jalen Richard's journey from UDFA to NFL rookie makes for extra meaningful homecoming

By Courtney Cronin
September 10, 2016

ALAMEDA – Jalen Richard is right. It's hard to script a story better than this one.

The last five months have been among the most challenging the Raiders rookie running back has ever faced, and that's saying a lot for a player whose career could have been derailed by constant, nagging injuries throughout his four years at Southern Mississippi.

The type of praise he's received from veteran teammates to Oakland offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave isn't often bestowed upon an undrafted rookie free agent whose journey began on a tryout basis in May. Yet here he was last Saturday, pacing nervously while keeping an eye glued to the clock, unwilling to believe that he had come this far to make the team's 53-man roster even after the NFL's deadline for cuts had come and gone.

"I was walking through the locker room and got a couple of congratulations from different players, but in my head I'm like, 'Man, it ain't 1 o'clock yet and I don't have the general manager or coach telling me this so I don't know," Richard said.

Maybe that uncertainty stems from watching other opportunities he's had nearly slip away, sometimes because of his own doing. Just over a year ago, this moment of excitement and possibility was a distant dream.

It felt like there had always been something standing in between the 5-foot-8, 207 pounder and a breakout season as a Golden Eagle: injuries, grades, himself.

“It wasn’t really until last year that he came from a guy that we weren’t sure if he was good enough to be a starter to being a first team all-conference running back,” former Southern Miss head coach and current Tampa Bay Buccaneers offensive coordinator Todd Monken said. “That’s how far he came.”

Richard tried to steady the scale of a major balancing act that included football, maintain his health and wellness, majoring in psychology and a social life. Following a junior season where he missed five games due to a thumb injury, Richard joined a fraternity and quickly found himself off the team because of how badly his grades had slipped, almost making him ineligible for the upcoming year.

There, on the cusp of what he needed to be his best season yet to bolster his resume for NFL scouts and prove his ability as a downhill running back that can do more than catch passes, Richard was suspended for the spring until he could get himself in better academic standing.

“We owed that to him,” Monken said. “Discipline is the greatest form of love you can bestow upon anybody. All we did was show him how much we love him. If you don’t care then you just let it slide and hope it all works out. He was capable of doing it. He just needed to refocus on what he wanted out of his last year of football, his last opportunity.”

Tough love forced Richard to reevaluate his priorities and mature at a rapid rate. This time, he wasn’t going to let himself get in the way of his future.

The time he spent focusing on academics allowed him to return in time for fall camp. During Southern Miss’ turnaround season in 2015, Richard experienced his own, racking up his first 1,000-yard rushing season (1,098) with 14 touchdowns.

Hitting rock bottom was not only critical for his maturity but helped him pull through the high stress process of going from an undrafted rookie to making an NFL roster.

“That’s what I used everyday to stay focused and determined,” Richard said. “How I dug myself out of a hole in college and really had to get it from ground zero, coming in as an undrafted free agent and a tryout guy, I knew I was going to be at ground zero. I just had to figure out a way to preserve and get that done.”

The outcome of fighting to prove his worth on a daily basis makes this story so much sweeter, and his homecoming this weekend when the Raiders play the Saints in his native Louisiana all that more meaningful.

Richard had never been to an NFL game before the first preseason snaps he took against Tennessee on Aug. 27. Despite growing up in Saints territory with his formative years spent between Baton Rouge and Alexandria, Richard was a loyal Cowboys fan.

Sunday will be his first time in the Super Dome.

“I come from Alexandria, (Louisiana), a small town,” he said. “Not too many people make it out of the city, so me being a figure of that back home is real good to me.”

Whether he is among one of the 46 Raiders that dresses out for the season opener, Richard's triumph is shared by those around him. His mother and father were the first to receive a phone call after the running back made final cuts. There were tears shed then. Those are likely to return for his family and friends when they see Richard run onto the field in his No. 30 jersey.

After missing a bulk of training camp and Oakland's first two preseason games due to a knee injury, Richard made up for lost time in the final two exhibition meetings, totaling 10 carries for 45 yards, three receptions for 14 yards, a returned a punt for 25 yards and three kickoffs for 72 yards.

Where he goes from here to prove himself as a complimentary change up for Latavius Murray is the next chapter on his triumphant journey.

"As I told him, he's going to be the poster child for going and talking to young people about preserving and making mistakes along the way and overcoming it," Monken said.

"Its only the beginning. He can write his own story, we'll see how it goes from here."

WR Seth Roberts

BLEACHER REPORT

Seth Roberts' Winding Path to the NFL May Make Him the Raiders' Unsung Star
By Tyler Dunne
December 28, 2016

OAKLAND, Calif. — When Seth Roberts walked to the line of scrimmage, he didn't have a clue. What was his route? What was this coverage? Oh no, was that his position coach scowling over there?

His first season at West Alabama, Roberts would inevitably screw up and phone home in a pit of frustration.

"There was too much mentally going through him," said his father, Ronnie Roberts. "His mind would go blank."

Yet here is Seth Roberts today.

There's only one minute, 55 seconds left in overtime. At the Buccaneers' 41-yard line, on 4th-and-3 from the slot, he smells blood. Roberts toasts his man on an ankle-breaking slant route, catches Derek Carr's laser, busts through two tacklers and coasts to the end zone. He guns the ball at a "Bucs for a Better Bay" sign on the back wall and is mauled by teammates.

He's not clueless. He's a hero.

At the center of Raiders magic this season is a 6'2", 195-pound kid from Nowhere, USA. Roberts landed in the Bay Area via Pearl River (Mississippi) Community College and Division II West Alabama. Three of his 10 touchdowns in two seasons have been game-winners. OK, so it's a fourth overall pick (Amari Cooper) and a rejuvenated 10th overall pick (Michael Crabtree) who are really anchoring this aerial attack, but you know how the NFL postseason works.

Seasons boil down to someone else.

David Tyree pins a football against his helmet. Mario Manningham is a trapeze artist along the sideline. Jacoby Jones leaks free in the Broncos secondary with 31 seconds left to cradle a 70-yard touchdown. Jermaine Kearse hot-potatoes a catch off five body parts.

Seth Roberts could be next. He's trending toward such a moment.

He takes a seat inside his locker and reminisces. The brutal murder of a cousin rocked his world in high school. The death of a grandmother tested him in college. The blistering-tough love of one coach was bound to pinball him one way or another.

"Ambition, man," Roberts said. "I always had a dream. I would never speak about going to the NFL, wanting to play in the NFL, but it was always in the back of my mind. I've been working since I started playing.

"I think it's paid off."

He turns around and points to the red Under Armour cleats he'll wear for Sunday's "My Cause My Cleats" game against the Bills. The American Diabetes Association logo is screen-printed near the heel with "1.4 million diagnosed yearly" written in white. That's what took his grandmother's life.

