OAKLAND RAIDERS (3-12)
vs.
DENVER BRONCOS (11-4)

GAME PREVIEW

The Oakland Raiders will play in their final contest of the 2014 season this Sunday as they hit road and travel for a match-up with the Denver Broncos at Sports Authority Field at Mile High on Sunday, December 28 at 1:25 p.m. PT. Sunday's finale will be the 108th regular season meeting between the two division rivals since their inception into the AFL in 1960. This will be the second of two meetings between the two squads this season, with the Broncos taking the first contest in Oakland back on Nov. 9, 41-17. Oakland closed out the 2014 home campaign with three consecutive victories at O.co Coliseum, the first such stretch since 2010, and will look for its first road victory on Sunday. Last week, the Raiders beat the Buffalo Bills to close out the home slate of their season, 26-24. Denver traveled to Cincinnati to play on Monday Night Football, falling to the Bengals by a final of 28-37.

The Raiders won their third straight home game last Sunday, eliminating the Bills from playoff contention. Buffalo marks the second team that had their playoff hopes ended by the Raiders in the last three weeks, as the Silver and Black also dashed the San Francisco 49ers' playoff hopes in Week 14, handing them a 24-13 defeat. The defense led the way for the Raiders, intercepting two passes, one each by S Charles Woodson and S Brandian Ross, and posting two sacks, one apiece by DE Justin Tuck and LB Khalil Mack. The run defense was stout all game long, holding Buffalo to just 13 rushing yards. QB Derek Carr led the way for the offense, throwing for 214 yards on 17-of-34 passing and two touchdowns. RB Latavius Murray churned out tough yards on the ground, carrying it 23 times for 86 yards, including 53 in the second half. WR Kenbrell Thompkins had his best game of the season, totaling 90 receiving yards on five receptions. WR James Jones added his sixth touchdown reception of the season in the victory.

QUOTING SPARANO

BRONCOS SNAPSHOT

Overview: The AFC West champion Denver Broncos (11-4) will close out the 2014 season by hosting the Raiders in Week 17. The Broncos are led by Head Coach John Fox for the fourth season and have advanced at least as far as the Divisional Playoff Round in each season under his watch. Fox, who coached the Carolina Panthers from 2002-10, has posted a 118-89 (.570) record with an 8-6 postseason mark. Coming off consecutive 13-3 finishes and a trip to Super Bowl XLVIII last season, Fox and the Broncos have turned their focus to securing the No. 2 seed and a first-round bye in the AFC Playoffs. To earn their 12th win of the season, the Broncos will need to rebound from a tough loss on the road against the Cincinnati Bengals in Week 16, a 37-28 defeat.

Offense: QB Peyton Manning enters Week 17 as the NFL's all-time leader in passing touchdowns and the runner-up in career passing yards and completions. Manning, 38, has completed 374-of-560 passes (66.8 percent) this season for 4,454 yards, 39 TDs and 15 INTs for a passer rating of 102.9. Manning has no shortage of options when it comes to his receiving corps. WR Demaryius Thomas leads the team with 1,504 yards on 103 catches (14.6 avg.) with 11 TDs, while WR Emmanuelle Sanders has been a dangerous deep threat with 95 receptions for 1,331 yards (14.0 avg.) and nine TDs. TE Julius Thomas has added 12 receiving TDs. RB C.J. Anderson has stepped up as the Broncos leading rusher in place of an injured Montee Ball and has posted 762 rushing yards on 166 carries (4.6 avg.) with five TDs.

Defense: The Broncos' defensive unit has presented a formidable squad this season. With the addition of stars DE DeMarcus Ware, S T.J. Ward and rookie CB Bradley Roby, the Broncos have produced the third best overall defense and the second best run-stopping unit in the league. LB Von Miller currently leads the Broncos with 13 sacks, while Ware has added 10 of his own to land both players in the top 15 in the NFL. First-year Bronco CB Aqib Talib is tied for the team lead with four interceptions, and he has taken two to the house this season including an early pick-six in Week 16 against the Bengals. S Rahim Moore also has intercepted four passes this season to add to the team's 17 picks. LB Brandon Marshall, a third-year player, currently leads the Broncos with 110 tackles (88 solo).

INDIVIDUAL STATS VS. BRONCOS

Sebastian Janikowski
Career Totals: 32-for-41 on field goals and 59-for-60 on extra points for 151 total points, and one punt for 33 yards in 29 career games (10-19).
- Scored 13 of the Raiders' 39 points in a win on Dec. 19, 2010. He converted all three field goal attempts and added four extra points. Janikowski booted the only punt of his career in the game, a 33-yarder.

James Jones
Career Totals: 14 receptions for 175 yards (12.5 avg.) and two touchdowns in three games.
- Registered his first 100-yard receiving game and just his second career touchdown as a rookie against Denver on Oct. 29, 2007 while with the Green Bay Packers.

Darren McFadden
Career Totals: 752 rushing yards on 151 attempts (5.0 avg.) with six touchdowns; 22 receptions for 157 yards (7.1 avg.) and two touchdowns; and one completion for 16 yards and a passing touchdown in 12 career games (5-7).
- Responsible for two touchdowns in Oakland's loss to Denver on Sept. 23, 2013, rushing for one and throwing for another on a 16-yard pass to Marcel Reece, the only completion of his career.
- Scored a career-high four touchdowns on Oct. 24, 2010 in the Raiders' 59-14 win. He totaled 165 rushing yards on 16 carries with three touchdowns and added 31 yards on two receptions with a receiving touchdown.

Charles Woodson
Career Totals: 91 tackles (75 solo) according to STATS; one interception returned for a touchdown; two sacks; and three punt returns for 29 yards in 16 career games (6-10).
- Earlier this season, paced the team with 12 tackles (eight) in one of his six double-digit tackle performances this year, according to official coaches statistics.
- As a member of the Green Bay Packers, intercepted Kyle Orton on Oct. 2, 2011 and returned it 30 yards for the score.
- Last season, recorded 11 tackles (10) and sacked Brock Osweiler for an 8-yard loss in the fourth quarter on Dec. 29, 2013.

RAIDERS VS. BRONCOS

OAKLAND RAIDERS 26, BUFFALO BILLS 24

- The Raiders defeated the Buffalo Bills, 26-24, winning their third straight home game, all against opponents with winning records. That marks the longest home-winning streak since October-November 2010 when the Raiders defeated San Diego (10/10), Seattle (10/31) and Kansas City (11/7) in three straight contests.
- The Raiders finished the home portion of their season with a 3-5 home record and a 3-4 mark at O.co Coliseum. The Raiders have won at least three games in Oakland in each of the last five seasons.
- The victory also snaps a seven-game losing streak against AFC East opponents, with the team's last victory coming on Sept. 25, 2011 vs. the New York Jets, 34-24.
- The Raiders allowed only 13 yards rushing in the game, tying the third-best performance in franchise history (10/22/72 vs. Den.). It marks the best game against the run since the Raiders allowed 10 yards vs. Kansas City on 12/16/12.
- QB Derek Carr eclipsed the 3,000-yard mark for the season, becoming the 13th NFL rookie and the eighth different Raider (15th occurrence) to accomplish the feat in a single season. The last rookie to do so was Geno Smith in 2013, and the last Raider was Carson Palmer in 2012.
- With Carr's 17 completions, he moves ahead of Peyton Manning (326) with 330 completions, third most by an NFL rookie. He now trails Andrew Luck (339) and Sam Bradford (354) for the most completions by a rookie.
- Sunday marked the sixth time Carr has attempted at least 30 passes without throwing an interception, tying him (w/ Andy Dalton) for the most games by a rookie since 1960.
- RB Latavius Murray was explosive on the ground for the Raiders, breaking off three runs of 10-plus yards in the contest. Murray finished with 23 rushes for 86 yards.
- WR James Jones caught his 43rd career touchdown pass and his sixth of the season on a 3-yard strike in the back of the end zone. Jones (23) is now tied with Calvin Johnson and Antonio Gates for the 11th-most receiving touchdowns since 2012.
- FB/RB Jamize Olawale caught his first career touchdown on a 1-yard pass from Derek Carr in the fourth quarter.
- S Charles Woodson picked off Kyle Orton in the first quarter for his 60th career interception and his 22nd as a Raider, tying him with Warren Powers for 10th on the franchise list. He is just one of 11 players in NFL history with 60 career interceptions.
- Woodson now has at least four interceptions in eight seasons, tied for the most among active players (DeAngelo Hall) and tied for ninth most in NFL history.
- LB Khalil Mack recorded the fourth sack of his NFL career, dropping Orton for a 10-yard loss and forcing a Bills punt on their first possession of the second half. Mack is tied for fifth among 2014 NFL rookies and is tied for 10th all-time among Raider rookies (Tommy Kelly, 2004 and Matt Shaughnessy, 2009) with four sacks.
- S Brandian Ross picked off Kyle Orton late in the fourth quarter for his second interception of the season for the Silver and Black. He also added four tackles in the win.
- K Sebastian Janikowski was 4-of-5 on field goals in the game, connecting from 45-, 36-, 38- and 49-yards out. Janikowski now ranks 13th in NFL history with 364 made field goals in his career. Janikowski is now 19-of-22 (86.4 percent) on the season.

WHAT TO WATCH FOR

- QB Derek Carr becoming the 14th player since the 16-game schedule was adopted in 1978 to start every game in his rookie season. His brother, David Carr, was the fourth to do so for the Houston Texans in 2002.
- Carr attempting 30 passes without an interception for the seventh time this season, setting both the NFL rookie record (passing Andy Dalton, 2011) and the Raider-franchise record (passing Jeff George, 1997).
- Carr completing 25 passes to set the NFL rookie record, passing Sam Bradford's 354 in 2010.
- Carr throwing three touchdown passes to tie Andrew Luck (23) for the third most by a rookie in NFL history.
- RB Darren McFadden appearing in all 16 games in a season for the first time in his career. McFadden has already set a personal best with 15 games played and could tie a career-high with his 13th start.
- WRs James Jones and Andre Holmes battling for the team lead in receiving yards. Holmes has posted a career-best 683 yards on 45 receptions (four TDs), while Jones has recorded a personal-high 71 catches for 649 yards (six TDs). Neither player has ever lead his team in receiving.
- LB Khalil Mack becoming the third Raider linebacker, and the first since General Manager Reggie McKenzie (1985), to start all 16 games as a rookie. Matt Millen also started 16 games in 1980.
- Mack recording his fifth quarterback sack to tie Aaron Lynch for second most among 2014 rookies, and to tie Lamarr Houston (2010) and Trevor Scott (2008) for sixth on the franchise rookie list.
- S Charles Woodson intercepting his team-leading fifth interception of the season to tie Tommy Morrow (23) for the ninth most in franchise history. Woodson currently has five seasons with at least five interceptions, tied for the most (with Asante Samuel) among active NFL players.
- DL Antonio Smith notching at least half a sack to join DE Justin Tuck as one of five NFL players to record at least 3.5 sacks in each season since 2007. The other three players are Jared Allen (Chi.), DeMarcus Ware (Den.) and Mario Williams (Buf.).
- P Marquette King landing one punt inside the Broncos' 20-yard line to become just the second punter in NFL history with 100 punts, at least 28 punts placed inside the 20 and three-or-fewer touchbacks in a season (Kyle Larson, 2008).
- King punting seven times to tie for the 10th most punts in a season in NFL history. King also needs just 200 punting yards to move into 10th place on the single-season punting list.

A WIN WOULD...

…improve the Raiders' advantage in the all-time series to 60-47-2 (1-1 in postseason) and 29-23-2 on the road.

…mark the first Raider victory over the Broncos since Sept. 12, 2011 when Oakland defeated Denver 23-20 on the road to open the season.

…give the Raiders their fifth win in a season finale since 2000, and the team's first since the 2010 finale, a 31-10 win at Kansas City on Jan. 2, 2011.

HEAD COACHING MATCH-UP

TONY SPARANO

Tony Sparano was named the Oakland Raiders' interim head coach on Sept. 30, 2014. Sparano is the team's 19th head coach and fifth interim head coach in franchise history. Sparano brings 31 years of coaching experience to the job, including 16 at the NFL level and nine combined seasons as a head coach at the college and NFL level.

From 2008-11, Sparano served as the head coach of the Miami Dolphins, posting an overall regular season record of 29-32 (0-1 in the postseason) (.475). In 2008, Sparano's first year as the Dolphins' head coach, he guided the team to one of the best single-season turnarounds in NFL history, a 10-game improvement over the previous year. Taking over a 1-15 squad from a year earlier, he led the Dolphins to an 11-5 record and the AFC East title. For his efforts, Sparano was named as 2008 NFL Coach of the Year by the NFL Alumni and the Pro Football Weekly/Professional Football Writers of America, and AFC Coach of the Year by the Kansas City 101 Committee. He shared USA Today's Coach of the Year honors with Atlanta's Mike Smith.

With the Cowboys from 2003-07, Sparano served as the team's tight ends coach from 2003-04, offensive line/running game coordinator in 2005, and assistant head coach/offensive line from 2006-07. During those five years, the Cowboys qualified for the playoffs three times, including 2007 when they won the NFC East with a 13-3 record.

Prior to two one-year stops as a tight ends coach, with the Redskins in 2001 and Jaguars in 2002, Sparano helped launch the expansion Cleveland Browns. In 1999, Cleveland's first year back in the NFL, Sparano was an offensive quality control coach. He spent 2000 in charge of the Browns' offensive line.

Sparano made the jump to the NFL after five years as head coach (1994-98) of his alma mater, Division II New Haven, where he compiled a 41-14 record (.745), with four winning campaigns and one .500 season. In that tenure, he also guided the Chargers to a pair of NCAA playoff berths. In 1997, his 12-2 club led the country in scoring offense (42.8 points per contest) and ranked second in scoring defense (11.6) before losing in the national championship.

He spent the previous six seasons (1988-93) at Division I-AA Boston University, coaching the Terriers' offensive linemen from 1988-89, including Cleveland Browns 1989 draft selection Mike Graybill, before serving as offensive coordinator from 1990-93. In his final season at BU, the 12-1 team won the Yankee Conference and advanced to the quarterfinals of the NCAA playoffs.

JOHN FOX

John Fox, one of the NFL's most experienced and respected head coaches, enters his fourth season with the Broncos in 2014 after being named the 14th head coach in franchise history on Jan. 13, 2011. A proven leader known for his positive, energetic coaching style, Fox has appeared in three Super Bowls during his NFL coaching career, including two as a head coach. In leading Denver to Super Bowl XLVIII in 2013 and Carolina to Super Bowl XXXVIII in 2003, he became just the sixth head coach in league history to guide two different clubs to a Super Bowl.

His 2013 Broncos posted a 13-3 record to earn the AFC's No. 1 seed for the second consecutive season en route to making the club's first Super Bowl appearance in 15 years. Denver set NFL single-season records for points (606) and net passing yards (5,444) while registering the second-most total yards (7,317) in league annals.

Before joining the Broncos, Fox compiled a 73-71 (.507) regular-season record with the Panthers during his nine years as head coach. He led Carolina to three 11-win campaigns, two NFC South Division titles and three playoff appearances. Carolina went 5-3 in the postseason under Fox, appearing in two NFC Championship Games and one Super Bowl (XXXVIII during the 2003 season).

Before his head coaching tenure with the Panthers, Fox spent five seasons as the defensive coordinator for the New York Giants from 1997-2001 and led a defense that consistently ranked among the league's most productive units. New York allowed the seventh-fewest points per game (18.7) in the NFL during that span while also finishing fourth in the league with a +25 turnover differential.

Fox spent one season as a consultant for the St. Louis Rams in 1996 after two years as the Raiders' defensive coordinator (1994-95). As a secondary coach for the Chargers from 1992-93 under Bobby Ross, Fox helped San Diego rank second in the NFL with 47 interceptions in his two seasons.

He began his NFL career in 1989 in Pittsburgh, where he coached the secondary during Pro Football Hall of Fame Head Coach Chuck Noll's final three seasons with the Steelers from 1989-91. Fox's coaching career began in 1978 as a graduate assistant at his alma mater, San Diego State University, after playing two seasons as a defensive back for the Aztecs. He worked his way through the college ranks, making a succession of moves beginning at U.S. International University (San Diego) in 1979 coaching defensive backs. Fox also had stints at Boise State (1980), Long Beach State (1981), Utah (1982), Kansas (1983) and Iowa State (1984) before his first venture into professional football with the USFL's Los Angeles Express in 1985.

The son of Ron Fox, who was a U.S. Navy SEAL, John and his wife, Robin, have three sons: Matthew, Mark and Cody, and a daughter, Halle.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

The Raiders — who began play in the American Football League in 1960 — enter their 55th year of professional football competition, including the last 44 as a member of the National Football League.

In five memorable decades — the 1960s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the 2000s — the Raiders have been dominant in professional football since Al Davis first pledged in 1963 to build the finest organization in pro sports.

During these decades of dominance, the Raiders have won an AFL championship, four American Football Conference championships, and three world championships of professional football, participated in five Super Bowls, played in 14 championship games, won or tied for 17 division championships, had 21 playoff seasons, finished 34 seasons at .500 or better and played in 40 postseason games.

Pro football's dynamic organization placed first in the AFC West in 2000, 2001 and 2002 despite playing among the toughest schedules in the NFL in each of those seasons. With their appearance in Super Bowl XXXVII, the Raiders became the first NFL team to have had a season end in the Super Bowl in four different decades.

The Raiders are the only team to have been in Super Bowls in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s and the 2000s.

The Silver and Black are the only AFC team — and one of just two NFL teams (Minnesota) — to have a season that advanced to the conference championship game in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s, the '90s and the 2000s.

The Raiders are one of only two original AFL teams to have captured three world championships of professional football with Super Bowl victories. The Raiders are one of only four AFC teams to have won more than one Super Bowl since 1980.

In their five Super Bowl appearances, the Raiders have been led by four head coaches and started four quarterbacks.

With four postseason victories, the Raiders were the first of the AFC West teams to win multiple postseason contests in the new millennium by six years.

Since 1963, when Al Davis first took over the failing Oakland franchise that had struggled to win only nine of 42 league games in the initial three seasons of the new AFL and pledged to build the finest organization in sports, the Raiders have dominated professional football in terms of consistent victory. During those memorable 54 years in Oakland and Los Angeles, the Raiders have won 434 league games, tied 11 and lost only 375.

"Commitment to Excellence" has never been an idle phrase to those who have proudly represented the Raiders organization during the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium as shown by their domination of pro football.

More than 20 of the great players who proudly wore the Silver and Black, as well as Owner-Leader Al Davis and legendary Head Coach John Madden, have been enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. The Raiders have also produced five Coaches of the Year.

In addition, 62 Pro Bowl players have made 181 Pro Bowl appearances representing the Silver and Black. In 1970, as the Raiders began their second decade of play, the merger between the AFL and NFL became a reality on the field. In the 1970 through 2012 period of interconference play, the Raiders have compiled a remarkable 92-73-1 record against present National Football Conference rivals.

Another innovation came to professional football in 1970 — "Monday Night Football." The Raiders' domination of this prime-time television series has seen the Silver and Black build an incredible 37-27-1 record in Monday night play. In the 43 years of this series, the Raiders are 15-8-0 in "Monday Night Football" games at home.

Through the decades — the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and now the 2000s — the Raiders have had the greatest players, the greatest coaches, the greatest plays and participated in the greatest games in the annals of professional sports.

Challengers to Raider domination of professional football will arise as they have in the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium. The Raider organization will continue to meet these challenges.

ASSISTANT COACHES

BOBBY APRIL

Bobby April, entering his 23rd season as an NFL assistant coach, is in his second year as Oakland's special teams coordinator. April, one of the NFL's most highly-regarded special teams coaches, was named to his current position on Jan. 19, 2013, after serving as Philadelphia's special teams coordinator from 2010-12.

In 2013, Oakland's special teams unit ranked among the best in the league. On kickoff coverage, the special teams allowed just 20.4 yards per return, good for fourth in the NFL. April also helped first-year punter Marquette King lead the league in gross punting (48.9 avg.) and punts of 60-plus yards (10), while ranking sixth in punting yards (4,107). April spent three seasons (2010-12) with the Philadelphia Eagles before coming to Oakland. In 2011, April successfully integrated both a rookie kicker, Alex Henery, and a rookie punter, Chas Henry, on his units.

Prior to joining the Eagles, April spent six seasons with the Buffalo Bills (2004-09). In three of those six years, he guided the Bills to the No. 1 spot in the annual Dallas Morning News rankings. April was named Special Teams Coach of the Year by his peers twice, in 2004 and 2008.

He joined the Bills after three seasons (2001-03) in charge of the special teams with the St. Louis Rams, where he helped the team to an appearance in Super Bowl XXXVI. As Pittsburgh's special teams coordinator from 1994-95, April helped the Steelers earn a berth in Super Bowl XXX.

A native of New Orleans, April and his wife, Charlene, have five children, a son, Bobby III, currently the linebackers coach for the N.Y. Jets, and four daughters: Julie, Jamie Lee, Angela and Jaclyn.

GREG OLSON

Under Olson's guidance last season, the Raiders offense averaged 20.1 points and 333.8 yards per game. Olson's group showed improvements in many significant areas from 2012, including yards per rush (3.8 in 2012 to 4.6 in 2013), 20-plus-yard runs (eight to 18), red zone touchdown percentage (42.9 to 59.5) and points on the opening possession (three to 41).

Olson served four seasons with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, including the last three as offensive coordinator. Olson helped guide the Buccaneers to one of their best offensive seasons in team history in 2010, setting franchise records for yards per play (5.61), average per rush (4.64 yards), average per pass play (7.21), passer rating (96.2) and fewest interceptions thrown (six).

