RAIDERS VS. SAINTS

THE HEAD COACHES

Raiders Head Coach Dennis Allen

When Dennis Allen became the 18th head coach in Raiders history on Jan. 30, 2012, he promised to field a tough, smart, disciplined and committed football team, noting that organizations win games in the National Football League by more than talent alone.

Allen, 40, is the NFL's youngest head coach, more than six months younger than the league's previously youngest coach, Pittsburgh's Mike Tomlin.

In 2012, his first year as a head coach at any level, Allen guided an Oakland team in transition, posting a 4-12 mark. The 2012 Raiders were defined by offensive, defensive and special teams units that improved throughout the season, laying a foundation for future success.

With 17 years of combined coaching experience at the college and professional levels, Allen enters his 12th NFL season. On six occasions during his 10 years as an NFL assistant, his team earned a playoff berth: 2002, 2004, 2006, 2009, 2010 and 2011. And four of those trips came after division championships: The NFC South with Atlanta in 2004 and New Orleans in both 2006 and 2009, and the AFC West with Denver in 2011.

His résumé also includes football's ultimate prize, a Super Bowl XLIV ring he earned by helping the Saints beat season MVP Peyton Manning, who threw for more than 4,500 yards with 33 touchdowns, and the Indianapolis Colts to conclude the 2009 campaign.

The NFL's second-youngest defensive coordinator when the Broncos hired him in 2011, he coordinated a defense that helped Denver parlay an AFC West crown into a Wild Card win and a date in the Divisional round. During his only year in Denver, despite starting three rookies most of the season, the Broncos improved 12 spots over 2010 in overall defensive ranking (from 32nd to 20th) and bettered their points allowed by eight spots (from 32nd to 24th).

Prior to joining the Broncos, Allen was an assistant coach for five seasons with New Orleans, first as assistant defensive line coach (2006-07), then as defensive backs coach (2008-10). Under Allen's direction in 2010, the Saints' secondary allowed an NFL-low 13 touchdown passes while ranking fourth in the NFL in net passing yards per game (193.9).

In 2009, Allen tutored a secondary that played a key role in helping the Saints to their first Super Bowl victory. His unit accounted for an NFL-high six interception returns for touchdowns and totaled 22 picks en route to their championship.

In 2008, his first year as secondary coach, Allen helped the Saints overcome season-ending injuries to both starting cornerbacks and contributed to a defense that held five opponents under 200 yards passing.

Allen assisted in tutoring the Saints' defensive line from 2006-07, helping defensive end Will Smith become a Pro Bowler in 2006 after posting 10½ sacks and forcing three fumbles.

He originally entered the NFL coaching ranks with Atlanta in 2002, spending four seasons with the Falcons as a defensive assistant. During his stint in Atlanta, the Falcons qualified for the playoffs twice—as a wild card in 2002 and as NFC South champs in 2004—and played in the NFC Championship in 2004.

Allen kicked off his football coaching career in 1996 as a graduate assistant at his alma mater, Texas A&M, where he was a four-year letterman as a safety. He worked with Aggies defensive backs for four seasons before coaching the secondary at the University of Tulsa from 2000-01.

Saints Head Coach Sean Payton

Sean Payton was named the 14th head coach in New Orleans Saints history on January 18, 2006. Since coming to New Orleans, Payton has led the Saints to four playoff berths, three NFC South division titles and the franchise's first World Championship with a 31-17 win over the Indianapolis Colts in Super Bowl XLIV.

Payton has a 67-37 overall record (.644), including a 5-3 postseason mark (.625) after the franchise had won only one playoff game prior to his arrival. Throughout his tenure, Payton holds the franchise's top winning percentage (.644) for a head coach and ranks sixth among current NFL head coaches (min. 50 games). The 2009-11 seasons under Payton marked the most successful stretch in team history as New Orleans posted a 41-14 mark (.759) including the postseason, the most victories in the NFL.

Payton's presided over the NFL's most prolific offense, leading the league in net yards per game in 2006, 2008, 2009 and 2011 and finishing first in scoring in 2008 and 2009. These are the only four times the Saints have led the NFL in offense. In franchise history, the Saints have scored at least 45 points on 15 separate occasions with 11 of these outputs occurring under Payton's watch. He has also sent a total of 26 selections to the Pro Bowl and earned the honor of coaching the NFC squad following the 2006 season.

During his career, Payton has had particular success tutoring quarterbacks. Drew Brees has thrived since arriving in New Orleans, as he holds or has tied a total of 25 club career, single-season and single-game records, eight of them NFL marks. Since signing with the Saints, Brees has completed 2,910 of 4,340 attempts (67.1%) for 33,571 yards with 244 touchdowns and a 98.2 passer rating. In 2011, he enjoyed one of the most prolific seasons in NFL history by a signal-caller as he completed 468-of-657 passes (71.2%) for 5,476 yards with 46 touchdowns and a 110.6 rating. Brees helped engineer the club's Super Bowl XLIV Championship campaign with his outstanding play, when he finished first in the league with a then-NFL record 70.6% completion percentage and also led the league with a then-career-high 109.6 rating and 34 touchdowns. In the postseason, the Super Bowl MVP threw for eight scores with no interceptions, playing mistake-free football on the way to the World Championship.

In 2009, en route to the Super Bowl XLIV title, Payton guided the Saints to the team's second NFC South title in four seasons with a 13-3 record. Along the way the Saints set a franchise-record for most regular season wins in a season (13). Their 16 overall victories were the most for a club in the history of the franchise. Payton once again was named as the top head coach in the NFL by numerous media outlets and recognized football chapters. The Saints finished as the NFL's top-ranked offense (sixth in rushing and fourth in passing) for the second straight year. New Orleans also ranked second in the league in opponent red zone touchdown percentage (39.3%). The Saints set what were then team records in scoring (510) and touchdowns (64) under Payton's watch and battled through the postseason with victories over Arizona (NFC Divisional Playoff) and Minnesota (NFC Championship) en route to Super Bowl XLIV. A club-record seven players were named to the Pro Bowl – Brees, Evans, center Jonathan Goodwin, Harper, safety Darren Sharper, tackle Jon Stinchcomb and Jonathan Vilma.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

The Raiders — who began play in the American Football League in 1960 — enter their 53rd year of professional football competition, including the last 43 as a member of the National Football League.

In five memorable decades — the 1960s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the 2000s — the Raiders have been dominant in professional football since Al Davis first pledged in 1963 to build the finest organization in pro sports.

During these Decades of Dominance, the Raiders have won an AFL Championship, four American Football Conference Championships, three World Championships of Professional Football, participated in five Super Bowls, played in 14 Championship Games, won or tied for 17 Division Championships, had 21 playoff seasons, finished 34 seasons at .500 or better and played in 40 postseason games.

Pro Football's Dynamic Organization placed first in the AFC West in 2000, 2001 and 2002 despite playing among the toughest schedules in the NFL in each of those seasons. With their appearance in Super Bowl XXXVII, the Raiders became the first NFL team to have had a season end in the Super Bowl in four different decades.

The Raiders are the only team to have been in Super Bowls in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s and the 2000s and have won the most games of any original AFL franchise.

The Silver and Black are the only AFC team — and one of just two NFL teams (Minnesota) — to have a season that advanced to the conference championship game in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s, the '90s and the 2000s.

The Raiders are one of only two original AFL teams to have captured three World Championships of Professional Football with Super Bowl victories. The Raiders are one of only five AFC teams to have won more than one Super Bowl since 1980.

In their five Super Bowl appearances, the Raiders have been led by four different head coaches and started four different quarterbacks.

The Raiders are the last AFC Western Division team to go to the Super Bowl.

Since 1963, when Al Davis first took over the failing Oakland franchise that had struggled to win only nine of 42 league games in the initial three seasons of the new AFL and pledged to build the finest organization in sports, the Raiders have totally dominated professional football in terms of consistent victory. During those memorable 50 years in Oakland and Los Angeles, the Raiders have won 421 league games, tied 11 and lost only 330.

"Commitment to Excellence" has never been an idle phrase to those who have proudly represented the Raider organization during the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and now the new millennium as shown by their domination of pro football.

Nineteen of the great players who proudly wore the Silver and Black, as well as Owner-Leader Al Davis and legendary Head Coach John Madden, have been enshrined in the Professional Football Hall of Fame. The Raiders have also produced five Pro Coaches of the Year.

In addition, 62 Pro Bowl players have made 180 Pro Bowl appearances representing the Silver and Black. In 1970, as the Raiders began their second decade of play, the merger between the AFL and NFL became a reality on the field. In the 1970 through 2012 period of interconference play, the Raiders have compiled a remarkable 92-69-1 record against present National Football Conference rivals.

Another innovation came to professional football in 1970 — "Monday Night Football." The Raiders total domination of this prime-time television series has seen the Silver and Black build an incredible 37-26-1 record in Monday night play. In the 43 years of this series, the Raiders are 15-8-0 in "Monday Night Football" games at home.

Through the decades — the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and now the 2000s — the Raiders have had the greatest players, the greatest coaches, the greatest plays and participated in the greatest games in the annals of professional sports.

TEAM NOTES

LOOKING AHEAD

The Raiders were 8-8 in 2010 and 8-8 in 2011, then finished a disappointing season in 2012. However, since the NFL expanded to a 16-game season in 1978, on 23 occasions, franchises have rebounded with a successful Year 4 (by reaching the playoffs and/or finishing with 10 or more wins). One of those teams, the 1998-2001 New England Patriots, took their lumps after changing head coaches like the Raiders in Year 3, then won the Super Bowl in Year 4.

NFL teams that finished 8-8 or better in consecutive years, then rebounded to reach playoffs or finish with 10-plus wins after setback season in Year 3, since 1978:

100-PLUS TACKLERS

Three Oakland defenders recorded 100-or-more tackles in 2012, marking the first time since 2006 that three Raiders have reached the century mark. In 2006, LB Kirk Morrison (127), LB Thomas Howard (110) and S Stuart Schweigert (107) all topped the century mark in tackles. S Tyvon Branch and LB Miles Burris return to the Silver and Black's defense, looking to reach that mark again.

Of the team's 352 combined starts in 2012, 175 (49.7%) were made by players with four or fewer years of NFL experience. Going younger, 97 (27.9%) of those 352 starts were made by players with three or fewer years of NFL experience. Additionally, only 26 of the 90 players currently on the roster have more than four years experience in the league.

ROSTER TURNOVER

Since General Manager Reggie McKenzie took over the job on January 10, 2012, Oakland's roster has undergone a major makeover. Of the 90 players currently on the squad, only 17 players were on the team during the 2011 season. Additionally, only K Sebastian Janikowski, the longest tenured Raider, has been with the Silver and Black for more than six seasons.

INDIVIDUAL NOTES

WOODSON RETURNS HOME

One of the most beloved players to ever put on the Silver and Black signed with the Raiders on May 22, 2013, returning him home to the team that drafted him with their first-round selection in the 1998 NFL Draft. After seven years with the Green Bay Packers, Woodson brings his Hall of Fame credentials back to the Raiders, solidifying a revamped secondary.

Woodson grew to fame at the University of Michigan, where he helped the Wolverines capture the 1997 Associated Press National Championship. His individual performance during the 1997 season earned him the Heisman Trophy, becoming the first predominantly defensive player ever to win the illustrious award. He was also honored with the Walter Camp Player of the Year, Jim Thorpe Award, Bronko Nagurski Award and Sporting News Player of the Year.

The fourth-overall selection by Al Davis in the 1998 NFL Draft made an immediate impact in the league, earning the Defensive Rookie of the Year and being selected to the Pro Bowl in each of his first four seasons (1998-2001). During his first stint with the Raiders, Woodson also earned first-team All-Pro accolades on three occasions (Associated Press in 1999, Sports Illustrated in 2000 and Sporting News and College & Pro Football Newsweekly in 2001).

After signing with the Packers prior to the 2006 season, Woodson continued to collect the hardware and add to his legacy. From 2006-12 with Green Bay, he was selected to four Pro Bowls (2008-11), two more first-team All-Pro selections (2009 and 2011) and the 2009 NFL Defensive Player of the Year. In addition to earning the highest honor a defensive player can achieve in a single season, Woodson followed up the 2009 campaign by helping the Packers win the Super Bowl in 2010.

All in all, the resume Woodson brings back to Oakland is impressive: The 1997 Heisman Trophy Award and National Championship in college, eight Pro Bowl selections, three first-team All-Pro selections, the NFL's 2009 Defensive Player of the Year award, four conference championship game appearances, two Super Bowl appearances and one Super Bowl championship. Charles Woodson has returned to the Silver and Black to write the next chapter.

A LEADER IN PICKS

DB Charles Woodson, who posted nine interceptions when he won the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year award in 2009, is among the NFL's active leaders with 55 interceptions. Woodson trails only Texans S Ed Reed on the list of active leaders.

SELECT COMPANY

Since 1995, only three players have won both the NFL's Defensive Rookie of the Year and Defensive Player of the Year awards in their career - Raiders DB Charles Woodson (1998 & 2009), Ravens OLB Terrell Suggs (2003 & 2011) and former Bears LB Brian Urlacher (2000 & 2005).

LONG-TERM THREAT

Remarkably, DB Charles Woodson has intercepted at least one pass in each of his first 15 NFL seasons. With a pick in 2013, Woodson will join an elite list of players to intercept a pass in at least 16-consecutive seasons.

TAKING IT TO THE HOUSE

WOODSON: QUICK HITS

- Woodson posted an interception touchdown in six-straight seasons (2006-11), becoming the first player in NFL history to do so. No other NFL player has accomplished the feat in more than four-consecutive seasons.
- In 2009, Woodson became the fourth player in NFL history (since sacks became an official statistic) to record at least nine interceptions and two sacks in a single season.
- Is the only player in NFL history to post at least seven interceptions and two sacks in back-to-back seasons.
- Became the first NFL player (since sacks became an official statistic) to record two interceptions, an interception touchdown, a sack and a fumble recovery in the same game when he posted all of those statistics on 11/26/09 at Det.

S Tyvon Branch has been one the most consistent Raiders over the last four seasons. Branch enjoyed a breakout year in 2009, posting 124 tackles in his first season as a starter, leading all DBs in that category. Branch followed it up by leading Oakland in tackles for 2010 and 2011. Additionally, Branch set a career high in 2012 with 146 tackles, good for second on the team.

Houston totaled seven tackles (six solo), one sack and a critical forced fumble in the Raiders' 26-23 overtime win. In overtime, Houston forced a fumble that was recovered by teammate CB Joselio Hanson, setting up K Sebastian Janikowski's game-winning field goal.

CLUTCH PORTER

With Peyton Manning and the Indianapolis Colts trailing by a touchdown and driving late in Super Bowl XLIV, CB Tracy Porter, then a member of the New Orleans Saints, made one of the clutch plays in NFL history. Porter stepped in front of Manning pass intended for Reggie Wayne, then raced 74 yards for the championship-sealing score. Porter, who has three interception touchdowns with less than 3:30 remaining in the game and his team leading by one score or less in his career, is in his first season with Oakland.

SACK MASTER

Raiders DE Andre Carter ranks eighth among active NFL players with 78.5 career sacks. In 2012, Carter's first season in Silver and Black, he posted 28 tackles (18 solo), 2.5 sacks and one forced fumble in 12 games.

BROTHER 'BACKERS

LB Kevin Burnett

Kevin and Kaelin Burnett would become the first brothers to play in a regular season game in the history of the Raiders franchise should they do so in 2013. The Burnett brothers are also the only active siblings in the NFL on the same team. Kevin, who is eight years older than Kaelin, joined Oakland on March 18, 2013, following two seasons with the Miami Dolphins. Kevin was originally drafted by the Dallas Cowboys in 2005 and has appeared in 120 games over his first eight seasons. Kaelin originally signed with the Raiders as an undrafted free agent prior to the 2012 season. Kaelin spent the first 10 games of the 2012 season on the practice squad before being elevated to the 53-man roster for the final six games.

On January 1, 2012, QB Matt Flynn did something that neither legendary Packers QBs Bart Starr nor Brett Favre ever did. Raiders vs. Cowboys

Oakland Raiders get off to winning start, down Dallas Cowboys

Jerry McDonald

August 9, 2013

OAKLAND -- Not great, but not bad, either.

There weren't any absolute truths to be gleaned from the Raiders 19-17 win over the Dallas Cowboys on Friday night in their exhibition opener, but there were signs the team could be an improvement over last season's 4-12 disaster.

No reason to schedule a parade, perhaps, but considering many prognosticators consider the Raiders to be one of the least-talented teams in the NFL, it was at least baby steps in the right direction before 43,013 fans at O.co Coliseum.