"I've got a lot of loved ones watching down on me," Roberts said. "They're my angels. They're guiding me."

He didn't land in these shoes by accident.

Killers left the body in an alley to rot.

They left him to rot.

Two men shot Shedrick Bonner in the head, and his 19-year-old corpse was found near a bike trail off Second Avenue and Third Street in Moultrie, Georgia, on March 15, 2007. The two charged were supposedly friends of Bonner, members of the same Block Boys gang. Jerrod Blackwell was sentenced to 15 years in prison and five years of probation. Ktherius Johnson received 11 years and nine.

As the Roberts family recalls, Bonner had cooperated with police on a previous investigation, so the two took him out as retaliation. Court documents, per one report, indicate the two were trying to rob Bonner of ecstasy pills.

Either way, Seth Roberts' cousin was dead. Bonner—affectionately known as "Scrooge" by everyone—was gone. The two were closer than cousins. Like brothers. So here in Oakland, he relives the nightmare. He was in ninth grade at the time.

"Go on Facebook right now," Roberts said, despondent, "and you'd still see 'RIP Scrooge.'"

Of course, Bonner was no saint. He had been previously charged with aggravated assault in a shooting incident that resulted in one man's death, the wounding of two others and four homes struck with bullets. But after a stint in jail, he told authorities exactly what had happened, serving as the main witness in the case. The prosecutor said Bonner named two suspects.

Soon after, he was dead.

Roberts believes his cousin was trying to turn his life around.

"They led him to this alley," he said, "and shot him in the head and just left him in the alley. ... He's thinking he's with them, and they killed him. Shot him in the head."

When Roberts was three years old, his family moved from Moultrie to Tallahassee, Florida, but the two cities were only an hour and 15 minutes apart, so he'd see Scrooge often. Scrooge looked after him, too, driving him to see his grandmother down the street. After his death, whenever the family was back in Georgia, Dad refused to let his son drift into the streets to see old friends. He knew what it'd lead to. So he hired Seth as one of his bag boys at the Publix supermarket he managed. His son lasted three months.

Fine by Dad. But right then, they made a pact. If Seth wasn't going to work 9 to 5 during the summer, he sure as heck was going to play sports.

From that point forward, the Roberts family was traveling to AAU basketball tournaments constantly.

"And that kept him out of the streets," Ronnie Roberts said. "My dad wasn't in my life. But as I grew up, me and my dad became close. I wanted to raise my son different."

Then Kez McCorvey had a notion.

McCorvey coached football at the Maclay School, which Roberts attended. McCorvey also was a former NFL veteran, having played receiver for the Lions from 1995 to 1997. And in Roberts, he saw a freak athlete who would make an ideal wide receiver. He told Roberts he'd have a better shot at a scholarship in football than in basketball. Convinced, Roberts redirected his focus. Just like McCorvey saw in Herman Moore in his Lions days, Roberts possessed an innate ability to "high-point" the ball in flight.

From there, McCorvey used drills he learned at Florida State to harness Roberts' wicked change of direction.

"He was raw, but he had a lot of talent," said McCorvey, now the receivers coach at Middle Tennessee State. "A lot of natural skill."

Florida State was Roberts' dream school, but he was barely a blip on the Seminoles' radar. The family thought Miami (Ohio) would offer a scholarship, but it never did. So Roberts went off to Pearl River Community College for two years. Division I interest remained non-existent.

Then Desmond Lindsey had a notion.

Lindsey, then the Division II West Alabama receivers coach, had seen some grainy Pearl River film.

"This kid," he told himself, "has a chance to be special."

So Lindsey introduced himself to Roberts after a game and fired off weekly text messages to stay on his mind. A "good game" here, a "you'll be the next great at West Alabama" there. And off to Livingston, Alabama, Roberts went. The Roberts family loaded into the car and headed six hours northwest.

Nobody thought the NFL was even possible.

"Nah. Nope. Nope," Ronnie Roberts said. "Wasn't even thought of then."

Seth Roberts had no clue what he was getting himself into.

A week or two in, he called his dad.

"This Coach Lindsey," he said, "this guy's crazy."

He had had enough.

Enough of the drops. Enough of the brain farts. Enough of the laziness.

After yet another eyesore of a practice—two weeks before the season opener—Desmond Lindsey made up his mind: He'd explode. He'd make these kids remember this day for the rest of their lives. The receivers walked into the classroom and took their seats to watch film. Lindsey, as always, positioned himself at a table behind everyone to see who was and wasn't paying attention.

Then he turned on the film and started asking questions.

Lindsey laughs a deep, bellowing Southern laugh.

"I call it," Lindsey said, "psychological warfare."

He acknowledges he "egged some things on" with his questions, and he hated their answers.

First, Lindsey chucked a remote control across the room. Next, he flipped the table near him upside down and shouted.

"Everybody get out! If we're not going to do it this way, we're all wasting time!"

Then Lindsey stormed out himself. He told the players if they wanted to watch film to go ahead and do it by themselves. He was finished.

One room over, the West Alabama quarterbacks heard the loud kaboom.

"Our head coach, he was the quarterbacks coach, he was coaching us," quarterback Kyle Caldwell said. "And he left our room and went in there and said, 'Well, he flipped the table in there.'"

Five minutes later, Seth Roberts and a teammate were pleading with Lindsey to return. To lead. They passed his test.

"OK," Lindsey told them. "It's on. It's all good now."

The Desmond Lindsey Experience was real at West Alabama.

And it was in that forgotten pocket of the state that Lindsey took a thin, mild-mannered athlete with ridiculous hops and toughened him up physically and mentally to become the sort of player who could rip through those Buccaneers defensive backs.

West Alabama, a small school with classes of about 15-20 kids, didn't face SEC competition each week but a schedule filled with the likes of College of Faith and Delta State and Abilene Christian. It was a place where Caldwell could look into the stands and mouth full conversations with his father.

"That close," Caldwell recalled with a laugh.

Without Desmond Lindsey, you don't have a clue who Seth Roberts is right now.

Seth Roberts had only 22 catches for 312 yards and a touchdown in Year 1 in Livingston. He alligator-armed his way through a tentative, distracted season that the Tigers capped with a horrid 49-21 loss at Valdosta State. After that two-catch clunker, Lindsey told Roberts his performance was a flat-out "embarrassment." West Alabama was now out of the playoffs, and Lindsey told Roberts he was a major reason why.

Lindsey informed Roberts he wasn't the player he thought he was.

"Inconsistency," said Lindsey, now the tight ends coach at Southern Mississippi.

