HEAD COACHING MATCHUP

JACK DEL RIO

Jack Del Rio was named the 19th head coach in the 56-year history of the Oakland Raiders franchise on Jan. 15, 2015. The appointment marked a homecoming for Del Rio, who was raised in nearby Hayward, Calif.

In his first season with the Raiders, Del Rio oversaw significant improvements as the Raiders more than doubled the previous year's win total. Oakland moved up 15 spots in the NFL rankings in turnover ratio, finishing 17th in the league (+1) after ranking 32nd in 2014 (-15). The team improved in five major statistical categories on offense alone, making gains in total offense, rushing, passing, points per game and third-down efficiency. On defense, the Raiders improved in rushing defense, points per game allowed and third-down defense. Six Raiders were selected for the Pro Bowl, matching a franchise record set in 1994.

As defensive coordinator with the Denver Broncos from 2012-14, Del Rio was part of three-straight AFC West titles and helped lead Denver to an AFC Championship and appearance in Super Bowl XLVIII following the 2013 campaign. It marked his second stint under Head Coach John Fox, as the two also spent the 2002 season together in Carolina. In all, he has coached 24 players to a total of 33 Pro Bowl selections.

Prior to joining the Broncos in 2012, Del Rio spent nine seasons at the helm in Jacksonville. During his head coaching tenure (2003 to 2011) with the Jaguars, the club ranked sixth in the NFL in yards per game allowed (317.3) and eighth in points per game allowed (20.3).

Under Del Rio, the Jaguars made two playoff appearances in 2005 and 2007, highlighted by the club's first postseason win in eight seasons with a 31-29 road victory against the Pittsburgh Steelers in a 2007 AFC Wild Card Game.

During his lone season as a defensive coordinator with Carolina in 2002, he inherited the NFL's worst defense statistically (371.4 yards per game allowed) and turned it into the league's second-ranked unit (290.4 yards per game allowed).

As linebackers coach for the Baltimore Ravens from 1999-2001, Del Rio tutored a talented group that included Peter Boulware, Ray Lewis and Jamie Sharper. Baltimore's 2000 team set the NFL 16-game record by allowing only 165 points while recording four shutouts and forcing a league-best 49 turnovers.

A veteran of 11 seasons as an NFL linebacker, he was selected in the third round (68th overall) of the 1985 NFL Draft by New Orleans and went on to make the NFL's All-Rookie Team and earn the Saints' Rookie of the Year award. For his career, he played 160 games in the regular season and totaled 1,078 tackles, 12 sacks and 13 interceptions.

Del Rio was a four-year starter at the University of Southern California, where he earned consensus All-American honors as a senior and was runner-up for the Lombardi Award, given to the nation's best lineman or linebacker. Named co-MVP of the 1985 Rose Bowl, Del Rio recorded 340 career defensive stops, including 58 tackles for a loss. A standout catcher on the USC baseball team, Del Rio was drafted by the Toronto Blue Jays in 1981. He was inducted into the USC Athletic Hall of Fame in May 2015.

Del Rio was a three-sport star in football, baseball and basketball at Hayward High School in Hayward, Calif. He earned a degree in political science from the University of Kansas while playing for the Chiefs.

Born on April 4, 1963, in Castro Valley, Calif., Del Rio and his wife, Linda, have three daughters, Lauren, Hope and Aubrey, and a son, Luke, who is a quarterback at the University of Florida.

PETE CARROLL

Named head coach on January 11, 2010, Pete Carroll became the eighth head coach in Seahawks history after one of the most successful runs in USC history in the college ranks. He brings 22 years of NFL experience and 19 years of collegiate experience to Seattle. Carroll's overall head coaching record is 93-67 in the regular season and 9-6 in the postseason in his 10 years of NFL head coaching.

In 2015, he became the eighth active head coach and 43rd coach in NFL history with 100 combined wins (regular season and postseason). In his six seasons as head coach in Seattle, Carroll and General Manager John Schneider constructed the best teams in Seahawks history over the past four seasons with a combined 46-18 record, back-to-back Super Bowl appearances in 2013-14 and 10-plus wins in four consecutive seasons for the first time in franchise history.

Seattle has advanced to the divisional round in five of Carroll's six seasons as coach, winning two NFC Championships and one Super Bowl, while claiming the No. 1 seed in the NFC twice, and third time in franchise history (2005 under Mike Holmgren, 2013-14).

Carroll led Seattle to its first Super Bowl title in franchise history with a 43-8 victory over the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XLVIII on February 2, 2014, after a franchise-best 13-3 regular season record, and joined Jimmy Johnson and Barry Switzer as the only coaches to win a college football national title and a Super Bowl in their career.

Carroll returned to the NFL after spending nine years (2001-09) as head coach at USC, where he won seven consecutive Pac-10 titles (2002-08), two national championships (2003-04) and led the Trojans to a 97-19 record. He reached a bowl in each of his nine seasons and won seven. His 88 victories from 2001 to 2008 tied Bob Pruett of Marshall for most by a Division I coach in their first eight seasons since 1900 (Penn's George Woodruff - 102). From 2002-08, his teams appeared in an NCAA-record seven consecutive BCS bowls, recorded at least 11 victories seven times (an NCAA record) and finished ranked in the AP Top 4.

He began his NFL career as defensive backs coach for Buffalo (1984) and Minnesota (1985-89) before becoming the New York Jets defensive coordinator (1990-93) and head coach (1994). He spent two years as San Francisco's defensive coordinator (1995-96), leading the league in total defense in 1995, before leading New England to a 27-21 record and two playoff appearances as head coach (1997-99). Carroll was a two-time (1971-72) All-Pacific Coast Conference free safety at Pacific and earned his bachelor's degree in 1973 in business administration.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

The Raiders — who began play in the American Football League in 1960 — enter their 57th year of professional football competition, including the last 46 as a member of the National Football League.

In five memorable decades — the 1960s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the 2000s — the Raiders have been dominant in professional football since Al Davis first pledged in 1963 to build the finest organization in pro sports.

During these decades of dominance, the Raiders have won an AFL championship, four American Football Conference championships, and three world championships of professional football, participated in five Super Bowls, played in 14 championship games, won or tied for 17 division championships, had 21 playoff seasons, finished 34 seasons at .500 or better and played in 40 postseason games.

Pro football's dynamic organization placed first in the AFC West in 2000, 2001 and 2002 despite playing among the toughest schedules in the NFL in each of those seasons. With their appearance in Super Bowl XXXVII, the Raiders became the first NFL team to have had a season end in the Super Bowl in four different decades.

The Raiders are the only team to have been in Super Bowls in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s and the 2000s.

The Silver and Black are the only AFC team — and one of just two NFL teams (Minnesota) — to have a season that advanced to the conference championship game in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s, the '90s and the 2000s.

The Raiders are one of only three original AFL teams to have captured three world championships of professional football with Super Bowl victories. The Raiders are one of only four AFC teams to have won more than one Super Bowl since 1980.

In their five Super Bowl appearances, the Raiders have been led by four head coaches and started four quarterbacks.

With four postseason victories, the Raiders were the first of the AFC West teams to win multiple postseason contests in the new millennium by six years.

Since 1963, when Al Davis first took over the failing Oakland franchise that had struggled to win only nine of 42 league games in the initial three seasons of the new AFL and pledged to build the finest organization in sports, the Raiders have dominated professional football in terms of consistent victory. During those memorable 56 years in Oakland and Los Angeles, the Raiders have won 444 league games, tied 11 and lost 397.

"Commitment to Excellence" has never been an idle phrase to those who have proudly represented the Raiders organization during the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium as shown by their domination of pro football.

More than 20 of the great players who proudly wore the Silver and Black, as well as Owner-Leader Al Davis and legendary Head Coach John Madden, have been enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. The Raiders have also produced five Coaches of the Year.

In addition, 66 Pro Bowl players have made 188 Pro Bowl appearances representing the Silver and Black. In 1970, as the Raiders began their second decade of play, the merger between the AFL and NFL became a reality on the field. In the 1970 through 2012 period of interconference play, the Raiders have compiled a remarkable 92-77-1 record against present National Football Conference rivals.

Another innovation came to professional football in 1970 — "Monday Night Football." The Raiders' domination of this prime-time television series has seen the Silver and Black build an incredible 37-27-1 record in Monday night play. In the 43 years of this series, the Raiders are 15-8-0 in "Monday Night Football" games at home.

Through the decades — the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and now the 2000s — the Raiders have had the greatest players, the greatest coaches, the greatest plays and participated in the greatest games in the annals of professional sports.

Challengers to Raider domination of professional football will arise as they have in the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium. The Raider organization will continue to meet these challenges.

REGGIE McKENZIE

THE GENERAL MANAGER

Reggie McKenzie, a former draft pick by Raiders Owner Al Davis as a player, enters his 30th season in the National Football League and his fourth as General Manager of the Silver and Black. McKenzie was named to the position by Owner Mark Davis on Jan. 10, 2012, becoming the first General Manager of the franchise since Al Davis was hired as Head Coach and General Manager in 1963. Owner Mark Davis rewarded McKenzie with a four-year contract extension in July 2016.

Entering his fifth season as General Manager, McKenzie has overseen significant changes in the organization's scouting, player personnel and football operations departments, while bringing refined football acumen to the Silver and Black. Adhering to a strategy of building a competitive roster through the draft while making strategic acquisitions via free agency and trades, McKenzie enters his fifth season at the helm having already earned plaudits from some of the most respected voices in football.

UNDRAFTED GEMS

Every preseason, hundreds of undrafted free agents vie for a spot on their team's 53-man roster. Reggie McKenzie has brought in numerous players that were not drafted, developing them into significant contributors for the Silver and Black.

- WR Andre Holmes, originally an undrafted free agent with the Minnesota Vikings in 2011, has two of the Raiders' top four single-game receiving totals from 2013-14. He set career highs in 2014 with 47 catches for 693 yards and four touchdowns.

- In 2015, P Marquette King set a franchise record by placing 40 punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. In 2014, King set Raider franchise records in punts (109) and punting yards (4,930). In his first year as the team's punter in 2013, King posted numbers among the NFL's best in both gross average and punting yards. With 4,107 punting yards on the year, King finished sixth in the NFL, and led the league in gross punting with an average of 48.9.

- QB Matt McGloin made his mark on the NFL in his rookie season, making his first career start on Nov. 17, 2013 at Houston. In that game, McGloin became the first undrafted rookie to throw for three-or-more touchdown passes in his first NFL start since 1987. He also became just the second quarterback to throw for three touchdowns without an interception in his first NFL start since the NFL-AFL merger in 1970.

- WR Seth Roberts posted five touchdowns in 2015, including two game-winning touchdowns (Week 2 vs. Baltimore and Week 12 at Tennessee).

Below are some of the notable current Raiders who entered the NFL as undrafted free agents:

Player	School	Year	Team
DL Denico Autry	Mississippi State	2014	Oakland
LS Jon Condo	Maryland	2005	Dallas
WR Andre Holmes	Hillsdale	2011	Minnesota
G/T Austin Howard	Northern Iowa	2010	Philadelphia
P Marquette King	Fort Valley State	2012	Oakland
QB Matt McGloin	Penn State	2013	Oakland
FB/RB Jamize Olawale	North Texas	2012	Dallas
T Donald Penn	Utah State	2006	Minnesota
FB Marcel Reece	Washington	2008	Miami
WR Seth Roberts	West Alabama	2014	Oakland

LATE-ROUND STEALS

"It definitely helps. When you play on Sunday and a guy goes down and that player that you have running on special teams now can play a position and you're not afraid to put him in, it gives you depth. They may not be the starter. These young guys, you really have to give them a couple of years to figure out what they really are. Some of them, you have to throw them in because of where you are as a team. Let's all hope that not only the guys at the top of the draft but the guys at the bottom, if we can get a couple of those guys to give us some production within the first three years, that would be great." - Raiders GM Reggie McKenzie on getting production from lower-level draft picks

GM Reggie McKenzie's philosophy of building his roster through the draft includes standout players from the top of the board like DE Khalil Mack, QB Derek Carr and WR Amari Cooper. But a good drafting team will make all of their picks count, and McKenzie has done that of late. Here is a look at some players that McKenzie has drafted in the fourth round or later since 2013 and have provided solid production:

Player	Year	Round
RB Latavius Murray^	2013	6
TE Mychal Rivera^	2013	6
DT Stacy McGee^	2013	6
DT Justin Ellis^	2014	4
CB TJ Carrie^	2014	7
G/C Jon Feliciano^	2015	4
LB Ben Heeney^	2015	5
LB Neiron Ball^	2015	5

^ - has started multiple games over career

THAT'S WHAT THEY SAID...

"My approach is old school. I'm a roll up the sleeves type of guy that wakes up early in the morning like iron workers, and comes prepared to get the job done." - Reggie McKenzie, introductory press conference, Jan. 10, 2012

"He has the courage of his convictions about players that Ron Wolf had, including blunt assessments of their talent. But Reggie also has the patience of Ted Thompson; he adheres to the draft-and-develop model of team-building. The latter means trusting scouts to constantly fill a pipeline of young talent, empowering coaches to play and develop young players, and identifying core players to secure contractually for the future." - Andrew Brandt, Monday Morning Quarterback (MMQB), March 12, 2014

"He is an exceptional evaluator of talent. Just has a great skill for it, especially for guys already in the NFL who might be flying under the radar. He was my right-hand man for all those years, a big reason why the Packers were good all those years." - Ron Wolf, April 24, 2012

"You can see this foundation starting to build there with the things Reggie [McKenzie] has done. He goes and hires Jack Del Rio, and I think that's a pretty good situation. They have a ton of cap space and an opportunity to build. All of a sudden you look at the AFC West, and they're kind of on the rise and you're very familiar with the AFC West so you know. It's very competitive." - Andy Reid, March 24, 2015

Season Notes

- Between the two of them, they had eight 100-yard receiving games (Cooper had five and Crabtree had three).
- Both Cooper and Crabtree caught over 70 passes and recorded over 900 receiving yards this season.
- Both players caught at least four passes in 12 of the team's 16 games. The Raiders were 5-3 when they combined for at least 10 receptions in a game.

BLOCKING KICKS

In 2015, the Raiders blocked five field goals or extra points, which is the most the team has blocked since at least 1995. Not only is that figure a single-season Raider mark, it ties for the most in a season in the entire NFL since 1995. Below is a breakdown of the kicks that Oakland has blocked last year and how it stacked up with the rest of the NFL since 1995. Amazingly, DL Denico Autry blocked three FGs/PATs this season, the most by any player since 2011.

STUFFING THE RUN

Since the Raiders returned to Oakland in 1995, the team has limited the opposition to less than two yards per carry in a game 14 times, including the Week 14 game at Denver last season. The 1.6 yards per carry allowed at Denver was the eighth time since 2012 that the Silver and Black have allowed an average of less than two yards per carry. Here is a look at the games:

In Week 3's victory over the Cleveland Browns last year, QB Derek Carr (314 passing yards), WR Amari Cooper (134 receiving yards) and RB Latavius Murray (139 rushing yards) made some history. According to the NFL, no trio of players 25 years old or younger have produced more passing/rushing/receiving yards, respectively, as Carr, Murray and Cooper did in Week 3. Additionally, they are also just the 11th trio of teammates age 25 or younger to join the 300/100/100 club. Here is the list of teammates 25-years old or younger in the 300/100/100 club:

KHALIL MACK

SILVER AND MACK

As the Raiders' first-round pick in the 2014 NFL Draft, DE Khalil Mack had lofty expectations in his rookie season and he met them all and more. Mack finished third in Associated Press Defensive Rookie of the Year voting, falling to St. Louis' DT Aaron Donald. Proving to be one of the NFL's best run defenders and generating pressure on quarterbacks that didn't always show up on the stat sheet, Mack was selected to the Pro Football Writers of America, Sports Illustrated and NFL.com All-Rookie Teams.

In 2015, Mack significantly surpassed the totals from his rookie year. After setting a new career high with his fifth sack in Week 10, he more than tripled his career high in sacks.

