SNAPSHOT

Overview: Now in his second season guiding the Rams, Head Coach Sean McVay is coming off one of the greatest offensive turnarounds in NFL history. Last year, in his first year at the helm, McVay led the Rams to an 11-5 record and their first NFC West title since the 2003 season, earning the team's first playoff berth since 2004. McVay, who first entered the NFL as an assistant wide receivers coach on Raiders Head Coach Jon Gruden's staff in Tampa Bay in 2008, was named the Associated Press Coach of the Year last season after helping the Rams move from the 32nd-ranked scoring offense in 2016 to the league's top-scoring team in 2017.

Offense: Entering his third season, QB Jared Goff enjoyed a successful sophomore campaign in 2017. Goff finished the regular season 296-for-477, 3,804 passing yards, 28 touchdowns, seven interceptions and a passer rating of 100.5, earning his first Pro Bowl selection. RB Todd Gurley was Goff's top target last year, leading the team with 64 receptions. Gurley earned AP First Team honors and was named Offensive Player of the Year in 2017 after leading the NFL in touchdowns (19), ranking first in the league in scrimmage yards (2,093) and finishing second in rushing yards (1,305).

Defense: In his first season with the Rams in 2017, defensive coordinator Wade Phillips guided a defense that finished fourth in sacks (48.0), tied for sixth in interceptions (18) and finished fifth in total takeaways with 28 on the season. The 28 takeaways directly resulted in 126 points for L.A., the second-best total in the NFL. Rams DT Aaron Donald was named the AP Defensive Player of the Year in 2017, racking up 52 tackles (31 solo), 11 sacks for 95 yards, five forced fumbles, one fumble recovery and two passes defended, despite playing in only 14 games. HEAD COACHING MATCHUP

JON GRUDEN

Jon Gruden returns as head coach of the Oakland Raiders, welcoming back one of the most respected and successful coaches in the storied history of the Silver and Black. Gruden, who was first introduced as head coach of the Raiders 20 years ago, served four seasons with the Raiders from 1998-2001.

Gruden compiled a 95-81 (.540) regular season mark in 11 seasons as a head coach with the Raiders and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (2002-08), and a 5-4 record (.556) in postseason contests, which includes a victory in Super Bowl XXXVII.

The youngest head coach in the NFL at age 34 upon his initial hire by Raiders Owner Al Davis in 1998, Gruden posted a 38-26 record (.594) and led the Silver and Black to back-to-back AFC West titles in 2000 and 2001. He guided the Raiders to an AFC Championship Game appearance in 2000, a campaign in which the Raiders set a franchise record with 479 points and led the NFL in rushing (154.4 avg.).

In all, Gruden-led teams have claimed five division championships and have recorded six seasons with nine-or-more wins. As a head coach, he has seen 21 different players combine for 39 Pro Bowl selections. In addition, Rich Gannon was tabbed for the Maxwell Club's Bert Bell Award as the league's Most Valuable Player in 2000 and four players who Gruden tutored as a head coach have been enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame: Jerry Rice (2010), Warren Sapp (2013), Brooks (2014) and Tim Brown (2015).

Gruden spent seven seasons as head coach of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, finishing his time there as the winningest coach in franchise history by compiling a 57-55 (.509) regular-season record, while leading the Buccaneers to three division titles and a 3-2 mark in the postseason, including a Super Bowl XXXVII victory, becoming the youngest head coach in NFL history to win a Super Bowl.

Prior to beginning his initial tenure in Oakland, Gruden was a seven-year NFL assistant, helping his teams qualify for the playoffs five times. Gruden spent three seasons (1995-97) as offensive coordinator for the Philadelphia Eagles. He was the NFL's youngest offensive coordinator at age 31.

Before joining Philadelphia, Gruden worked for three years at Green Bay from 1992-94. He served as an offensive assistant to head coach Mike Holmgren in 1992 and spent the 1993 and 1994 seasons as Green Bay's wide receivers coach. Gruden worked as offensive assistant to head coach George Seifert with the San Francisco 49ers in 1990.

Born August 17, 1963 in Sandusky, Ohio, Gruden attended South Bend (Ind.) Clay High School and was a three-year letterman at quarterback at the University of Dayton, graduating in 1985 with a degree in communications. Gruden and his wife, Cindy, a former University of Tennessee cheerleader, have three sons, Deuce, who is in his first season as an assistant strength and conditioning coach for the Silver and Black, Michael and Jayson.

SEAN McVAY

On January 12, 2017, Los Angeles Rams Owner/ Chairman E. Stanley Kroenke named Sean McVay the 23rd full-time head coach in franchise history. McVay became the youngest coach in modern NFL history.

In his first season guiding the Rams, McVay completed one of the greatest offensive turnarounds in NFL history. He helped the Rams move from the 32nd-ranked scoring offense in 2016 to the league's top-scoring team in 2017, marking the first time in league history a team has gone from last to first in scoring. The first-year head coach led the Rams to an 11-5 record and their first NFC West title since the 2003 season, earning the team's first playoff berth since 2004. Following his first season in L.A., McVay was named The Associated Press Coach of the Year, becoming the youngest head coach to ever win the award. The Rams placed eight players in the 2018 Pro Bowl, the most in a single season by the franchise since the 1999 campaign.

Under McVay's guidance in 2017, second-year QB Jared Goff flourished. Goff completed 296-of-477 (62.1 percent) of his passes for 3,804 yards with 28 touchdowns and seven interceptions posting a 100.5 QB rating on the season. Gurley led the league in scrimmage yards finishing the year with 2,093 yards, including 1,305 rushing yards and 788 receiving yards.

McVay completed his third season as the Redskins' offensive coordinator in 2016 after initially being promoted to the position on January 15, 2014. Prior to his promotion during the 2014 offseason, McVay spent three seasons as the team's tight ends coach (2011-13) and one as an offensive assistant (2010). The 2016 Redskins' offensive unit broke many franchise records and ranked in the top-three in a number of statistical categories. McVay's group posted a breakout campaign in his second year as offensive coordinator in 2015, including record-setting performances by quarterback Kirk Cousins and tight end Jordan Reed. Collectively, McVay's 2015 offense recorded Top 10 rankings in third down percentage (43.5, fifth in the NFL), red zone scoring percentage (61.2, eighth), yards per play (5.6, 10th) and points per game (24.3, 10th).

In 2013, McVay played a crucial role in Reed's development, as the rookie compiled 45 receptions for 499 yards - Redskins' single-season rookie tight end records. During Washington's NFC East championship season in 2012, McVay's unit was productive despite losing starting tight end Fred Davis to a torn Achilles tendon in Week 7. In 2011, McVay played an integral role in Davis' emergence, as the then fourth-year tight end surpassed his previous career highs despite playing in only 12 games. McVay served as an offensive assistant to the Redskins in 2010 in addition to working with the tight ends during the final four weeks of the season.

McVay joined the Redskins prior to the 2010 season after an undefeated regular season with the Florida Tuskers of the United Football League (UFL). McVay originally entered the National Football League as an offensive assistant with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in 2008. McVay graduated from Miami University (Ohio) where he played wide receiver from 2004-07, earning Miami's Scholar-Athlete Award in 2007. His grandfather, John, served in various roles - including vice president/director of football operations from 1983-94 - for the San Francisco 49ers from 1979-95, overseeing five Super Bowl championship squads and earning induction into the 49ers Hall of Fame in 2013.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

The Raiders — who began play in the American Football League in 1960 — enter their 58th year of professional football competition, including the last 47 as a member of the National Football League.

In six memorable decades — the 1960s, '70s, '80s, '90s, 2000s and 2010s — the Raiders have been dominant in professional football since Al Davis first pledged in 1963 to build the finest organization in pro sports.

During these decades of dominance, the Raiders have won an AFL championship, four American Football Conference championships, and three world championships of professional football, participated in five Super Bowls, played in 14 championship games, won or tied for 17 division championships, had 22 playoff seasons, finished 35 seasons at .500 or better and played in 41 postseason games.

Pro football's dynamic organization placed first in the AFC West in 2000, 2001 and 2002 despite playing among the toughest schedules in the NFL in each of those seasons. With their appearance in Super Bowl XXXVII, the Raiders became the first NFL team to have had a season end in the Super Bowl in four different decades.

The Raiders are the only team to have been in Super Bowls in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s and the 2000s.

The Silver and Black are the only AFC team — and one of just two NFL teams (Minnesota) — to have a season that advanced to the conference championship game in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s, the '90s and the 2000s.

The Raiders are one of only three original AFL teams to have captured three world championships of professional football with Super Bowl victories. The Raiders are one of only five AFC teams to have won more than one Super Bowl since 1980.

In their five Super Bowl appearances, the Raiders have been led by four head coaches and started four quarterbacks.

With four postseason victories, the Raiders were the first of the AFC West teams to win multiple postseason contests in the new millennium by six years.

Since 1963, when Al Davis first took over the failing Oakland franchise that had struggled to win only nine of 42 league games in the initial three seasons of the new AFL and pledged to build the finest organization in sports, the Raiders have dominated professional football in terms of consistent victory. During the memorable 57 years in Oakland and Los Angeles, the Raiders have won 462 league games, tied 11 and lost 411.

"Commitment to Excellence" has never been an idle phrase to those who have proudly represented the Raiders organization during the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium as shown by their domination of pro football.

More than 20 of the great players who proudly wore the Silver and Black, as well as Owner-Leader Al Davis and legendary Head Coach John Madden, have been enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. The Raiders have also produced six Coaches of the Year.

In addition, 70 Pro Bowl players have earned 195 Pro Bowl selections representing the Silver and Black. In 1970, as the Raiders began their second decade of play, the merger between the AFL and NFL became a reality on the field. In the 1970 through 2012 period of interconference play, the Raiders have compiled a remarkable 92-77-1 record against present National Football Conference rivals.

Another innovation came to professional football in 1970 — "Monday Night Football." The Raiders' domination of this prime-time television series has seen the Silver and Black build an incredible 38-27-1 record in Monday night play. In the 43 years of this series, the Raiders are 16-8-0 in "Monday Night Football" games at home.

Through the decades — the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s, 2000s and now the 2010s — the Raiders have had the greatest players, the greatest coaches, the greatest plays and participated in the greatest games in the annals of professional sports.

Challengers to Raider domination of professional football will arise as they have in the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium. The Raider organization will continue to meet these challenges.

REGGIE McKENZIE

THE GENERAL MANAGER

Reggie McKenzie, a former draft pick by Raiders Owner Al Davis as a player, enters his 32nd season in the National Football League and his seventh as General Manager of the Silver and Black. McKenzie was named to the position by Owner Mark Davis on Jan. 10, 2012, becoming the first General Manager of the franchise since Al Davis was hired as Head Coach and General Manager in 1963. Owner Mark Davis rewarded McKenzie with a four-year contract extension in July 2016, and McKenzie went on to be named the Executive of the Year by the Pro Football Writers of America and Sporting News in 2016.

McKenzie has overseen significant changes in the organization's scouting, player personnel and football operations departments, while bringing refined football acumen to the Silver and Black. Adhering to a strategy of building a competitive roster through the draft while making strategic acquisitions via free agency and trades, McKenzie finished his sixth season at the helm having already earned plaudits from some of the most respected voices in football.

UNDRAFTED GEMS

Every preseason, hundreds of undrafted free agents vie for a spot on their team's 53-man roster. Reggie McKenzie has brought in numerous players that were not drafted, developing them into significant contributors for the Silver and Black.

- WR Johnny Holton improved in his second year and became known as a home-run threat. Holton averaged a staggering 24.2 yards per catch in 2017 and ranked third on the team with three touchdown receptions.

- On RB Jalen Richard's first NFL carry, he rushed 75 yards for a touchdown. With his 75-yard touchdown, Richard became just the fourth player ever to record a 75-or-more-yard rushing touchdown in his NFL debut, joining Oran Pape (1930), Alan Ameche (1955) and Ottis Anderson (1979). He has totaled five scores and combined for 1,216 scrimmage yards in 32 career games.

- WR Seth Roberts has totaled four game-winning touchdowns in his career (Week 2 of 2015 vs. Baltimore, Week 12 of 2015 at Tennessee and Week 1 of 2016 at New Orleans). The Raiders are 10-0 in games when he records a touchdown reception.

Notable Raiders who entered the NFL as undrafted FAs:

Player	School	Year	Team
WR Johnny Holton	Cincinnati	2016	Oakland
LB Nicholas Morrow	Greenville	2017	Oakland
T Donald Penn	Utah State	2006	Minnesota
RB Jalen Richard	Southern Mississippi	2016	Oakland
WR Seth Roberts	West Alabama	2014	Oakland

Since McKenzie took over as GM in 2012, the Raiders have had 11 UDFAs on the initial 53-man roster. Here is the yearly breakdown:

Year	UDFAs on Initial 53
2012	2
2013	2
2015	2
2016	4
2017	1

LATE-ROUND STEALS

"It definitely helps. When you play on Sunday and a guy goes down and that player that you have running on special teams now can play a position and you're not afraid to put him in, it gives you depth. They may not be the starter. These young guys, you really have to give them a couple of years to figure out what they really are. Some of them, you have to throw them in because of where you are as a team. Let's all hope that not only the guys at the top of the draft but the guys at the bottom, if we can get a couple of those guys to give us some production within the first three years, that would be great." - Raiders GM Reggie McKenzie on getting production from lower-level draft picks

GM Reggie McKenzie's philosophy of building his roster through the draft includes standout players from the top of the board like DE Khalil Mack, QB Derek Carr and WR Amari Cooper. But a good drafting team will make all of their picks count, and McKenzie has done that of late. Here is a look at some players currently on the roster that McKenzie has drafted in the fourth round or later and have provided solid production:

McKenzie's Picks

Player	Year	Round
DT Justin Ellis^	2014	4
G/C Jon Feliciano^	2015	4
RB DeAndre Washington^	2016	5
DT Treyvon Hester	2017	7

THAT'S WHAT THEY SAID

"My approach is old school. I'm a roll up the sleeves type of guy that wakes up early in the morning like iron workers, and comes prepared to get the job done." - Reggie McKenzie, introductory press conference, Jan. 10, 2012

"He has the courage of his convictions about players that Ron Wolf had, including blunt assessments of their talent. But Reggie also has the patience of Ted Thompson; he adheres to the draft-and-develop model of team-building. The latter means trusting scouts to constantly fill a pipeline of young talent, empowering coaches to play and develop young players, and identifying core players to secure contractually for the future." - Andrew Brandt, Monday Morning Quarterback (MMQB), March 12, 2014

"He is an exceptional evaluator of talent. Just has a great skill for it, especially for guys already in the NFL who might be flying under the radar. He was my right-hand man for all those years, a big reason why the Packers were good all those years." - Ron Wolf, April 24, 2012

"You can see this foundation starting to build there with the things Reggie [McKenzie] has done. He goes and hires Jack Del Rio, and I think that's a pretty good situation. They have a ton of cap space and an opportunity to build. All of a sudden you look at the AFC West, and they're kind of on the rise and you're very familiar with the AFC West so you know. It's very competitive." - Andy Reid, March 24, 2015

The Raiders went 1-2 in 2017 on Sunday Night Football, defeating the Dolphins, 27-24, in Miami. In 2013, the Raiders participated in the latest NFL game ever played when they hosted the San Diego Chargers on Oct. 6. - This will mark the Raiders' 69th and 70th contest on Monday Night Football and third consecutive year after playing their first-ever Monday Night Football game on Christmas Day last season and their first Monday Night Football contest outside of the United States in 2016 in Mexico City, Mexico. The Raiders have split their last two Monday Night Football appearances, defeating the Texans, 27-20, in 2016 and falling to the Eagles, 10-19, last year. It will mark the first MNF matchup against the Broncos since 2013 and first MNF game against the Rams since 1985.

With 24 sacks surrendered in 2017, the unit tied for the third-fewest sacks given up league wide.

Since QB Derek Carr entered the league in 2014, the team's 103 sacks allowed are tied for the fewest in the NFL with the Baltimore Ravens. In addition, the Raiders' 75 sacks surrendered since 2015 are the uncontested fewest in the NFL.

PAVING THE WAY

Although the team did not average higher than their sixth-ranked rushing offense (120.1 avg.) from 2016, the team rushed for more 100-yard games in 2017, totaling 10 such games, including a season-best 180 in Week 2 against the Jets.

The Raiders' stable of backs finished the season ranked 13th in yards per rush in 2017, averaging 4.20 yards. The team paved the way for RB Marshawn Lynch's seventh career season rushing for at least 800 yards on the ground, including two 100-yard performances in Week 13 (101 yards on 17 attempts - 5.9 avg.) and Week 17 (101 yards on 19 attempts - 5.3 avg.). Since returning to action in Week 9, Lynch averaged 78.1 yards rushing per game (625 total), a mark that tied for third in the NFL during that span. Additionally, Lynch became just the second active running back to record 80 scores on the ground, joining Adrian Peterson. THROWING FOR SIX

Carr has enjoyed one of the most prolific starts to a career in NFL history, especially when it comes to finding the end zone. His 53 TDs rank second most by any NFL player through his first two seasons, trailing only Dan Marino (68). And although his 2016 season was cut short due to injury, he continued his stellar start to his career by throwing 28 more TDs in his third season. His 103 TDs are also 10th-most in the NFL since 2014.

Carr crossed the 100-touchdown barrier just 60 games into his NFL career, the quickest to reach 100 passing scores in Raiders history. By doing so in his first four seasons, Carr joined Dan Marino, Peyton Manning, Andrew Luck and Russell Wilson as the only quarterbacks in NFL history to toss 100 touchdowns through their first four seasons in the league.

DEREK CARR

TD-INT RATIO

Among Carr's great talents as a quarterback is his ability to protect the ball and minimize turnovers. Through the first four years of his career, there have been few to ever do it better than Carr when it comes to touchdown-to-interception ratio.

Carr's 2.34 TD-INT ratio (103/44) is fourth-best in NFL history among QBs with 1,500-or-more attempts. Shown below is the elite company Carr has joined with those numbers:

KHALIL MACK

SILVER AND MACK

As the Raiders' first-round pick in the 2014 NFL Draft, DE Khalil Mack had lofty expectations in his rookie season and he met them all and more. Mack finished third in Associated Press Defensive Rookie of the Year voting. Proving to be one of the NFL's best run defenders and generating pressure on quarterbacks that didn't always show up on the stat sheet, Mack was selected to the Pro Football Writers of America, Sports Illustrated and NFL.com All-Rookie Teams. Mack finished second in the NFL in 2015 with 15 sacks, but it was 2016 that became the year of the Mack. He earned a spot on the Associated Press' All-Pro Team for the second straight season and was named the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year, becoming the first Raider to win the award since Lester Hayes in 1980. In 2017, Mack recorded career highs in tackles (87) and passes defended (five), while adding another double-digit sack season to his resume.

FIVE-SACK GAME

Mack tied a franchise record set more than 32 years ago and set a career high with five sacks in Week 14 at Denver in 2015. His incredible performance matched Howie Long's five sacks on Oct. 2, 1983. Below is a look at the top single-game sack performances in franchise history:

Player	Sacks	Date

Kameron Wimbley	4.0	11/10/11
Anthony Smith	4.0	9/12/93
Anthony Smith	4.0	10/18/92

Mack became the first player with five sacks in a game in which his team won by three points or fewer since sacks became an official stat in 1982. All of Mack's five sacks came in the second half against Denver, tying for the most sacks in a half since 1991. Here is a look at the most sacks in a half since 1991:

Since sacks became an official stat in 1982, only six other players have recorded more than five sacks in a game in NFL history. Mack is the sixth player to record five sacks and one forced fumble in a game. The most recent player to do so was Adrian Clayborn for the Atlanta Falcons in Week 10 this season. MACK ATTACK

Mack was the first Raiders player since 2005-06 to record double-digit sacks in back-to-back seasons, the last being Derrick Burgess. With his two-sack performance against the Cowboys in Week 15, Mack became the first Raider to record double-digit sacks in three consecutive seasons since Anthony Smith did so from 1991-93.

In these last three seasons (2015-17), Mack has also recorded 36.5 sacks, good for second-most in the NFL during that span. Only Chandler Jones and Von Miller join Mack as the only players to record at least 10.0 sacks in each of the last three seasons.

----- NFL SACK LEADERS SINCE 2015 -----

Team	Player	Sacks
Arizona Cardinals	Chandler Jones	40.5
Oakland Raiders	Khalil Mack	36.5
Denver Broncos	Von Miller	34.5

It's no secret that Mack thrives as the season goes on, as well as in the individual games themselves. His fourth-quarter sacks are rank near top of NFL amongst all premier pass rushers.

----- MACK'S FOURTH QUARTER SACKS SINCE 2015 -----

Mack's 15.5 career fourth-quarter sacks rank second in team history since becoming an official statistic in 1982. Additionally, his fourth-quarter forced fumbles (four- third in NFL) and fumble recoveries (three - tied third) also top the NFL charts since 2015.

RECORD-TYING STREAK

In 2016, Mack's Defensive Player of the Year campaign was highlighted by his record-tying sack streak. From Week 6 through Week 14, Mack registered in sack in eight consecutive games. He tied an NFL record and became just the second player in club history to do so since sacks became an official stat in 1982. Here are Mack's incredible numbers during his eight-game span

Mack is tied again with Smith for the most such games in franchise history through his first four seasons (nine).

MACK'S GAME

On Nov. 27, 2016, Mack became the first NFL player since 2009 to record a sack, interception returned for a touchdown, forced fumble and fumble recovery in the same game. The last to accomplish such a feat was none other than Charles Woodson.

RETURN OF THE MACK

In Week 14 of 2015, Mack's five-sack game officially put the NFL on notice. His day to remember improved his season total to 14.0 sacks, and with his performance, he jumped to the top of the NFL leaderboard in sacks. Mack added one more sack in Week 15 to finish the season with 15.0 sacks, good for second in the league, and the third-most in franchise history.

Mack was the 14th different Raider with 10 sacks in a season and the first to do so since 2006 (Derrick Burgess and Warren Sapp). His 15 sacks this season are the most by a Raider since 2005 and the third most in franchise history. Since then, he has posted three consecutive double-digit sack seasons, one of three players to do so since 2015.

----- FRANCHISE SINGLE-SEASON SACK LEADERS -----

Player	Sacks	Year
Derrick Burgess	16.0	2005
Sean Jones	15.5	1986

Notorious for finishing strong, most of Mack's production came in the second half 2015, as he totaled 53 tackles (39 solo) with 11 sacks since Nov. 15, including three multi-sack games in Weeks 12-14.

Mack had a sack in four straight games from Week 12-15, which at the time was tied for the second longest streak by a Raider since 2001. Mack has had at least a five-game sack streak in each of the last two seasons, just one of two players league wide to do so.

BRUCE IRVIN

BRUCE IRVIN

In 2016, the Raiders signed LB Bruce Irvin, the dynamic defender who played his first four years with the Seattle Seahawks after being drafted 15th overall by the club in the first round of the 2012 NFL Draft. His tenure as a Seahawk included two NFC Championships and a victory in Super Bowl XLVIII. Since his arrival with the Silver and Black, Irvin has started all 32 games for the club - marking both the first and second time in his career starting the full slate in a season. His career statistics are shown below.