Sebastian Janikowski and Eddy Carmona each kicked a pair of field goals, and Brice Butler caught a 30-yard touchdown pass from Matt McGloin to account for the Raiders' scoring.

Janikowski connected from 51 and 40 yards, with Carmona connecting from 42 and 23 yards.

Dallas (1-1) got a 38-yard field goal by Dan Bailey, a 15-yard scoring pass from Kyle Orton to Cole Beasley and a 1-yard TD run by Joseph Dunbar.

"I'm pleased with the way we played, but you always look to see what you can improve on -- and we've got a lot to improve on," Raiders coach Dennis Allen said.

Starting quarterback Matt Flynn and backup Terrelle Pryor each had a turnover and led the team to a field goal in the first half.

Both also showed their respective strengths and weaknesses. Flynn (4 of 5, 37 yards) played it safe and operated within the framework of his talents, while Pryor (6 of 10, 88 yards and three rushes for 31 yards) showed the explosive athleticism that will be utilized whether he starts or not.

The Raiders went ahead for the last time 19-17 on a 23-yard field goal by Carmona following a B.W. Webb fumble of a Marquette King punt, with Eric Harper recovering at the 13-yard line.

Defensively, the Raiders put 10 new starters on the field with the first team, and that unit kept Dallas out of the end zone following Oakland's first turnover -- a sack-fumble lost by Flynn.

Only Allen knows who did and did not enhance their chances of being a factor in 2013, but one thing is for sure -- Butler bears watching in terms of being the outside playmaker the offense desperately needs.

On the Raiders' second possession of the third quarter, Butler accounted for 70 yards of a five-play, 81-yard drive, opening it with a 40-yard completion from McGloin and ending it with a diving catch for the touchdown while being guarded closely by former Raiders' camp cut Sterling Moore.

Butler admitted to tearing up on the ride to the game and was overcome with emotion coming out of the tunnel.

"I'm 23 years old. I waited my whole life for that moment," Butler said.

As for the touchdown, "I just dove, caught it, and after that I didn't know what to do with myself," Butler said.

Flynn, who moved well within the pocket, kept the Raiders in good down-and-distance situations and wasn't downgraded for the turnover, which Allen labeled a "protection error." It came on a blindside sack from linebacker Sean Lee.

After never putting Pryor in a read-option situation last season, the Raiders joined the club, and the Cowboys seemed mystified by it. Pryor's interception, thrown late and over the middle on a right roll to linebacker J.J. Wilcox, came on third-and-4 from the Dallas 6 on a play where he had room to keep running.

Rashad Jennings ran hard in short-yardage and also broke off a 16-yard run, finishing with nine carries for 39 yards and looking like a capable complement for Darren McFadden. McFadden carried three times for 5 yards.

Playing without defensive tackles Vance Walker and Pat Sims, as well as defensive end Lamarr Houston, the Raiders weren't able to mount much of a pass rush and Dallas quarterback Tony Romo at times took advantage.

On one play, Romo had a full seven seconds before throwing an incomplete pass.

Romo was 4 of 5 for 65 yards on a drive that ended with no points when Tyvon Branch blocked a 26-yard field goal attempt by Bailey.

"On their first field goal, Tracy Porter got really close to blocking it so I think the wing tried to overextend to get him and I just shot the gap," Branch said.

Rookie starting linebacker Sio Moore, 6-foot-1, 240 pounds, played a handful of snaps as a defensive end with his hand on the ground.

The third deck east side structure unofficially known as "Mount Daivis" was covered in black tarp with a large Raiders shield. It will remain so all season, and stadium capacity will be approximately 53,000.

Second-year defensive end Jack Crawford, whom Allen cited as a player who needs to step up his performance, batted down a Romo pass to help stall the Cowboys after they opened at the Oakland 16 after Flynn's lost fumble.

With Jacoby Ford out with an unspecified injury, running back-turned cornerback Taiwan Jones lined up as a kick return specialist. He took a kickoff 5 yards deep in the end zone and returned it 29 yards.

Sixth-round draft pick Stacy McGee joined third-round pick Moore as rookies in the starting lineup.

Raiders captains were Charles Woodson and Nick Roach on defense, Flynn and McFadden on offense and Janikowski on special teams. Woodson received the biggest cheer when the defense was introduced before the game. It was his first time at the Coliseum as a Raider since a 30-21 loss to the New York Giants to end the 2005 season.

Former Raiders quarterback Daryle Lamonic lit the Al Davis torch before the game.

McGloin and Butler steal show in Raiders win

Raiders fans came to the Coliseum or tuned in (tape-delayed of course) Friday night to get a look at new starting quarterback Matt Flynn, root for their favorite in backup Terrelle Pryor and try to put names to faces on the defensive side of the ball.

They walked away, though, talking about the dynamic Matt McGloin-to-Brice Butler connection. The undrafted quarterback from Penn State hit the seventh-round pick from San Diego State twice in one third-quarter drive, once for 40 yards and then for 30 on a pretty diving touchdown catch.

"I am 23 years old and I have been waiting on that moment my whole life," Butler said.

The Raiders went on to win 19-17 over the Cowboys in their preseason opener, which means a tiny notch above nothing, Especially considering that running back Darren McFadden and safety Charles Woodson barely broke a sweat and that top draft picks D.J. Hayden and Menelik Wartson and two thirds of their starting defensive line didn't play.

Flynn and Pryor each led the Raiders to field goals, and while Pryor moved the team a little better, he also threw an ill-advised interception across his body when he was rolling out right.

"I got greedy," Pryor said.

Flynn and Pryor each played a quarter, and then it was time for McGloin and Butler. McGloin showed a strong arm on both throws and just when one thought he led Butler too far on the pass into the endzone, the 6-foot-3, 213-pound Butler dove and extended his arms and hauled it in.

"I knew Matt was going to throw it to me, because he always does at training camp," Butler said. "I was going ... and my legs weren't quite giving me what I needed them to give me, so I dove."

McGloin has surprisingly pulled ahead of fourth-round pick Tyler Wilson in a battle for the team's No. 3 spot. That's not a surprise anymore, and McGloin was 4-of-7 for 78 yards, the TD and a quarterback rating of 135.7.

"Matt did a really nice job," Raiders coach Dennis Allen said.

Wilson struggled on his first two series in the fourth quarter. He threw behind Travionte Session in the endzone and then on third and five, he almost got rookie running back Latavius Murray killed with soft throw across the middle.

"There's still some growing we have to do with him," Allen said of Wilson.

As for Butler's growth, things continue to go according to plan. Not his necessarily, but the big fella's upstairs. A prep All-American in Norcross, Ga., Butler went to USC on top of the world. But he learned a little humility and eventually wound up at San Diego State, where he caught all of 24 passes last season.

"God doesn't make mistakes. He obviously thought I needed to learn a lesson, and I wouldn't change anything ... the chance to represent the shield, the way it's turned out," said Butler, who admitted to getting teary-eyed before Friday's game. "College was a humbling experience."

The Raiders' receivers coach, Ted Gilmore, was with Butler at USC in 2011 and was calling the receiver well before this year's draft.

"He was telling me he was going to fight for me, and that he thought I could make it in the NFL and contribute to the Raiders," Butler said.

Butler took a huge leap over third-year vet Andre Holmes in the battle for a roster spot, and No. 4 receiver Juron Criner should be looking over his shoulder.

"He's a big target, he's fast, he's able to get in and out of breaks," Allen said. "He's really had an impressive camp."

"The thing you have to make sure with all rookies is keep your thumb on him and make sure he doesn't read too many of the good things you're going to write about him. ... Keep him improving."

Instant replay: McGloin steals show, Raiders gut out win

Scott Bair

August 9, 2013

OAKLAND – Raiders quarterback Matt McGloin wasn't supposed to make the 53-man roster. That was the prevailing thought even a week ago, but the undrafted rookie out of Penn State has shown real moxie of late.

That was evident in the third quarter of Friday's 19-17 win over the Dallas Cowboys at O.co Coliseum, when he made the most of playing time afforded.

McGloin's play was impressive, and not just because the bar was set so low. He scored 10 points on his first two drives, including a 30-yard touchdown pass to fellow rookie Brice Butler. He left the game with the Raiders up 16-10, having completed 4-of-7 passes for 78 yards. Granted he played against the Cowboys' third team, but his decision-making, accuracy and poise was a real surprise for someone so young.

Old guys in the secondary played well together, and looked like a cohesive unit of quality. Charles Woodson and Tyvon Branch were strong at safety and Mike Jenkins and Tracy Porter looked good at cornerback.

The first-team defense didn't allow a touchdown, and responded well to middle linebacker Nick Roach's pre-snap adjustments. It was an important step for a unit expected to have nine new starters.

"I'm excited to see what we can be," Roach said. "It's early to tell a lot of things, but the foundation we've been able to set over the past couple weeks was clear. With the start we had on defense, I think this was good for us."

McFadden's quick cameo: Running back Darren McFadden started Friday's exhibition opener, but he didn't play much. He had just five yards on three rushes – the interior line collapsed on each – and had an 8-yard reception before being pulled.

For starters: Quarterback Matt Flynn showed the composure necessary to lead this offense. He lost a fumble after being sacked, but that was due to confusion on the offensive line. He led a field-goal drive on his second and final series, which included two clutch third-down conversions.

Premium reserves: Running back Rashad Jennings showed great vision, patience and physicality in his first game as a Raider. He had 39 yards on nine carries, including a 16-yard romp that was McFadden-esque. He seems a good fit to backup McFadden, but continued solid play might warrant carries, whether McFadden's healthy or not.

Quarterback Terrelle Pryor looked good at times and terrible at others, showing why Flynn is the clear-cut starting quarterback. Pryor made plays with his arm (6-for-10, 88 yards) and his feet (three rushers, 31 yards) but he threw a pass into heavy traffic that was intercepted in the end zone.

Safety Usama Young continues to play starter-worthy football. He had an interception in the third quarter, and laid a big hit in the first. He looks like a solid backup at both safety positions.

Rookie report: Linebacker Sio Moore needed just three snaps to record his first sack as a Raider. He sacked quarterback Tony Romo with time afforded by excellent pass coverage, but showed vicious power with his tackle. Cornerback D.J. Hayden and offensive lineman Menelik Watson sat out with injury, but quarterback Tyler Wilson played late in the second half. The fourth-round pick was sacked on his first play (not his fault) and couldn't find the end zone with great field position. It's clear the defensive end David Bass is a project with deficiencies against the run.

On the bubble: A tight position battle is being waged at wide receiver, with just a few roster spots remaining. Second-year pro Andre Holmes has a knack for winning balls in the air, while Butler has shown rangy athleticism worthy of consideration. Butler is a solid route runner, so clear on his touchdown reception.

Special start: The Raiders had quick success on special teams. Tyvon Branch blocked a short field-goal attempt and Sebastian Janikowski had two first-half field goals, including one from 51 yards out. The punt coverage team also created a turnover in the fourth quarter. Eric Harper recovered a fumble that set up a field goal for Eddie Carmona.

Not cool: Raiders punt returner Phillip Adams was injured on a trying to make a fair catch. He clearly called for space, but was leveled by Eric Frampton. He was medically treated and limped off the field. Sitting it out: Hayden (hamstring) and Watson (calf) couldn't go, in addition to several others. LG Lucas Nix (knee), DE Lamarr Houston, LBs Miles Burris, Billy Boyko and Kaluka Maiava, WR Jacoby Ford (knee) and DTs Pat Sims (hamstring) and Vance Walker (paternity leave) did not play.

What's next: The Raiders head to New Orleans for their first road game of the season on Aug. 16. They have a full week to recover before a major test for their revamped defense. The starters should increase their snap count and play the entire first half.

Oakland Raiders notebook: Coach Dennis Allen says team hit on all cylinders in win over Dallas

Jerry McDonald

August 10, 2013

NFL coaches can be difficult to please in the preseason, but there was no mistaking a hint of satisfaction in the voice of Raiders coach Dennis Allen on Saturday as he discussed an exhibition victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

Following a season where games often went sideways or backwards in terms of the best laid plans, the Raiders carried out a plan of attack in all three phases of the game in a 19-17 win Friday night.

"I thought for the first preseason game I was really pleased with the execution of our team," Allen told Bay Area reporters by conference call. "We played the game physical, I thought we were able to control the clock on offense.

"A lot of times these preseason games can get sloppy ... for the first preseason game the execution and attention to detail was pretty good."

The Raiders had just four penalties for 35 yards, caught the ball better than they have through much of training camp and got a solid all-around effort from special teams.

Another plus was the Raiders came out of the game healthy, with only an undisclosed injury to linebacker and special teams player Keenan Clayton. Allen didn't consider the injury serious.

With a difficult test coming Friday night in New Orleans, Allen wants to see more intelligent football, citing an offensive sequence where the Raiders didn't burn enough clock time late in the game with a lead and an end zone interception by quarterback Terrelle Pryor.

"We have to continue to learn how to play in situations ... playing the game smart," Allen said.

Pryor, who it appears will get playing time even if Matt Flynn retains the starting job, was immediately counseled about his error after the interception on a forced pass at the Cowboys 6-yard line on third-and-4.

"That's been one thing we've consistently talked to Terrelle about," Allen said. "In those situations, don't be afraid to use your legs ... not every play has to be a great play, not every play has to be a spectacular play. Sometimes the best play is to make the easy throw, keep yourself on schedule."

•Allen, who complimented third-string quarterback Matt McGloin on his poise, said it was too early to say whether the Raiders would consider keeping four quarterbacks on the roster.

- Guard Lucas Nix, who returned to practice last week but didn't play against Dallas, has a separate injury that Allen doesn't consider serious. Allen said starter Tony Bergstrom acquitted himself well as a pass blocker but needs to be more stout in the running game.

- Guard Mike Brisiel will likely be rested Sunday after a subpar performance against Dallas, Allen said.

- Ryan Robinson, a 6-foot-4, 255-pound undrafted free agent out of Oklahoma State, will get more of a look after showing some pass rush ability against Dallas. The same goes for undrafted free agent rookie safety Chance Casey, who was cited by Allen for strong play. Casey is from Baylor.

- Cornerback Phillip Adams raised his level of play in the secondary, Allen said. Cornerback Taiwan Jones still needs work at a new position but continues to excel on special teams.

Allen looking for new Raiders leaders

By Rael Enteen

June 3, 2013

ALAMEDA – The second-year regime of general manager Reggie McKenzie and Dennis Allen can only put the Raiders in position to succeed up to a certain point. McKenzie can load the roster with promising players and Allen can teach them how to make the most of their talent, but any franchise needs leaders to step up on the field, in practice and on Sundays.

“We’re looking to identify who are those leaders going to be,” Allen said after the Raiders started their third OTA session Monday. “Those are things that have got to come out of these OTAs, minicamp, when we get into training camp. On the good football teams the players take over, the locker room takes over.”

More often than not, a team’s starting quarterback fills that leadership role. Carson Palmer embraced that responsibility, but is now plying his trade with the Arizona Cardinals. Allen is preparing to start the season with Matt Flynn as his starting quarterback, but doesn’t expect him to bark orders at teammates right away.

Allen acknowledged that Flynn has “some of those leadership skills,” but quickly moved on to single out running back Marcel Reece as a player he’s asked to be more vocal.

“That was one of our challenges to [Reece] this year,” Allen said. “We’ve got to identify guys on both sides of the ball that really can take that leadership role on, and it really comes down a lot to, I don’t know if I want to use the term peer pressure, but I mean that’s really what it is. It’s accountability to each other in the locker room, that you don’t want to let the guy next to you down.”

Running back Darren McFadden echoed Allen’s sentiments that Reece is more than qualified for the job.

“I love working with Marcel,” McFadden said. “We’re like best friends on and off the field. We’re just going out there trying to lead our offense and get everybody on the same page.”

The Raiders were not often on the same page during a 4-12 season in 2012. With so many new names on the roster this year, it’s even more imperative for the team to eliminate mental mistakes, something a team leader is usually responsible for enforcing.

Even though Flynn didn’t get an obvious vote of confidence from Allen, he believes he can develop into his own type of Raiders leader over time.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

“When you look at guys who are leaders of the team and who are quarterbacks around the league, everybody has a different leadership style,” Flynn said. “Some guys are vocal, some guys are laid back, but there’s just a different style. If you’re going to become a leader, you need to find that niche, how you fit in to the system, fit in to the guys in the locker room, and just kind of go accordingly.”

Like Allen before him, Flynn tempered expectations about being able to lead the team in OTAs without ever stepping foot on the field together for a regular season game.

“That’s something that’s not going to come overnight,” Flynn said. “It starts coming when you get live bullets out there and you start getting into the dog days.”