FIVE SACK GAME

Mack tied a franchise record set more than 32 years ago and set a career high with five sacks in Week 14 at Denver last year. His incredible performance matched Howie Long's five sacks on Oct. 2, 1983. Below is a look at the top single-game sack performances in franchise history:

Player	Sacks	Date
Khalil Mack	5.0	12/13/15
Howie Long	5.0	10/2/83
Kameron Wimbley	4.0	11/10/11
Anthony Smith	4.0	9/12/93
Anthony Smith	4.0	10/18/92

Mack became the first player with five sacks in a game in which his team won by three points or fewer since sacks became an official stat in 1982. All of Mack's five sacks came in the second half against Denver, tying for the most sacks in a half since 1991. Here is a look at the most sacks in a half since 1991:

Player	Sacks	Date
Khalil Mack (Oak.)	5.0	12/13/15
Vonnie Holliday (GB)	5.0	12/22/02
10 Tied	4.0	-

Since sacks became an official stat in 1982, only six other players have recorded more than five sacks in a game in NFL history. Mack is the sixth player to record five sacks and one forced fumble in a game. The last player to do so was Aldon Smith for the San Francisco 49ers in 2012. Below is a look at the six players to record five sacks and one forced fumble in game:

SACK ATTACK

In Week 14 at Denver last year, Mack posted five sacks, the most in an NFL game this season, improving his season total to 14 sacks. With that performance, Mack jumped to the top of the NFL leaderboard in 2015 sacks. Mack added one more sack in Week 15 to finish the season with 15 sacks, good for second in the league.

Mack had a sack in four straight games from Week 12-15, tying the second longest streak by a Raider since 2001. The last Raider with a sack in four straight games was Desmond Bryant in 2012.

MULTI-SACK MACK

Mack notched at least two sacks in three straight games, making him the only NFL player to do so last season. His streak tied the second longest streak in the NFL since 2001.

After posting one of the most prolific rookie campaigns in NFL history, Carr has made the fifth biggest year-to-year improvement among quarterbacks who have started at least 10 games in each of the last two seasons.

MOST IMPROVED PASSER RATING FROM 2014 TO 2015

AMARI COOPER

FIRST-ROUNDER

WR Amari Cooper was tabbed as the Raiders' first-round draft pick in the 2015 NFL Draft and the fourth-overall selection. He was the highest wide receiver taken in the draft and the first receiver taken by Oakland in the first round since 2009. After enjoying one of the most dominant careers a wide receiver has ever had at the college level, Cooper saw that success translate to the NFL, as he became the first Raiders rookie to ever reach 1,000 receiving yards. Cooper also holds the franchise records for receptions and 100-yard games (five) by a rookie.

His five 100-yard games are tied for the second most by a rookie since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger (leader: Odell Beckham Jr., seven in 2014).

Cooper is the third rookie since 1970 with four 100-yard games through his team's first 11 contests.

Cooper became the first NFL rookie since 1961 (Mike Ditka) with three 100-yard receiving games in his team's first six games.

Raiders lose, have plenty of work to do

By Jimmy Durkin

August 27, 2016

OAKLAND -- The Raiders' dress rehearsal for the regular season showed their defense still has plenty of work to do.

Oakland fell 27-14 to the Tennessee Titans at the Coliseum on Saturday night as the offense got rolling but the defense was gashed again. The Raiders gave up 276 yards in the first half to the Titans starters, including 106 on the ground, and allowed points on Tennessee's first four possessions.

"We really haven't stopped the run the way we expect to this year," coach Jack Del Rio said. "Misfits continue to cause problems. We've got to get that cleaned up with the season approaching."

Del Rio played his starters into the third quarter for the first and only time of the preseason and was pleased by the offense that racked up 440 yards.

Quarterback Derek Carr completed 12 of 18 passes for 169 yards and two touchdowns before exiting. Those were the first two touchdown drives of the preseason for the starting offense.

Here's what we learned from the Raiders (1-2) preseason loss to the Titans (2-1):

THREE TAKEAWAYS

Defense needs work: Vanilla game plans or not, the Raiders were gashed on the ground and never pressured Tennessee quarterback Marcus Mariota, who completed 9 of 16 passes for 170 yards.

The Raiders are leaning on an improved defense to take them to the next level this season, and it hasn't shown up often enough in these exhibitions.

"It definitely bothers you," defensive end Khalil Mack said. "At the same time, it's a great learning experience right now. It's going to get us ready."

The Carr is rolling: Carr hadn't thrown a preseason touchdown pass since 2014 when he hit DeAndre Washington on a 6-yard pass. A big 41-yard connection with Michael Crabtree set that up.

He followed with a 29-yard strike in the back of the end zone to Amari Cooper, who had three catches for 52 yards. There was a chance for a third, but Carr was high to an open Clive Walford.

Still it was a terrific day for the third-year quarterback, not that the Raiders had been concerned about his previous preseason performances.

"Maybe other people can relax about him, maybe that helps, but for us, we know what we have, and he's had a tremendous offseason," Del Rio said.

It's preseason: It's easy to overreact to anything good or bad in the exhibition games. But in reality, limited stock should be taking from any of these games, and this one in particular.

With the Raiders facing Tennessee again in Week 3 of the regular season, the game plan was even more dumbed down than normal. There may have been a lot of work for the starters, but much of that was getting them in condition to play deep into games when they count.

THREE WHO HELPED THEMSELVES

DeAndre Washington: The Raiders' fifth-round pick, Washington had eight carries for 55 yards that included a huge burst on a 31-yard run. He also caught the touchdown pass from Carr. He's making a good case to cut into Latavius Murray's carries.

Jalen Richard: The undrafted back made his debut after missing two weeks with a knee injury and impressed with a 38-yard kick return on his first touch. He also finished with seven carries for 35 yards and showed some nice burst and potential.

Seth Roberts: After Del Rio said this week that Roberts was "being pushed," the No. 3 receiver had a terrific downfield block on a 17-yard Carr scramble. Carr went to him two plays later for a 15-yard completion. He answered the call.

THREE WHO HURT THEMSELVES

Nate Allen: He started at safety in place of injured Reggie Nelson and had a big error. He thought Sean Smith had jumped a route and had an interception (in fairness, he probably should have), and Allen celebrated too early as Tajae Sharpe caught the pass and picked up 60 yards.

Del Rio joked after the game that Smith would be catching 100 passes at the Raiders next practice to make up for it.

Latavius Murray: The Raiders didn't want to expose their starting running back, who had no yards on two carries. That's not necessarily the problem. The issue is that Washington and Richard looked so good that a time-sharing role could be in play for the Raiders' fourth-year back.

Ben Heeney: Eyes were going to be locked on the starting middle linebacker after he struggled last week against Green Bay. He had three tackles and a huge hit on Mariota after the Titans' quarterback released a pass, but was also replaced by Cory James for large chunks of the first half. It's hard to inspire confidence from the sideline.

Raiders' Carr sharp in preseason loss

By Vic Tafur

August 27, 2015

Derek Carr was geeked out when Saturday night's preseason game started. He jumped in the air when he ran out when his name was called for pregame introductions, as the fans at the Coliseum roared.

And then Carr treated it just as though it was a real game, throwing two first-half touchdown passes, the first-team offense's first scores of the preseason, in what became a 27-14 loss to the Titans. He dropped in two deep passes to Michael Crabtree and Amari Cooper, the latter for a 29-yard touchdown.

Carr finished the third preseason game 12-of-18 for 169 yards and even did his best Marcus Mariota impersonation with a 17-yard run. He came out mid-drive five minutes into the third quarter, and that should be a wrap for his preseason, as there is no reason for him to play in the finale Thursday against Seattle.

"I thought Derek was sharp and made some really nice throws," head coach Jack Del Rio said. "He's had a tremendous offseason and training camp. I feel really good about where he is."

The Raiders also got the running game going, as DeAndre Washington had eight carries for 55 yards and Jalen Richard added 35 on seven carries. Del Rio wanted to get the two rookies some action behind the first-team offensive line, as starter Latavius Murray was pretty much a bystander, running twice for zero yards.

"They both ran hard, ran with vision," Del Rio said. "They make people miss, so I was pleased. Going into the offseason, we were hoping we could develop a running back that could be a really good backup for us, and it looks like we have a shot at having one of those guys help us, potentially both. We'll see."

And no, don't read anything into Murray getting only two carries.

"We saw him last year," Del Rio said of the Pro Bowl running back. "We have a body of work under Latavius. The bigger question was to find out who would be the backup for us."

Defensively, Oakland must be saving up some good stuff for when the two teams meet for real on Sept. 25, because it didn't show much call-wise and didn't get any pressure on Mariota, who led Tennessee to four first-half scores and a 20-14 lead.

The Raiders had a chance to take the lead at the end of the half, but Carr missed an open Clive Walford in the end zone. Then, with 10 seconds left on 4th-and-2, Carr was under pressure and couldn't get a pass close to Crabtree.

"That will be keep me up tonight," Carr said. "Drives me nuts."

The Raiders' coaches then took Carr out mid-drive in the third quarter because they wanted to surprise backup Matt McGloin.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

"We wanted to put some pressure on Matt, Matt not understanding what was coming," Del Rio said. "We wanted Matt to be uncomfortable, with Matt like, 'What the heck, I'm in?' It was a learning opportunity for him there."

McGloin didn't ace the test — far from it. On his third play, he left Washington out to dry on a short pass, and linebacker Sean Spence laid out the running back. Washington lost the ball, and David Bass scooped up the fumble and ran it back 47 yards for a touchdown.

"The hard part is coming out," Carr said. "You're so conditioned to just keep playing and you feel good, and then ... 'Stop, You're out.' Man. 'I'm good, guys. I can keep playing if you want.'"

"I can't wait for the season opener in New Orleans."

3 notables

Derek Carr: QB is ready for the season to start. He dropped in deep passes to Michael Crabtree and Amari Cooper, the latter for a touchdown, and finished 12-of-18 for 169 yards in a little more than a half of action.

Bruce Irvin: The former Seahawk and the coaching staff must be saving it up for the regular season, as the outside linebacker wasn't very active on the Titans' four first-half scoring drives.

Instant Replay: Raiders busted up by run in loss to Titans

By Scott Bair

August 27, 2015

OAKLAND —The Raiders first-unit offense had scored six points in seven series heading into Saturday's exhibition against Tennessee. Quarterback Derek Carr had made some nice plays, but hadn't put a complete drive together this preseason.

All that changed against the Titans, when the offense was as explosive as expected over four complete series in a 27-14 loss at Oakland-Alameda Coliseum.

The starting unit scored two touchdowns and would've added a field goal following a two-minute drive where the Raiders went for it on fourth down because, well, it's the preseason.

Carr was 12-for-18 for 169 yards and two touchdowns, a line that included a pair of well-placed deep shots to Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree. He got help from diminutive rookie running backs DeAndre Washington and Jalen Richard, who accounted for 95 combined yards of total offense.

Special teams units also stood out, with big plays from punter Marquette King, and cover men Taiwan Jones and Brynden Trawick.

The starting defense, however, wasn't so snappy. The Raiders allowed 276 yards, including 106 on the ground, in the first half. The Titans never punted, scoring three touchdowns and a field goal over two quarters.

Raiders starters gave up chunk plays in the passing game and had a difficult time with Tennessee rushers DeMarco Murray and Derrick Henry. The first unit finally forced a punt in the third quarter, its final drive of the game.

Carr and the first-unit offense began a fifth series to open the third quarter, but Carr was subbed out midway through. Washington took a big hit from Titans linebacker Sean Spence three plays later, one that dislodged the ball allowed Tennessee to scoop and score a touchdown in the third quarter.

This exhibition marks the last extended game stretch for Raiders starters, who will barely in Thursday's exhibition finale against Seattle.

Richard returns: The Raiders took a long look at hyped undrafted rookie Jalen Richard, making his preseason debut after missing two games with a knee injury.

He was the team's first option returning kickoffs, and received work with the first-team offense. The Southern Mississippi alum was productive in both endeavors, strengthening prevailing thought that he'll make the 53-man roster even after missing two exhibitions with a knee injury.

Richard had seven carries for 35 yards, and had two kickoff returns for 57 yards, including a long of 38 yards.

This n that:

-- The battle to start at right tackle continued on Saturday, with Austin Howard working a drive with the first team. Menelik Watson, believed to be the frontrunner of this race, took most of the snaps with the first unit.

-- Linebacker Cory James rotated in for Ben Heeney on a few first-unit drives. That swap has also occurred at times in practice.

-- Keith McGill worked in with the first team alongside Nate Allen at times over Karl Joseph.

-- The Raiders made a quarterback switch in the middle of a drive, exchanging Matt McGloin for Carr on the opening series of the third quarter.

-- Undrafted rookie Johnny Holton, fighting to make the 53-man roster, got involved on offense and recorded three catches for 54 yards. He also had a kickoff return for 23 yards.

Sitting it out: Linebacker Neiron Ball was an unexpected omission from Saturday's list of available players. The second-year pro was held out with an undisclosed injury, joining Mario Edwards Jr., Gabe Holmes and Reggie Nelson on the shelf.

Fullback Marcel Reece wasn't declared out, but did not dress for this game. He has practiced every day, though he must serve a three-game suspension to start the year due to a PED violation.

What's next: The Raiders have reached the preseason's home stretch, with just one exhibition game remaining Thursday against Seattle. They'll take Sunday off, and are expected to practice Monday and Tuesday leading up to the Seahawks contest. Some Raiders won't make it that far, with roster limit shrinking to 75 on Tuesday.

Mariota, Carr both sharp in Titans' 27-14 win over Raiders

By Josh Dubow

Aug 28, 2015

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Marcus Mariota and Derek Carr look ready for the season to start after a successful preseason dress rehearsal.

Mariota led Tennessee to scores on all four drives he played and Carr threw two touchdown passes for Oakland and the Titans beat the Raiders 27-14 on Saturday night.

"All in all, guys have put in the work," Mariota said. "We've built a pretty solid offseason in the preseason. Now it's just putting it all together once the season starts."

With the starters getting their most playing time in the third week of the preseason, the offenses looked in midseason form while both first-team defenses struggled mightily.

That left Raiders coach Jack Del Rio frustrated, especially about a first-team run defense that couldn't slow down DeMarco Murray or Derrick Henry on the ground.

"I take it real personal," Del Rio said. "I don't know what to tell you. I don't have a good alibi for it. It bothers me. You can't be a great defense doing that."

Mariota had the Raiders scrambling all night, faking out DJ Hayden on an option run and beating Oakland's top cornerback Sean Smith on a couple of plays.

Smith nearly intercepted a pass to Tajae Sharpe on the opening drive and safety Nate Allen jumped in apparent celebration. But Sharpe caught the ball and got by the unsuspecting Allen for a 60-yard gain that set up Murray's 1-yard TD run.

Mariota survived a big hit from Ben Heeney to convert a third down to Andre Johnson on the next drive that led to the first of two field goals.

"It was good to get a hit like that and get the cobwebs out a little bit," Mariota said. "But I was glad we got the first down and kept moving the ball."

Mariota then led one more TD drive late in the half before calling it a night. He finished 9 for 16 for 170 yards.

Carr was just as sharp, completing 10 of 15 passes for 146 yards. He was able to hit a couple of deep passes, including a 41-yarder to Michael Crabtree on the opening drive and a perfectly placed 29-yarder to Amari Cooper in the end zone for his second TD pass.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

"You see the hard work paying off," Carr said. "We hit some today. It's good to see. Hitting those are just reps."

Carr capped the opening drive with a 6-yard TD pass to rookie DeAndre Washington. He nearly had a third TD, but missed an open Clive Walford in the end zone late in the first half.

ROOKIE WATCH

Titans: Henry used his size to overpower Raiders defenders at times and rushed for 49 yards on 12 carries with a 3-yard TD run.

Raiders: Rookies Washington and Jalen Richard provided sparks as they make a case to become the primary backup running back to Latavius Murray. Washington ran for 55 yards on eight carries to go with his TD catch and Richard had 35 yards on seven runs. Washington lost a fumble when he was drilled by Sean Spence after catching a short pass from Matt McGloin. David Bass returned it 47 yards for a score.

INJURY UPDATE

Titans: TE Delanie Walker left in the second quarter after losing his breath briefly.

Raiders: S Reggie Nelson and LB Neiron Ball sat out with undisclosed injuries.

POSITION BATTLES

Titans: Quinton Spain, competing with Sebastian Tretola for the starting left guard spot, played the entire first half and helped Tennessee run for 106 yards and kept pressure off Mariota.

Raiders: Rookie MLB Cory James got some time with the first-team defense in place of starter Ben Heeney.

QUOTABLE

Titans: "Great play, great hit, great timing of it. Those are the plays that we need to make. Those are the plays that we're capable of making," coach Mike Mularkey on Spence's forced fumble.