Prior to joining Tampa Bay, Olson spent two seasons (2006-07) as offensive coordinator for the St. Louis Rams. Under Olson's direction, the 2006 Rams became just the fourth team in NFL history to produce a 4,000-yard passer (QB Marc Bulger), a 1,500-yard rusher (RB Steven Jackson) and two 1,000-yard receivers (WRs Torry Holt and Isaac Bruce). Bulger, Jackson and Holt were all selected to the Pro Bowl.

From 1997-2000, as quarterbacks coach at Purdue, Olson played a key role in the development of future Pro Bowl and Super Bowl-winning QB Drew Brees. Under Olson, Brees was a Heisman Trophy finalist in 1999 and 2000 while winning the Maxwell Award as the nation's most outstanding player in 2000. He was also a finalist for the Davey O'Brien Award as the nation's top quarterback in 1999 and 2000. Brees finished his collegiate career as the Big Ten and Purdue's all-time leader in passing yardage, touchdown passes, total yards, completion percentage, completions and attempts. Brees earned Big Ten Player of Year honors in 1998 and 2000 and All-Conference accolades for three straight years (1998-2000).

A native of Richland, Wash., he and his wife, Lissa, have twins, Kenneth and Grayce.

JASON TARVER

Jason Tarver is in his third season as defensive coordinator for the Oakland Raiders. Tarver, who coached in various capacities with the San Francisco 49ers for 10 seasons, joined the Silver and Black after spending one year as Stanford's co-defensive coordinator.

Last season signified a major transition on defense for the Raiders, as Tarver's unit started 10 new players on defense. The defense showed significant improvement against the run, allowing 107.9 yards per game to rank 13th in the NFL after ranking 18th in the previous season. Oakland also held opponents to less than 40 yards on the ground three times during the campaign. The Raiders improved the team's sack count from the previous season by 13, with a remarkable 15 different players gettting to the quarterback in 2013.

Before coaching at Stanford for one season in 2011, Tarver spent the previous decade on the staff of the 49ers, coaching San Francisco's outside linebackers for six seasons (2005-10) prior to his appointment at Stanford. He began coaching in the NFL as a quality control coach for the 49ers (2001-03) before being promoted to assistant running backs/offensive assistant coach in 2004.

Prior to joining the 49ers in 2001, Tarver spent three seasons (1998-2000) as a graduate assistant coach at UCLA, where he worked primarily with the defensive backs while assisting with the special teams. During his tenure with the Bruins, three defensive backs, Ricky Manning and Jason Bell along with Marques Anderson, became NFL players.

A native of Stanford, Calif., Tarver and his wife, Katie, have two sons, Merrick and Keegan.

ASSISTANT COACHES

CHRIS BONIOL

Chris Boniol, who played six years as a kicker in the National Football League, enters his first season with the Raiders. He was named to his current position on Feb. 6, 2014, after spending the previous four years as the assistant special teams coach with the Dallas Cowboys.

Boniol coached the kickers while assisting with the special teams units in Dallas from 2010-13. Last season, kicker Dan Bailey led the NFL in field-goal percentage, making 28-of-30 attempts (93.3 percent), and ranked fourth in the league with 52 touchbacks. In 2012, Bailey led the NFL in field-goal percentage, nailing 29-of-31 attempts (93.5 percent). In 2011, Bailey was named to the Pro Football Weekly/Pro Football Writers Association All-Rookie Team.

Boniol enjoyed a six-year pro career, playing for three different NFL teams. From 1994-96, he converted 118-of-121 PATs and 81-of-93 (87.1 percent) of his field goals while helping the Cowboys to the Super Bowl XXX Championship. Boniol also played two seasons with the Philadelphia Eagles (1997-98) and one with the Chicago Bears (1999).

An Alexandria, La., native, Boniol and his wife, Christine, have two sons, Gaige and Garin.

JOHN DeFILIPPO

John DeFilippo enters his fifth year with the Raiders as quarterbacks coach in 2014. He is in his second stint with Oakland, having served in the same capacity from 2007-08. DeFilippo rejoined the Raiders after serving as offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach at San Jose State from 2010-11. He was the assistant quarterbacks coach for the New York Jets in 2009, and also served on Tom Coughlin's staff with the New York Giants for two years beginning in 2005.

DeFilippo joined the Giants after two seasons as quarterbacks coach at Columbia, where he tutored QB Jeff Otis, who left the school ranked second in program history in completions and passing yards, and went on to spend time on the Raiders' practice squad. From 2001-02, DeFilippo was a graduate assistant at Notre Dame, working with wide receivers and tight ends. He began his coaching career tutoring quarterbacks at Fordham in 2000.

A native of Youngstown, Ohio, DeFilippo earned four letters as a quarterback at James Madison University, leading the team to a conference title as a senior in 1999. His father, Gene, served 15 years as athletic director at Boston College.

TED GILMORE

Ted Gilmore enters his third season as wide receivers coach for the Oakland Raiders. Gilmore coached at the collegiate level for 17 seasons prior to joining the Silver and Black. Last year, Gilmore aided Oakland's youthful receiving corps, with second-year WR Rod Streater leading the team with 60 receptions and 888 yards.

Gilmore served as wide receivers coach at USC in 2011, when he was named the NCAA's top receivers coach by FootballScoop.com. Gilmore spent six years at Nebraska (2005-10), coaching the wide receivers, and was assistant head coach/offense in 2008. Gilmore arrived at Nebraska after two seasons at Colorado (2003-04). Gilmore was also Purdue's wide receivers coach for two seasons (2001-02). He was wide receivers coach at the University of Houston in 2000 after spending one season as the tight ends coach at Kansas (1999). Gilmore began his coaching career at his alma mater, Wyoming. He was in charge of the wide receivers for two seasons (1997-98).

JOHN GRIECO

John Grieco, who has nearly two decades of strength and conditioning coaching experience at the collegiate and professional levels, enters his third season with the Oakland Raiders and first in his present capacity. Grieco served two seasons as assistant strength and conditioning coach from 2012-13.

Grieco came to the Silver and Black following two years as the head strength and conditioning coach at Louisiana-Monroe, where he was named the top strength and conditioning coach in the country by the Professional Football Strength and Conditioning Coaches Society. Grieco served four seasons as the director of strength and conditioning at UNLV. He spent two years at East Carolina, serving as the director of the Pirates' football strength program and as an assistant strength coach.

After graduating from Florida, Grieco began his coaching career at his alma mater and remained there for nine years (1995-2003). He was part of a Gator football program that enjoyed a national championship victory in 1996 and two Orange Bowl wins (1998, 2001).

JUSTIN GRIFFITH

Former Raider and eight-year NFL veteran Justin Griffith is in his third season on the Oakland coaching staff, serving as an offensive quality control assistant. He was a coaching intern with the Seattle Seahawks prior to joining the Silver and Black.

Through the last two seasons with Oakland, Griffith has worked primarily with the offensive line and tight end positions. In 2013, Griffith aided a shuffling offensive line through eight different starting combinations, the most in the NFL. Despite injuries, the offensive line paved the way for four different players to rush for 100 yards in a game, becoming the first NFL team to do so since 1978. Griffith also worked with the tight ends, the offense's youngest unit.

Griffith played in 96 NFL games with 73 starts, including 23 games in two seasons at fullback with the Silver and Black (2007-08). Originally drafted by the Atlanta Falcons in the fourth round of the 2003 NFL Draft, he retired following the 2009 season, which he spent with Seattle.

A native of Magee, Miss., Griffith and his wife, Kim, have two sons, Brody and Dylan. He also has a fraternal twin.

NICK HOLZ

Nick Holz enters his third season as offensive assistant for the Oakland Raiders. Holz served the previous four seasons in a similar capacity at Stanford.

Last year, Holz worked extensively with Oakland's youthful receiving corps, helping second-year WR Rod Streater lead the team with 60 receptions and 888 yards. In 2012, Holz aided Streater, who become one of the most productive undrafted rookie players in recent NFL history. Streater's 39 catches in 2012 were tied for third most among undrafted rookies since 2000, and fourth most by a Raider rookie.

While assisting Stanford, Holz helped the Cardinal appear in the Sun Bowl, Orange Bowl and Fiesta Bowl. As an assistant quarterbacks coach, he helped QB Andrew Luck to first-team All-American honors. He began his collegiate coaching career at Nebraska, where he served as offensive quality control coach and video intern for the Cornhuskers in 2007.

A native of Danville, Calif., Holz prepped at De La Salle High School in Concord, Calif., where he was teammates with current Raiders RB Maurice Jones-Drew.

ASSISTANT COACHES

MARK HUTSON

Mark Hutson enters his third season as tight ends coach for the Silver and Black. He joined the Raiders after coaching at the collegiate level for two decades, including two stints as an interim head coach.

Last season, Hutson tutored the youngest unit on the Raiders' offense, a group that included two rookies and counted just one career catch among three players entering the regular season. Rookie Mychal Rivera saw action in all 16 games in his first season, leading the group with 38 catches for 407 yards and four touchdowns.

Hutson spent the previous five seasons as an assistant at Tulane, serving as the interim head coach for the Green Wave in 2011. Prior to being named interim head coach, Hutson served as offensive line coach for five seasons. In 2010, Hutson's offensive line led the way for RB Orleans Darkwa, who set a freshman program record with 925 yards.

A native of Fort Smith, Ark., Hutson was part of a famous "fumblerooski" play in the 1988 Orange Bowl, scooping up an intentional fumble and scampering 29 yards for a touchdown with 2:05 remaining in the contest. He and his wife, Sherri, have two sons, Ethan, an offensive lineman at Troy University, and Dillion.

MARCUS ROBERTSON

Marcus Robertson enters his first season with the Silver and Black as assistant defensive backs coach. A 12-year NFL veteran as a player and former All-Pro safety, Robertson has served as an NFL assistant for seven years, including the last two with the Detroit Lions.

Robertson was secondary coach for the Tennessee Titans from 2009-11, helping the team rank second in the NFL in average passing yards/completion (10.55) during that span.

Robertson served as the Titans' director of player development from 2003-06. He spent those four years assisting players with their career transition into and out of the NFL through continuing education, financial education and administering player programs.

A native of Pasadena, Calif., he played 12 seasons as a safety with the Houston Oilers/Tennessee Oilers/Tennessee Titans (1991-2000) and the Seattle Seahawks (2001-02) after being selected by Houston in the fourth round of the 1991 NFL Draft. He played in 162 career games with 144 starts, totaling 24 interceptions, 1.5 sacks, nine forced fumbles and 11 fumble recoveries. He and his wife, Holly, have three children: Morgan, Milan and Marcus Andrew.

BOB SANDERS

Bob Sanders enters his second year as Oakland's linebackers coach. Sanders has coached at the collegiate and professional levels for over 36 years, including three seasons as the defensive coordinator for the Green Bay Packers (2006-08).

In Green Bay for four seasons (2005-08), Sanders began as defensive ends coach (2005), then was named by Mike McCarthy as the new head coach's first defensive coordinator, a role he held from 2006-08. In 2007, Green Bay ranked sixth in scoring defense, 11th in total defense and third in opponent third-down-conversion percentage, posting a 13-3 record and earning a spot in the NFC Championship game. And in 2006, Green Bay led the NFC with 46 sacks.

Sanders' first NFL coaching position came as linebackers coach with the Miami Dolphins from 2001-04. A college assistant for 22 years, his final collegiate stop was the University of Florida, where he held six coaching titles, ranging from defensive line to linebackers.

A Native of Jacksonville, N.C., he and his wife, Kathie, have three children, Lindsay, Sarah and Robby.

ERIC SANDERS

Eric Sanders is in his fifth season with the Oakland Raiders and third in his present capacity. Sanders served in an offensive quality control role during his first two seasons in Oakland.

For the past two years, Sanders has assisted primarily with the defensive line. In 2013, the Raiders finished sixth in the AFC in rushing defense, allowing just 107.9 yards per game, and tied for first in the league by allowing just five opponent rushes of 20-or-more yards. As an offensive assistant for the Silver and Black (2010-11), Sanders worked primarily with the tight ends.

Before joining the Raiders, Sanders coached linebackers for two seasons at UC Davis. He also served as the assistant offensive line/tight ends coach at UC Davis in 2006, before becoming a graduate assistant at Utah State.

Sanders was involved with the UC Davis program as an undergraduate and earned his bachelor's degree in psychology with a biological emphasis in 2005. From 2003-05, he was the team's video coordinator and assisted in coaching the defensive line.

AL SAUNDERS

Al Saunders returns for his fourth season on the Oakland Raiders' coaching staff. Saunders has over 40 years of coaching experience, including the past 31 in the National Football League. He has been a part of 15 playoff teams, five division titles and one Super Bowl championship as an NFL coach and 20 times his offensive units have ranked first in the NFL in total offense, passing, rushing or scoring.

He served as the assistant head coach/offensive coordinator for Dick Vermeil with the Kansas City Chiefs from 2001-05. During his second stint with the Chiefs, Saunders' offense established 46 franchise records and exploded with 2,157 points, 262 touchdowns and 30,470 net yards, more than any other NFL team across those five seasons. In 2005, he was named USA Today's Offensive Coach of the Year as the Chiefs offense led the NFL for a second consecutive year.

His first NFL head coaching position came with the Chargers as interim head coach in 1986, following the resignation of Don Coryell. He spent two full seasons as the Chargers head coach.

A native of Hendon, England, he and his wife, Karen, have three children: sons Robert and Joseph, and daughter Korrin.

KELLY SKIPPER

Kelly Skipper enters his eighth season with the Raiders, the sixth in his present capacity tutoring running backs, after two years as tight ends coach. He has 26 years of coaching experience and has served as an offensive coordinator at the collegiate level.

Under Skipper's tutelage, FB Marcel Reece garnered his second-straight Pro Bowl selection and was named second-team All-Pro by the Associated Press. In 2010, Skipper oversaw a running game that ranked second in the NFL and set a franchise record by averaging 4.9 yards per attempt.

Before joining the Raiders, Skipper spent four seasons coaching running backs and special teams at Washington State. He also spent two summers, one with Seattle and one with Washington, as an NFL minority fellowship coaching intern. From 1998-2002, Skipper was on the coaching staff at UCLA, where he was offensive coordinator from 2001-02. He was an assistant at Fresno State, his alma mater, from 1989-97, beginning his coaching career as a graduate assistant before becoming a full-time assistant in 1991.

TRAVIS SMITH

A native of Walnut Creek, California and a graduate of Cal Poly, Raiders defensive assistant Travis Smith joined the Raiders in 2012 and has worked extensively with the linebacker corps during his time with the Silver and Black.

He began his coaching career at Cal Poly as an undergraduate assistant coach and then spent one year at Santa Monica Junior College in 2010 and another as an offensive technical intern at Colorado in 2011.

During the 2013 season with the Raiders, Smith helped tutor a defensive unit that included three new starters in veterans Nick Roach and Kevin Burnett and rookie Sio Moore. Roach recorded career highs in tackles (152) and sacks (5.5), playing every snap at middle linebacker, while Moore recorded 4.5 sacks in his first season and was named to the PFWA All-Rookie Team.

Smith was an offensive technical intern at Colorado in 2011. He coached at Santa Monica Junior College in 2010, assisting the tight ends and the defensive linemen. He also served as an undergraduate assistant coach at Cal Poly.

VERNON STEPHENS

Vernon Stephens joins the Silver and Black for his first season as the assistant strength and conditioning coach after spending six seasons (2007-12) with the San Diego Chargers in the same capacity.

During his time at San Diego, Stephens helped to oversee the team's year-round strength and conditioning program. He also spent time with the Jacksonville Jaguars during their offseason strength and conditioning program in 2002 and 2003.

Prior to working in the NFL, Stephens spent eight years in the collegiate ranks, including five years (1999-2003) as the head strength and conditioning coach at his alma mater, North Florida, and four years (2003-07) as the assistant strength and conditioning coach at Colorado.

Stephens began his coaching career at North Florida in 1999, starting the school's first NCAA strength and conditioning program. He served as head strength and conditioning coach for five years from 1999-2003, overseeing all 14 athletic programs, which encompassed approximately 230 student-athletes.

TERRELL WILLIAMS

Now entering his third season as the defensive line coach for the Oakland Raiders, Terrell Williams previously spent 14 seasons coaching the defensive line at the collegiate level, four of which were at Purdue where he tutored several future NFL players.

In 2012, his first season with the Silver and Black, Williams tutored a veteran unit that included four players that posted three-or-more sacks on the year. During his coaching tenure at Akron, the Zips marked two firsts in program history when they won the Mid-American Conference championship game and played in the Motor City Bowl.

Williams got his first taste of the NFL in 1999 when he interned with the Jacksonville Jaguars, assisting the defensive line. He also assisted with the defensive line for the Dallas Cowboys in 2008 and with the Seattle Seahawks during training camp in 2007. Before his coaching career, Williams played nose guard at East Carolina University, helping the Pirates to a Liberty Bowl victory over Stanford in 1995 and finishing No. 23 in the final USA Today/ESPN poll.

A native of Los Angeles, Calif., he and his wife, Tifini, have two sons, Tahj and Tyson, who passed away in 2012.

JOE WOODS

Joe Woods is entering his 11th season as a defensive backs coach in the NFL and his first with the Silver and Black. Prior to joining the Raiders, Woods served as the defensive backs coach with the Minnesota Vikings for the past eight seasons (2006-13) and spent two seasons with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (2004-05).

In 2012, the Vikings secondary helped the team to wins in the final four games of the regular season to finish at 10-6 and earn a Wild Card playoff berth. During the 2012 season, Woods tutored rookie Harrison Smith who tied for the team lead with three interceptions, returning a pair of the picks for scores to tie the Vikings rookie record.

During his time with Tampa Bay, the defense posted top-five defenses each of his two seasons, leading the NFL in total defense in 2005 and ranking fifth in the NFL in total defense and first in pass defense in 2004.

Woods was a four-year letterman as a safety at Illinois state, served as captain as a senior and earned first-team All-Gateway Conference honors in 1991.

A native of North Vandergrift, Pa., he and his wife, Ellen, have two daughters, Brianna and Danari, and a son, Geno.

CLEAN QB JERSEYS

In Week 2 (9/14 vs. Hou.) and Week 3 (9/21 at NE) of the 2014 season, the Raiders offensive line recorded clean sheets by not allowing a single sack in either game. That marks the second straight season, and the 10th time since team sacks became an official statistic in 1969, that the Raiders' line kept the quarterback upright in back-to-back games. The Raiders have also now allowed zero sacks in a contest four times so far in 2014.Here is a look at those streaks since 1990:

CONSECUTIVE GAMES NOT ALLOWING A SACK (SINCE 1990)

FOURTH DOWN SUCCESS

Fourth down in the NFL is a "do or die" situation for offenses, and Oakland's offense has been effective in those situations. The Raiders are third in the NFL when facing fourth down, extending drives at a 64.3 percent clip. Here is a look at how the Raiders stack up against the rest of the NFL:

FOURTH DOWN PERCENTAGE IN 2014

Rank	Team	Attempts	Conversions	Pct.
1.	Arizona	4	3	75.0
2.	Carolina	9	6	66.7
3.	Oakland	14	9	64.3

PUNCHING IT IN

When the Raiders get down inside the opponent's 20-yard line, which they have done 28 times thus far in 2014, the offense has shown the ability to gain those crucial final yards and cross the goal line. The Raiders have scored touchdowns on 20-of-28 red zone possessions, good for first in the league with a 71.4 percent success rate. Here are the top NFL teams in the red zone through Week 16:

RED ZONE TD PERCENTAGE IN 2014

STUFFING THE RUN

Since the Raiders returned to Oakland in 1995, the team has limited the opposition to less than two yards per carry in a game only 13 times, including three in 2013 and twice so far in 2014. The 1.0 yards per carry allowed vs. Buffalo was the seventh time since 2012 that the Silver and Black have allowed an average of less than two yards per carry. Here is a look at the games:

Date	Opponent	Rushing Yards	Attempts	Avg.

ADDING SACKS

After racking up 38 sacks a year ago, the Raiders went out and continued to improve their ability to get to the quarterback this offseason. Bringing in accomplished sack artists such as DE LaMarr Woodley, DE Justin Tuck and DL Antonio Smith, and drafting young pass rusher LB Khalil Mack, Oakland's pass rush looks to improve upon last year's total. Defensive coordinator Jason Tarver has some new weapons to rush the quarterback with and here is a look at some of their career sack stats:

FREE AGENT ADDITIONS

Player	Sacks	Sack Yards	Forced Fumbles
Antonio Smith	44.5	277.5	10
Justin Tuck	64.5	428.5	20
LaMarr Woodley	57.0	391.0	9
Totals	160.0	1,062.0	39

UNDRAFTED GEMS

Every preseason, hundreds of undrafted free agents vie for a spot on their team's 53-man roster. The Raiders have brought in numerous players that were not drafted, developing them into significant contributors for the Silver and Black.

- In 2013, P Marquette King posted numbers among the NFL's best in both gross average and punting yards. With 4,107 punting yards on the year, King finished sixth in the NFL, and led the league in gross punting with an average of 48.9.

- QB Matt McGloin made his mark on the NFL in his rookie season, making his first career start on Nov. 17, 2013 at Houston. In that game, McGloin became the first undrafted rookie to throw for three-or-more touchdown passes in his first NFL start since 1987. He also became just the second quarterback to throw for three touchdowns without an interception in his first NFL start since the NFL-AFL merger in 1970.

- WR Andre Holmes, originally an undrafted free agent with the Minnesota Vikings in 2011, has two of the Raiders' top four single-game receiving totals over the last two seasons.