Even if Reece embraces Allen’s challenge to step up as a leader and Flynn finds his voice as a field general, that’s only half the equation. The Raiders also need leadership on defense, something that was sorely lacking when Rolando McClain was still considered an every down middle linebacker.

Allen wouldn’t comment on the lack of leadership last year or acknowledge McClain as being part of the problem,

“I’m on to this year; I’m not really concerned with where we were last year,” Allen said. “That’s behind us. I’m worried about what we’re going to do this year and how we’re going to respond this year.”

McClain’s replacement, Nick Roach, is a player Allen has high hopes for.

“Nick’s highly intelligent and he’s athletic,” Allen said. “He’s done a nice job of being the quarterback of our defense. He’s kind of taken on that role and really has a passion about leading that team.”

While Roach is being groomed to run the defense from the middle of the field, the Raiders can also lean on veterans Charles Woodson and Andre Carter to help their younger players improve.

“I just think when you have experience like myself and Charles, the younger guys do listen and they want to have that same experience we have,” Carter said. “For vets like ourselves, we want guys to play 6,7,8 years. The average career for an NFL player is three years. For me to play this long, and Charles also, is a testament that the strong will survive. So when we talk to the younger guys, we let them know, ‘Hey, you can have this dream for as long as you want it but it’s up to you to do the right thing.’”

Carter, a 13-year veteran out of Cal who has played for the San Francisco 49ers, Washington Redskins and New England Patriots before joining the Raiders last season, understands the importance of a middle linebacker, or 'Mike,' directing traffic.

"The Mike position is probably one of the key elements to having a good defense," Carter said. "He gets the communication to everyone, the defensive linemen, the cornerbacks, the safeties. If you don't have that you're not going to be successful. The Mike linebacker is definitely the engine of the defense so for [Roach] to be vocal is very vital because we need that on as well as off the field."

As Allen pointed out Monday, the Raiders still have 51 days until they start training camp. The need for an established leader is not dire yet. But as evidenced by McClain's tenure in Oakland, expecting a player to assume that role based solely on their position on the field is not a recipe for success.

DAVID AUSBERRY

SILVER AND BLACK PRIDE

David Ausberry ready to take over as Raiders top tight end

By Levi Damien

Aug 1, 2013

David Ausberry is establishing himself as the starting tight end for the Raiders. He showed himself to be on the verge of breaking out last off-season before disappearing last season. Aside from one very memorable play (sorry, Kevin Burnett), he barely saw the field.

Ausberry took a backseat to fourth year tight end, Brandon Myers. But as a second tight end in an offense which focused on tight ends as much as the Raiders did, one would expect more than his 7 catches for 92 yards.

According to Dennis Allen, Ausberry's issues stem from the mental side of things.

"The concern with David Ausberry has nothing to do with physical ability," said Dennis Allen. "It's really a lot more about the mental aspect of the game, understanding how to play the tight end position. He's worked extremely hard. We always knew that he had receiving talent. Where he's improved the most is No. 1, assignments, he's been a lot better on his assignments. And No. 2 is his ability to block both in the running game and pass protection."

Ausberry has all the abilities necessary to be a very good tight end in this league. He shows it consistently in camp practices. Raiders fans have seen it in small doses in games as well. Now the job is his to lose and his transition from wide receiver, which he played in college, looks to be complete.

"It's much better than when I started playing tight end," said Ausberry. "There's still room for improvement, but the transition was a big one. It's a whole different world in the trenches. My blocking is better, but that's come with experience and a whole lot of reps."

The time is now for Ausberry. The team drafted two tight ends in the sixth round to provide some insurance but they didn't go out and sign a big name free agent to play tight end with the idea that he would be ready to step up and be the man.

ALEX BARRON

SILVER AND BLACK PRIDE

Alex Barron blazing a comeback trail with Raiders

Levi Damien

August 6, 2013

When the Raiders signed Alex Barron this off-season, most people were thinking he had no chance of making this team. After all, he hasn't played a down in the NFL for two seasons. Those players rarely are able to break back into the league. But thus far in camp, Alex Barron has looked every bit the former first round pick.

Dennis Allen has been pleasantly surprised in Barron's performance.

"I've been impressed with the things Alex Barron has done and that's been a nice surprise for us," said Allen. "He's a guy that's kind of getting that second chance and he's taking advantage of it. . . [He's] had a nice camp so far. I'm really anxious to see what a guy like that does when he gets into the preseason games, and see if what he's been doing out here on the practice field translates into the game."

The Raiders are the perfect team to give Barron that second chance. It has been a while since he had an opportunity like this.

After spending the first five seasons of his career as a fulltime starter with the Rams, things went downhill fast for this former 19th overall pick. In his final season in St Louis in 2009, his ten penalties for 50 yards was the most in the NFL. He spent one season the Cowboys appearing in 11 games with just one start. That was the last time he played in a regular season game.

Then he signed with the Saints in the off-season but suffered a knee injury and was placed on IR for the entire 2011 season. Last year, he tried out for the 49ers and left unsigned before being signed by the Seahawks. He would spend training camp in Seattle but be among the final roster cuts and receive no interest in his services last season.

By the time this off-season rolled around, Alex Barron was now not even an NFL afterthought -- he was not a thought at all.

We've all heard the saying with regard to the NFL; 'What have you done for me lately'. It's one of the more common phrases used to judge a player or coach. That is just as true for players who haven't played at all lately. Once they are away from football for more than a season, they're out of sight, out of mind.

"Once you're away (from the NFL) you kinda just sorta fade away," said Barron. "That's just kind of how the league is. Nothing I could do about it. Only thing I could do was keep working and keep waiting and that's pretty much all that was."

Come this off-season, this 30-year-old former everyday starting left tackle didn't receive a single invitation to work out for a team. The NFL had clearly moved on from him. If Barron was to get back into the eyes and minds of the NFL, he would have to make it happen.

"It was actually a pro day back at school," said Barron. "I had a little trouble getting workouts because I hadn't been in last season. . . So, I just took it upon myself knowing at my school there were gonna be a lot of coaches, head coaches, scouts, whatever the case was. I had nothing to lose. I was in shape and I had been working so it was like 'well, only thing I can do is show them what I got'."

The Raiders had scouts in attendance at that Florida State pro day. They were there to see the rookies along with right tackle Menelik Watson. But while they were impressed with Watson enough to make him their round two pick, Barron also caught their eye. Now in an odd twist of fate, Watson has been injured all camp and Barron has been taking his place and making a strong case of his own.

The Raiders have had Barron moving from back and forth from right and left tackle. He has been the primary backup on both sides behind Jared Veldheer and Khalif Barnes respectively. So, even when Watson does return to action, there will be a room for both of them.

Watching him dominate edge rushers in blocking drills and earn the respect of the coaches more each day makes one wonder if he can clean up his penalties, just how good he could be. He would certainly offer the team some security in case a starter were to be lost to injury. That's a great value to the rebuild effort in Oakland.

KEVIN BURNETT

SILVER AND BLACK PRIDE

Kevin Burnett has an enormous chip on his shoulder

By Levi Damien

Aug 4, 2013

There are a total of 60 new players on this Raiders team. That's two thirds of the roster. By now we have figured out that there is a common thread among those 60 players Reggie McKenzie and Dennis Allen have added - they are all have something to prove - but I can say without a doubt none of them have a bigger chip on their shoulder than Kevin Burnett.

The former second round pick is entering his ninth season in the NFL and his fourth team. In the first four of those seasons - all in Dallas -- he started a total of 4 games. When he left the Cowboys and joined the Chargers, he saw the most starts he had in his career. He started 7 games in his first season there and all 16 games the following season.

So, by his sixth season in the league, he had finally shown enough to earn his place as the fulltime starter. Then he was not brought back.

He went to the Dolphins and started every game the past two seasons, raising his tackle numbers each the past three seasons including having over 100 tackles each of the past two. Then he was released. The team felt like they had found an upgrade with Raiders former linebacker, Philip Wheeler and Burnett was not in the plans.

So, it seems though he finally had become a fulltime starter, he still wasn't quite good enough. He was still a stopgap until something better came along. All throughout his career, he has struggled. Four years of toiling in obscurity, then four years of not 'he'll do for now' and now at age 30, he must deal with the age question.

These facts have come together to create one enormous chip on his shoulder.

"People say, 'Oh, he got this, he did this, he's sorry, he's this, he's that.'" Said Burnett. "My numbers have gone up every season, so...what's that a product of? You know, I've been on good football teams, had other people around me so it's not just that I'm on a sorry football team. The guy can play."

"The fact that I can do it all and the ability to play smart," Burnett said of his skill set. "Not a lot of football players play smart. Not a lot of players help themselves before the snap of the play and that's what I love about myself. Given the fact that everybody wants to say, 'He's getting older,' or 'He's this he's that. He sucks.' Whatever. I've had 200-tackle seasons back to back. So, it's all in the eye of the beholder."

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

Another common thread seems to be versatility. Jason Tarver does a lot of different things with this team's linebacking corps and Burnett can be found lining up at each outside linebacker position as well as inside linebacker at times. The changing alignments aside, the Raiders are severely depleted in camp due to injury. He is considered somewhat of a 'jack of all trades' even if his critics might add 'master of none'.

"In this league, you've got to be able to play every position. You've got to be able to play sam, mike, will, strong safety, free safety, defensive end because on any given play they can say, 'Flip it.' And then, when that happens, you gotta be able to run the defense. So, it helps to know where everybody's going, know what everybody's doing.

"Football is a game of versatility. It's built around how much you can do for your football team to help them win. So, it's not about what position you play because all that is, is a label. . . Football players put themselves in the best position to succeed. So do coaches. Now, it's about: what role am I going to fulfill on this particular play? What role am I going to ask this player to play at this particular point in time."

The unique position this NFL veteran is in compared to some of the other new Raiders is he has been a starter for three plus seasons. Most guys who feel like they have a lot to prove are unknowns or have toiled as a backup throughout their careers.

Burnett clearly needs no added incentive for him to play with a sense of urgency. But he can't speak for any of the other newly signed players on this team. Most of those players are on one-year deals (Burnett is on a two-year deal) and according to him, those deals were made with motivation in mind.

"If you look at the construction of this team, it's not by happenstance a lot of people are here on short-term deals," said Burnett. "See, what you do by doing that is you create a hungry football team. By creating a hungry football team, you're creating a team that plays with a sense of urgency, guys that are not complacent."

I would assume he doesn't include himself among that group which would need a short term deal to keep from being complacent. Disproving those who would slight or disrespect his abilities is clearly all the motivation he needs.

ANDRE CARTER

SACRAMENTO BEE

Carter hopes to help Raiders pass rush

By Michael Wagaman

Aug 3, 2013

NAPA, Calif. -- Andre Carter's training camp routine is a lot different from when the Oakland Raiders' defensive end entered the NFL more than a decade ago.

No more mornings of sleeping in or trotting out to practice without so much as a warm-up stretch. The 34-year-old pass rush specialist is up and on the field working out the kinks long before the day's workouts begin, joining fellow veteran Charles Woodson hours ahead of their teammates.

It's a regimen that has become even more vital to Carter these days.

Almost two years after suffering a ruptured quadriceps tendon in his left leg while with the New England Patriots, Carter is trying to maintain his spot on the Raiders defensive line after joining the team early in the 2012 season.

"It's funny the things you do to prepare for camp the older you get," Carter said. "I'm with Woodson getting warmed up a couple hours before practice. You wake up at 6:40 a.m., take a hot shower, loosen up a little bit, get the hips right. The body, to play for this long, has taken a beating."

Carter is entering his 13th NFL season and has 78½ sacks, eighth-most among active players. But the seventh overall pick in the 2001 draft is coming off a year in which he had only 19 tackles and 2½ sacks in 12 games.

Although he has had to take on an increased workload early in training camp while Lamarr Houston sits out practice because of an disclosed injury, Carter will likely be a third-down pass-rusher in Oakland's defense.

Houston attended practice Saturday but no timetable has been given for his return, leaving Carter to carry the load.

"Any time you have guys like Charles Woodson (and) Andre Carter ... they understand what it takes to be a championship-level football team," Raiders coach Dennis Allen said. "We expect them to go out and make plays for us, but part of their job description is to help some of these young guys not just learn what to do but how to do it and how to play the NFL game."

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

How much Carter will be a part of the defensive line rotation once Houston returns remains uncertain. Houston is one of only two starters brought back from last year's team.

Oakland signed Jason Hunter in the offseason and drafted David Bass with one of its seventh-round draft picks. Hunter has been taking all the reps at left defensive end with the Raiders' first-team defense during training camp while Carter has been getting the majority of work on the right side.

"We have been on point as far as communication," Carter said. "You have to get the physical reps, that's the only way you're going to get better. But overall we've made great progression despite the changes. We all kind of feed off each other."

Carter is relishing this training camp more than most.

He was out of the NFL at this time a year ago after tearing the quadriceps tendon completely off the bone in his left leg. The injury required surgery and scared away most teams from pursuing Carter once he had recovered.

The Raiders brought him in for a pair of workouts before eventually signing him to a contract in September. He got off to a slow start but had 11 tackles and 1½ sacks over a three-game stretch last December.

Oakland re-signed Carter in April to a one-year deal worth $1 million in the hopes he can help a pass rush that generated just 25 sacks in 2012.

"Obviously, he can go into the rotation and play first and second down but I see him a little bit more as a third-down type of player," Allen said. "The great thing about Andre is that he's a pro so he's going to prepare himself for all situations."

Matt Flynn relishes rare second chance

By Scott Bair

August 9, 2013

Matt Flynn understands that opportunities lost are rarely regained. Especially in the NFL. Especially following a failure so public.

The quarterback was a prized free agent in 2012, resting largely on the laurels of two outstanding starts in Green Bay. The game tape was good enough to woo several suitors, whom Flynn considered equally before choosing Seattle and the three-year, $26 million contract offered.

We know how this story goes. Flynn was the presumptive starter heading into camp, and lost out to an unheralded rookie.

That's the Cliffs Notes version. Additional, pertinent info: Turns out Russell Wilson is pretty darn good. Turns out Flynn had elbow troubles in training camp that hindered his effectiveness, which the team kept quiet. And, it turns out Flynn and Seahawks coach Pete Carroll won't be best friends forever.

All that is prelude to this. The Raiders gave Flynn another chance to start, albeit at a reduced rate with no future risk. There is no guaranteed money in next season's pay structure, so this is Flynn's best, and probably last chance to be a franchise quarterback.

"I came in here excited, feeling blessed to have this opportunity, a second opportunity really, to get a starting job in the NFL," Flynn said. "I came in here with the mentality that I am going to be that guy. You have to walk in with confidence and have a presence about yourself. You have to go in there and act like you're the guy."

There is less confidence he can be. Somehow, after throwing just nine regular-season passes in 2012, Flynn was downgraded from hot commodity to penny stock. Without a polished resume, his ability to be a full-time starter is in doubt. His arm strength has been questioned – and rightfully so – but Flynn throws short and intermediate passes of quality.

That's what he'll be asked to do in coordinator Greg Olson's offense, which is built around running back Darren McFadden. Flynn must be a game manager and team leader in this structure, which he's done well since becoming a Raider this offseason.

"He always seems to make the right play," McFadden said. "He's a great leader out there. He puts us in the right situations, and he hasn't turned the ball over many times in this camp. I'm looking forward to seeing him in a live game situation."

Raiders' Matt Flynn honed thick skin under Aaron Rodgers

By Jerry McDonald

Aug 7, 2013

NAPA -- Matt Flynn knows about doubters. When he makes his debut as the Raiders' starting quarterback Friday night, the skeptics will be out in force, both in the press box and the stands.

But before he ever got a chance to feel his own NFL scrutiny, Flynn got to witness a teammate deal with it on a much larger scale in Green Bay. When the rookie seventh-round pick arrived in 2008, Brett Favre was waffling on his decision to retire. That left prospective starter Aaron Rodgers in the middle of a maelstrom.

Favre was a three-time MVP and a franchise icon, and the team's decision to move ahead with Rodgers was unpopular. General manager Ted Thompson had drafted two quarterbacks, Brian Brohm out of Louisville in the second round, and Flynn out LSU in the seventh, to fight for the backup job.

"What Aaron went through was a circus," Flynn recalled. "There were all the questions from the media, people heckling him in the crowd. I don't think anybody else could have handled it any better than he did.

"I spent eight or nine hours a day with him, and you'd never have known what he was going through. There was never any sign of frustration."

Rodgers, who went on to win Super Bowl XLV and win a Most Valuable Player award, is a central figure to Flynn's story. When Flynn gracefully handled losing the starting job to rookie Russell Wilson last season in Seattle, where Flynn had signed as a free agent, it was a maturity learned from watching his close friend and mentor.