Raiders: "When you're playing a running team like that, you have to play gap-sound defense, you have to set edges, you have to play gaps or they'll make you pay. They made us pay tonight," linebacker Bruce Irvin said after Oakland allowed 106 yards rushing in the first half.

Raiders' Neiron Ball on comeback trail again

By Jimmy Durkin

August 2, 2016

NAPA -- Neiron Ball is back feeling 100 percent, finally getting to experience what he considers normal football soreness from training camp.

The Raiders' second-year linebacker has spent plenty of time dealing with other pain, including a knee injury last year that required two surgeries and stripped away a large chunk of his rookie season.

"It's definitely a relief," Ball said Monday of his return to action. "Now I'm just going hard each and every day, trying to build it stronger and stronger, keep it strong."

Ball knows all about bouncing back from pain. He lost both parents by the time he was 10. He had brain surgery at 18 following his freshman year at Florida when he was diagnosed with arteriovenous malformation, an abnormal connection between arteries and veins that can lead to bleeding. He has dealt with knee issues before, with a senior season injury requiring microfracture surgery.

But it was a rapid recovery from that procedure -- five months later he showed speed and quickness during Florida's pro day -- that enabled him to become a fifth-round pick of the Raiders in 2015.

When Ball suffered his latest knee injury -- in a Week 7 win in San Diego -- there wasn't a huge concern. He was expected to miss 4-6 weeks.

As it reached that timeline, Ball briefly returned to the practice field for some work on the side. That didn't last long and the Raiders eventually placed him on season-ending injured reserve.

Ball revealed the reason Monday when he met the media for the first time since his October 2015 injury.

"I was expecting to be back and it ended up I had to get another surgery," Ball said. "It was definitely tough, but it was the cards I was dealt."

The toughest part of those cards Ball was dealt was the progress he was making just as he suffered the injury.

The game in San Diego marked his second straight start. He dazzled the week before in a home loss to the eventual Super Bowl champion Denver Broncos, playing a large role in holding tight end Owen Daniels to no catches on five targets. (Opposing tight ends had averaged eight catches and 97 yards through the first four games.) He also had a crucial fumble recovery and sack in the fourth quarter of a Week 3 win in Cleveland that snapped an 11-game road losing streak.

But he was injured in the first quarter against the Chargers and all that progress was stalled.

"That was definitely one of the most difficult parts about it," Ball said. "(But) I look at it as that was last year. I've got to start over again."

Ben Heeney, another linebacker the Raiders took in the fifth round of the 2015 draft, has been close with Ball since meeting him at last year's combine. He has seen what Ball has endured to make it back.

"I can imagine it's hard for him, missing last year after he started off having a good year," Heeney said. "I think he's just ready to be out here and be back out there with the guys."

Ball said he started feeling 100 percent around the time of organized team activities in May, but the team kept him out until he reported for pre-training camp July 24 with rookies, quarterbacks and other returning injured players.

"I had two surgeries and there's no need for me to be in a rush," he said.

Ball is being integrated back slowly, working with the reserve units.

"I think my reps are down right now, just to ease me back into things," Ball said.

His coverage skills should lend themselves well to work in nickel packages and he's confident he can build back to where he was. Now it's just about getting back into the flow of football after such a long break.

"One thing you can't simulate is football," Ball said. "The different movements and the different plays, you can't simulate on the side training with trainers. You got to actually be out there."

After nine months out, Ball is finally back out there.

Calhoun cross training to be Raiders' super-sub edge rusher

By Scott Bair

August 7, 2016

NAPA – Shilique Calhoun is used to attack mode. He spent most every snap at Michigan State with the opposing backfield in mind, where he was a regular in college.

He had 27 sacks as a Spartan, including 18.5 in his last two seasons. He was a traditional defensive end then, a pretty good one at that. The three-time second-team All-American has been asked to step back occasionally as a strongside linebacker. That's a hybrid position generally rushing off the edge, but Calhoun must be ready for anything at that spot.

The third-round pick is excited about a role being learned during his first NFL training camp.

"I don't believe that what they have me doing is outside my reach," Calhoun said. "I've covered in college, although not as much as I'm being asked to do now, and I think it's well within my athletic abilities. There are new responsibilities, and I haven't been put in a situation where I felt uncomfortable."

The Raiders want Calhoun ready for anything, as the primary backup rushing off the edge. He'll be used on a rotational basis at least, and will likely play a key role in moments this season.

"We try and cross train them to do multiple roles so that we have flexibility when the fall gets here," Del Rio said. "Shilique's done a nice job of being able to be a guy that can play when they're behind Khalil [Mack] or he can play in there behind Bruce [Irvin]. They're going to do both. We like them coming forward a lot, but they do have coverage responsibilities from time to time and so Shilique is learning, much like they're learning how to do both."

Calhoun left college a relatively polished pass rusher, with plenty of tools on the utility belt that help him get to the quarterback. The Raiders are adding more, but ultimately want to highlight his athleticism off the edge.

"You have to advance your skills at this level, but it was so great to hear them say they want me to be myself," Calhoun said. "They drafted me for a reason, because they like my style of play. We're trying to expand my repertoire a little more to counter what people have planned for you."

Calhoun has flashed threatening agility working with the second unit. He squared off against veteran Austin Howard earlier this week, and used great quickness to sneak underneath the big tackle and make a beeline for the quarterback. He earned a simulated sack then, one of several plays that indicate he's adjusting well to professional football.

"I have a long way to go, but I'm working through the process," Calhoun said. "I believe I have a great understanding of my role and what I'm being asked to do in terms of concepts of the defense. I've matured mentally, and I've gained some good weight. I'm right where I should be, knowing I have tons of work left to do. I have high expectations, and I want to exceed those."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Calhoun doesn't like simulated sacks, but knows real deals only come in games. His first game kicks off Friday at Arizona, where he hopes to bear fruit from this training camp's labor.

"We have some really good tackles, but I do try to get home a lot," Calhoun said. "I'm not sure how much I'm doing that. We'll have to see how efficient I am in the regular season, when it really counts. If I can't finish, a good rush doesn't mean a thing.

"This first preseason game is a great opportunity for the young players to showcase their talents in a game situation. I'm excited and ready to go. I'm counting the days down now."

Raiders' Heeney counts blessings after difficult off-season

By Jerry McDonald

July 31, 2016

NAPA -- The ensuing months since the end of the 2015 season have taught linebacker Ben Heeney about both life and death.

Heeney, his fiancée Taylor and 6-month old son, Tate, were en route to church on Easter Sunday in his home state of Kansas when something random and remarkable happened.

"I hit a patch of ice, the car spun out and the oncoming traffic was coming right at me," Heeney said. "The whole right side of the car was demolished."

Heeney and Taylor walked away from the accident. Tate was taken to the hospital, checked out and given a clean bill of health.

"God had a plan for me that day," Heeney said.

A few days later, Heeney got word that Brandon Bourbon, a college teammate at Kansas, had dropped out of sight. Bourbon's body was eventually found in his van in Maries County, Kansas, his death listed as suicide.

"He was my best friend from college," Heeney said. "It was a difficult offseason, I count my blessings every day."

Heeney may have a heightened sense of perspective at age 23, but it would be inaccurate to say he's more motivated. A projected starter and defensive signal caller at middle linebacker, Heeney has long been known for nonstop effort.

As the Raiders completed their first padded practice of training camp Friday, linebacker Bruce Irvin, who signed as a free agent, sized up his new teammate.

"It's only practice, so I can only imagine what he's like in a game," Irvin said. "He's not the biggest guy, but he plays bigger than he is."

When the 2015 season ended, most checklists had the Raiders in the market for a classic middle linebacker, a thumper who would help stop the run.

Heeney, at 6-foot, 230 pounds, doesn't fit the mold in that way, but his style of play could well be a better fit for the way Ken Norton Jr. wants to play defense.

"He's smart, he's fast and he's relentless," Norton said. "He has a nose for the ball, very instinctive. He's always getting better. You can't get him out of the film room."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

The Raiders released Curtis Lofton, a nine-game starter in 2015, and never made a move to get a middle linebacker in free agency or the draft. When training camp convened, Heeney was given the helmet with a green dot, meaning he'll be entrusted as the defensive signal caller, getting radio instructions from Norton.

Heeney's dilemma is a constant balancing act between the first instinct to be a heat-seeking missile and the voice in his head telling him to be patient and not overrun the play.

"There's a lot of times where I was overaggressive last year," Heeney said. "You definitely want the game to slow down as far as seeing your reads, but I like to play fast, go get the ball and make plays.

"You definitely want the game to slow down as far as seeing your reads, but I like to play fast, go get the ball and make plays," Heeney said.

The Easter crash was the second time Heeney escaped a potentially deadly situation. In high school, a propeller sliced his leg inches from an artery in a boating accident. Heeney recovered in six weeks, but still has numbness in his left leg in the thigh area.

Given all he's been through, Heeney realizes he's a lucky man.

"I've got a son, my beautiful fiancée and a baby girl on the way -- she's supposed to be here in about two weeks," Heeney said. "I've got a lot in my life. Hopefully I'll just keep moving forward."

Amari Cooper's friend, Johnny Holton, may surprise at Raiders' camp

By Vic Tafur

August 4, 2016

Amari Cooper called it a "once-in-a-lifetime story. I never heard of anything like that until he did it."

The Raiders' receiver was talking about a childhood friend who didn't play high school football and was discovered by a junior college when he was playing in the park.

That same friend who was walking off the practice field in Napa.

Undrafted free-agent Johnny Holton.

Holton turned some heads with back-to-back deep catches in Monday's practice, just as he did in that Miami park five years ago.

"I was starting to think it was over for me and football, but I kept my faith," Holton said. "I still dreamed about playing in the NFL one day."

Holton is one of 11 kids, and because he didn't take high school seriously, anyway, he got a job working at a grocery store to help his mom make ends meet.

He loved football; he and his brother had played in the park with Cooper since they were 11, and he still played in a 7-on-7 flag-football league on weekends. "Our team was called ESPN," Holton said, smiling. "Lot of highlight plays."

A coach from the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Ill., saw Holton in the park when he was in town to see another player. He liked the highlight plays.

With the door opened, Holton quickly took and passed the GED and scored 15 touchdowns for the Chaparrals in two seasons.

He transferred to Cincinnati and showed his big-play potential, averaging 19.4 yards per catch (46 for 892) and scoring 10 touchdowns in two seasons. Holton missed seven games last year with a hamstring injury and wasn't a coveted participant at the NFL combine.

Many teams flagged him as too skinny or too raw. The Chiefs even made him work out as a defensive back.

After the draft, Holton had offers from two teams — the Raiders and Lions — when he used a lifeline and phoned a friend.

"Of course, I gave him some advice," Cooper said. "I want him to be successful, so I pointed him in this direction."

Holton, who is two years older than Cooper, was leaning toward Oakland, anyway.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I thought it would be good to team up with a friend," Holton said. "We were never on the same team growing up."

Cooper made the Pro Bowl in his rookie season last year, and Holton said that even at 11 years old, Cooper was a star.

"He was the real deal growing up, too," Holton said.

Cooper said Holton wasn't too shabby himself, and his friend already has shown the coaches his ability to beat defensive backs deep.

"He's made some great catches here," Cooper said. "He has qualities you look for in a receiver. No one can jam him at the line, and he's fast. He's developing nicely."

Holton followed up his nice breakout with a leaping catch Wednesday that got some oohs and aahs from the fans in attendance.

Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio said he heard the cheers for Holton, but added, "We'll learn more as we go." That's coach-speak for, "Don't ask me about a guy we may try to sneak onto the practice squad."

Making the 53-man roster will be tough, as Oakland is set at the first four receiver spots with Cooper, Michael Crabtree, Seth Roberts and Andre Holmes. Holton's chances would improve if he returned punts well, and he got his first look there Thursday.

He will keep grinding and honor the biggest piece of advice that Cooper gave him: "Never take a day off."

That won't be a problem for Holton.

"I am so blessed to be wearing the Silver and Black," Holton said. "I used to go to high school football games and just watch after I got off work. And now I am here."

Amari Johnny Holton, From Flag Football Talent To NFL Prospect

By Kyle Martin

August 11, 2016

Oakland Raiders wide receiver Johnny Holton grew up in Miami, Florida, along with friend and fellow Raiders wide receiver Amari Cooper. Holton attended Coconut Grove High School as a teenager, but wasn't focused on playing football. His priorities were elsewhere. As one of 11 children in his family, he focused on helping around the house, "By me working, I was just trying to make money to support my family," said Holton.

Holton put his family first, above his own personal desires, and felt obligated to contribute to his household. Although Holton was preoccupied with being a quality family member, he did enjoy playing flag football recreationally at a local park.

Holton's potential stood out to a college scout who happened to witness him play and offered him a chance to develop his talent at the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Ill. Recently, Cooper talked about watching Holton play at the park and their relationship on 95.7 The Game and watching him play. “The park is right across the street from his house and there would always be flag football tournaments,” said Cooper, “I would go out there and watch sometimes...there was a junior college coach watching him play and he was impressed.”

During his time in Junior College, Holton helped his team get to eighth overall in the NJCAA rankings. He was also named to the First Team All-Midwest Football Conference back in 2012 and had 23 catches for 548 yards including eight touchdowns. From one stage to the next Holton continued to progress as a player.

Holton credits that part of what made him successful in college was his ability to make plays after the catch. “The games I played in I had a big impression, I was leading the nation with 27.1 yards per catch,” Holton said. After playing College of DuPage for two years, he was swooped up by the University of Cincinnati. In both of his years spent with the Bearcats, he had five receiving touchdowns and could’ve had a 99-yard kick return touchdown had it not been called back due to a penalty.

Coming out of college as an undrafted free agent, Holton reached out to Cooper and asked for his advice on what he should do. “He just told me I’m good enough to play anywhere in the NFL, just look at my options,” said Holton, “I decided I wanted to be close to him and thought I had an opportunity here [with the Raiders].”

So far through training camp, Holton has opened the eyes of his coaches and peers. He’s flashed a lot of athleticism and speed, while making impressive plays. Holton is putting his best foot forward to try to join his friend Cooper in the receiving corps. With the Raiders first preseason game scheduled for tomorrow night against the Arizona Cardinals, Holton will have plenty of opportunities to show what he’s capable of.

With the next chapter in Holton’s story set to begin, he’ll be an interesting player to watch going forward.

Q&A: Bruce Irvin trying to take on Raiders' 'bully mentality'

By Vic Tafur

August 15, 2016

The number shines down on him just like the Napa sun.

"Fifteen sacks," Bruce Irvin said.

That's the number that Khalil Mack, Irvin's new teammate and opposite-end pass rusher, had for the Raiders last season.

"I hope they put three or four people on him and just let me run free," Irvin said, smiling.

Irvin is reunited with defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. after the Seahawks didn't pick up the fifth-year veteran's contract option. "I couldn't have been put in a better situation," Irvin said.

He sat down for a one-on-one interview after a recent training-camp practice. Among other things, he touched on leadership, being feared, Raiders tradition, Mack, his biggest surprise since joining the team and fights at training camp:

There has been a transfusion of new blood here with you, Sean Smith and Reggie Nelson on defense. What do you bring to the mix?

Irvin: Leadership. And not just talking about it, but leading by example. You have to get guys believing in one thing, and that's playing for each other. That, and try and get better every day.

When you guys take the field in the season opener against (New Orleans quarterback) Drew Brees, what do you want to be going through his mind when he looks across the field?

Irvin: Fear. We want to be feared. Not just on defense but as a team. We want to be physical and punish people. That's the biggest thing. We want people to look at the Raiders, and say, "That's a tough, nasty physical team. ... They're going to run the ball and they're going to play great defense."

Teams can take on the personalities of their coaches. Did you just describe Jack Del Rio and Ken a little bit?

Irvin: Definitely. They're a couple of bullies, and we're taking on that bully mentality. But that's just the Raiders, period. You look at the old teams here, and they would do a little extra after the play. It is what it is. That's the appearance you want to have, like you will do anything to win.

Did the young core of Mack, Derek Carr and Amari Cooper clinch it for you when you decided to sign here?

Irvin: It's a young team on the rise. And they added a lot of key pieces in the offseason. I looked at that, too. And playing in a familiar defense with one of the best players in the league in Khalil Mack.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

What makes Mack special?