Below are some of the notable current Raiders who entered the NFL as undrafted free agents:

Player	School	Year	Team
LS Jon Condo	Maryland	2005	Dallas
WR Andre Holmes	Hillsdale	2011	Minnesota
G/T Austin Howard	Northern Iowa	2010	Philadelphia
P Marquette King	Fort Valley State	2012	Oakland
DE Benson Mayowa	Idaho	2013	Seattle
QB Matt McGloin	Penn State	2013	Oakland
T Donald Penn	Utah State	2006	Minnesota
FB Marcel Reece	Washington	2008	Miami
S Brandian Ross	Youngstown State	2011	Green Bay
WR Kenbrell Thompkins	Cincinnati	2013	New England

SACKS & TURNOVERS

In their Week 1 contest at the New York Jets, the Raiders were able to force two turnovers (one S Charles Woodson interception and one CB TJ Carrie forced fumble/recovery). Oakland also racked up two sacks in the game, one coming when S Tyvon Branch registered a 19-yard sack of Geno Smith on third down, knocking the Jets out of field goal range. When LB Sio Moore caused a sack-fumble, it marked the first time since 2011 that Oakland had forced at least two fumbles and recorded at least two sacks in their season-opener. The Raiders forced three turnovers and posted five sacks in their win over the Broncos on Sept. 12, 2011. In Week 14 vs. San Francisco, the Raiders added five sacks and two more interceptions. Here is a look at the two games:

Date/Opp.	Sacks	Forced Turnovers	Result
9/12/11 at Den.	5	3	W, 23-20
9/7/14 at NYJ	2	2	L, 14-19

MILES AND MILES

Factoring in three trips to the Eastern time zone and one trip to England for their game in London, the Raiders will travel more miles than any other team in the NFL this season. According to Pro Football Reference, Oakland travels 36,106 miles in 2014, almost 10,000 more miles than any other team. The team also has four trips of over 2,000 miles. Here is a look at the teams that travel the most in 2014:

Team	2014 Traveling Miles	2,000+ Mile Trips
Oakland Raiders	36,106	4
Seattle Seahawks	26,144	3
Dallas Cowboys	24,746	1
Miami Dolphins	24,546	1
Jacksonville Jaguars	22,230	2
San Diego Chargers	20,186	3
San Francisco 49ers	19,932	1
St. Louis Rams	17,850	0
Arizona Cardinals	17,728	1
Kansas City Chiefs	17,658	0

TOUGH TEST OUT WEST

This season, the AFC West and NFC West will be playing each other in the regular season for the first time since 2010. Combined, the two divisions had five playoff teams in 2013, and the Arizona Cardinals missed the postseason despite winning 10 games. Three of the NFL's "final four" teams from last year's postseason reside in their respective conference's Western division and both Super Bowl participants play in the West. Because of all this, the eight teams from these divisions have the eight hardest schedules in the league, based on their opponent's winning percentage last year. Here is a look at the teams with the 10 most difficult schedules:

Team	Opponents' 2013 Winning %
Oakland	.578
Denver	.570
St. Louis	.564
San Diego	.563
San Francisco	.563
Seattle	.561
Kansas City	.559
Arizona	.547
NY Jets	.520
New England	.516

RAIDERS MEDIA WEBSITE

The Oakland Raiders have introduced a media website, open to all members of the media, updated with content and publications from the Raiders media relations staff, including media guides, weekly releases, transcripts, post-game notes, flip cards and other information. In an effort to help media members with their coverage of the Raiders, the content will be updated on a daily basis. For any further questions, please contact a member of the Raiders media relations staff.

RAIDERS.COM

The Raiders were one of the first professional teams to go online in 1995, and since then, Raiders.com has grown into one of the top online destinations in sports. The site continues to provide exclusive video interviews, comprehensive photography, official press releases, transactions, player stats and biographies, profiles on current and former players and team personnel, press conference video and much more. The Raiders also use social media - Twitter, Facebook and Instagram - to communicate with and interact with the worldwide Raider Nation.

In 2014, the official website of the Oakland Raiders, RAIDERS.COM, will continue to use cutting edge technology to provide the Raider Nation with news, information, team history and entertainment, offering visitors an in-depth, state-of-the-art look at the Silver and Black.

RAIDERS EXCELLENCE

Each season, Raiders players vote on which teammate should receive the prestigious Commitment to Excellence Award, given to the Raider who best exemplifies hard work, leadership, and excellence on and off the field throughout the season. In 2013, FB Marcel Reece was presented with the award following a Pro Bowl season on the field, as well as impressive list of off-the-field work. It started as the Gorman Award in 1967 and was later renamed the Commitment to Excellence Award in 1983. Here is a look at the winners of the award since 1967:

INDIVIDUAL NOTES

A LEADER IN PICKS

S Charles Woodson, who posted nine interceptions when he won the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year award in 2009, is the NFL's active leader in interceptions. Woodson, in his 17th NFL campaign, has 60 interceptions, 16 more than DeAngelo Hall's 43. Woodson has five seasons with at least five picks in his Hall of Fame career.

ACTIVE INTERCEPTION LEADERS

LONG-TERM HAWK

Remarkably, S Charles Woodson has intercepted at least one pass in each of his first 17 NFL seasons. Woodson has joined an elite company of just one other player to intercept a pass in at least 17 consecutive seasons. He is now in sole posession of second place on this list, trailing only Hall of Famer Darrell Green. Woodson has four seasons of at least seven interceptions in his career.

WOODSON QUICK HITS

- Only two players in football history have ever won a Heisman Trophy, Associated Press Rookie of the Year, Associated Press Player of the Year and a Super Bowl in their career. Charles Woodson is one of them. The other? Former Raiders RB Marcus Allen.
- Since 1995, only four players have won both the Associated Press Defensive Rookie of the Year and Associated Press Defensive Player of the Year awards in their career - Raiders S Charles Woodson (1998 & 2009), Ravens OLB Terrell Suggs (2003 & 2011), former Bears LB Brian Urlacher (2000 & 2005) and Panthers LB Luke Kuechly (2012 & 2013).
- Woodson posted an interception touchdown in six straight seasons (2006-11), becoming the first player in NFL history to do so. No other NFL player has accomplished the feat in more than four consecutive seasons.
- In 2009, Woodson became the fourth player in NFL history (since sacks became an official statistic in 1982) to record at least nine interceptions and two sacks in a single season.
- Is the only player in NFL history to post at least seven interceptions and two sacks in back-to-back seasons.
- Became the first NFL player (since sacks became an official statistic in 1982) to record two interceptions, an interception touchdown, a sack and a fumble recovery in the same game when he posted all of those statistics on 11/26/09 at Det.
- Became the first player in NFL history to record 50 sacks and 20 interceptions for his career on Nov. 20, 2014.

FIRST TO 50/20

In Week 12 against Kansas City, S Charles Woodson achieved some history. With a third quarter sack of Chiefs QB Alex Smith, Woodson became the first player since sacks became an official statistic in 1982 to record 50 interceptions and 20 sacks for his career. Woodson is the only active player with at least 50 career picks and one of just 39 players in NFL history. His 20 sacks are tops among current defensive backs and make him just one of eight defensive backs to record at least 20 sacks for their career.

TAKING IT TO THE HOUSE

The only thing better than forcing a turnover is turning it into a touchdown, and S Charles Woodson has done that just as well as anybody in the history of the NFL. Woodson is one interception-touchdown away from tying Rod Woodson's all-time mark, and just one defensive touchdown away from setting the all-time mark. With every touchdown going forward, Woodson will be adding a new note to the NFL record books.

INDIVIDUAL NOTES

SILVER AND MACK

The Raiders used their first-round selection and the No. 5 overall pick in the 2014 NFL Draft to select LB Khalil Mack from the University of Buffalo. Mack joins Oakland following a stellar collegiate career, where he set numerous school records, including career sacks (28.5) and tackles for loss (75). He is also the NCAA's all-time leader with 16 forced fumbles. At Buffalo, he totaled 327 tackles (186 solo), 28.5 sacks, 16 forced fumbles, three fumble recoveries, four interceptions and 21 passes defensed. He has earned a starting spot at linebacker as rookie, setting himself up for future success in the Silver and Black. Here is a look at his rookie numbers:

According to unofficial press box statistics, Mack has totaled 73 tackles (57 solo). Of those 73 tackles, 51 (69.9 percent) of them were made for a loss or within three yards of the line of scrimmage. Of his 57 solo tackles, 36 (63.2 percent) of those have been for a loss or within three yards of the line of scrimmage.

He is currently first among defensive players in "stuffs" with 11.5 tackles at or behind the line of scrimmage, according to STATS, INC.

HISTORICAL FEAT

Mack was the only rookie named to the 2014 USA Football All-Fundamentals Team, on December 10, 2014, an honor awarded to 26 NFL players who exhibit exemplary football techniques for young players to emulate. The USA Football All-Fundamentals Team was assembled with guidance from a five-person selection committee: Charles Davis, Herm Edwards, Merril Hoge, Carl Peterson, Bill Polian.

Mack was named ESPN's "NFL Live" Midseason Defensive Rookie of the Year on November 4, 2014 and was named to NFL.com's midseason All-Rookie team on October 28, 2014.

S"MACK" TALK

LB Khalil Mack's NFL career is still in its initial stages, but opposing coaches and players are already taking notice. Mack has made an impact on games as a run defender and pass rusher. Here are a few things players and coaches around the NFL have had to say about Mack:

"Khalil was definitely a guy that we thought was an instinctive player, an explosive player, a guy that we felt like his best football was ahead of him, because we felt like this is a guy that can really rush the passer and also probably drop into pass coverage, be a second-level defender. That's what we see on tape, he's a really good football player." - Texans Head Coach Bill O'Brien, Sept. 10, 2014

"No. 52 [Khalil Mack] is a phenomenal player. He's a great pass rusher, but he's really good in the run game. We knew it was going to be a challenge." - Cardinals QB Carson Palmer, Oct. 19, 2014

"He was a guy that was definitely highly rated on our board. We thought a lot of him coming out. And sometimes you don't necessarily get the sack production and people can be fooled by that. We look at the effectiveness of a rusher – how much they're affecting the quarterback. They might not be getting the finish, they might be causing production for somebody else." - Browns Head Coach Mike Pettine, Oct. 22, 2014

"Talking to the guys in the locker room, he gained the respect of everybody on our team. That guy 52, Khalil Mack, is one of the best players we've gone against this year and that's a unanimous decision in that locker room. He gained all of our respect, and we knew coming in he was going to be a tough player." - Browns QB Brian Hoyer, Oct. 26, 2014

"He's a rookie, but you wouldn't think that by the way he's been playing. When you look at him on film, he attacks the line and he's aggressive. He makes plays." - Browns RB Terrance West, Oct. 26, 2014

"I think he's really good. He jumps off the film. Every one of our coaches, when they break up and start looking at the Raiders and taking seriously what they're doing well, everybody comes back talking about him. He's almost unblockable and he's got a great motor. He's fast, he's tough, he's instinctive. We think he's an obvious factor." - Seahawks Head Coach Pete Carroll, Oct. 29, 2014

"Every week, one of the teams I watch early on is the Raider defense, and the reason I want to watch is Khalil Mack. He's not just one of the best rookies to come out, he's the best linebacker in the National Football League, and he is the best against the run." - Former NFL RB and current ESPN analyst Merrill Hoge

STARTING CARR

Rookie QB Derek Carr was named the Raiders' starting quarterback heading into Week 1 against the New York Jets, becoming the first rookie quarterback in franchise history to start in Week 1. Oakland's second-round pick of the 2014 NFL Draft was solid in his NFL debut, finishing the game 20-for-32 passing for 151 yards, two TDs and a passer rating of 94.7. Carr became the ninth Raider QB and second rookie to throw at least two TD passes in his debut. His 94.7 passer rating is the third highest for a Raider rookie in his first start and 12th among all Raiders starting QBs in their Silver and Black debut. Carr began his career nearly perfect, going 7-for-7 for 53 yards and one TD before throwing his first incompletion in the second quarter. He finished the first half 9-of-12 (75.0 percent).

Carr began his career with a completion percentage of at least 60.0 in his first four games. In NFL history, only two other quarterbacks have accomplished the feat: Robert Griffin III (Was.) in 2012 and Rick Mirer (Sea.) in 1993.

Carr's 300-yard passing performance (328) on Oct. 26 at Cleveland was the first 300-yard passing game of his career and first ever by a Raider rookie.

Carr engineered his first game-winning drive in Week 12 against Kansas City, producing a 17-play, 80-yard touchdown drive that took 7:21, ending with a touchdown pass to WR James Jones with 1:42 remaining.

Carr set a career high with a passer rating of 140.2 on Dec. 7 vs. San Francisco, and it is the seventh highest single-game passer rating in franchise history (min. 20 attempts). It is also the sixth-best passer rating by a rookie quarterback since 1960 (min. 20 attempts).

HISTORICAL FEAT

QB Derek Carr vaulted himself into rare company following his 4 TD performance in Week 6 vs. San Diego. Carr posted eight TD passes in his first five games, which is the most ever by a rookie quarterback in the first five games of his career. Here is a look at where Carr's historical start to his career stacks up:

TD PASSES BY ROOKIE QBs (FIRST FIVE GAMES)

Rank	Player	Season	TD Passes
1.	Derek Carr	2014	8
2t.	Andrew Luck	2012	7
2t.	Cam Newton	2011	7
2t.	Geno Smith	2013	7

QB Derek Carr has been completing passes with the kind of pinpoint accuracy only seen a handful of times previously in league history. In his first four games, Carr completed 84-of-133 passes for a completion rate of 63.2 percent. Since 1960, that places Carr second among rookie quarterbacks with at least 100 passing attempts through their first four games. Here is a look:

HIGHEST COMP. % BY ROOKIE QB THROUGH FIRST 4 GAMES (MIN. 100 ATT.)

Rank	Player	Year	Cmp. %
1	Robert Griffin III (Was.)	2012	69.35
2	Derek Carr (Oak.)	2014	63.16
3	Chris Weinke (Car.)	2001	62.14
4	Jim Kelly (Buf.)	1986	61.17
5	Russell Wilson (Sea.)	2012	60.00

ELITE EFFICIENCY

Carr has attempted 563 passes this season, fourth all-time among rookies. Despite the heavy workload, Carr has completed his passes at a 58.6 percent clip, seventh best all-time among rookies (min. 400 attempts).

Of the eight rookie QBs ever to attempt 500 passes in a season, Carr owns the third highest completion percentage (Sam Bradford - 60.0 percent in 2010; Cam Newton - 60.0 percent in 2011).

Carr also ranks first among rookies since 1960 with four games of at least 40 attempts and 25 completions.

Carr owns the fewest interceptions of any rookie in NFL history with at least 500 attempts. Carr's 2.0 interception percentage also ranks first among 2014 rookies and seventh among NFL QBs.

On six occasions, Carr has thrown at least 30 times without an interception, tied with Andy Dalton for the most such games by any rookie since 1960. Lastly, Carr is one of four rookies with at least 20 TDs and fewer than 12 INTs (R. Griffin III, D. Marino and R. Wilson).

LEADING THE CLASS

Nearing the end of his rookie campaign, Derek Carr is already in elite company as he closes in on the top 10 in multiple rookie passing categories. Here is a look at how Carr stacks up against 2014 rookie quarterbacks and rookie passers over the last 10 seasons:

Category	Carr	2014 Rookie Rank	Rank Since 2005
Completions	330	1	3
Passing Yards	3,112	1	10
Passing TDs	20	1	4t
QB Rating	77.7	2	10

PUTTING UP POINTS

The owner of 20 career TD passes, Carr has quickly jumped into the history books as one of the most prolific rookie scorers in NFL history.

Carr's 20 touchdowns have him tied for sixth all-time among NFL rookies, putting him in the company of Andy Dalton, Robert Griffin III and Dan Marino.

Carr is tied for sixth among rookies since 1960 with six multi-TD performances, including two three-TD outings (Week 6 vs. SD and Week 14 vs. SF).

In Week 6, Carr lit up the Chargers defense for 282 yards and four TDs, a career high and tied for the second-most TDs ever thrown by a rookie in a single game. It was also the most touchdowns ever thrown by a rookie against San Diego.

Carr's four-TD day also marked the first time an NFL rookie threw four in a game since Russell Wilson and Andrew Luck each did it in 2012, and just the eighth four-TD game by a rookie since 2000.

INDIVIDUAL NOTES

QUOTES ON CARR

"I think he's obviously a smart guy. They give him quite a bit of the offense to handle and it looks like he does that well. Quick release, gets the ball out. Obviously athletic and can run – saw the play in the Houston game, the 40-yard run. There are not a lot of quarterbacks in the league that would make that play. I think he's got a great arm, can make all the throws, and as I said, gets the ball out quick, sees the coverage and doesn't stand back there and make it hard to protect for him. He's getting the ball to his skill players and he's got a good arm. I think the kid's got a great future." – Patriots Head Coach Bill Belichick, Sept. 17, 2014

"He's done a lot of marvelous stuff. I can see why they're excited about him and they've demonstrated so much trust and confidence in him by just the nature of the style of offense that they're willing to throw. He's shown touch, he's shown strong arm stuff, he's shown way down the field stuff, he's moving well and he looks very comfortable. He looks like a terrific prospect for the years to come and he's on it right now, he's got great numbers for the situation, and I'm thinking he's darn good." – Seahawks Head Coach Pete Carroll, Oct. 29, 2014

Broncos Head Coach John Fox: "I've seen a guy that can make all the throws. He appears, for a young player, to be very smart – I think ahead of his experience. He's a factor as far as mobility with his speed. I think he's a tremendous young player." – Broncos Head Coach John Fox, Nov. 5, 2014

"I've always thought he was a good quarterback. I've always thought one thing about him that's always stood out is his leadership ability and the intangibles at quarterback. He's a guy that guys just seem to gravitate towards and always has a positive attitude. That's one thing I knew that he was going to be able to bring to the NFL, and then also his ability and the throws that he's got. He's got a good bloodline, throws the ball really well, can move around pretty well. So I knew he was a good player." – Rams S T.J. McDonald, Nov. 26, 2014

"No surprises. You can see on film what he is. He's a really good quarterback and he doesn't take a lot of sacks – knows how to move in the pocket. He doesn't play like a rookie at all. He's a real good quarterback. It really wasn't a secret though. We knew that watching film on him." – Chiefs DT Dontari Poe, Dec. 10, 2014

SACK ARTIST

In an effort to bolster the pass rush, Oakland signed proven pass rushers DE Justin Tuck and DE LaMarr Woodley this past offseason. Tuck, who owns 64.5 career sacks, joins the Raiders after nine seasons with the New York Giants. He helped the Giants win two Super Bowls during his tenure, while earning two trips to the Pro Bowl and two Associated Press All-Pro selections (one first team and one second team).

DOUBLE DIGIT SACKS

With 11.0 sacks in 2013, DE Justin Tuck recorded the fourth double-digit sack season of his career. The 11.0 sacks (9.5 of which came over the final six games) were the third highest total of his career. Here is a look at Tuck's season-by-season sack numbers, with the double-digit campaigns bolded:

DURABLE "NINJA"

Since 2006, DL Antonio Smith has been among the most durable players in the NFL. Smith has missed just one regular season game since 2006, with that game missed coming via a suspension. Smith, who goes by the nickname "The Ninja," set career highs for sacks in 2011 and then again in 2012. This season, Smith became one of just five players to have at least 2.5 sacks in every season since 2005. Here is a look at his tackle and sack totals over his career:

ROOKIE CONTRIBUTORS

The Raiders' 2014 Draft class has been thrown into the NFL fire right away, with numerous players making significant contributions. Not only are highly touted rookies LB Khalil Mack (first round) and QB Derek Carr (second round) making their impact felt, third rounder G Gabe Jackson, fourth rounder DT Justin "Jelly" Ellis and seventh rounder CB TJ Carrie are all contributing in significant ways.

G Gabe Jackson won the starting left guard job coming out of training camp and has started in 11 games so far, helping a unit that is one of the best in the NFL at protecting the quarterback.

DT Justin Ellis has appeared in all 15 games, starting 13 of them, and adding depth to the defensive line. Here are his season stats:

CB TJ Carrie has been asked to play a number of roles for the Silver and Black, playing cornerback in the team's nickel packages and serving as Oakland's primary punt and kickoff returner. As a punt returner, Carrie has totaled 195 return yards on 26 returns and 362 return yards on 15 returns as a kick returner. Here are his defensive stats:

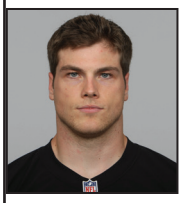
'BACKER BURRIS



LB Miles Burris made his first career start at middle linebacker in Week 1 at the New York Jets this season, filling in for the injured LB Nick Roach. In the game, Burris tied a career high with 14 tackles. Burris has started every game since then at middle linebacker for the Silver and Black, providing stability as the defene's quarterback. Here is a look at Burris' 2014 campaign so far at middle linebacker:

DJ AT CORNER

The Raiders' first-round selection (No. 12 overall) in the 2013 NFL Draft, CB DJ Hayden has come a long way. After suffering a life-threatening injury to his heart in November 2012, Hayden played a major role in Oakland's defensive makeover. In his rookie year, Hayden recorded 29 tackles and two PD. In the Week 5 win vs. San Diego, Hayden hauled in his first NFL interception, picking off Philip Rivers in the end zone to stop a potential Chargers scoring drive. His season was cut short due to a groin injury on Nov. 20, 2013.