ROOKIE LEADER

Bursting on the scene in 2012, Irvin wasted no time taking the league by storm, as he racked up a Seahawks-record eight sacks in his first year with the club. Not only did he set a franchise-rookie record, but he led the NFL that year among all rookies as well.

SACK FACTS

Irvin has been a playmaker for the club since signing with the team, and his stats prove it. Since 2016, there are only two players in the NFL who have registered at least 15 sacks and 10 forced fumbles.

----- 2017 -----

Irvin enjoyed a career year in Year 2, posting a career-best 64 tackles (47 solo), tying a career high with eight sacks and adding three passes defended. Adding four more forced fumbles to his resume, Irvin became the only player to wear the Silver and Black to register at least four fumbles in two seasons (dating back to 2000). Additionally, his 5.5 sacks since Week 12 were sixth-most in the league, also good for most on the team during that span.

SACK MAN

It's simple - When LB Bruce Irvin gets to the quarterback (half-sack), the odds of winning go up. The Raiders are 9-3 when Irvin gets home, and for his career, team's are 24-8 when Irvin finds his way home in the backfield. And when he and DE Khalil Mack both get to the quarterback in a game, the Raiders have only lost twice.

In 2017 Irvin was named the team's nominee for the Walter Payton Man of the Year, representing the best of the NFL's commitment to philanthropy and community impact. The Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year Award recognizes a player for his excellence on and off the field.

MARSHAWN LYNCH

BEAST MODE

After an injury-riddled 2015 campaign, the Beast went into hibernation for the entirety of the 2016 season. In 2017, a whiff of home has brought the Beast, RB Marshawn Lynch, out of retirement and placed him into the Silver and Black uniform, the team he grew up watching as an Oakland native. The Oakland Technical High School and Cal Berkley grad joined the Raiders as a five-time Pro Bowler. Lynch is also a two-time member of the Associated press' All-Pro Teams (First Team in 2012 and Second Team in 2014).

Lynch became just the 31st running back in NFL history to rush for 10,000 yards with 891 yards in 2017, his seventh season with at least 800 yards on the ground. Lynch currently owns 33 career 100-yard games, ranking fourth among all active players, while also tying for the second-most multi-td games among active rushers with 13 such games. Below is a chart of Beast Mode's career:

AMARI COOPER

FIRST-ROUNDER

WR Amari Cooper finished 2017 looking to build upon his prolific career start. He was tabbed as the Raiders' first-round draft pick in the 2015 NFL Draft and the fourth-overall selection. He was the highest wide receiver taken in the draft and the first receiver taken by Oakland in the first round since 2009.

After enjoying one of the most dominant careers a wide receiver has ever had at the college level, Cooper saw that success translate to the NFL, as he became the first Raiders rookie to ever reach 1,000 receiving yards. Cooper also holds the franchise records for receptions and 100-yard games (five) by a rookie. Cooper continued his success in 2016, becoming just the third player in NFL history to post at least 70 receptions and 1,000 yards in each of his first two seasons. In 2017, Cooper battled through injuries and played in 14 games, tallying 680 yards and a career-high seven touchdown receptions.

HISTORICAL COOP

Coop's 2,903 yards receiving before age 24 rank ninth in NFL history.

Only 15 players in NFL history have more touchdown receptions than Cooper's 19 before the age of 24.

Cooper became the first WR in NFL history to surpass 500 yards receiving in the first six games in each of his first two seasons.

Cooper posted five 100-yard outings as a rookie, a franchise rookie record and tied with Keenan Allen (2013) for the most by any player 21-years-old or younger. His nine through his first two seasons are tied for eighth most in NFL history.

His five 100-yard games are tied for the second most by a rookie since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger (leader: Odell Beckham Jr., seven in 2014).

Cooper became the first NFL rookie since 1961 (Mike Ditka) with three 100-yard receiving games in his team's first six games.

Cooper joined DeSean Jackson (2008) as the only NFL rookies in the past 30 years with two 100-yard receiving games in their team's first three games.

In Week 3 at Cleveland in 2015 (8 rec., 134 yds), Cooper became the first Raiders rookie with 100 receiving yards in back-to-back games since James Jett (Nov. 21-28, 1993).

COOPER 200

In Week 7 against the Chiefs, Cooper put together what was arguably the best game of his career, compiling 210 yards (second-most in club history) on 11 receptions (19.1 avg.) and added two touchdown receptions. His performance will go down in history as one of the greatest Thursday performances in NFL history, ranking third all-time in receiving yards in a Thursday contest.

Promising start for Gruden Part II as Raiders beat Lions

By Jerry McDonald

August 10, 2018

OAKLAND — It was almost perfect.

The Raiders first possession with Jon Gruden calling plays at the Coliseum opened with two short completions and a 60-yard power run for an apparent touchdown by Marshawn Lynch.

As is often the case in early August, the Raiders couldn't pull off the storybook beginning Friday night in a 16-10 exhibition win over the Detroit Lions. Rookie left tackle Kolton Miller was called for holding, essentially wiping out the first drive.

"I was really ticked off after that play was called back," Gruden said. "I just got to the stadium. I'd just called my (third) play. Chucky came out for a brief moment tonight."

In truth, "Chucky," the Gruden alter ego named after the doll in the 1988 slasher movie, appeared to come out less than in his previous incarnation. He flashed his wicked look a time or three, but at age 54 Gruden appears to be internalizing a little more than he used to.

It should be noted, however, that Cindy Gruden, Jon's wife, laughed out loud when that theory was suggested to her following the game.

As much as Gruden is looking to put tales of the 1998 through 2001 seasons behind him, the coach looked almost humbled during pregame and said as much afterward.

"It was awesome. I saw some recognizable faces that had gotten a little bit older," Gruden said. "Saw some old friends that mean a lot to me. This is a great responsibility. The nostalgia's worn off. We've got to do something with this opportunity. But it was sure great to see the Raider fans."

Gruden's first trip on to the field since Jan. 12, 2002 (a 38-24 playoff win over the Jets) came at 6:30 p.m. with many fans still filing in.

A classic rock fan to the core, Gruden's sound track on the stadium P.A. system started with Led Zeppelin's "Rock and Roll" as he stopped and posed for photos with Cindy and sons Michael and Jayson as the lyrics "been a long time" echoed in the background.

Next up was Aerosmith's "Back in the Saddle," as Gruden made his way to conversations with general manager Reggie McKenzie and owner Mark Davis. As players went through stretching, Gruden walked among them as is his custom, reminding them of areas on which to focus.

The starting lineup, in another throwback move, was introduced coming out of the Black Hole area in the south end zone rather than a straight shot from the tunnel to the field. Gruden got big cheers when the stadium announcer welcomed him back to the Oakland Alameda County Coliseum (although, oddly, wide receiver Jordy Nelson matched him in terms of decibel level).

As much as Gruden wants to put all nostalgia talk aside, and as calm and cool as he looked as he took the field for the first time, one of his closest friends indicated otherwise.

Asked if Gruden was fired up, Jeff Leonardo, his longtime driver, said, "That would be the understatement of the year."

Leonardo, observing the pregame scene on the field, was relieved he wasn't responsible for getting Gruden to the game from training camp in Napa.

"Thank goodness, he came on the bus," Leonardo said.

Adding to the emotions is that Gruden's son Deuce, who was 4 years old when he was traded to Tampa Bay, is now on the sidelines as the Raiders' strength and conditioning coach.

The opening drive, before Miller's penalty, was looked straight out of Gruden's original playbook.

Taking over at the 29, Gruden's first play call was a play fake by Carr, who then rolled right and hit Nelson for a 4-yard gain. It was a play Rich Gannon, seated in the television booth doing analysis, executed countless times.

Then Carr threw to the opposite sideline for seven yards and a first down to Griff Whalen. Two short passes and a first down, followed by Lynch's big run with double tight ends in a single back set.

Alas, Miller hooked defensive end Anthony Zettel for the hold, and the drive died after Carr threw incomplete deep to Martavis Bryant, had another pass deflected and Doug Martin was stopped for a short gain. That was it for Carr, who gave way to Connor Cook. The third-year quarterback completed 11 of 19 passes for 141 yards, a touchdown and no interceptions.

It's dangerous to draw conclusions from a preseason game, but it's fair to say this is the best Cook has ever looked — by a considerable margin. You can credit Gruden for much of that.

There were hints of the power running game Gruden loves, particularly with undrafted rookie Chris Warren (13 carries, 86 yards), even with Lynch's touchdown being nullified.

For having not called plays in a game since 2008, Gruden found a good rhythm and plays came in quickly and without confusion. If there were any problems with sideline technology unlike anything Gruden is used to, it didn't show.

Gannon, working in the local TV broadcast booth, could barely contain his glee when he emerged at halftime.

"They're going to be so much better," Gannon said.

The Raiders outplayed the Lions decisively on both sides of the ball, played with the kind of "juice" Gruden insists on, and made enough mistakes for the teaching to continue in earnest when the Raiders return to practice Monday in Napa.

A month to go until the regular season begins. So far, so good.

QB Connor Cook sharp as Raiders beat Lions 16-10

By Matt Kawahara

August 10, 2018

As expected, quarterback Derek Carr stayed in the Raiders' preseason opener Friday night long enough to break in a pair of new offensive tackles, complete two passes and stretch his arm on a deep throw to Martavis Bryant.

Carr spent most of the Raiders' 16-10 win over the Detroit Lions on the sideline, where he watched as, possibly, the competition to be his backup gained some clarity.

After taking over for Carr, Connor Cook completed 11 of 19 passes for 141 yards, a touchdown and no interceptions, leading three first-half scoring drives and showing more poise under the Coliseum lights than he has for stretches of camp in Napa.

"I thought he did pretty good," head coach Jon Gruden said. "He's had an excellent training camp, has not turned the ball over, he's shown pretty good command. There's a couple decisions I just can't wait to talk to him about to get his perspective. But he moved the team, put points on the board."

On his first throw of the game, Cook lofted a ball to a wide-open Johnny Holton near Oakland's sideline for a 41-yard gain. On arguably his best, in the second quarter, Cook scrambled to his right and floated a touch pass up the sideline to tight end Paul Butler for a 24-yard gain.

The latter set up 1st-and-goal. Three plays later, Cook bought himself time by running to his left, set his feet and found Ryan Switzer in the back of the end zone for a 7-yard touchdown.

"Felt good," Cook said. "For the first time playing against another team, live action, it felt great. Some guys made some really good plays. Coach Gruden called some great calls for me to go out there and execute."

Gruden has given a large amount of the second-team reps in camp to Cook, the 2016 fourth-round draft pick who spent last season as the third option behind Carr and EJ Manuel. Friday, Manuel played the entire second half, completed 4 of 6 passes for 46 yards and committed a turnover on a botched snap. Gruden, though, said Manuel will likely get more work next week and the competition remains open.

"We've got a long way to go to solve who's the number two quarterback," Gruden said.

Both Cook and Manuel played most of their snaps behind a backup offensive line. The Raiders replaced most of their starters after the first drive with the exception of tackles Kolton Miller and Ian Silberman, who played one more series.

Miller, the first-round pick who has played left tackle this offseason in the absence of Pro Bowl veteran Donald Penn, had an eventful first series as a Raider. On his second play from scrimmage, Miller executed a cut block that created a clean throwing lane for Carr, who found receiver Griff Whalen for a seven-yard gain.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

On the next play, running back Marshawn Lynch got loose for an apparent 60-yard touchdown run. But Miller was called for a holding penalty, negating the play.

"I didn't agree with that call at all, honestly," Gruden said. "That was a well-blocked play ... I was really ticked off after that one was called back. I just got to the stadium, I just called my fourth play.

"Chucky came out for a brief moment tonight."

While the negated touchdown was Lynch's only carry, the 32-year-old back showed an impressive burst of speed by out-running Lions safety Glover Quin over the final 30 yards. Carr completed 2 of 4 passes on his lone drive.

The Lions opted not to play quarterback Matthew Stafford, instead starting the game with Matt Cassel, and the Raiders took out most of their defensive starters after two series. The Raiders held Detroit to 226 yards and recorded four sacks as their young interior line generated some good pressure.

Cassel reentered the game after the Lions took over down six with 2:17 left. But the Raiders sealed the win as James Cowser forced a fumble by Cassel that was recovered by Frostee Rucker.

Rookie kicker Eddy Piñeiro had a nice debut, making all three of his field goal attempts. Piñeiro nailed a 48-yarder just before halftime and a 45-yard try with just over two minutes left - both coming off the Coliseum infield dirt.

"I thought we could've had a very good evening had it not been for Marshawn's long run being called back," Gruden said. "We had a fumbled snap at the 5-yard line going in, we can't get set on a quick play to negate their challenge, which cost us more points. We left a lot out there.

"You can't win in this league in the regular season making mistakes like that. But there were some good moments. Guys played well tonight."

Connor Cook shines in Raiders' preseason opener win over Lions

By Scott Bair

August 10, 2018

OAKLAND – Names you know well weren't spoken much in Friday night's preseason opener versus Detroit.

Derek Carr, Amari Cooper, Jordy Nelson, Marshawn Lynch and most offensive starters played a single series. Bruce Irvin, Rashaan Melvin and the defensive first unit hung around for two.

This game was for the backups. It always is.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

Carr's backup is an important position. It has to be someone the Raiders never play, yet can be competent in a pinch.

That battle was an even race when training camp started. Connor Cook may have a leg up after Friday night's 16-10 win at Oakland Coliseum.

The Michigan State alum might've played his best football as a Raider – in fairness, there isn't a huge sample size – completing 11-of-19 passes for 141 yards and a touchdown on three scoring drives.

He was efficient relieving Carr after the first series, and was pulled after the opening half. Cook hit a lull on one drive, but finished strong with a run of completions to set up Eddy Piñeiro's 48-yard field goal.

His touchdown drive was particularly impressive. Cook bought time with his feet twice in the series, hitting tight end Paul Butler for 24 yards and Ryan Switzer for the seven-yard touchdown.

"He did some good things," Raiders head coach Jon Gruden said in a halftime interview. "There's still a couple things decision-wise I think he's got to correct, but he moved the football, he put points on the board, and I liked his two-minute drill at the end of the half."

Cook's game performance backed up a strong start to training camp – he hasn't thrown an interception in practice -- where he showed improvement in accuracy and decision-making, troublesome areas in season past..

Games, however, matter most.

Cook showed well in this environment, though he'll have to continue playing well to secure a No. 2 job that eluded him in his first two seasons. Matt McGloin and EJ Manuel beat him out for the gig in respective seasons.

Manuel's his competition again this year, though roles could well reverse under Gruden's staff.

The veteran was 4-for-6 passing for 46 yards, and lost a fumbled snap.

Carr was 2-for-4 for 11 yards, and Jordy Nelson knocked down an easy interception.

Every offensive starter bounced after the first series save the offensive tackles. First-round left tackle Kolton Miller and right tackle Ian Silberman played two.

Marshawn Lynch wasn't credited with a carry but showed great burst and breakaway speed on a 60-yard touchdown run nullified by Miller's holding penalty that helped spring No. 24.

Count second-round defensive tackle among the impressive rookies Friday night. The Sam Houston State alum had a third-down sack and batted a pass at the line of scrimmage thanks to pressure from fellow rookie Maurice Hurst.

Running back Chris Warren also had a strong night, with 13 carries for 86 yards.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

Continued health, as well all know, is the only true barometer of preseason success. While there may be issues unknown as the game ends, the Raiders didn't have many obvious injuries. Cornerback Antonio Hamilton was attended to by trainers on the field early in the second half, but re-entered the game and got hurt again.

Raiders QB Connor Cook sharp in stint against Lions

By Michael Gehlken

August 10, 2018

OAKLAND, Calif. — Connor Cook never sensed he was competing last summer.

In the media, Raiders coaches insisted Cook and E.J. Manuel were battling for the No. 2 quarterback job behind Derek Carr. On the field, however, reps dictated otherwise. Cook consistently worked behind Manuel in training camp and never appeared in the regular season.

Today, it not only feels like a competition.

It seems like one Cook is winning.

Carr and most offensive starters played only the first series of Friday night's exhibition opener. When Cook entered, he demonstrated the composure that he's shown in training camp and that lacked during a turnover-happy spring, leading two scoring drives in a 16-10 win over the Detroit Lions.

Cook played the remainder of the first half after Carr exited.

He completed 11 of 19 passes for 141 yards and a 7-yard touchdown to wide receiver Ryan Switzer.

"He did some good things," coach Jon Gruden said at halftime. "There's still a couple things decisionwise I think he's got to correct, but he moved the football, he put points on the board, and I liked his two-minute drill at the end of the half."

Dirt and grass

Eddy Pineiro was a multisurface kicker in his NFL debut.

For another couple of years, the Raiders own the unfortunate label of being the NFL's only franchise that shares its stadium with an MLB team. That means Pineiro can kick field goals off grass and infield dirt in the same game, something the undrafted rookie did efficiently Friday.

On grass, Pineiro converted a 21-yard try.

On dirt, he concluded the first half with a 48-yard score and added a 45-yarder late in the fourth quarter.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

Notable

- Running back Marshawn Lynch did Friday what he's done before every game with the Raiders, sitting during the national anthem. He was the only Raiders player noticed to have demonstrated during the anthem. Lions players linked arms.
- Safety Karl Joseph became the Raiders' first player to be penalized under a new NFL rule that prohibits lowering the helmet to initiate and make contact. Joseph was found guilty for an open-field hit on Lions running back Ameer Abdullah in the second quarter. The 15-yard penalty directly followed a 2-yard Joseph sack. Abdullah capped the drive with a touchdown.
- Reserve running back Chris Warren was a second-half standout. The undrafted rookie has a legitimate shot at making the 53-man roster. He rumbled Friday to 86 yards on 13 carries. All but 4 of those yards occurred after halftime.
- Carr was 2-for-4 with 11 yards. On his two misses, he wasn't able to connect with wide receiver Martavis Bryant on a deep shot. Wide receiver Jordy Nelson broke up a pass that otherwise may have been intercepted.

Raiders beat Lions 16-10 in Gruden's return to sideline

By Josh Dubow

August 10, 2018

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Jon Gruden jawed at the officials, worked closely with the quarterbacks and was once again adored by the Oakland Raiders fans.

It was as if he had never left the Coliseum.

Jon Gruden was a winner in his return to the sideline for Oakland when the Raiders got a touchdown pass from Connor Cook in a 16-10 victory over the Detroit Lions on Friday night.

"It was awesome," he said. "I saw some recognizable faces that had gotten a little bit older. I saw some old friends who mean a lot to me. Like I said all along, this is a great responsibility. The nostalgia has worn off. We have to do something with the opportunity. But it was sure great to see the Raiders fans."

Gruden was welcomed back warmly to the Coliseum for his first game here as Raiders coach since beating the Jets in a playoff game Jan. 12, 2001. Gruden was traded to Tampa Bay after that season and has spent the past nine years as an ESPN analyst.

Raiders owner Mark Davis lured Gruden back to the sideline with a 10-year contract worth a reported $100 million following a disappointing six-win season under Jack Del Rio.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

The Gruden era appeared to get off to a rousing start when Marshawn Lynch ran 60 yards for a TD on the third snap, but the score was called back on a holding penalty by rookie tackle Kolton Miller.

"I was really ticked off after watching that get called back," Gruden said. "Chucky came out for a brief moment tonight."

Oakland settled for a punt on the only drive with starting quarterback Derek Carr, but scored three times in five drives with Cook at the helm. Cook threw a 7-yard TD pass to Ryan Switzer in the second quarter and led Oakland to a pair of field goals by rookie Eddy Pineiro. Cook finished 11 for 19 for 141 yards.

The Lions also welcomed a new coach in Matt Patricia, who opted to rest star quarterback Matthew Stafford, who got enough work in two days of joint practices against Oakland.

"We got a lot of good work in this week," Patricia said. "He took a lot of reps and he saw a lot of different looks. That was the goal, to come out here and be able to get some of those different team tempo plays and have it scripted and a little controlled. Just thought it was a good opportunity tonight to have the other guys go out and compete."

Matt Cassel got the start and went 10 for 18 for 81 yards, leading Detroit to one score on three drives, with Ameer Abdullah capping it with a 1-yard TD run . Jake Rudock finished 12 for 19 for 84 yards.

NATIONAL ANTHEM

Lynch once again sat during the national anthem. Lynch also sat for the anthem all of last season but never gave a reason for his decision. No other players on either team demonstrated during the anthem, with the Lions all standing together with locked arms.

ROOKIE REPORT

Lions second-round RB Kerryon Johnson showed good burst, running for 34 yards on seven carries and adding four catches for 33 yards.

"To me, didn't make enough plays at the beginning, didn't make enough plays at the end," Johnson said. "I still have work to do. We still have work to do. It was the first game. First-game jitters out for everybody."

The Raiders also had a strong performance from a second-round pick with DT P.J. Hall getting a sack and batting down a pass in the first half. Oakland undrafted free agent RB Chris Warren III ran 13 times for 86 yards .

INJURIES

Raiders CB Antonio Hamilton limped off twice in the second half with an apparent ankle injury.

HELMET FOUL

There was one penalty under the new rule prohibiting players from leading with their helmets. Oakland S Karl Joseph was called for the infraction on a tackle against Abdullah in the second quarter.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

OFF THE DIRT

Pineiro's second field goal came at the end of the first half after Gruden called for a run that set up Pineiro's 48-yarder off the infield dirt. Pineiro added a 45-yard field goal off the dirt in the fourth quarter. The Raiders will play at least one regular-season game this season with the infield dirt in place for Oakland Athletics games.

"I remember when we drafted (Sebastian) Janikowski, it was like being on a foreign planet for him when he got here and started kicking off the dirt," Gruden said of Oakland's first-round pick in 2000. "We did manage to get him a couple of looks."

In Oakland, Jon Gruden Is Ready to Grind

By S.L. Price

February 19, 2018

This story appears in the February 26 issue of Sports Illustrated. To subscribe, click here.

Jon Gruden has this idea for a story. It's not his story—not yet—though it's clear he'd like it to be. And maybe that shouldn't come as a surprise. He did spend plenty of time in the dark, alone, over the last decade, and that would set any man, even one who tries to “stay in two feet of water, don't get too deep or philosophical,” to thinking. Then there's the fact that at 54 you hear a lot about guys your age getting hit by cancer or heart attack, here one day and—boom!—gone the next. So, yeah, Gruden formulated this theory about purpose and fraudulence and death. He jotted down some notes and even a title, The Football Gods.

“I thought I could write a cool Broadway play,” he says. “I really do want to write this book. But I'd rather it be a movie.”

The base conceit is that in the end, your passion leads to your heaven. Live for classical music? Die and you'll be up there conducting the New York Philharmonic. Legendary football coaches like Lombardi and Halas? They arrived, started talking ball and never stopped. And now they monitor the coaches down on earth. Gruden is “convinced” this part is real. All those icons are up there, judging.

“If you're faking it, the football gods will get you,” he says. “They reward the guys who work hard. That's why Tom Brady is where he is. If you're focused and determined and legit, good things will happen. I believe that.”