Irvin: Regardless of the success he's had his first two years in the league, he's always willing to learn, always willing to see it from my perspective or somebody else's. He is a very humble person who is going to continue to get better each and every year.

You mentioned the known things coming in. Anything surprise you about your teammates in the offseason workouts and camp?

Irvin: (Middle linebacker) Ben Heeney. I really like Ben. High-motor guy who's not very big but plays bigger than he is. One thing about Ben is he's going to leave it out there for you every play. I have a genuine appreciation for that.

A lot has been written about you and Ken. But you're also reunited with (linebacker) Malcolm Smith, who was the MVP of the Super Bowl you won in Seattle. Have you seen any changes in Malcolm?

Irvin: It's a new Malcolm, because he is getting an opportunity. He didn't get a lot of opportunities in Seattle. He's been given a chance to be a leader and big-time playmaker for us, and he is doing a great job at that.

Do you have a chip on your shoulder about how it ended in Seattle?

Irvin: That's water under the bridge. I could never thank (coach) Pete (Carroll) and (general manager) John (Schneider) enough for putting me in a great situation and helping me grow as a player and as a man. But it's time to move on. I feel like I didn't reach my full potential in Seattle, and I am going to take full advantage of that opportunity here.

You tweeted out that you didn't want teammates to read the clippings and believe the hype. But ... you peek a little, right?

Irvin: Yeah. ... It is always good to be talked about. You get tired of hearing about the other 31 teams. It's good to get loved on sometimes. But it doesn't mean anything. So remember that.

What's the secret to not losing it at training camp? Meetings all day, practices, having a roommate. ... How do you ease the grind?

Irvin: You have to go out of your way to make it fun, otherwise you'll be miserable. It's draining. So you have to crack a lot of jokes at each other's expense, shoot hoops ...

Who's the guy to beat in hoops?

Irvin: The defensive backs have a lot of shooters. We have shooting contests, 30 seconds for each guy to make as many as he can, each position group. The last three days, the defensive line has won. Me and Khalil, and Shilique Calhoun and Darius Latham can both shoot.

There have also been some boxing contests between some of your defensive teammates and guard Kelechi Osemele. Is that just part of the camp grind?

Irvin: That's just who he is. He's a physical, tough-nosed guy. We just have to get him to understand that we're all on the same team. You can't try and hurt your own guy. But he is on a new team. They may have practiced differently in Baltimore. ... He's a good guy. Going to be a great player for us. Can't wait to see him out there in the opener. Just another Raiders bully.

Still standing: Sebastian Janikowski's unlikely path to Raiders royalty

By Don Banks

June 22, 2016

OAKLAND — You hear him coming down the hall before you see him, and by the time he breezes into the room and slowly slides himself into a chair, you're already starting to get why everybody here in Raiders country seems to adore Sebastian Janikowski.

He wears a perpetual bemused smile and a cap turned backwards in his trademark fashion, the look of a guy who hasn't had a real worry in years. At 38, and entering his 17th season as an NFL kicker, there are, to be sure, a few lines on his round, jowly face these days. But he laughs easily and often, and appears quite comfortable in his weathered skin. With more than a hint of his thick Polish accent still present, a playful manner that never goes out of style, and that Hall of Fame nickname, the man they affectionately call "Seabass" is regarded as royalty around the Raiders' complex. He's a walking, talking (and kicking) Oakland institution.

"He's one of my favorite teammates I've ever had, he really is," Raiders third-year quarterback Derek Carr says. "He's got such a good heart. I talk to him every morning, and he sits behind me at every team meeting. He means the world to me."

"He's the guy around here," says Oakland fullback Marcel Reece, a teammate of Janikowski's since 2008. "We treat him like he's one of one. An original. A living legend. He's been here so long he's like a statue in front of the building. But he's one of the greatest people I've met in football, and he's a warrior."

Adds veteran Raiders offensive tackle Donald Penn: "Who doesn't love Seabass? He's like a fixture here. I would love to give him a fairy tale ending, to see him go out with the Raiders on top. But knowing Seabass, he's probably still got at least three more years in him."

The mind boggles at the thought, but it's been 16-plus years since strong-willed Raiders owner Al Davis stunned the NFL world and elicited howls of derision by taking Janikowski 17th overall out of Florida State in the 2000 draft, the first kicker selected in the first round of a non-supplemental draft since the Saints' failed Russell Erxleben experiment in 1979. But who's laughing now, with the colorful and cannon-legged Janikowski about to give Oakland a 17th season of production in return for that gutsy No. 17 pick? How many clubs ever realize that rich of a return on a draft investment?

"I think it's a hell of a return," says Janikowski, as blunt as ever. "I'm still going strong. I don't know how many guys are even still playing from the Class of 2000 draft. I think I'm the only one." (Well, there is that Tom Brady character, too, along with Janikowski's old teammate Shane Lechler.) "Everybody was like, 'What's Al Davis doing?' But hey, 17 years later and I'm still kicking, so they did something right."

Not only is he still kicking, but for the majority of his first 16 seasons as a Raider, Janikowski was arguably Oakland's best player and only real star attraction, a beacon of steady production amid the franchise's long, painful stretch of ineptitude. And yet after all these years, how is it that we hear so little about Janikowski, maybe the most underappreciated great player in recent NFL history? Chalk it up perhaps to Oakland's desultory decade-plus of putrid play.

After reaching the playoffs in each of Janikowski's first three seasons, capped by that Super Bowl trip at the end of the 2002 season, the Raiders are mired in a 13-year postseason drought that trails only Buffalo's 16-year odyssey of frustration. In 10 of those seasons, Oakland mustered five or fewer wins, topping out at 8–8 in both '10 and '11. Unless No. 11 was taking the field to bang home another long-distance kick, the Silver and Black have rarely been worth watching.

"We've lost some games, that's true," Janikowski says. "After my first three years, when we went to the playoffs and the Super Bowl, in my mind, it was like, that's how it works. Every year, playoffs. Then 13 years later, still no playoffs, and suddenly you're in the desert. You're at home watching the damn playoffs and everybody else is playing in them. You're like, 'Man, we should be in it. We should be out there.' But I think that's going to change soon."

There is finally legitimate hope in Oakland after last season's four-game improvement to 7–9, and Janikowski is dying to kick for a winner again. His 252 career games are more than any other Raider has ever appeared in, and his powerful left leg is the stuff of legend, responsible for 385 field goals in 480 career tries (80.2%) and NFL records like longest overtime field goal (57 yards in 2008), most 50-yard-plus field goals in a game (three in '11), and most 60-yard-plus field goals in a career (two, tying him with Morten Andersen).

All that he lacks at this point is that amplifying blast of late-career glory that would come with team success, giving even greater meaning to his impressive statistical accomplishment and his revered status as the Raiders' long-time survivor, the sole remaining link to Oakland's last Super Bowl team.

It's easy to forget from the vantage point of 2016, now that he's a solid citizen and beloved member of the organization and Oakland community, but there were times early on when Janikowski's career seemed to be going off the rails, destined to end almost before it began.

"No way he was going to make it this long"

Back in 2000 and '01, Janikowski's catchy nickname was more likely to elicit eye rolls than smiles, especially for then Raiders coach Jon Gruden, who grew exasperated with his kicker's inconsistency and his insatiable love of the party scene.

With that gaudy first-round target on his back, Janikowski was supposed to come in and immediately shore up Oakland's bedeviled kicking game, which in 1999 saw free-agent signee Michael Husted struggle mightily before being released after 13 games. Davis is said to have pinpointed a half-dozen games in '99 that were lost in part due to kicking failures (Oakland finished 8–8), and thus decided to go big and bold in the 2000 draft, selecting both Janikowski and Lechler, the big-legged Texas A&M punter who went in the fifth round.

But the pressure of kicking in the NFL nearly broke Janikowski, a two-time All-America selection at Florida State. He was just 22 of 32 in field goals that season (68.8%), and struggles with injuries (a case of cellulitis cost him two games) and his shaky transition to the longer pro season made his debut an endurance test he nearly flunked. He missed seven of his first 13 field goal tries in 2000.

"It was rough, the whole season," Janikowski says. "I was nervous as hell. I didn't know what to expect. And because I was a first-round pick, the spotlight is on you. You want to show the guys you were worth that pick, but you've got to be perfect. I was a young guy coming out and dealing with a lot of problems. I had off-field issues in college and all that stuff, and there's so much pressure on you that sometimes you think maybe I should have just gone in the fourth round."

Those "off-field issues" at FSU, including a pair of bar fights, followed Janikowski to the NFL, where a string of incidents highlighted his immaturity and obvious issues with drugs and alcohol. Early in his Raiders career, Janikowski's behavior was erratic enough to pose a serious public relations problem for the organization, the type rarely caused by kickers. Two months after being drafted, he was arrested on suspicion of felony possession of the date-rape drug GHB (he was later found not guilty), and in October 2001 he needed to be taken to the hospital to close a cut on his face after passing out in a San Francisco nightclub where some witnesses had said they saw him take the drug. In June 2002, he was charged with reckless driving in Tallahassee, and he was arrested in October of that year on a drunken driving charge, serving three years of probation after pleading no contest.

Still months shy of his 25th birthday, Janikowski was already at a crossroads in his career, which was beginning to be defined by his off-field problems. He has credited that drunk driving arrest in 2002 as being the impetus he needed to make real changes in his behavior, and his career began to flourish after he got his drinking under control.

"I definitely went through some stuff," Janikowski says. "I stuck with the Raiders and they stuck with me. My life now is not what it used to be back in the day. I mellowed a long time ago. I've got family, my kids [twin girls], they're going to be four in September. You grow up, you move on. I still have fun, but now it's with my kids. Back in the day, I'd be out somewhere on the street."

Back in the day, Raiders Hall of Fame receiver Tim Brown didn't give Janikowski much of a chance of making it to year seven in the NFL, let alone year 17. He marvels at Janikowski's ability to re-write the narrative of his career.

"I'm shocked that he's made it this far, because I thought there was no way he was going to make it this long in the league," says Brown, who played with the kicker from 2000 to '03. "It's always amazing when I see Seabass now and see how much of a gentleman he is and how he talks about his wife and kids. My first reaction was, 'Oh, my God, his poor wife.' But I realize he's a different man, he's a changed man. He had a lot of pressure on him when he first got to Oakland, and I don't think he was handling it very well. And his way of handling things was to go out and do more of what he had been doing the night before. That was the big issue."

Because his teammates were well aware of his partying lifestyle, Janikowski often didn't receive the benefit of the doubt if he missed a kick or struggled through an off day.

"When mistakes happen, and everybody knows you've been out partying all night and you've been out doing all this crazy stuff, then people are not going to believe you're taking this thing seriously," Brown says. "I know there were several times when he missed field goals in games, and you heard guys wondering on the sideline, 'Well, yeah, he shouldn't have been out last night or Friday night, whatever.'"

"I just think he was so talented as a kicker, he always felt like he was going to be O.K. He didn't believe in that karma thing. For a few years he just had a reputation that he just didn't care much about what was going on. Now, he would tell you he cared, and it's not like he didn't work hard in practice. But at the same time, he was working just as hard off the field on all that other stuff."

with too much disposable income and time on your hands in the NFL has long been a recipe for trouble, and Janikowski consistently found it.

“Bass came a long way, and everybody knows the Florida State stories, how [coach Bobby Bowden] treated him and gave him a long leash down there,” says Lechler, who held for Janikowski at the 2000 NFL scouting combine and then throughout their 13 seasons together in Oakland. “But once we got to the NFL, and I even lived with him my first two years, I mean, we had some moments where you’d wake up the next morning like, ‘Man, we’ve gotta quit this, you know? We’ve got to start focusing just on football.’ Thank God there wasn’t a whole lot of social media at the time and stuff like that.”

In those days, Janikowski the partier was every bit as adept as Janikowski the kicker, Lechler recalls. Not that it was a sustainable career trajectory.

“It wasn’t like we were out raising hell every night, but we had our times,” Lechler says. “I get asked the question all the time: ‘I bet that was crazy running with Seabass,’ and I’m always like, ‘Yeah, it was crazy, maybe like three nights a month. The rest of the time he was fine, just normal stuff. But we had a good time, and Bass of all people, he can have just as good a time as anybody you can find in this world. He can be a blast.’”

Janikowski has almost started to look like the old pirate in the Raiders’ logo over the years—sans eye patch—but he’s a 6' 1", 265-pound softie at heart, according to Lechler.

“He’s a guy I would say that 90% of NFL fans would love to hang out with,” Lechler says. “And I wish they all could, because for one it would get the bad reputation out of people’s heads. He’ll go and have a few beers with you, and he’ll maybe miss a curfew now and then. But if you get to know deep down what the guy’s like, he’s a guy you’ll want to be your friend, I promise you.”

“There was nobody in the game better, and we knew it”

About the nickname: Janikowski came into the league with several monikers, but Seabass is the one that endured. He can tell you the wonderfully straightforward story behind it.

“Seabass is the best nickname, and it’s stuck since [former FSU star receiver] Peter Warrick back in college,” Janikowski says. “He said Sebastian was so long for him that he didn’t want to say it. So he started calling me Seabass at Florida State and it stuck with me. That’s all I’m ever called. I should [trademark] it.”

If Janikowski does have a trademark of sorts, it’s for playing with the psyche of the opposing team in pregame warmups. His booming left leg was always his trump card.

“This is how we approached every pregame warmup: No matter what, wherever their kicker kicked a field goal from, we went five yards further than them and kicked,” Lechler says. “If we were in Denver, with that light air, we’d get back in the 68-69-70-yard range just to kind of get the upper edge in the mind games. I never even had to ask him, ‘Where do you want to kick the next one from?’ I just went five yards further than where the opposing kicker just kicked from, and that’s where we lined up.”

When it calls for classic Seabass stories, the ones that show him at his most colorful and quirkiest, Lechler is a human Wikipedia page. They didn’t just live together those first two years in the NFL, they were practically inseparable as friends and fellow elite kickers. They were very, very good for a team that was usually very, very bad, and they shared that bond proudly.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“There was a stretch of four or five years there where there was nobody in the game better, and we knew it,” says Lechler, who went to seven Pro Bowls in his Oakland tenure. “We kind of had the same, I guess you’d say, attitude about toward the game. There was just a chemistry and approach to football that we shared. And we are both competitive as hell.”

Not that there weren’t annoying little differences between them that cropped up at regular intervals. Like on their rides together to Raiders home games, when Janikowski always insisted upon driving.

“I rode with Bass in his car to every home game we ever played together, and his music that he likes is way different than mine,” Lechler says. “He’s a big techno guy and I’m straight country. When we were riding, I’d get at least one of my songs in, but he’d never listen to one of mine as we were actually pulling into the stadium parking lot. Never once. It had to be his music.”

Kickers can be somewhat eccentric by nature, of course, and Janikowski developed more than a few idiosyncrasies, some of which drove his punter a little nuts.

“He had two things that bothered me,” Lechler says. “One, he wrote his number, No. 11, on his hat 11 times. It made every hat look awful. It just ruined every hat. I’d be like, ‘They just gave you that thing.’ I don’t why, but I like hats and that bugged me that he did that same thing every time. And it was No. 11, so it looked just like tally marks all over the hat. I’d be like, ‘What are you doing, man?’

“Then the other thing was no matter what kind of shape the kicking balls were in that day, he yelled at the ballboys. I actually told the ballboys, ‘Hey, listen, this is part of his routine. Those balls are probably the best balls I’ve kicked in five years, but he’s going to yell at you. I don’t care what you throw out there.’ It’s just what he does.”

As it turns out, Janikowski and Lechler don’t even agree when it comes to picking the biggest or best kick of Seabass’s storied career. Janikowski goes with his 57-yard game-winner in overtime to beat Brett Favre and the visiting Jets in October 2008, the longest OT field goal in NFL history.

“[Raiders coach Tom Cable] looked at me and said ‘Go win it,’ like he really believed in me,” Janikowski says. “But if I don’t make that field goal, they were in such good field position that they could have made one play and they win it.”

Lechler has a different perspective. He’s convinced the 61-yarder that Janikowski somehow nailed in terrible conditions in Cleveland in December 2009 was his finest moment, even if it came in a 23–9 Raiders loss.