"Having a ton of other things going on at the same time—it was a lack of focus. We're dropping wide-open passes. We cannot have that. Later in the season, whether it's college football or the NFL, it's all about the will and want. And that's what I let him know."

Actually, Lindsey was more pointed.

"He told Seth, 'You need to go back to Pearl River because they haven't taught you s--t,'" Ronnie Roberts said.

Dad took Lindsey's side, too. His son needed this.

While Lindsey was a father figure who lived at a complex next door to many of his players—they'd share burgers on the grill—he still coached with an iron fist.

Lindsey harped on attacking the football in the air and being a student of the game pre-snap. Roberts needed a "plan" at the line of scrimmage because Lindsey knew that if he couldn't beat press coverage, he'd never sniff the pros. If any of his receivers had a mental error, the entire position group did 10 pushups and 10 up-downs after practice while Lindsey ensured everyone knew who the guilty party was.

Maybe they'd bear crawl. Maybe they'd do wheelbarrow runs 100 yards and back.

All of them slammed into a blocking sled daily, too.

Roberts embraced it all.

He treated each of West Alabama's 15 spring practices like a Valdosta State redo. "He was dominating," Lindsey said. Into the summer, he juggled a factory job with daily lifting and running. Into fall ball, one-on-one drills with teammate Malcolm Butler became the stuff of legend.

"It was a battle," Lindsey said. "They were constantly battling. Every day. Jawing back and forth. And the team would feed off those guys. Seth was a very humble guy. He wouldn't talk much. But a lot of the time, with him and Malcolm's relationship, there was a lot of jawing. In any one-on-one drills, they made sure they were competing against each other."'

Added Caldwell: "That's what made Seth such a good route-runner. He had to go against Malcolm every play."

A "glance route" became his bread and butter. Roberts would run a skinny post that could zag into a corner route if the cornerback played him inside.

Forget verbal or hand signals. He had a telepathic connection with Caldwell. The quarterback would alter his cadence, and if the safety crept into the box—leaving Roberts one-on-one with a corner—he'd give Roberts a subtle nod. The ball was coming his way. If the corner played off, he'd run a hitch. If the corner pressed, he'd go deep.

An introvert who was more apt to text than talk on the phone, Roberts still found his beast within. Caldwell remembers Roberts crossing over a teammate in a pickup basketball game and slamming the ball home with violence.

"I was like, 'Oh my goodness!'" Caldwell said. "He was an overall athlete."

In all, Roberts caught 40 passes that final season for 857 yards and 12 scores.

There might have been more table-smashing, too. Ronnie Roberts remembers a totally different story. He says Lindsey once flipped a table at practice and yelled "You guys don't deserve anything to drink!" as water spilled everywhere.

Whatever he did worked.

Ronnie Roberts' son was ready.

"Coach Lindsey really made Seth the player that he is," Ronnie said. "It all started with him."

As Seth Roberts morphed from scrawny underachiever to NFL prospect, he lost one of his best friends.

His grandmother.

Sarah Holton died June 14, 2013, at the age of 71 to diabetes.

Her death wasn't as shocking as Scrooge's, but it stung Roberts more. The two were tight his entire life. He can still picture Holton waiting for him on her porch at night with that long extension cord attached to her phone. He spent many summer days with her. And when she entered a nursing home, he would visit her in his '94 Honda Civic and drive her to the store.

Per grandmother law, she'd offer him spending cash for college; he'd refuse, so she'd slip him money anyway.

"She built in that oldness," he said. "You know? A lot of people tell me I have an old soul. Older people say I have an old soul. That's where that comes from. ... It's how you carry yourself—how you think, what type of music you listen to. ... If I get my hair retwisted, they're playing the old-school jams, and I know it. My lady who does my hair says, 'You have an old soul.'"

Holton waited as long as she could before going on dialysis because, as a nurse, she saw the effect it had on patients and their families.

She finally hooked herself up to the machines and died within three years.

"She was just tired," Roberts said. "When you're tired, you just give up."

Several others close to Roberts died, too. His father's sister died eight years prior—two days after Christmas—while seven months pregnant. She had an asthma attack, which took the unborn baby's life, too. In addition to Holton, he also lost Holton's mother. To the bewilderment of family, he shielded his emotions.

"I think I would've just exploded," his dad said.

But not with Lindsey around. He could see something wrong in Roberts at times.

Keep pressing, he'd say. Keep fighting.

"At some point, you're going to get married," he told players. "What are you going to do when your wife comes in and says, 'Hey, honey, I'm pregnant. Hey, honey, I have breast cancer'? Are you going to go out to the local bar and get drunk? Or are you going to say, 'OK, I have insurance. We're all good. Let's start a treatment process.'"

So Roberts plugged along.

And then Zack Crockett had a notion.

The feeling McCorvey had? The one Lindsey had? This Raiders fullback-turned-scout set eyes on Seth Roberts at West Alabama and couldn't look away. The way he cut in and out of breaks. The way he decelerated so effortlessly. This all looked familiar. That's because Roberts resembled his old teammate at Florida State, Kez McCorvey. Crockett spoke to Roberts and McCorvey and then convinced the Raiders to take a closer look.

They did, signing him as an undrafted free agent in May 2014 before shuttling him to the practice squad before the 2014 season. Now Roberts is the team's No. 3 wideout with 35 receptions for 371 yards and five touchdowns this season.

When he's not in the Bay Area, you can probably find Roberts back home, at his grandmother's gravesite in Georgia. At Holton's tombstone, he tells her everything is going according to plan.

"It's a sense of relief and joy in my heart," he said. "I've never told anybody this, but I go back and just get away from my family and go sit down, talk, laugh. It's like you're just going to visit somebody.

"I might not say anything. I might just sit there smiling, thinking about the times that we had."

Their lockers were right next to each other. That final year together at West Alabama, Seth Roberts and Malcolm Butler discussed NFL glory. Daily. Roberts would star one day at receiver, Butler would star one day at corner and, no doubt about it, they'd both shatter the Division II odds.

Barely one year later, Butler was given his own holiday.

With the Seahawks at the 1-yard line a few weeks before, the then-obscure Patriots cornerback cut inside receiver Ricardo Lockette to steal the Super Bowl with a last-second interception. The tears and confetti poured. A Lombardi Trophy was hoisted. Feb. 21 was declared Malcolm Butler Day in Vicksburg, Mississippi. And, soon, Butler will cash in on a king's ransom of a payday.

One decision—to jump the route he had studied, to trust his instincts with everything on the line—turned Butler into a hero.

Lockette? The receiver running the slant? He was not given a holiday. Instead, he suffered a career-ending neck injury the next year.

He's not Tyree, not Manningham, not Jones. He is, now, mostly forgotten.

Onto that January stage now steps Roberts, facing a potential matchup in the playoffs against his former teammate.