Now, to Gruden-bashers this idea couldn't be more hokey, but you can't overstate the power of context. He is saying this not from the Monday Night Football booth, or while tutoring some wide-eyed QB on ESPN. No, he's sitting now in his old/new Raiders office in Alameda, 27 days after breaking a nine-year exile in broadcasting to become the highest-paid coach in NFL history. It's Super Bowl Sunday, but he's been here since before sunrise, “grinding” and “layin' bricks,” with no one else in sight.

The glass-walled warren is hushed and dark when he first walks me in, a perfect setting for the horror movie Child's Play, with its psychodoll/Gruden doppelgänger, Chucky. There's a massive monitor mounted over his desk, paused on a practice script, and another gargantuscreen over his right shoulder playing America's annual football-and-marketing orgasm, with its endless blabber of pregame, in-game and postgame talking heads.

“Al Davis wanted these walls to be glass,” he says, “so he could see that you were working. He always wore this cologne—a lot of it—and you could smell him before he got to you. ‘He's coming this way!’ I'm still expecting to smell it sometimes.”

Which makes sense. It's not just that Gruden is back in the same facility he left on Feb. 18, 2002, when Davis, the Raiders' notoriously hands-on owner, up and shipped the coach to Tampa Bay for two first-and two second-round draft choices. It's also that Davis's Just win, baby persona—brass-knuckle fierce and darker than 2 a.m.—was so unrelenting that even now, his 2011 death at age 82 can seem like a mere technicality. For many, Al Davis remains the Raiders' heart and soul.

"Did you know," Gruden asks, one eyebrow cocked northward, "that they've kept his office exactly as it was?"

It's true. Mark Davis, Al's only son, didn't dare move into the owner's suite when he took over the family business. (Asked where his office stands in relation to his dad's, Mark says, "He's across the hall.") While Super Bowl Sunday rattles on in the background, Gruden pads over to the empty desks of Al's two longtime "angels," his assistants Karen (Fudgie) Otten and Kristi Bailey; now dedicated to team alumni, they're due back at their stations next week. Here, some 20 years ago, Gruden would come and wait to be summoned, wondering what he was in for. Often, the angels winced, mouthing, "Good luuuck."

"It's just weird coming in here, man," Gruden says. "Feel like you're 34 years old again."

After a cursory tour of Al's office—rack of leather jackets in the corner; certificates from Syracuse and the Sugar Ray Robinson Youth Foundation; jersey from Lance Alworth, Al's first signing coup—Gruden dips into Davis's film room, past four idle TV screens, to a fully marked-up whiteboard backed against a wall. "Here it is," he says.

Davis, named the AFL's Coach of the Year in 1963, was consumed by X's and O's to the end, and the fact that his last whiteboard, the repository of his scribbled plays and plans, remains untouched from 2011 gives Gruden the biggest thrill. "Lookit," he says, and then reads aloud from Davis's scribbles: "Power. Big people. Pass pro. Defense. Play calling. Offensive line. Not signed: 21. 24. 26. 31. That's the last time he was here."

Then Gruden's out, down the hall toward Al's private bathroom, stopping at a bookshelf jammed with Davis's massive video collection of games, plays, ceremonies. Gruden had epic arguments with the old man, and they never made peace after a final dispute over roster control and salary led Davis to deal him. But, really, who would better appreciate the stiletto irony of Gruden's coming back that first season in Tampa Bay to crush the Raiders in Super Bowl XXXVII? Looking back, Gruden loves the man for his sheer territoriality, that hilariously profane will.

"His wife, Carol, had all these videos at their house, and she'd ask, 'Do you want any?' " Gruden recalls, laughing. "I'd say, 'I would love to have some of those.' And Al says"—here the coach affects a menacing, low-and-slow, Brooklyn-tinged Al Davis inflection—" 'Carol . . . don't you . . . give him . . . a f--- thing!' " "

It's at that moment I realize: If Gruden ever writes The Football Gods, Al Davis will be one of them. Hell, maybe football heaven ends up a version of this very office. Because, at least in Gruden's mind, this return to the game isn't all about proving critics wrong, or justifying that 10-year, $100 million contract, or giving Oakland a playoff run before its planned move to Las Vegas in 2020. Years ago Gruden called the Raiders, got the name of Davis's cologne (Antaeus, by Chanel), mispronounced it at a New York department store, bought a bottle and, to his wife's dismay, doused himself with "four scoops," à la Al. There's a bottle in his Hampton Inn hotel room right now. Gruden, for gods' sake, wants to channel the old pirate.

"A lot of coaches are miserable," Gruden says. "These guys have been fired, hired, fired again; they've got houses here, got to move over there. They're distraught. I grew up [associating] every team with a coach. Pittsburgh Steelers, I'd think Chuck Noll. Seahawks, Chuck Knox. Now? Who's coaching up in Jacksonville? In Miami? I don't know how many coaches they've had in Tampa since they fired me! I don't like it.

"So, you know what I'm going to do? I'm going to come back and put it all on me. Everybody's going to want to kick my ass, step on me. They can't wait to talk about what a dumbass I am, and how s----- I was to start with. How 'overrated' I am. I hear it all. I know it's going to happen. And I'm like: Come on! Just like Al Davis. When I was here, he said, 'The great thing you've got going, Jon, is they're never going to rip you. They're going to rip me.' "

Gruden's mouth tightens into a slash, one eye popping wider than the other, and there it is for the first time today: full-on Chucky, to finish the thought. "And Al goes, 'I love it, personally.' "

He settles back into his office chair, his face reverting to the one his mother loves. The volume drops. "I've kind of taken to that, man."

The idea was to sit with the Raiders' new coach and watch Super Bowl LIII. It seemed cool, if obvious: ESPN's highest-paid broadcaster (at a reported $6.5 million per), nine years the face of Monday Night Football, eight years the host of the quirky-compelling QB Camp show, calls one last game before diving back in. Setting this up turned out far easier than expected, though, because of one minor-key bizarre fact: Jon Gruden answers his phone.

Do you instantly pick up when a strange number flashes across your cell? Does your spouse or teenage kid—seriously?—answer each time you call? The most mundane exchange, these days, demands some texty preamble. And if your target carries any kind of heft, like a coach or a television personality, the road to any kind of chat involves email proposals, agents, media-relations officials, a clutch of on-the-ground minders.

Someone flipped me a number for Gruden, last tried in 2012. It was a Saturday, 72 hours before his hiring would be officially announced at a press conference in Oakland: NFL World was ablaze with rumors and stories about his return. I figured I'd leave a never-to-be-heard message on a phantom voicemail, to be stranded in limbo forever. . . .

"Hel-lo," Gruden replied.

I had written an SI cover story about him 16 years earlier, and he vaguely remembered the photo but—rightly—had no memory of me. Still, he said, he might be able to make some time.

The Jan. 9 presser, attended by just about every living Raiders notable, felt less like a coaching change than the Dauphin's return. Mark Davis, 62, confirmed that he'd spent six years chasing his man and called it "the biggest day of my life"; Gruden spoke of how he viewed his first-go-round in Oakland as "unfinished business." Nobody seemed bothered that 11 months after the announcement of a four-year contract extension for the now-deposed Jack Del Rio, the franchise would be on the hook for $20 million.

Though it was officially affirmed that Oakland had complied with the Rooney Rule by first interviewing USC offensive coordinator Tee Martin and Raiders assistant Bobby Johnson, it was clear that both minority candidates were called in for form's sake. Asked later if, lacking Gruden, he would've fired Del

Rio, Davis says: “I don’t see how I could have. To spend $20 million, and on top of that hire Tee Martin? No. What I would’ve done is probably brought in a president—somebody with X’s and O’s ability—to work with Jack, and I would’ve gotten some more competent coordinators.”

Still, even the biggest cynic had to admit Davis had pulled off a p.r. coup. For years, anytime a big NFL job opened, Gruden’s name was floated. And when he seriously mulled a previous Oakland offer, in 2014, ESPN jacked up his salary with a seven-year extension. Considering that Gruden and Del Rio share the same agent, Bob LaMonte, Davis says that landing his man was a tougher lift, even, than getting NFL owners, in 2017, to approve the Raiders’ move. “This ain’t just some cakewalk, like hiring a teacher,” he says. “This is Jon f-----’ Gruden.”

An f-bomb middle name is hardly the most eloquent way to convey charisma, but that quote isn’t meant for the high rollers. Davis is speaking here to the gritty, embittered core of Raider Nation. “The team has one—perhaps more—year left in the market,” says former Raiders CEO Amy Trask, now an NFL analyst for CBS. “Their magnificent fans have supported them through thick and thin; this is going to excite them. And the team has taken on a breathtaking amount of debt associated with the Las Vegas deal [a reported $650 million loan] and, therefore, has a tremendous amount of extremely expensive product to sell in that new stadium—sponsorships, suites, club seats. Hiring Jon is going to help them do that. It’s a shrewd business move.”

In the weeks after the announcement, the issue of Gruden’s appeal—his seeming ability to excite the base and engage casual fans—became oddly entwined for me with his phone. His answering felt more a matter of reflex than cultivation; I never showed up as more than a strange area code on his caller ID. The second time I rang, he was meeting with his coaching staff. The third, he was sitting down to dinner with family. I kept wondering, Why pick up at all? Would Bill Belichick or Nick Saban even bother?

A few days after LaMonte called to relay that his client would be going home to Florida to “say goodbye,” and then would meet me in Oakland, I rang Gruden again. “Just sitting here alone in the office in Alameda,” he said. “Grindin’.”

What of Florida and bidding the state farewell?

“Already did that,” he rasped. “I’m like Chevy Chase in Vacation, man, looking at the Grand Canyon. Yep. I see it. How much longer do I have to be here? Goodbye.”

I proposed watching the Super Bowl together, but he said not to expect anything special. In previous years he would do his ESPN pregame show on-site, then jet home during the game. For someone who’s set off by the tiniest clank of a spoon on a cereal bowl, the jostling drunks and traffic and hype is a special kind of torture. “I don’t have a team in it,” he said. “It’s not like I really care about what happens.”

Yes and no. When I arrive a week later, Gruden has little interest in the broadcast, though he plans to mine the game tape later for any stealable material. He declares the Eagles the better team, gives the edge to Patriots quarterback Tom Brady and predicts a New England win. With Philadelphia up 15–6 in the first half, he blurts out something prescient: “What will Philadelphia prove, if they keep this lead? They have a fourth-quarter pass rush to close you out, unlike Atlanta did last year.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

But he's more engaged in talking about why, after so many flirtations with Mark Davis (and at least one other serious bid by an NFL team), he came back now. ESPN was a sweet gig, being home for his three boys' high school years while still punching in at his Fired Football Coaches Association. Daily, he'd go to his custom setup in a Tampa office complex—film library and shower downstairs, gym and bed upstairs—and for years he loved it, spending days and nights surrounded by hundreds of miles of tape. Coaches from all over the league, college and even Pop Warner, would come to brainstorm. Quarterbacks shut out of their team facilities by the collective bargaining agreement would come to chalk-talk and throw.

Year after year, at least 15 times, Mark Davis would show up, too, and try to pull Gruden away. But he was having fun without the pain that losing brings. "I was near the fire, but I didn't get burned," Gruden says. "In some ways I was coaching."

"As the years went on," says his wife, Cindy, "I got tired of living in my brain, 30 places that he'd consider. I just decided that he was not going back ever. Then it became so long that I really didn't think he would."

But the house kept getting emptier. The oldest Gruden, 24-year-old Deuce, spent the last two years with his uncle, Jay, as a Redskins strength and conditioning coach; Michael, 21, is a junior at Tennessee; Jayson, 17, has just one more year of high school. When Jon was inducted into the Bucs' ring of honor in December, surrounded on the field again by 70 of his old players, it stirred him to tears. The following week, the Raiders were in Philly for a Monday game, and the night before, Christmas Eve, Davis hosted Jon and Cindy in his hotel suite for dinner. Gruden had shot up similar flares before, but this time when he said, "I'm going to get back in, if I can get a job," Davis sensed he meant it.

"Leaving dinner that night I felt very, very, very strongly it was going to happen," says Davis. (Not Cindy: "Not until he signed on the dotted line. I never pretend to know what my husband is thinking. As soon as you do, he'll change his mind.")

This time was different. "I got tired of sitting in a dark room, watching tape by myself," Gruden says. "I took rumba-dancing classes; that didn't last—I wasn't any good. Bought a boat; I never used it. Live on a golf course; I never play. I'd go to the FFCA early, and next thing I know it's 10:30 at night. I'm thinking, S---. I'm wasting my time. I got to go compete."

He glances up from his desk. Deuce, a 5' 6" wedge of muscle, is standing in the doorway. Gruden blurts out the fact that his eldest won a powerlifting gold at last year's world championships and introduces him as the Raiders' newest strength-and-conditioning staffer. Deuce chats, politely, then gets to the point: "They got food near here?" Gruden says no and reaches for his car keys, but his son has wheeled and gone. "He's like his mom, a tiny little lady," Gruden says. "But he's a beast."

Having a son in the office is a bonus, no doubt, but Gruden's guilt over neglecting his family has come and gone. The doubt planted by mentor Bobb McKittrick, a 49ers line coach who died lamenting their monomaniacal obsession with the game, has eased. "The one thing I will regret," Gruden says, "is that [McKittrick and I] really didn't take to fishing, we didn't like traveling abroad. We just liked one thing. But I don't think I'm going to be regretting my decision. Life is flying by. Here I'm 54 years old, just like that. Football is going to be the only consistent theme in my life. The feelings inside of me that I can't get enough of"—and here Gruden squints, rubbing his fingertips together—"are nervousness, excitement, a little fear, a little pressure. People go to casinos to get that. But I wake up every morning now and I go, God! Whoo!"

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Jon Gruden is an awful driver. Sure, he can handle a straight shot on an empty highway, with Zeppelin or BTO cranking, on the two-minute early-morning hop from the Hampton Inn to the Raiders' facility. But given that the team just dropped this gleaming Mercedes S 550 on him four days ago, and that there's all kinds of new signage and roads and a helluva lot more traffic since he worked here 16 years ago, the 20-minute trip to Ricky's Sports Theatre and Grill in San Leandro figures to be a bit of an adventure.

First there's the matter of his side-view mirrors, which stay folded flush no matter how much Gruden shoves and bangs with his left hand, or feels about the car's instrument panel with his right, all while drifting down 98th Avenue toward I-880 South as the GPS ladyvoice cuts in every 10 seconds to dictate the next turn. "Where am I going here, you think?" he asks more than once. "You think this is right?"

Finally Gruden hits the correct button, and the mirrors unfold like wings. But—what with his utter lack of direction, the cars whizzing angrily past, the rehash of yesterday's Super Bowl ("I got caught up in it," he says of the second half, "and it came down to fourth-quarter pass rush"), one missed turn, his describing the morning's offensive meeting and breaking down two still-delicious plays he called in the 2002 NFC championship game—it's a wonder we arrive unscathed. "That's why I have a driver most of the time," he says.

Gruden has only been to Ricky's, a semi-biker hangout and a hub of Raider lunacy since the AFL days, a few times, but he's still got a reserved parking space, and when we arrive, owners Ricky and Tina Ricardo (who switched allegiances to Tampa when Gruden was traded) are waiting. Tina screams, drops her head through the open passenger window and plants a kiss on Gruden's cheek. "We believe, we believe, we believe!" she gushes. "You're here. . . ."

It's 4 p.m. on this hangover Monday, so the place may be brimming with Silver and Black memorabilia, but it's also nearly empty. We walk in with Gruden's new defensive coordinator, Paul Guenther, a former colleague of Jay's who wisely took his own car. Immediately some former Raiders game-day employees point out how things have changed at Oakland Coliseum since Gruden last coached there, how the starters no longer run out from the south end zone's infamous "black hole" of costumed crazies, how NFL and team marketing forces keep trying to tame Al Davis's Oakland beast.

"They don't come out of the black hole anymore?" Gruden asks. "I'm going to have to look into that."

We sit at a high-top, order burgers and beer. Word has already spread, and over the next hour a steady trickle of fans hustle in. Gruden's modus operandi is to greet anyone warily edging his way with a hearty "What is going on? What's your name?" Then up steps Ahmed Fasail, with his two kids, all kitted out in Raiders gear. His nine-year-old daughter hands Gruden a fistful of dandelions and asks, "How come you left the Raiders?"

"I got traded!" Gruden replies.

Ahmed: "I told her, 'He didn't leave. They left him.' "

"How would you like to come home one day and hear you got traded to Florida?" Gruden asks. "You wouldn't like that, would ya?"

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Ahmed's eyes widen. "Wow, you got the same voice as on TV!" he says. "The same voice!"

They talk a few more minutes and Gruden insists on buying the family lunch. I wander over to speak to Guenther, but after a while, over the bar din, I overhear two words: "Marshawn Lynch." The Raiders' flinty running back has been a hot topic ever since Gruden was hired, with speculation centering around their ability to coexist. In the coming days, in fact, one report will state that Lynch blew off a meeting with his new coach, and another will feature Lynch's agent's denial. The entire matter remains touchy because, under the current CBA, coach and player aren't allowed contact until April.

But now I look over, and Gruden is telling superfan Ahmed, in an open bar, "I met Marshawn today at the facility. He and Josh Johnson [a Texans backup and Lynch's cousin] came in." And when Ahmed asks Gruden the question of the moment—What's your impression?—Gruden says, "I like him."

Ahmed, to his eternal credit, isn't having it.

"I like him, too," he presses, "but what do you think?"

"We've got to get him in, ah, better and stronger, through the season. . . ."

"He didn't get in shape until Week 10," Ahmed says of last year.

"We're not going to have that," Gruden says. "No. I said to him: 'I need Marshawn Lynch. I don't need this part-time Lynch. I need full-time Lynch.'"

"Man, you're motivating me right now, baby! If he ain't getting motivated, something's wrong."

"We need the real deal," Gruden says. "If you're going to put those letters on the back of your jersey, man, you've got to back it up, Marshawn—right? We don't need another back, we need a feature back."

Just as I'm trying to conjure Bill Walsh or Chip Kelly—or any other coach, past or present, who has run his football operation like some CIA sleeper cell—casually spilling such news, Tina stops by to say that during Gruden's payback Super Bowl win with Tampa, she designed a play for the coach to use against the Raiders. "South right, Nickel 41, Kill 3, 74 Wasp," sent via text to Gruden's mother, she says. "Took me three days. I drew it up, and he used it."

Gruden takes this in, nodding, and whether or not the play was already in his game script, he's happy to give her credit. The Buccaneers, leading 13–3 at the time, faced first-and-goal on the Raiders' five-yard line. "It was going to be a draw to Michael Pittman if they were playing zone," he says. "But we killed it, we changed the play—Kill, kill, kill! Seventy-four wasp! . . . Keenan McCardell [on a fly stop route], touchdown. He came off the field going, 'Bzzz!' "

Everybody roars, and I'm beginning to see it as all of a piece: the phone etiquette, the Lynch revelation, the always-glowing assessments of players on Monday Night Football. Gruden has never been pure rah-rah; he rode Tampa quarterback Chris Simms and tackle Kenyatta Walker mercilessly. ("Some people think I was an a-----, and I probably was at times.") But he has always been open to players, owners, fans—anyone who matches his energy, who needs football as much as he does—and he will talk to anybody, anytime, on the off chance of finding a kindred spark. "Do you like the game plan? The play call?" he used to implore players back in the day. And when they nodded, "just [like] a bobblehead," it killed him. Oakland quarterback Rich Gannon knew enough to trot off shouting, "I love it, man! Love it! Love!!!"

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

But a motor can only rev so hard, and for so long. Ninety minutes after our arrival, time to go, Gruden's mood has dropped. Maybe it's the setting sun, or the fender he scraped on a post backing his Mercedes out. Traffic has thinned on I-880; the car's interior is growing dimmer. After a mile, he breaks the quiet. "You come back and it's not the same," Gruden says. He mentions Raiders legend Ken Stabler, a regular visitor during his first stint, dead since 2015. He mentions Ricky, once so vital, now halting and frail.

"It hits you in your core," Gruden says. "It's almost like I'm living my life twice, like Back to the Future. I've got the same office. I walk down the hall, in frickin' Al Davis's office, and he's not there. You see his writing on the board. . . ."

There's something else. It's as if Gruden, after reveling again in the fans' pure passion, remembers the pain that sets in when, suddenly, there's no place for it to go. The Bucs fired him after the 2008 season. Soon the Raiders will leave for Vegas. He's closing in on the team facility now, the control tower at Oakland Airport looming outside.

"It's kind of sad, man," Gruden says. "What will they have once we go?"

Heaven is just the setup. The key conceit to Gruden's novel/movie/play about the football gods is that they've been watching and judging the sport like some celestial TV panel, and they're appalled by what they see. Yes, in this case writing is autobiography; Gruden happens to be upset about the same things. Most pressing, of course, is the CBA which limits his offseason time with players, restricts him to 14 regular-season padded practices, stops him from extending sessions an extra hour whenever he'd like. But that's just the iceberg tip. Overall, he's sure football is losing its soul.

"The state of the game? We have to put a GPS in Bobby's shoulder pad to see if he's working too hard," Gruden sighs. "We stop a high school game in Florida three times every half to give 'em a water break. We run a zone-read every play in college—don't even block the defensive end; we read him—because players can't push themselves. It's too risky; somebody had an episode six years ago. . . . Anyway, the Lord sees these gods and says, 'We've got a problem with football. I need you guys to go back to earth and fix this.'"

So down to earth go Bear Bryant, George Allen, Vince Lombardi and the rest. They don't look the same; they're young guys with names like Jimmy Bryant or Joey Halas. But they take over and go all Junction Boys on the millennials, with hard-ass practices and endless film sessions. It's Jon Gruden's fantasy football league. One god curses out a ref and can't believe it when he gets fined $15,000. A bunch sit in on owners' meetings, disgusted by the obsession with marketing and fan experience. "I just think it would be hilarious," Gruden says.

Maybe, but any laugh would be sardonic. His time at the FFCA, and volunteer-coaching Deuce's and Jayson's high school team, convinced Gruden that the game faces a serious crisis of identity and morale. Almost as soon as the Bucs fired him, he began distributing personal funds to high schools, landed some corporate sponsors and spearheaded an initiative to raise hundreds of thousands of dollars for youth and prep teams. He says he's on a "mission to save football," and, yes, it's personal. The game gave him work, discipline and joy, and it has made him ridiculously rich.

"I wasn't worth a damn, but I was on a team, I had to [report] by seven o'clock," Gruden says of his time playing in high school and college. "I had to run through the line, not to it; my coach made me do it right. And I hated it at times. But if it wasn't for football, I wouldn't have any of these benefits. These geniuses tell you, 'It's a dangerous game, we shouldn't play, you can [learn the same things] in drama class.' I say bulls---."

Of course, Gruden is reentering an NFL in which throwback fashion applies only to jerseys. His appreciation for sheer physicality seems undented by the tragedy of player concussions and CTE research, and the one clanging note at his press conference was his curiously lax handle on national anthem protests. "I'm not really aware," he said, "of that subject at all." Meanwhile, the raw clay he's so eager to grab has this whole new texture.