“The Jets kick was a big-time kick, but the 61-yarder in Cleveland in the snow, that was the best kick of his NFL career,” Lechler says. “I mean, the wind’s blowing and it’s kind of snowy mix, and it cold and miserable, just typical Cleveland in December. It’s one of the only times I ever jogged out there and thought, ‘He ain’t got a chance to make this one.’ But I put it down and he split the uprights, and I’m like, ‘Holy s---.’ ”

Going unselected by both, curiously, was the league-record-tying 63-yarder Janikowski converted at the end of the first half on a Monday night in Denver in September 2011, a mark since broken by the Broncos’ Matt Prater, who hit a 64-yarder in ’13.

“He couldn’t pick that one, because he mishit the 63-yarder in Denver,” Lechler said. “He didn’t even get it good.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Adds Janikowski: “I didn’t even really hit it hard, because in Denver with the elevation, you don’t have to. I can’t even imagine what the record might be if I got to play my whole career in Denver. Seventy yards? I think so, I mean, I’ve got to say it.”

But perhaps the quintessential Janikowski highlight, the one that captures him in all his one-of-a-kind glory, took place in Kansas City’s Arrowhead Stadium on Christmas Eve 2011. The Chiefs and Raiders were tied 13–13 in overtime, but Oakland was driving for the game-winning field goal try. Then a Chiefs fan unwisely tried to get into Janikowski’s head. Or thereabouts.

“We’re warming up on the sideline, and in Kansas City the stands are like right on top of the visiting sideline, and there’s really no room to warm up,” Lechler says. “All of a sudden this big dude throws like a chili cheese nacho and hits Seabass pretty much right in the numbers. And we’re in our white road jerseys. It’s like right on his stomach. Now, he’s not a fat guy, but to have chili and cheese on you in a white uniform, when you’re built like that, it’s not a good look.

“So now he stopped warming up because he was pissed off at the guy, and I’m like, ‘Great, now he’s mad at this guy and distracted, we’re not going to make this kick.’ He’s got the trainers trying to get all that s--- off him and they’re spraying water on it. So now we go out there, and it’s not a deep kick [36 yards], and boom, he kicked it, gives me a quick high five, and then sprints right back to the warmup spot, right to that guy. I don’t know what he said over there but I can imagine what he said. I didn’t see him again until the locker room. That was a great moment right there. That was a fun one.”

“I wouldn’t want to be the next first-round kicker”

Sixteen years after the Raiders rolled the dice on Janikowski in the first round, there was an echo of their bold pick when the Buccaneers chose another Florida State kicker, Roberto Aguayo, in the second round with pick No. 59. That’s the highest selection used on a kicker since the Jets took Ohio State’s Mike Nugent in the second round in 2005 at No. 47. In the selection of Aguayo, the Bucs seemingly gave a vindicating nod to Seabass’s long and prolific career.

“Yeah, I’m still doing it, and if the Bucs get what the Raiders got out of me, that’s a great pick,” Janikowski says. “I still watch Florida State a lot, and he’s going to turn out to be one of the greatest kickers. I think he’s going to have a hell of a career, but I know how much pressure he’s under.”

Though Oakland once again has Italian-born kicker Giorgio Tavecchio on the roster and slated to compete with Janikowski in camp, there’s no sense that Seabass is in any real roster jeopardy, even with his pricey-for-a-kicker $3.96 million salary cap number and two years left on his contract. Janikowski seems energized by the Raiders’ return to competitiveness, and for the past two years he has taken part in Oakland’s off-season program at coach Jack Del Rio’s behest, rather than stay home in Florida until training camp, as was his custom.

He paces himself now, and tries to be smarter about his conditioning and kicking load, but he talks openly about his desire to kick into his mid-40s, as legendary kickers such as Jan Stenerud, Morten Andersen, Gary Anderson and Adam Vinatieri have done.

“I’m not even close to being done, the way I feel,” Janikowski said. “I have always believed I have the potential to kick as long as I want to kick. I still feel good, and I still love running out there on the field and being under pressure, hearing the fans. Whether they’re booing you or screaming for you, I just love it.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Just ahead on his career radar screen is the NFL record for most 50-yard-plus field goals, which he currently holds along with longtime Lions kicker Jason Hanson. Janikowski has made 52 such kicks, on a whopping 92 attempts, and he did it without ever playing in a climate-controlled dome, as Hanson did for his entire career in Detroit. Remember that when his Hall of Fame candidacy is being bantered about.

“Keep in mind, he’s been kicking for 16 years outdoors in a stadium that’s below sea level, and playing up to four home games a year on a field that still has infield dirt with the A’s playing there,” says Lechler, who is still punting as he approaches 40 in August. “And he’s still top five in the game. He’s done it at a high level in a place where it’s not groomed for success. To hold on for all that time in Oakland, my hat’s off to him. Could anybody else have done that? I don’t know.”

Those who know him best say Janikowski is fiercely proud, still driven by any slight, both real and imagined, and after being burned by friends as far back as his college days, he has always had difficulty trusting others. He may still be wary, but he’s not wearied. And toward the end of his long, sometimes strange trip in the NFL, Seabass has become both a mainstay and an unlikely icon in Oakland, as admired for his perseverance as he is for his production as a Raider.

He revels in being Seabass, and it’s not hard to notice that just being in his company puts the people around him in a good mood. If there’s a gravitational center in the Oakland locker room, it’s wherever No. 11 happens to be standing. In uniform, he’s as relaxed and comfortable as an old shoe. Providing it’s on his left foot, and laced up tight for kicking.

“We love the guy around here,” Penn says. “And I know this, I wouldn’t want to be the next first-round kicker to come into this league. Because that guy’s got a lot to live up to after Seabass.”

Marquette King Is the N.F.L.'s Only Black Punter. How Come?

By Carvell Wallace

February 5, 2016

Marquette King remembers being astonished the first time he stepped onto an N.F.L. field. Even though it was only preseason, there seemed to be about a million more people in the stands than he had ever seen at his tiny alma mater, Fort Valley State University, in Georgia. Trying to remain calm, he kept his head down, and cast his eyes safely on the grass at his feet.

He jogged to the line of scrimmage, hoping to look like he belonged. He wasn't just playing football, he was competing for a job. And even though he had experienced success at every stage of his career, had excelled at tryouts, had dominated pro-days, and impressed scouts who appraised him quietly from behind visors and sunglasses, he knew how merciless N.F.L. camps were for unproven rookies. You could have been the best at every place you played. You could sweat, and bleed, and run yourself ragged, giving every ounce and pushing far beyond your own limitations, and still, at the end of the day, an assistant might greet you at your locker with a sombre look and the words no hopeful wants to hear: "Come with me. And bring your playbook."

King knew that if he failed to execute the next fifteen to twenty seconds of his life with absolute perfection, this could be his last chance to play professional football. As he had done countless times before, he lined up at his spot and prepared to yell out the snap count. But before he could open his mouth, a player on the opposing team, the Dallas Cowboys, took one look at him and shouted.

"A black punter?! It's a fake! It's a fake!"

The opposing players, equally eager to impress their coaches by seeming on top of every nuance of the game, scrambled into new positions, King told me, guarding against the possibility that this black guy, inexplicably lined up at the whitest of N.F.L. positions, was really some backup quarterback or receiver—a speedster who would fake a kick and instead run for the first down, catching their whole defense unaware. Clearly some trickery was afoot.

For King, it was a gift. He actually laughed out loud. Even black players didn't believe that he was a punter. It wasn't the first time he had been viewed with suspicion, and the comedy of the situation calmed his nerves.

He called for the snap, took three precise steps, and dropped the ball perfectly toward his rising right leg. The ball, as it did nearly every time, rocketed into the air, nearly disappearing in the late afternoon sun. He was knocked to the ground as he finished his kick, but when he got back up, the ball was still in the air and his teammates were pounding him on the back.

Ask anyone who knows the N.F.L. well and they will tell you that the twenty-seven-year-old Oakland Raider Marquette King is one of the most impressive punters in professional football. Videos of his performances at kicking camps have almost mythic status among special-teams devotees. And he has increased his consistency each of the three seasons he's played, gradually mastering a precision with his kicking to match his tremendous power.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Marquette King has one of the purest, strongest legs in the league,” John Middlekauff, an Oakland sports-radio host and former N.F.L. scout, told me. Much of the positive reaction to King has centered on his obvious strength.

The performance of punters is judged by two principal measurements: distance and hang time. Hang time is crucial, because the longer a ball stays in the air, the more time the defending team has to get down field to guard against a return. While a typical N.F.L. punt will last about four and a half seconds in the air, King, in workouts, has reached the unthinkable mark of 5.85 seconds. He does well with distance, too: his longest punt in a game is seventy yards, managed against the Ravens, and footage exists of him kicking as far as eighty-seven yards in practices.

King spends considerable time in the weight room, a place not necessarily frequented by members of the kicking squad, and his collegiate forty-yard dash time was less than two-tenths of a second behind that of his team’s fastest runner, the wide receiver Amari Cooper.

The joke about punters is that they usually look like someone from the accounting department who accidentally ended up on the team—in other words, like a pasty white guy who improbably found himself in the company of football men. King has the opposite effect: he is an athletic black man in a spot usually reserved for pasty white guys. It would probably be uncomfortable, if he weren’t so used to being different.

King grew up in Macon, Georgia, and like a lot of kids his initial attraction to football was visual. He now lives an hour’s drive away from where he plays and practices with his team—a distance he chose so that he can decompress before he gets home—and he told me the story of his childhood as we sat on the sofa in his underfurnished Bay Area apartment.

In middle school, he would watch one of his mom’s friend’s sons play football and admire the uniforms and the shiny helmets. His mother, concerned about injuries and academics, would not yet let him play, but King began training on his own, doing two-mile runs around his neighborhood with dreams of being a receiver.

Two years later, he made his high-school team—and quickly decided that after-school practices and position-specific training were not enough to fill his insistent appetite for improvement. Weekend days were spent walking around his neighborhood with a football and a set of cones that he could use to practice receiving routes. He tried to get quarterbacks, receivers, and other teammates to join him for these extra sessions, but he found that most kids, even the athletes, preferred to spend their free time watching TV or playing video games.

When he got bored, he would kick, and he soon became fond of watching the ball rocket off of his foot and into the air. He began to challenge himself. Could he kick it over this ditch? Could he kick it over this tree? He got his parents to measure how long he could keep the ball in the air. He didn’t know yet about hang time and drop technique. He wasn’t thinking of it as a potential career. He just liked being really good at it, and getting better.

He experimented with different techniques. One day, he said, not long after he began kicking, he was playing football with friends and a pass was thrown way out of bounds. King went to retrieve it, but instead of throwing it back, he kicked it. “Damn!” came the response. “Do that shit again!” Eventually the game devolved into neighborhood kids just trying to field King’s explosive punts.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

A new coach took over his team during junior year, and King told him about his kicking. The coach made him the team's kicker, though King continued to play receiver as well. During his senior year, a friend mentioned offhandedly that he could get paid to kick. King says he legitimately thought the guy was making fun of him.

After high school, he went to Fort Valley State, a small historically black college thirty miles from home. He didn't play at all in his freshman year, and had trouble finding time for himself at receiver, competing against more skilled players at the position. Eventually he was told flat out by the coaching staff that if he wanted to keep his scholarship, he had to kick.

Punters don't run as fast or lift as many weights as other football players do. They don't tackle or block. They can't make big hits or game-winning plays. In a football culture that prizes strength, speed, toughness, and, to some degree, violence, a guy whom you can't even touch in a game without being penalized ordinarily commands little respect in the locker room.

He may as well be a professional darts player hanging at the gym with a bunch of M.M.A. fighters. But King either didn't notice this or didn't care; the same internal mechanisms that had him out alone on Saturday afternoons with a football and a bunch of cones while most other kids his age were playing Madden now induced him to throw himself completely into kicking with little regard for ego or social standing. He was simply enamored of the feeling of success when he booted a big one.

When he had bad games, he was known to stay in the stadium long after his friends and family had gone home, putting on a pair of headphones and kicking ball after ball well into the night. Assistant coaches eventually forbade him from staying late, not so much to protect his leg, but because his obsessive work kept them from getting on with their own lives. As King recalls, he responded by surreptitiously finding out where the light box to the stadium was and learning how to break into the weight room after hours.

Before his junior year, he received an invite to Kohl's National Elite kicking camp, a proving ground and showcase for the most promising collegiate kickers, punters, and long snappers in the country. So he got on an airplane for the first time in his life and travelled to Wisconsin, which is where the Legend of Marquette King was born.

His final kicks of the weekend are immortalized in a YouTube video; screams of shock and amazement can be heard as soon as the ball comes off his foot. Word began to spread among the tightly knit kicking community and eventually among N.F.L. executives.

After graduating, he was invited to Raiders camp, where he impressed coaches so much that, despite injuring his foot during the preseason, he was given an unlikely roster spot, and placed on injured reserve for the 2012 season. The next year, he beat out veteran Chris Kluwe in camp, and was given the team's starting job. He became the only black punter in the league, and just the fifth black man in the history of the N.F.L. to be a specialist at the position.

It is difficult to explain why African-American punters are practically unheard of in a league that at any given moment is roughly two-thirds black. It seems possible that many scouts haven't even considered the question.

"Honestly," John Middlekauff said when I asked him about the subject, "I hadn't ever thought of it in those terms. I just think most guys, most talented players, when you grow up wanting to play football, obviously kicker and punter are the last two things you want to do ... and if you are the kicker or punter, and you're the best player on the team, then that means you're also quarterback or running back. You're just also athletic, and you don't necessarily want to do that as you try to get a scholarship to go to college."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

What's implied in this, of course, is that punter is not a position you choose, but one you get stuck with because you are not fast enough or strong enough to play elsewhere on the field. The other assumption here is that black football players always have better speed and strength than their white counterparts.

Greg Coleman has a slightly different theory. Coleman was the first black man to play exclusively at punter in the N.F.L. He retired in 1988, and is now a sideline reporter for the Minnesota Vikings. Few punters, Coleman told me over the phone, make N.F.L. teams in their first year after college. They have to keep honing their craft and take another shot at it the following season, and maybe the season after that.

"So if they don't have the support, the financial support, from family to keep training, to maintain that lifestyle, to sustain them for a year, or maybe even two, it's going to be difficult for them to continue."

Perhaps more than all other players, kickers are technical specialists. They have to train early and exclusively at their craft to have a shot at a professional team. Camps can cost as much as four thousand dollars for a week of private lessons and film studies, and even with such training, an N.F.L. career will remain a statistical improbability.

There are thirty-two teams in the league, and they each typically employ one player at placekicker and one at punter. There are, then, about sixty-four jobs to be divided among thousands of kids who train for this one thing. Kickers commonly earn more than two million dollars per year, and they rarely suffer the kind of high-speed collisions endured by those at other positions. At any given time, the oldest player in the league is almost always a kicker. (Currently it's Adam Vinatieri, the forty-three-year old placekicker for the Indianapolis Colts. Morton Andersen, a placekicker for multiple teams, had a career that lasted twenty-five years, an astonishing number when you consider that the average career, according to the N.F.L. Players Association, lasts a little over three years.)

All of this helps explain why a lucrative cottage industry has sprung up catering to parents looking for a way to help their kids pursue N.F.L. dreams by becoming kickers. The Web site for Kohl's Kicking lists more than a hundred and fifty camps scheduled for 2016, and a quick Google search will point you to similar camps that make tremendous promises for the futures of young kickers.

For such an experience, families and loved ones can expect to pay anywhere between three hundred and twenty-five dollars and six hundred dollars per day for attendance, a price tag that does not include travel, merchandise, instructional DVDs, equipment, or other extras. And yet this is a typical path for a young N.F.L. kicker. Which makes King even more of an outlier.

He taught himself, and was invited to his first camp free of charge in his senior year of college. But for those not possessed of his astounding drive and talent, the very possibility of a career in kicking or punting is tied to the financial means of your family. In other words, if you want to play this position, with its low physical impact, you have to be able to afford it.

Greg Coleman came along before the rise of specialized kicking camps. He was drafted in 1976, by the Cincinnati Bengals, and though he exclusively punted in college, he was expected, at the Bengals camp, to try out for receiver and running back spots before kicking. He balked at this, but, being an unsigned rookie, he had little leverage. As he describes it, when he finally got around to taking kicking reps in front of coaches, he was winded and consequently underperformed, thus losing his chance. He was cut before the season began.