After spending the first seven weeks on the PUP list to start the 2014 season after rehabbing from an offseason foot injury, Hayden returned to game action on Oct. 26, 2014 at Cleveland. In his first significant action of 2014, Hayden had four passes defensed in the Raiders' match-up with the defending champion Seattle Seahawks. He also added his first interception of the season in Week 10 against the Broncos. Here is a look at his 2014 numbers:

INDIVIDUAL NOTES

DB SACKS

The Raiders have had many great defensive backs throughout their historic past, and Raiders safeties Charles Woodson and Tyvon Branch rank among them on the franchise's all-time sack list. Branch and Woodson rank third and tied for fourth, respectively, on Oakland's all-time sack list by defensive backs, and the Raiders are hoping they continue to move up in 2014. With his sack against Kansas City in Week 12, Woodson became the first player since sacks became an official statistic in 1982 to record at least 50 interceptions and 20 sacks in a career. Here is a look at the Raiders' all-time sack list by DBs:

RAIDERS SACK LIST (SINCE 1982)

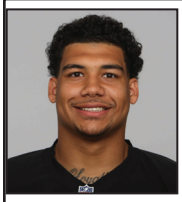
RIVERA STEPS UP



TE Mychal Rivera has proven to be one of QB Derek Carr's favorite targets this season, as he is second on the team with 56 receptions and third with 508 receiving yards. Since being drafted in the sixth round of the 2013 NFL Draft, Rivera has emerged as the Raiders' primary tight end, providing a security blanket for quarterbacks. In Week 14 vs. San Francisco, Rivera posted a career high with 109 receiving yards on seven catches and one touchdown, becoming the first Raiders tight end since 2012 to eclipse 100 yards. Here is a look at his 2014 season:

TOUCHDOWN MACHINE

San Jose-native WR James Jones joined the Raiders this past offseason, and since 2012, Jones has totaled 22 touchdown receptions, which is good for 13th in the league over that time span. In 2012, Jones led the NFL in touchdown catches, posting 14. He got off to a quick start with Oakland in 2014, recording a touchdown reception in each of the first two games this year. Here is a look at where Jones ranks:

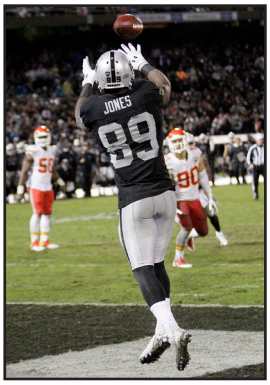
Jones set a new season career high in 2014, and now has 70 receptions on the season, passing his former career high set in 2012 with Green Bay.

Jones has now caught at least five touchdown passes in five of the last six seasons dating back to 2009.



CLUTCH RECEIVING

WR James Jones has brought key veteran leadership since joining the Raiders in the offseason, and his production on third down is no exception. Jones is among the league leaders in third-down receptions, ranking second.

RAIDERS RUSHING HISTORY

With 454 rushing yards in 2014, RB Darren McFadden continues to climb up the Raiders' all-time rushing list. Approaching the likes of Pete Banaszak and Marv Hubbard, "D-Mac" has a chance to leave his mark on the franchise's record book. McFadden moved into sixth place in 2013 and is not far off of the top five.

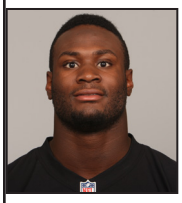
INDIVIDUAL NOTES

MURRAY MAKES HISTORY



RB Latavius Murray has emerged onto the scene in recent weeks, totaling 376 rushing yards on 66 carries (5.7 avg.) in five games since Week 11. Murray, who spent the 2013 season on the reserve/injured list, has made a name for himself in his sophomore campaign, getting the majority of the carries recently.

In Week 12 against Kansas City, Murray burst onto the scene on national television, producing 112 rushing yards on just four carries (28.0 avg.) and two touchdowns before leaving the game due to injury. Here are a few notes from Murray's breakthrough performance:

Murray scored his first career touchdown on an 11-yard run around the left end in the first quarter and added a 90-yard rushing touchdown in the second quarter. Murray finished with four carries for 112 yards (28.0 avg.) and two touchdowns, making him the Raiders' first 100-yard rusher since Marcel Reece ran for 123 yards at NYJ on 12/8/13.

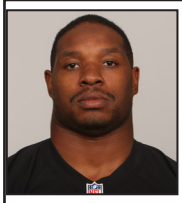
Murray is the first player in NFL history to gain at least 110 rushing yards on five or fewer carries, posting four rushes for 112 yards (28.0 avg.) and two touchdowns, all in the first half.

Murray's 11-yard touchdown run in the first quarter was the first rushing touchdown allowed by the Kansas City Chiefs in their last 12 games (12/22/13 vs. Ind.). It was also the Raiders' third rushing touchdown of the season and the first since 10/19 vs. Arizona.

Murray's 90-yard touchdown run was the Raiders' second rushing touchdown of 90-plus yards since 1998 and the longest by a Raider since Terrelle Pryor's 93-yard score against the Steelers on Oct. 27, 2013.

Murray's 90-yard touchdown was the longest offensive scoring play in the NFL this season and the fourth rushing touchdown of 90-plus yards in Raiders history (last: Terrelle Pryor's 93-yard score vs. Pit., 10/27/13).

CLIMBING THE RANKS



RB Maurice Jones-Drew is tied for 30th in NFL history with 68 rushing touchdowns and ranks 45th with 8,161 rushing yards. Jones-Drew will look to move up in both the following categories in 2014:

ALL-TIME RAIDER

Moving up the all-time games played list for a franchise as historic as the Raiders takes longevity, and K Sebastian Janikowski has it. Last season, Janikowski moved into second place on the all-time list, and will eventually pass Tim Brown for sole possession of first place some time in 2015. Here is where Janikowski ranks on the Raiders' all-time games played list:

QUARTERBACK | 6-3 | 214 | FRESNO STATE
HOMETOWN: BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.
BORN: 3/28/91

2014: (9/7) at NYJ: Became the first rookie in franchise history to start at quarterback in Week 1…Went 20-for-32 passing (62.5 percent) for 151 yards, two TDs and a passer rating of 94.7…Started the game nearly perfect, going 7-for-7 for 53 yards and one TD…Threw first career TD pass to WR Rod Streater for a 12-yard score…Connected with WR James Jones for a 30-yard TD down the right sideline…Passer rating of 94.7 is 12th highest in a debut for a Raiders quarterback, third highest among rookies in their debuts…(9/14) vs. Hou.: Finished with 263 yards on 27-of-43 passing (64.3 percent), one TD and his first two career INTs…Added 58 yards on four rushing attempts (14.5 avg.), including a 41-yard read-option run that is the second longest by a Raider quarterback since 2000 (Terrelle Pryor, 93 yards, 10/27/13)…Passed Larry Lawrence (39) for the most rushing yards by a Raider quarterback in his rookie season…(9/21) at NE: Completed 21 of 34 attempts for 174 yards with one INT…Potential game-tying comeback drive in fourth quarter fell short after a pass was tipped and intercepted by Vince Wilfork…(9/28) vs. Mia.: Started and completed 16 of 25 passes for 146 yards, one TD and one INT before leaving the game with a high ankle sprain and an MCL sprain…Added two rushing attempts for nine yards (4.5 avg.)…Threw his first opening-drive TD pass, a 3-yard strike to Brian Leonhardt in the first quarter…(10/12) vs. SD: Completed 18-of-34 passes for 282 yards, four TDs and one INT for a passer rating of 107.7, his first rating over 100 points…Four TDs are the most ever by a Raider rookie and tied for second most by a rookie in NFL history…Had two TD passes of 40-plus yards, a 47-yarder to WR Brice Butler and a 77-yard TD pass to WR Andre Holmes…Only rookie since 1970 AFL-NFL merger with four TD passes in a game vs. San Diego…(10/19) vs. Ari.: Completed 16-of-28 passes for 173 yards and was sacked once…Completed a 55-yard pass to Butler, marking the first time a Raider QB-WR combo had connections of at least 45 yards in back-to-back games since 2012…(10/26) at Cle.: Completed 34 of 54 passes (60.7 percent) for 328 yards with one TD…Became the most prolific rookie passer in franchise history, passing Matt McGloin to set the records for starts, passing TDs and completions…Recorded the first 300-yard passing game by a rookie in franchise history and the first since Carson Palmer vs. Cleveland on Dec. 2, 2012…Threw the third most completions in a game by an NFL rookie after Dieter Brock (35 in 1985) and Chris Weinke (36 in 2001)…(11/2) at Sea.: Completed 24 of 41 passes for 194 yards, two TDs and two INTs…Rushed twice for nine yards…Threw two 1-yard TD passes to TE Mychal Rivera, one on fourth-and-goal and the other on third-and-goal…(11/9) vs. Den.: Completed 30 of 47 passes for 192 yards, two TDs and two INTs…Passed Tom Flores (1960) for the most passing TDs and yards by a Raider in his first season of action…(11/16) at SD: Went 16-of-34 passing for 172 yards…Sacked twice…Fumbled twice, including the first play of the game when the snap was mistimed and recovered by Chargers LB Donald Butler to set up the San Diego's only touchdown of the game…(11/20) vs. KC: Earned first NFL win with a 17-play, 80-yard game-winning drive capped off by a 9-yard TD pass to WR James Jones…First rookie in franchise history to record a fourth-quarter comeback or game-winning drive…Snuck up the middle for the first down on a critical fourth-and-1 play on the game-winning drive…(11/30) at StL.: Started and completed 24 of 39 passes for 173 yards…(12/7) vs. SF: Finished 22-of-28 for 254 yards with three touchdowns and a passer rating of 140.2…Posted the seventh-best single-game passer rating in franchise history (min. 20 att.) and the sixth-best single-game rating by a rookie since 1960 (min. 20 att.)…Also set new career highs for completion percentage (78.6) and yards per attempt (9.1)…Orchestrated back-to-back touchdown drives for the first time in his career in the second half, essentially sealing the win…(12/14) at KC: Completed 27 of 56 passes (48.2 percent) for 222 yards and one touchdown…Set career high for attempts (57), the third most ever attempted in a single game by an NFL rookie…One of four rookie quarterbacks in history with at least two games of 50-plus attempts…(12/21) vs. Buf.: Finished 17-of-34 for 214 yards with two touchdowns and a passer rating of 89.6…Eclipsed the 3,000-yard mark, becoming the 13th NFL rookie and eighth different Raider (15th occurrence) to accomplish the feat…Moved into third place in completions by a rookie, passing Peyton Manning…Tossed a 3-yard touchdown to Jones in the back of the end zone, their sixth scoring connection of the season…Threw his 20th touchdown to FB/RB Jamize Olawale for a 1-yard score, making him the eighth rookie since 1950 to throw 20 touchdowns…Completed two passes of 50-plus yards, one to Kenbrell Thompkins for 50 yards and another to Andre Holmes for 51 yards while scrambling on a critical third-and-22 play in the fourth quarter…Marked his sixth game with at least 30 attempts and no interceptions, tying him with Andy Dalton for the most by a rookie.

Oakland Raiders beat Buffalo Bills 26-24

By Jerry McDonald
December 21, 2014

Maybe the Raiders ought to stick around another year or two at O.co Coliseum.

It's the only place the Raiders have been able to win in 2014, with a 26-24 triumph over the Buffalo Bills on Sunday marking a third consecutive home victory against a team with playoff aspirations.

There's every chance owner Mark Davis will opt for another one-year lease as he explores possibilities for a new stadium. If so, it will get the roaring approval of the 53,436 fans who watched the Raiders dominate both sides of the line of scrimmage en route to extending Buffalo's streak of non-playoff seasons to 15 years.

"We wanted to give our fans something special and wanted them to be begging for more at the end of this," interim coach Tony Sparano said.

Victory wasn't ensured until Charles Woodson secured a Buffalo onside kick after the Bills climbed within the final margin on a 30-yard pass from Kyle Orton to Robert Woods with 1:09 to play.

But in the trenches, it was a mismatch, with the Raiders taking it to the Bills with both their offensive and defensive lines.

The Raiders (3-12) scored on touchdown passes of 3 yards to James Jones and 1 yard to Jamize Olawale and had field goals of 45, 36, 38 and 49 yards from Sebastian Janikowski en route to their second-highest point total of the season.

Buffalo (8-7) had a 42-yard touchdown pass from Orton to Sammy Watkins, a 54-yard field goal by Dan Carpenter and a 29-yard touchdown pass to tight end Scott Chandler to go along with the last score to Woods.

In a disconsolate Buffalo locker room, tight end Lee Smith got to the heart of the matter, which had to do with the heart in the opposing locker room.

"We know those guys have played a lot of football in this league, they're great players, and we just didn't get it done," Smith said. "We knew they were going to try and beat us up front, on both sides of the ball. When you get whopped for four quarters, it's embarrassing."

The Raiders rushed for 140 yards on 36 carries, with Latavius Murray getting 86 yards on 23 carries and Darren McFadden adding 54 yards on nine attempts. The Bills, meanwhile, had only 13 yards on 13 carries and no gain longer than 4 yards against a dominant Raiders front.

A week after Sparano took his team to task for getting beat up front, he was singing their praises. Carr, who completed 17 of 34 passes for 214 yards, was sacked only once. His two touchdown passes came against a defense that held Peyton Manning and Aaron Rodgers to zero touchdown passes in Buffalo's previous two games.

Carr wisely threw several passes away when pressured or unable to find an open receiver, but he made two big downfield throws on third-and-very long that led to Raiders touchdowns.

With Buffalo leading 7-0, Carr found Kenbrell Thompkins wide open on a post route on third-and-13 against Aaron Williams and threw a 50-yard strike to the Buffalo 4, eventually finding Jones for the touchdown.

In the fourth quarter and the Bills within 19-17, Carr escaped pressure to his right on third-and-22 and threw a jump ball to Andre Holmes, who made a leaping catch over Corey Graham for a 51-yard gain to the Buffalo 30-yard line.

McFadden rushed 25 yards to the 5, and Carr hit Olawale after a play fake for a 1-yard touchdown with 2:51 to play.

"I felt an escape alley in the rush, and I was thinking about running it, but when I saw Andre one-on-one, I gave him a chance, and he made my day by making that play," Carr said.

"The ball was up in the air, and I just went up and got it," Holmes said.

Orton finished 32 of 49 for 329 yards, but was intercepted twice -- once by Woodson against Chandler and later by strong safety Brandian Ross, with 2:30 remaining. Khalil Mack and Justin Tuck had sacks, and Mack was a constant presence in the Buffalo backfield.

The Raiders finish the season at Denver hoping somehow to recapture the home energy in a road environment.

"This is an electric environment," defensive tackle Anthony Smith said. "I think it radiates. It flows through us all. I hate to say it because we have to be better in road games, but we're a totally different team when we're in this stadium.''

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders top Bills for 3rd home win in row
By Vic Tafur
December 21, 2014

For the third straight home game, Raiders players and fans forgot that it has been a miserable season and simply enjoyed themselves. For the third straight home game, the players beat a team with a winning record and the fans cheered for them as if Oakland were 12-3 and not 3-12.

“It’s always good to win at home,” general manager Reggie McKenzie said Sunday after the 26-24 victory over the Buffalo Bills. “It’s great for the players to get rewarded for practicing hard and not giving up in what’s been a tough season.

The fans at the Coliseum were clearly more interested in a third win than in keeping their third-pick position in next year's draft. Included in that group is team owner Mark Davis and McKenzie.

The 2014 season has been a disgusting smoothie of bad free-agent signings, blowout losses, a fired head coach, embarrassing plays and injuries. But there has been a cherry on top, and that was clear again Sunday. The draft picks from the past two years are becoming playmakers.

Outside linebacker Khalil Mack was dominant on defense, Latavius Murray ran for 86 yards and caught three passes for 22 more and Derek Carr made enough good throws when he had to do so.

"The foundation has been built," McKenzie said in his first interview since head coach Dennis Allen was fired after a Week 4 loss. "That's what it's all about. The more young guys play, the more comfortable they get … and now they're making plays.

"And we continue to grow that."

Carr's 1-yard touchdown pass to Jamize Olawale with 2:51 left, set up by a 51-yard heave to Andre Holmes on 3rd-and-22, put the Raiders in front 26-17. Carr finished 17-for-34 for 214 yards and two touchdowns, not bad considering the Raiders started the game with three three-and-outs.

Besides Mack and Carr, guard Gabe Jackson and defensive tackle Justin Ellis are also promising rookie starters. Murray, a sixth-round pick last year, has given the Raiders (32nd in the league) a running game. Second-year linebacker Sio Moore also was making plays before he got hurt, and cornerback DJ Hayden and right tackle Menelik Watson have displayed their potential.

Their confidence is growing after their third win in five games under interim head coach Tony Sparano. "Early in the year, we stunk it up," defensive tackle Antonio Smith said. "The fans stayed behind us, we started playing good football and now … and now it's electrifying."

In their previous two games, the Bills held Peyton Manning and Aaron Rodgers without a touchdown pass. Buffalo's defense was not the same Sunday after defensive tackle Marcell Dareus left the game early with a knee injury.

It definitely opened some holes for Murray. Darren McFadden even chipped in nine carries for 54 yards — surpassing in one game his total from the previous three (45) — as the Raiders held a firm grasp on the game despite settling for four Sebastian Janikowski field goals.

Midway through the third quarter, Murray was averaging 5.3 yards on 15 carries and the Bills had 5 yards rushing total. They finished with 13 yards on 13 carries.

Mack and Justin Tuck were all over the place, with the rookie finishing with five tackles, one for a loss, one sack and three quarterback hits. Tuck had four tackles, two for a loss, a sack and three quarterback hits.

The Bills couldn't block Mack, the Raiders' first-round draft pick in May, even when they double-teamed him. "He has a bright future, to say the least," Tuck said. "It's fun. I remember being a young stud. … When you're young, your body allows you to do some things that are beyond belief.

"It's fun. It's exciting."

Short on healthy linebackers, defensive coordinator Jason Tarver used a lot of dime coverage packages with extra defensive backs and Buffalo quarterback Kyle Orton had a hard time finding open receivers.

Orton did throw a 30-yard touchdown to Robert Woods with 1:09 left to cut the Bills' deficit to two. Charles Woodson then hugged the ensuing onside kick and Oakland fans were hugging in the stands.

Who knew 3-12 could be so much fun?

"Now we've gotta find a way to bottle it up and take it on the road," said Tuck, whose team finishes the season in Denver.

3 notables
Khalil Mack: The Bills had no answer for him, as the rookie was in the backfield most of the day, and Justin Tuck and Antonio Smith joined him and made it a party.

Sebastian Janikowski: Made his first four field-goal attempts as the Raiders took control of the game. Holder Matt Schaub, who was booed when he almost took a snap at QB, also did a nice job.

Latavius Murray: The Raiders have a running game at last. Big back moves well inside, is faster than he looks and is always falling forward.

Instant Replay: Raiders hold off Bills for third win of season
By Scott Bair
December 21, 2014

The Raiders are in search of a new, state-of-the-art stadium. This year's team likes O.co Coliseum just fine.

The Raiders won their third straight home game on Sunday afternoon, with an 26-24 victory over the Buffalo Bills. It is also the team's third victory of the season against a team with a winning record at the time.

The Polish placekicker hit four field goals in five attempts, which kept the Raiders ahead. Raiders essentially secured victory with a touchdown. Fullback Jamize Olwale scored on 1-yard touchdown with three minutes left.

The score sent the O.co Coliseum crowd into hysterics. The old stadium offered a true home-field advantage, and was extremely loud a key moments of the game.

The Raiders are 3-12 after an 0-10 start, with interim head coach Tony Sparano galvanizing this unit. They've struggled mightily on the road, but he has this team playing well at home and feeding off the crowd's energy.

The Raiders seem set to sign another short-term lease to remain in Oakland another year, though nothing is set in stone at this point.

Sparano kept his team focused on the game at hand, and that was evident during these four quarters. The Raiders played strong run defense, and churned out points despite struggles getting into the end zone.

Janikowski gave the Raiders a first-half lead and expanded the lead with four straight field goals, including one from 49 yards out to create a two-score lead at 19-10.

The Raiders got into the end zone once in the first three quarters, which evened the game at 7-7. Carr threw a 3-yard touchdown pass to James Jones in the first quarter, the completion of a drive highlighted by a 50-yard strike from Carr to Kenbrell Thompkins.

The Bills cut it to 19-17 with quarterback Kyle Orton's second touchdown pass of the game. Scott Chandler beat coverage from Ray-Ray Armstrong and scored from 29 yards out.

With just over a minute left, Kyle Orton threw a 3-yard touchdown pass to Robert Woods, but the Raiders recovered the onside kick and ran out the clock to seal the win.

King sets franchise record:
Raiders punter Marquette King set a team record for punts in a season on Sunday, a mark that is a black eye for an offense that has struggled throughout the season.

King punted six times and has 100 this season. Leo Araguz set the previous record with 98 punts in 1998.

Woodson's pick 60:
Veteran free safety Charles Woodson intercepted the 60th pass of his storied career on Sunday afternoon. He picked off Kyle Orton in the first quarter, which was his fourth interception of the season.

McGill steps up with Chekwa out:
Raiders fourth-round pick Keith McGill saw extensive snaps as the team's No. 3 cornerback. He was active in the nickel and dime packages, an increased role with Chimdi Chekwa out with a hamstring injury and Tarell Brown on injured reserve with a foot ailment.

In addition to Chekwa, receiver Vincent Brown, receiver Denarius Moore, tackle Menelik Watson and tight end Brian Leonhardt were inactive due to injury. Defensive tackle Stacy McGee and guard Tony Bergstrom were healthy scratches.

Injury update:
Bills defensive tackle Marcel Dareus suffered a knee injury and did not return, which helped the Raiders interior running game.

What's next:
The Raiders will cap a disappointing 2014 season with a road game against the Denver Broncos. The Broncos will play the Cincinnati Bengals on Monday night.

Raiders knock Bills out of playoffs with 26-24 win
By Josh Dubow
December 21, 2014

One week after shutting down Aaron Rodgers and the Green Bay Packers to move into playoff contention, the Buffalo Bills came up short against rookie Derek Carr and the lowly Oakland Raiders.