"These players are different," says Jay Gruden, an offensive assistant under his brother in Tampa, and now the Redskins' coach. Jon "will have to adjust. College football is different now—less refined, a lot more no-huddle and spread offense, a lot less physicality. We're getting a different type of player. Some are fine, but some you have to teach. There's more ADHD, more video games. It's a matter of molding 'em, and that's why it's so important to get your hands on 'em. But these rules [limit] that. So you do the best you can: Draft well, get the free agents you want. . . ."

With personnel at even more of a premium, then, the new coach's relationship with Raiders general manager Reggie McKenzie figures to be crucial. Gruden wasn't shy about opposing Al Davis's draft picks or roster moves in 2001; he clashed with Bucs GM Rich McKay until winning that power struggle; and—together with McKay's replacement, Bruce Allen—he made a string of questionable player bets (Cadillac Williams over Aaron Rodgers in the '05 draft?) in his last six years in Tampa. Asked what makes Belichick so special, Gruden starts with "unrelenting drive," but very quickly he gets to "the great thing that he has: complete control of that organization."

But Gruden also says that years of grilling coaches and execs for TV broadened his appreciation for a team's total makeup and killed dead the notion that players were less vital to success than genius play calls. "I can work with Reggie," he says. "I need him."

For his part, McKenzie, who has known Gruden for 33 years and worked with him on the Packers' staff in 1994, says, "I really wanted to have him on board." Why else, when the Gruden hire was all but done, would McKenzie decline Green Bay's request to interview him for its vacant GM position? "If I had any doubt, I probably would've considered it," he says. "I have no question we can work together."

That imperative, of course, is urgent for reasons that go beyond last year's 6–10 stumble. Mark Davis would love to rejuvenate his Oakland fan base, go out with a bang before bolting for Vegas. And NFL history has seen plenty of popular coaches try, unsuccessfully, for an Act II. All with a stake in Gruden's return betray no worry in that regard, not least because he won his title against the Raiders, not with them. Yes, unfinished business. Here, Act II is less a restoration than it is a do-over: Davis feels his dad never should have traded Gruden in the first place.

Still. Mark can declare himself at peace now and put up $100 million to prove it, but he's just like anyone else. He has no idea how Gruden will work this time around. This much becomes clear when the Raiders' owner, after spending two hours in a Walnut Creek restaurant preaching his new hire's every virtue, leans back against the booth, pauses and asks, "You still think he's got it?"

And in answer I end up weaseling a bit, repeating arguments about why he may and why he may not. I don't mention that this very subject is on Gruden's mind too; that on the quiet drive back from Ricky's he said, "If we don't win? It's going to be, 'Gruden ain't got it. He ain't got it.' But I know one thing: I still got it."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

But it's often the case, too, that those gifted with a distinctive edge are the last to know when it's gone. Gruden never won another playoff game after that Super Bowl with Tampa. He had unlimited power to shape and coach—and went 45–53 the rest of the way. His partisans will point to his five division titles or say the Bucs were hamstrung by the very trade that brought him to Tampa, all those lost high draft picks. Karma: One more win in 2008 would've put Gruden back in the postseason, but the 5–11 Raiders came to town for his last home game and won. Gruden's voice had worn thin. His West Coast offenses, heavy on veterans and ball control, struggled to score. And through it all, despite his reputation as a QB guru, he never did develop a great young passer.

"We helped do some good things in Tampa; it wasn't a total train wreck," he says. "And now [in Oakland] we've got a young quarterback signed for a long time. I owe it to myself to give it one more shot."

Indeed, it was only back at his office afterward, when Gruden spoke of Raiders quarterback Derek Carr, that I felt myself buying in. The coach was calm describing Carr's visit to QB Camp in 2014, but then he started mimicking Carr scribbling notes, leaning on his elbows—and within seconds Gruden's eyes were gleaming.

Then he started yelling, filling the halls with his voice, about how Carr had a rocket! for an arm and in one drill kept nailing this bull's-eye on a target; how, yeah, the damn CBA won't let him work with his QB right now, but Gruden brought his tapes along so he can watch Carr installing a hurry-up on the fly, see him adjusting to six different slot combinations, see him just grinding.

"Unbelievable," Gruden says. "I like him. Family man, married, two kids. He's just got it. He's alive."

And that's the moment I realized: Yeah, I'll steal that story idea. Football god arrives, mad and glad and hair on fire. And Gruden is right, it shouldn't be told with paper and ink. The entire thing needs to play out in high definition, week after lunatic week, loud and in living color.

Exclusive Q&A with Raiders' Jon Gruden: His first 30 days in office

By Jerry McDonald

February 14, 2018

ALAMEDA — Jon Gruden has thrown himself into personnel evaluation and reconstructing systems of offense, defense and special teams since being hired as the Raiders' head coach a little over a month ago.

Gruden took a break Wednesday in an exclusive interview with the Bay Area News Group to talk about what has transpired since Jan. 11.

Topics included the process of assembling a staff, his disdain for restrictions of the collective bargaining agreement, his thoughts on players such as Derek Carr, Marshawn Lynch, Khalil Mack and Michael Crabtree and whether the hiring of offensive line coach Tom Cable signifies a commitment to zone-scheme running.

Q: What have you been able to accomplish in your first month on the job?

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Gruden: It's been a little like Groundhog Day. You get up, it's dark, you leave it's dark. You do the same thing over and over again. Spent a long time, really, entertaining potential coaches, interviewing coaches, trying to find the best nucleus that we can find. We're looking for compatibility, trying to find different types of guys from different places. Trying to get everybody on the same page is not an easy thing to do.

No. 2, we evaluated our current players, and it takes awhile to study each player.

No. 3, we looked at our salary cap situation, obviously. And then start to meet and a scheme together. How to get everybody coordinated. How do we put the ball in play, what are we calling formations? What are we calling different blitzes and personnel groupings. It's been an ongoing process.

The last four or five days, we've really focused on some specific free agents that will be available when free agency begins. It's been a grind.

Q: Coaches have in their mind a list of potential assistants. You can't get them all, some are under contract with other teams. But did you come close?

Gruden: A lot of the guys I coached with are head coaches now or coaching at different places. I feel great about the guys we were able to get. Rich Bisaccia is some I've got history with. Edgar Bennett (wide receivers), Mike Trgovac (defensive line), I've got a lot of history with those guys. Have a lot of people that I know well. Paul Guenther (defensive coordinator), I have history with him and am really excited to get guys like Tom Cable (offensive line). I think Derrek Ansley (secondary) is going to be a star in this profession. Going to be a great secondary coach. Really excited to get him. And Tom Shaw, our strength coach, is very established in this business and he's going to change the way we've done things here and hopefully our players respond to it. I really like the guys that we've assembled.

Q: How different is the process of putting together a team than it was 20 years ago when Al Davis hired you?

Gruden: It's a different process because of the salary cap. The salary cap is a big deal, no question. Guys now are making $20 million, some guys are making $25 million a year. So you have to be mindful of the salary cap a little bit more. I think the biggest thing is the collective bargaining agreement. You're not allowed to be with your players. Some genius thought that would be great, that we're not even allowed to talk to our players. So that's been a big challenge. Changing the way you put together your offseason program, the way you put together training camp, as you consider all the changes in the collective bargaining agreement that was put in place.

Q: With contact that limited what can you say to players? You talked at the press conference about looking forward to meeting Marshawn Lynch . . .

Gruden: You're not allowed to do anything. You're not allowed to coach your players. I've called several players, introduced myself. I think that's legal. I'm not having contact with everybody. I've had people call me to tell me that Marshawn Lynch didn't show up to a meeting that we had. I mean, there's a lot of stuff out there that's being written that's not even true. We're not allowed to have any real contact. It's pretty clear on what the rules are. All you've got to do is read 'em.

Q: Is it driving you crazy at all that it's still going to be awhile until you can actually set foot on a field and coach players?

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Gruden: I hate it, personally. When I was out of coaching, I had players come and visit me to help them with getting their football fix. A lot of these guys want to work. A lot of these guys are dying to work. And a lot of these men have hired independent coaches to help them work. But the big thing is, I just want to start having relationships with these guys, learn what makes them tick. What motivates them. How they learn. The only way you can learn is by being with people but there's some geniuses out there that have put together this formula and we're going to certainly abide by the rules.

Q: Do you think Lynch will be on the roster this year?

Gruden: I don't know. I bumped into him. Some of these players that live locally do come to the facility to get a workout, see the trainer. I've been downstairs and met several guys. I have talked to Marshawn briefly. We'll see. We'll keep everybody posted. Right now, he's our leading ballcarrier. He's our back, and we're counting on him. Hopefully we get an opportunity to work together. That's a man that has a lot of respect in this league as a player and I certainly have respect for him also.

Q: Had much contact with Derek Carr?

Gruden: No. I mean, you're not allowed to have contact with guys, really. You can bump into a guy and say, I'm looking forward to working with you, but that will hopefully come whenever the rules allow that.

Q: Does Tom Cable's hiring signify the Raiders will be a zone-scheme team when it comes to running the ball?

Gruden: No. I think Cable's background is one of the outside zone, the inside zone, but he's also a very versatile coach. He's proven that. He can run gap schemes. He's going to run what we're good at running. If we have a good back, and some good linemen and a tight end and a fullback, we'll have a good running game with Tom Cable. But we've got to get the components in place so he can be all he can be. That's something we're working on right now. He's a versatile coach, certainly he's an expert in the zone scheme and I'm excited about that, but there's a lot of ways he's run the ball in his background.

Q: You've pretty much stayed underground the past month in terms of interviews and the like, but in your time out in the community, what has the reception been like with Raider fans?

Gruden: It's been really cool. I mean, I've only been out a couple of times. You come to work it's dark, you go home it's dark. You just try and get caught up on sleep and I haven't really gone out much. But I've got a lot of respect and love for the Raider fans. I can't wait to get out and mingle with 'em, but right now I'm just trying to stay submerged and focused on what I've got to do. Pretty soon we'll be heading to the combine.

Q: You went back to Florida for a bit . . . did you close the Fired Football Coaches of America offices?

Gruden: I had to go back to Florida for a few days to say good bye to my friends. I had to move a lot of my equipment here. I have a lot of film, a lot of notebooks, a lot of information that was in the FFCA headquarters that I had to get moved to California and I had to close down the doors. It was painful.

Q: There are so many things you probably want to implement that you've learned over the last several years, how do you layer those things in?

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Gruden: We've got to learn about our personnel. We've got to resolve a lot of issues with this roster right now and that's what we're working on. We're going to put in the core, the roots, the foundation of our system on offense, defense and special teams. But obviously personnel will have a lot to do about which way we go. But we'll have versatile scheme that allows us to do different things. But right now we're really focused at looking at our team and how we can somehow improve.

Q: You said at initial press conference it wasn't the time to go over the roster because you'd just been hired. Now that you've had a month to look at the roster, what excites you about it?

Gruden: I think we've got a great young quarterback. I think that's enough to be excited about. I think a lot of our center. I think the quarterback-center (Rodney Hudson) battery is as good as I've ever had in football. I'm really excited about the two guards (Kelechi Osemele, Gabe Jackson), obviously. That's the strength of this team. And Khalil Mack, I think he's a proven superstar football player. I think the excitement around working with Amari Cooper is just certainly pretty cool. I got to bump into Crabtree. Hopefully we can get the best out of Crabtree and his career. There's some people in place, but we've got a number of issues that are concerning right now and we're focusing on them.

Q: Your first days back, as you went to the office you were in before, were there moments where you had to pinch yourself?

Gruden: Every day I go in the offensive staff meeting I'm thinking Fred Biletnikoff is going to be walking in with a cigarette. I see Willie Brown walking around here. A lot of the employees are still here. So there is some deja vu that is striking at times. But I'm really focused on what we have to do. We have to lay a foundation, we've got get moving, we've got to get going, we've got to get better. There's an urgency that I like and I think it's spreading rapidly.

Q: Have you found a place to live?

Gruden: I'm near where I was before. It's a little further commute than I recall. Traffic has certainly picked up. I used to get up at 3:17. Now I'm probably going to have to get up at 2:17. I'm going to have to figure something out because I'm a terrible driver.

Jon Gruden drawing on his past in return to Raiders

By Matt Kawahara

July 30, 2018

Jon Gruden has been delving deep into his football background as he installs the offense for his second go-around as the Raiders' head coach.

Way, way deep.

Tight end Jared Cook was talking about Gruden on Monday when he said meetings this offseason have included "things about not only current football, but old football that I hadn't learned in my 10 years in the league." Cook was asked what exactly he meant by "older."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Man, he’s bringing up film from like 1976, when you didn’t even think they had film,” Cook said. “Like grainy film where you can barely see the players. But he has that knowledge.”

Receiver Amari Cooper agreed some of Gruden’s teaching materials aren’t exactly high-definition quality.

“He has plays that he’s seen 20 years ago that he still remembers and he knows that still work,” Cooper said. “And it’s been cool, man. He’s been pulling up film from a long time ago. You can’t really see it that good, but it works.”

The image of Gruden changing film reels is bound to stir echoes of his tongue-in-cheek comments at the NFL combine, when he poked fun at analytics and joked he was trying to “throw the game back to 1998.” Some who took the comments seriously chided Gruden for being unwilling to embrace advances in the game after a decade in broadcasting.

Gruden has since clarified his stance on technology a few times, including Friday, when asked about it on the first day of training camp. “You have to sift through what is better,” he said, “and what is new.”

In other words, Gruden doesn’t uniformly discount analytics and other advances because they are new. He also won’t discard methods from his past just because they are old.

“He’s been in the league since he was a kid,” Cook said. “So everything you’re seeing and everything he’s teaching you, the plays he’s teaching you, the things he’s putting in, are things from his background. Not only current background, but predate ’87. Which is when I was born.”

One question that circled after Gruden’s hiring was whether, at 54, he’d be able to relate to players the way he did as a younger coach. Far from alienating his current team, Cook said, he thinks Gruden’s teaching tactics are opening eyes.

“There are actually plays that we’re putting in and schemes that we’re running that are older schemes,” Cook said. “He’s bringing players in to talk to us. (Former tight end) Rickey Dudley has been a huge influence on me. ... I’m in his ear asking him questions because he’s been part of this offense, so he knows. It’s things like that Gruden is introducing us to that we never had before. It’s pretty awesome.”

Scenes from a bar with Jon Gruden and nearly 600 Raiders fans

By Paul Gutierrez

July 23, 2018

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. -- At 5:12 p.m. PT on Friday, with some Raiders fans having tailgated for nearly 10 hours, Jon Gruden arrived.

Gruden, 20 years after his rookie season as an NFL head coach and 16 years after he last donned the Silver and Black, threw a raucous party for Raider Nation at Ricky’s Sports Theatre and Grill, the prodigal son not only returning to the streets of Silver and Blackdom but also footing the bill for fans while whipping them into a frenzy.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Several times.

"Life is very short," Gruden told the crowd inside the 5,000-square-foot establishment, after being introduced by Raiders tribute band RaiderHed.

"Very few times in life do you get a chance to reunite with your family and your friends like we are here tonight. Now it's time to do something with this opportunity. All of us. We've got to work together. Let's have some fun. I love you guys."

The feeling remains mutual.

The connection between Gruden, whose previous four-year stint in Oakland included two playoff showings with an AFC title game appearance, and Raiders fans, who had been yearning for his return since owner Al Davis traded him to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in 2002, is palpable.

Fans arrived in Ricky's parking lot at 7 a.m., said the establishment's owner, Tina Ricardo. The doors did not open until 4 p.m.

"He's like Elvis," she said of Gruden. "He's Elvis to them. They want to touch him, feel him, be around him."

There was no cover charge for the event, which included live and DJ music, and Gruden paid for dinner (a choice of a hamburger, a chicken sandwich or a shredded pork sandwich with corn on the cob and a nonalcoholic drink) for every fan who came. It was a mashup of a college football pep rally, family reunion and backyard barbecue.

Yes, the smell from a grill can spark nostalgia.

"The fans, the support, it's all about Raider Nation," said Keegan Matthewson, a fan from nearby Vallejo who attended.

When Gruden arrived, he was ushered into a VIP room awash in Raiders alumni. He blew through like a silver-and-black-clad tempest, exchanging hugs and handshakes with Cliff Branch, Lester Hayes, George Atkinson, Mervyn Fernandez, Art Thoms, Raymond Chester, Jerry Robinson, Charlie Smith and Kenny Shedd.

"Let's get this party started, man," Gruden growled as he entered the fray outside, a pseudo-amphitheater set up in the parking lot, the crowd chanting "Chu-cky, Chu-cky, Chu-cky," while he took the stage next to his son Mike, the event's DJ.

Outside in the heat, Gruden exhorted the crowd in a sing-song "Rai-ders, Rai-ders, Rai-ders" chant and then turned his phone toward the fans, recording them so he could show the team.

"There's nobody like you," Gruden told the gathering. "It's great to be back, man."

While Gruden did not make any specific promises -- the alumni did that for him -- he did give a scouting report of his team, calling Carr "one hell of a quarterback," saying the Raiders' interior offensive line was "as good as there is in football," rallying the crowd by saying, "Just to make the

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Kansas City Chiefs real mad, we signed Derrick Johnson” and insisting the Raiders would “find a way” to retain All-Pro edge rusher Khalil Mack, who held out of mandatory minicamp in June.

Then Gruden turned the mic over to Raiders general manager Reggie McKenzie, who said, “We’re going to do everything we can to give y’all what y’all want.”

Um, a Super Bowl title?

Yeah, Branch said Gruden would deliver a Lombardi trophy to Oakland in the next “two years,” and Hayes, in his deep baritone and Southern Baptist preacher-like cadence, advised the congregation to, “Thank Jesus for Mark Davis, because he hired coach Gruden.”

When Gruden, drenched in sweat, left the stage for the sanctity of air conditioning and the VIP room, it took a while for him to get there. He signed autographs -- footballs, helmets, pictures and Chucky dolls. Painting of himself next to Chucky? Done. He took numerous selfies with the adoring throng before he was ushered off by team security.

He would later make more rounds with the crowd, tossing T-shirts to patrons, joining the band on its stage and, yes, even introducing team owner Davis to the crowd.

The gathered fans enjoyed every bit of it, even when Gruden introduced Davis.

And yet ...

There was a tinge of bittersweet in the air. As exciting as the rally was, the fact the team is leaving the Bay Area for Las Vegas in 2020 hung over everything.

“I’m heartbroken, like my mom and dad split up and I’m stuck in the middle,” Raiders fan character Gorilla Rilla said. “We’re the kid between the owner and business. My heart was broken, but I’ve got to keep moving. I’m still a Raider fan, and I’ll be pounding my chest to the beat of the Silver and Black, baby.”

It was a small sample size, but every fan ESPN spoke to insisted he or she would continue to follow the team after the move, some saying they had already bought their PSLs and season tickets for the under-construction stadium south of the Vegas Strip.

“It’s an unusual combination,” said Mike Villa Jr., a fan in town from southern Nevada. “I am Raider Nation and a Las Vegas native. After the Golden Knights, what they’ve done, it’s a simmering boil -- everyone’s excited. Raider Nation, we’re global, so it’s a worldwide thing. The desert and the Bay, we’re related. At the end of the day, we’re all Raiders.

“I had to be here at Ricky’s. If you’re a Raider fan, you have to be here. It’s a must.”

Indeed, Ricky’s, once voted the No. 2 sports bar in the country by Sports Illustrated, is a mecca for Raiders fans with its shrine-like ambiance and museum feel. Team memorabilia and photos -- even one of President John F. Kennedy getting a Raiders cap in 1963 -- adorn every nook and cranny of the establishment, which opened in this location on Oct. 19, 1962. It now has more than 100 TVs.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Before DVRs and even home VCRs, Ricky Ricardo Jr., Tina's husband, would record Raiders game on his then-state-of-the-art equipment and send the tapes to Carol Davis, Al Davis' wife and Mark's mother.

Otis Sistrunk and Dave Dalby were regulars at the bar, and many team members showed up a week after the Raiders' Super Bowl XI triumph over the Minnesota Vikings to watch Ricardo's tape of the game, with a beverage or three.

Now you can order an Al Davis Burger, topped, of course, with New York deli pastrami and cheddar; a Freddy Biletnikoff Big Sausage; a Phil Villapiano Spaghetti Bowl; Ken "The Snake" Stabler's steak sandwich; Rod Martin's baby back ribs; or a Jim Plunkett Deluxe BLT.

You can sit in a booth famously reserved for years for the late Davis, or take a picture next to the director's chair with Gruden's name adorned on the back.

Or, if you're feeling especially daring and, ahem, forward-thinking, you can even have a loved one sprinkle your ashes into Ricky's parking lot garden (without the restaurant's prior knowledge, of course). At least three Raiders fans have had this done over the years.

Though he'd seen it all, this event brought a spark to the eyes of Ricky Ricardo, who was rocking his Gruden 317 jersey (the digits signify the time the early-rising Gruden gets up every morning, 3:17 a.m.).

Ricardo was diagnosed with Alzheimer's in January.

"He's lovely," Tina Ricardo said of Gruden. "I know he did that just because he could help out. He's the real deal. He's not going to bulls--- you. He went in the back and took pictures with every single cook."

And Ricky?

"He liked it a lot," Tina said softly. "He had tears in his eyes by the end of the night. It gave him a good shot in the arm."

The Raiders rookies report to Napa Monday, veterans on Thursday, and the first training camp practice of Chucky 2.0 is Friday. The event at Ricky's was a nod to the past with a strong look to the future.

"It was important to reunite with the Raider fans, get in the right frame of mind before training camp starts," Gruden told ESPN.

"I have a lot of responsibility here. I consider this a very important time in my life. And you see the legends that are here today -- Lester Hayes, Cliff Branch -- it's up to us to try to establish our own tradition, and we have a lot of work to do, but it sure helps when you have support."

As singularly focused as Gruden is, he is not oblivious to the coming move to Las Vegas.

"We've got to be honest about our future," he said. "We know what our future is, but we have two seasons left to give these [Oakland] fans what they deserve, and I'm not promising wins or championships or anything, but I do think our team should promise them extreme effort and passion when they step on the field. I think we can prove that shortly.”

Gruden spent about 2½ hours hosting 570 of his closest friends, family and fans and, as more than one reporter noted, if you were there and did not get a picture with him or an autograph, you simply didn’t try hard enough.

And for a second on this evening, Gruden wielded a huge butcher knife, looking just like the demonic doll that has become his namesake, and cut a cake made in his honor that had his snarling visage on it before serving it in the VIP room.

It read: Welcome Back, Coach ... Once a Raider, Always a Raider.

Head Coach Jon Gruden continues to give back to the city of Oakland, and the game of football

By Staff

July 18, 2018

Since Jon Gruden was reintroduced as the Head Coach of the Oakland Raiders in January, it hasn’t taken him very long to reacquaint himself with the Oakland community. Gruden has been very open about his love for Oakland and its residents. Tuesday afternoon, he welcomed a pair of high school football teams – Oakland Tech and McClymonds – to the team’s facility for what they assumed was a tour, but Gruden had more than just a tour waiting for them.