"You can't make this story up," Butler said. "I think it's meant to be this year."

Maybe it's the AFC Championship Game. Maybe it's with 25 seconds left. Butler sees how the AFC is shaping up and knows there's a chance he'll joust again with Roberts—this time with legacies on the line.

"I'm not Miss Cleo. I can't tell the future," Butler said. "Whatever it takes. He'll do whatever it takes to help his team, and I'll do whatever it takes to help my team. We'll be competing no matter who it is. Taking it a game at a time. You never know what's going to happen."

Roberts has "the hunger," Butler added, "the attitude" needed to stick in the NFL. They're both overlooked D-II guys at heart.

"We have to stick around," Butler said, "and prove that we can play."

Constantly proving himself is the key because Roberts' trek to a Butler moment has not been smooth.

One month after his walk-off in Tampa, Roberts suffered a Valdosta State-like dud in a 21-13 loss at Kansas City. Targeted a whopping nine times, he had two receptions for 12 yards. Instead of feeling the wrath of one man, Lindsey, he laid an egg in front of millions on prime-time television. Everyone saw him shriveling in the minus-19-degree wind chill.

The conversation with his father afterward was short and sweet.

"Put it in the milk crate," Dad told him. "Forget it. Stack it away. Move on."

"That's what I have to do," Son replied.

So Seth Roberts thinks of "Scrooge" and the world he avoided. He thinks of his grandmother. He worries for his mother's sister, who now has health issues herself. He no longer has his MVP-candidate quarterback under center. And Roberts still can hear Lindsey's booming voice. The receiver recently told Lindsey that his "Take pride in that s--t!" battle cry was echoing in his head while he blocked a man downfield.

Soon, he'll run a route, the ball will arrive and Roberts must make the play.

He knows it. The Raiders know it. Dad knows it.

His name will be known by everyone...one way or another.

"You're right," Ronnie Roberts said. "And he's ready."

Sons of Pasadena Sean Smith, Marcus Robertson reunite with Raiders
By Paul Gutierrez
August 22, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- The memories are more feelings now than actual stories.

"Competing," Sean Smith recalls. "Just competing. He always pushes the kids to go out there and compete. And you always want to do well in your community, because everybody talks and you definitely want to be one of the most talked-about guys around the neighborhood."

Smith was talking about being a youngster growing up in Pasadena, California, and taking to the tutelage of another native son of the 'Dena, All-Pro defensive back Marcus Robertson, as part of Robertson's football camps at the Jackie Robinson Community Center in the late 1990's.

So Smith reuniting with Robertson in Oakland all these years later -- the cornerback was one of the Raiders' most prized free-agent signings this offseason and Robertson is Oakland's defensive backs coach -- has a hint of serendipity.

"Not saying it was easy, but I just picked up the phone and said, 'Hey, Sean, I want to put you in this silver and black. What you gonna do?'" Robertson recalled his recruiting pitch being to Smith this spring.

"The relationship with Sean is a very simple one, because we're like, home team."

Indeed, the Muir High School grad leaned on his Pasadena roots to pitch the Raiders to the Blair High School alum.

And it worked. Because after four seasons with the Miami Dolphins, who drafted him in the second round in 2009 out of Utah, and three more seasons with the Kansas City Chiefs, Smith is in Oakland with a four-year, $40 million contract with $20 million guaranteed.

Smith is part of a rebuilt Oakland Raiders secondary, opposite fellow cornerback David Amerson. The unit also includes veteran free safety Reggie Nelson, who came over as a free agent from the Cincinnati Bengals, and first-round draft pick Karl Joseph at strong safety.

Smith remembered talking with Robertson when he was with the Dolphins, and Robertson was coaching with the Tennessee Titans.

"After the game, we chopped it up, man, I was like, It would be 'love' playing for you," Smith said. "All Pasadena guys are kind of alike -- we think alike, we act alike -- so it would be great to play for a coach who's from your area, knows everything about you and you're on the same page mentally."

Smith has 10 interceptions in seven seasons. But it is his physicality, more than his ball skills, which give quarterbacks, receivers and offensive coordinators fitful nights.

At 6-feet-3, 218 pounds, Smith is huge for a cornerback and looks like a skinny outside linebacker draped all over wideouts.

"Sean is a, he's a student of the game," said Robertson, who had 24 interceptions as a free safety during a 12-year career with the Houston Oilers, Tennessee Titans and Seattle Seahawks from 1991 through 2002.

"He's got a very high football IQ. The things that he possesses in his size and his length, I think make up for a little bit of the short areas of quickness and things of that nature, because he's so difficult to get around, he's so difficult to throw over. And then you put in the football IQ of it, he understands football. So when you talk about pattern-matching and things like that, he's got it."

The normally talkative Smith was at a loss for words when told of Robertson's praises, especially about the high football IQ.

"I was always told that talent will only take you so far and eventually it will fade away," Smith finally said. "The game is played from the neck up, and when you're young, you don't really understand that because you're just used to using your athleticism and just reacting out there and making plays.

"But as you get older, you can see the game from a different angle; you can slow it down and I try to tell guys all the time, 'You guys are way more athletic than I ever was. But mentally, I'm able to slow the game down and see things that kind of help me out to where I can make a play faster than you guys would, because you guys don't see it as fast as I do,' if that makes sense."

Makes perfect sense. Almost as if Smith was now a camp counselor for Robertson at the Jackie Robinson Community Center.

CSN BAY AREA

Raiders CB Smith 'wouldn't be here today' without WR background
By Scott Bair
August 22, 2016

Raiders cornerback Sean Smith was a pretty good receiver way back when. One heck of a running back, too. That's how he earned a scholarship to Utah, as an All-American scoring machine for Pasadena's Blair High.

The Utes recruited Smith as a running back but eventually focused him on receiver to capitalize on an athletic 6-foot-3, 220-pound frame. The shuffle didn't produce much and, after a falling out with a coach, Smith was moved across the line of scrimmage for good.

That's a major move with just three years college eligibility and NFL dreams, a last resort that changed his career for good.

After just two years at cornerback he was a third-team All-American, entering the workforce as Miami's second-round pick. Smith had seven years gainful employment in Miami and Kansas City, before joining the Raiders this offseason on a four-year, $38 million contract. His playing background brought him to this point.

“I wouldn’t be here today if I didn’t play offense,” Smith told CSNBayArea.com last week. “Switching from receiver to corner, it’s crazy how much that can help you.”

Thinking like a receiver has made him an excellent cover corner. He picked up the position’s mental aspects in a snap, which allowed him to flourish quickly. Smith offered some insight into his pre-snap routine and how he hones in on what the receiver might do based on his experience playing offense.

Smith said he quickly eliminates possibilities on the route tree based on formation and the receiver’s positioning.