Carr threw two touchdown passes, Sebastian Janikowski kicked four field goals, and the Raiders knocked the Bills from playoff contention with a 26-24 victory Sunday.

The Bills (8-7) had gone four straight games without allowing a touchdown pass, including the past two weeks against Peyton Manning and Rodgers. But Carr broke that streak with a pair of scoring throws that gave the Raiders (3-12) their third straight home win.

"You see what that defense did to them," Carr said. "The best quarterbacks, really to ever play this game, what that defense has done to them and it's like, you turn the film on and you see what they're doing and you know it's going to be tough."

It was early but Carr responded by throwing a 3-yard touchdown pass to James Jones in the second quarter and then sealed the win with a 1-yarder to Jamize Olawale with 2:51 to go.

Carr went 17 of 34 passes for 214 yards but did not turn the ball over and was sacked just once.

The Bills needed to win their final two games and get some help to end the NFL's longest active playoff drought at 14 seasons. But they failed at the easiest part — beating the lowly Raiders — and will miss the playoffs for a 15th straight year.

"When you've gone this long and you're right there with a chance, and you put it all on the line and you don't come through, it hurts," quarterback Kyle Orton said.

Here are some other takeaways from the Raiders win over the Bills:

SPLENDID SPOILERS: Oakland has the second-longest active postseason drought at 12 but has done a good job of playing spoiler in the past five weeks by beating Kansas City, San Francisco and Buffalo at home.

"This team has never really gotten down to the point where we were ready to give up," safety Charles Woodson said. "It's always been an upbeat attitude with the guys on the team, and it shows out there each week."

GROUNDED: The Bills hoped the return of C.J. Spiller would provide a spark to a struggling run game. But Spiller had minus-4 yards on four carries and the Bills ran for just 13 yards on 13 carries overall. That was their worst rushing performance since gaining 4 yards against Tennessee on Nov. 23, 1997.

"At the end of the day, they got after us up front and they kicked our butt up front," coach Doug Marrone said. "When you do that, it's difficult to run, pass, do a lot of things."

CONTROLLING THE LINE: The Bills came into the game with one of the NFL's toughest defensive fronts, leading the league with 49 sacks. But Carr was sacked just once and Oakland had its second best running game of the season, gaining 140 yards on 36 carries.

"You turn around and rush it the way we rushed it and give up one sack to that front, that's all I heard about all week," Raiders interim coach Tony Sparano said. "That's not a mistake. Our guys played well up front."

ORDINARY ORTON: After throwing a 42-yard touchdown pass to Sammy Watkins on the first drive of the game, Orton struggled once again. He threw an interception on the next drive and then the offense had five straight three and outs. Orton finished 32 for 49 for 329 yards with three touchdowns and two interceptions.

"Ultimately, that falls on the quarterback," Orton said. "It's my job to get everybody on the same page and make sure it looks good to score points. Certainly disappointed in myself."

CLUTCH PASS: The key play of the game came in the fourth quarter after Buffalo cut Oakland's lead to 19-17. With the Raiders facing a third-and-22, Carr was flushed out of the pocket before connecting on a 51-yard pass to Andre Holmes. That set up Oakland's final touchdown that sealed the game.

"I was thinking about running but then I saw Andre 1-on-1, so I gave him a chance and he made my day by making that play," Carr said.

DEREK CARR

ESPN THE MAGAZINE

Sins of the Brother
By Seth Wickersham
May 1, 2014

ON THE DAY his big brother's career as an NFL starter ended, Derek Carr threw the ball with David on a high school field outside of Houston. The Texans had just released the elder Carr, five years after making him the first pick in the 2002 draft. David needed to clear his head on this March afternoon, so he grabbed his youngest brother, and they went out to play catch. Derek was 15 years old and a star quarterback at Sugar Land's Clements High, and even then he burned to finish what his brother had started. He would choose to play at Fresno State, just like his brother. He would become a devout Christian and marry young, like his brother. By the end of his senior season, he would rack up similar passing numbers and begin to seduce NFL scouts with the same quick release that had sold them on his brother more than a decade earlier. In fact, teams might now consider Derek Carr the top quarterback in this year's draft, if not for one unshakable liability.

His brother.

ON ANOTHER WINDY March afternoon, seven years later, David and Derek are once again throwing the ball on a high school field. The stakes have changed. David, 34, has been out of the NFL since last August, when the Giants became the fourth team to release him. Derek, 23, is perhaps the most intriguing quarterback in the draft, often mentioned as a sleeper alternative to Johnny Manziel, Teddy Bridgewater and Blake Bortles. Derek is wearing a Fresno State hoodie and a pair of hideous silver, blue and fluorescent green and yellow cleats that he received at the combine. "I told him he has to get his entire suit for the draft that color," David says.

There are no yard lines on the field at Bakersfield Christian High in central California, where Derek spent his senior year after the family returned home following David's release. The Carr boys guesstimate 10 yards and begin to warm up. Both are tall and strong, and most of their combine numbers are indistinguishable -- David ran a 4.67 40-yard dash in 2002; Derek ran a 4.69 in February. Both have that beautiful lashing throwing motion, almost too fast to track. A lifetime of catch has synced their habits. "We're like an old married couple," David says.

A player who is a near duplicate of a former consensus No. 1 pick would ordinarily have an advantage on draft day. But GMs face a rare conundrum in this case, unsure of how to grapple with scouting reports on Derek. On one hand, his 50 touchdown passes and only eight interceptions last season suggests that he has all the tools to be a franchise quarterback; Browns coach Mike Pettine calls him the "best natural thrower in the draft." But then there are the issues: Below-average poise and toughness within the pocket; will anticipate pressure and look to protect his frame instead of sitting in and delivering the ball.

It's a valid rap. It's also arguably a fixable one. And given Carr's talent, it seems strange that pocket-pressure worries might drop him out of the first round. The problem is that his scouting report echoes what teams said about David -- after it became clear that his career was a bust. "It's an issue," says one NFC scout. "If their makeup is the same, then there is concern."

That's why Derek is grateful that someone is entirely committed to ensuring that his NFL career will not end up like David's.

That someone is his brother.

THE ONLY FAMILY that's produced as many gifted throwers as the Carrs is the Mannings, which is fitting because the only precedent for the beating that David Carr suffered in Texas is what Archie Manning endured in New Orleans. Surrounded by expansion-draft castoffs, David absorbed 249 sacks in his first five years. He never complained, even to family. But as years of hits set in, David began to look at the rush before he looked downfield, a quarterback's death spiral. "You try to rack your brain and ask, 'Why?'" he says now when asked about his career. "It was God's plan."

By 2007, David was considered such damaged goods that the Texans had no choice but to release him. After a season in Carolina, he had two stints with the Giants, playing behind Eli Manning. The first time David met Archie, the patriarch of football royalty gave him a hug and said, "I know what you went through, man."

"I'm glad to see you're walking," David responded.

David's time in New York provided a crash course on how an elite quarterback prepares. He watched Eli take ownership of the offense as if he were a coach, working late on Mondays and Tuesdays, most players' days off. He watched how game-planning sessions unfolded under quarterbacks coach Mike Sullivan, where questions flew and debates raged. It was everything David had been missing, and he realized that not knowing how to study had stunted his growth as much as leaky offensive lines did. Had he learned early on how to prepare, he says, "it would have been beneficial not only to myself but to the guys around me. Then you take more of an ownership of the team, and you're not just another guy in the locker room. You're a coach on the field. And that makes you a better player."

By the time he learned, it was too late. David wasn't signed after the Giants released him last August. Late in the season, he received an offer to be a backup -- at the exact moment he was at the doctor's office, where he learned that his 2-year-old daughter, Grace, had juvenile diabetes. He decided to be a dad, seemingly at peace with ending his career after 11 years, 65 touchdown passes, 71 interceptions and a 23-56 record as a starter. He spent fall weekends driving 110 familiar miles from Bakersfield to Fresno and watched from the sideline as Derek set 27 school records, breaking many of his own. He stayed up late with Derek after games, breaking down film. And when he began to hear the knocks on his brother -- the reports that ranked the quarterback with "the quickest release in the draft," in the words of one scout, as merely the fifth or sixth best at his position -- it became clear that Derek was paying for David's career.

After that, Derek's draft became David's cause. Derek moved into David's house in Bakersfield. David hired Sullivan, out of work after being let go by the Bucs, to coach his brother through the process. Driven by pride and regret and love, he put Derek in a cocoon -- lifting in the morning, throwing in the afternoon, film study at night. "If I had to take some bumps so he doesn't have to," David says, "so be it."

A FEW HOURS after the brothers' throwing session, David and Sullivan -- everyone calls him Sully -- sit at a Bakersfield Chipotle, going over the plan for tomorrow's practice, the first run-through of Derek's pro day. Usually, a college strength coach runs a pro day, but David asked Sully to plan Derek's, betting that an NFL mind will ensure that no GM leaves with questions. Each weeknight, Sullivan breaks down video with Derek, often until midnight. Sully provided Derek with a four-page work sheet to complete, the same one Eli uses. The questions -- Is the corner midpoint? Which safety is more aggressive? -- are intended to teach Derek how to watch film. David's role is almost that of a parent, a provider and protector who appreciates the instruction in a way his brother can't, all while wondering what if. "I never had any of this," he says.

While his coach and brother work, Derek sits at the other end of the table, telling funny stories about coaching David's 9-year-old son, Cooper, in flag football. (Yes, Cooper is a quarterback.) As affable as his brother is hardened, Derek carries himself with an easy command reminiscent of Tom Brady and Russell Wilson, as if doubt is a foreign concept. He's been riding a wave of underground buzz that began at the Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala.

College all-star games are usually sand traps for quarterbacks, who are forced to spend all week throwing to unfamiliar receivers. But before the Senior Bowl on Jan. 25, the Carrs hatched an idea: Practice for the practice by gathering two of the receivers in New Orleans the week prior. It was the sort of tip Derek could receive only from someone who had been through it before, and it was a natural fit with the workaholic instincts that led him to arrive for film study at 6:30 a.m. many mornings last season. Derek was sharp in Mobile, and suddenly scouts began to argue that he was the draft's top quarterback: more mature than Manziel, stronger than Bridgewater, more consistent in his delivery than Bortles. Still, that one issue continued to dog him. "The problem," one NFC exec says, "is his genetics."

Of course, Derek considers it an honor to be compared with his brother. David is one of the most famous athletes to make it out of Bakersfield, one of those dust towns that seem to be surrounded by invisible walls. Yet David's pain has always been Derek's. As a kid, Derek would cry after his brother's losses and would join him in the film room to correct mistakes. He admires the way David was always "the same person" whether he was cheered or booed. "His career was not successful in the world's eyes," Derek says. "But to the people we listen to and respect, it was the most successful thing ever."

Derek has traced his brother's path consciously, as if to prove it wasn't the problem. He graduated high school early to get a jump at Fresno State. After partying too hard as a freshman, he rededicated his life to football and faith and was named the starter as a redshirt sophomore. He soon learned that he would be measured against his brother's real and perceived failures. In camp before his junior season, Derek suffered a sports hernia and hairline fracture in his pelvic bone. The coaches told him to avoid hits at all costs. So he unloaded at the first sign of pressure, often off his back foot. Derek still racked up 37 touchdowns against just seven interceptions -- the definition of toughness that scouts claim to crave. But some teams couldn't shake that familiar, familial skittishness in the pocket. "He took some undue criticism," says Fresno State coach Tim DeRuyter. "It was painful, and he never said a word."

And he internalized it all. During informal workouts before his senior year, Derek asked teammates to hit him after he threw. He never told the coaches. A few months later, against Boise State, Derek took a shot in the face as he released. The pass was caught. "The one question they had on me?" Derek says, leaning back at Chipotle and spreading his arms wide. "I answered it."

So he hopes. Until draft day, nobody truly knows how much the specter of David will affect Derek. Scouts swear that they evaluate each prospect on his own merit, but so much of quarterback evaluation is based on gut. So far, it's clear that -- unlike, say, Eli Manning -- Derek isn't getting the benefit of the doubt. At the combine, GMs and coaches asked Derek the ways in which he's similar to his brother. "We're both tough," Derek said. "And we believe that we can throw with anyone." They asked the ways in which he's not. "He's more quiet. I'll walk into a room and get to know eight people."

The coach chuckled, then tried again: "I didn't think they were very good."

Derek wouldn't bite. "That's your opinion," he said, and they laughed.

ALL OF THE questions carry the same message: Prove that we won't be burned twice. It has forced Derek to walk a line between self-preservation and loyalty. He makes it clear that "I'm not trying to be David -- I'm trying to be the very best Derek Carr I can be," and he adds that he patterns his game after Peyton Manning's. But Derek has always been haunted by the question that haunts his brother: What really happened in Houston? He wanted to learn for himself. Without telling anyone, he watched video of some of David's NFL games, analyzing them as a quarterback, not a brother. He saw a career killed in the crib, a victim of historically bad circumstances. "Man, can you get him some help?" Derek says. "I can promise you it wasn't No. 8's fault."

No. 8, of course, has tried to convince everyone that he has no regrets about his career, that he could be happy to live vicariously through Derek. But not even the most bruised quarterback of his era ever fully loses the itch to play. Working with Derek the past few months -- watching his younger brother benefit from his pain -- has "rekindled a little juice," David says. He has a career's worth of wisdom and is in the best shape of his life, an ideal backup. In February, David began to believe that maybe, just maybe, he could not only redeem his career through his brother but perhaps revive it. "Being out here and training and going through this process has shown me that I want to play, absolutely," David says.

THAT LEADS BOTH brothers to a Bakersfield gym on a March morning, carrying a sort of kinetic energy: We're gonna pull this off. Their agent has casually pitched them to teams as a package deal, even offering to stage a workout for David on Derek's pro day. David passed on that, not wanting to be a distraction. But he's motivated by the hope of one last chance, and he bolts into the gym in a sleeveless tee, ready to roll. A sleepy Derek is behind him, hoodie pulled over his face.

"Like a million bucks!" David says.

They lie on foam rollers, ironing out soreness. Framed pictures of David's college and pro games surround them. David leans over to mess with his brother, whose legs ache. "Argh, not my quads," Derek says. "If you press them, I'll cry."

A Carr workout is not for everyone. They sometimes push David's 4x4 through the parking lot. They take pride in being tough after years of being accused otherwise. The other day, they heard commentators lament Derek's lack of pocket tolerance, so Derek downloaded a few plays of his getting leveled and hitting the pass, just to remind himself. "We laughed," Derek says, even if both of them knew that it wasn't really funny.

Back at the gym, Derek and David joke about splitting reps in this afternoon's practice. "If you pull one of those vet moves -- You throw, I'm too sore -- we'll fight," Derek says.

"I'll take the reps so that I can be the starter," David says, deadly serious. Then he shakes his head and smiles. "See, Derek's not ready."

A FEW HOURS later, they line up opposite each other on a high school field yet again. It's blustery. David brought his favorite ball, worn and molded at the laces to fit his grip. Derek has a few different footballs and doesn't care which one they use. Scouts would consider that a plus. As he throws, David looks to the sideline and smiles. "The Cobra has arrived!"

The Cobra is their father, Rodger, a fit and tan 61-year-old. He taught the boys how to throw, using Dan Marino as a template. He's running routes today, his usual role. Both of Rodger's thumbs are jacked up after years of fielding bullets. David is responsible for the left; Derek for the right. To catch, Rodger raises his forearm to absorb the blow, which earned him his nickname. The inside of his arm is black and blue. Sometimes it goes numb.

Sullivan asks the brothers to practice shuffling over bags and then firing to Rodger, about 20 yards away. David goes first. He is smooth and polished, his throws quick and hard. A season off has brought him a greater appreciation for a simple drill that he took for granted years ago, a palpable urgency. Derek is slower over the bags, but his release is higher than David's, his passes more catchable. "Nice!" Sully says to Derek. "Nice throw!"

Next is a blitz drill, in which they throw as fast as possible under duress. Nobody mentions the obvious: This is the Carr drill. David goes first again. Out here, on air, he is decisive and smooth and accurate. Derek is rougher -- "I'm heavy metal; he's jazz," he says -- but his arm is lively, too much on one throw for Rodger to catch. "Cobra!" David says, smiling. "Come on!"

Moments later they all stand at midfield, going over the plan for pro day. David is in coach mode, thinking through every worst-case scenario. Derek is not as worried, and there's an ineffable tension between David's desire to control the future and Derek's willingness to overcome the unknowable. After David mentions a concern about what to do if some of Derek's receivers are hurt on pro day, Derek says half-mockingly, "That's like going into a game and saying, 'What if everyone gets injured?'"

Most legendary quarterbacks share one very specific trait: They not only collect scars, they learn from them. Derek has collected David's scars. That he seems to have accepted and grown from that inheritance is the immeasurable quality that, if years from now he is a success, scouts will lament that they missed. On the field, both brothers are swaying back and forth, itching to throw. Sullivan explains the final route of Derek's pro day, a deep corner. "And that's all she wrote," he says. "That's a full and sufficient workout." "That's how I want it," Derek says, sounding confident.

Now it's time for a run-through. The first pass is a simple slant. David steps up eagerly. Back in 2002, he threw it better than anyone. But before David can fire, he catches himself. Suddenly it seems to hit him that it would be best if he stepped aside. "I can get my throws in anytime," he says, turning away. David kneels to snap the ball to his brother, who fills the void by throwing perfect spirals into the wind.

Raiders: Rookie Derek Carr is starting to show a lot of maturity

By Jerry McDonald
December 10, 2014

ALAMEDA -- Derek Carr is learning to play the game within the game.

In the Raiders' 24-13 win over the 49ers, one play stood out in terms of Carr's development. On the stat sheet, it was a 27-yard gain to Mychal Rivera over the middle.

"He was looking at me, and I was looking at Mike," Carr said Wednesday. "When I was looking at Mike, I was able to point and Mike was able to break it off just as he was looking back at me."

Coming off his best day as an NFL quarterback (22 of 28, 254 yards, three touchdowns, no interceptions), Carr is now seeking the first road win of his NFL career in a rematch with the Kansas City Chiefs on Sunday at Arrowhead Stadium.

Raiders coach Tony Sparano finds the subtleties and nuances from Carr such as the pass to Rivera against the 49ers to be encouraging. It tells Sparano that Carr not only had chemistry with Rivera but understood the opposing defense perfectly.

"He's starting to be able to play with the secondary a little bit with his eyes," Sparano said. "He's more definitive on what he's doing with the ball before the snap. He's at a point where he gets the play, and a picture is being drawn in his head immediately."

Rivera said Carr has sorted out his myriad responsibilities and is able to process things quicker than earlier in the season.

"He's got so much to think about before the play," Rivera said. "He's got to check the play, look at the blitzes, the coverages. He's just comfortable right now."

Carr said he was taught to look off receivers in college but that in the NFL it's done on a different level.

"You're not just moving safeties, you're moving linebackers," Carr said. "You can keep your eyes inside for corners to overlap and go outside. It's been cool to learn, because your eyes can dictate a lot of throws being open -- especially in zone coverages."

Second-year running back Latavius Murray said Carr's command of the huddle is total.

"It's hard to tell he was a rookie if you don't know already," Murray said. "He's a guy that's a great leader and acts like he's been around for awhile."

Chiefs nose tackle Dontari Poe told Bay Area reporters by conference call that Carr's performance in the first meeting -- a 24-20 Raiders win on Nov. 20 -- came as no surprise.

"He's a really good quarterback who doesn't take a lot of sacks and knows how to move in the pocket," Poe said. "He doesn't play like a rookie at all. It really wasn't a secret, though. We saw that from watching film on him."

Raiders rookie Derek Carr has faced bigger tests
By Daniel Brown
September 6, 2014

BAKERSFIELD -- Derek Carr, who Sunday will become the first rookie quarterback to start a season for the Raiders, owes so much of his football philosophy to Gotham City that he used to wear a Batman shirt underneath his jersey.

His general philosophy is to be Bruce Wayne -- boring, methodical, buttoned-up. But a few times a game, when the Bat-Signal goes up, he'll throw on his cape and try to do something super.

Carr, 23, can be that way in real life, too.

There was that night last year in the neonatal intensive care unit, when Carr's newborn son was critically ill and his wife was on the verge of a breakdown. That was definitely a cape moment.

Dallas Mason Carr was born at 3:32 p.m. on Aug. 5, 2013, to Derek and his wife, Heather. They met as students at Fresno State, and when the quarterback decided to stay for his senior season rather than enter the NFL draft, they decided to get married and start a family.

On the day Dallas arrived, they were over the moon. But in the wee hours that night, Derek called his mom from the Clovis Community Hospital in a panic. The baby kept throwing up.

"That's OK, babies do that," Sheryl Carr assured him.

"No, mom, this is different. This is green. Something is not normal."

"Call me back if he doesn't stop and go see what the doctor says."

When the phone rang again at 2 a.m., Sheryl didn't need to pick up to know the situation was dire. "I answer the phone and he's just bawling," she recalled. Sheryl and her husband, Rodger, ran out of the house, hopped in the car and headed for the hospital.

Doctors and nurses had discovered that Dallas' intestines were twisted, cutting off the baby's blood flow. Intestinal malrotation, as it is called, requires surgery -- and the baby was being whisked by ambulance from Clovis to Children's Hospital Central California in Madera. One doctor told Derek that his son might not make it.

'WHO IS THAT MAN?'

Sheryl recounted this story Thursday in the kitchen of the family home in Bakersfield. With her Rodger at her side, most of this two-hour visit was filled with rollicking tales about raising three boys, two of whom grew up to be NFL quarterbacks.

But Sheryl tells this story to explain Derek's strength and maturity. More than once, she wipes away tears.