Players and coaches congregated in the Willie Brown Auditorium, and were met by Coach Gruden and representatives from DICK’s Sporting Goods Foundation, who had a video prepared for them to watch. After the introduction, Gruden welcomed the pair of coaches on stage to ask them about the struggles of being a football coach in the Bay Area.

Both of them pointed out the budget cuts, purchasing equipment out of pocket, and the overall lack of resources provided for the kids as the primary issues. As someone who loves the game, Gruden is noticeably quite displeased with the hurdles the coaches and players have to go through. In partnership with DICK’s, Gruden and the Raiders wanted to reward the coaches each with a $15,000 check in an effort to keep the game of football alive and thriving.

The donation caught the coaches by surprise, and McClymonds Head Coach Michael Peters – father of current Los Angeles Ram Marcus Peters - took a moment to share his appreciation.

“It’s huge, you know,” Peters said gratefully. “Our programs in Oakland, you know, been really going down as far as the money. The league has cut budgets, and it really affects the kids, and the coaches. So, right now, we’re coaching just because of the love for the sport. And this [contribution] pays us back for all the effort and the love that we have for the sport. To come here – we didn’t think we were getting anything – just to get a tour, but now to get over 10,000 dollars, that’s huge for our program.”

Gruden wasn’t done there though.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Following his donation to Oakland Tech and McClymonds high schools, the Raiders head coach met with two more youth football teams, the San Leandro Crusaders and the East Bay Panthers at Burrell Field in San Leandro. He gave a quick pep talk, where he once again discussed the importance of football, and all the life lessons it offers. In addition to his pep talk, Gruden surprised yet another group of football teams with a donation, this time for $50,000 each, courtesy of DICK's.

Gruden is adamant about making sure the next generation of football players are ready to carry the torch when it's their time, and his donation, along with DICK's, was a step in that direction.

At the end of the day, the kids are going to have the resources to play the game the way it's supposed to be played, and that's what matters most.

Defensive Backs Coach Derrick Ansley

RAIDERS.COM

DBs Coach Derrick Ansley has admired Coach Gruden from afar, but now he's learning from him up close

By Kyle Martin

August 3, 2018

Jon Gruden has helped shape the way football is talked about and coached, and he's even molded some young assistant coaches into successful head coaches in the NFL, for example, Los Angeles Rams Head Coach Sean McVay.

Whether Gruden is aware of it or not, he's been a major influence on another young coach, his defensive backs coach, Derrick Ansley.

Ansley was born and raised in Tallassee, Ala., just a little over two hours southeast of Tuscaloosa, home of the University of Alabama. When it came time for the 36-year-old coach to attend college, he decided to stay in his home state, and play football at Troy University. For four seasons he played as a defensive back for the Trojans, and earned all-conference honors as a senior.

After earning a bachelors degree in broadcast journalism, Ansley opted to continue his education at the University of Alabama and pursue a master's degree in sports management. Five years later — following coaching stints at Tennessee and Kentucky — Ansley returned to Tuscaloosa, and rejoined the team as the defensive backs coach.

Over the last two years, Ansley has groomed and developed some of the nation's best talent, watching a handful of them get selected in the NFL Draft. It's for this reason, Gruden decided to swoop up the young coach, and add him to his coaching staff. The decision to join the Raiders took some consideration though, but the thought of leaving home for the next step in his career was too good an offer to pass up.

"Obviously, leaving home, being from Alabama, my wife being from Alabama, going to college there, all my family there, that's home," Ansley said. "Yeah, leaving there and coming to the West Coast was something to think about, but when you talk about the Oakland Raiders and the history of defensive backs here, the culture of defense here, and the way I've always believed you should play defense, aggressive, up in your face, and then with Coach Gruden coming back it was a no brainer to come learn from him."

"Always been a big fan of [Coach Gruden], when I became a young coach listening to him speak one day and talk about his video library, and the vast number of things he has in his library motivated me to start [my own], and to build those great examples from all over the place, and have things filed, organized, and be able to teach your players better. I've had my eyes on coach Gruden for a long time. I've never worked with him until now, but he's influenced me as an early coach."

I haven't seen Coach Gruden's full collection of film, but I'd imagine it'd take years upon years for Coach Ansley to replicate it. Learning from one of the best coaches in the sport was certainly a point of interest for Ansley, but the challenge of mentoring men, and helping them take the next step in their lives and careers was something that also excited him.

“Obviously this is the highest level, but coming from college — coming from the SEC — we played at a high level there too. The biggest difference is guys here may have been playing in this league a decade plus,” Ansley said. “You come in here trying to get to know them, and learn what their strengths and weaknesses are, what makes them go, but football is like that at every level. Pop Warner, to JV, high school, and college you’ve got to get to know kids, and men, to get on the same page with them. That’s the biggest thing, is to get to know them, everybody is different, everybody has a different style, everybody takes coaching different, so knowing what buttons to push and maneuver, I think that really helps us get to know these guys.”

In his first season as an NFL coach, Ansley will be tasked with turning a group that struggled to force turnovers last season into a defense that wreaks havoc on opposing quarterbacks. Through Organized Team Activities and the first week and a half of training camp, Ansley is still searching for guys that will rise to the occasion.

Nothing is set in stone just yet.

“We’re working to find out who’s our best five, six, seven guys that can play at a high level,” he said. “And we haven’t figured that out yet.”

As the season progresses, Ansley will only continue building a relationship with his new defensive backs, and growing with the coach he’s admired from afar all these years.

Derrick Ansley tasked with fostering depth, star quality in Raiders secondary

By Scott Bair

NAPA – Derrick Ansley is Alabama born, educated and bred. He grew up in Tallahassee, played safety at Troy and started his coaching career at Division III Huntingdon College in Montgomery.

He joined the University of Alabama staff as a graduate assistant and, after a two-job tour through the SEC, he returned to the Crimson Tide and helped them win a national title.

It was time, at that point, to truly leave his home state.

“I was going to take the defensive coordinator job at Colorado State, and I got a call (from Jon Gruden),” Ansley said. “The plane detoured and I came out west.”

Gruden’s courtship was quick. He texted Ansley Jan. 9, a day after Alabama won the national title. Then he called. Ansley was in Alameda on Jan. 10 to meet Gruden and defensive coordinator Paul Guenther for the first time. They talked ball for a few hours. There was a good vibe. A job was offered. Ansley accepted.

Gruden was a major reason why.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"When you talk about the Oakland Raiders and the history of defensive backs here, and the way I believe you should play defense, it was attractive. I like to play aggressive defense and, with Coach Gruden coming back, it was a no brainer to come learn from him.

"I've always been a big fan. When I became a young coach, I heard him speak one day and heard about his video library motivated me to start one full of great examples. That helps you teach better. I've had my eye on Coach Gruden for a long time. I've never worked with him until now, but he has influenced me as a young coach."

Ansley signed up; then the real work began. He was charged with fostering depth and star quality from the Raiders secondary. Gruden overhauled it this offseason, signing five veteran free agents while drafting another. He wanted better from the frontline and reserves.

Cornerback, in particular, needs injury protection. Rashaan Melvin has never played a full season. Gareon Conley has bad luck with injuries since being drafted No. 24 overall last year. That means Daryl Worley, Nick Nelson, Leon Hall and others must be ready to fill a major role. Ansley must also find the right mix within a competitive safety group.

Bottom line: Ansley has to bring the group together and improve upon years of lackluster pass defense. All that in his first season as NFL coach. Ansley expects a smooth transition to the pros, using a universal approach that works with all ages.

"This is the highest level. We played at a high level in the SEC, too," Ansley said. "The difference between there and here is that guys may have been playing a decade plus. You have to learn what makes them go. Football is like that at every level. You have to get to know kids and men to get on the same page with them. Everybody is different, with different styles. Everybody takes coaching different. Learning what buttons to push really helps us connect with these guys."

It's important Ansley connects with Conley, the roster's most talented cornerback. Their bond started years ago, when Ansley recruited him while at Kentucky. It has grown here this offseason thanks to a holistic approach that focuses on the player and person, and can help while Conley's recovering from a hip strain.

"Gareon's a relationship-type guy," Ansley said. "He's a quiet guy off the field. Once he opens up to you, gets to know you, you can see the bright-eyed kid. The first thing I did once I got here was get to know him as a man and not worry about the football part of it. I knew him in high school and in college. He was a great player at (Ohio's Massillon High), great player at Ohio State. He has a history of being a dominant player.

"He has had a string of injuries. That happens some times. His confidence is not shook. We need to get him back on the grass. His best medicine is playing football. He needs to get back out here, and he's working overtime. Last night in meetings he told me he's getting treatment 18 hours per day. That's good."

Ansley's 36 years old, and must find ways to bond with young players and veterans nearly his age. Reggie Nelson, for example, just a year younger.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"The age may be close, but the veterans want to be coached," Ansley said. "We coach them all the same. We nitpick every technique. At the end of the day, defensive back is a reactionary position. It's a one-step, misstep position that can cause a big play. We have to be sound at all times."

Gruden believes his defensive backs coach will help players do that. He said in an interview with Bay Area News Group that Ansley "will be a star in this profession."

He has lofty goals in this profession, and hopes to rise through the ranks in time. That isn't the primary objective right now.

"When you work, you want to get promoted and move up," Ansley said. "My goal now is getting this secondary to be good and ready to play. You ultimately get judged on wins and losses. Those are great compliments from Coach Gruden. I appreciate that, but we're going to be judged by how we do on the grass. We need team success. We need to win."

Offensive Line Coach Tom Cable

THE ATHLETIC

Tom Cable is ready to mess with the Raiders' players, and they're loving it

By Vic Tafur

June 15, 2018

It didn't hit Tom Cable until he got off his flight at the Oakland Airport and got in the car to go to the Raiders' facility back in January.

"There was a couple of opportunities and I wasn't sure about this one," the team's former head coach and new offensive line coach said Thursday. "Once I got off the plane, it was like being at home.

"I really think from the car ride over from the airport to here, it was great peace."

At peace with returning to Alameda for the first time since he was fired as head coach in January 2011, which was followed by then-owner Al Davis eviscerating him in an hour-long news conference, as new coach Hue Jackson and his family squirmed in the first row.

Jon Gruden, another former Raiders head coach that Davis actually traded away, brought Cable back. They both had some unfinished business.

"When I left here, I left here and I didn't want to," Cable said. "That's just the truth. I put that team back and got it up off the mat."

The Raiders were 8-8 in 2010, their first non-losing season since 2003, and a proud Cable told the players after the season finale in Kansas City, "We're not losers anymore!"

The players loved it. Davis hated it, and he didn't like Cable to begin with.

Cable went to Seattle and won a Super Bowl ring as offensive line coach and assistant head coach. The Seahawks fired him this January while rebooting their coaching staff and roster after a disappointing season.

Gruden came calling, and Cable was ready.

"It was really kind of natural and a comfortable decision to be back and wear these colors again," Cable said.

He bleeds the Silver and Black, just like Gruden.

"This has been my team since I was a little boy, so it's not like it changed because I got run out of town," Cable said. "It probably just made it a little bit deeper for me, which is cool. That's why I'm here."

He is having fun with Gruden — the two often do Davis impersonations watching game film — and is not surprised that players have bought in so quickly.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“He has a really cool system,” Cable said of Gruden. “He has a really dynamic way of doing things every day, which I think is fresh and very refreshing for those of us who have been involved in the game in his absence.

“It’s been, I think, a lot of fun. It’s been the right kind of work. There’s a real vision here, and I think that’s important.”

Unlike many of the coaches on Gruden’s new staff who were waiting for the call for years, Cable said he didn’t really know Gruden that well.

“I’d see him when he’d come do Monday night games, and just knew who he was,” Cable said. “He knew who I was, and that’s really about it. I think the connection, at least for me, is he loves ball like I love ball. He’s intense about it.”

The two finally got a chance to sit down after last season, and Cable was “shocked” by how well the two hit it off.

The interview “was really refreshing. It was exciting,” Cable said. “He loves his football team like I do. Regardless of what the past had been for either one of us, there’s a little bit of Raider blood in both of us.”

Some of that blood was spilled when Davis took Cable apart at that news conference. The late owner fined Cable $120,000 for turmoil caused by a 2009 training camp fight with assistant coach Randy Hanson — Cable allegedly broke his jaw — as well as accusations of physical abuse against Cable’s ex-wife and ex-girlfriend. No charges were ever filed.

Davis also blasted Cable for having his girlfriend spend the night on the day before road games, and said he would have 86’d Cable even if the Raiders had made the playoffs that season.

No matter, Cable never addressed the owner’s comments and said that he still holds Davis in high esteem.

“My respect for him is unblemished,” Cable said. “I think that’s where people would say, ‘Why aren’t you bitter?’ Well, because you see for me, it’s different. He’s a teacher to me. He’s a mentor to me. Whether I get along with him or not, wasn’t the issue.

“I took so much from him. To have the opportunity to come back and help make this right, like the vision I had earlier ... and to help Jon see this through the right way, that’s pretty powerful to me.”

Cable inherits an interior offensive line that has Pro Bowl stars in guard Kelechi Osemele, center Rodney Hudson and left tackle Donald Penn, and perhaps a future one in guard Gabe Jackson.

They weren’t as dominant last season as they were in 2016, and Osemele said they needed more tough love than what they got from Mike Tice last year.

“With Cable it’s definitely one of those things where it’s a challenge and a strain mentally, he kinda wants to try and ‘dick with you’ as he would say,” Osemele said Wednesday. “Like kind of mess with you a little bit.”

Cable will throw in trick questions to make sure his players are studying the playbook.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"With Tice it was just kind of, you know, straightforward, coaching guys," Osemele said. "Maybe a little bit of babying here and there, but ... just like tough coaching from Cable."

Spare the tough guy jokes due to Cable's past. Gruden said he is more than that.

"Usually the tough coaches, they help develop tough lines," Gruden said. "The thing I love about Cable is he's a great teacher. He can go down and sit in an offensive line meeting for 30 minutes and he can coach about three days of information."

"He's always ready, he's sharp, and he's a good teacher, he's into it every day, and he's a tough guy. We like him."

Cable is spending a lot of time in the classroom and on the field with rookie tackles Kolton Miller and Brandon Parker. He pushed hard for Miller in the first round, and has liked what he was seen — even though little matters until the players put pads on at training camp.

"It's not too big for him," Cable said of Miller. "He's looked just fine. He's kind of put an exclamation point on our choosing of him. What I saw in him was a lot of really good characteristics of a left tackle. He's very athletic. He's very smart. For a tall kid, he can really bend. ..."

"He has a quiet toughness to him that I think has really shown up a lot. His consistency already as a young player in spring football has been amazing."

Another consistent player here this spring and early summer was one of Cable's biggest fans in Seattle — running back Marshawn Lynch.

"We had a blast," Cable said of Lynch. "We did something really magical to go to two Super Bowls. We win one. Should've won the second one. ..."

"He's one of the smartest football players I've ever known. I don't hand that one out very often. ... He was phenomenal in the locker room as a leader in Seattle. I see the same characteristics going on here."

Lynch has been splitting first-team carries with Doug Martin, but Cable is confident he can get the Lynch from the second half of last season and not the first half.

"To be back together will give him a chance to dust himself off from kind of an up-and-down year last year," Cable said. "Didn't really look like his old self until the last six weeks, I thought. Put him in something that he can rev it up and be who he is."

Meanwhile, cornerback Gareon Conley missed the last two days of the three-day minicamp with a tweaked groin. Gruden didn't seem too concerned, so all the Raiders fans pulling their hair out can stop. The players are off for six weeks of fun before training camp starts July 26. Gruden is headed to the hospital for elbow surgery on Friday. It's an old injury from his first stint with the Raiders ... we'll let him tell the story:

"I can't straighten my right arm anymore, and it's been sore the last few years. Mo Collins, one of my old offensive guards knocked me sideways and I landed on my elbow, so I had to get surgery. ... "I was simulating Junior Seau in an A-gap. We missed a couple gap calls against the Chargers and Mo got me."

Defensive Coordinator Paul Guenther

NBC SPORTS BAY AREA

Paul Guenther adept teaching Raiders to play new style of defense

By Scott Bair

August 7, 2018

NAPA – Paul Guenther breaks the offseason and training camp into three phases. He installs the new Raiders defense in each one. Repetition, it seems, leads to mastery.

The last phase starts in training camp, but the final installation runs unlike the previous two.

Lectures are over. In Napa, students become the teacher. Guenther randomly calls players to the front of the class to decipher plays and call out the adjustments required to make them work well.

Guenther's teaching methods have worked well. Scheme retention was strong following a summer off, a positive that allowed the Raiders to hit the ground running in training camp.

That's no easy task. Guenther's defense is vast, loaded with plays that include deception and disguise. It's well respected, with a long track record of success. It doesn't matter, Guenther says, if he can't transfer his knowledge to those who execute.

"Football is a simple game made complicated by coaches," Guenther said on this week's Raiders Insider Podcast. "You have to teach the system in a way that all 11 guys understand everyone else is doing. You can't exist in the little world of your position group. They have to know how others fit around them. If they understand why I'm making calls, and what everyone is supposed to do, then they can make in-game adjustments on Sundays. We need to be fast-minded. The only way you can play fast is to have the system down."

Players rave about Guenther the teacher. Derrick Johnson called him a mastermind. Leon Hall says players learn well because he can identify with every position group.

Marcus Gilchrist enters the season with his fourth team and fifth defensive coordinator. The safety knows the importance of getting a message across, and considers Guenther great at it.

"Probably one of the best ones I've been around in my eight years," he said. "Getting guys to understand whatever their role is on this defense or a certain coverage, whatever scheme that it is, probably the best that I've been around at getting guys to learn a scheme and being able to teach it the right way."

Guenther can sense when somebody doesn't get it, even when they're unwilling to raise a hand.

"If there's a look of uncertainty on your face or in your body language, he's going to see it and help you understand it," weakside linebacker Tahir Whitehead said. "He's not just going to give you a coaching point and then back off and expect you to have it. He wants you to think the way he's thinking. He wants us to take ownership of the scheme."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

The scheme works. It came from Marvin Lewis and Mike Zimmer in Cincinnati and refined by Guenther the past four seasons.

Zimmer was his biggest influence, someone who helped establish his own defensive philosophy.

"He's incredibly smart," Zimmer said in March. "He was able to add to the things we did in Cincinnati, and was creative finding new ways to get the job done."

Guenther thrived on his own, after Zimmer left to become Minnesota's head coach in 2014. The Bengals finished in the top half in scoring defense each year under Guenther, with two campaigns in the top 10.

The Raiders, by contrast, never finished above 20th in that same span.

Guenther is equal parts tactician, motivator and college professor, with a track record of success unknown in these parts over the last decade.

Head coach Jon Gruden has given Guenther relative autonomy over the defense, with control to implement the scheme and arrange the depth chart. Guenther had a chance to leave Cincinnati in 2014, with offers to join Zimmer in Minnesota or Jay Gruden in Washington. He stayed home then, but felt it time to move on with Jon Gruden came calling. Guenther was part of the Gruden package, and is an integral part of this coaching staff.

Guenther and Jon Gruden are close friends, but have developed a rivalry that ratchets up practice intensity.

"Coach Gruden is on me all the time instilling that, 'I want to kick Coach Guenther's butt every day,'" quarterback Derek Carr said. "I think he wants to embarrass us as well. That little rivalry, that little work is the same. But you'll see us all three at dinner together – we're a team – but it definitely helps us come the season.

"...Ask any quarterback in the NFL, Coach Guenther is one of the best in the NFL and it's not even close. He gives you the most problems, he presents the most challenges, he makes you think more than anybody. He's one of the best and I'm glad he's here."

Guenther doesn't blitz much but disguises his intentions well and works to find favorable matchups for his best players. He wants to establish a tough defense that knows its stuff. That's why teaching the scheme right in the offseason and training camp is vital to regular-season success.

"We're going to be a physical team," Guenther said. "When you come to play the Raiders, you'd better pack a lunch pail. We're going to be smart situationally, we're going to create turnovers and we're going to get after the quarterback. I grew up watching the old Raiders defenses. I'm trying to get us back to that."

Strength and Conditioning Assistant Kelsey Martinez

LAS VEGAS REVIEW-JOURNAL

Kelsey Martinez strengthens Raiders as 1st female assistant coach

By Michael Gehlken

August 5, 2018

NAPA, Calif. — She wore a black hooded sweatshirt and black pants when pacing the Raiders' practice field. Her brown hair sat in a ponytail, a whistle in her right hand. She monitored the dynamic-stretching technique of 80-plus NFL players, all of whom awaited her next call.

"Stride forward." They strode.

"Backward run." They ran.

"Three-step cuts." They cut.

This is Kelsey Martinez at work. On the football field, she says, she seldom thinks about any trail she's blazed. But there have been conversations with Raiders coaches, men who have daughters. They've thanked her for embodying how their girls can do whatever they want in life.

"That's when it started to hit: 'Oh, wow. This is a big deal,' " Martinez said. "To be an inspiration for them is huge to me."

Martinez is an example of how initiative and work ethic can lead to an NFL opportunity at age 26. She also happens to be a woman. Part of an organization that has broken race and gender barriers in its history, the strength and conditioning assistant is the Raiders' first female assistant coach.

Martinez joined in March and is nearly two weeks into her first training camp.

She seems to have acclimated well to the Raiders — and they to her.

Some players worked with Martinez before her arrival. Of those in camp, nose tackle Justin Ellis, defensive end Bruce Irvin, outside linebacker James Cowser and defensive end Shakir Soto have conducted offseason training at Tom Shaw Performance at ESPN Wide World of Sports in Orlando.

Martinez worked for four years under Shaw, whom she said "treats me like a daughter" and is "the closest thing to a father figure to me." Shaw now coordinates the Raiders' strength and conditioning department. She credits the mentor for the respect and support received, be it in Florida or here in California.

But she is plenty responsible for that reception, too.

Martinez can stand on her own merit. For example, Cowser credits her for refining his sprint technique. Once in Orlando, she watched his movement and suggested focus on pushing off the ground more with his feet when he explodes to run. Cowser did so and followed with his best recorded time on the drill, he said.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"She's super awesome," Cowser, 27, said. "I mean, there's a reason I went to Tom Shaw in the offseason, right? When I first met her, from the beginning, she opens her mouth, and you instantly know she knows what she's talking about. It's the same reaction here with all the guys. At first glance, you're like, 'Wow, that's a woman.' And then they start talking, and it's, 'Oh, that's a coach.' You know what I mean? It's that instant switch of, 'Oh, that's interesting,' to, 'Oh, I need to get my feet up.'"

"It instantly becomes business, and that's what it's all about. I think that's a testament to her and who she is because she's able to get us to switch into work mode. We don't think about male-female whatever. It's just business and how can we get better."

'You can't limit yourself'

Martinez grew up in Pueblo, Colorado.

A softball standout, she played outfield at Bethany College in Lindsborg, Kansas, before transferring closer to home. She ultimately earned a Bachelor degree in Exercise Science from Colorado State University, but her education continued under Shaw's tutelage.