He took a job teaching high-school history, in Florida, but maintained a practice routine, learning more about both the craft of kicking and the business of the N.F.L. He got another shot the next year, signing with the Cleveland Browns on January 1, 1977. Cleveland coach Forrest Gregg, like the Bengals coaches before him, wanted to use Coleman as a running back, but the young kicker, now a year wiser, took a stand: he told his coach to either let him kick exclusively or cut him from the team. Gregg gave him his chance.

The next year, though, Gregg was fired, and Coleman was let go, replaced by a younger, white draft pick. By week nine of the ensuing season, Coleman was still living in Cleveland, out of work, and his wife was pregnant. Then he got a call from the Minnesota Vikings. He spent the next nine years punting in Minneapolis, racking up impressive numbers in his career as a precision punter.

Not everyone was happy to see him on the field.

“For a long time,” he told me, “I kept my helmet on, hoping folks would think I was a dark-skinned white boy. You got stuff thrown at you. The adjectives that were hurled ... monkey. The N-word.”

It’s remarkable to hear stories that evoke Jackie Robinson integrating baseball in the fifties from a football player who’s talking about 1978. Some of the same fans shouting racial epithets at Greg Coleman were cheering for the black running backs and receivers on their own teams. It wasn’t a question of integration in football; it was merely the sight of a black man taking space where a white man should be.

“It’s something that I have not talked about a whole lot,” Coleman said, “even after all of these years.”

Coleman is from a generation that was largely taught to handle racism with a quiet dignity. Keep your chin up, and your mouth shut. Do better than they expect you to and silence them with your greatness.

But when he does open up, as he did in a short video he recorded for the Vikings, the pain is very much on the surface. In the video, he talks about the time his black Pee Wee football team won the city championship—the team, remarkably, featured four future N.F.L. players—and was nonetheless denied the chance to compete in the state’s Gator Bowl. Even as a man who prides himself on inner strength, it is clear that being excluded as a nine-year-old because he was born black is a pain that is simply too severe to get over.

Whether or not anyone wants to talk about it, there are races attached to some positions in sports. Running backs and cornerbacks are typically black. Punter, kicker, and quarterback tend to be seen as white positions. Like many aspects of race in 2016, this is changing, but in uneven ways.

When Super Bowl 50 begins, Cam Newton will become just the sixth black quarterback to start in the N.F.L. Championship Game. What explains this? Is it a lack of ability to read defenses and study playbooks on the part of African-Americans? Or is it because the preparation, training, and cultural markers associated with the quarterback position have historically been inaccessible to aspiring black athletes? If the latter is true, then the six men that have achieved this have done so by walking a path that defies probability.

The same may be said of black punters. If being an N.F.L. punter can be a lonely proposition, then being a black N.F.L. punter can be a downright desolate one. This may be one reason why, despite the relative longevity and safety of the position, so few African-American players have taken up the mantle. Even in a league that prizes mental toughness, the feat requires a whole other degree of it, one that enables you not only to compete with others but with yourself, with systems, and with isolation. You have to be, as John Middlekauff puts it, “A different type of guy.”

It is, in some respects, a familiar story. As racism becomes more difficult to explicitly identify, it becomes more impossible to challenge. How can anyone complain that racism is connected to the dearth of black punters in the N.F.L. when there are black coaches and general managers? When no one has thrown cups of beer at Marquette King or called him the N-word as he took the field?

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Still, the story of his journey to the position is one of a man overcoming remarkable odds through sheer force of will. And while it would be difficult to argue that those odds had nothing to do with his race, the fact that he did overcome them lends an ironic credence, for some, to the idea that race no longer need hinder anyone's success; that all anyone needs to do is what Marquette King and Greg Coleman did—which is to say, the near impossible. This narrative holds particular sway in professional sports, which rely so heavily on extreme discipline and the mythology of the self-made warrior.

Marquette King, meanwhile, is entering a contract year. He made a little over one and a half million dollars in 2015, which places him squarely in the middle of the pack of punter salaries. Still, it is quite a come-up for a kid from Macon, who, as he tells it, had not really heard of the Oakland Raiders before they contacted him.

Despite his stalwart performance and reputation, at the time of this writing, no word has come from the Raiders front office on a long-term deal. It is not unusual for teams to finish managing the heftier contracts of position players against the salary cap before getting around to the punters; most observers seem convinced that he'll be well taken care of.

He may be on the verge of becoming a wealthy man, and, if he can remain healthy, a long, perhaps even legendary career is not out of the question. But no matter what happens, it's difficult to imagine him changing much. He has been single-minded for most of his life. He does not live extravagantly, and his studio apartment looks like it could belong to any twenty-seven-year-old guy with a decent job. There's a TV, some football mementos, a couple of places to sit. The only things on the walls are a few pictures of himself, in games; a handful of jerseys held up with thumbtacks; and a dry-erase board, on which he has written, in careful print, every single one of his goals for the 2016 season.

Latham taking advantage of his undrafted opportunity

By Jimmy Durkin

August 22, 2016

ALAMEDA — Darius Latham never imagined not hearing his name called when he declared for the NFL draft following his junior season at Indiana.

“I probably would’ve stayed in school,” Latham, the Raiders’ rookie defensive tackle, said of the idea of him not being among the 253 draftees.

Latham was a projected late-round pick after a three-year Indiana career saw him accumulate 81 tackles and 7.5 sacks. But he didn’t help his draft stock with a March arrest for operating a vehicle while intoxicated.

After being passed over, the 6-foot-5, 305-pound Latham had interest from several teams.

“I got a lot of calls, but I pretty much had my mind made up where I was going to go,” Latham said.

The Raiders love versatile players on their defensive line, guys who can line up as a 5 technique (on the outside shoulder of the offensive tackle), 3 technique (in between the offensive guard and tackle) and nose (head up on the center). That fits Latham’s game.

“I don’t like being a one-dimensional player,” he said. “I like being able to play on edges, get down and dirty in the trenches like 3 technique and nose, taking on combos and double teams. It’s just a good look to be able to put those type of plays on film.”

Latham played a team-high 37 snaps in last week’s exhibition loss to the Green Bay Packers. Through two weeks of the preseason, the website Pro Football Focus has graded Latham as the top rookie defensive/nose tackle in the league — ahead of all 21 defensive tackles that were drafted.

“He’s strong,” Raiders defensive line coach Jethro Franklin said of Latham. “He plays with good pad level. He’s got a little pass rush. He’s still got work to do. Just take it day by day, continue to work the fundamentals and be disciplined in everything we do and see where it takes him from there.”

Latham got valuable experience against the Packers when he rotated in with the starting defense during the first half. That allowed him to not only play alongside Raiders starters such as Khalil Mack, but go up against Green Bay’s first-string offensive line.

“That’s always good for him,” Franklin said. “It’s just part of the process. Guys periodically will have that opportunity. He’s definitely earned it. He’s just got to continue to build from that and get better.”

The Raiders have an opening and need for some defensive line help with Mario Edwards Jr. sidelined for a few weeks with a hip injury. Latham said that hasn’t changed his approach.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I pretty much had the same mindset always from the start," he said. "Just making plays when I'm in. Take advantage of every snap."

As the snaps keep increasing, Latham's chances of going from undrafted to the opening 53-man roster look pretty good. Latham isn't blind to that fact, but is trying to clear the positive chatter about his play from his mind.

"Nothing's guaranteed," Latham said. "You've got to still go out and work every day. Zone those type of talks out and just keep doing what I'm doing — getting better every day."

Joining Latham in the rotation with the starters last week was fellow tackle Dan Williams. The 15-game starter from last year got heavy over the offseason and had been relegated to second-team work until the Packers game.

Williams has slowly worked himself into better shape and Franklin is starting to see more of the player the Raiders had last year.

"He's getting back," Franklin said. "It's a process. As time moves along, we've just got to make sure we stay ahead of the curve. That's what we're doing."

"Dan's obviously concerned about what he needs to get done to be where he needs to be. And we've got a strong eye on him to make sure we're doing what we can to make sure that he returns to where he needs to be as well."

Khalil Mack leads Raiders' sack attack

By Vic Tafur

July 27, 2016

When Khalil Mack gets in his car Thursday and drives to the Napa Valley Marriott for the Raiders' training camp, the defensive end is packing light.

Just some clothes and maybe his guitar to help him relax at night. Rookie roommate Greg Townsend Jr. has been given the list of mandatory snacks.

Most important, Mack's not bringing any mental baggage, none of the accolades from last season or any of the expectations or hype for both him and the team this year.

"I'm still learning, just trying to get better" Mack said, taking a break from his workout at San Francisco's Empower Gym on Monday. "That's the key to all of this."

Running back Latavius Murray now calls Mack "Slash," after Mack became the first player in NFL history to earn first-team All-Pro honors at two positions in the same season (defensive end and outside linebacker). Mack, 25, finished with 15 sacks, one shy of the franchise record, and led all edge rushers in the NFL with 82 quarterback pressures and 54 run stops.

The "Slash" nickname is also appropriate because Mack thinks he was two players last season, and the one wearing No. 52 the first half of the season wasn't all that great.

"I am very critical of myself," Mack said. "Watching the tape of myself last year, it looked like two different players the first half of the season and the second half. This year, I want to start fast and finish strong."

Mack thinks he overloaded himself the first eight games. He had only four sacks in that span, and would roll off 11 over the next six games.

"I switched it up too much the first part of the season, trying to show everything I worked on in the offseason," Mack said. "All these moves and counters. ... So mentally and physically, I made it simple. Just use speed and power and focus on two moves that I was having success with throughout the year. I was able to play faster and longer."

To look at the sculpted physical specimen that Mack (6-foot-3, 255 pounds) is, one would miss what separates him and the league's other great pass rushers: His motor doesn't stop.

"Getting sacks is all effort," Mack said. "Justin Tuck used to tell me that pass rushing is one of the luckiest things in the world. The quarterback can fall in your lap sometimes, and sometimes no matter what you do, you can't quite get to them. But they all count."

It's seemingly rare in sports when a team's best player is also the one grinding the most before, during and after practice. Defensive tackle Dan Williams says the Raiders are blessed.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Khalil is such a hard worker,” Williams said. “You can’t put a ceiling on what he can do. ... Khalil is going to be Khalil, and we all expect him to get more sacks this year. That’s kind of crazy when you think he had 15 last year. But he’s ready to take over the league.”

Mack tunes out compliments, whether it’s from a teammate or a talking head on TV saying the Raiders are going to go from 7-9 to winning the AFC West.

“You hear all different kind of things,” Mack said. “I like to focus on the negatives. Negative things tend to help me grind a lot harder. I don’t like positive stuff too much. ... Not even in my relationships. Man, I don’t want to hear how great things are going from anybody.”

That wasn’t a problem with Mack’s mentor, Tuck. He is retired now, as is safety Charles Woodson, but they groomed Mack to take over the leadership role on the defense, if not the whole team, this season.

Said Mack: “It’s just about being a team player right now, getting everybody on the same page so we can accomplish what we want to. We have the talent, and with a positive mind-set and hard work, anything is possible.”

It’s one of the reasons that he is looking forward to training camp — because of how the team clicked last year and how well the new players have fit in. Big free-agent signings Kelechi Osemele, Bruce Irvin and Sean Smith haven’t needed a transition period.

“What excites me the most is that we’ve put together a great group of guys,” Mack said. “Not only the players, but the coaches. I am excited to work with all the new cats.”

Mack knows he will be a marked man this season, with opposing coaches spending the week before games against Oakland scheming to double-team and erase him.

“You have to welcome the challenge,” Mack said. “But at the same time, being a leader on the team, you have to let the other guys know, ‘Hey it’s not just me on this side of the ball.’ We got big Bruce, I got Rio (Mario Edwards), I got Big Dan, Big Jelly (Justin Ellis) ... We got 27 (Reggie Nelson), DA (David Amerson) and Big Sean on the back end ...

“We got some playmakers and heavy hitters. We’re going to make some noise. ... They say you can’t win them all, but we’re gonna try.”

RB Jalen Richard

Raiders rookie RB Richard, veteran TE Smith hit it off in camp

By Vic Tafur

August 6, 2016

A football team is a brotherhood. That goes for the 53 men on the roster when the season starts, not necessarily the other 37 players who are at training camp currently wearing jerseys.

But Jalen Richard, an undrafted running back out of Southern Mississippi, has found an ally, someone who comes up to him after a nice run at practice and congratulates him. What makes it especially unusual is that it's not another running back but starting tight end Lee Smith.

"It's been really cool," Richard said. "Lee talks to me all the time, tells me I am doing a good job and to keep pushing."

The 5-foot-8 Richard and 6-foot-6 Smith are both from the South, Smith growing up in Powell, Tenn. Richard said teammates were giving them a hard time about their accents and they formed a bond.

"It is kind of crazy," Richard said, smiling. "We were messing around one day, and then he pulled me over for a real conversation."

Smith offered Richard tips on how to be a pro, mixed in with stories about life on his ranch with his wife and kids.

"All the players know everybody's not going to be able to be here the whole time," Richard said. "So some people tend not to build relationships because of that. But then you have the ones that don't worry about that at all, and treat you like you're going to be here forever. Lee is one of those guys."

Here's a secret: Smith, a sixth-year veteran, wasn't drawn to Richard because of his accent.

The tight end, after practice one day last week, pointed to the rookie catching tennis balls from a machine.

"There are a lot of rookies in there right now who have never played a down in this league taking a shower," Smith said. "And this kid's out here working. You know what I mean? You kind of gravitate toward certain kids, you respect them and their work ethic. He's special."

During practices, Richard has shown some wiggle and a nose for the hole, and has been lining up with the third-team offense, behind starter Latavius Murray and fifth-round pick DeAndre Washington.

Richard has even gotten to line up with starting quarterback Derek Carr a few times. It's a long way from coming to the team's rookie camp in May on a tryout, and getting a contract after it.

"I am just trying to take advantage of every opportunity I am given, and hopefully more opportunities come," Richard said. "

Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio has been impressed.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“We have a lot of reps in camp. A lot of different guys get opportunities. Yeah, I would say he’s done a nice job with the looks he’s gotten so far.”

Richard ran for 1,098 yards and 14 touchdowns on 185 carries (5.9 per carry) his senior year, and also had 284 yards and two touchdowns receiving. He thinks catching the ball is his strength.

Richard didn’t think he did well in the Raiders’ offseason workouts, “because I wasn’t comfortable with the offense, but I am now.” He also did well for himself returning kickoffs Saturday, which improves his chances of making the roster.

Richard, at 207 pounds, is three pounds heavier than Washington. Otherwise the rookies are carbon copies of each other. Both say being a smaller player works in their favor against defenses.

“It’s definitely an advantage if you know how to use it,” Richard said. “It’s crazy how identical DeAndre and I are as far as size, weight and skill set. We use our size to our advantage, because guys can’t really see us behind the (offensive) line. We are very precise in our cuts and we have great vision.”

While Washington was drafted, Richard wasn’t, and only two teams offered him tryouts (the Raiders and Bucs) because of his size.

“I am just happy for the opportunity,” Richard said. “It’s definitely cool to be out here now with Derek Carr and Khalil Mack.”

And it’s nerve-racking as well.

“It’s just football all over again, that’s what I tell myself to calm myself down before practice,” Richard said. “I tell myself, ‘I’ve been doing this since I was 5 years old.’”

And if that doesn’t do the trick, Richard will hear a deep voice yelling encouragement after a play.

“I really appreciate Lee’s words,” Richard said. “He’s like my big brother now.”

CB Sean Smith

Sons of Pasadena Sean Smith, Marcus Robertson reunite with Raiders

By Paul Gutierrez

August 22, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- The memories are more feelings now than actual stories.

"Competing," Sean Smith recalls. "Just competing. He always pushes the kids to go out there and compete. And you always want to do well in your community, because everybody talks and you definitely want to be one of the most talked-about guys around the neighborhood."

Smith was talking about being a youngster growing up in Pasadena, California, and taking to the tutelage of another native son of the 'Dena, All-Pro defensive back Marcus Robertson, as part of Robertson's football camps at the Jackie Robinson Community Center in the late 1990's.

So Smith reuniting with Robertson in Oakland all these years later -- the cornerback was one of the Raiders' most prized free-agent signings this offseason and Robertson is Oakland's defensive backs coach -- has a hint of serendipity.

"Not saying it was easy, but I just picked up the phone and said, 'Hey, Sean, I want to put you in this silver and black. What you gonna do?'" Robertson recalled his recruiting pitch being to Smith this spring.