The first surgery didn't fix Dallas' problem, and the baby was barely into the recovery room when he was summoned back for a second operation. Sheryl was watching the scene unfold when doctors came to take the newborn away from Heather -- for the second time.

"She's in a wheelchair. She's kind of in shock. She just had a baby. And when the doctor says we have to do more surgery, she says, 'I don't understand.' She starts panicking," Sheryl said.

Her voice catches. There's a pause.

"I was getting ready to console them. You'd think that a young man who has never had a child, at that moment of critical terror, would just fall apart. You're there to catch them.

"But Derek just grabbed Heather by the arms and said, 'We're going to go talk to the doctor and we're going to do what he says. Stop crying. He's our baby and we're going to take care of him. It's going to be all right.' And off they went.

"I was like, 'Who is that man?'"

Dallas Carr would require a third surgery, one that lasted more than five hours, but the kid ultimately pulled off his first comeback. The family recently celebrated his first birthday. His weight is in the 90th percentile for his age. The only hint that anything was ever wrong is the rapidly fading scar under his belly button.

ROOKIE TESTED QUICKLY

The ordeal helps explain Carr's response this week when reporters asked him about the pressure of starting in New York. The second-round pick is the only NFL rookie passer scheduled to start in Week 1.

It's a shocking ascension for a player taken in the second round, 36th overall. He was supposed to serve an apprenticeship behind veteran Matt Schaub, who came with a $4.5 million fully guaranteed salary and a $3.5 million signing bonus that was paid in March.

But Carr wrested away the job with a strong exhibition season, including completing 11 of 13 passes for 143 yards and three touchdowns against the Seattle Seahawks in the final game.

He has given the Raiders a spark not seen since the Rich Gannon days.

But pressure? Hardly.

"Everything that we went through in our lives in my family ... whatever happens in football it's just a game," he replied. "It doesn't matter if I go out and throw three touchdowns or I go out and throw eight picks. I'm going to be the same person.

"Obviously, as a competitor, I'll be mad. But I'm going to be the same person, because football is never going to define who I am."

Here, in the family home in Bakersfield, his parents understand too well how football tries to define people. David Carr, who is 12 years older than his little brother, was the No. 1 overall pick of the 2002 draft. It did not go well.

Hindered by a questionable supporting cast, David Carr was sacked an NFL-record 76 times as a rookie with the expansion Houston Texans. He also led the NFL in getting sacked in 2004 (49) and 2005 (68).

"The hardest part was after the games. We'd go to his house," Rodger Carr, 62, said. "It looked like he just went through 15 rounds with Mike Tyson. I could see it. He was just beat up. I remember near the end, he said, 'Dad, I don't know if I can do this anymore.' "

David Carr played in the NFL through 2012 but never started after 2007. He finished his career with 65 touchdown passes against 71 interceptions.

In 94 career games, he was sacked 267 times. By comparison, Peyton Manning has been sacked just three more times -- but has played in 240 career games.

A talent evaluator recently told ESPN the Magazine that David Carr's struggles were so deep that they hurt his brother's draft stock by association. "It's an issue," the NFC scout told the magazine. "If their makeup is the same, then there is concern."

A PERFECT MENTOR

The Carrs see it the other way: David's pain will be Derek's gain. The eldest boy is teaching his brother how to avoid his mistakes -- as well as how to train, how to practice, how to lead, how to think. It took until late in his career, but David Carr eventually saw what a winning team was supposed look like. He served as Eli Manning's backup for the Super Bowl XLVI champion New York Giants.

These lessons are now Derek Carr's hand-me-downs.

"Derek may be 23, but he has Dave's 34-year-old brain in his head," Rodger Carr said. "I always say that David only had me to a certain point. The reason Derek is so far ahead is that he had his older brother. It's made a big difference."

Because the mentorship began early, the stories of Derek Carr's childhood sound far more Batman than Bruce Wayne.

Nate Thiessen, the assistant head coach during Carr's time at Bakersfield Christian High, tells one from Carr's first practice at the school. The family had just moved back to Bakersfield from Houston, and Carr was a senior looking to make an impression.

Thiessen was filling in for the vacationing head coach that day when Carr approached him with a proposal. "He's standing on the 45-yard line and he says, 'I'm going to throw five balls. If three of them hit the crossbar, you let me out of sprints tomorrow,' " Thiessen recalled.

The bet was on. But Carr needed only the first three throws -- boom, boom, boom! They all hit the crossbar. Later that day, the head coach called from his Hawaii vacation wondering how that new quarterback from Houston looked. "Is he the real deal?" the coach asked.

"If you just saw what I saw," Thiessen told him, "you'd know we're going to be fine."

The punch line came the next day. Carr ran every sprint anyway. He led the team in 100-yard gassers under the sweltering summer sun.

Raiders rookie Carr has high expectations for himself

By Vic Tafur
September 6, 2014

Mike Sullivan, the former NFL offensive coordinator, popped in the NFL game film to show Derek Carr something. It was back in March, when Derek's older brother, former No. 1 overall pick David Carr, had hired Sullivan to help prepare his brother for the NFL draft.

"I was showing him an interception, what the quarterback had done wrong, and he noticed that the quarterback didn't get involved in the pursuit of the player," Sullivan said. "Derek starts yelling, 'You gotta get that guy! Make him pay!' "

Sullivan said Derek Carr has a "real fighter's mentality, more like a mixed martial arts fighter than a quarterback," and is looking forward to seeing the rookie make his first start for the Raiders against the Jets on Sunday.

"I tell him to scale it back, but he'll probably head-butt a lineman or something on Sunday," Sullivan said. "He's almost too intense at times, but who doesn't want a vocal, intense, smart leader at quarterback?"

One who can throw. Like his brother, Derek Carr has the great arm and the quick release. But he's wired a little differently, probably because he watched all of the 249 sacks that his brother endured in five seasons with the Houston Texans. And he heard all the criticism as David Carr was proclaimed a bust.

It's one of the reasons that the Raiders are not as worried about starting a rookie quarterback on the road as they probably should be.

"He's been around the game a long time," Oakland offensive coordinator Greg Olson said. "He's had the experience of watching his brother and even watching some of the adversity that his brother went through. I just think he's a mature kid, and I think he'll be fine."

Big brother

Sullivan coached David Carr in 2011, when he was the quarterbacks coach of the New York Giants and Carr was backing up Eli Manning.

He says that stylistically, David is more jazz to Derek's heavy metal.

Sullivan said he could tell that David thought he had not gotten the level of film analysis and game-planning in Houston that he was receiving in New York, and that it was probably too late for him. So he poured that knowledge into his brother.

Derek had already grown up watching NFL game film with his brother, but he cranked it up. Then David hired Sullivan to be Derek's quarterback coach after the younger sibling finished playing at Fresno State.

"Our first day, they were both throwing, and David looked tremendous," Sullivan said. "It was all the time he spent working out with and coaching his brother. ... It's been such a great resource for Derek, and why he's always been ahead of the curve.

"He was ahead of the curve going into the draft, and he was ahead of the curve going into an NFL training camp. It's why I wasn't really surprised that he won the starting job."

Derek quickly called David when he heard that he had beaten out Matt Schaub for the starting job.

"He was fired up," Derek Carr said. "He was excited for me. The whole family was excited, obviously, but at the same time it's just football. It was an excitement, 'Hey, congrats,' and then we went about our lives. In our family, football is not everything."

Bigger concerns

Derek and his wife, Heather, have a son, Dallas, who recently celebrated his first birthday. He is fine now, and won't know until his parents tell him some day that he almost didn't make it the night he was born.

Dallas' intestines were twisted when he was born, cutting off blood flow. He needed three surgeries to repair the intestinal malrotation but is healthy now.

"Everything that we went through in our lives in my family ... whatever happens in football, it's just a game," Derek Carr. "It doesn't matter if I go out and throw three touchdowns or I go out and throw eight picks. I'm going to be the same person.

"Obviously, as a competitor, I'll be mad. But I'm going to be the same person, because football is never going to define who I am."

Dallas smiles a lot, seemingly just as happy in life as his dad is to be playing quarterback for a living.

“That kid in you, when you're finally a starting quarterback, one of 32 people in the world doing this job, it's really cool," Carr said. "Don't get me wrong about me saying it's just football. I love what I do, and that's why I am so passionate."

Big letdown

Derek was disappointed that he didn't get selected in the first round, but he grew up a Raiders fan in Bakersfield.

"Every college kid wants to go in the first round growing up, but some people didn't see it that way," he said. "I'm glad they didn't because I ended up in a great spot, the exact spot that I wanted to be."

He was brought in to be Oakland's quarterback of the future, with Schaub manning the controls of an experienced team this season. But Schaub didn't play well, Carr did ... and the future arrived early.

In the preseason Carr had a 67 percent completion percentage with four touchdown passes, including a very pretty back-shoulder toss to Denarius Moore in a three-TD game against Seattle. Schaub completed only 51 percent of his pass attempts and did not throw for a touchdown.

"I like Derek Carr a lot," NFL Films producer and quarterback savant Greg Cosell said. "I think he is greatly improved in the preseason. The things I thought he needed improvement in, I saw, which tells me he is being coached well and is receptive to it."

Olson and quarterbacks coach John DeFilippo spent a lot of time on his footwork, widening Carr's throwing base and getting rid of a hitch. Sullivan texted Carr after the Seattle game to tell him how good he looked stepping up and sliding over in the pocket.

Big arm, too

The arm is still getting rave reviews.

"The quickness of his delivery, at times, reminded me of Aaron Rodgers," Cosell said. "I was an idiot when I first said that. Then James Jones said it last week. ... The back-shoulder throw in the Seattle game was about as good as it gets."

Carr was the fourth quarterback taken in the draft, but the only one starting this week. And he's the first Raiders rookie to ever start the opener at quarterback.

And he is the first Fresno State quarterback to start Week 1 in his rookie season since David started for the Texans in 2002. David completed only 53 percent of his passes that season, being intercepted 15 times and being sacked an NFL-record 76 times.

But that was then, and this Carr is new and improved.

"I called my brother because he's played the Jets seven times," Derek Carr said. "So we talked. I picked his brain, took notes ... picked Schaub's brain, picked the coaches' brains.

"I expect a lot."

Rookie quarterback Carr is Raiders' silver lining
By Michael Wagaman
November 27, 2014

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — There's not much Derek Carr hasn't seen in his first season with the Oakland Raiders, from Rex Ryan's exotic blitz packages in New York to the dominant defensive fronts of Arizona and Kansas City.

The rookie quarterback kept the Raiders going as they suffered through 10 consecutive losses to begin the season, then led them on a coming-of-age game-winning drive on national television to end the skid.

It's all been a part of the growing process for Carr, who has a growing legion of fans around the league.

St. Louis Rams coach Jeff Fisher is among them.

"You can tell they have a franchise quarterback now," said Fisher, whose team plays the Raiders on Sunday in St. Louis. "He's developing. It looks like each week he's getting better, making good decisions (and) obviously has a strong arm."

Carr was the fourth quarterback selected in the draft when the Raiders took him in the second round out of Fresno State, but he long ago began to stand out from the other three — Minnesota's Teddy Bridgewater, Jacksonville's Blake Bortles and Cleveland's Johnny Manziel.

He became only the 12th rookie in NFL history to pass for more than 2,000 yards in his team's first 10 games. Carr did it despite getting little support from Oakland's running game most of the year.

The first rookie quarterback to ever start a season opener for the Raiders, Carr also owns the franchise rookie record for passing yards (2,249) and touchdowns (14) — with five games still left to play.

None of it seemed to matter much, however, until Carr guided Oakland on a 17-play, 80-yard drive that took more than seven minutes off the clock and culminated with a touchdown pass to wide receiver James Jones with 1:42 left to play against the Chiefs on Nov. 20.

"I will say it was a relief that it ended up in a win," Carr said. "I was tired of coming in the next day and having to watch the film on a loss. Everything is better when you win."

It was the sixth time this season that Carr engineered a touchdown in the final two minutes of a game. That it gave the Raiders their first win of the year and ended the franchise's 16-game losing streak made it that much sweeter.

"Experience is one of the best teachers there is," Oakland offensive coordinator Greg Olson said Friday. "He's never a guy that's looking at the scoreboard and wondering whether this touchdown matters or not. He's trying to go out there and score."

Several of his Oakland teammates have praised Carr, not only for the poise he showed in the huddle on the winning drive against the Chiefs but for how he's handled himself all season.

Left guard Khalif Barnes has repeatedly credited Carr for being "mature beyond his years," while running back Darren McFadden said earlier this season that Carr long ago quit being looked at by his peers as a normal rookie.

None of it is surprising to Rams strong safety T.J. McDonald.

McDonald grew up in Fresno, and his father, former NFL star Tim McDonald, was an assistant coach with the Bulldogs for one season while Carr was there.

"One thing about him that's always stood out is his leadership ability and the intangibles at quarterback," T.J. McDonald said. "He's a guy that guys just seem to gravitate toward and always has a positive attitude."

Raiders envision bright future with Derek Carr
By Phil Barber
May 11, 2014

When they took linebacker Khalil Mack with the fourth pick in the 2014 NFL draft, the Raiders explained that this league is all about affecting the quarterback. The team took the principle one step further on Friday, selecting Fresno State quarterback Derek Carr early in the second round.

One round later, they got their future franchise quarterback a little protection and drafted massive guard, Gabe Jackson of Mississippi State.

The Raiders were said to be interested in Carr for weeks. That sort of rumor rarely translates into draft-day action, but general manager Reggie McKenzie pounced on Carr when he was still available with the 36th pick. He was the fourth quarterback taken in the draft, after Central Florida's Blake Bortles, Texas A&M's Johnny Manziel and Louisville's Teddy Bridgewater.

“I think we were pretty excited,” said director of player personnel Joey Clinkscales, standing in for McKenzie. “At the point in time of the draft, Derek was the highest-rated guy on the board. We were pretty comfortable at that pick taking him.”

Clinkscales said the Raiders fielded several calls from teams who wanted the pick, and entertained the thought of moving down in the second round, though they never considered moving up.

Asked whether the team envisions Carr as its quarterback of the future, he said: “We took him in the second round. We would like to think so.”

The only passers taken higher by the Raiders since the 1970 merger were Marc Wilson (No. 15 in 1980), Todd Marinovich (No. 24 in 1991) and JaMarcus Russell (No. 1 in 2007). And yes, you are forgiven if that list causes you to either tremble or double over in laughter.

Carr, who lives in Bakersfield (where he spent his senior year of high school), is practically an NFL lifer. He joined his older brother on stage at Radio City Music Hall at the age of 11 when the Houston Texans made David the first pick in franchise history in 2002, and was studying film with his sibling at 12. What's more, his uncle Lon Boyett was briefly with the Raiders in the late 1970s.

Derek followed David to Fresno State, and thrived. As a senior, he became the fourth quarterback in Division I history to throw for more than 5,000 yards and 50 touchdowns in a season, at one point attempting 305 consecutive passes without an interception. Carr finished eighth in Heisman Trophy voting.

Scouts loved his arm and his attitude, but questioned the system in which he played. The Bulldogs' offense ran almost exclusively from a shotgun formation, and Carr survived on short throws off one-step drops.

He helped dispel a lot of the suspicion with a strong performance at the Senior Bowl in late January. The consensus said he outplayed every quarterback at the event, which including Eastern Illinois' Jimmy Garoppolo and San Jose State's David Fales.

The Texans traded for Matt Schaub in 2007 to replace David Carr, who never developed into the franchise quarterback they were looking for. Now comes the possibility that the Raiders will groom Derek Carr to take over for Schaub, the expected 2014 starter whom they traded for in March.

Many Raiders fans, dubious of Schaub's ability to turn around a career that went off the rails last season, will be rooting for Derek Carr to assume the starting job right away. That's not the plan.

“He's a young quarterback,” Clinkscales said of Carr. “We aren't expecting him to walk in the door and be the starter. We have a starter.”

Carr sounded fine with that.

“If I'm the backup, my role, it doesn't change,” he said. “I'm still gonna help the team win. How can I help Schaub during the game? ... Can I watch the safety? Can I watch the corners? Can I tell him when they were in this front, when they played this coverage, when we were in this formation they ran this coverage, brought this blitz on this down and distance? What can I do to help? All I'm here to do in Oakland is help that team win.”

Jackson, who started 52 games at left guard at Mississippi State, is billed as a powerful and nimble-footed interior lineman who worked hard but occasionally lost focus in games. He joins a replenished pool of offensive linemen that includes free-agent signees Kevin Boothe, Donald Penn and Austin Howard.

The Raiders traded down in the third-round, snagged Jackson at No. 81 and gained a fourth rounder from Miami, No. 116. They have plenty of needs to address today. All in all, though, these guys seem to love how the draft is playing out.

“The Raiders need a little luck like everyone else,” Clinkscales said. “We're excited about that.”

TJ CARRIE

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders rookie TJ Carrie making good impression
By Vic Tafur
August 10, 2014

The first preseason game is a bigger deal than most people realize. It's the first time rookies put on their official jersey and take an NFL field.

Raiders cornerback TJ Carrie actually tried on his jersey a couple of times before he went to the game at Minnesota's TCF Bank Stadium on Friday night.

And then ... when warming up before the game he would ...

"I kept going back to the mirror to see how I looked," Carrie said. "And feel that experience again. Then I would leave and ... 'Man, I gotta check it again' ... 'Oh, we're taking the field, let me check it one more time.'

"It was an awesome experience, and I enjoyed it."

The Antioch native has definitely looked the part of an NFL player. The seventh-round draft pick has jumped to fourth on the Raiders' depth chart at cornerback, is one of the team's three punt-return candidates and he could be a gunner on punt coverage.

He had four tackles against the Vikings, and head coach Dennis Allen said that Carrie played well.

Carrie (6-foot, 204 pounds) had an injury-marred career at Ohio University, and Oakland general manager Reggie McKenzie said that's the reason Carrie was still on the board in the seventh round.

Carrie caught Allen's eye right away this summer with his penchant for being around the ball and making plays. Allen compared him to an undrafted player, Chris Harris, whom Allen had when he was the Broncos' defensive coordinator three years ago.

Harris made the 2011 All-Rookie team and has 27 starts and six interceptions the past two seasons.

"Nobody really knew anything about (Harris), and then every day you watch him practice and every day he's making a play that kind of catches your eye," Allen said. "We thought TJ had some ability, but I think he's more mature than maybe I would have known from a rookie DB coming in from Ohio.

"I've been very impressed with his knowledge of the game."

Carrie has had some help, as he knew teammates Taiwan Jones and Maurice Jones-Drewfrom growing up in Antioch and playing at De La Salle High. Jones-Drew has shown him how to take notes in meetings and helped him become a pro quickly.

"In order to be a pro, you have to come in and get acclimated to the system pretty fast, and that's from the mental, the physical part of it, and really understanding all the aspects and keys of the game," Carrie said. "So the adjustment is based on how you approach the situation, and I think I definitely have tried to approach it in a pro manner."

Carrie is looking forward to the team's trip to Oxnard (Ventura County) for practices against the Dallas Cowboys on Tuesday and Wednesday. And he will tell himself the same thing he told himself Friday, between peeks at the mirror.

"Remain calm, remain confident in the ability that I put on the field in the offseason workouts, minicamp and training camp," he said.

ANDRE HOLMES

Andre Holmes becoming big-play threat for Raiders
By Josh Dubow
October 16, 2014

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — Andre Holmes is settling into his role as Oakland's big-play wide receiver.

With two long catches last week, including a 77-yard score on the first possession of the game, the former undrafted player from tiny Hillsdale College in Michigan has become a crucial part of the Raiders' offense.

After showing flashes at times in his first season in Oakland in 2013, the key for Holmes now is to show the consistency that has been lacking at times over his two seasons with the Raiders.

"You just have to build off of it," Holmes said Thursday. "That's where my mindset is at. It's one good game this season. I just have to go against the Cardinals and get another good one."

After a strong finish to last season when he had 22 catches for 366 yards and a touchdown in the final five games, Holmes was being counted on as a key contributor on Oakland's offense this season.

But he was up-and-down during training camp and the preseason and got passed up for a starting spot because he sometimes has a harder time making the easy catches than the highlight-reel ones.

"'That's something that I know Andre is working on right now," interim coach Tony Sparano said. "He spends an awful lot of time out there on the jugs and doing those types of things, trying to catch those kind of balls. He spends a lot of time at it, works hard."

Holmes played only two offensive snaps in the season opener against the New York Jets and was on the field only about half the time the following two weeks. But after Rod Streater was sidelined by a broken foot, Holmes moved back into the starting lineup against Miami last month and has made the most of his opportunity.

Holmes had five catches for 74 yards and a touchdown in the loss to the Dolphins and followed that up with an even bigger performance against San Diego.

He got behind the defense on the third play from scrimmage to score on a 77-yard catch that was the longest scoring throw for Oakland in five years.

He added a 30-yard catch with a leaping grab near the sideline to set up a score in the second quarter and gave Oakland the lead in the fourth with his 6-yard TD catch. Holmes finished with four catches for 121 yards and two touchdowns — becoming just the third Oakland player to top 100 yards receiving with two TD catches in a game in the past nine seasons.

"I definitely trust him, no doubt," quarterback Derek Carr said. "I like the size of our receivers also, the ones that play outside. I love giving them chances to go get balls. When they do, it puts it in the back of my head like, 'He caught the last one, let's go at it again.' So I definitely like giving those guys chances, especially when I know that they'll come down with it."

With his 6-foot-4 frame, good jumping ability and 4.45 speed in the 40-yard dash, Holmes has had a knack for big plays in his short time with Oakland. Of his 40 catches, 14 have gone for at least 20 yards — the most on the Raiders the past two seasons.