This offseason, the Raiders have noticed results from their strength and conditioning department. Perhaps no position group exemplifies this more than offensive line, a group that collectively struggled this spring to keep up with the pace that coach Tom Cable dictated during individual drills.

Tackle David Sharpe, guard Jordan Simmons and guard Denver Kirkland are among those who followed a personalized plan, lost weight and showed improvement in camp.

Martinez is focused on inspiring such success stories. Yet, she inspires more.

Running backs coach Jemal Singleton and his wife have a young daughter. He has thanked Martinez for being an example to her. Months ago, special teams coordinator Rich Bisaccia had dinner with different members of the strength and conditioning staff, including Martinez and Shaw.

He thanked her, too.

"I have five sisters, and I have three daughters," Bisaccia said. "For them to be able to, along with all other females, see that she's accomplished this goal is going to give them a chance to realize, 'Wow, this is a path I can take.' ...She carries herself extremely professionally. She's incredibly knowledgeable in what she's trying to teach these guys. She hasn't missed a beat with the players. ..."

"Once a pro player feels like you're knowledgeable and you can help them get better, they're going to listen to you. And I feel like with Kelsey, that was evident right away, not only to the coaches but certainly to the players."

For the New York Jets, Lee Brandon is widely credited as having become the NFL's first female strength and conditioning assistant. That was 1990.

All these years later, an NFL weight room remains a male-dominated setting. None of the league's other 31 teams have a woman listed on their strength and conditioning staff, according to the directory page posted on each club's website.

A message accompanies Martinez' journey.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

It can apply to any gender.

“Don’t create limits on yourself,” Martinez said. “There’s many excuses or whatever that can be made, but at the end of the day, what do you love to do? I was able to find what I love to do, and that’s working for Jon Gruden every day. ‘Do you love football?’ That’s his number one question. Do you love football? Do you love what you do? Why limit yourself or who you are if that’s what you want?”

“I didn’t let that try to ever stop me. More than anything, I’m thinking of how young I am coming in here versus me being a girl. You can’t limit yourself.”

Why going to Haiti is important for Raiders' Derek Carr

By Anthony Galaviz

April 18, 2018

Derek Carr and three of his former Oakland Raiders teammates visited Haiti for a couple days in March on a humanitarian mission.

This was the second time Carr has gone to the impoverished island nation. He works with the Love A Child missionary organization that he lauded for being reputable.

"I've met some of the most wonderful people I've ever met in my entire life," Carr told his YouTube viewers. "Here at Love A Child you know where absolutely everything goes: It goes back to the Haitian people. It's a rare thing but a beautiful thing and that's why I come back. Another reason why I come back is to show the love of Christ."

He first made the trip in 2016, but skipped last year because he was recovering from a fractured fibula. This time, Carr and crew arrived on March 22 in Fond Parisien.

Joining Carr on the trip were Latavius Murray of the Minnesota Vikings, Jamize Olawale of the Dallas Cowboys, Taiwan Jones of the Buffalo Bills and Carr's friend Brandon Jones.

The players played soccer with children and distributed bibles, and Carr did a little preaching.

On a food line, the players kept serving bowls of rice until everyone in the community had eaten. Carr said it was the first time the Haitians had been served hot meals in three weeks.

Carr and crew found out how life is in Haiti when they walked on rocks with no shoes. "This is how a lot of these people live in the villages," he said.

Carr plans to return to Haiti in 2019 and is looking forward to interacting with the people through David George World Ministries.

"Visit David George World Ministries and you can send money and I promise you I put my name on it every cent will go to the precious people in Haiti that's why I continue to go with him," he said. "That's why I continue to go to Love A Child in Fond Parisien, Haiti, because everything that my wife and I have ever given there, we have seen with our own eyes where it's gone and we promise it'll go to the precious people that live there in the villages."

Meet Michigan DT Maurice Hurst, the All-American Uber driver

By Nick Baumgardner

October 21, 2017

Believe it or not, he's not always recognized.

During the 2016 offseason, after Jim Harbaugh encouraged players to get summer jobs, Maurice Hurst figured he'd pick up some extra cash by working on his own schedule.

Michigan's 282-pound defensive tackle became an Uber driver.

He still does it, actually. At last count, Hurst had 82 five-star ratings — and one four-star mark from someone who must have missed the memo, or just had no idea who he was.

"I'm the best Uber driver in Ann Arbor," Hurst proudly declared earlier this week.

He might also be the best interior defensive lineman in college football.

After contemplating a chance to enter the NFL draft last spring, Hurst committed himself to evolve from a part-time playmaker to a near every-down force.

So far, so good.

Hurst earned a near-perfect grade of 98 from Pro Football Focus for his 10-tackle performance two weeks ago against Michigan State.

Hurst scored a national-best 97.4 last week against Indiana.

Nose tackles aren't supposed to be noticed. But Hurst is tough to miss. Entering Saturday's game at Penn State, he had 31 tackles (seven for loss) and three sacks though six games this season. He's pushed himself into the first-round conversation for the 2018 NFL draft and is the anchor for what has been one of the country's best defenses.

"He's very explosive," said Michigan defensive line coach Greg Mattison, who has mentored Hurst throughout his Michigan career. "(But) the thing I'm proud of him is he's been a good leader and he's worked very hard. The guys look up to him. You want guys like that to have the reward of playing like this."

It always seemed like a matter of time before Hurst asserted himself in this way.

He came to Michigan as a solid recruit — the No. 256-ranked player in the 2013 class — but he was a rather unique prospect as an interior lineman. While plenty of top-end tackles push the 300-pound mark, Hurst was a bit on the small side, as he's been around 280 pounds for most of his college career.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

When Mattison and Brady Hoke first started recruiting him at Xaverian Brothers High School in Westwood, Mass., he was about 250 pounds and was moonlighting as a fullback. And not just as a short-yardage option. He once took a handoff 75 yards for a touchdown.

Burst always has been a strength for Hurst.

"I practiced against Mo a lot, he was a scout team guy back when I was starting at center so I went against him every day," said former Michigan center Jack Miller. "He's freakishly explosive. He's very, very fast-twitch and that's something you look for at every position in the game of football. ... You feel the difference with a guy like that, he always gave us fits in practice.

"(Earlier in his career), he was undersized. At a young age, if you could glob onto him, the older guys were just stronger than him at the time. But now, credit to him and the strength staff, that's not the case. When bigger guys still try to swallow him up, he has that overall strength to bull-rush and get through it. He's playing at an All-American level."

Hurst has been an all-business performer for the Wolverines along the defensive line since contributing in spots as a redshirt freshman in 2014.

Michigan finished No. 16 against the run in 2015 and No. 15 last season. Prior to Saturday's games at Penn State, the Wolverines had the No. 1-ranked defense in terms of total yards.

The most consistent part of all these groups? Hurst.

"I'm happy he's on my side," Michigan sophomore Rashan Gary said earlier this season.

A beast, an anchor, a run-stopper, a pass-rusher.

You can call Maurice Hurst anything you'd like. By the end of the year, the phrase "All-American" might be included.

By this time next year, he won't have to be known as an Uber driver. He'll be counting his cash in the NFL, instead.

"Part of the reason why I came back was to put myself in this position, to maybe get drafted as high as possible," Hurst said. "You play football since you were a little kid and you always dream of one day maybe playing in the NFL. It's a dream I've always had and it's something I look forward to.

"I've had some great people who have helped pave the way for the position I'm in right now."

LB Derrick Johnson

Derrick Johnson feeling 'positive pressure' to master, lead Raiders defense

By Scott Bair

June 8, 2018

ALAMEDA – Derrick Johnson joined the Raiders relatively late. Teammates had a head start learning new schematics when the veteran middle linebacker signed with silver and black, creating a viable excuse why Johnson would be behind this spring.

The four-time Pro Bowler didn't want to use it. Not his style.

Johnson also understood the Raiders brought him here to lead this defense on the field. His resume with the Kansas City Chiefs gave Johnson street cred. Becoming quickly versed in the Raiders defense would validate it.

That's why Johnson didn't celebrate after signing with the Raiders. He immersed himself in Paul Guenther's scheme.

"My abilities come out when I know what's going on; for me to know what's going on I have to gear down," Johnson said after Tuesday's OTA session. "You don't want to rush it, but really, thoroughly get it down and make sure I have Paul Guenther's defense really down, so I can start moving some pieces here and there. Start helping some guys out if they're iffy on some things and telling certain guys what to do at sometimes.

"That's not a bad pressure (to master the scheme quickly), that's a positive pressure for me. That's one of those things where this is what I've been doing for a long time in KC. I'm used to telling different guys what to do."

The input is welcome. The Raiders have lacked stability at middle linebacker, save midseason respite from Perry Riley Jr. and NaVorro Bowman, respectively, the last two years.

Johnson made his presence felt quickly in OTAs, and has earned rave reviews from his coaching staff. He demands accountability in practice, and is active in meetings. Such command is only allowed, however, with the scheme down.

"He has picked it up real quick," defensive coordinator Paul Guenther said. "He's able to get us in and out of defenses. When you're at that point, the guy has been here for what, two to three weeks now and he's able to really understand what we're trying to get to. To have a veteran piece that can kind of control the show out there is a big, important part for me."

Learning new terminology is the toughest part, but Johnson believes he has consistently improved during this spring in Alameda.

That has allowed Johnson to quickly assume a leadership role.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"This Raider team really respects me; really respects me," Johnson said. "Once I say something, they kind of get it. My style isn't too aggressive. It's not that guy that's in their face. I'm a big guy of lead by example, of course. But at times you have to speak up. You have to let them know what you're thinking. You have to demand some things at times. Everybody is different, with different personalities. You can't talk to everybody the same. I have to talk to (second-year pro) Nick Morrow different than (veteran) Bruce Irvin. It's just a different type of deal."

Johnson has gravitated toward veterans that litter the roster, especially fellow first-team linebackers Tahir Whitehead and Emmanuel Lamur. He has also taken Morrow under wing, helping the coverage linebacker find his way after a promising rookie year.

Johnson feels comfortable with his new team after 13 seasons in Kansas City. He fits in well with the coaching staff and a scheme that heaps responsibility on its middle linebacker.

"Man, Paul Guenther's defense, it's very aggressive," Johnson said. "There are so many different looks. The onus is really on the linebackers to learn a lot of stuff. That's good for myself because I know a lot. It's putting a lot of pressure on me to learn it quickly. Learn it well enough where I can put my own flavor in making plays on this defense."

"I'm having fun with it now. The last couple of days have been my best days, running around. I was telling the young guys this, once you get the system down... you'll look a lot faster out there on the field. We all can run fast and jump high, but mentally, once you got it down, all your abilities, your talents can show out there on the field. That's what we're doing right now. We're not there yet, but we're getting there."

Marshawn Lynch Is Football's Foremost Ambassador

By Tim Rohan

April 10, 2018

LISBON, Portugal — In early March, when a group of NFL players arrived here on a goodwill trip, the U.S. Ambassador to Portugal, George Glass, invited them to a welcome dinner at the embassy. The players presented Glass with a football, and they all took a group photo, and, when it dispersed, Glass started tossing the ball around the embassy living room near his fine china. Soon, Glass was down in a stance, in a full suit, firing off shotgun snaps.

Wait, Marshawn Lynch said, do that again.

Glass, the white-haired former high school center, got down into a three-point stance, and Lynch, the 215-pound Oakland Raiders running back, lined up across from him. Everyone pulled out their phones, someone yelled out a snap count—"ready, set, hut"—and then Lynch launched himself at the ambassador, wrapped his arms around Glass's chest and plowed him several feet across the room. "He said, 'c'mon, c'mon,' and I thought he was just going to tap me," Glass says. "He, like, drove me back into the chairs. No mercy."

Lynch was in Portugal as a member of American Football Without Barriers, a nonprofit run largely by a group of current and former NFL players, including Breno Giacomini, Lynch's former Seahawks teammate. Each year, AFWB gathers a group of players and travels to a foreign country to put on football camps, do some charity work and do some sightseeing. In 2014, after the Seahawks won the Super Bowl, Giacomini convinced Lynch, Russell Okung and Golden Tate to come on AFWB's trip to Brazil.

While Okung and Tate and others have rotated in and out of the trips since then, Lynch has become a mainstay. He has been on four of their last five—to Brazil, Turkey, Egypt and Portugal—and he really gets into it. He sacks ambassadors, spends time visiting hospitals and orphanages, and teaches children how to play the game physically, the way he does. For most of these people, Lynch is one of the first NFL players they ever meet, and he shows them a side of himself that most people don't see. Over here, Lynch is not the reclusive curmudgeon he's sometimes made out to be in the States. Over here, he is our foremost American football ambassador to the world.

It seems fitting, then, that AFWB's trips usually start with a dinner with officials at the local U.S. embassy, as a sort of welcome assembly. While the other players typically dress up in ties for these events, Lynch arrives in his own traditional wardrobe, sweats from head to toe. His look alone sets a tone for the night and allows everyone to loosen up. "You usually have a reverence or a respect [in those situations], and it always goes out the window with Marshawn," says Pete Hammill, an AFWB staff member. "He's dropping curse words, being Marshawn, not really having a filter. A lot of times the ambassadors don't really know how to take it, so they just go with it. It's funny to see ambassadors just, like, cursing."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

By the end of the night, Lynch has won over the crowd. “The ambassadors are [Marshawn’s] best friends everywhere we go,” says Todd Buelow, the AFWB strategy director. The U.S. Consul General in Rio, John Creamer, liked Lynch so much that, a few days after their dinner he presented him with a few gifts: a brimmed hat common to the region and a cigar. In Portugal, after two videos of Lynch and Glass made TMZ, one of the players joked that Glass was so famous that he could run for president. “Only if Marshawn is my vice president!” Glass said.

In Oakland, Jon Gruden Is Ready to Grind

Going on these trips has helped Lynch expand his worldview. When AFWB visits historical sights, Lynch is curious and asks questions. He can also turn any tour into a party. In Egypt, Lynch and the other players went on a camel ride in the desert, and someone took another video of him that ended up on TMZ. Lynch is wearing a headscarf and rapping while sitting atop the camel. “We ghost-ridin’ the camel right now, you feel me?” he says, bobbing his head and waving his arms.

At the same time, when AFWB visits a local hospital or orphanage, Lynch is often one of the more attentive people there. In Brazil, for instance, AFWB visited an orphanage that did not have access to good footwear. AFWB had the children line up and the NFL players, Lynch included, went down the line washing the children’s feet and giving them new shoes. One of the young boys took a liking to Lynch’s colorful Beast Mode shoes.

Do those help you run fast? the boy asked. I want to run fast.

Well, you have to work hard to run fast, Lynch said.

As Ahmed Awadallah, an AFWB co-founder, recalls: “He started talking about you need to work hard, how you need to outrun people. ‘When you’re in the orphanage and somebody’s running, outrun them.’ ” Then Lynch gave the boy his shoes. “[Marshawn] went back to the hotel barefoot,” Awadallah says.

Lynch also has a special affinity with the younger players at the football camps. In Portugal, AFWB put on a camp for elementary school children, and in one wide receiver drill, Lynch stood in as a cornerback playing press coverage. He’d hold the kids for a second and then let them run and catch a pass. On one rep, Lynch fell back and pretended to be bowled over by a little boy. On another rep, he chased after a little girl in pigtails, who giggled all the way downfield.

In Turkey, an AFWB camper dropped a few passes, got frustrated with himself and started walking off the field, crying and looking for his mother. Lynch pulled the boy, about 12 or 13 years old, aside and spoke to him for more than 20 minutes, and when the boy rejoined the drills, Lynch gave him the sweatshirt off his back. “I spoke to this kid a while after and he was like, ‘Marshawn changed my life. He taught me so much in such a little amount of time,’ ” says Deniz Somersan, an AFWB staffer based in Turkey. “The kid still talks about it every time I see him. He’s like, ‘[Marshawn] really changed the course of my life.’ ”

Football’s Missionaries Spread the Game’s Good Word—and Answer Questions About Its Safety

Lynch will even do things out of his comfort zone if it means advancing the mission of AFWB. That year in Turkey, the Seahawks had lost the Super Bowl after Malcolm Butler intercepted Russell Wilson at the one-yard line. Everyone in America wanted to know what Lynch thought about not getting the ball on that play, but Lynch naturally refused to discuss it—until he got to Turkey. A Turkish reporter requested an interview, and Lynch agreed to answer a Super Bowl-related question, in part so he could promote the AFWB camp. “Typical Marshawn: won’t talk to the U.S. media but talks to some random

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

guy in Turkey,” says Buelow, the AFWB strategy director. “We were all shocked that he did it.” (Lynch declined to speak to The MMQB for this story on him, nevertheless.)

The Beast Mode side of Lynch finally comes out when the older campers arrive and the serious football starts. As the running backs go through footwork drills, sometimes Lynch stands at the end, waiting to hit them with a pad, to simulate being hit in a game. He doesn’t hold back, either. In Portugal, Lynch hit one running back so hard he fell down and drew a roar from the crowd. “I received [the hit] with honor,” the player said, smiling.

Later on, the running backs were working with the linebackers, going at each other one-on-one without pads, when Lynch decided they needed to take it up a notch. He brought on an extra defender and a blocker, making it two-on-two. “We got anybody that ain’t scared?” Lynch asked turning to the crowd, looking for volunteers. “What [kind of] running back gets scared when they start hitting?” Soon, the drill expanded to three-on-three, and then half the camp was gathered around Lynch’s corner of the field, hooting and hollering over the action. With every big hit, every big collision, Lynch amped up the energy.

At one point, he walked down a line of campers, calling them out.

“Are you scared?”

“Are you scared?”

“Are you scared? Let me see you run the ball.”

“Marshawn wants to hit people; that’s all he wants to do,” says DeAngelo Williams, the former Panthers and Steelers running back who usually organizes the running back drills alongside Lynch. “He loves that aggressive nature. We have a great balance, because I don’t want to hit at all, and Marshawn wants to drill people. Literally every drill we take about five minutes of us arguing, him wanting to do something and me not letting him do it.”

Every now and then, a camper decides to challenge Lynch, the same way someone might pick a fight with the biggest guy in the bar. Usually Lynch shrugs it off, but at his first camp in Brazil, he didn’t. A linebacker had been talking trash all camp, challenging Lynch. “Everybody in the camp was like, ‘No, Marshawn, you’re not doing this,’” Williams recalls. “And he was like, ‘No, I’m not gonna just let this kid call me out.’ I was like, what? And he said, ‘If I let him do it, everybody else is gonna want to do it. I’m going to shut all of this up right now.’” Lynch put on pads and a helmet, went one-on-one with the linebacker, and ... leveled the guy. “You could see Marshawn pull up a little bit, otherwise he would’ve really [done some damage],” Williams says. “That’s when I knew then, he knows exactly what he’s doing.”

At the end of the Portugal camp—Lynch’s fourth—he lingered around and spoke with a group of about 20 of the campers, and one of the more talkative players kept yapping at him from afar. “Don’t make me put some pads on, bro,” Lynch warned. Another camper removed his pads and offered them to Lynch, but this time, he thought better of it.

An AFWB staffer announced that the bus was leaving, and the crowd dispersed. Soon, Lynch was alone on a bench, sitting next to a young man who appeared to have been crying. Lynch waited until almost everyone had left, and then he handed the young man his cleats, wrapped him in a hug, and headed for the bus, having won another lifelong fan.

Why Raiders' Kolton Miller dedicated NFL pursuit to his younger brother

By Matt Schneidman

May 14, 2018

ROSEVILLE — Kolton Miller saunters through the front door, all 6-foot-8, 309 pounds of him, fresh off a grueling workout with his trainer, past the signed Joe Montana and Jerry Rice jerseys framed on the wall to his right. That's correct. The father of the Raiders' first-round pick hangs a pair of 49ers jerseys over a billiards table covered in — you guessed it — red felt.

Miller holds no beef with Dad even if his team is Oakland's Bay Area foe. The soft-spoken 22-year-old doesn't hold beef with much of anyone, for that matter — not the critics saying the Raiders reached for him at No. 15, not being the second offensive tackle taken, not even the fake Kolton Miller making headlines for offensive tweets many Twitterheads attributed to him.

Those who know Miller best know the likely starter on Oakland's offensive line possesses a switch that transforms a carefree teddy bear into a pancake-ing behemoth. He lowers himself onto a brown leather couch, props his tree-trunk legs on an extendable leg rest and explains what motivates him, what really flips that switch. Because it's hard to envision this gentle giant mustering the tenacity to manhandle any human despite his stature, let alone the Von Millers and Joey Bosas of the AFC West and beyond.

Of course he isn't the only offensive lineman with split personalities on the gridiron and off, and he begins his answer as most others like him might. "I like competing. I like going against big competition, but yeah..."

He trails off, then pauses briefly.

"Chad, my little brother, was sort of my motivating factor up until this point."

Chad is 16 and Kolton's only sibling by blood. He was born with Moebius syndrome, a rare neurological condition that mainly restricts facial expressions and eye movement. He qualifies as legally blind, experiences short-term memory, fatigues easily and struggles at times with balance, among other symptoms. Chad wanted to be like his older brother, a football star in their hometown outside Sacramento, but physically could not.

Instead, he became involved with football in other ways: as a cheerleader, statistical know-it-all, coach's helper. His mom's motto: It's not that you cannot do anything. It might be that you can do it in a different way. Still, that wasn't enough. Chad wanted to play, but he got a promise from big brother as a consolation.

Kolton vowed to pursue an NFL playing career for Chad since he was the only brother who could. He wanted to use his earnings, if he made the league, to make life easier for his younger brother, maybe something as simple as paying for rent down the line. His NFL home could very well be farther away than Chad preferred and his finances limited depending on when he was taken, but it was a promise and a plan nonetheless.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Sometimes it’s not fair”

Kolton was ready to march into the middle school cafeteria to confront Chad’s bullies. The towering high school lineman typically stayed quiet, but this was little brother. Breaking character was only right.

Karrie Miller recalls the incident, and her younger son’s nonchalant response. “No, no, no, no,” Chad said, declining Kolton’s help. “It’s gonna be OK.” He gradually learned to deal with his disability and its disadvantages, understanding he was different but not letting it define him.

Kolton has drawn inspiration himself from the strides Chad has made since an early childhood limited by Moebius syndrome: no sitting upright until 2, no walking until 4, no running in straight lines, only blended foods until nearly age 6.

Kolton didn’t fully grasp the severity of his brother’s disabilities until his early teens, his mom said, and did whatever he could to make Chad feel anything was possible. He often brought Chad around the football team, where he served as sideline assistant, water boy and chief of high-fives. “I think Chad gets to live a little bit vicariously through Kolton,” said Roseville football coach Larry Cunha, who got to witness the mutual benefits of the brothers’ bond up close.

Chad was so involved in Kolton’s college recruitment that he earned the nickname “Bad Chad” from former UCLA assistant Angus McClure for his spunk. Bad Chad asked coaches where his brother stood on the depth chart and about UCLA’s strength of schedule. On a visit to campus, he dressed in the full Bruins get-up for a photo op with then-head coach Jim Mora. The Bruins were courting Kolton, but Chad was part of the package.