"He's handled himself well in some tough situations," Rodgers said in a phone interview from Green Bay. "He was a backup who knew he could play, got better, improved his skill set, learned how to prepare and did really well when he got the opportunity to play in a couple of games.

"It was a tough situation in Seattle, but he's got an opportunity in Oakland to do something great, and I'm really proud of him."

It hasn't taken Flynn long to establish himself as the clear No. 1 in training camp. The current backup, Terrelle Pryor, is still a work in progress. Meanwhile, fourth-round pick Tyler Wilson has struggled mightily.

But the doubters aren't going anywhere soon.

The Raiders' run of 10 consecutive non-winning seasons and Flynn's two-game body of work as an NFL starter led ESPN analyst Ron Jaworski to list Flynn 32nd among NFL quarterbacks.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

In his first start, Flynn completed 24 of 37 passes for 251 yards, three touchdowns and an interception in a 31-27 Packers loss to New England in 2010. Then, in the 2011 regular-season finale, he set franchise records by hitting 31 of 44 passes for 480 yards, six touchdowns and one interception in a 45-41 win over Detroit.

Still, Jaworski said film study reveals limitations in arm strength, and noted, "When I think of Flynn, I'm reminded of Bill Walsh and his strong belief that a good coach manipulates the play of his quarterback and his pass concepts and his play calling. That will have to be the case with Flynn in Oakland."

Toward that end, offensive coordinator Greg Olson has Flynn in an offense featuring a power running game and plenty of safe, ball-control throws.

While lacking the big arm of predecessor Carson Palmer, Flynn has shown ability to escape pressure and throw to a secondary receiver or scramble for first-down yardage.

Flynn's job will be to command the huddle, make the correct reads and spread the ball around. He began working with some of his receivers at Laney College shortly after being traded.

"He's got incredible physical and mental toughness," Rodgers said. "He really understands the game and how to use his ability to get the ball to his teammates in good positions. He's a gamer-type, and you've seen that when he's gotten a chance to play."

Flynn has surpassed expectations before. He didn't start at LSU until his senior year, after JaMarcus Russell declared for the draft as a junior. Flynn led the Tigers to the BCS national championship over Ohio State.

In Green Bay, Flynn beat out Brohm to be the backup, with coach Mike McCarthy lauding his instinct, disposition and leadership skills.

Pryor, who is getting a look in some specialty packages to take advantage of his elusiveness, has supporters among the Raiders fan base.

Flynn promises only to be himself, applying what he learned from Rodgers to his own situation. And he won't spend time worrying about the doubters.

"I'm not going to try and be somebody I'm not, and when I get an opportunity, I'll make the most of it," Flynn said.

Raiders' Matt Flynn: 'I believe I can be a franchise quarterback'

By Clark Judge

July 31, 2013

NAPA, Calif. -- When I approached a scout at Oakland's practice, I asked him what he thought of the Raiders' new quarterback, Matt Flynn. He said he was smart and wouldn't take unnecessary risks, both of which he liked. But then he started to dissect Flynn's physical skills, and the conversation went south.

He said he plays it too safe, won't throw outside the numbers, checks down too much and has only adequate arm strength.

"Is he," I interrupted, "anything more than a bridge to the next quarterback?"

"No," he answered.

Uh-oh.

If the Raiders are going to succeed, sooner or later they must settle on a quarterback. They've had 15 starters the past 10 seasons, with none lasting more than two consecutive years.

Flynn is the latest to give it a whirl, taking over for Carson Palmer, and most observers -- including our scout -- minimize his chances for success. Part of that is because they're not high on Flynn, and part is that they're not high on the Raiders -- believing they could be one of the worst teams in the NFL.

That doesn't exactly come as news to Flynn. He's heard it before, and he couldn't care less.

"I don't like to look at what's happened in the past," he said, "especially anything negative. I'm a very positive thinker. I like to think positive. I like to speak positively. And I believe that I can be a franchise quarterback.

"That's just me. It's inner confidence, believing what you can do. Other people may not think that, but there's no one that's going to tell me otherwise."

The Raiders support him, though let's be honest: They have no choice. Flynn's backup is Terrelle Pryor, and he's more a threat as a runner than a passer. Then there's fourth-round pick Tyler Wilson, and while he's raw there's a feeling he could emerge as the long-term hope.

So that leaves Flynn ... at least for now. There is no quarterback competition. Matt Flynn is the starter. But he's the starter because the Raiders couldn't work out a contractual settlement with Palmer, forcing them to look elsewhere. What they found was Flynn, and they have their fingers crossed.

"Carson is one of those guys who could throw the ball around," said GM Reggie McKenzie, "but in this offense, I think Matt Flynn will function probably a little better with what we're trying to do - as far as moving.

"Carson is the prototype pocket passer who can see down the field. Flynn is a little more active with his feet, a guy who hasn't proven yet to be the thrower [Palmer is]. But we're going to see what he can do."

What the quarterbacks here have done isn't much. There are four in camp with three combined NFL starts -- two by Flynn. That's one reason the Raiders are picked for last again in the AFC West. Another is that when you look down the roster, there aren't a lot of familiar names ... or, let's say, names you can trust.

Safety Charles Woodson is the exception. He's a seven-time All-Pro and former Defensive Player of the Year who returned after seven seasons in Green Bay where, it just so happens, he once was teamed with Matt Flynn. He knows what Flynn can do because he was there when Flynn carved up New England (a loss) and Detroit (a win), so he won't undersell the guy.

But when I asked about Flynn as a "franchise quarterback," Woodson tiptoed around the subject.

"I'm not going to take anything away from his confidence," he said. "That's what he's supposed to have. But what I know about Matt Flynn is that he's a poised quarterback. He's not going to get too rattled. That's the main thing you have to have as a quarterback, and he does.

"When you're 'the guy,' there's a different pressure. You have to have someone with strong nerves, and I believe he has that. He'll have some ups and downs this season, but I believe he'll be a guy who will be able to pull through it. ... and it will only make him better."

The question, of course, is: Will Matt Flynn make the Raiders better? They're thin at wide receiver. Their best tight end is a converted wide receiver. Running back Darren McFadden is special, but he's an injury waiting to happen. Their offensive line is little more than OK. And they're working on their third offensive coordinator in three years.

I think you get the picture: It's not an ideal situation for a young quarterback trying to lock down a future.

"Your general manager, Reggie McKenzie, said he likes being the underdog," I said. "How about you?"

"Yeah, absolutely," Flynn said. "People have doubted me on the football field my entire life. So I have plenty of chips on my shoulder. I look around at this team, and my feeling is you don't want to put too many chips on this team's shoulders ... because we have a lot of talent."

I don't know about that. What I do know is that Flynn and the Raiders believe they can and will surprise skeptics, with coach Dennis Allen vowing to "get this thing turned around." But this is a franchise that hasn't had a winning season since 2002 and now stakes its hopes on a quarterback with two career starts.

It's a gamble. But it's the Raiders.

"We have confidence in Matt Flynn," Allen said. "He understands how to play the game. He won a championship when he was in college. He's been a part of a championship team with the Green Bay Packers. The guy's won everywhere he's been.

"He's always had to come up and meet the challenge, and nobody's ever given him a chance. The chips have always been stacked against him, but somehow, some way he continues to beat the odds."

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

Somehow, some way, he'll have to do it again. Only this time, the odds against him just went up.

"When I look around this team," Flynn said, "and see these guys work on the field, in the classroom, in the weight room, it gets me excited. Because there are a lot of guys on this team that probably most people have never heard of before. But they will.

"This is a great opportunity, and I have to make the most of it. I've got to keep playing better -- play better every day -- and be 'that guy.' Because if I'm not the best quarterback on this team I won't be 'that guy' anymore."

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Raiders ready to give Matt Flynn his 'rare' moment

By Sam Farmer

July 26, 2013

NAPA, Calif., — For Matt Flynn, last season was a false start.

Flynn, who had been backup to Green Bay quarterback Aaron Rodgers, signed with Seattle during the 2012 off-season and was on track to start for the Seahawks. But Seattle selected Wisconsin's Russell Wilson in the third round of last year's draft, and the rookie phenom wound up claiming the starting job, making Flynn expendable.

Fast-forward a year, and Flynn again has a chance to be an NFL starter, now with the rebuilding Oakland Raiders. They acquired him in April for a couple of late-round draft picks.

"I've been given a second opportunity to come in and earn a starting job," Flynn said Friday after the first practice of Raiders training camp. "It's pretty rare, and I know that. I'm going to do everything in my power to take advantage of this, to have no regrets. Make it happen and not take it for granted."

Flynn, 28, who has started two games in five seasons as a pro, sat on a bench next to the team's outdoor weight area, and talked about his circuitous path to this point — from backing up future Raiders bust JaMarcus Russell at Louisiana State, to learning at the elbow of Rodgers in Green Bay, to watching Wilson rocket to stardom in Seattle.

By all appearances, the Raiders' starting job is Flynn's to lose, and his $6.5-million salary is guaranteed. The other quarterbacks on the roster are Terrelle Pryor, fourth-round pick Tyler Wilson — a promising rookie from Arkansas — and rookie free agent Matt McGloin. Flynn is getting most of the reps with the first-string offense, as opposed to last summer when he was anything from first- to third-string depending on the day.

"I can look back to the seventh grade, and I don't think I've had one year where I've had anything given to me, or a time when someone's said, 'Hey, the job's yours. Take it,'" Flynn said. "I've had to fight every year. My goal is to solidify myself somehow so I can take ownership, take leadership of the team, make the offense my own."

Most people don't expect much from the Raiders this season. They were 4-12 in 2012, and a staggering $49 million of their salary-cap space is devoted to players no longer on the roster. Neither of their top two draft picks — cornerback D.J. Hayden or tackle Menelik Watson — is healthy enough to practice at full speed.

The Raiders were ranked eighth in passing last season (and 28th in rushing) but that was with Carson Palmer at quarterback, and he's now with the Arizona Cardinals.

Coach Dennis Allen said the Raiders need to develop some consistency in their passing game, but added that Flynn "did some nice things, made some nice reads, made a couple really good throws today."

When Flynn was in Seattle, there was a stark contrast between his laid-back style and the effusive energy of Wilson, whose personality is closer to that of Coach Pete Carroll.

"I had to find a medium ground last year because I knew that Pete was high energy, all over the place in practice, and I knew he probably wanted that out of his quarterbacks a little bit," Flynn said. "But I still didn't want to be someone I wasn't."

"I think Russell and I had two different personalities. But I don't think any of that played a part in the decision. The bottom line was, Russell took ahold of his opportunity and made the most of it."

Flynn's easygoing attitude is sometimes mistaken for apathy, he said, and not everyone responds well to that. Fans at LSU said it looked as if he didn't care, even when he was, say, lining up to go for it on fourth down against Florida in the fourth quarter. He said he simply shows his competitiveness in a different way.

"I feel like if the guys can look at me in the huddle and see a calm and collected face, that they're going to relax a little bit," he said.

"The way I look at it, leadership and being that guy is, don't be someone you're not. Don't be a hoorah guy jumping around and clapping your hands if you're not that guy. Makes you look desperate. Makes you look silly. That's not me."

When he was in Green Bay, Flynn took full advantage of his two starts. In the first, a Sunday night game at New England in 2010, he filled in for an injured Rodgers and threw for 251 yards and three touchdowns in a 31-27 loss. That got some attention.

Flynn notched his second start the next season, when the Packers had already clinched the top seeding in the NFC and a first-round bye in the playoffs. Flynn started the finale against Detroit, on a freezing day at Lambeau Field, and threw a team-record six touchdowns in a 45-41 shootout victory.

Just a week earlier, Rodgers had the first five-touchdown game of his career in a 35-21 victory over Chicago. He didn't get to bask in that glory too long, because his backup — and good friend — was about to eclipse him, if only for a game.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

"When I threw five," Flynn recalled, "I come over to the sideline and sit down, and Aaron looks at me through the corner of his eye and shakes his head like, 'You little turd.' I was just laughing.

"The Lions go down the field and score again, and Aaron comes up to me, puts his arm around me and said, 'If you get a chance for six, you've got to take it.' I was like, that's cool."

The locker-room environment in Green Bay was a good one, Flynn said, with everyone giving everyone else a hard time. That was the case during his six-touchdown game too.

"The first half Aaron was on the microphone calling plays," Flynn said. "He was ripping on me. I'm on the field and he's ripping on me out there. He's just like, 'You look stupid out there,' or, 'Your shoe's untied.' There wasn't enough time to be doing that, but that's Aaron."

As the clock continues to tick on Flynn's career, the stakes are higher and the joking is over.

So far, Flynn is no flop as starting QB

By Josh Dubow

July 31, 2013

NAPA – Matt Flynn is solidifying his role as starting quarterback for the Raiders one year after losing that same job in training camp with the Seattle Seahawks.

Flynn entered camp with the inside track over Terrelle Pryor and rookie Tyler Wilson to replace Carson Palmer in Oakland and has done nothing in the first week to change that equation.

It's a far cry to what happened to Flynn a year ago in Seattle, where he went from coveted offseason free-agent acquisition with a $26 million contract to backing up a third-round pick in a matter of weeks at training camp.

With Russell Wilson set as starter in Seattle, Flynn was traded to the Raiders in the offseason and has done his best to hold onto this opportunity to start in the NFL.

"I took away a lot of things from Seattle last year," Flynn said Tuesday. "But the thing that I took away the most was that I want this even more now, even more this year.

"I'm blessed to have another opportunity at this, and I'll try to take advantage of it and do as much as I can to not let it get away from me."

Flynn has been the most impressive of the three quarterbacks so far in training camp with the most accurate arm, a good grasp of the offense and strong leadership on the field.

"I'm going in there and trying to be the best quarterback out here, trying to be the best quarterback for this team and help this team win as best I can," Flynn said. "I'm coming in here every day with my hard hat on, trying to prepare."

Flynn, a backup in college at LSU to former Raiders quarterback JaMarcus Russell, has started just two games in five seasons as a pro. But it's those brief appearances that are so intriguing.

As Aaron Rodgers' understudy in Green Bay, he threw for 251 yards and three touchdowns in a loss at New England late in the 2010 season. He then started the regular-season finale the next season, going 31 for 44 for 480 yards and six touchdown passes in a 45-41 win over Detroit.

That led to the contract from the Seahawks. But Flynn struggled in the second exhibition game last summer and missed the third with an elbow injury. By that point, Wilson passed him on the depth chart and Flynn was relegated to another year as a backup.

"To play quarterback in the NFL, to me, you have to be two things: You have to be smart and you have to be accurate," Flynn said. "Things on the field are going to come and you have to be able to do that as well, and I feel very confident in my ability to do that, but overall you have to be smart and accurate."

Flynn got another chance to prove that when the Raiders dealt a 2014 fifth-round pick and a conditional pick in 2015 to Seattle.

While coach Dennis Allen has stressed an open competition with Pryor and another rookie named Wilson – Tyler – nothing that has been seen so far in the offseason or camp indicates that Flynn won't be the starter when the season opens in Indianapolis.

"It's kind of playing out about like I expected. Matt Flynn has been pretty consistent," Allen said. "Those guys are doing exactly what we want them to do, keep competing and keep playing," he said. "Don't worry about the depth chart, just keep getting better."

Matt Flynn off to impressive start

Flynn, a backup in college at LSU to former Raiders quarterback JaMarcus Russell, has started just two games in five seasons as a pro. But it's those brief appearances that are so intriguing.

He threw for 251 yards and three touchdowns in a loss at New England in place of an injured Aaron Rodgers late in the 2010 season. He then started the regular-season finale the following season, going 31 for 44 for 480 yards and six touchdown passes in a 45-41 win over Detroit.

That led to the $26 million, three-year contract from the Seahawks. But Flynn struggled in the second exhibition game last summer and missed the third with an elbow injury. By that point Wilson passed him on the depth chart and Flynn was relegated to another year as a backup.

Despite winning a national championship at LSU and the impressive performances in his few chances in the NFL, Flynn still faces many doubters who question whether he has a strong enough arm to succeed in the pro game.

"To play quarterback in the NFL, to me, you have to be two things: You have to be smart and you have to be accurate," he said. "Things on the field are going to come and you have to be able to do that as well, and I feel very confident in my ability to do that, but overall you have to be smart and accurate."

Flynn got another chance to prove that when the Raiders dealt a 2014 fifth-round pick and a conditional pick in 2015 to Seattle.

While coach Dennis Allen has stressed an open competition at quarterback with Pryor and another rookie named Wilson -- Tyler -- nothing that has been seen so far in the offseason or camp indicates that Flynn won't be the starter when the season opens Sept. 8 in Indianapolis.