"You like to have those kind of players," Sparano said. "The catches that he's made since he's been here have been those kinds of catches, contested catches, down the field, ball is in the air and he's jumping over somebody, he's making the really hard catch. So, that's been good to see and it's a comfort for the quarterback when he feels like he can throw it that way and that guy is going to come down with it."

GABE JACKSON

BAY AREA NEWS GROUP (OAKLAND TRIBUNE, CC TIMES, SJ MERCURY NEWS)

Gabe Jackson brings a "mean streak" to field

By Jerry McDonald
December 18, 2014

ALAMEDA -- Don't be fooled by Gabe Jackson's cherubic face and easy smile.

The Raiders rookie left guard undergoes a game-day transformation and becomes a 6-foot-3, 336-pound wrecking ball. And an angry one at that.

"I don't know how to explain it other than when I line up against someone it's like they're trying to take something away from me," Jackson said Wednesday. "It's a weird feeling -- like I'm being threatened."

While the Raiders face an uncertain future in terms of management, coaching staff and roster makeup, Jackson joins linebacker Khalil Mack and quarterback Derek Carr as plug-in-and-play rookies who should be cornerstones of the organization long after much of the 2014 team has been broken up.

Jackson and the Raiders host the Buffalo Bills on Sunday at O.co Coliseum at 1:25 p.m.

A third-round draft pick out of Mississippi State, Jackson has played in 11 games with 10 starts, missing three games with a knee injury. He returned to the starting lineup in a 24-13 win over the 49ers and using his college history as a guide, will be difficult to dislodge.

Jackson wore knee braces throughout his college career at Mississippi State and started all 52 games in four seasons. He discarded them after being drafted by the Raiders, hoping for increased agility.

The knee braces came back after he tweaked a knee against Seattle on Nov. 2.

"I'm not going back on the field without them, practice or a game," Jackson said. "Once I play my last game, that's when I'll stop wearing them. I thought they restricted my movement, but I'm not a 4.3 (in the 40-yard dash) guy. I'd rather wear them and know I'll be there and dependable for my teammates."

During the draft process, Raiders offensive line assistant and Mississippi State alum Justin Griffith had the goods on Jackson and relayed them to Tony Sparano -- then the offensive line coach and now interim head coach -- and the scouting department.

"When he pulls and does all the things he does in line, you can see he's a pretty nasty kid," Sparano said. "When you meet him, it's like you've got this complete other guy. But he can really play tough and nasty."

Raiders defensive tackle Antonio Smith, who played for the Arizona Cardinals starting in 2004, compares Jackson to a difficult opponent now in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

"He's not just big. He's an athletic kid," Smith said. "But most of all, he's aggressive. He's strong as an ox, and he's got a punch that reminds me of Larry Allen's punch. If he catches you with it, you have to readjust your whole rush scheme."

When the Raiders beat the 49ers, left tackle Donald Penn said after the game that Aldon Smith was "scared" to take an inside rush because of Jackson's presence.

Jackson said he doesn't strike with the same ferocity against teammates in practice, but Antonio Smith said, "He's definitely got a mean streak. Even in practice he'll try and load up and punch you hard. But in games, I've just seen him outright maul people and finish them to the ground."

As part of a rookie class that includes Mack, Carr, defensive tackle Justin Ellis and cornerback TJ Carrie as immediate contributors, Jackson feels a responsibility to the future of the franchise -- even if he is not sure what form that will take.

"Coach Sparano always says if you can't control it, don't worry about it," Jackson said. "Whatever happens is going to happen, and I just look forward to going on and contributing to the team."

Raiders kicker Sebastian Janikowski works to improve
By Scott Ostler
July 20, 2014

The Raiders might be an improved team in 2014 - they're certainly due for an uptick - but it seems unlikely that they will blow out a lot of opponents.

So as training camp looms, forget about the quarterback situation, forget about all the new players. How's Seabass doing?

Well, kicker Sebastian Janikowski looks good and he says he's ready to rip. I caught up with him at Lake Tahoe, where he was playing in the American Century Championship.

His golf game could use some polish (it's already got plenty of Polish). Janikowski finished 47th in the field of 86 actors, athletes and assorted famous folk.

Because he's a big, powerful man who kicks footballs a mile, people expect Janikowski to hit golf balls straight and long.

"Yeah, that's not going to happen," said the man who has kicked a 63-yard field goal and once attempted a 76-yarder. Janikowski doesn't even use a driver. On the long holes he hits a three-hybrid, whatever that is.

Fortunately for the Raiders, Janikowski is still more serious about his kicking than he is about his golf. He said he normally stays home in Florida until it's time for training camp, but this year he came West two months early to work with long snapper John Condo and holder (and punter) Marquette King.

When Janikowski's effectiveness fell off dramatically last season, head coach Dennis Allen kept saying it was an 11-man problem. Yeah, not really.

It was more like a Janikowski and King problem. After 13 seasons of kicking out of the hold of his good pal Shane Lechler, who went to Houston as a free agent, Janikowski was breaking in a rookie holder.

When Janikowski missed two field-goal tries in a four-point loss to Tennessee, he indicated to sideline reporter Lincoln Kennedy that King's hold was the problem.

It was a momentary lapse by Janikowski, normally not a finger pointer. After that, he took great pains to accept blame for his low percentage (70, down from 91.2 the previous season) and all those misses (nine, up from three in '12).

"I'm not finishing," Janikowski would say. Or, "I just pushed it," or, "I'm too wide" with his step.

There's no question that the three-man team had some rough moments, and Janikowski's offseason work with Condo and King is an indication that they know what we know.

"With Shane, we knew each other so well, that's a trust issue right there," Janikowski said. "He knew if I'm pushing the ball, he would tilt the ball in the different direction. So now I'm working with Marquette, and it's improving a lot."

It has to. The Raiders can't afford another 21-for-30 season from their kicker. Not acceptable, especially for the highest-paid leg in the game, and someone who has done this for 14 seasons.

Advanced age has been ruled out as a factor in last year's slump. Janikowski is 36, but says he compensates by working harder, doing more running and stretching, more work on weights on the stationary bike, and lots and lots of kicking.

"I don't think I've lost any distance," he said. "The power has always been there. My final step is so powerful, I've always had the power, since high school. ... I feel that I'm as strong as I was eight, 10 years ago."

He said he's also more stable, as in more mature. As a young player, Janikowski had a few scrapes with the authorities, was known to party a bit. Now, he's a team leader. Said he tries to lead by example, doing his work, getting to meetings early. It wasn't always that way.

"It's like (I'm telling younger teammates), 'Don't make the same mistakes I did,' " he said, "because obviously everybody knows, I made some mistakes."

He said when he was a young player, then-quarterback Rich Gannon pulled him aside and let him know he was falling short of Gannon's only acceptable level: perfection.

What was Gannon's exact message?

"We agreed to keep it private," Janikowski said with a smile. "It wasn't nice."

Janikowski is married; he and his wife have twin girls, 22 months old. That cuts into your golf time.

"But in my life, they cut in in a good way," he said. "I needed that. ... I've changed over the years. I'm more stable, fatherhood, work and stuff like that. Everybody goes through a process. You learn from it. What can I say?"

Janikowski said he appreciates his job more than he ever did, and sees no reason he can't kick effectively for another decade or more.

But to get that far, he'll have to get to get through this season. A big test, right?

JAMES JONES

Raiders' James Jones: Once-homeless receiver returns home to give back
By Daniel Brown
August 8, 2014

SAN JOSE -- Judy Vargas was among the first defenders to cover James Jones. It did not go well.

The longtime worker at a San Jose homeless shelter used to chase the future NFL receiver around the corridors when play time was over. "That was me," Jones said, "always trying to run the other way when someone said, 'Come here.' She was one of the main people I was running from."

Vargas has it easier these days. Jones is back at the shelter, having made it clear he's never going away.

Jones signed a three-year, $11.3 million contract with the Raiders during the offseason. And though he'd always kept a connection to this shelter and to others who helped him escape the poverty of his youth, he had done so from afar. The former San Jose State star spent the first seven seasons of his NFL career with the Green Bay Packers.

The Raiders, of course, signed him not for his giving but for his receiving. Jones is coming off career highs in catches (59) and yards (817), despite playing through nagging injuries last season. A year before that, he led the NFL with 14 touchdown catches.

Jones, 30, has spent training camp in Napa angling for a spot on a depth chart that also includes Rod Streater, Andre Holmes, Greg Little and Denarius Moore.

On the night before camp opened, shortly after 5 p.m. on a Tuesday evening in July, the San Jose native went home -- or at least as close as he could get. The San Jose Family Homeless Shelter, where Jones and his mother, Janet, once spent several months has relocated down the road to here, on North King Road.

In anticipation of Jones' arrival, the cafeteria is speckled with residents wearing Raiders gear. Jones and his family, including his mother, spend the evening dishing out chicken, ribs, baked beans, cornbread, macaroni and cheese, salad and banana pudding catered by Famous Dave's Bar-B-Que. Jones wears plastic gloves and an apron to shield himself from the sauce.

People come back for seconds, which is the highlight of Jones' night. One of the things he remembers most about being homeless is that the food could be lousy.

"I've been in their shoes, where a lot of the meals daily are not that good. A lot of the meals still leave you hungry," he said. "(Tonight) you see the little kids coming back for seconds with a smile on their faces. One kid came up and said, 'This is real cornbread. The cornbread is so good.' That's why we come."

Vargas, in her 19th year on the staff, dines at a corner table. She is asked what it means to have Jones back, this time as an honorary co-worker. "I think he means inspiration," she said. "I think he means success. I think he means that if he can do it, then it's up them to succeed also."

Vargas' eyes scan the room.

"This can be just a pit stop," she said.

A few weeks earlier, Jones had given the residents food for thought. He gave a talk about his own life story, and how he had changed the plot line. Jones pulled himself up from his bootstraps and eventually strapped on cleats at the Super Bowl.

"He believes in hand up, not a handout," said his wife, Tamika, who met Jones while they were both students at San Jose State. "So anybody who can help them get on their feet, that's what he's interested in. It's not a sad time. It's a joyous time. It's a time to say, 'I know you're here, but this isn't the end.'"

Jones lived in and out of shelters from ages 8 to 14. His father, also named James, wasn't in the picture at that time. His mother, Janet, took James and his sister Desiree to a friend or relative's place on some nights and cheap hotels on others. When there was no money left, they went to homeless shelters like this one.

Jones wound up going to seven elementary schools. Packing never took long. His only two prized possessions were a backpack and a basketball.

"The worst part about being homeless is not knowing what your next step is, not knowing where you're going to lay your head next," he said, shortly after serving up the last plate of the night. "You only get a certain amount of time you can stay here. And once those three months are up, that's the scary time. Because now where are you going to go?"

Jones' life stabilized when he reached high school. He was 15 when he decided he could leave his mother's side and went to live with his paternal grandmother, Bernice Calhoun, who ran a strict home. Janet Jones, who had struggled to hold down employment, found a job and an apartment and came to all of James' games.

Jones thrived at Gunderson High, averaging 18.2 points on the basketball court, jumping 6 feet, 8 inches in the high jump during track season and starring as a quarterback, receiver and safety on the football team.

When he got to San Jose State, he and Tamika found each other through mutual friends. But it took many years before his future wife fully understood about his life to that point.

"Believe it or not, no. A lot of his friends from high school, and even in middle school, never knew he was homeless," Tamika said. "If somebody wanted to go to his house to play. He would just say, 'Oh, no. Not today. My mom said I can't have company.'"

Tamika found out many of the gritty details only after the Packers selected Jones in the third round of the 2007 draft. News stories detailed his odyssey of homelessness, and with each one Jones slowly felt more comfortable about opening up.

These days, Jones wants everyone to know his tale, especially those who are in his shoes. He started his own foundation, Love Jones 4 Kids, and became so active in the Green Bay charity scene that "I think the whole community cried when he left," said Mary Deckert, a board member of the Freedom House Family Live Advancement Center in Green Bay.

"Not just because he was a good football player, even if the was that, too, but just because he was a great guy. He was always humbled and never forgot where he came from."

Deckert recalled how Jones would help with annual community service announcements, pitch in with fundraising and stop by in person. He said that more than once he made friendships with the residents that continued long after he left.

"For him to come to the shelter and look somebody in the eye, somebody who feels totally worthless because they can't take care of their family, and say, "You can turn this around" -- that means something to them," Deckert said. "If I say that, they just say, 'Yeah, yeah, yeah.'

"What he does, it's priceless. You can't quantify the value of that to somebody in need."

Jones said he is continuing his connection to his Green Bay charities, even from his new East Bay address. He doesn't want to leave them in the lurch. But he concedes that it's extra special to be doing his charity work from the Bay Area.

"It's changed because I'm really giving back to my town, to my people," he said.

Desiree Lopez, who fled domestic violence to live in the shelter, was among those enjoying the Jones dinner. Lopez and her 9-month-old son were both wearing Raiders gear. "For someone like that to do something like this is just amazing to me," she said. "You don't see too many famous people coming and giving back."

She said she recently found a permanent home in Nevada and hopes to become a registered nurse.

Jones said that he still gets emotional on nights like this when he reflects on all he's been through. He even remembered the way Judy Vargas used to chase him around and tried to wrap him up, just like NFL defensive backs do these days.

"She wasn't as good as they are now," Jones said, "but she definitely got me ready."

MARQUETTE KING

By Scott Bair
December 13, 2014

KANSAS CITY, Mo. -– Marquette King has an extremely powerful leg. The Raiders punter can send volleys as far as anyone, a talent on full display last season. The young talent was unmatched in distance during his first season as starter, with the NFL's highest gross punt average.

If only that were the ultimate goal.

"Think about it in golf terms," special teams coach Bobby April said. "Guys who win long-drive contests aren't on tour. They're at trade shows and exhibitions because all they do is grip it and rip it. The guys on tour, winning tournaments, have a combination of power and accuracy."

The analogy turned on a light bulb. It also slightly altered his outlook. Take away the opposing punt returner, at all costs. King developed a series of punts designed to increase hang time, pin an opponent in a corner or give proper spin to a punt designed to pin an someone deep.

"The goal is to put our defense in the best possible position," King said. "You do that by taking the ball out of the returners hands. At first, it was strange wrapping my head around punting shallow sometimes but, once I started seeing the results, I thought, 'okay, this is why you wanted me to do these different things.'"

The results have been impressive. His gross punt average is down nearly 3.5 yards, but his net average is up because opponents don't return many punts. King has punted 83 times, with 31 returns.

That will be particularly important on Sunday in Kansas City, against a Chiefs team ranked No. 6 in punt return average.

He has a 41.2-yard net punt average, a total that would rank equal-second in Raiders history, quite an accomplishment with Ray Guy and Shane Lechler lining the record book.

He's in line for an all-time mark the Raiders would rather he didn't get. An average workload puts him on pace to set the franchise record for total punts, a sign of significant offensive struggle.

King's still in line for positive marks despite such a high volume. He has 26 punts inside the opposing 20-yard line, which ranks equal-second in the NFL. There's nobody better staying out of the end zone. He has just two touchbacks this year.

"He's acclimated himself well to doing what's best for the defensive football team," April said. "He is the best defensive weapon we have. He can push it farther away from the end zone than anybody on a defensive play. He's been great at that. His work ethic, character and professionalism are off the charts. He's really been able to refine his punts near the middle of the field. He was okay, but he didn't have much touch on those a year ago. Now he does. He's done a really good job pinning people deep."

While he likes to let one rip when able, King takes particular pride in dropping unreturnable punts deep in anymore. He's been excellent in that effort, but believes he can do better.

"I want to improve in every area," King said. "That net average can certainly go higher, and I don't want inside the 20 to be the only standard. I want to pin people inside the 15-yard line, inside the 10. My confidence has grown, but I know that there's plenty of room to get better."

KHALIL MACK

BAY AREA NEWS GROUP (OAKLAND TRIBUNE, CC TIMES, SJ MERCURY NEWS)

Raiders' Khalil Mack a dream, former coaches say

By Jerry McDonald
May 16, 2014

University at Buffalo defensive coordinator Lou Tepper cringed when a local police officer told him he'd had an encounter with one of his players a couple months back.

"You hear that, you start to twitch a little bit," Tepper said.

Dennis Gilbert, a cop who is also the football coach at St. Joe's High in Buffalo, recognized Khalil Mack immediately. Mack approached Gilbert holding a small white purse he'd found in a snow bank.

"He wanted to know if we could find the owner," Gilbert said.

A fellow officer opened the purse to find an iPhone, credit cards, cash and jewelry. A short time later, the purse and its contents were returned to the grateful owner who had been retracing her steps a block away, frantic and losing hope for its return.

"You always hear the stories about kids who do the wrong things," Gilbert said. "Here's a good kid, doing the right thing, making the right decisions."

Even with the background checks necessitated for a top-10 pick, the Raiders hadn't heard of Mack's act of integrity. Even without it, they were convinced Mack was worthy of being the face of their defense for the next decade in making him the fifth pick of the NFL draft.

The Raiders rookie draft class, plus undrafted free agents and some players on a tryout basis, convened at the club's rookie camp starting Friday. Mack reportedly signed his rookie deal Thursday and was ready to go.

Mack, according to those who know him best, is described as earnest and hardworking, driven to be the best. It's only between the white lines where he shows an edge.

DIFFERENT MAN ON FIELD

"Off the field, he's the nicest, most humble, sweetest kid you could ever meet in your life," said Waides Ashmon, Mack's coach at Westwood High in Port St. Lucie, Florida. "On the field, he plays mad, with a chip on his shoulder, and that's exciting to watch."

Ashmon had been at Westwood for a month when an assistant told him about Mack, a junior basketball player who had recovered from a torn patellar tendon and hadn't played football since his freshman year.

"In the spring, my coach came into my classroom, picked me out of class and I have been playing football ever since," Mack said.

As the two stood in the hallway, Ashmon saw a 6-foot-1, 215-pound physical specimen "with the muscles coming through his clothes" and asked Mack, "What do I need to do to get you on the football field?"

"He said, 'Coach, I would love to play. You've just got to talk with my dad,' " Ashmon said.

Ashmon pulled out his cell phone on the spot and made his pitch to Sandy Mack.

"I've never done this before, but I told him if you allow Khalil to come play for me, I promise he will go to college for free," Ashmon said.

Mack led Westwood with 140 tackles on a 10-2 team, but with only one year of varsity football in a talent-laden state, only Liberty University of Lynchburg, Virginia, was interested. However, when a Liberty assistant accepted a job at Buffalo, it helped land Mack a full scholarship.

"He just got overlooked," Ashmon said. "Coaches would come in and say he looks the part, but they didn't have enough film on him. I'd tell them, I don't care what y'all say, the kid's going to be a first-round draft pick in five years."

Tepper, the Buffalo defensive coordinator since 2012, has coached at nine schools since 1967 and put 20 linebackers on NFL rosters. At Illinois in 1996, when Tepper was the head coach, the Illini had linebackers Kevin Hardy and Simeon Rice taken with the Nos. 2 and 3 selections in the NFL draft.

"I've only had a few players who were what I call complete linebackers, that could play anywhere in a 3-4 or a 4-3 defense," Tepper said. "Oakland is getting someone with the talent to be a star at any of those positions."

'HE KNOWS HOW TO WORK'

Now 6-2, 251, Mack's ability to range sideline-to-sideline, rush the passer (28 1/2 career sacks) and strip the ball (16 forced fumbles) is enhanced by a will to prepare as well as to win.

"When he gets a tip sheet every day, he's got a highlighter out and works on it," Tepper said. "He knows how to work. He learns from written material, he learns from briefing material, he learns from walking through, and when the ball is snapped he'll play fast."

Mack finds motivation from perceived slights. He was so insulted by an EA sports video game that gave him a mediocre ranking of 46 that he made it his uniform number at Buffalo.

When an Ohio State assistant coach assessed Mack as "just a guy" going into the 2014 season opener, Tepper called Mack "JAG" all week. Mack responded with 2 1/2 sacks, a 45-yard interception return and nine tackles against the Buckeyes.

Buffalo head coach Jeff Quinn said Mack's drive reminds him of Joe Staley, the 49ers tackle whom he coached at Eastern Michigan.

"He's as gifted a player as I've ever coached," Quinn said of Mack. "He lives it and loves it."

Raiders general manager Reggie McKenzie said Mack "plays the game the way it's supposed to be played. He plays hard, he plays physical, he goes from snap to whistle. You might call it a chip on his shoulder, or you can just call it being a football player."

Mack's mother, Yolanda, an elementary school teacher, said of her son, "We all have something where we're a '10.' Khalil was always athletic, always competitive in that way. Even at 5 he was doing push-ups. He had these muscles."

Outgoing and team oriented, Mack entertained Buffalo teammates occasionally by singing and playing the guitar. His personality is in stark contrast to the last linebacker the Raiders took in the first round, the aloof and perpetually disinterested Rolando McClain at No. 8 in 2010.

"He'll probably kill me for telling this story, but we were up in his hotel room that night, he strips off his shirt, and he's jumping around, saying, 'Let's play right now!,' " Ashmon said.

THE BUFFALO NEWS

While others hit rookie wall, Raiders' Khalil Mack plows ahead

By Tim Graham
December 18, 2014

ALAMEDA, Calif. – The rookie wall exists. Three weeks ago, Buffalo Bills coach Doug Marrone expressed concern that first-round draft pick Sammy Watkins could've thudded against the wall. Watkins eventually admitted he probably did throughout November.

On the opposite side of the country, another rookie connected to Western New York isn't sure what the rookie wall looks like, feels like or whether it even exists.

Oakland Raiders linebacker Khalil Mack continues to pick up speed as the season nears a conclusion.

"He's a freak of nature," said Raiders defensive tackle Antonio Smith, a 10-year veteran. "There's no wall for him. He don't get fatigued. He's still strong as an ox.