“I didn’t realize how big of a part he was of the recruiting process really ‘till the end,” McClure said. “I still call him Bad Chad. He’s a big personality. He speaks his mind.”

Chad hung around UCLA’s summer practices, attended walkthroughs before gameday and stood outside the stadium exit to greet players following games. He doesn’t choose getting a helmet signed by the entire team for his birthday as his favorite memory from Kolton’s career, rather sneaking into UCLA’s locker room on Kolton’s Senior Night after lying that he needed somewhere to stay because he couldn’t find his parents. That’s how much he wanted to be like big brother.

Back home, Roseville coaches knew how badly Chad wanted to play. They added him to the roster and gave him a uniform despite never playing him in a game. Before practices, Chad hyped himself up by replaying Kolton’s best games in his head. “I see him as a football star, basically,” Chad said. He was far more vocal in the weight room and on the field than big brother had ever been, Kolton admits, and took videos and photographs for his teammates on the side.

He’s since hung up the cleats because of his disability — Karrie said he passed out a few times due to fatigue, among other challenges — but still helps out the staff. “They’ve got him in different roles which he doesn’t wanna do,” she said. “Chad wants to be out there in a uniform. In his mind, he thinks that he’s playing football because he has a very imaginative mind. That inspires them and it inspires Chad.”

Chad knows he can’t be like his brother, but that doesn’t mean he’ll stop trying. Following his every move may not lead to a career in the NFL, but watching Kolton live out both their dreams will certainly suffice.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"Sometimes as a dad, all the stuff that Kolton did, you'd like to be able to have Chad do it, too," Dan Miller said. "But sometimes it's not fair. He's been a trooper through it all and he's a part of it."

"I just think about him and I'm instantly happy"

Karrie had returned from grabbing the boys food when she overheard their conversation from the hotel room. The family was in town toward the end of Kolton's redshirt freshman year for a UCLA game. Kolton and Chad didn't know Mom could hear them.

That's when Kolton got Chad's approval to chase the NFL, assuring he'd dedicate his journey to little brother. Karrie, hearing a "That's really cool, bro!" from her youngest, peaked into the room as tears welled from her eyes.

"You would think they are much, much closer in age," she said, "almost like they have a part of each other."

Chad may see Kolton as an icon, but Kolton views Chad the same despite their six-plus years apart. Big brother wrote down individual goals on a sheet of paper his second season with the Bruins, and they included becoming a starter and an All-American, though his ultimate goal remained the NFL. Once that became a possibility and not strictly fantasy, Kolton looked to the kid who'd always looked to him for motivation.

"I can be really good at football and go into the NFL and really provide for him," Kolton thought. "(If I'm) thinking like, 'Alright, this is a crappy day,' I just think about him and I'm instantly happy. Or it'll be my last set, I just have to think about him and that kind of gives me that extra juice to beat the rep."

As Chad played vicariously through Kolton, big brother made it his responsibility to succeed so Chad felt like he was thriving, too. All those practices, games and recruiting visits Chad joined in on were only made possible because big brother viewed little brother as an integral part of the process.

That's why when Miller received his generic "No. 1" black jersey after the Raiders took him in the first round, he didn't hold onto it for long. Chad's jersey collection consisted of former UCLA and current Jaguars linebacker Myles Jack, Odell Beckham Jr., Colin Kaepernick and Peyton Manning, among several others. Having big brother's jersey in his possession might top them all.

"It's been pretty awesome, an inspiration kind of, just to follow his footsteps," Chad said. "... Basically the whole experience, hearing 'Raaaaaaaiiiiders' the whole time is gonna be..."

His sentence fades off, which is fitting, because there really isn't one single word that can describe how much Chad watching Kolton in the NFL will mean to them both.

"Being in the media box would be pretty cool"

When Chad first strolled into the living room, he looked fresh off a nap. He slumped into the couch next to his dad, his brown hair parted in the middle and bobbing at either side. Ask him about Kolton's exploits, though, and he's wide awake.

Chad's short-term memory affects hobbies such as cooking, his mom said, in which it's safer to microwave than potentially forget a burning stove. Basic reading, too, has trouble sticking. Post-it notes are used on the bathroom mirror to remind him of daily tasks. His brother's NFL Combine numbers are a different story.

Broad jump? "10'1." (A combine record for offensive linemen.)

40? "4.95."

Bench? "24."

All correct.

When it comes to football, "He'll remember e-v-e-r-y-thing," Karrie said.

Now Chad is fully engaged, reliving and dissecting his thought process at the Miller family greenroom table when Notre Dame offensive tackle Mike McGlinchey went ninth overall to the 49ers.

"I'm like 'Welp, there's only one place where we can go now and that's Oakland.' I probably knew it in my head," he said. "Oakland's gonna pick him. Oakland's gonna pick him. He was either gonna go there or Arizona if the trade didn't happen."

Chad spoke it into existence, and now he'll be at every home game, joining those chants he's already hearing in his head. He was a big part of Kolton's Roseville High and UCLA teams, but being more than just a family member in the stands might be a different ballgame in the NFL.

"Wouldn't that be dope to like..." Kolton starts, offering a suggestion for Chad to get involved.

"Be a water boy over there on the sideline," Dan chimes in.

"No, hell no," Kolton finishes. "Lead the team out ... Maybe in my 10th year, that'd be like the one thing I could ask."

"That would be cool," Chad says calmly, almost as if leading the Raiders through flames under the arch is too low key. "Being in the media box would be pretty cool, though."

Chad has thought of entering media as a writer or cameraman. The Raiders even pledged to reserve a press box seat for a game so he can see what it's like. Chad thinks "that'd be dope" and suddenly he's discovered his ideal spot to watch Kolton's next journey from, even if he's not as close as the ones prior.

Kolton beams ear to ear with a "Hoooooooooooo, man!" An ecstatic Chad makes for an ecstatic Kolton, too.

He's seen his younger brother frustrated, eager, yearning for a goal he can't quite reach. Now he sees him teeming with excitement for one he can.

Remember the motto Chad grew frustrated with? It's not that you cannot do anything. It might be that you can do it in a different way. Now he's embracing it, seeking his own path — with Kolton right beside him after all.

LAS VEGAS REVIEW-JOURNAL

Raiders' Kolton Miller reaches NFL dream to help brother

By Michael Gehlken

May 12, 2018

ROSEVILLE, Calif. — Hospital nurses said Kolton Miller would have topped 10 pounds at birth in Redwood City, California, if not for the C-section weeks before the due date.

At 6 months, he was baptized in a white embroidered outfit. Its size was intended for a 24-month-old toddler. Two weeks before the ceremony, it fit comfortably. By the day of, buttons barely fastened.

From 10 to 16 years old, his shoe size matched his age. His mother Karrie Miller fought his growing pains with massages, drawn baths and German chocolate cake. He and father Dan Miller often wrestled until, once as a teen, Kolton threw Dad darn-near across the width of a room.

"You're not fun anymore," Dan said to him.

Kolton Miller became the tallest active Raiders player at 6 feet, 8 5/8 inches when the former UCLA offensive tackle was drafted April 26 with the No. 15 overall pick. But growth spurts aren't what led him here. Not entirely. He cites his brother as his main motivation.

As a boy, Kolton asked his parents for a sibling. They tried for years in vain. Finally, he was 6 when Chad was born at 2 pounds, 13 ounces. They met behind the glass of a neonatal intensive care unit and formed a strong bond.

Their relationship and the NFL career it inspired now allow Kolton to provide financial security to Chad.

"I'm his number one fan," said Chad, who wore a Raiders hat to school the past two weeks. "And he's mine, too."

"I want him to be taken care of," Kolton said.

A protector

Karrie Miller cannot help it.

She sees some of her own father in Kolton.

Her dad, Glenn Blomseth, was a professional protector. He wore an FBI ring commemorating his graduation from the agency's academy. The 6-foot-4 man, whose Scandinavian bloodlines lent height to Kolton, served as a police lieutenant in Antioch, California, before retiring as the department's interim captain.

On March 26, 2002, he was on call for his family.

A doctor prescribed Karrie bedrest at home in Alamo, California. Complications arose from a pregnancy still in its 26th week. Blomseth stayed overnight. Early in the morning, when complications worsened, he urged her and Dan not to wait for an ambulance, Karrie said.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

He'd watch Kolton. Just go. Hurry. Go.

Specifics regarding the situation are a private family matter, aside to say Blomseth's crisis management proved momentous. Karrie and Chad endured, the latter born minutes upon arrival at a Walnut Creek hospital. Once Chad was home, a proper introduction with Kolton could be made.

It became clear Kolton was a protector, too.

If Chad sat atop someone's lap on a couch, Kolton sat next to them. If Chad was in a baby carrier, Kolton often sat on the floor, playing beside him. Chad was unable to sit up on his own until 2 years old. When needing someone against whom to prop himself, big brother was there.

Chad was born with Moebius syndrome, a rare neurological condition affecting certain cranial nerves linked to muscles that control eye movement and facial expressions. Physical therapy and other medical care often required attention. This meant Dan and Karrie missed some items on Kolton's extra-curricular calendar, including certain sporting events.

No problem.

"We had people who would take him to his practices and things like that," Karrie said. "We would address things with him. He'd be like, 'No, I'm fine. Take care of Chad.' That was his response. 'Take care of Chad.'"

Kolton's maturity extended beyond height.

Before his parents' divorce, Dan and Karrie regularly hosted family functions. Kolton often socialized with adults, not kids, at the parties. His youthful spirit would surface when retiring to his bedroom room for a wardrobe change. He returned in a Superman or Batman costume.

In elementary school, his morality was the stuff of superheroes, as teachers marveled over his willingness to confront bullies. On multiple occasions, Kolton witnessed a peer being mistreated. The tall boy from Redwood City did not spectate. Rather, he spoke up and stepped in.

Such acts included helping female students whose clothes were being pulled or had a ball stolen during a game of Four Square.

"It was how I was raised," Kolton, 22, said. "I was raised to be a good kid. Maybe it came naturally because I was bigger than other kids."

Protecting quarterbacks came naturally, too.

Shared success

Kolton kept an open mind with sports.

He first tried youth soccer but, after a few practices, told his parents he did not enjoy it. They asked if he wanted to quit. His response: "I'm not a quitter."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

He lasted the full season before retiring his shin guards for good. He later played basketball, a more natural fit because of his height, and baseball. He dabbled in track and field in high school, hurling in the discus and shot put.

But no sport compared to football.

Kolton was a two-way player at Roseville High, an offensive tackle and defensive lineman. One of his teammates at the time, running back Matt Razzano, is the son of Dave Razzano, the Raiders' director of football research.

Chad was a four-year captain to Kolton's cheering section, watching games and practices from the stands or sideline. Kolton often invited him into the postgame locker room where Chad effused positivity, individually congratulating teammates on a good game with high fives or encouraging them after a loss.

Coaches at Roseville saw Kolton's potential. Jon Osterhout soon did, too.

Dan Miller reached out to Osterhout, coach at Sacramento's American River College and founder of offseason training program Linemen Win Games, during Kolton's sophomore year. Other alumni from the academy include Raiders defensive tackle Eddie Vanderdoes, who also attended UCLA.

"He had all the redeeming qualities that you look for in a guy who's truly trying to create the best version of himself," Osterhout said. "Extremely inquisitive. Very professional in everything, from being there early to staying there late, asking great questions and really trying to improve himself every single day."

Attention from colleges followed.

When Kolton attended an Oregon football camp, he brought Chad with him. When he made official stops to Wisconsin, Oregon State and UCLA, he brought Chad with him. Over his life, Kolton outgrew shoes and shirts and pants. His profile widened and expanded across the country.

He always brought Chad along.

Chad, 16, now attends Roseville High. Before the draft, he regularly would be asked about his brother. Chad would discuss his strong performance at the NFL Scouting Combine — Kolton's broad jump of 10 feet, 1 inch set an event record for an offensive lineman — or which teams Kolton was visiting.

"You could just see the shine in his face that he was so happy," said Adam Lenakakis, Roseville offensive line coach. "Now that he is a Raider, it's even better because he's only an hour and a half from his brother. He'll be able to watch him in training camp and the preseason and as many home games as they can get to, of course."

The missed game

A graham-cracker square is covered in a cookie dough mixed with marshmallows and chocolate chips. Once baked, the crunchy, gooey result from Cookie Connection, a Roseville-based gourmet cookie company, is the highlight to a care package Karrie routinely presented Kolton and his fellow UCLA offensive linemen when driving to all home games.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

That was until Oct. 1, 2016, against Arizona. No cookies. No Mom and Chad.

Kolton was entering his fifth start at right tackle as a redshirt sophomore. As game day approached, Karrie called Kolton and informed him she'd be unable to travel to Rose Bowl Stadium in Pasadena, California. She and Chad would watch from home in Roseville instead.

On the morning of the game, something felt wrong.

"She mentioned, 'I have this awkward, strange feeling something is going to happen,'" Chad said.

Karrie repeated the sentiment, as Chad tried to assure their mother. But in the second quarter, a teammate accidentally was tackled into Kolton's lower left leg. Kolton heard four pops in his knee. Never before needing surgery, he feared the worst. Fortunately, it was a spiral ankle fracture that did not require a procedure, although he missed the remainder of the season.

Missing the next game irked Kolton most. He could not help Josh Rosen, who suffered a season-ending injury on a fourth-quarter hit.

Kolton was unable to protect him.

"You watch, and you feel like it's partly your fault," Kolton said. "Of course, you can't say that, but it kind of feels like that."

Still growing

While at UCLA, Kolton had a sense he was NFL-bound. He told his parents they didn't need to worry. He would take care of Chad. With an upcoming four-year contract worth more than $13 million, he is positioned to do so.

But Kolton has other goals.

He wants to earn a starting job in 2018, he said. He wants to win a Super Bowl. One day, he wants to wear a gold jacket as a Pro Football Hall of Fame inductee. These are goals he can chase now, potential future moments he can share with his family.

Last year, Chad was among those to visit Kolton for Thanksgiving and a Nov. 24 game versus California. Karrie was preparing for the day when, from a hotel restroom, she overheard her two sons chatting. Kolton waved over Chad and told him he'd be going to the NFL soon. He asked what his thoughts about it were.

"Chad said, 'That's pretty cool,'" Karrie said. "And he said to Chad, 'If you don't want me to go, I won't go.' And Chad was quiet, and he said, 'Did you hear me? If you don't want me to go, I won't go because I'm going to do this for you.'"

"And Chad said, 'No, bro. I want you to go.' And he said, 'OK, I'm going to do it for you, Chad.'"

Considering that they let go of Michael Crabtree and signed a man nearly three years older to a contract worth up to $15 million, you could say the Raiders have bet the farm on Jordy Nelson.

The shoe fits, too. Nelson grew up on a farm in Kansas — 1,000 head of cattle on 4,000 acres. He still goes back most years to help with the wheat harvest before training camp and is fond of joking that it takes him awhile “to get back into farming shape.”

This next part is no joke, though.

“It set the foundation of who I am,” Nelson said of farm life. “The hard work, the day-in, day-out grind. Understanding that you have to go to work every day.”

Nelson, who turns 33 in May, isn't being counted on just for running routes and catching passes. The Raiders also think the 6-foot-3, 217-pound wide receiver can help a locker room that seemed to fray last season as the team tumbled to a 6-10 finish.

New Raiders wide receivers coach Edgar Bennett was in Green Bay for the entirety of Nelson's nine-year career with the Packers and he believes Nelson's NFL success began with his upbringing.

At 6-foot-3, Nelson can go up and get it.

“That's the starting point, and the way he is I'm sure came from how he was raised by his parents, being able to stay true to who he was, being disciplined,” Bennett said. “There's a carry-over to his football career.”

Until the Raiders signed Nelson on March 15, their public stance on Crabtree had been that he was in their plans for 2018. But it was clear something had gone wrong in that relationship during the second half of last season. There was the one-game NFL suspension for his fight and ongoing feud with Denver cornerback Aqib Talib and there were times when Crabtree was not on the field when game situations suggested he should be.

The Raiders contacted Nelson on March 13, the day he was released by the Packers. Two days later, he was in Alameda and he didn't leave until putting pen to paper. Crabtree, 30, was released and signed with the Baltimore Ravens.

The swap hasn't exactly been met with universal acceptance, given that Nelson had significant drop in production last season, catching 53 passes for 482 yards and a career-low 9.1 yards per catch in 15 games. In 2016, Nelson had 97 receptions for 1,257 yards (12.9 yards per catch).

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Former Raiders defensive backs coach and Hall of Famer Rod Woodson recently joined the chorus of those who say Nelson has lost a step.

James Jones, the former San Jose State star who played with Nelson in Green Bay, isn't buying it.

"I know a lot of people are thinking, 'Oh, man, Crabtree is younger and better,'" Jones said. "Jordy has a lot left. And you're getting a guy with a chip on his shoulder. He will never say it, but trust me, when he does go out here and have a big-time year, he's going to have one eye on the Packers, saying, 'I told you I can still play this game.'"

In the middle of nowhere, between the Kansas towns of Leonardville and Riley — combined population 1,412 — sits Nelson Angus Farms.

Jordy spent his youth there, glued to ESPN and participating in football, basketball and track — but only after his completing his daily chores on a farm that has been in the family since his great, great grandfather emigrated from Sweden.

Mike Nelson, Jordy's brother and 18 months his senior, runs the farm and Jordy plans on rejoining him some day.

"I want to be my brother's hired man," Jordy told Wisconsin Agriculturalist in 2016. "He can pay me when I work and if he has to lay me off I think I will be able to survive."

Jordy was driving pickup trucks loaded with hay into town by age 12 and operating a combine as a teenager. Green Bay, which became Jordy's home in 2008 when he was drafted in the second round by the Packers, is a metropolis by comparison.

Jones was one of several Green Bay players who visited the farm and experienced the culture shock.

"Every house is three miles away from the other," Jones said.

"There's only one restaurant," he added, "and Jordy owns it."

Nelson didn't make his Green Bay guests get up with roosters and do chores. Players went four-wheeling, played some evening wiffle ball with the family, dropped by the family-run sports bar "Nelson's Landing" and even went golfing.

"One of the worst golf courses I've ever been on," Jones said with a laugh. "No putting greens, just rock. Once you hit the ball off the tee you're in a grass area, but when you get on the green it's always going to take a two-putt because it's all rock."

The fun and games stands in stark contrast to a typical day on the farm.

"You get tired of doing the work when all your buddies are playing basketball," Mike Nelson said. "But after awhile, it's what you know and what you want to do. You develop a passion for it, and the next thing you know you love it. It's a good life."

In between chores, Jordy excelled at Riley County High School in football, basketball and track. In his senior year at quarterback, he passed for more than 1,000 yards and rushed for 1,500 more. But no

Division I scholarship offers came to him, so Nelson walked on at Kansas State, a 20-mile drive his parents had made many times as football season ticket holders.

Nelson began his career at Kansas State as a defensive back until a fateful meeting with legendary K-State coach Bill Snyder.

"I told him I thought he might have a better chance to play a little quicker at wide receiver and that I wanted him to at least think about it, and then come and see me tomorrow," Snyder said. "He said, 'Coach, I don't have to think about it. If it's something you think I should do then that's what we'll do.' "

It was a fairly standard reaction from Nelson, a player from whom Snyder said he never once saw a self-aggrandizing or "look-at-me" moment.

"He is the epitome of consistency," Snyder said. "He's not one way one day and another way the next day. He's the same Jordy Nelson, day in and day out. There's no pretense to him whatsoever."

In his senior year, Nelson caught a school-record 122 passes and was drafted in the second round by the Packers. (The Raiders took Darren McFadden in that draft.)

Nelson's transition to the NFL was gradual. His coming-out party was a nine-catch, 140-yard game with a touchdown reception in Super Bowl XLV, a 31-25 win over the Pittsburgh Steelers following the 2010 season.

The next season, Nelson exploded. He caught 68 passes for 1,263 yards and 15 touchdowns, becoming the prime target for quarterback Aaron Rodgers.

Coming off a two-year run in which he averaged 91 catches for 1,416 yards and scored 21 touchdowns, Nelson missed the 2015 season after tearing his right ACL in an exhibition game. But he was back the next season — all the way back. After catching 97 passes for 1,257 yards and 14 touchdowns, Nelson was named the NFL's Comeback Player of the Year.

Last year's drop-off was at least in part attributable to an injury to Rodgers. His replacement, Brett Hundley, struggled mightily in eight games.

"We're not playing fantasy football," Raiders coach Jon Gruden said. "I realize his production fell off, but so did Davante Adams, so did Randall Cobb and so did the Packer offense when Aaron Rodgers went down."

Nelson dismisses claims that he's no longer fast enough to separate from defensive backs, noting that he was never a burner when it came to the 40-yard dash but has always been plenty fast enough in shoulder pads.

"It's still there," Bennett said. "He still has the ability to catch the football, catch it in traffic, run after the catch, create separation. He can do all those things."

When Nelson visited the Raiders in March, quarterback Derek Carr took him on a drive to the Tri-Valley area where he lives to help alleviate whatever big-city concerns Nelson might have been feeling.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Nelson laughed out loud when asked about the sticker shock of home prices — he is so tight with a dollar he says he won't spend a single one of them to get the No. 87 jersey he wore in Green Bay from Raiders teammate Jared Cook.

No surprise to his brother Mike, who understands how difficult it is to make a farm work financially: "It's easy to grow up conservative around here because you really learn how to push the pennies."

Nelson's value system, Snyder said, remains intact.

"He comes back home and works on the farm. His family has a restaurant and he works in the restaurant," Snyder said. "That's what I appreciate so much about him. He hasn't let the NFL go to his head. To me, Jordy has not changed. He's not any different the last time I saw him then when he graduated from here. When you get down to it, he's a small-town, working class young man."

Nelson concedes he'll have to get used to Bay Area traffic. But Carr's guided tour served its purpose.

"I mean, we were driving around and seeing the hillside, the grass and cattle and deer running around," Nelson said. "I think there's still that aspect there. But it's also going to be great to be close to the city and be able to go downtown and experience some different things. I think you get the best of both worlds here."

OL Ian Silberman

Raiders' Ian Silberman getting his shot as first-team right tackle

By Matt Schneidman

August 8, 2018

NAPA — Ian Silberman hasn't played offensive tackle since college. He's entering his fourth year in the NFL.

The journeyman offensive lineman, drafted in the sixth round in 2015, has already played for the 49ers, Patriots, Raiders, Colts, Browns and now the Raiders again. This time around in Oakland, though, he might not be a flash in the pan. Silberman has switched between guard and center for the first three years of his career, but he's been shouldering the majority of first-team reps at right tackle with veteran Breno Giacomini and rookie Brandon Parker missing the last couple practices.

Silberman contented for a starting spot as a 49ers rookie in 2015, he said, but this year's reps are the most important he's ever handled.

"This probably is my biggest challenge because I only had one, one and a half years of tackle experience in college," Silberman told the Bay Area News Group on Wednesday. "So coming back up to tackle after four years of playing guard and center, that's the biggest challenge in itself, working out there in space against better athletes."