Flynn has gotten the vast majority of the time with the first-team offense so far and is earning the trust of his teammates.

"It's kind of playing out about like I expected. Matt Flynn has been pretty consistent," Allen said. "Those guys are doing exactly what we want them to do, keep competing and keep playing. Don't worry about the depth chart, just keep getting better."

Part of what has solidified Flynn's hold on the job is that neither Pryor nor Tyler Wilson has seized it the way Russell Wilson did a year ago.

Pryor, who provided a spark when he started the season finale last year, is still far too inconsistent throwing the ball but can be a dual threat as a scrambler or runner. Pryor has worked hard on improving his mechanics, spending the offseason working with former major league pitcher Tom House, who has also coached Tom Brady and Drew Brees.

"I found out that I was leaving my chest open a lot so it was making me late," Pryor said. "So when I was coming down to throw with my left arm, my right arm was saying it's time to go, the timing wasn't right. He kind of helped me with that. It's definitely helping shoot the ball a lot more and better. My thing looking in the mirror last year was I need to be more accurate."

Tyler Wilson is an intriguing prospect who was drafted in the fourth round out of Arkansas. But he is still adjusting to the NFL game as evidenced by one practice early in camp when he threw three interceptions in a stretch of four plays.

Oakland Raiders need Jacoby Ford on the field

By Jerry McDonald

July 31, 2013

NAPA -- Jacoby Ford, walking quickly and without a limp, was rejecting interview requests with a quick shake of the head when approached by the Raiders public relations staff after practice.

Ford had missed his second straight day with an undisclosed injury Tuesday. Since it's frowned upon by coach Dennis Allen to discuss injuries, and it's a subject that has dominated the last two seasons of Ford's NFL career, his reluctance was understandable.

At one point, Ford did stop to talk with a Sirius NFL radio crew, expressing the hope he would be back at practice soon, with the Raiders taking Wednesday off and returning to practice Thursday at 2:50 p.m.

Ford was one of the Raiders' most explosive playmakers as a rookie out of Clemson in 2010, but his future will be determined by his ability to practice.

"We need Jacoby out here," Allen said after Ford's first missed practice Monday. "He's missed a lot of time, and he's got to get some work."

Ford, like a high-performance sports car that has spent too much time in the garage, knows he needs the reps.

He stopped to talk after a practice the previous weekend, saying, "You can't just jump right back into it. Regardless of how good you are, you just won't be right back to how you were. You definitely have to get back into football shape and get your football legs back in front of you."

Ford's rookie season included a club record three kickoff returns for touchdowns, 10 rushes for 155 yards and two scores and 25 receptions for 470 yards and two touchdowns.

In a 23-20 overtime win over Kansas City, Ford set up the game-tying field goal by stealing a 29-yard completion from cornerback Brandon Flowers and then set up the game-winning field goal in overtime with a 47-yard reception.

He returned the second-half kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown and finished the game with six catches for 148 yards and four kickoff returns for 156 yards.

In 2011, Ford added a fourth kickoff return for a touchdown but was slowed by a hamstring injury before finally having his season end after eight games because of a foot injury.

Last season, in the second preseason game, Ford reinjured the same foot. Attempts at rehabilitation failed, and he eventually had surgery to repair a Lisfranc injury, never playing a down in 2012.

Teammates, including running back Darren McFadden, attempted to boost his spirits.

"I was definitely down and out for a while," Ford said. "I really didn't want to talk to anybody or be around anybody. When I started getting around my teammates, you'd be amazed how much that helps you with the whole process."

McFadden, whose own Lisfranc injury cost him the last nine games of the 2011 season, knew what Ford was going through.

"I'm a guy who can pretty much relate to that," McFadden said. "I told him you can't concern yourself with things you can't control. Go out and play the game when you're on the field."

Other than dealing with a minor hamstring issue, Ford's offseason went well, and he spent a lot of time working with quarterback Matt Flynn and other receivers at Laney College. During the first few practices at camp, Ford looked comfortable and explosive on catch-and-run quick slant routes.

"He's a weapon, when healthy, that we need to utilize whatever way we can, whether it's running routes, handoffs, or whatever," Flynn said. "We have to find a way to utilize that speed and quickness and getting him into the open field."

Ford said his mindset is similar to his rookie season.

"I'm reverting back to that," Ford said. "I'm starting all over again. That's kind of what it feels like."

With five defensive tackles either not practicing or unable to finish practice Wednesday, the Raiders announced the signing of free agent Myles Wade (6-foot-1, 300 pounds). Wade, out of Portland State, has been with Seattle and Tampa Bay without seeing game action.

DJ HAYDEN

Hayden puts heart injury in past

By Paul Gutierrez

May 11, 2013

ALAMEDA -- The last time D.J. Hayden stepped on a football field? He almost died. A nondescript practice collision at Houston on Nov. 6 ruptured the inferior vena cava, a large vein that pumps blood from the lower part of the body into the heart and Hayden nearly bled out internally.

So forgive Hayden if he got a little reflective this weekend as he took part in his first NFL camp with the Raiders holding their three-day rookie camp at their facility.

"It felt like old times," Hayden said Saturday. "I did my usual routine. I came here, took a knee, said a little prayer then just went out there. It wasn't like it took me extra time to get ready. I just went out there and did what I did."

Drafted No. 12 overall by the Raiders, Hayden has been medically cleared to participate in everything the Raiders will do in camp. Including, it turns out, what Oakland drafted him to do -- break up passes.

Yes, it's early. It's a ridiculously small sample size after two non-contact practices to gauge what Hayden can and cannot do on an NFL field. But the fact that he is here at all is a small victory. To be the game-changing cover cornerback in the mold of such Raiders greats as Willie Brown, Lester Hayes, Mike Haynes, Charles Woodson and Nnamdi Asomugha is the eventual goal.

Big talk? Yes. But there's a reason general manager Reggie McKenzie and coach Dennis Allen would have taken him at No. 3 overall had they not found a suitable trade partner to move down.

So it was heartening, so to speak, to see Hayden flash across the field to break up a pass from Tyler Wilson to an unidentified tryout player on Saturday, Hayden seemingly beaten before stretching out to bat away the ball in stride.

It was as pretty as it was simple.

"It helps put me at ease," he said of the play. "As long as I keep making production, I feel like I can get better. Just make plays. When I made the little play I was happy. I should have caught it but there's always room for improvement."

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

"Corner's basically the same thing everywhere. The coverages aren't that hard. I think I'm picking it up pretty good. I'm just trying to soak in everything coach (Clayton) Lopez and coach (Johnnie) Lynn are trying to teach me. I'm just trying to soak it all in like a sponge."

Even as he is nursing a hamstring he strained during his Pro Day.

"So he's still not quite 100 percent from there but he's been out there, working through it," Allen said. "He made a nice play on the ball today. So I'm pleased with where D.J.'s at and, again, it's going to be a learning process."

"It's putting one foot in front of the other and I think when it comes time to play games this September, I think he'll be ready to roll."

Before then, though, will come tons of information to process. And intricacies to learn.

"I would just say getting used to not putting your hands on people down the field because in the NFL you have the 5-yard rule, so, just adjusting to that," Hayden said. "In college I used to kind of push people a little bit so I have to adjust to that."

He was not laughing.

He did smile, though, when I asked him if Brown, the Hall of Famer, had given him any pearls yet, though.

Hayden moved his hands in a quick-burst chopping, north-south motion.

"Yeah," Hayden said, "he told me to move my hands out of my break."

So, what kind corner does he profess himself to be -- off the ball or press?

"Probably a mixture of both," he said. "It all depends on the down and distance and the situation. Yeah, when I get up there I'm going to have to be more physical and re-route them, and then again when I'm at '7,' I've got to play off and I can't touch them. I've got to mirror them."

Talks of his injury, though, have been nonexistent thus far.

"I don't even think about it," he said. "The only time I think about is when somebody asks me. But when I'm on the field I don't think about that. I think about the play and I think about the coverage that I'm in. I put it past me."

LAMARR HOUSTON

Lamarr Houston in spotlight for Oakland

By Bill Williamson

July 30, 2013

NAPA, Calif. -- One of the players the Oakland Raiders will count on in this year of transition is defensive end Lamarr Houston.

Houston, a second-round draft pick in 2010, is moving away from being a young player to one of the most vital on the defense.

The versatile Houston will play right defensive end. He is expected to be the anchor of the defensive line. The team moved away from veterans Tommy Kelly and Richard Seymour. Houston will be the leader of the group.

Houston is also expected to help with the team's need for a pass-rush spark. Oakland was weak in that area last season and it did not add a reliable pass-rusher to the roster.

Houston is taking all of his responsibilities in stride. He said he understands a lot more will be expected from him, but he is not putting too much pressure on himself.

"It's a new era on the defensive front," Houston said. "But it's just not me. The line as a unit will work to help find a pass rush. It's a group thing."

Houston said the key for him will be to continue to work on his technique because it is different on the right side.

"It's an ongoing process," Houston said. "But technique is the key for me."

JASON HUNTER

INSIDEBAYAREA.COM

Oakland Raiders' Jason Hunter likes living on the edge

By Jerry McDonald

Aug 1, 2013

NAPA -- Living life on the edge as a defensive end isn't the most glamorous job in the NFL, but it suits Jason Hunter just fine.

The Raiders' starting left defensive end loves "setting the edge," a part of the game that doesn't carry with it the kind of fame and glory that comes from rushing the passer.

"Basically setting an edge is getting an extension on that tackle and knocking him back, that way it stops the line of scrimmage so the (running) back can't just get to the edge, and it forces him back inside to where the help is," Hunter said.

Setting edges has been an issue for a Raiders defense that has been run-challenged for the better part of the past decade. Right tackle Khalif Barnes, who has worked against Hunter throughout the offseason and training camp, thinks Hunter is more stout than his 6-foot-4, 270-pound build would suggest.

Offensive tackles blocking Hunter typically outweigh him by at least 30 pounds.

"He's thick, powerful, and he may look smaller, but he's very strong and has good hands," Barnes said.

In most cases, if Hunter has done his job, he hasn't made the tackle himself. Rather, he's set up an interior lineman or linebacker to make the hit.

"He's a guy who just tries to do his part," Barnes said. "If you try and do your part and then half of somebody else's, that takes away what you do by half. Do your part. It's a great mindset and the whole team needs to be like that."

Hunter's willingness to set the edge, as well as his work ethic and demeanor, are what led him back to general manager Reggie McKenzie and coach Dennis Allen.

McKenzie was a personnel executive in Green Bay when Hunter played with the Packers as an undrafted free agent out of Appalachian State from 2006 through 2008. When Allen was defensive coordinator in Denver in 2011, Hunter was a reserve defensive end, having played the season before in a 3-4 defense as an outside linebacker.

On a Raiders defensive line that too often has failed in terms of maintaining gaps and position despite having well-regarded talent, Hunter brings a reputation of carrying out his assignments with enthusiasm.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

"Jason loves football, and he enjoys competing," Allen said. "He likes the physical aspect of the game where you're not begging Jason to come out here and want to play. You're not begging Jason to get the pads on."

Hunter was particularly excited to get the pads on this season after spending the 2012 season on injured reserve because of a torn triceps. It happened at a time when Hunter had ascended to a starting position under Jack Del Rio, who replaced Allen as defensive coordinator.

The timing could not have been worse.

"It really hurt me, man," Hunter said. "I thought I was having a real good training camp. It was hard, sitting at home, watching on TV and seeing all my peers from around the league playing games. It made me more focused to take care of my body, do the right things."

RASHAD JENNINGS

Rashad Jennings offers Raiders injury protection

By Scott Bair

August 2, 2013

NAPA – Darren McFadden has been hurt in each of his five NFL seasons. That’s why backup running backs are so vital to the Raiders offense.

Rashad Jennings was brought in to fill that role, and he certainly looks the part. The 6-foot-1, 231-pound veteran has a powerful rushing style that fits a revamped, Raiders blocking scheme based on gap creation and control.

Jennings has impressed in the early going and will get plenty of reps this preseason, time he’ll use to carve out a larger role.

“Rashad’s a big back, we want Rashad to play like a big back,” Raiders coach Dennis Allen said. “Going into the preseason, we’ll see if he can be that big physical presence that we expect him to be.”

Positive results might earn him the title of short-yardage back, which will decrease punishment taken by McFadden over the course of the season. Jennings doesn’t want to pigeonhole himself just yet.

Jennings hopes the running game is so effective that McFadden can’t take all the carries given out. That happened at times in recent seasons, when the Raiders ran extremely well and Michael Bush emerged as a back complementary of McFadden’s skill set.

“You act like the starter and you prepare as one,” Jennings said. “In the NFL, there aren’t any backups. The backups are the guys at home watching TV, because everyone on an NFL roster contributes.”

Jennings will have his moments. How he’ll fare as a feature back – only if McFadden gets hurt – remains in question.

He had that chance last season in Jacksonville, after Maurice Jones-Drew was lost for an extended period, and didn’t capitalize. He averaged a paltry 2.8 yards per carry last season, and fared worse in games with higher carry counts.

Jennings found flaws in that season he believes are corrected for good.

“I put failure on my shoulders and give success to the team,” Jennings said. “After looking at film of last season, there were a lot of things I could’ve done better. It’s all in the past now. I’m a Raider this season and that’s what I’m out here to capitalize on.”

Sixth-round pick Latavius Murray has been out four practices with injuries, leaving Jennings to take reps behind McFadden. The fifth-year veteran used them to outshine the competition and prove he fits the offensive scheme.

"We're going to play downhill, physical football. I like that," Jennings said. "That's the kind I like to play and that's the kind of backfield that I fit. I'm glad to be a part of this group and a part of Raider Nation. I see real opportunity to run the football well here."

Oakland Raiders' Rashad Jennings has a healthy attitude

By Steve Corkran

Aug 3, 2013

NAPA -- When Rashad Jennings entered the league, he did what most rookies do when they get their first chunk of money. He indulged in a big-ticket purchase.

Instead of a house for his mother or a fancy car for himself, though, Jennings bought a hyperbaric chamber as a means of helping his body recover quicker and better from the rigors of football.

"I bought one in my rookie year instead of buying a car because I knew this was going to prolong my career," Jennings said.

Sure enough, the day Jennings arrived here for his first training camp with the Raiders, Jennings unloaded the hyperbaric chamber from his car and hauled it up to his hotel room.

The device allows Jennings to sleep in an oxygen-rich environment, which promotes healing of his body. He also is on a gluten-free diet, eats organic foods, stretches every night and delves in yoga, Pilates, acupuncture, whatever has the ability to give him an edge.

The 4-foot-by-9-foot sleeping chamber also tends to make a ton of noise. Hence, Jennings is going solo this year, whereas his teammates share a room with one other player.

In Jennings, the Raiders are confident that they found a back that can make some noise as a replacement for departed veteran Mike Goodson, who served as Darren McFadden's primary backup last season.

The jury is out, for Jennings averaged only 2.8 yards per carry for the Jacksonville Jaguars last season in becoming one of 10 backs since 2000 to average fewer than 3 yards per carry with at least 100 rushes.

Goodson averaged 6.3 last season, though on only 35 carries. He bolted for the New York Jets in free agency. Soon thereafter, the Raiders pounced on Jennings.

Jennings, 6-foot-1 and 231 pounds, views himself as a lead back, though he has spent his entire

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

NFL career backing up Maurice Jones-Drew. He is competing for the backup spot in Oakland against the likes of Jeremy Stewart and rookie Latavius Murray.

"I see myself just as a complete back, day-in, day-out, getting better," Jennings said. "Never making the same mistakes twice. I'll let the geniuses figure out where to put me on the field."

In a recent practice, Jennings was on the field as a short-yardage back. He showed little difficulty in converting third-and-1 plays during the drill.

"He's done some good things for us," Raiders coach Dennis Allen said. "One of the challenges you have for Rashad is ... Rashad's a big back, we want Rashad to play like a big back. That will be something we're going to look at as we go into the preseason is him being that big physical presence that we expect him to be."

So far, Jennings is looking more like the back that averaged 5.2 yards and 5.5 his first two seasons, respectively.

In a strange way, Jennings and the Raiders are alike in that they can't wait to put last year behind them and recapture past glory.

"These fans don't deserve that," Jennings said of the team's negative perception. "This organization doesn't deserve it. The city doesn't deserve it. Nobody on this team thinks that's going to happen this year, and we're going out every single day, erasing what happened from yesterday and preparing and focusing on turning things around."