“You start breaking things down, and then analyze them through the defense we’re running and where my help is going to be,” Smith said. “I’ve now crossed a bunch of options off the list and, before the snap, I’m confident he’ll run one of a small number of routes. I’ll focus on defending those and react to anything else. The majority of the time, it ends up being the routes you expect.”

Smith takes pride in his football acumen. Predicting routes comes easier than most, but Smith still spends significant time in the film room identifying tendencies of specific opponents and how to best defend them with his size and skill set.

Smith’s size and athleticism offers a solid baseline, but a cornerback’s technique, an effort refined over time in college and the pros. That’s when he believes the position switch was truly complete.

“I played boundary corner and in college, you only get maybe three routes,” Smith said. “I’m a big guy, and I could press and take things away. When I got to the NFL and the boss tells you to play in the middle, you really have to learn the nuances of playing cornerback.”

Smith played safe early in his NFL days, often worried about getting beat. He gained confidence from experience and detail work, and started playing more aggressive.

It hasn’t produced a high interception count – he has just 10 in seven seasons – but has developed an excellent cover man. Smith’s completion percentage allowed now hovers in the low 50s and the passer rating against him hasn’t been above 86 since 2011. Getting over on Smith is hard work. He’s become a reliable player who can defend all receiver types.

The Raiders aggressively sought his services this offseason, considering him an excellent scheme fit. They were also hoping to add a leader to the position group, and got one who sets a solid example for a young corps.

“I’m just trying to get the guys to trust what they see, and don’t be afraid to get beat,” Smith said. “If you believe in yourself and your reads, you’ll play well.”

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Cornerback Sean Smith a big part of Raiders' optimism
By Vic Tafur
August 24, 2016

He can't hide, so he's not going to try.

At 6-foot-3, 220 pounds, the Raiders' Sean Smith stands out among NFL cornerbacks. He knows some of the weight of the team's lofty expectations falls on his shoulders, and he welcomes that.

Smith can't hide, especially when the big free-agent signee walks in and sits down in Oakland's quarterbacks meetings. Derek Carr did a double-take the first time.

"He'll come in the quarterback room when he doesn't have a meeting and sit in," Carr said. "He'll ask questions, and we'll bounce ideas off each other. It's the first time I've ever had a defensive back do that.

"He's by far one of the smartest defensive players I have ever gone against or been around."

Carr's no dummy himself, evidenced by his not being goaded by the then-Chief's trash-talking the past two years.

Sean Smith's interception totals don't stand out — no more than two in a season — but that's a reflection of opposing quarterbacks opting not to throw in his direction.

Smith, 29, has taken to yelling at quarterbacks because most receivers don't engage in trash-talking — maybe Smith's saddest discovery about the NFL.

"It's crazy, I thought there would be much more trash-talking than there is," Smith said. "But it's quiet out there. Guys show up, do their jobs and go home. In college, you used to go back and forth....

"So I talk to the quarterbacks. They have the ball anyway. I used to always talk to D.C. Between plays, yelling at him, 'Come at me! Let's do this!' We used to go back and forth."

As Smith would tell the receivers, it's not easy looking this good. Never has been.

Smith didn't even have a position to look good at his first two years in college at Utah.

It wasn't until he was moved to cornerback that Smith started to emulate a famous Raider and thought about a future in the NFL.

"At that time, Nnamdi Asomugha was hot," Smith said. "He was the big corner. There weren't a lot of big cornerbacks at that time; everyone wanted that next Nnamdi, a corner over 6-feet tall. ... I used to always watch Nnamdi, seeing how he played and trying to imitate that on the field."

Smith has an inch and 10 pounds on the since-retired Asomugha, and with the move of Brandon Browner to safety in Seattle, he is the biggest starting cornerback in the NFL. He is a big reason that Raiders teammates, coaches and fans are talking playoffs.

“I love his competitiveness,” head coach Jack Del Rio said. “Sean’s a long athlete. He is a veteran with an understanding of who he is and where he fits in this league. He brings that knowledge of playing that position at a high level for a long time in this league.”

Some point to Smith’s size and aggressiveness, but his quick feet have paved this road for him.

“I always had good feet. I was a running back in high school, ‘offensive weapon’ I believe was the term we used,” Smith said, smiling.

Smith was one of 18 players on the Blair-Pasadena football team, and had 2,500 all-purpose yards his senior season.

“I never had any intention of playing running back at Utah. That just wasn’t the position for me,” Smith said. “I begged and pleaded if I could move to receiver.”

The Utes’ staff moved Smith during his redshirt freshman year, but he got into a heated argument with his position coach.

“The situation carried on, and I said, you know what, I am done with offense,” Smith said. “I went to my coach and said, ‘I am a big guy, let me play safety.’”

Roll credits?

Nah.

“I wasn’t a good tackler,” Smith said. “So they said, ‘Let’s try corner.’ I was like, ‘Corner?! I don’t know if I can do that.’ But it ended up working out. I picked up the technique pretty fast, and having played receiver, I understood the splits and what routes a guy might run, so I was ahead of the curve on that.”

Smith had four interceptions his sophomore season, and five interceptions and nine passes broken up the next year in Utah’s 13-0 2008 season.

Smith was drafted by the Dolphins in the second round in 2009, and it was with Miami that he learned again that being a very good football player doesn’t come easy. Another former Raider, 2014 interim coach Tony Sparano, played the starring role.

Sparano was the head coach and current Jets coach Todd Bowles the secondary coach, and neither loved Smith’s attitude.

“I smiled at everything, good and bad,” Smith said. “Just having the time of my life.”

A benching his second year awakened Smith to the extra work needed in the NFL.

“They were patient with me, and worked with me to become the player I am today,” Smith said. “They would call plays out before they happened, and taught me how to watch film.”

Smith watches so much film now, he can see the future.

“Have to, dealing with the smaller, shiftier receivers,” Smith said. “Those guys come out of their breaks so well, it forced me to watch more film and try to understand tendencies and formations. What routes do guys run 2-by-2 versus 3-by-1, so I can anticipate when to stop (running) versus just reacting.

“Bigger guys take longer to stop, so you can just use athleticism to cover those guys.”

Smith is able to get his hands on a receiver right away and control him, as opposed to letting the receiver get a clean break on his route.

As far as trying to throw the ball over him, forget about it.

“It’s really hard,” Carr said. “If you want to throw a go-route, especially in the NFL, 90 percent of the time it has to be before 40 yards. Because the safeties are so fast, anything past that they are going to kill your receiver.

“With Sean, you can’t really throw that ball on a line because he is so tall. If you want to drop one in on him, you have to bring it from the sky … and that just gives the safety more time. It’s just really hard playing against him.”