Right tackle might be the biggest area of concern (or uncertainty) on the entire team. The Raiders feature arguably the best interior offensive line in the NFL with Kelechi Osemele, Rodney Hudson and Gabe Jackson, and rookie Kolton Miller has impressed coaches early on Derek Carr's blind side while Donald Penn remains on the physically unable to perform list. Oakland cut Marshall Newhouse after he struggled at right tackle last season, and now the position is up in the air during training camp.

With two contenders currently sidelined, though, Silberman is getting an extended shot to lay claim on the starting job.

"Now I'm going against a better quality of player," Silberman said of playing with the first unit. "Communicating with the starters and the vets, and it's all a learning experience, being able to work with them. It's also an opportunity for me step up and prove that I know what I'm doing, prove that I can show the proper technique and do everything that we need out of a starting right tackle."

Even if Silberman loses the starting right tackle job to Giacomini, Parker or even David Sharpe, his experience across the offensive line bodes well for his chances to make the 53-man roster as a sixth or seventh offensive lineman. Vadal Alexander served that role the past two years, but the Raiders waived him after he never reported to camp. "The next Vadal Alexander" might not sound like an ideal tag, but Silberman just wants to stick somewhere after playing in only one regular season game so far in his career.

"Versatility is a key at that position," Raiders head coach Jon Gruden said of the right tackle spot. "When you're an offensive lineman, you can only have so many guys active on game day. You need your sixth and seventh offensive linemen to be able to play multiple positions. Ian is one of those guys that's a candidate to play guard or tackle."

Silberman has benefited from facing Raiders defensive ends Tank Carradine (6-foot-4, 270 pounds) and Frostee Rucker (6-foot-3, 261) in practice. Blocking the bulky vets has taught Silberman to sit down, anchor himself and properly position his hands. Facing young defensive ends Arden Key and Fadol Brown has challenged Silberman in a different way because they mix more speed with power, and especially Key presents a wiry figure with a variety of moves.

Silberman has adjusted to blocking smaller rushers with more athleticism and a plethora of moves on the outside as opposed to brute-strength rushers on the interior. "You're working in a phone booth where you got to man up instantly, as soon as the ball snaps," he said of playing guard or center. Now Silberman needs to be more fleet of foot, and face approaches he hasn't seen since his days at Boston College.

Add in Tuesday's and Wednesday's joint practices against the Lions to the first portion of training camp, and Silberman has received a nice little crash course in defending some decent pass-rushers here in Napa. Granted, they're nothing like Joey Bosa or Melvin Ingram or Von Miller, but Silberman is gradually becoming more comfortable in the biggest role he's ever taken on.

He knows nobody is worrying about the Raiders' interior offensive line, and now it's up to him to ensure they don't worry about right tackle either.

"I'm playing next to those three interior guys ... the standard goes up already," Silberman said. "I just want to show the coaches that they don't have to worry about anything on the right side."

How a lower lip tattoo embodies Ryan Switzer's road to the Raiders

By Matt Schneidman

August 4, 2018

NAPA — Shortly before Ryan Switzer graduated high school, he took a trip to Yogurt Mountain in West Virginia with his dad, mom and little sister. Neither parent knew their son had recently gotten a tattoo on his lower lip, but some of Switzer's friends and their parents did. A family friend and her husband joined the Switzers at Yogurt Mountain, and she asked the family, "Hey, what did you think of Ryan's tattoo?"

"And the look on his face....," said Michael Switzer, Ryan's father. "We had no idea. I thought it was like a rub-on deal."

Switzer didn't get a tattoo because he lost a bet or to rebel against his parents before jetting off to star at the University of North Carolina. The lettering on the inside of his lower lip reads, "Believe." As an undersized football player growing up in West Virginia, he had to if he wanted to make it where he is now.

The Cowboys used a fourth-round pick on Switzer in 2017, then traded him to the Raiders on Day 3 of the 2018 draft for defensive lineman Jihad Ward. Now hoping to make his mark on both offense and special teams for a new team an entire country away from where he got the tattoo, Switzer still lives by the word permanently inked on his lip.

"Coming from West Virginia and coming from a small town and a small state in general, being a 5'8," 5'9" white running back out of West Virginia, the odds of me making it to the NFL were real slim," Switzer told the Bay Area News Group on Saturday. "I always believed in myself. I know that's cliché, but I really did."

While Switzer's friends vacationed during the summers of their youth, he remained in West Virginia. "Not to throw shots at anybody that I grew up with, but I was at home. I was always working out," Switzer said. His father sent him articles about Walter Payton running hills in army boots to strengthen his quads in steaming Chicago summer heat and about LaDanian Tomlinson's workout regimens. Switzer worked out alone on local fields in 90-something degree heat, honing the grit and speed he needed to make it for someone who lacked stature.

Michael Switzer has been a self-employed graphic designer and photographer for 25 years. He also used to be a competitive bodybuilder and powerlifter, so it's easy to see where Ryan gets his knack for weightlifting. Switzer's mom, Ashley, is a pre-school and kindergarten teacher who returned to school to get her degree after giving birth to one boy and four girls.

"My parents really embody what it means to go out and get what you deserve and get what you earn," Switzer said. "That's kind of the mantra and the mentality that I've taken that I still carry with me today."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

While at George Washington High School in Charleston, West Virginia, Switzer had a mentor Raiders fans know well. Bruce Irvin's then-significant other was friends with one of Switzer's sisters, and Irvin developed a relationship with the high-schooler looking to make it big.

While Irvin attended West Virginia University, he worked out with Switzer at local fields. Irvin was actually in the Switzer's house when Ryan committed to UNC. Even when Irvin entered the NFL, he stayed in touch, inviting Switzer back to West Virginia for his summer camps. The current Raiders captain gave Switzer a taste of what it took to make it at the next level.

"From there they just kind of struck a friendship. Bruce was really good to Ryan, mentoring and talking to him, a lot of advice about college decision making," Michael said. "He said, 'Hey, Ry, you've lived in West Virginia your whole life. Why not go somewhere that you don't know about and see what that place is about?' I thought that was some really sage advice."

So Switzer ventured off to North Carolina, where all he did was not miss a single one of the 53 games his team played during his four years and become one of the best college punt returners ever in the process. He returned seven punts for touchdowns in his career, tied for the fourth-most punt return touchdowns ever in a college career. Oh, and he caught 243 passes for 2,903 yards and 19 touchdowns in four years. He also threw for two scores.

Like our Oakland Raiders Facebook page for more Raiders news, commentary and conversation. Such a prolific college career earned Switzer that NFL chance he always longed for in small-town West Virginia, and he assumed primary punt- and kick-return duties for the Cowboys last season. He returned 29 punts an average of 8.8 yards with one touchdown and 24 kicks an average of 25 yards. Here with the Raiders, special teams coordinator Rich Bisaccia, who coached Dallas special teams in 2017, seems to like Switzer on both return teams again. Derek Carr also raves about Switzer, who looks to be Oakland's primary slot receiver on offense, too.

"I love Switzer. I think he was one of the best punt returners in college football, perhaps in the history of college football," Raiders head coach Jon Gruden said Saturday. " ... Incredible stop and start quickness. And he's a courageous, tough guy. He's a little guy, but he's not afraid of playing and going inside, and I like that. He's got the qualities I'm looking for in a slot receiver.

"He's a guy that can change the game, I think, on third down. He's a tough matchup. He's quick. He has vertical speed. He has special teams ability and we'll just see if he's strong enough to be a durable player and last 16 weeks."

If withstanding those scorching West Virginia summers alone and playing all 53 games in college are any indication, Switzer shouldn't have a problem staying on the field with the Raiders.

The Switzers insist they've never talked about Ryan's size, especially not as a hindrance, even if others saw it as one. Switzer's dad claims his son is really 5 feet, 8 and 3/4 inches, that Ryan is slighted being listed at 5-foot-8.

Something so insignificant is probably fitting for Ryan Switzer's road to the Raiders. He's used to not being given the benefit of the doubt, and that in part is why he's made it this far. The placement of the word guiding him to this point might be corny to some, but for Switzer it all comes back to the ink on the inside of his lower lip.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Honestly I think everybody needs something like that, maybe not a tattoo in general but a word that defines them,” Switzer said. “I always believed that this was a possibility, regardless of the circumstances. I just wanted to give myself the best opportunity and the best chance to be here. Obviously I still have a long way to go and I still have a lot of things I want to accomplish in the NFL, but without the baseline that I had as a child – my parents’ and my family’s belief in me and my belief in myself – I wouldn’t be here.”

RB Chris Warren III

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Undrafted running back Chris Warren III hopes to be a hit with Raiders

By Matt Kawahara

August 7, 2018

Raiders rookie Chris Warren III jogged back to the huddle after a play in Tuesday's joint practice with the Lions with the voice of Jon Gruden ringing in his ears.

"Hey!" the head coach yelled. "Hey! Lower your pads!"

Moments later, Warren, the 6-foot-2, 246-pound running back from Texas, came through the line and lowered his shoulder into Detroit linebacker Jarrad Davis. The Lions' 2017 first-round pick shot backward onto the grass.

"I heard a sound," quarterback Derek Carr said after practice. "Haven't seen Chris' run yet, but I heard it was pretty awesome."

"Just running a play," Warren said. "Just saw the guy coming through, got ready to deliver a blow. That's kind of how it goes sometimes."

It was the most resounding play of the morning. And Warren, an undrafted rookie, said he heard about it immediately from teammates.

"Especially from Marshawn" Lynch, Warren said. "Marshawn, he liked it a lot."

Warren, from Rockwall, Texas, is soft-spoken but carries a big frame — especially for a running back. Physically, he stands out in an Oakland backfield that, aside from Lynch, includes smaller backs Doug Martin, Jalen Richard and DeAndre Washington. Warren offers an intriguing option if Gruden and offensive line coach Tom Cable are looking for a situational power back.

In fact, Warren said, his first conversation with Lynch after being signed by the Raiders in May began with Lynch asking him: "How come you weren't drafted?"

"I was like, 'I couldn't tell you, man,'" Warren said. "He was like, 'No, you must've done something. You did something wrong.' I was like, 'No, I didn't.' That was our first interaction."

Warren played three seasons at Texas and averaged 5.6 yards on 204 carries, including a 276-yard game against Texas Tech as a freshman. He also dealt with injuries and was moved to tight end in his junior season. He ran a 4.69 40-yard dash at the NFL combine and signed with the Raiders after attending their rookie minicamp in May on a tryout basis.

For the above reasons, Warren wasn't entirely surprised to go undrafted.

"I knew I didn't have standout numbers, but I thought there would be somebody that would take a shot," he said. "But it doesn't matter because I'm here now. It's irrelevant."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Warren said he's thrilled to be with the Raiders. One reason is Gruden, who continues to show that concerns he no longer would be able to relate to players were premature.

"I love him — I'd play here for 20 years if I could," Warren said. "He's always coaching somebody. He might get on you, but he'll always tell you when you're doing a good job or he'll coach you up on things that you did wrong."

Case in point: the earful Warren received just before his big moment Tuesday.

"When I see a hole, I don't normally think about lowering my pads, I just try to run through it," Warren said. "But they were coaching me, telling me I need to make sure that I'm getting ready for any contact at all times."

Despite moving all over the field growing up — he said his second-favorite position is linebacker, which might help explain his running style — Warren was adamant about playing running back in the NFL. After all, the position is in his blood.

Warren's father played running back in the NFL for 11 seasons with the Seahawks, Cowboys and Eagles. Chris Warren II totaled 7,696 career rushing yards, and was selected to three Pro Bowls (1993-95), all while playing for Seattle.

Before Warren III reported for his first NFL training camp, his father provided some advice.

"Just to go out there and be you and learn as fast as you can," Warren said. "There's no point trying to impress somebody, because then you're going to end up messing up on something."

The elder Warren was also a bigger back at 6-2 and 227 pounds. The younger said their similarities as runners largely end there.

"I mean, he was really just a one-cut, get-down-the-field kind of guy," Warren said. "He was a bigger guy, too, but he had some speed along with it."

"The way that he played, the way that I play, I wouldn't say that they're similar — but they're definitely not different. I don't think he was ever looking for contact. I don't necessarily, either. But when I see it coming, I definitely don't shy away from it."

Lions LB Tahir Whitehead survived rough N.J. upbringing to make NFL

By Dave Birkett

Sept. 17, 2017

The minute Tahir Whitehead steps foot in New Jersey, the memories come flooding in.

Whether it's for a community service project with area youth like he does every off-season, to visit family, or for a game like Monday night's showdown with the New York Giants, Whitehead can't help but think of the road he has traveled to arrive to the NFL.

"When I'm home in general, even on gameday, I always reflect on my upbringing and how did I get to this point," Whitehead said. "It keeps me down to earth, it keeps me just being able to cherish the moment of still being in the NFL now that I'm in my sixth year and just knowing the hurdles that I had to overcome. As soon as we touch down it's like, this is home. I grinded since I was younger to kind of make something of myself, be able to go somewhere, and now I'm back."

Whitehead grew up on the west side of Newark, N.J., for years one of the most crime-ridden cities in America.

Theo Riddick is the key to a Lions win over Giants

He never dreamed of being an NFL player as a kid, but he did sit in front of his TV as a youth and yearn for something more.

"I was a homebody, so I always looked at places on TV, places in the Caribbean," Whitehead said. "You see the Carnival cruise commercials and all that stuff, I would just think about, like, 'Dang, I want to be able to go somewhere at some point in time,' cause I didn't take, from my recollection, I never took a vacation (growing up)."

Whitehead started playing Pop Warner football as a way to emulate his older brother, Quaheem, who drew comparisons to Barry Sanders before injuries from when he was hit by a car derailed his playing career.

Quaheem also served as Whitehead's protector, keeping him off the dangerous Newark streets, which Whitehead said were filled with drugs, gangs and violence.

Around the time he was 10 years old, Whitehead said he saw a neighborhood teen he knew fall victim to a drive-by shooting.

"We weren't close friends, but one of the guys around the neighborhood that we were cool, just hit the corner, see a car pull up, about three guys hanging out the car, just letting off shots," Whitehead said. "I remember just standing there just like, 'Damn.' Then run. And then other times, I would come home in college, same thing. Broad daylight, kids and stuff are outside, running around playing and somebody roll up and just started letting off at a group of guys."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Whitehead said he witnessed the first shooting from across the street – it was as close as "on the other side of the locker room," he said, nodding at a wall 20 or so feet away. After the car pulled away, he went to check on the bloodied victim, who he said was later confined to a wheelchair.

"That was really like the norm for me," Whitehead said. "It wasn't like, 'Oh man,' you were surprised some of that stuff happened. It was almost just like, 'Hey, look, that's the neighborhood in which I live and that's what type of stuff happens.' It is what it is, so that was my norm. And then you grow up and you start to realize that's not the way people are necessarily living, you don't have to live like that, so I just wanted to provide more for myself, more for my family."

Through football, Whitehead has done that.

He made the improbable journey from a high school star with poor grades and one scholarship offer to a fifth-round pick in the 2012 NFL draft who graduated from Temple with a degree in criminal justice.

Brian Logan, Whitehead's former high school coach and mentor who just retired after 26 years as a Newark police officer, said Whitehead, when he wasn't on the football field, would often be in the library when he went to visit him in college because he was so determined to better his family's life.

"They don't come out of where Tahir's from," Logan said. "They just don't. He made up his mind that he wanted something bigger than that and he wasn't going to settle for less. He made up his mind, he got the opportunity to go to Temple and he never looked back. He never wanted to come back to that."

Whitehead spent his first two NFL seasons playing mostly on special teams, then took over as the Lions' starting middle linebacker after Stephen Tulloch suffered a knee injury early in 2014.

He played both middle and outside linebacker the past two years, and moved exclusively to the weak side this season to accommodate rookie Jarrad Davis.

In Week 1, Whitehead made five tackles in a win over the Arizona Cardinals, and if history is any indication, he could be in for a big game Monday at MetLife Stadium.

As a senior in high school, Whitehead led his West Side High team to a state championship in the stadium. In 2014, he had 11 tackles there in a win over the New York Jets, and last year he made a team-high 12 stops and forced a fumble in a loss there to the Giants.

Whitehead said he'll have 20 or so friends and family members in the stands Monday, when he's bound to take time to reflect again on his journey to the NFL.

"For a kid like him to rise above the ordinary and to fulfill his dream, I feel like my dream is being fulfilled," Logan said. "He was a tough guy, he grew up in a tough neighborhood and he made the best out of it. He could have went either way, but he decided. That takes a special kind of kid. That's a gift."

Newark's tribute to its persevering pro: NFL LB Tahir Whitehead

By Barry Carter

March 27, 2018

Tahir Whitehead gazed at the football collage on the wall leading to the fitness center at his alma mater in Newark.

Staring back were pictures of him, each image displayed larger than the next. They show the linebacker's rise from high school to college to the NFL, all three frames of him in uniform.

He was No. 4 for the West Side High School Roughriders a decade or so ago; then No. 2, with the Temple University Owls; and lastly, wearing No. 59, he roamed the field six years for the Detroit Lions.

Whitehead, 27, smiled, pausing to reflect as he stood in the narrow hallway looking at the pictures.

"Walking into this building, the work that went into everything to get to this point. It's humbling, man. It's a blessing."

He loved playing the game growing up, but never thought that his alma mater, his city, the Board of Education, Essex County and state officials would honor him.

Tahir Whitehead Day on Friday was more than a ceremony to retire his jersey and have the school fitness center bear his name. This tribute showcased Whitehead as another jewel in Newark, who persevered and never forgot the city he loves.

He grew up in a tough neighborhood beset with shootings, drugs and gang-life, dangers that could have written a different ending.

But a strong single mother, Quadira Whitehead, kept him in line. As did his older brother, Quaheem Whitehead, a West Side High School football standout, who protected him from the streets. His football coaches, some who were police officers he admired, shielded him from negative elements, too.

In Whitehead, they saw his talent and leadership ability. Both traits anchored West Side's defense and helped the school win its first state championship in 2007.

Brian Logan, his head coach then, said Whitehead had an intangible quality that's hard to put into words.

"You know when they say that somebody has 'it,' " Logan said.

Whitehead had "it," and Logan knew he was going places because of a relentless work ethic.

When he struggled academically in high school, Whitehead buckled down and was eligible to attend Temple, where he shined as a defensive player and most importantly as a student, graduating a semester early with a 3.0 grade point average and a criminal justice degree.

In the fifth round of the 2012 NFL draft, the Detroit Lions must have seen what Logan did. He had the technique and skill to play in the league, courtesy of Tony Woods, his high school defensive coordinator, who played for three NFL teams in 10 years.

Once he arrived, Whitehead would not be outworked, a value that kept him in the NFL beyond the average two-year career of most players.

In six years with the Lions, Whitehead was on special teams first, then mastered three linebacker positions to earn a starting job. He led the team in tackles during the last three years, but his accomplishments get better. Whitehead is on his third contract, having signed a three-year deal with the Oakland Raiders for $18 million.

"I defied the odds," he said.

It's the common thread in his life, held together with a never-give-up attitude he inherited from his mother.

He looked at her from the podium Friday in the gymnasium, his voice cracking, tears filling his eyes.

Whitehead said she showed him and his four siblings "that nothing will ever be given to you in this world. You gotta go out there and you gotta make it happen."

She flicked away tears, too

"I'm extremely proud of him," she would say later.

The love spread to his brother, Quaheem, whom he called a "father figure," for motivating him to play the game.

His eyes then turned to Shannon, his wife of five years, and mother of their three sons, ages 9, 3 and 1. He said she is his shining light, the woman who has helped him grow and develop.

"Thank you, baby," he said, professing his love.

That's what real men do, and she's honored to be his wife, saying: "He's the hardest working man I know," and that he's a blessing in her life.

His heart beats just as strongly for Newark. Off the field, Whitehead puts the city on his shoulders, defending it against critics.

It's a pact he made with himself. No one would belittle the town that raised him, nor would that person fashion a stereotype when they see him sharply dressed, articulate and dignified.

This is how he drowns out societal noise that says Newark's young people will not amount to anything. He heard it as a kid, but never let the negative opinion become his reality.

The city's youth should not wear that label, either, he'd tell them during his many trips home when he's donated football cleats, uniforms and sponsored football camps. It's okay, he said, to be proud and to be from Newark.

"Their perception is that you're supposed to get out of here and never come back," he said. "My mentality has always been that when I do make it, I have to come back."

It's what he's been taught by his coaches, advice he also held onto from Marques-Aquil Lewis, the president of the board of education.

"I told him to remember the people that was there for you," Lewis said. "Don't get big-headed."

He never did. Just getting him to be honored Friday took a little cajoling from Lewis, who said Whitehead was ambivalent at first.

Whitehead took the honor to inspire the youth, leaving them with pointed thoughts to consume. Approach each day with a purpose and show the world what Newark is about. Run your race and don't get distracted.

"Keep your blinders on like a horse in horse race. Keep your eyes on what's in front of you and go get it."

James Ricks, 15, was listening. He plays linebacker at West Side like Whitehead once did.

"I'll take heed," he said, remembering Whitehead's most poignant phrase: "Never let anyone tell you what you can and cannot do."

You shouldn't, young man. Tahir Whitehead never did.

Raiders linebacker Tahir Whitehead gives his mom a present she'll never forget

Mothers seem to always go above and beyond to take care of their children, and it's for that reason Oakland Raiders linebacker Tahir Whitehead decided to do something special for his mom in return.

Athletes dream of being able to buy their mom, or family, a house of their dreams, but sadly very few are able to accomplish that goal; however, Whitehead became one of the few last week. The former Temple Owl took to social media Wednesday, and shared a picture of his mom signing the documents for her new home.

Thursday, No. 59 took a second to reflect on the moment he shared with his mom.

"It's humbling just to be blessed with the opportunity to purchase my mom a home," Whitehead said. "It was something just growing up that I always wanted to give back to my mom. She always sacrificed for us, and raising me and my siblings. I just wanted to give her a house as token of my appreciation, love, and just her doing what mothers do."

Mothers give without expecting anything in return, even when they deserve it. After raising Tahir and his siblings, there was no question that he felt she deserved her dream home, and watching her pick out the one she wanted was a special experience.

“It was extremely satisfying watching my mom and seeing the smile on her face, smiling from ear to ear,” he said also with a huge smile of his own. “It was definitely a good feeling, brought a smile to my face. It’s one of those things where it’s definitely a good feeling, and just going through the process [of buying a home] — it can be a long process — but I enjoyed it just knowing that was going to be the end goal. We were going to find something that she liked and it all worked out in the end.”

The idea of buying someone a home may seem unachievable to people, which is why Whitehead is grateful for the opportunity he’s been given in the NFL.

“I’m the type of guy that lives in the moment,” Whitehead explained. “Each and every day I wake up I realize how blessed and fortunate I am. I understand how fortunate I am, how much of a blessing it is to be put in the position that I’m in. It’s a position that a lot of people are trying to get to, guys scratching and clawing to get in this position each and every day. It’s a blessing by the man upstairs to be able to live this dream, and I cherish it. To be able to provide like that for your family is a great thing.”

Family comes first, and it’s awesome to see people like Tahir giving back to the people that helped him get to where he wanted to be.