"The relationship with Sean is a very simple one, because we're like, home team."

Indeed, the Muir High School grad leaned on his Pasadena roots to pitch the Raiders to the Blair High School alum.

And it worked. Because after four seasons with the Miami Dolphins, who drafted him in the second round in 2009 out of Utah, and three more seasons with the Kansas City Chiefs, Smith is in Oakland with a four-year, $40 million contract with $20 million guaranteed.

Smith is part of a rebuilt Oakland Raiders secondary, opposite fellow cornerback David Amerson. The unit also includes veteran free safety Reggie Nelson, who came over as a free agent from the Cincinnati Bengals, and first-round draft pick Karl Joseph at strong safety.

Smith remembered talking with Robertson when he was with the Dolphins, and Robertson was coaching with the Tennessee Titans.

"After the game, we chopped it up, man, I was like, It would be 'love' playing for you," Smith said. "All Pasadena guys are kind of alike -- we think alike, we act alike -- so it would be great to play for a coach who's from your area, knows everything about you and you're on the same page mentally."

Smith has 10 interceptions in seven seasons. But it is his physicality, more than his ball skills, which give quarterbacks, receivers and offensive coordinators fitful nights.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

At 6-feet-3, 218 pounds, Smith is huge for a cornerback and looks like a skinny outside linebacker draped all over wideouts.

"Sean is a, he's a student of the game," said Robertson, who had 24 interceptions as a free safety during a 12-year career with the Houston Oilers, Tennessee Titans and Seattle Seahawks from 1991 through 2002.

"He's got a very high football IQ. The things that he possesses in his size and his length, I think make up for a little bit of the short areas of quickness and things of that nature, because he's so difficult to get around, he's so difficult to throw over. And then you put in the football IQ of it, he understands football. So when you talk about pattern-matching and things like that, he's got it."

The normally talkative Smith was at a loss for words when told of Robertson's praises, especially about the high football IQ.

"I was always told that talent will only take you so far and eventually it will fade away," Smith finally said. "The game is played from the neck up, and when you're young, you don't really understand that because you're just used to using your athleticism and just reacting out there and making plays.

"But as you get older, you can see the game from a different angle; you can slow it down and I try to tell guys all the time, 'You guys are way more athletic than I ever was. But mentally, I'm able to slow the game down and see things that kind of help me out to where I can make a play faster than you guys would, because you guys don't see it as fast as I do,' if that makes sense."

Makes perfect sense. Almost as if Smith was now a camp counselor for Robertson at the Jackie Robinson Community Center.

Raiders CB Smith 'wouldn't be here today' without WR background

By Scott Bair

August 22, 2016

Raiders cornerback Sean Smith was a pretty good receiver way back when. One heck of a running back, too. That's how he earned a scholarship to Utah, as an All-American scoring machine for Pasadena's Blair High.

The Utes recruited Smith as a running back but eventually focused him on receiver to capitalize on an athletic 6-foot-3, 220-pound frame. The shuffle didn't produce much and, after a falling out with a coach, Smith was moved across the line of scrimmage for good.

That's a major move with just three years college eligibility and NFL dreams, a last resort that changed his career for good.

After just two years at cornerback he was a third-team All-American, entering the workforce as Miami's second-round pick. Smith had seven years gainful employment in Miami and Kansas City, before joining the Raiders this offseason on a four-year, $38 million contract. His playing background brought him to this point.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I wouldn't be here today if I didn't play offense," Smith told CSNBayArea.com last week. "Switching from receiver to corner, it's crazy how much that can help you."

Thinking like a receiver has made him an excellent cover corner. He picked up the position's mental aspects in a snap, which allowed him to flourish quickly. Smith offered some insight into his pre-snap routine and how he hones in on what the receiver might do based on his experience playing offense.

Smith said he quickly eliminates possibilities on the route tree based on formation and the receiver's positioning.

"You start breaking things down, and then analyze them through the defense we're running and where my help is going to be," Smith said. "I've now crossed a bunch of options off the list and, before the snap, I'm confident he'll run one of a small number of routes. I'll focus on defending those and react to anything else. The majority of the time, it ends up being the routes you expect."

Smith takes pride in his football acumen. Predicting routes comes easier than most, but Smith still spends significant time in the film room identifying tendencies of specific opponents and how to best defend them with his size and skill set.

Smith's size and athleticism offers a solid baseline, but a cornerback's technique, an effort refined over time in college and the pros. That's when he believes the position switch was truly complete.

"I played boundary corner and in college, you only get maybe three routes," Smith said. "I'm a big guy, and I could press and take things away. When I got to the NFL and the boss tells you to play in the middle, you really have to learn the nuances of playing cornerback."

Smith played safe early in his NFL days, often worried about getting beat. He gained confidence from experience and detail work, and started playing more aggressive.

It hasn't produced a high interception count – he has just 10 in seven seasons – but has developed an excellent cover man. Smith's completion percentage allowed now hovers in the low 50s and the passer rating against him hasn't been above 86 since 2011. Getting over on Smith is hard work. He's become a reliable player who can defend all receiver types.

The Raiders aggressively sought his services this offseason, considering him an excellent scheme fit. They were also hoping to add a leader to the position group, and got one who sets a solid example for a young corps.

"I'm just trying to get the guys to trust what they see, and don't be afraid to get beat," Smith said. "If you believe in yourself and your reads, you'll play well."

Cornerback Sean Smith a big part of Raiders' optimism

By Vic Tafur

August 24, 2016

He can't hide, so he's not going to try.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

At 6-foot-3, 220 pounds, the Raiders' Sean Smith stands out among NFL cornerbacks. He knows some of the weight of the team's lofty expectations falls on his shoulders, and he welcomes that.

Smith can't hide, especially when the big free-agent signee walks in and sits down in Oakland's quarterbacks meetings. Derek Carr did a double-take the first time.

"He'll come in the quarterback room when he doesn't have a meeting and sit in," Carr said. "He'll ask questions, and we'll bounce ideas off each other. It's the first time I've ever had a defensive back do that.

"He's by far one of the smartest defensive players I have ever gone against or been around."

Carr's no dummy himself, evidenced by his not being goaded by the then-Chief's trash-talking the past two years.

Sean Smith's interception totals don't stand out — no more than two in a season — but that's a reflection of opposing quarterbacks opting not to throw in his direction.

Smith, 29, has taken to yelling at quarterbacks because most receivers don't engage in trash-talking — maybe Smith's saddest discovery about the NFL.

"It's crazy, I thought there would be much more trash-talking than there is," Smith said. "But it's quiet out there. Guys show up, do their jobs and go home. In college, you used to go back and forth....

"So I talk to the quarterbacks. They have the ball anyway. I used to always talk to D.C. Between plays, yelling at him, 'Come at me! Let's do this!' We used to go back and forth."

As Smith would tell the receivers, it's not easy looking this good. Never has been.

Smith didn't even have a position to look good at his first two years in college at Utah.

It wasn't until he was moved to cornerback that Smith started to emulate a famous Raider and thought about a future in the NFL.

"At that time, Nnamdi Asomugha was hot," Smith said. "He was the big corner. There weren't a lot of big cornerbacks at that time; everyone wanted that next Nnamdi, a corner over 6-feet tall. ... I used to always watch Nnamdi, seeing how he played and trying to imitate that on the field."

Smith has an inch and 10 pounds on the since-retired Asomugha, and with the move of Brandon Browner to safety in Seattle, he is the biggest starting cornerback in the NFL. He is a big reason that Raiders teammates, coaches and fans are talking playoffs.

"I love his competitiveness," head coach Jack Del Rio said. "Sean's a long athlete. He is a veteran with an understanding of who he is and where he fits in this league. He brings that knowledge of playing that position at a high level for a long time in this league."

Some point to Smith's size and aggressiveness, but his quick feet have paved this road for him.

"I always had good feet. I was a running back in high school, 'offensive weapon' I believe was the term we used," Smith said, smiling.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Smith was one of 18 players on the Blair-Pasadena football team, and had 2,500 all-purpose yards his senior season.

"I never had any intention of playing running back at Utah. That just wasn't the position for me," Smith said. "I begged and pleaded if I could move to receiver."

The Utes' staff moved Smith during his redshirt freshman year, but he got into a heated argument with his position coach.

"The situation carried on, and I said, you know what, I am done with offense," Smith said. "I went to my coach and said, 'I am a big guy, let me play safety.'"

Roll credits?

Nah.

"I wasn't a good tackler," Smith said. "So they said, 'Let's try corner.' I was like, 'Corner?! I don't know if I can do that.' But it ended up working out. I picked up the technique pretty fast, and having played receiver, I understood the splits and what routes a guy might run, so I was ahead of the curve on that."

Smith had four interceptions his sophomore season, and five interceptions and nine passes broken up the next year in Utah's 13-0 2008 season.

Smith was drafted by the Dolphins in the second round in 2009, and it was with Miami that he learned again that being a very good football player doesn't come easy. Another former Raider, 2014 interim coach Tony Sparano, played the starring role.

Sparano was the head coach and current Jets coach Todd Bowles the secondary coach, and neither loved Smith's attitude.

"I smiled at everything, good and bad," Smith said. "Just having the time of my life."

A benching his second year awakened Smith to the extra work needed in the NFL.

"They were patient with me, and worked with me to become the player I am today," Smith said. "They would call plays out before they happened, and taught me how to watch film."

Smith watches so much film now, he can see the future.

"Have to, dealing with the smaller, shiftier receivers," Smith said. "Those guys come out of their breaks so well, it forced me to watch more film and try to understand tendencies and formations. What routes do guys run 2-by-2 versus 3-by-1, so I can anticipate when to stop (running) versus just reacting.

"Bigger guys take longer to stop, so you can just use athleticism to cover those guys."

Smith is able to get his hands on a receiver right away and control him, as opposed to letting the receiver get a clean break on his route.

As far as trying to throw the ball over him, forget about it.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"It's really hard," Carr said. "If you want to throw a go-route, especially in the NFL, 90 percent of the time it has to be before 40 yards. Because the safeties are so fast, anything past that they are going to kill your receiver.

"With Sean, you can't really throw that ball on a line because he is so tall. If you want to drop one in on him, you have to bring it from the sky ... and that just gives the safety more time. It's just really hard playing against him."

Smith will pull the chair out, too, backing off and not pressing so that he can jump the route and go for the interception.

"If you already know where the guy is going to be," Smith said, "you might as well play off and keep your eyes on the quarterback and try to beat your man to the spot."

So, don't tell Smith that he's a good fit for Ken Norton's in-your-face defense.

"I fit any defense," Smith said. "Is that a compliment or are people trying to say I can only play a certain way because I am big? I am a very smart individual that works on my technique every day....

"This is a good defense. It allows you to press. We have great edge rushers, so as long as I give those guys a few seconds, we're good."

It Was The Journey

By Robert Mays

March 29, 2016

Joe's Brewery, known simply as Joe's around the University of Illinois, sits at 706 South Fifth Street in Champaign, at the eastern edge of the college-bar hub that lines the town's main thoroughfare. A faded orange canopy shields the beer garden just outside the door. Inside, a list of 21 burgers makes up a bulk of the dining options. It's a place packed for $3 U-Call-Its on a weekend and barren at noon on Monday, but on this afternoon in early March, it's what Jihad Ward wants for lunch.

Champaign-Urbana sits about 140 miles south of Chicago. Outside of the university's small sphere of population, it's beset by farmland on all sides. The campus is spacious but not sprawling, bustling in a few areas but quiet in most. In choosing his Division-I home, Ward sought calm, and he knew he'd found it here.

Before coming to play defensive end for the Illini, the north Philadelphia native spent two years at Globe Institute of Technology, a junior college whose campus is situated in New York City's Garment District only a short stroll from Times Square. His first semester in Champaign, Ward's walk to practice consisted of the seven-block stretch between Bromley Hall and Memorial Stadium. That's the same distance from the 28th Street stop on the 1 Train to the Manhattan Mini Storage on the borough's west side that housed Globe Tech's practice equipment between sessions. At Illinois, the jaunt from Bromley was the entirety of his daily commute. In New York, snagging his pads from a storage locker was just one leg of an 11.5-mile trip from his school-provided townhouse on Staten Island to practice at the Chelsea Ballfields, which were occasionally unavailable because of a youth soccer practice. Getting there meant a short bus ride, a trip across the Upper Bay aboard the Staten Island Ferry, a quick shot on the 1 through Manhattan, and finally, that relative breeze of a seven-block walk.

When practice ended, Ward and the Knights lugged their gear back to storage before trudging nearly a mile down 29th Street to a Bally's Total Fitness near Penn Station for a lift and a shower. Clean but exhausted, they stumbled to classes at Globe, which often ended around 9 p.m. From there, it was a short walk to the 42nd Street station, a subway ride to the ferry, and finally, the slow float back to Staten Island. In all, it was a 24.5-mile round-trip commute—nearly three of those miles on foot—and around 200 minutes in transit over a five-day week.

"That's why people quit," Ward says. "They didn't quit because the team sucks, or this or that. They quit because of the grind." After two years of that grind, wide-open, slow-paced Champaign felt like a haven. "Here," Ward says, "there was nothing but quiet."

As he finishes the thought, Ward—an honest 6-foot-5 and a trim but sturdy 300 pounds, cloaked entirely in charcoal Illinois athletic gear—lifts his burger from its plastic red basket. Ranch and barbecue sauce spill out the sides of the bun. In junior college, players aren't provided meals. Many of the players at Globe were broke, and finding a next meal wasn't always certain. Bubba Burgers were the unaffordable item Ward craved enough to pilfer from the nearby grocery store.

Opinions of Ward as a player cover an expanse. His standout week at the Senior Bowl led Mel Kiper to project him as a first-round pick in February. Others see an inexperienced, position-less project that doesn't deserve a thought in the first two rounds. Ward hasn't paid much mind to any of the noise. Barely 22, with a patchy beard that betrays a soft but rumbling tenor, his past has purged him of self-doubt. Whatever concerns skeptics have voiced, none of them can touch the ones he's already faced.

"Somebody complain about food, I've been through it," Ward says. "Somebody complain about traveling, I've been through that. Somebody complain about not having a father, I've been through that. Somebody complain about violence or shooting, I've been through that too. I ain't afraid of nothing. I've been through everything."

Globe Tech's players were scattered around the boroughs and New Jersey, but for two years, Ward lived with 19 teammates in neighboring two-story townhouses at 104 and 106 Townsend Avenue on Staten Island. A modest $3,000 rent was the appeal of each cream-colored, green-roofed building, where six players inhabited the upstairs with another four on the first floor.

The bus stop was only a few steps down the street, and with two lines running they never waited long. Rides cost $2.75, which many of them simply didn't have every day. To ensure passage, they deployed an array of tactics. The simplest, because non-college students rode for free, was flashing an old high school ID. As Ward filled out his 6-5 frame, suspicion grew, and when the MTA issued specialized passes for high schoolers, the plan was scrapped. Some mornings, he'd grab a fistful of pennies and toss them in the change slot.

Free ferry rides provided a brief respite, but the real problem waited for them across the water. "We get off the ferry, and now, we have to worry about the train," Ward says, before pausing. "That's gonna be tricky." Subway stations around Whitehall were lined with police, both MTA and NYPD. Initially, says Tyruiq Gordon, a fellow Philly native who was a year ahead of Ward at Globe, they would try to reason with workers, explaining they were willing to give what they had, even if what they had wasn't enough. "For the most part, they were lenient toward us because of the situation," Gordon says. "We weren't just hanging around." On days when that failed, players would get creative. Even at 280 pounds, Ward would slip into a turnstile with a teammate, conjuring two Metro Card swipes out of one. Like attacking a double team, the key to squeezing onto the subway was getting skinny. "It's a technique going through them things," Ward says. In times of desperation, the Knights were left with one final, undesirable option. "If you had to hop, then you hopped," Gordon says of a move that could come with a $100 fine. "When it came down to it, you couldn't miss practice or class."

"You know the movie Warriors?" Ward asks. "We did the same thing."

Empty pockets hindered travel, but the hardest days were the ones that led to empty stomachs. Groceries came from a now-defunct Waldbaum's around the corner. On his most desperate days, Ward would haul a duffel bag to the store and collect the cheap essentials—pancake mix, milk, bread—before paying, sneaking back inside, and snagging luxuries like hot dogs and french fries. "He [wouldn't] eat for two days and not say anything to me," says Cameron Chadwick, Globe's head coach. "He was one of those kids, he wouldn't ask you. He'd just go without."