Smith will pull the chair out, too, backing off and not pressing so that he can jump the route and go for the interception.

“If you already know where the guy is going to be,” Smith said, “you might as well play off and keep your eyes on the quarterback and try to beat your man to the spot.”

So, don’t tell Smith that he’s a good fit for Ken Norton’s in-your-face defense.

“I fit any defense,” Smith said. “Is that a compliment or are people trying to say I can only play a certain way because I am big? I am a very smart individual that works on my technique every day....

“This is a good defense. It allows you to press. We have great edge rushers, so as long as I give those guys a few seconds, we’re good.”

It Was The Journey
By Robert Mays
March 29, 2016

Joe's Brewery, known simply as Joe's around the University of Illinois, sits at 706 South Fifth Street in Champaign, at the eastern edge of the college-bar hub that lines the town's main thoroughfare. A faded orange canopy shields the beer garden just outside the door. Inside, a list of 21 burgers makes up a bulk of the dining options. It's a place packed for $3 U-Call-Its on a weekend and barren at noon on Monday, but on this afternoon in early March, it's what Jihad Ward wants for lunch.

Champaign-Urbana sits about 140 miles south of Chicago. Outside of the university's small sphere of population, it's beset by farmland on all sides. The campus is spacious but not sprawling, bustling in a few areas but quiet in most. In choosing his Division-I home, Ward sought calm, and he knew he'd found it here.

Before coming to play defensive end for the Illini, the north Philadelphia native spent two years at Globe Institute of Technology, a junior college whose campus is situated in New York City's Garment District only a short stroll from Times Square. His first semester in Champaign, Ward's walk to practice consisted of the seven-block stretch between Bromley Hall and Memorial Stadium. That's the same distance from the 28th Street stop on the 1 Train to the Manhattan Mini Storage on the borough's west side that housed Globe Tech's practice equipment between sessions. At Illinois, the jaunt from Bromley was the entirety of his daily commute. In New York, snagging his pads from a storage locker was just one leg of an 11.5-mile trip from his school-provided townhouse on Staten Island to practice at the Chelsea Ballfields, which were occasionally unavailable because of a youth soccer practice. Getting there meant a short bus ride, a trip across the Upper Bay aboard the Staten Island Ferry, a quick shot on the 1 through Manhattan, and finally, that relative breeze of a seven-block walk.

When practice ended, Ward and the Knights lugged their gear back to storage before trudging nearly a mile down 29th Street to a Bally's Total Fitness near Penn Station for a lift and a shower. Clean but exhausted, they stumbled to classes at Globe, which often ended around 9 p.m. From there, it was a short walk to the 42nd Street station, a subway ride to the ferry, and finally, the slow float back to Staten Island. In all, it was a 24.5-mile round-trip commute—nearly three of those miles on foot—and around 200 minutes in transit over a five-day week.

"That's why people quit," Ward says. "They didn't quit because the team sucks, or this or that. They quit because of the grind." After two years of that grind, wide-open, slow-paced Champaign felt like a haven. "Here," Ward says, "there was nothing but quiet."

As he finishes the thought, Ward—an honest 6-foot-5 and a trim but sturdy 300 pounds, cloaked entirely in charcoal Illinois athletic gear—lifts his burger from its plastic red basket. Ranch and barbecue sauce spill out the sides of the bun. In junior college, players aren't provided meals. Many of the players at Globe were broke, and finding a next meal wasn't always certain. Bubba Burgers were the unaffordable item Ward craved enough to pilfer from the nearby grocery store.

Opinions of Ward as a player cover an expanse. His standout week at the Senior Bowl led Mel Kiper to project him as a first-round pick in February. Others see an inexperienced, position-less project that doesn't deserve a thought in the first two rounds. Ward hasn't paid much mind to any of the noise. Barely 22, with a patchy beard that betrays a soft but rumbling tenor, his past has purged him of self-doubt. Whatever concerns skeptics have voiced, none of them can touch the ones he's already faced.

"Somebody complain about food, I've been through it," Ward says. "Somebody complain about traveling, I've been through that. Somebody complain about not having a father, I've been through that. Somebody complain about violence or shooting, I've been through that too. I ain't afraid of nothing. I've been through everything."

52 Bus to St. George Ferry Terminal // Staten Island Ferry to Whitehall Terminal // 1 Train to 28th St.

Globe Tech's players were scattered around the boroughs and New Jersey, but for two years, Ward lived with 19 teammates in neighboring two-story townhouses at 104 and 106 Townsend Avenue on Staten Island. A modest $3,000 rent was the appeal of each cream-colored, green-roofed building, where six players inhabited the upstairs with another four on the first floor.

The bus stop was only a few steps down the street, and with two lines running they never waited long. Rides cost $2.75, which many of them simply didn't have every day. To ensure passage, they deployed an array of tactics. The simplest, because non-college students rode for free, was flashing an old high school ID. As Ward filled out his 6-5 frame, suspicion grew, and when the MTA issued specialized passes for high schoolers, the plan was scrapped. Some mornings, he'd grab a fistful of pennies and toss them in the change slot.

Free ferry rides provided a brief respite, but the real problem waited for them across the water. "We get off the ferry, and now, we have to worry about the train," Ward says, before pausing. "That's gonna be tricky." Subway stations around Whitehall were lined with police, both MTA and NYPD. Initially, says Tyruiq Gordon, a fellow Philly native who was a year ahead of Ward at Globe, they would try to reason with workers, explaining they were willing to give what they had, even if what they had wasn't enough. "For the most part, they were lenient toward us because of the situation," Gordon says. "We weren't just hanging around." On days when that failed, players would get creative. Even at 280 pounds, Ward would slip into a turnstile with a teammate, conjuring two Metro Card swipes out of one. Like attacking a double team, the key to squeezing onto the subway was getting skinny. "It's a technique going through them things," Ward says. In times of desperation, the Knights were left with one final, undesirable option. "If you had to hop, then you hopped," Gordon says of a move that could come with a $100 fine. "When it came down to it, you couldn't miss practice or class."

"You know the movie Warriors?" Ward asks. "We did the same thing."

Empty pockets hindered travel, but the hardest days were the ones that led to empty stomachs. Groceries came from a now-defunct Waldbaum's around the corner. On his most desperate days, Ward would haul a duffel bag to the store and collect the cheap essentials—pancake mix, milk, bread—before paying, sneaking back inside, and snagging luxuries like hot dogs and french fries. "He [wouldn't] eat for two days and not say anything to me," says Cameron Chadwick, Globe's head coach. "He was one of those kids, he wouldn't ask you. He'd just go without."