TAIWAN JONES

CSNBAYAREA.COM

Taiwan Jones working through tough position switch

By Scott Bair

August 5, 2013

NAPA – Taiwan Jones made an excellent play on a receiver he wasn't even covering. The Raiders cornerback saw Terrelle Pryor's pass directed away from his path, so he stopped in an instant, dove back and rendered the ball incomplete. It was a veteran move, a cagy breakup expected of a lifelong corner. Not bad for a novice.

Jones has been playing cornerback just a few months now, after the Raiders suggested he convert from running back. Jones was stuck down on the depth chart without hope of promotion, so head coach Dennis Allen asked him to man a position he hadn't played since high school.

Jones was a quality corner back in his youth, and never considered a switch at the professional level. In order to remain a Raider, Jones was willing to try anything.

"I'm still just happy to be on the roster," Jones said. "Whatever I can do to help the team and if I can help the team on defense then I'm willing to do it. I was kind of upset that I couldn't show everybody what kind of running back I could be, but I think it's a good thing as far as my career."

It's incredibly difficult to learn a position while fighting for a roster spot. He's typically working with the third team, with players likely cut by September. Jones is an excellent special teams player, which could help him carve a niche while he develops as a corner.

"I will say this. It's a tough transition," coach Dennis Allen said. "He's been playing running back, and then all of a sudden we put him on the other side of the ball and start working him at corner, but I think he's doing a nice job. He is still behind, though."

"But the other thing I think you have to understand about Taiwan is, [that] Taiwan is probably one of the better special teams players in the league. I think that's always going to come down and be a factor when we start looking at the roster. I think special teams will be a big factor in that for him."

Allen sees potential in this position switch.

While technical aspects are being learned each day, Jones has the quick reaction time required to be a quality defensive back. His acrobatic pass breakup is proof of that.

"Playing corner feels really natural," Jones said. "But there are things working through. I do have to work on using my leverage to my advantage and getting my eyes in the right places. I need to keep progressing, but I feel like I'm getting there."

SILVER AND BLACK PRIDE

Taiwan Jones proving cornerback was his natural position all along

By Levi Damien

August 5, 2013

One of the more difficult things to do for any player is to make a position change at the NFL level; especially when switching sides of the ball. Most players are drafted at a particular position and sink or swim at that same position and that's it.

Taiwan Jones was drafted by the Raiders to play running back, was informed that his best chance of making this Raiders team would be with a switch to cornerback. And thus he has been given the rare chance to prove he can do what few others have done. He's not squandering the opportunity.

"I was just excited to still be on a roster," said Jones. "Whatever I can do to help the team. If I can help the team on defense then I'm willing to do it. I was kind of upset I couldn't show everybody what kind of running back I could be but I think it's a good thing as far as my career."

Jones has been written off by most people. His seemingly peculiar position change appears from the outside like writing on the wall for the end of his career with the Raiders. But this is no ordinary position change. This one could actually be a switch to a position Jones was meant to play in the first place.

"A lot of my college coaches, they thought once I made it to the NFL that I would be converted to a corner," said Jones. "So, that's kind of my mindset and what I thought also. So, when I got drafted as a running back, it came to me somewhat as a surprise."

The reason he and his college coaches saw him as a corner is because he played both corner and running back in high school. His speed (4.33 40-yard dash) and physique (6-0, 194 pounds) are also more in line with that of a cornerback as well.

Even so, the third year back is coming off taking a two-year detour as a running back and has had to re-learn and recall his cornerback skills which he hadn't put into full use for quite some time. That transition back from offense to defense at the highest level is a long and difficult one.

Watching Jones in OTA's and minicamp and even the first few days of training camp, he was an afterthought. He wasn't making plays and the only time you saw him is when his man was catching the ball. Then suddenly, in the past few days, he began showing up on the radar. As of Sunday, his penchant for finding the ball and tracking receivers is officially no longer unnoticed.

"On defense it's all about reacting and that's one thing I'm pretty good at," said Jones. "It's coming pretty easy. I still got a lot of work to do though. . . Every day I'm learning something new. Some stuff I knew before and it's like 'Oh, ok now I get it, now I see what you're talking about'. Actually being out there getting the reps and being out there with the guys, I'm learning something every day."

For proof that Jones speaks the truth, you need only watch him in practice. Four days ago in practice, he had a terrible session in which he gave up three long passes including two in a row to Greg Jenkins for touchdowns.

The very next day he turned things around. He has had two interceptions in two days of practice working with the third team and today, with starters Tracy Porter and Mike Jenkins sitting out with injury, he was given an opportunity to work with the second team and impressed even still. He had a very nice pass defended in which he left his man on the outside to dive full extension in front of a Terrelle Pryor pass inside and knocked it down.

What it adds up to is some fresh competition at cornerback from an unlikely place. There is now some fierce competition for the final spot or two in the cornerback roster. Taiwan is earning the right to be viewed as a legitimate contender for that spot. And when you consider his dual threat as a special teams gunner, he might just be ahead of the pack for that spot. Didn't think you'd be hearing that at any point this camp, did ya?

After writing him off, you should probably go ahead and pencil him back in.

CHRIS KLUWE

THEMONDAYMORNINGQUARTERBACK.COM

There can be only one

By Chris Kluwe

August 9, 2013

NAPA, Calif. — In the NFL, we all begin as rookies. We come in to a team with no idea what to expect, no idea who anyone really is, blind and unsure. The pressure is immense. Ninety men are on that team, and ultimately there's only room for 53. You are fighting for your livelihood, daily, against as many as five other people, depending on position.

That doesn't mean you can't be a human being.

I entered the league in 2005, as an undrafted free agent for the Seattle Seahawks. In minicamps, I was one of three punters. One was the incumbent from 2004 who'd had a shaky year, Donnie Jones. One was a seasoned veteran looking to prolong his career, Leo Araguz. I was the unproven kid with a big leg. We had what I would call an uneasy truce. We didn't try to actively sabotage each other, but we didn't try to help each other out, either. Conversations were slightly stilted, focusing mainly on banal topics like the weather, or what college we had attended. Punt drills were silent affairs of intense effort, the focus solely on ourselves.

Two weeks into minicamp, Donnie was cut. He tweaked his knee golfing, the team decided to drop him then and there, and suddenly it was me and Leo.

The pressure became even more intense. Our special teams coach, Bob Casullo, was loud, brash—a yeller. Mis-hit a punt and you'd hear about it, generally at around 90 decibels. Each day I found myself focusing on the same litany. Don't mess up. Outkick the other guy. Don't mess up. Every time I didn't hit a punt perfectly, I wondered if it would be my last day in Seattle. Will they cut me like they did the incumbent? Am I good enough to play in this league? Will I even make it to preseason? It was a month of fighting down the doubts, convincing myself I belonged, each and every day.

I made it to training camp, and, impossibly, the pressure increased. When you put on full pads, when you do full team sessions, it hits you: This is for real. Every rep counts, and you'll never get as many as you want. Hit a bad ball, and there's no taking it back. You can't ask for one more to try and end on a good note; there's simply not enough time. What you do in that limited practice segment defines who you are, and some days that definition is hard to face.

Leo and I continued our consensual silence. He would punt with the first team, I'd punt with the second, and again it would be us alone with our thoughts. In the NFL there's only space for one punter on a roster. We both knew one of us wasn't making it to the regular season. That knowledge formed the very bedrock of our interactions. How do you get to know someone you're trying to replace? Is it even possible? Obviously you're not going to help each other, right?

I made it to the final day of cuts, 75 down to 53. My roommate, a fullback named Jesse Lumsden,

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

was cut a week earlier. Strained hip-flexor. He tried to play through it, to show the team he was tough. All it got him was no injury settlement. If you make it to the final cutdown, the day after the fourth preseason game is when they let you know your future. You're on the team, or you're looking for work. Veterans call the player personnel guy the Grim Reaper, and he carries a scythe labeled, "Coach wants to see you, and bring your playbook."

I got a call from the Grim Reaper around 10 a.m.

He told me I had punted well during the preseason, but that they were going with the veteran guy. They thought he would be more consistent. They wanted me to stick around, though. They wanted to put me on the eight-man practice squad, a place for young, raw players to develop and get used to the intensity of the NFL.

I was elated. I still had a chance to win the job. It might take a little longer, but at least I was still in the building. I had shown something that made them think I would be a useful addition to the team at some point. All the pressure of minicamps, OTAs, the preseason—all worth it.

Funny thing about the practice squad, though. They have to cut you first, before putting you on it. You spend 24 hours on the waiver wire, during which any other team can put in a request. The catch is that another team can't claim you to stash on their practice squad; you have to go on the 53-man active roster. As a punter, for all intents and purposes, if someone claims you off the waiver wire, you are their starting punter for that week.

An hour after being cut by Seattle, on my way to put a down payment on an apartment for my wife and me, life changed. I got a phone call informing me I was now the starting punter for the Minnesota Vikings.

I thought I knew what pressure was.

Now it's eight years later. I'm in training camp with the Oakland Raiders, after the Vikings decided they wanted to go in a different direction last spring. The situation is eerily familiar to my first trial. Only for me it's ... the opposite.

There's a young punter in his second year, very strong leg, lots of potential, immensely talented, looking to earn a starting role for the first time in his career. There's an older veteran, going on his ninth year in the league, may not have quite the same booming leg strength he used to, but he can still kick. Still wants to prove he can play at an NFL level and prolong the dream a while longer.

This time, I'm Leo Araguz. Marquette King, a nice kid from Georgia, is Chris Kluwe.

When I first joined the Raiders, during minicamps and OTAs this year, I wasn't sure how I would handle it. In a lot of ways it's like being a rookie all over again, constantly trying to prove myself, ruining every wasted opportunity, every bad punt. I wasn't sure how I would interact with the young punter with the massive leg. After all, aren't we fighting for the same spot? There's room for one punter on the 53, after all.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

The first couple days were awkward. Marquette and I said hello to each other in the locker room, talked about the weather, went outside and punted in silence. How could it not be awkward? We both knew the underlying foundation, the one unavoidable truth. It hung in the air like smog, an elephant staring at us from its perch in the corner. There can be only one.

After the third or fourth day, I did what might have been one of the hardest things I've ever done (outside of changing some particularly foul diapers). Marquette and I were out punting, and he was struggling with his drop. It kept falling to the inside, causing his leg to cross over and make his punts drag short and to the left. It's an easily correctable mistake, but a lot of the time you need someone else to point it out to you, especially if you're still refining your fundamentals. I could see him getting frustrated, hating the fact he was losing those oh-so-precious reps, squandering them on poor punts.

During a break between kicks, I walked over and told him what was happening, and how to fix it. He looked at me somewhat bemusedly, perhaps sensing some sort of mind game. I can't say that I blamed him. Why would a veteran, a guy fighting for the same spot, offer to make his competition better? Surely this had to be a trick, a ploy? (And don't call me Shirley.)

The next rep, he tried the change I had suggested—tuck his elbow in a little to keep the ball from falling inside—and he crushed the ball. And the next one. And the next one. Afterward he thanked me for the help, still not quite believing it. I was glad he trusted me enough to try the technique change, willing to listen to someone he knew might not have his best interests in mind.

Why did I help Marquette? Why did I knowingly lessen my own chances at winning the punting position for the Raiders? Why would I put his interests before my own?

Because I was Marquette, eight years ago, and no one helped me. No one offered to take a little of that pressure off my shoulders, encourage me that I had what it took to make it in the NFL, showed me the little tips and tricks that can be the difference between playing under the lights on Sunday and watching wistfully from home.

Am I upset at the uneasy truce I had with my veteran teammate when I was a rookie? No. I completely understand why things were the way they were. This is a business, after all, and an extremely competitive one. Offering help to a rookie might mean that the rookie takes your job. Far easier to simply take care of yourself, and let others sink or swim on their own. I made it on my own. Shouldn't Marquette do the same? When I see him punt well, it's easy to ask myself what in the hell I'm doing. He has a cannon for a leg, strength that I no longer have. We have evergreen trees here at our camp in Napa, and, depending where you stand on the field, you can see him punt the ball over the trees. When he hits a consistent set, I know I simply can't match him anymore in terms of raw distance or hang time. Time catches up with all of us, eventually.

Time also teaches us lessons.

I may not have the same ceiling as Marquette anymore, but I'm confident in my abilities. I know I can still punt in the NFL, still contribute to this team, and I refuse to watch someone struggle with a problem I know I can fix. Competing for a spot on an NFL roster doesn't have to be a zero-sum game. You see, there are 31 other teams out there. You're not just competing against each other. You're competing against every other punter out there, and the best 32 will end up playing on Sunday. That's how the NFL works. I think I'm one of the best 32 punters out there, and I also think Marquette can be one of the best 32. Whichever one of us ends up getting cut, I want that player to have the best chance possible at making another team. I want someone to get claimed off waivers, just like I was as a rookie. I want us both to succeed.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

That's the other part of the NFL I'm trying to pass along to Marquette. Those other 31 teams? They're always watching. Always. There's a reason I ended up in Minnesota despite not having taken a snap with the Vikings for the entire preseason.

What you do in preseason games, during warmups, during practice, it all plays a part in your chance for success. Coaches and scouts and agents and GMs talk to each other. They know each other. The league is a very small world, and if you can play, everyone will find out. There will be a spot for you somewhere. It may not be the spot you originally envisioned, but the opportunity will come.

So we help each other at practice, offer words of encouragement, try to pick each other up when we're having a bad day. We play Call of Duty, and make jokes about the kickers, and talk about things other than the weather. I try to give Marquette as much of my knowledge as I can, the countless things I've picked up over my eight years. What to focus on in windy days (hold on to the ball a little bit longer to minimize any variation in your drop, and drive it into the wind when you kick it), for instance. The difference between the home run swing and the 95% swing for consistency, and why it's important to know both. The home run swing is great for distance and hang time, but you can't really control where the ball is going to go, and when coaches want you to kick directionally, making sure the ball goes where you want it to is very important. The benefit of taking care of your body while you're still young, so you don't have to deal with so many aches and pains when you're older; now that's something I really wish someone had told me about—ice baths don't feel great, but they're vital for recovering your legs.

Most importantly, we talk about the mental aspect of the game. Punting, just like any other position, is defined not only by your physical attributes, but also by how you apply them. I've been in pressure situations before. Most, I've kicked well in. Some, I haven't.

I try to let Marquette know that you have to be able to bounce back from a bad kick, you have to be able to shake it from your mind and focus on the next one.

If you get a bad snap, whether in practice or a game, you can't let it affect you. Push it out of your memory.

If you get those pre-game jitters, that's natural. Tamp them down and focus on your fundamentals, on looking at the ball, on making sure your drop is consistent and that you're not rushing your kick.

If you hit a good kick, great. Now forget about it, and get ready for the next one. Act like you've been out there before. Excitement is good; you should be proud of doing your job well. But if you're focused on the past, you're not going to do well in the present. Above all, be confident in yourself, no matter what.

What do I get out of being Marquette's confidant? The satisfaction of passing on what I know to someone else who can use it, if he wants to. The satisfaction of hopefully helping someone make it to the very exclusive club of active NFL players. The focus that teaching requires, knowing the fundamentals so well you can explain them to someone else. The focus that naturally makes your own form better because you're forced to consider what you're doing rather than take it for granted.

Is it still awkward sometimes? Yes. Some days that elephant creeps back into the room, especially after a poor practice. The pressure clamps down once more, the doubts resurface. I wonder what he thinks sometimes.

Why does this guy keep talking to me? Just leave me alone!

What if I'm not good enough?

And sometimes I can't help but think: Why am I helping this kid out? I should just focus on me.

This weekend the preseason games start. That will bring a whole new set of challenges, a whole new set of pressures. What you do under the lights is ultimately the only thing that counts, and reps are extremely limited there. What will our game-day demeanor be? Will we still help each other? Or will we retreat back into silence, every man for himself?

I don't know. I don't know if we're friends, if we can ever be friends ... if that's even possible given the harsh realities of the NFL. I don't know which one of us will make the team, or if either of us will. Nothing is guaranteed in the NFL, and I'd be a liar if I said I didn't think about life after football, if I didn't wonder whether this could be my last time stepping onto the field on Sundays. If this is it for me, I'll have other pursuits. I can write, do speaking engagements, get a teaching credential. But those are the late-night thoughts, ones I drive from my mind, because to wallow in them is to accept defeat, and that's one of the most important lessons I want to pass on to Marquette. Never listen to those doubts, because they'll sap every chance you have to succeed.

What do I know? I know that I am ultimately responsible for my actions. I know the type of person I want to be. I know, were the situations reversed, how I would want to be treated, because I was on the other side of the equation. I was the young rookie, competing with everything I had for a place on the 53. I know that I want to win my spot now because I am the best, competing against the best competition I could possibly find, not because I let a guy struggle when I could have easily helped him out. I know that in a violent sport, filled with uncertainty, I will eventually fail, but it will be my choice, my failure, not because I let someone else fail in my place.