During Ward's first season living at 104 Townsend there were three other players from Philadelphia and six from Hampton Roads, Va. Those shared roots created the earliest bonds, but it was hunger—both for food and a future—that ultimately fused them. Gordon and others showed Ward the way that year, and when they were gone, the mantle was his. "It's not really teaching someone," Ward says. "You just see it. We've got each other's back."

For Chadwick, Ward became another set of eyes when he couldn't be around. If the house wasn't clean or neighbors complained about noise, he knew to call his Pied Piper, the guy who rounded up players, got them fed and to practice every day. That year, fellow Philadelphian Tyrin Stone-Davis was 3,000 miles away at Pierce College in Los Angeles, but when he joined Ward at Illinois, he felt the same pull. "Just his presence, period," Stone-Davis said of Ward's influence. "He just leads by action, and people rally behind him." Stone-Davis is nearly a year older than the man he now describes as his brother, but that never mattered. There was comfort to be found in Ward's quiet ambition, and Stone-Davis clung to it. He still does. "I just feel safe around him," Stone-Davis says. "He never lied to me. He's never done me harm. I trust him. I love him. He wants the best for me.

Walk from 28th St. to Manhattan Mini Storage (29th St. and 11th Ave.) to Chelsea Ballfields (28th and 10th)

The Chelsea Ballfields are a fenced-in artificial surface near the High Line, outfitted with a track, backstop, and soccer fields. And during Ward's first season at Globe, in the fall of 2012, it's where the team held most of its practices. Compared to the arduous walk from the storage unit to De Witt Clinton Park on 52nd Street in Hell's Kitchen, home to spring practices that year, the two blocks felt like nothing to veterans like Gordon. When Chadwick ran into scheduling conflicts, he'd sometimes audible to Pier 40, at a field that adjoins a trapeze school, but that season Globe Tech football called two main locations home: practices in Chelsea, games at Union City High School in New Jersey, on a roof surrounded by a net to keep balls from plummeting off the side.

Next to the turf patch at the Ballfields sit a trio of basketball courts, much like the ones where Ward spent most of his childhood. Kareema Ward is a single mother with five children. "Jihad" was the name of a childhood classmate, and it would become the name of her first child. There was no religious connection at the time—Kareema didn't convert to Islam until 11 years ago, long after Jihad was born—but her education as a Muslim has brought new meaning to his name. In her purse, she carries a piece of lined notebook paper with 17 highlighted Islamic phrases, a constant resource for lessons she's still learning. She knows what most will think. They hear "Jihad," all they imagine is decrees of holy war and violence. But jihad can also mean to strain, to strive, to persevere. Now, when Kareema hears her son's name, she thinks of all he's done in his own struggle.

Until age 14, he'd never played a down of organized football. Before his sophomore year at since-closed Edward Bok Technical High School, the basketball coach approached Frank Natale, then in his first-year as Bok's head football coach, about a tall, muscular basketball player he thought would fit with Natale's plans. That summer, a 6-foot-3, 240-pound Jihad Ward was getting snaps for the Wildcats at wide receiver and safety. "He was 6-4 at D-back wearing no. 84," laughs Gordon, who played running back for nearby University that year. "He looked out of place."

Apocryphal tales have emerged about Ward's positional history, in the way they do about players who've spent time on the outskirts of college sports before ending up at a major program. He's only played defensive line for three years is a tempting way to inflate Ward's potential. It's also not true. He spent his second season as a standup end in Natale's 5-2 defense, and with an eye on getting Ward's hand in the dirt, Bok transitioned to a 4-3 when he was a senior.

Ward was second-team All-City as a junior, but Division I interest ended before it could start when coaches learned about his grades. Natale ensures that Ward was a fixture in class, but still, his GPA hung just below 2.0. Chadwick, who'd been named Globe's head coach the previous year, had history recruiting in Philadelphia, and eventually he and Natale got in touch. He made the trip to see Ward play at an all-star game at Lincoln

Financial Field, but he'd been sold long before. Players built like that don't land in junior college. A defensive end from the start at Globe Tech, Ward played well enough for his teammates to elect him a captain the spring following his freshman season.

Eight hundred fifty miles away, Bill Cubit was one of several members of the Illinois coaching staff scouring JUCO tape for defensive linemen. Poring through his Hudl account, Cubit, a Philadelphia native, came across a tape from a school he'd never heard of. He might have kept going if not for seeing his hometown next to the player's name. A few plays on the grainy tape were all Cubit needed.

Cubit reached out to Ward through Illinois's Twitter account and passed along his number. His first question after Ward called was a crucial one: American cheese or Cheez Whiz? Silence followed.

"On your cheese steak," Cubit said.

A short pause.

"American cheese."

Cubit was satisfied.

Until Ward came to Illinois that fall for his official visit, the only proof Cubit had that he even existed was shoddily recorded game footage and a voice on the other end of the phone. There was more evidence that the Loch Ness monster is real. The day before Illinois' game against Wisconsin, a hulking figure walked into a banquet room at Champaign Country Club for the team's Friday meal. "When he walked through the door, I was as relieved as anybody," Cubit says. "And I turned to somebody and said, 'Now that's what they're supposed to look like.'"

A handful of schools pursued, but Illinois is where he felt wanted most. Along with a reprieve from life in New York, Ward yearned for people who cared. He didn't always have them growing up in Philadelphia. When he was 17, a paternity test revealed that the imprisoned man he thought to be his father was not. Jihad eventually did get in touch with his dad, and when his family threw a party to celebrate his acceptance to Globe, he extended an invitation. The man arrived with the smell of beer lingering on his breath and handed his son a congratulatory $20 bill. Ward hasn't seen him since.

In Philadelphia, distrust and dismissal seeped into all of life's cracks. With Cubit at Illinois, there was support, a shared vision. "He told me the other day, 'You can't feel money,'" Kareema says. "But you can feel when someone loves you."

Ward's first padded practice in Champaign was the second day of the team's fall camp. He knew how established, pedigreed Division I might view a JUCO castoff, and from the start, he wanted to announce his presence. A broader goal came with it, though. "When I do a rep against people, when I get off the ball, people feel me," Ward says. "I don't say much, but people feel me. "You're going to feel how I felt for those two years, through my whole life."

Practice started with an inside run drill, the linemen, linebackers, and backs gathered on one side of the field. On the first snap, Ward knifed into the backfield and buried running back Donovan Young into the turf. Stone-Davis was across the indoor facility with the rest of the wide receivers. "All I heard was Wooooo! Wooooo!" Stone-Davis says. "Everybody just turned their head and looked." What they saw was Ward, letting out an out-of-character roar in Young's face as he was peeled off the ground. "He felt like he'd arrived," Stone-Davis says.

Illinois was thin on the defensive line, and co-defensive coordinator Tim Banks says the staff did all they could to get Ward ready to play early that season. "I think we knew after the first practice," Banks says. "This kid was freakish, in terms of his movements. And he went hard." By the fourth game of the season, an injury made Ward one of the Illini's starting defensive ends.

He remained there all year, earning Honorable Mention All-Big Ten along the way, but when new defensive line coach Mike Phair arrived the following spring, he quickly developed grander plans. Like many who'd only seen him on film, Phair was jarred by Ward's size in person.

He saw a player that even at 6-foot-5 had the flexibility to maintain pad level and keep leverage. Throughout the spring, he experimented with Ward inside, where the quickness and length that allowed him to survive on the edge became an even more significant advantage against interior offensive linemen. "He's dangerous there," Phair says. "I thought he could really cause some problems for an offense. And I thought he did a really good job learning how to play those spots inside." A bump to tackle was just another course in Ward's rapid defensive line education. Those practices would be his only spring football experience in major college football, and that lack of background is what has teams intrigue about his room for growth. "I'm just now learning techniques and schemes," Ward says. "Getting off the ball, getting vertical, those types of things."

By the time Illinois played Iowa in its sixth game of the season, Ward was playing a considerable portion of his snaps at defensive tackle, and that week is when Phair saw it all coalesce. Ward finished that game with 11 tackles, including nine solo. In years past, players that appeared to fall between the cracks of positional designations were downgraded for it. Now, with stars like Muhammad Wilkerson, Calais Campbell, and Jurrell Casey blurring lines and erasing ballcarriers, versatility is en vogue. Phair spent five years as an NFL defensive line coach before arriving in Champaign, and when looks at Ward, he sees an instant pro. "It won't surprise me when he plays right away for whoever drafts him," Phair says.

Walk from Bally's Total Fitness to Globe Institute of Technology (38th St. and 7th Ave.)

Globe's entrance is on 38th Street. Wedged between two stores specializing in rhinestones and beads, "Garment Center Capitol" is carved into the stone above the door. When Cubit visited, following Illinois's 2013 season, he thought he was lost. Ward's thoughts were even blunter: "I was like, 'This is the school?'"

The school is three floors of beige walls, with a few rows of computer paper reading "Welcome to Globe Institute of Technology" taped behind a receptionist's desk acting as a banner. The rounded letters are filled in with black marker. It's a tough sell for head coach Cameron Chadwick, and he knows it.

Chadwick is from Union, N.J. A high school star, poor grades made junior college his only outlet after graduation. He landed at Nassau Community College, and from his housing in Hempstead, the trudge to the Garden City campus was more than 3.5 miles. After two seasons, he transferred to Rutgers, where he played defensive back under head coach Terry Shea. Three years with NFL Europe's Prague Panthers followed, and after a short stint in real estate, Chadwick felt the pull of coaching. He was hired as Globe's defensive coordinator in 2008 before finally taking the head job in 2011. "I feel like this is where I belong," Chadwick says. "I was [these players] 20 something years ago."

The main sales pitch for Globe Tech is two-prong. Prong 1 starts—and ends—with the chance to attend school in New York City. Prong 2 is about how much it costs. Last season, Globe's opponents included Stevenson

College, Dean College, and Albright College. The average yearly tuition for those three schools is $33,000 a year. Lackawanna and Albright are considerably more affordable, but neither gets to Globe's annual asking price: $11,000.

Getting players to campus is a start, but keeping them is far from a certainty. In those days, with the trek to and from Manhattan, Chadwick estimates that he lost about the half the players he'd recruited before the season. "You take an 18-year-old kid straight out of high school, stick him in the heart of New York and say, 'OK, now you have to do everything yourself,'" Gordon says. "It was definitely a shock." The travel was a deterrent for some of Ward's teammates, but what sent many of them scurrying was learning that a portion of their credits wouldn't pass NCAA compliance. Following his freshman year, Washington, Tennessee, Kentucky and Illinois all showed interest in Ward, but some balked at Globe's accreditation.

Chadwick ensured that all they needed was additional course materials, and the concerns would be alleviated, but Ward saw it as another rejection. He was devastated. All those hungry nights, all the cunning work to make his way onto the train, all his success on the field, it had been in vain. "It really hurt me because I busted my ass to be where I was," Ward says. "I was so excited that I had a full scholarship somewhere." Chadwick did what he could to calm the unrest, and in time, Illinois was able to accept enough of Ward's credits to accept him. After coming to Globe Tech with a 1.8 GPA, he left with a 3.4, and he's on track to finish his degree at Illinois in sports management this spring.

Conference room 409, where Ward signed his letter of intent, has been unchanged since. An old Dell desktop sits in one corner, a black file cabinet in another. Two posters—an eagle for "Leadership" and group of cyclists for "Perseverance"—hang on adjacent walls. A blue Globe Tech banner fills out another, behind the long table where Ward put pen to paper. Documenting it all was Chadwick with a cell phone, the signing day cameras a world away. "After we signed him, [Jihad] must have thanked me for five, six weeks, for giving him the opportunity," Cubit says.

Even now, as Ward spends more time with former college stars entrenched in the same stretch of their lives, he can't believe what he hears. He never says anything, content to keep his head down and his mouth closed as he plugs away. Quietly, he's incredulous. "It's a regular day to them," Ward says. "It's not a regular day to me. I'd never had a practice on no college football field, in a big stadium." He says the moment he arrived at Illinois, he knew this was the future. The hardest days were behind him. But even now, short clips will land in Cubit's text messages, of Ward alone in the practice facility. "He could be a $100 million man, and he'd still feel like he's worth a penny," says Stone-Davis. "That's Jihad."

Walk from Globe Tech to 42nd Street/Times Square // 1 Train to Whitehall Terminal // Staten Island Ferry to St. George Ferry Terminal

Tourists lingered in Times Square long after the 9 p.m. let-out time for Globe's classes, but the worst of the noise was long past. After another adventure to secure a seat on the train, Ward arrived at Whitehall Terminal and waited for the next ferry back to Staten Island. Sitting on the hard plastic seats of the ferry, he'd pass the Statue of Liberty, softly lit from below as a few straggling tourists gathered near the window to snap a picture.

"Like I tell everybody," Ward says, "I just want peace at the end of the day."

He found it at the end of every night in New York, but at Illinois, he discovered it in every aspect of his day. He knows football has changed his life, but he doesn't deny he's the one that allowed it to.

“There was so much stuff happening in my life. There’s always something trying to break you down,” he says.
“But I made it through.”

The only sound on the ferry was the low hum of the engine. It was a calming churn. Staring out the window, he saw the soft light on the Lady to which so many began anew. When he looked into the sky, he saw hope.

Marvin Hall, Jaydon Mickens Continue Football Journey As Members Of The Oakland Raiders

By Eddie Paskal

August 10, 2016

Two friends sat in front of a TV playing a game of NCAA Football 2012, and the stakes were simple; granted they were a little higher than you would expect from a pair of high school buddies spending some time together during a holiday break.

They weren't playing for money, or even bragging rights; they were playing for a college commitment.

Marvin Hall and Jaydon Mickens went to high school together at Dorsey High School in Los Angeles, and after Hall committed to the University of Washington and to head to Seattle to play college football, he wanted his friend from home to join him.

Mickens was on the fence.

He had narrowed his college choices down to the University of Oregon, Oklahoma State, and the University of Washington, so Hall came up with a simple solution, why not just play a video game to decide?

"I was Washington; he [Mickens] was Oregon, because he had narrowed it down to a couple of schools," Hall recounted. "I told him, 'if I beat you, you have to commit now.' I ended up beating him and he committed right on the spot, and we went from there."

Mickens was true to his word, and as soon as the game ended, he called then-coach Steve Sarkisian to tell him he was going to be a Husky, and would be re-joining his high school teammate in the Pacific Northwest.

Over the next four years, the pair of wideouts enjoyed a plethora of success at Washington, and after their careers as Huskies ended, their friendship quickly began another chapter, as they were both signed by the Oakland Raiders as undrafted free agents within several weeks of each other.

Now, the high school teammates, who became college teammates, have become professional teammates, and as they go through their first training camp as NFL players, the chance to continue their football careers together is something that both Hall and Mickens appreciate.

"You always talk with your friends, 'man, we're on the same college team. We're about to go away from each other for a long time probably. It won't be the same again, but what if we all played for the same NFL team? That would be crazy,'" Mickens said. "Having that happen, it was surreal. I couldn't believe it at first, but it was something that I put in the back of my mind."

Training camp is a time of highs and lows – particularly for a undrafted rookies trying to make an impression – and having a teammate and close friend to act as a support system has a made of world of difference for the each of the receivers as they've gone through the most strenuous job interviews of their careers.

"It's real big," said Hall. "We push each other, so when we have down days, when we have up days, we're there to talk to each other, and get each other through this, and just letting each other know, 'I'm here for you if you need me,' and vice versa. It's a blessing."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“I would call it a blessing as well,” added Mickens. “Because there are some days where you’re just like, ‘I don’t know this and that,’ even though you’re never supposed to second guess yourself, but with this business, it gets hard on you.”

Friday night both Hall and Mickens will put on the pads and play in their first game as Oakland Raiders, and as they walk onto the field at University of Phoenix Stadium, the pair will fulfill a dream they had as high schoolers in Los Angeles.

“I thought about me and him in the same jersey at Dorsey, and me and him in the same jersey at Washington, now in the same NFL uniform, it’s going to be surreal,” said Mickens. “It might make me cry, but at that time I know I have to be thinking about football, but down the road, we’re going to look back at it, and be like, ‘man, that’s incredible.’”

“Like they say, God works in mysterious ways,” added Hall. “He put us here for a reason. We’ve been in each other’s lives for a reason. We’re going to push each other to make sure we both make this squad.”