During Ward's first season living at 104 Townsend there were three other players from Philadelphia and six from Hampton Roads, Va. Those shared roots created the earliest bonds, but it was hunger—both for food and a future—that ultimately fused them. Gordon and others showed Ward the way that year, and when they were gone, the mantle was his. “It’s not really teaching someone,” Ward says. “You just see it. We’ve got each other’s back.”

For Chadwick, Ward became another set of eyes when he couldn’t be around. If the house wasn’t clean or neighbors complained about noise, he knew to call his Pied Piper, the guy who rounded up players, got them fed and to practice every day. That year, fellow Philadelphian Tyrin Stone-Davis was 3,000 miles away at Pierce College in Los Angeles, but when he joined Ward at Illinois, he felt the same pull. “Just his presence, period,” Stone-Davis said of Ward’s influence. “He just leads by action, and people rally behind him.” Stone-Davis is nearly a year older than the man he now describes as his brother, but that never mattered. There was comfort to be found in Ward’s quiet ambition, and Stone-Davis clung to it. He still does. “I just feel safe around him,” Stone-Davis says. “He never lied to me. He’s never done me harm. I trust him. I love him. He wants the best for me.

Walk from 28th St. to Manhattan Mini Storage (29th St. and 11th Ave.) to Chelsea Ballfields (28th and 10th)

The Chelsea Ballfields are a fenced-in artificial surface near the High Line, outfitted with a track, backstop, and soccer fields. And during Ward’s first season at Globe, in the fall of 2012, it’s where the team held most of its practices. Compared to the arduous walk from the storage unit to De Witt Clinton Park on 52nd Street in Hell’s Kitchen, home to spring practices that year, the two blocks felt like nothing to veterans like Gordon. When Chadwick ran into scheduling conflicts, he’d sometimes audible to Pier 40, at a field that adjoins a trapeze school, but that season Globe Tech football called two main locations home: practices in Chelsea, games at Union City High School in New Jersey, on a roof surrounded by a net to keep balls from plummeting off the side.

Next to the turf patch at the Ballfields sit a trio of basketball courts, much like the ones where Ward spent most of his childhood. Kareema Ward is a single mother with five children. “Jihad” was the name of a childhood classmate, and it would become the name of her first child. There was no religious connection at the time—Kareema didn’t convert to Islam until 11 years ago, long after Jihad was born—but her education as a Muslim has brought new meaning to his name. In her purse, she carries a piece of lined notebook paper with 17 highlighted Islamic phrases, a constant resource for lessons she’s still learning. She knows what most will think. They hear “Jihad,” all they imagine is decrees of holy war and violence. But jihad can also mean to strain, to strive, to persevere. Now, when Kareema hears her son’s name, she thinks of all he’s done in his own struggle.

Until age 14, he’d never played a down of organized football. Before his sophomore year at since-closed Edward Bok Technical High School, the basketball coach approached Frank Natale, then in his first-year as Bok’s head football coach, about a tall, muscular basketball player he thought would fit with Natale’s plans. That summer, a 6-foot-3, 240-pound Jihad Ward was getting snaps for the Wildcats at wide receiver and safety. “He was 6-4 at D-back wearing no. 84,” laughs Gordon, who played running back for nearby University that year. “He looked out of place.”

Apocryphal tales have emerged about Ward’s positional history, in the way they do about players who’ve spent time on the outskirts of college sports before ending up at a major program. He’s only played defensive line for three years is a tempting way to inflate Ward’s potential. It’s also not true. He spent his second season as a standup end in Natale’s 5-2 defense, and with an eye on getting Ward’s hand in the dirt, Bok transitioned to a 4-3 when he was a senior.

Ward was second-team All-City as a junior, but Division I interest ended before it could start when coaches learned about his grades. Natale ensures that Ward was a fixture in class, but still, his GPA hung just below 2.0. Chadwick, who'd been named Globe's head coach the previous year, had history recruiting in Philadelphia, and eventually he and Natale got in touch. He made the trip to see Ward play at an all-star game at Lincoln Financial Field, but he'd been sold long before. Players built like that don't land in junior college. A defensive end from the start at Globe Tech, Ward played well enough for his teammates to elect him a captain the spring following his freshman season.

Eight hundred fifty miles away, Bill Cubit was one of several members of the Illinois coaching staff scouring JUCO tape for defensive linemen. Poring through his Hudl account, Cubit, a Philadelphia native, came across a tape from a school he'd never heard of. He might have kept going if not for seeing his hometown next to the player's name. A few plays on the grainy tape were all Cubit needed.

Cubit reached out to Ward through Illinois's Twitter account and passed along his number. His first question after Ward called was a crucial one: American cheese or Cheez Whiz? Silence followed.

"On your cheese steak," Cubit said.

A short pause.

"American cheese."

Cubit was satisfied.

Until Ward came to Illinois that fall for his official visit, the only proof Cubit had that he even existed was shoddily recorded game footage and a voice on the other end of the phone. There was more evidence that the Loch Ness monster is real. The day before Illinois' game against Wisconsin, a hulking figure walked into a banquet room at Champaign Country Club for the team's Friday meal. "When he walked through the door, I was as relieved as anybody," Cubit says. "And I turned to somebody and said, 'Now that's what they're supposed to look like.'"

A handful of schools pursued, but Illinois is where he felt wanted most. Along with a reprieve from life in New York, Ward yearned for people who cared. He didn't always have them growing up in Philadelphia. When he was 17, a paternity test revealed that the imprisoned man he thought to be his father was not. Jihad eventually did get in touch with his dad, and when his family threw a party to celebrate his acceptance to Globe, he extended an invitation. The man arrived with the smell of beer lingering on his breath and handed his son a congratulatory $20 bill. Ward hasn't seen him since.

In Philadelphia, distrust and dismissal seeped into all of life's cracks. With Cubit at Illinois, there was support, a shared vision. "He told me the other day, 'You can't feel money,'" Kareema says. "But you can feel when someone loves you."

Ward's first padded practice in Champaign was the second day of the team's fall camp. He knew how established, pedigreed Division I might view a JUCO castoff, and from the start, he wanted to announce his presence. A broader goal came with it, though. "When I do a rep against people, when I get off the ball, people feel me," Ward says. "I don't say much, but people feel me. "You're going to feel how I felt for those two years, through my whole life."

Practice started with an inside run drill, the linemen, linebackers, and backs gathered on one side of the field. On the first snap, Ward knifed into the backfield and buried running back Donovonn Young into the turf. Stone-Davis was across the indoor facility with the rest of the wide receivers. “All I heard was Wooooo! Woooo!” Stone-Davis says. “Everybody just turned their head and looked.” What they saw was Ward, letting out an out-of-character roar in Young’s face as he was peeled off the ground. “He felt like he’d arrived,” Stone-Davis says.