Yes, Marquette and I are fighting for a job. Yes, there will be only one of us when the regular season starts.

That doesn't mean we can't act like human beings.

McFadden: 'You haven't seen the best at all'

By Nate Stuhlbarg

June 13, 2013

ALAMEDA -- When he's healthy, he's one of the best backs in the league. When he's healthy.

Since Oakland made Darren McFadden the fourth overall pick in the 2008 draft, he has started more than 10 games in a season only twice, never starting more than 13 games. Still, in 57 career NFL games, he boasts a 4.3 yards-per-carry average.

Raider Nation wants to know what the two-time Doak Walker Award winner from Arkansas did this offseason to prepare himself for the gruel of another NFL season.

"I worked out hard to get in the best shape I've ever been in since I got into the league," McFadden said Thursday. "That's my main thing -- being in great health and great shape."

To the naked eye, McFadden looks a bit slither than his listed weight of 218 pounds.

"I wouldn't say smaller, just more trimmed up," McFadden clarified. "We weighed in and did body fat percentage, and it feels good to get into shape real good."

"I'm looking a lot better this year."

His physical preparedness is one thing, and it will be truly revealed when players don the pads for training camp, but more is being asked of McFadden in his sixth NFL season with the Raiders.

"One thing we have addressed with him a little bit, and it's something we've talked about, is a leadership role on the team, helping that locker room and I've seen him do a nice job in that regard," head coach Dennis Allen said.

It might surprise you that McFadden has only one 1,000-yard rushing season in five attempts. It might also surprise you that McFadden is still just 25 years old.

The young veteran acknowledged that his propensity to make light of situations and smile with teammates could have impacted his effectiveness as a leader in the past, and he's looking to change that.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

"I'm trying to be more of a vocal leader, instead of just going out there and leading by example," said McFadden. "Last year, guys would like to talk a lot. It might have been at the wrong time when I was cracking jokes. I'm just being more of a vocal leader and leading for the younger guys."

As a leader, the team will look for McFadden to set the tone and establish a winning feel in the locker room. He's starting early.

"Guys not going to expect us to do anything," said McFadden, who is entering the final season of his six-year contract with Oakland. "But I'm sure we're going to surprise a lot of people this year."

If the Raiders' workhorse can stay healthy, they just might.

"You've seen a lot of glimpses," the running back said, "but I can promise you that you haven't seen the best of Darren McFadden at all."

Oakland Raiders' McFadden happy to be running downhill again

By Jerry McDonald

July 26, 2013

NAPA -- Darren McFadden took a handoff from Matt Flynn on Friday and with no hesitation hit a sliver of air between guard Lucas Nix and center Stefen Wisniewski at nearly full speed.

No defender laid a hand on McFadden until he was at least three yards downfield -- which is roughly what he averaged per carry in 2012 in a zone scheme ill-suited to his nature as a runner.

It was a simple running play in a non-padded practice on the first day of training camp, but illustrated nicely what McFadden does best. The zone scheme, which called on McFadden to move laterally before cutting back against the grain, helped drop his yards per carry to a career-low 3.3 yards.

"I love a downhill scheme, so I'm very confident about it," McFadden said. "I'll just be able to get out there and go downhill. That's one of my strong points."

For all the changes on the Oakland roster, the one constant was McFadden. Both coach Dennis Allen and general manager Reggie McKenzie went out of their way to talk him up in the offseason.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

Allen's hiring of line coach Tony Sparano and offensive coordinator Greg Olson came in part because both had the right answer in terms of getting McFadden back to the form he displayed in 2010 and 2011 when Hue Jackson designed the offense and called the plays.

It was Jackson who put in McFadden's favorite gap and power runs at the expense of the zone scheme preferred by Tom Cable. McFadden averaged 5.2 and 5.4 yards per carry in 20 games over those two seasons with 11 rushing touchdowns.

Asked what it feels like to have coaches who will cater to his talents, McFadden said, "It feels great. I feel like I'm a downhill runner and that's something the coaches see also. By getting us in a gap scheme offense, they feel that suits me a lot more."

Allen liked what he saw of the re-tooled running game on the first day of practice.

"We ran the football well, the offensive line did a nice job, the backs did an excellent job of being able to run the football," Allen said. "That's something we're going to have to be able to do. Darren's one of our most explosive players and we've got to put him in position so that he can have success."

McKenzie has “no doubts” Raiders will be better this season

By Vic Tafur
July 26, 2013

You can tell by the smile on Raiders general manager Reggie McKenzie’s face that he’s heard all the preseason predictions and power rankings.

He was asked his thoughts on his team being picked at, or near, the bottom of the NFL. “I like being an underdog,” McKenzie said after the first training camp practice on Friday. “We have expectations here, and I know the thoughts outside of the Raiders wall. I am looking forward to September.”

McKenzie won’t make any predictions but “I do know we’ll play better than last season. I know we’ll be better. I have no doubts about that.”

The Raiders were 4-12 last season in his and coach Dennis Allen’s first year. What bar will McKenzie use to evaluate progress this year if not wins and losses?

“You know it when you see a good football team,” McKenzie said.

How close is Oakland to that?

“We’ll see,” he said. “We’re not too far.”

McKenzie was asked if he was curious to see how the new talent he’s put together — 57 of the 87 guys on the roster today weren’t in camp last year — gels in camp and the preseason.

“I’m not curious, I am eager, very eager,” McKenzie said. “I am excited to see how the new guys we added mesh and develop. And I want to see how the four new (assistant) coaches do. So far, it’s been good. ... I’m excited.”

McKenzie was happy to see first-round pick D.J. Hayden on the field Friday, after the cornerback missed the offseason workouts due to abdomen surgery.

“In the NFL, it’s all about having guys available,” McKenzie said. “You need your better players on the field to have a chance to win.”

Reggie McKenzie thinking about Raiders' future

By CSN.com

April 8, 2013

2013 looks gloomy for the Oakland Raiders, but 2014 could be prosperous. They traded their starting quarterback, Carson Palmer. Their seven-time Pro Bowl punter, Shane Lechler, left town. Former first round picks Darrius Heyward-Bey (2009) and Rolando McClain (2010) are no longer with the team. And starters Philip Wheeler, Michael Huff and Desmond Bryant weren't brought back.

But it's all part of general manager Reggie McKenzie's plan, according to a story by Sports Illustrated.

By clearing all of those contracts, the Raiders are setting themselves up to have ample salary cap space next offseason. According to the report, the Raiders could have as much as $50 million in cap room next year.

McKenzie was asked if all the offseason losses and potential down year in 2013 has him worried about his job.

"I don't think along those lines. I just think of doing what's needed to make this team the best it can be long-term," McKenzie told SI's Peter King. "Mark (Davis) knew the cap part of this was going to be a two-year deal. Mark is not his father. He is allowing me to do this, and we talk about the process all the time. He's allowing me to do the job that needs to be done."

McKenzie had a message for Raiders fans fearful of a dismal 2013 season.

"But as far as taking our bruises now, I do want you to know we're in this to win this year. We will compete. This is not a throw-in-the-towel deal," McKenzie said.

McKenzie: 'I like being the underdog'

By Scott Bair

July 26, 2013

NAPA – Reggie McKenzie hears all.

The general manager knows his Raiders are ranked among the NFL's worst. He's heard grumblings about a lack of talent and that he's restructuring this franchise at a snail's pace. He's aware this season is supposed to go so poorly that McKenzie might have the first pick in next year's draft.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

McKenzie knows what is being said, and respectfully disagrees with all of it.

His message during Friday's meeting with the media was a simple one: Go ahead. Count us down and out.

"I like being the underdog," McKenzie said. "We have our own expectations here, and I believe we'll reach them."

McKenzie didn't set a bar for wins or guaranteed success, yet he believes his Raiders are better in Phase Two of his master plan.

The first step was hiring a new coach in Dennis Allen last year. Since then he's tried to stock this roster with a hand tied behind his back, waiting for the team to escape salary-cap hell. In such a position, slow and steady is the only way to win a race.

McKenize overhauled the roster with low-profile acquisitions, especially on a defense that should have nine new starters, but believes this team is much better than last year's group.

"Without a doubt," McKenzie said. "That's what comes in time. When you get things going the way you want, good things happen. When you get your coach and you start adding the right players, things start to mesh together."

He believes this group will bond together during camp and emerge a more competitive team despite so many new faces.

"I'm not curious about this group, I'm eager," McKenzie said. "I'm eager and excited to see how they play during the regular season."

McKenzie thinks fans will see the improvement he sees, and believes his Raiders are on the verge of being a good football team.

"We'll see," he said. "It's not too far (away)."

SIO MOORE

Sio Moore fires out the games in Raiders debut

By Levi Damien

August 9, 2013

The Raiders preseason opener was a surreal experience for rookie Sio Moore. The young linebacker is a seemingly endless font of energy that began before the first whistle and while most of the other starters had left the game, he was still out there through the entire first half.

The man who changed his Twitter account address the moment he was drafted to @MrOaktown55 has been living the dream since the day he got that phone call from the Raiders. That level of excitement already had Raiders fans feeling better about the number 55.

During training camp he told me he was destined to come to the Raiders. The realization of it all landed shortly before taking the field today.

"I was sitting there talking to Nick Roach before the game and I was like 'I never saw this coming' you know ever in my life and now that I have the opportunity to do it... God is good, man." Said Moore.

He came out before the game for warm-ups and was seen pumping up the crowd every chance he got. Then when the Raiders won the toss and opted to receive, he was on the field with the return team, still running hot, jumping up and down and pumping his arms to amp up the crowd.

"The first play, I was kind of in a surreal moment," said Moore. "After a while you have to play ball."

Once the Raiders got the ball, a lapse in pass coverage resulted in a sack fumble and gave the Cowboy the ball. It meant, Moore's day on defense would begin sooner than expected and he was ready. On the second play from scrimmage, Tony Romo couldn't find anyone open and Moore kept fighting to get the sack.

"Man, it just helped being able to play, to tell you the honest truth," said Moore. "Mike Jenkins came up to me and was like 'Alignment. Know your assignment and the rest will happen as it comes.' I was just excited to be out there with the guys."

Offering some pass rush is exactly what the Raiders want from Sio. Dennis Allen said after the game, he intends to use Moore the same way he utilized Von Miller in Denver. That will have him with his hand in the dirt as much as he is upright and in coverage.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

The 245 pound linebacker has to do the job of players that are typically at least 20 pounds heavier and face offensive linemen who outweigh him by over 50 pounds.

"Just really fundamentals and technique, man," said Moore of how he deals with the weight mismatch. "I would say having good hands. Being able to play with strong hands, it really makes a difference. But that's something that a lot of older guys - Dre, Lamarr - a lot of the older guys they've been working on with me day in and day out being able to play with strong hands."

Getting a sack on his second play of his first game is a fitting beginning to Sio's career in Oakland. And if he wasn't already fired up, that sack had him spontaneously combust.

"I just think you gotta hit the game with that same pace and you really gotta keep yourself high. I play with a lot of emotion and I really try to lay it out there on the line when I go out there and play. That's the same thing you're gonna get out of me each play. That's how I play the game."

You can't ask for a better first day in an NFL uniform than Sio Moore had today. In front of the home crowd, getting a sack on the second play, and leaving healthy.

"I just, before I left out the stadium, I played my grandmother's favorite song and it just put me in a really good place and I was just happy to be blessed to be in this situation."

I would say he's gonna sleep well tonight, but he'll have to come down from this high first and I'm not sure he's capable of that.

Life lessons have only strengthened Sio Moore

By Marcus Allen Krause

July 31, 2013

Sio Moore was given a second chance at life. Not everyone does, just look at yesterday's tragedy for an example of two athletes that weren't granted that luxury. Texas A&M redshirt freshman Polo Manukainiu and Utah incoming freshman recruit Gaius "Keio" Vaenuku lost their lives in a car crash yesterday. Sadly all we can do at moments like this is let them truly remind us of how lucky we are to be alive.

Sio doesn't need the reminder even if some of us do forget how lucky we are from time to time. No, Sio Moore already lives his life knowing how close it was to being taken away. He has used his near death experience as motivation, always remembering how just a shake of his head could have taken his life.

Moore's family is originally from Liberia, a country torn by a Civil War that got so bad that his parents migrated to the US in 1990. Ironically they took him from a true war zone in Liberia, to one that he put himself squarely in the middle of by associating with the wrong crowd.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

Sio knows now that the people he was with were not who he belonged around. He was risking himself by being in the wrong places at the wrong times and it took a near death experience to awaken his inner warrior. He was just 14 and at a party that had just been shutdown. It was here where he had his moment of change. It came from a gunman firing at the back of his head as he fled for his life.

"I wasn't hanging around the right people," Moore told New Haven Register columnist Chip Malafronte "I was getting myself into situations I shouldn't have been in. It took a near-death event for me to realize the path I was going down was the wrong one."

"A bullet went right by my right ear and hit a car next to me," Moore said. "That haunted me for a good while. I kept thinking about it. What if I turned around at the wrong time? That bullet would have hit me in the head."

After that day Sio stopped hanging out with that crowd, he realized he must live better, and he uprooted himself on his own to make his desire for a better life a reality. He picked up the phone and he called his sister Tiplah Broadnax who is 19 years his senior and her husband Grady. He asked them if he could live with them, and then Sio promptly moved many miles away from where that speeding bullet almost took his life.

Our own Levi Damien recently interviewed Sio and he asked about that moment. Its easy to see what we all like so much about Moore when you read his response.

"Yeah, man. 100 percent. My life could have been changed multiple times. That was only once. I had Civil War broken out in 1990, I would have never came to the U.S. There are so many things that I'm thankful for, blessings and things around me."

Though the attempt at his life was plenty enough of a life changing event to change Sio deep within his soul, it would still not be all that he would face. Even after he made his way out of the life he was living and onto Connecticut University's football roster the fates would still test him more.

The new test would come at the expense of another young man who was cut down mercilessly and unjustly, though this was no accident like what took the lives of Polo and Keio. The test would come at the expense of a teammate, a leader of the Husky defense, and a friend who was succeeding at life in a way few are lucky enough to experience. The test would come at the expense of UConn DB Jasper Howard, who was stabbed to death in a senseless crime that happened on campus in 2009.

Now Sio Moore lives life to the absolute fullest. He carries a reminder of his friend Jasper with him everywhere, he has a tattoo in memory of him across his mid-section in the same area that Howard was stabbed in. Its another reminder of the pain he has gone through that has strengthened his resolve, the same as another tattoo that depicts his life without his father has.

Though those tattoos remind him of the pain he felt, there is also hope and love deeply involved in them. The hope in the tattoo of Jasper is the hope of honoring his lost friend, the hope of living his life in a way that would make Jasper proud. Its a reminder to never again take his life for granted, which is a hope that we could all use instilled in us.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

The tattoo about his father has a man and a boy standing next to each other with a space between their reached out hands, which Sio says is to symbolize his non-relationship with his own dad. The hope is there though still because he plans on uniting the hands the day he has a child. The tattoo is there to remind himself to be a better father than the one he had, which is a hope that many people understand more than words can express.

Seeing the strength of Sio's commitment to life is what so many of us are drawn to. We don't know yet if he will be able to play in the NFL, but he gives every reason there is to believe he can. He is the change we need in this franchise and the hope we all have for the Raiders future. Its a lot of pressure but it feels right to put it on Moore's shoulders. After all, his life has shown that he is already a man that refuses to break.

GREG OLSON

SILVER AND BLACK PRIDE

Raiders OC Greg Olson is a man of his word

Marcus Allen Krause

August 10, 2013

The result of the game yesterday against the Dallas Cowboys does not matter, how the players played does. There were a lot of miscues of course since there always are at this time of year but the overall experience was a good one. The thing that was most enjoyable will differ from person to person, but its fair to say that the improved offensive play calling was among the top nominees.

The difference was amazing between new Offensive Coordinator Greg Olson's offense and last year's system under former OC Greg Knapp. There felt like so much more potential for a big play in Olson's offense, especially considering this was just the first preseason game. The first game is always "vanilla" in the play calling and is focused more about the basic parts of the available playbook. It will only get more exciting as we progress to the regular season.

What was really exciting to see was how different the offenses built for QB's Matt Flynn and Terrelle Pryor were from each other. It verifies two things for us: One is that even if Flynn is the starter there will be plays for Pryor, and two is that Olson really does plan his offense around his players.

It proves that Olson really plans around his players because he was willing to make two different playbooks based off Flynn or Pryor playing. Most coaches would've had a fair amount of plays integrated into the playbook for each quarterback but this was beyond that. The offense was completely different when Pryor came in and was absolutely made for him. The bunched WR sets that Matt was using were gone and the Pistol offense was in with exciting results.

Going that drastic with his changes in play calling for Pryor also is what confirms that Terrelle will definitely see the field in 2013 even if its not as the starter or an injury replacement. Greg Olson would not have been willing to spend so much time with such a large amount of plays if he didn't plan on using them for sure this season. He built that offense to utilize his weapons so expect to see Pryor in the regular season without a doubt.

The drastic difference between the first quarter and the 2nd quarter offenses falls directly in line with what Greg Olson told us back in February.

"Those days (holding onto the same players for long periods of time) are somewhat over. So you've got to be able to be flexible and be able to adapt your system to the personnel that you have on that team on any given year. So, our job as a coaching staff will be to identify the skill set of the players, who are our best players, what do they do best, and how can we put them in position to be successful and do the things that they do best."

He said he plans around his players abilities and he backed those words up last night. It was a night and day difference between the plays for Flynn and Pryor but both were effective. The skillset of players like Marcel Reece, Darren McFadden, and Pryor were ignored last year but they won't be this year. That can only help this team get better.

Olson also said earlier this year that he planned on having plays this preseason specifically for Terrelle and he did. He is backing up his words here too with his actions which is a pleasant surprise to what was the recent norm in Oakland.

"We don't really quite yet know what Terrelle Pryor can do at this level but we have a pretty good feeling for what he is athletically, so there will be packages for both of them (speaking of Carson Palmer at the time) and we'll allow them to compete and we'll just be ready in either direction..."

Yep, he definitely backed that quote up too. We have all heard enough talk and now want to see the actions instead. Olson's grand opening was action packed, hopefully we will be able to say that about his tenure in Oakland in general.

Terrelle Pryor

Raiders' Terrelle Pryor rebuilds his image as a quarterback

Sam Farmer

August 11, 2013

NAPA, Calif. — Terrelle Pryor, the last draft pick made by Oakland Raiders owner Al Davis, can now make a remarkable admission for an NFL quarterback.

Until this year, he didn't really know how to throw a football.

That may be a little extreme. He thought he knew how to throw, and he could pick up a ball and wing it. But his body mechanics were so inefficient and his tosses were so scattershot, he said, he had no future in the pros.

"I look back on last year, and I just knew I wasn't ready," said Pryor, 23, entering his third NFL season and now an intriguing figure in the Raiders' quarterback mix, probably as a change-of-speed option to presumed starter Matt Flynn.

Determined to rebuild his motion, Pryor worked extensively with throwing specialist Tom House at USC this off-season, developing new timing and "unlocking" his upper body to improve his accuracy. House works with an array of NFL players — along with college and Major League Baseball players — among them quarterbacks Tom Brady and Drew Brees.

"I truly believe that after spending a month and a half with Tom, I can now sit back in the pocket and throw the ball," he said.

Pryor played well Friday in a 19-17 exhibition victory against Dallas, completing six of 10 passes for 88 yards, and running three times for 31 yards.

The pass that got away was a cross-body fling into the end zone six yards away that was picked off by Dallas' J.J. Wilcox. There appeared to be room for Pryor to score with his feet, but instead he tried to force a pass.

"I looked at the pictures and I could have easily ran it in, but I got greedy," Pryor said.

He disagreed with the notion that he wanted to throw for the score rather than run for it because he's determined to prove he can win with his arm, that he's not simply a one-dimensional read-option threat.

But Raiders Coach Dennis Allen said the next step in Pryor's maturation process is learning that sometimes he needs to listen to his instincts and make the play that unfolds before him, rather than reaching for that higher degree of difficulty.

Oakland Raiders Feature Clips

"That's been one thing we've consistently talked to Terrelle about is in those situations, don't be afraid to use your legs," Allen said. "Don't be afraid to use your skill set. ... Not every play has to be a great play, not every play has to be a spectacular play."

That Pryor is even a consideration now is a significant achievement for him and means he has made big strides. He was very raw coming out of Ohio State, and many people expected him to switch positions in the NFL, becoming a receiver or tight end.

Pryor was selected by the Raiders in the third round of the 2011 supplemental draft. He chose to skip his senior season at Ohio State in the aftermath of a tattoo-for-memorabilia scandal that cost coach Jim Tressel his job.

Pryor's NFL career began under a dark cloud, with the league taking the unusual step of carrying over the NCAA's penalty and imposing a corresponding five-game suspension of its own. He ran a 40 in under 4.4 seconds for scouts, freakish for a player who stands 6 feet 4 and weighs 233 pounds.

He made his starting debut at the end of last season, taking over for the injured Carson Palmer in a finale against San Diego. Pryor showed flashes of promise in that game, throwing two touchdown passes despite completing only 46% of his passes — 13 of 28 — and running for another score. He proved he could get in and out of the huddle quickly, often a problem for young quarterbacks, and showed elements of leadership, at one point breaking up a fight on the field.

But it was the work he did this off-season, he believes, that will make him a more accurate, more dangerous player this season.

"We're going to continue to give him opportunities to showcase his skills," Allen said. "But right now, he's not there yet."

Pryor, for one, is confident he will be.

"I'm very honest with myself," he said. "Last year, I look back and I just know I wasn't ready. I didn't have the mind-set. I knew I wasn't ready in terms of mechanics. I was so far off."

"This year, I'm very confident. I'm confident in the huddle, getting the calls to the guys, saying the protections. And I truly believe that any time a route or concept is called, I can put the ball where I want."

CHARLES WOODSON

Oakland Raiders' Charles Woodson likes what he sees

By Jerry McDonald

July 26, 2013

NAPA -- Charles Woodson knows a thing or two about defensive football, having played for some extremely poor defenses in his first go-round in Oakland as well as a championship level unit in Green Bay.

After the Raiders first training camp practice Friday, Woodson said he likes what he sees and wonders if all the dire predictions for a poor Raiders season might be off base.

"When I look at the way we move around, I think we're going to be a fast-flowing defense," Woodson said. "I think that if you can have that on any team -- a team that's willing to sell out every play and get to the ball -- you're going to be in ballgames.

"Offensively, that will take care of itself. On our side of the ball I'm anxious for the season to start and get out there and show what we are. I feel really good about that."

After seven years in Green Bay, Woodson said it felt good to be back in Napa.

"It was a familiar feeling having been here a long time the first time around," Woodson said. "I was just anxious to get out and run around on the field here and have a little fun out there on the first day."

Woodson, 36, has no plans to use his veteran's status for days camp days off. To the contrary, he expects it will be the other way around.

"My age is not going to dictate whether I practice," Woodson said. "I'm going to take as many reps as I can . . . to stand on the sideline, that's not what I enjoy. I like being on the field. They're going to have to pull me off the field at times because I love being out there.

"This is a new defensive for me, new calls. I want to be out there getting the calls and the communication down."

Regarding Woodson's amount of practice reps, coach Dennis Allen said, "You've got to take each individual on a case-by-case basis, and Charles has played a lot of football at a really high level. I'm not worried about Charles Woodson. When it comes time to tee it up and play football, he's going to be ready to go."

Woodson, whose fans showed up en masse at the facility when he signed with the Raiders, was pleased to be back in his familiar No. 24.

"I got the jersey back in large part because of the fans," Woodson said. "A big thank you to the fans for that."

Tracy Porter, who wore No. 24 in the offseason while Woodson wore his college No. 2, expressed disappointment on his Twitter account Wednesday regarding having his number changed to No. 31. Porter was unavailable for comment Friday.

"Tracy and I have talked about it," Allen said. "At the end of the day, we're ready to move on and play football. That's the last of our challenges right now."

Woodson setting example in Oakland

By Bill Williamson

July 30, 2013

NAPA, Calif. -- Charles Woodson is serving multiple roles in his second tenure with the Oakland Raiders.

Woodson, who played in Oakland from 1998-2005, will start at safety and will probably play more with the Raiders than any other team that was interested in him. Some contenders (including Denver) looked at Woodson, who was cut by Green Bay earlier this offseason, as a role player.

Woodson, 36, ultimately chose to return to Oakland. The Raiders were offering more money than the other teams. Less than week into training camp, Oakland coach Dennis Allen is thrilled the Raiders secured Woodson.

"He's what we expected him to be," Allen said. "He's filling a lot of roles. He's a special player and those types of guys bring a swagger to the field. We need that. He still runs around like he's 30."

Allen said he has been fortunate to work with superstar defensive backs in the past few years. He had Darren Sharper in New Orleans as the secondary coach. In 2011, he had Champ Bailey in Denver as the Broncos' defensive coordinator. Now, he has Woodson.

"It's fun to coach those special, type of guys," Allen said.

Allen said Woodson is a living example to the young players in Oakland's secondary.

"One of the reasons why Charles is here is to show the others guys how to work and what it takes," Allen said. "That is one of his most important roles here."

Raiders Observations: Woodson plans to be factor, not just mentor

By Clark Judge

July 31, 2013

NAPA, Calif. -- In his 16th NFL season, Raiders defensive back Charles Woodson should have nothing to prove. He's won a Super Bowl. He was the league's Defensive Player of the Year. He's a seven-time All-Pro and an eight-time Pro Bowler.

In short, the guy's circled the bases.

Nevertheless, Woodson is on a mission this season, and that mission is to demonstrate he's something more than a mentor to young players and locker-room leader helping to build a foundation for a struggling team. Basically, it's to demonstrate he can and will be an impact player.

"So, odd as it is to say, you might have something to prove, right?" I asked him.

"I guess a little bit," he said. "But what people have said about me I don't believe. If I felt there was any truth to it I might feel I had to prove it.

"At the heart of me, I'm a football player. If I can't do anything else in life I can play football. Whether it's proving somebody wrong or whatever, I plan on coming out here and being a 'dog' on that football field."

Hiring Woodson was a smart move for a Raiders team in search of an identity. A check of this week's training camp roster revealed nearly 50 players in their first seasons with the club and close to 70 with no more than two years' time with Oakland. Inexperienced teams need veteran leadership, and Woodson is an ideal choice.

Except, he insisted, he's more than that.

"I believe what I'm going to give to the team will be more on the field," he said. "What people are saying that I lack as a player is just not the truth. I'm a heck of a football player, and I have a lot left to give ... and I plan on giving it all on the field."

The opportunity is there. The Raiders' secondary was a mess last season, with injured cornerbacks and safety Michael Huff having to switch positions. But there's a raft of new faces, including rookie D.J. Hayden, veterans Mike Jenkins and Tracy Porter and Woodson.

For that reason, Woodson believes the Raiders can be better -- far better -- than preseason projections that have them ranked at or near the bottom of the NFL.

"I read everything," he said. "So I read what people are saying. I think the important thing coach [Dennis] Allen said the other day is that we have enough on this team to do what we want to do, and I believe that.

"Some of the guys we have you really haven't heard or know about, but we've got some players. A good team can start with the defense, and, defensively I think we're going to be really strong. I believe we'll win games defensively, and that will carry us through the season."

He also believes he's not close to the end of his career. Yes, he missed nine games last season because of injury. Yes, he turns 37 in October. Yes, he went unwanted for months before the Raiders signed him in late May. But, no, retirement is nothing he thinks about.

"How long do you plan on playing?" I asked.

"As long as somebody lets me," he said. "I love it. I told the defense the other night that after 16 years I still love it -- just like the day I came in. My hope is that they love the game as much as I do."

Woodson likes changes in return to Oakland

By Paul Gutierrez

May 22, 2013

Charles Woodson caught wind of Raiders fans mobilizing via social media to greet him at the team's compound for his free-agent visit on Tuesday.

No doubt the turnout of about 200 helped sway his decision.

"I tell you, man, it was overwhelming," Woodson said on a conference call with Bay Area reporters Wednesday afternoon. "I think that if at any time I had ever forgotten what the love was like in Oakland, I was definitely reminded yesterday."

"I think it played a big part (in signing). I was actually scared of leaving the facility and not having a deal done," he added with a laugh. "I don't know if I would have made it out of there. But that was a big deal and seeing that kind of welcome, it definitely put me in the mindset it would be a good decision to make it happen."

Woodson, who turns 37 on Oct. 7, was the No. 4 overall draft pick of the Raiders in 1998 as the reigning Heisman Trophy winner. He spent his first eight years in the NFL playing cornerback for Oakland before leaving as a free agent in 2006 for Green Bay and winning a Super Bowl two years ago.

After the Packers released him in a cost-cutting move this offseason, he initially said he wanted to play for a contender, but instead came to choose the rebuilding Raiders over the likes of Denver, which offered him a contract. He also visited the 49ers.

Per reports, Woodson's deal with the Raiders is for one year with a max amount of $4.3 million and a base salary of $1.8 million.

"As the process rolled on, I knew I wanted to play football," he said. "If it was a team that wasn't quite there but still is a team that is looking on the up, then I was going to do it. And I feel like the Raiders are a team that's looking on the up."

Woodson said his familiarity with Raiders second-year general manager Reggie McKenzie from their time together in Green Bay and McKenzie's vision for Oakland sold him on the direction the team was heading.

Plus, the last time Woodson was in the Raiders' building, in 2005, was a lifetime ago in terms of regime change. The change in vibe, he said, was palpable.

"Having Reggie in there and having somebody that's really in that decision-making role other than Mr. Al Davis is definitely a different vibe," Woodson said. "It seems like there's more of a control, as far as what they're able to do and what they want to implement, as far as their team is concerned."

"I think it's a good vibe in there."

So what does Woodson, at 36-going-on-37 with a Hall of Fame resume that includes eight Pro Bowl selections, three first-team All Pro nods, an NFL defensive rookie of the year award as well as an NFL defensive player of the year honor bring to the Raiders' table?

"I'm a football player, man, so I'm just going to bring a lot of intensity," he said. "Somebody that's passionate about the game, and a guy that knows how to make plays. That's what I'm going to bring. I mean, I think when guys watch me play...that raises the level of other guys, because of the way I play the game."

"I'm going to bring that mindset, that mentality of the game...and have fun doing it."

Woodson figures to make the move to free safety full-time now, to "roam around and make plays," he said, and if that sounds familiar to Raiders fans, it should. It's what Rod Woodson did when he came to Oakland in 2002 and solidified a secondary that helped the Raiders reach the Super Bowl. It was also the last time the Raiders experienced a winning season.

The elder Woodson had already made the switch from corner to free safety before getting to Oakland but it was in that 2002 season when Rod Woodson had a career-high eight interceptions and returned two for touchdowns, including the memorable 98-yarder to swing the season at Denver on Monday Night Football.

Does C-Wood anticipate having similar success?

"I plan on having it," he said. "I wouldn't be out there trying to continue to play if I didn't think it was going to happen. I would have just retired if I thought I couldn't go out there and be the best player on the field."

Woodson, though, has broken his collarbone twice in the past three years. He said it's healed now, though, after missing nine games last year, saying it's "great."

That could also potentially describe the booty cornerback Tracy Porter stands to collect as he currently owns No. 24, the digits work by Woodson in his halcyon Raiders days. It's a jersey that is still among the most popular rocked by fans on gamedays at the Coliseum.

"We definitely have to have that conversation, though," Woodson said of Porter. "We haven't had it yet. Raider Nation has me back, but I don't know if they'll have me (fully) back without the '24' on my back."

Perhaps some cash and some wine (Woodson is the proprietor of a wine made in Napa) could convince Porter to make the switch? But the proximity to his off-the-field business had little to do with his decision to return to Oakland.

"Zero," Woodson said. "This was all about football. This was all about continuing my football career, and having an opportunity to go out there and help a team win. That was bottom line for me."

And keep in mind, Woodson was not signed to simply retire a Raider or to mentor the younger guys. Though he believes that is part of his role. Owner Mark Davis reiterated as much to CSNCalifornia.com earlier in the day.

"I try not to step on any coaches' toes," he said. "Whatever input I can give those guys, that's definitely what I'm going to do. And if I can be a help to them, and it's going to help us win, ultimately, then I have to do it."

Beyond being greeted by the adoring mass of fans, Woodson saw familiar faces on his tour of his first NFL home. Even if kicker Sebastian Janikowski is the only player remaining from Woodson's first tour with the Raiders. There were also equipment and film staff and who many think is the greatest cornerback in franchise history.

"It had been a while since I had seen Willie Brown and he's one of my favorite people, man, ever," Woodson said. "We always joke about who the real '24' is. So it was good to have that back-and-forth with him and get the deal done and then call him and say, 'Willie Brown, I'm coming back. The real 2-4 is coming back.'"

"It felt good to be in that building. It felt good."