Illinois was thin on the defensive line, and co-defensive coordinator Tim Banks says the staff did all they could to get Ward ready to play early that season. “I think we knew after the first practice,” Banks says. “This kid was freakish, in terms of his movements. And he went hard.” By the fourth game of the season, an injury made Ward one of the Illini’s starting defensive ends.

He remained there all year, earning Honorable Mention All-Big Ten along the way, but when new defensive line coach Mike Phair arrived the following spring, he quickly developed grander plans. Like many who’d only seen him on film, Phair was jarred by Ward’s size in person.

He saw a player that even at 6-foot-5 had the flexibility to maintain pad level and keep leverage. Throughout the spring, he experimented with Ward inside, where the quickness and length that allowed him to survive on the edge became an even more significant advantage against interior offensive linemen. “He’s dangerous there,” Phair says. “I thought he could really cause some problems for an offense. And I thought he did a really good job learning how to play those spots inside.” A bump to tackle was just another course in Ward’s rapid defensive line education. Those practices would be his only spring football experience in major college football, and that lack of background is what has teams intrigue about his room for growth. “I’m just now learning techniques and schemes,” Ward says. “Getting off the ball, getting vertical, those types of things.”

By the time Illinois played Iowa in its sixth game of the season, Ward was playing a considerable portion of his snaps at defensive tackle, and that week is when Phair saw it all coalesce. Ward finished that game with 11 tackles, including nine solo. In years past, players that appeared to fall between the cracks of positional designations were downgraded for it. Now, with stars like Muhammad Wilkerson, Calais Campbell, and Jurrell Casey blurring lines and erasing ballcarriers, versatility is en vogue. Phair spent five years as an NFL defensive line coach before arriving in Champaign, and when looks at Ward, he sees an instant pro. “It won’t surprise me when he plays right away for whoever drafts him,” Phair says.

Walk from Bally’s Total Fitness to Globe Institute of Technology (38th St. and 7th Ave.)

Globe’s entrance is on 38th Street. Wedged between two stores specializing in rhinestones and beads, “Garment Center Capitol” is carved into the stone above the door. When Cubit visited, following Illinois’s 2013 season, he thought he was lost. Ward’s thoughts were even blunter: “I was like, ‘This is the school?’”

The school is three floors of beige walls, with a few rows of computer paper reading “Welcome to Globe Institute of Technology” taped behind a receptionist’s desk acting as a banner. The rounded letters are filled in with black marker. It’s a tough sell for head coach Cameron Chadwick, and he knows it.

Chadwick is from Union, N.J. A high school star, poor grades made junior college his only outlet after graduation. He landed at Nassau Community College, and from his housing in Hempstead, the trudge to the Garden City campus was more than 3.5 miles. After two seasons, he transferred to Rutgers, where he played defensive back under head coach Terry Shea. Three years with NFL Europe's Prague Panthers followed, and after a short stint in real estate, Chadwick felt the pull of coaching. He was hired as Globe's defensive coordinator in 2008 before finally taking the head job in 2011. "I feel like this is where I belong," Chadwick says. "I was [these players] 20 something years ago."

The main sales pitch for Globe Tech is two-prong. Prong 1 starts—and ends—with the chance to attend school in New York City. Prong 2 is about how much it costs. Last season, Globe's opponents included Stevenson College, Dean College, and Albright College. The average yearly tuition for those three schools is $33,000 a year. Lackawanna and Albright are considerably more affordable, but neither gets to Globe's annual asking price: $11,000.

Getting players to campus is a start, but keeping them is far from a certainty. In those days, with the trek to and from Manhattan, Chadwick estimates that he lost about the half the players he'd recruited before the season. "You take an 18-year-old kid straight out of high school, stick him in the heart of New York and say, 'OK, now you have to do everything yourself,'" Gordon says. "It was definitely a shock." The travel was a deterrent for some of Ward's teammates, but what sent many of them scurrying was learning that a portion of their credits wouldn't pass NCAA compliance. Following his freshman year, Washington, Tennessee, Kentucky and Illinois all showed interest in Ward, but some balked at Globe's accreditation.

Chadwick ensured that all they needed was additional course materials, and the concerns would be alleviated, but Ward saw it as another rejection. He was devastated. All those hungry nights, all the cunning work to make his way onto the train, all his success on the field, it had been in vain. "It really hurt me because I busted my ass to be where I was," Ward says. "I was so excited that I had a full scholarship somewhere." Chadwick did what he could to calm the unrest, and in time, Illinois was able to accept enough of Ward's credits to accept him. After coming to Globe Tech with a 1.8 GPA, he left with a 3.4, and he's on track to finish his degree at Illinois in sports management this spring.

Conference room 409, where Ward signed his letter of intent, has been unchanged since. An old Dell desktop sits in one corner, a black file cabinet in another. Two posters—an eagle for "Leadership" and group of cyclists for "Perseverance"—hang on adjacent walls. A blue Globe Tech banner fills out another, behind the long table where Ward put pen to paper. Documenting it all was Chadwick with a cell phone, the signing day cameras a world away. "After we signed him, [Jihad] must have thanked me for five, six weeks, for giving him the opportunity," Cubit says.

Even now, as Ward spends more time with former college stars entrenched in the same stretch of their lives, he can't believe what he hears. He never says anything, content to keep his head down and his mouth closed as he plugs away. Quietly, he's incredulous. "It's a regular day to them," Ward says. "It's not a regular day to me. I'd never had a practice on no college football field, in a big stadium." He says the moment he arrived at Illinois, he knew this was the future. The hardest days were behind him. But even now, short clips will land in Cubit's text messages, of Ward alone in the practice facility. "He could be a $100 million man, and he'd still feel like he's worth a penny," says Stone-Davis. "That's Jihad."

Walk from Globe Tech to 42nd Street/Times Square // 1 Train to Whitehall Terminal // Staten Island Ferry to St. George Ferry Terminal

Tourists lingered in Times Square long after the 9 p.m. let-out time for Globe's classes, but the worst of the noise was long past. After another adventure to secure a seat on the train, Ward arrived at Whitehall Terminal and waited for the next ferry back to Staten Island. Sitting on the hard plastic seats of the ferry, he'd pass the Statue of Liberty, softly lit from below as a few straggling tourists gathered near the window to snap a picture.

"Like I tell everybody," Ward says, "I just want peace at the end of the day."

He found it at the end of every night in New York, but at Illinois, he discovered it in every aspect of his day. He knows football has changed has life, but he doesn't deny he's the one that allowed it to.

"There was so much stuff happening in my life. There's always something trying to break you down," he says. "But I made it through."

The only sound on the ferry was the low hum of the engine. It was a calming churn. Staring out the window, he saw the soft light on the Lady to which so many began anew. When he looked into the sky, he saw hope.