"This time of year, most guys are protecting themselves. Not him. He's all dawg. He's a young pup, but he's all dawg."

Mack, this year's fifth overall draft choice, has done the University at Buffalo proud. And while the Raiders have infamously botched their share of first-round picks over the years, they sure seem to have gotten this one right.

“When you get some of these young players,” coach Tony Sparano said Thursday at the Raiders’ facility, “your question’s always ‘Are they built to last? Can they handle what happens week in and week out in this league?’

“I think this guy we have is built to last. He takes care of his body. He goes a million miles an hour. He only knows how to practice one way, and that’s the way he plays the game.”

On the 57th, 58th and 59th plays – the Chiefs’ final possession – Mack stopped running back Knile Davis for 2 yards and 1 yard. Mack was in pass coverage for a third-down incompletion that forced an unsuccessful field-goal attempt.

“I mean, it was like he just started the game,” Sparano said. “This guy made three plays right in a row that were outstanding.

He speaks barely above a whisper and anxiously tugs at his sweatshirt zipper while talking to reporters. He answers questions succinctly and diplomatically. He doesn’t like to talk about rookie awards or the Pro Bowl.

But Mack provided a glimpse into his competitiveness when asked what it feels like to be a Mid-American Conference rookie who opposing offensive coordinators yearn to erase from the game.

“It’s a … It’s a … It’s a little frustrating,” Mack said, grinning as he looked at the locker-room floor, “because you want to get in there and let people know you’re actually in the game.

“But at the same time it’s a testament to hard work and preparation. That’s why I’m working on being the best teammate I can be.”

Mack has 77 tackles, three sacks, four pass breakups and a forced fumble.

That stat line doesn’t declare a whole lot about the type of season he’s had.

Mack has been dominant in detonating run plays. He leads all NFL defenders – that includes manimals J.J. Watt and Ndamukong Suh – with 11 tackles made at or behind the line of scrimmage against the run.

“He loves stopping the run,” Smith said. “He don’t want to be beat at nothing. It’s apparent in his game.”

Smith agreed many talented defenders succumb to the allure of sacking quarterbacks and don’t dedicate themselves to the dirty work of shutting down runners.

“I love all of it,” Mack said. “I love it when a guy tries to block you, and you just shed him down and make him look bad and then make a play in the backfield.”

Of the 378 snaps for which he has been on the field and the opponent ran, he has made the tackle 10.1 percent of the time.

“He’s almost unblockable,” Seattle Seahawks coach Pete Carroll said, “and he’s got a great motor. He’s fast. He’s tough. He’s instinctive.”

UB’s all-time sacks leader has been an intimidating pass-rusher, too.

Pro Football Focus has charted Mack for 34 quarterback hurries, second among 4-3 outside linebackers and 10th among all defenders.

The Raiders’ coaching film review has Mack atop the club with 43 quarterback pressures, 67 disruptions and 20 quarterback hits.

“All the sudden,” Sparano said, “he’s getting two bodies thrown to him, whether it’s tight end-tackle, whether it’s a back over there, whether they turn protection and shoot two backs at him off the edge.

“Some of the challenges have been to move Khalil around a little bit and put him in different spots so they have to chase him a little bit. … That part of his growth has been really good, particularly late.”

Before playing the Raiders this month, San Francisco 49ers guard Joe Staley compared Mack to Green Bay Packers star Clay Matthews.

“But he’s also developing counter moves as the season goes along. So he’s not just a one-trick guy. He’s a big challenge.”

USA Football last week named Mack to its sixth annual All-Fundamentals Team, which honors exemplary technique that youth players should emulate for safety and performance. The other linebackers were Luke Kuechly of the Carolina Panthers and Tamba Hali of the Chiefs.

A rookie never had been selected for the honor, but there were three this year. Mack was joined by Dallas Cowboys guard Zack Martin and Arizona Cardinals kicker Chandler Catanzaro.

USA Football panelist Merrill Hoge, a former Pittsburgh Steelers fullback, said Mack had the best technique of any linebacker in the NFL.

“Mack makes himself difficult to block in the run game,” USA Football wrote in its assessment, “by establishing a good base and using explosive hands to gain separation from the blocker while maintaining a strong outside position. He is able to attack the inside or outside of an opponent to effectively split blockers and limit an opponent’s strength.”

Asked to recall a quintessential Mack moment, Smith described a sequence that lent itself more to some kind of ninja technique.

The moment occurred late against the Chiefs in Week 12, with the Raiders on the verge of their first victory after a 0-10 start.

With the Chiefs down by four points and required to throw, the Raiders’ pass-rush could tee off.

“He knocks the center out, just lays him out on the ground,” Smith said. “Then he’s in the air, jumping over a guy. Another offensive lineman comes to hit him while he’s in the air. But he knocks that other lineman out and still lands on his feet.

Mack, as usual, was subdued in his recollection of the play.

Tuck won a pair of Super Bowls with the New York Giants alongside players such as Michael Strahan, Osi Umenyiora and Jason Pierre-Paul. Smith played with Watt and Bills defensive end Mario Williams with the Houston Texans. Smith was selected for a Pro Bowl while there.

“Me and Justin Tuck were saying it when he showed up,” Smith said.

“If this kid keeps working on his game, there are going to be no limits to what he can do. No limits.”

Raiders' Darren McFadden hoping to outrun the labels
By Scott Ostler
July 30, 2014

The first week of training camp must seem to Darren McFadden like the movie "Groundhog Day." For seven years, McFadden has arrived in Napa ready to rock and roll - eager, healthy and seemingly destined to take his place as one of football's elite running backs.

Then stuff happens. Injuries. Coaches fired. Scheme changes and raggedy surrounding talent, rendering McFadden's skills null and void. Flashes of brilliance, but mostly frustration and disappointment.

Well, this time could be different. Stop rolling your eyes, Debbie Downer fans.

It's possible that this is the season it all will come together for McFadden, and the Raiders.

If you're skeptical, you're not alone. McFadden said other teams showed interest in signing him, but he came back to the Raiders for a bargain-basement $1.65 million contract, only $100,000 guaranteed.

And unlike past seasons, when the Raiders counted on McFadden to be their bell cow (to borrow a 49ers term), he's merely in the mix this time. The Raiders signed Maurice Jones-Drew to compete for the starting job. Fullback Marcel Reece dropped 17 pounds in the offseason.

It's a different scene for McFadden, for so long the golden guy. Now he's being asked to return kickoffs, which he hasn't done since college. Until now, he was too valuable, and maybe too fragile, for such risky duty.

It appears that the change of status has not dented McFadden's optimism and enthusiasm. He's never been a grumbler or slacker, and he seems to be attacking his new situation with the same old zest.

"I feel great," McFadden said after Wednesday's practice. "I feel like a rookie coming in. Training camp is just like being a rookie all over again. You're excited being out there."

"It's a new beginning," McFadden said, "but at the same time, I feel like it's all or nothing, so I'm going to have to go out there and perform and stay healthy on the field."

It can be done. Lest we paint his career to date as a total failure, remember the shining 2010 season. McFadden missed three games but still gained 1,157 yards on 5.2 per carry, flashing speed and power. He made people miss. He was dangerous.

That was what the Raiders had in mind when they drafted him No. 4 overall in 2008 from Arkansas. Was 2010 an aberration, or proof that McFadden can produce fireworks if you block for him properly and he's healthy?

The Raiders might be crazy to keep trying to tap McFadden's talent, but the temptation is strong. In his second NFL game, against the Chiefs, McFadden carried 21 times for 164 yards.

Then he injured a toe and missed three games, and when he returned, Tom Cable had replaced Lane Kiffin as head coach. Cable pretty much iced McFadden.

It's not all about coaching. Two seasons ago, some blamed McFadden's average of 3.3 yards on Dennis Allen's zone-blocking scheme. Last season, no more zone, but another season of 3.3 yards per carry.

If McFadden doesn't realize his potential this season, it won't be because he's damaged goods. He said he's 100 percent healthy and still jet quick.

"I'm going to run a 4.3 'til I'm 50," McFadden said. "As far as the exact (40-yard dash) time, I'm still a 4.3 guy. I don't feel that I've lost a step at all."

In six seasons, he has missed an average of almost five games per season to injuries. Seriously, that could be a good thing.

"I'm just now getting ready to turn 27," McFadden said, "so I feel like I still have a lot of football in me. I guess that's one of the bright sides of me being injured, you know? Less games took a lot of wear and tear off my body, so I still have a lot of years of football left in me."

Maybe. It would be great for the Raiders if it works out that way. McFadden would be the late Al Davis' last contribution.

For McFadden, this shouldn't be about money. He earned $60 million on his first contract. He probably could walk away from the game with his head up, write off the hard times to circumstances beyond his control.

But he has unfinished business, personally and with the Raiders.

"I had other offers," McFadden said, "but I wanted to come back here and be a part of Raider Nation. We've had some rough years here; I wanted to come here and be part of the turnaround."

LATAVIUS MURRAY

Thompson: Raiders' Murray gets his chance
By Marcus Thompson II
December 13, 2014

Patience is a good trait for a running back to have. And the Raiders' Latavius Murray, who waited 26 games for a real shot, has the virtue in spades.

These last three games, starting with Sunday's matchup at Kansas City, is the opportunity Murray so patiently anticipated. Now is the time for another handy running back trait: explosiveness.

"I knew it was a process," said Murray, who spent his rookie year on injured reserve. "Everything happens for a reason. Everything happens when it's supposed to. My mom always told me God has a plan."

Murray, the second year back from Central Florida, has a shot to be something for the Raiders. That could be a Pro Bowl back who puts up 1,500 yards. Or it could be a formidable short-yardage, red zone guy to supplement the featured guy. He will go a long way toward determining his role over the close of this season. But Murray should be in the plans moving forward.

It's a small sample size from which to glean -- only 37 carries. But Murray has some seductive tools that make him worthy of much more consideration. Barring a meltdown over these next three games, he is a guy the Raiders should be inking in when discussing their keepers.

At 6-foot-3, 225 pounds, Murray is a big back who can bring some power to the run game. But he also has breakaway speed, which he showed with his 90-yard run in his breakout game, a 24-20 Raiders win over Kansas City on Nov. 20.

Murray's shoring up a spot is perfect for the Raiders, too. He was a sixth-round pick, someone they will have developed in house. Production from that deep in the draft is always a bonus.

Either way, Murray adds to the promise of the Raiders' future. They have the quarterback in Derek Carr and the fullback in Marcel Reece. After mistakenly moving on from Rashad Jennings last offseason, the Raiders wound up with a running back of the future anyway.

"It's kind of surreal," Murray said of the widespread adulation. "I've put in a lot of work, and to see it start paying off, it's surreal."

The Raiders still need to go get a runner next year, as two is preferred these days. But they aren't as thirsty at the position. If they land someone better than Murray in free agency, the Raiders' weakness could become a real strength.

The hard part to judge about Murray is whether he looks really good because the two ahead of him -- Darren McFadden and Maurice Jones-Drew -- have looked so bad.

They are last in the NFL in rushing yards (955), the only team yet to crack 1,000. It's a big reason the Raiders are 31st in points scored.

The veteran approach, which was supposed to give the Raiders experience and versatility, has softened the run game.

McFadden has proved serviceable to an extent. He can still hit a hole if it's there. But he and Jones-Drew lack speed and physicality.

The two have combined for 15 broken tackles and totaled three runs of 15 yards or more (all by McFadden), per stats giant Pro Football Focus.

By comparison, Seattle's Marshawn Lynch leads the NFL with 68 broken tackles and also has 15 runs of at least 15 yards.

Murray is a breath of fresh air in that regard. He doesn't go down on first touch. And the first 10 games of the season, when he was the third-string back who was lucky to get a touch, Murray used his time wisely.

It took 11 weeks to get him touches because he had to improve in practice, if you believe interim coach Tony Sparano. But Murray said he feels the growth.

"It's just understanding everything," Murray said. "Obviously, the installations are at an all-time high in the NFL. Knowing the protections, knowing your assignments, knowing what you're supposed to do. It helps me go out there and play faster."

Now would be a good time to put it together. Sunday, he gets to face one of the worst run defenses in the league in the Chiefs, the victims of his breakout performance in the Raiders' first win of the season.

Kansas City ranks 31st in rushing yards allowed per game (136.8) and 32nd in yards per rush allowed (4.9).

If Murray really wants to send a message, to explode into the Raiders' core, he could show up big against Buffalo and Denver, two of the better run stoppers in the league. This chance is exactly the opportunity for which Murray has been biding time.

"I know if I run the way I can run," Murray said, casually scratching his mohawk, "I know I'll be fine."

MYCHAL RIVERA

Oakland Raiders Mychal Rivera setting his sights high

By Jerry McDonald
August 2, 2014

After finishing fifth in receptions among all NFL rookie tight ends last season, the last thing on the mind of the Raiders' Mychal Rivera was to enjoy the fruits of his labors.

"I really looked in the mirror at myself," Rivera said Saturday after the Raiders completed a controlled scrimmage. "I knew I could do a lot better than I did last year, even though people were surprised at what I did. I have high expectations of myself."

In his second year out of Tennessee, Rivera has his sights on a won-loss record far better than 4-12, and significantly better statistics than 38 catches for 407 yards and four touchdowns.

One of the highlights Saturday was the sight of Rivera splitting a seam between veteran cornerbacks Tarell Brown and Carlos Rogers and hauling in a pass inside the 5-yard line from second-string quarterback Derek Carr.

"One of the guys that has shown the most improvement from a year ago is Mike Rivera," offensive coordinator Greg Olson said. "He looks more athletic. He's stronger. He's more confident. I said to him the other day and we said it in our meeting, there's a little bit of swagger to him this season."

At 6-foot-3 245 pounds, Rivera is a tight end in name only. He can line up in the backfield, split out wide and go in motion. Only occasionally does he line up as a conventional tight end.

"I tell people all the time I play four or five different positions," Rivera said. "I go through the playbook as an offensive lineman, I go through the playbook as a receiver and as a fullback," Rivera said. "Then you've got to look at the quarterback's eyes and see how he's going to play it. You've got to stay in your playbook all the time."

A sixth-round draft pick, Rivera displayed a knack for finding open areas almost immediately. Some of it is from preparation, most of it from instinct.

"I think he does an outstanding job with his feel in the passing game," Raiders coach Dennis Allen said. "He's able to make plays in a contested environment. Sometimes, with limited separation, he's still able to come out and make the play."

Rivera said his "swagger" comes from an offseason of hard work as well as self-confidence.

"I worked out every day, I kept my mind on football every day," Rivera said. "I used the 4-12 record as a motivating factor. I want to win in this league, and I want to be one of the best tight ends in this league. I see that as attainable. I can get that."

BRANDIAN ROSS

Training-camp castoffs Raiders safeties Asante, Ross contribute after having been cut
By Vic Tafur
November 29, 2014

For every player who has a long career in the NFL, there are three or four dozen who get lost in the final cuts at the end of training camp. Their dreams end in the blink of an eye, are filed under transactions and are documented in the small print in the back pages of the sports section.

For every Charles Woodson, in his 17th year, there are players like Larry Asante andBrandian Ross, who are cut and asked to turn in their playbooks in late August. But in this case, safeties Asante and Ross not only later resurfaced but are now making plays for the Raiders.

“Those two guys are hungry,” Woodson said. “I look at Larry, he was, I believe, at home before they called him back. This guy will run through a brick wall, literally.”

Woodson said he often wants to grab Asante’s jersey and tell him to slow down — at practice.

“Charles was just telling me that I don’t care about my own body,” Asante said, laughing. “If I see a target, I am going to go get it. Play full speed and run through everything.”

Asante and Ross helped slow down the Chiefs during the Raiders’ first win Nov. 20. Asante had seven tackles, two of which were among the biggest plays of the game as he stopped Jamaal Charles just before the running back was breaking into the open field.

Ross, who played a lot of slot cornerback, provided good pass coverage, made five tackles and broke up a pass.

Both players will also help out on special teams again Sunday against the Rams.

Ross said he and Asante didn’t talk after the Raiders cut them, but they have spoken a lot since Asante was re-signed Oct. 29 (Ross was claimed off waivers from the Dolphins on Sept. 24).

“We talk about ways to make plays,” Ross said. “I want the ball. He wants someone’s head on a platter. I say, 'More power to you. I am done with that part of my life after that fine ($22,000 for a high hit against the Browns last month).’”

Ross, 25, started 11 games for the Raiders last year after injuries to Tyvon Branch andUsama Young. But he was rated the worst defensive back in the NFL by Pro Football Focus. He had has no problem admitting that he struggled.

“I am more comfortable this season,” Ross said. “Also, safeties coach Marcus Robertsonhas been a big help for me. He’s opened my eyes to different things and taught me so much. He has made the game so much easier for me.

Ross’ knowledge and versatility — besides safety and cornerback, he also studies what other players’ responsibilities are on a play — were reasons he remained confident even after being cut in August.

“I was good,” he said. “It’s part of the game. I knew I played well in the preseason, and there were 31 other teams that might need me.”

Asante, on the other hand, was not doing well after the Raiders cut him and he headed back to his home in Atlanta.

“It was one of the toughest times of my life,” Asante said. “Waking up six days a week at 5:30 to go train ... by myself. And waiting for that phone call.”

Asante actually did get two calls or so a week during his five weeks away — pep talks from Robertson.

“I knew the (roster) numbers were going to be difficult in camp, but he was a guy that I thought had the opportunity to be a good NFL player,” Robertson said. “We had to get rid of him, but I just wanted to stay on top of him in case something happened.”

When Branch and Young went down again this season, Robertson and defensive coordinator Jason Tarver knew they wanted to bring back Ross and Asante.

“They’re tough and smart, were familiar with the system, and football is important to them,” Robertson said.

The 6-foot, 210-pound Asante was nicknamed “The Assassin” in college at Nebraska. He said his stops with the Bucs (12 games in 2010 and ’11) and the Colts (five games in 2013) helped him learn to not always go for the kill.

“You have to be patient and play with your eyes,” Asante said. “I think that’s the main difference with both Brandian and myself this year. You can’t always come up and try and make a big hit. You have to do your job and wait until you see the opportunity before you’re aggressive.

Interim head coach Tony Sparano admits Asante and Ross have been life-savers as the defense has improved the past month, and the Raiders finally won a game.

“I can’t say enough good things about Larry because ... three weeks ago he was like on the street,” Sparano said. “He brings a little bit of physicalness. ...

“Brandian Ross has been outstanding. The guy is really competing hard and he’s playing this thing like 'Every day is my last day.’ It’s the way we should all be approaching it.”

ANTONIO SMITH

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

New sack specialist Antonio Smith's Ninja Assassin persona wins fans
By Vic Tafur
September 13, 2014

The Ninja Assassin may be confused for a second on Sunday afternoon.

Friend has become foe, and there will be a lot of people — in the stands — wearing masks at O.co Coliseum. But once he gets his bearings, Raiders fans can hope to see what the Ninja Assassin has been training for his whole life:

"I am looking forward to bringing him out," Raiders defensive tackle Antonio Smith said of his Ninja Assassin alter ego. "He and his defensive brothers can do what they were bred to do."

Making his home debut for Oakland, Smith will take off his pregame mask and go against his old Texans teammates of the past five years. He is looking forward to it.

"All masters always worry about how the progress of their young Padawans is doing," Smith said. "I'm looking forward to see how they've reached masterhood since I left them."

Smith had 18½ sacks the past three seasons. Just as he helped all-world defensive end J.J. Watt in Houston, Smith is occupying offensive linemen inside to help free up pass rushersJustin Tuck, Khalil Mack and LaMarr Woodley on the outside for Oakland.

"Antonio Smith brings a presence to the defense," defensive coordinator Jason Tarversaid. "He plays every play as hard as he can. He had a good game (last week). He had tackles for loss. He pushed the pocket. He did well. I'm very glad he's here."

"He is as quick as anybody coming off that ball," Woodson said.

The Ninja Assassin didn't come to his mastery of unorthodox arts of war willy-nilly. He put in a lot of blood, sweat and tears, being cut twice by the Arizona Cardinals in 2004 and 2005 and playing for the Hamburg Sea Devils in NFL Europe in the spring of 2005.

"I thought it was a punishment, going over there, but the Cardinals told me it was so I could get reps at being the No.1 guy. … I was naive back then," Smith said. "It ended up being one of the best experiences that I had, because it built up the character that I needed in this game."

Four or five defensive linemen went down — “I’m not lying, it took four or five,” he said — before Smith got his chance for Arizona. The first two sacks of his career came in a Dec. 18, 2005, game at Houston — against David Carr, Raiders quarterback Derek Carr’s brother — and Smith never looked back.

He started in the Super Bowl for the Cardinals in 2008 and then signed a five-year, $35million deal with the Texans. It was with Houston that he and teammate Mario Williams came up with the Ninja Assassin Slash of Death sack dance. After sacking the quarterback, Smith shows off his sword work and then fires off some ninja stars … just in case.

Smith studied tae kwon do for seven years as a kid in northwest Oklahoma City, because he couldn’t play football. His mom wouldn’t let him.

“My mom kept me on lockdown,” Smith said. “I was a troubled child. She kept me in the house and said I couldn’t play football.”

Smith has also studied some Wing Chun and judo on his journey. Which brings him to the Coliseum on Sunday for what the 0-1 Raiders hope is a winning showcase of ninjitsu.

“I can’t wait to see his celebration after a sack,” Woodson said. “I love having that guy around. Not only can he play, but just in the locker room, he is a bright spot. He keeps everybody light.”

TONY SPARANO

BAY AREA NEWS GROUP (OAKLAND TRIBUNE, CC TIMES, SJ MERCURY NEWS)

Raiders' Sparano brings no-nonsense attitude to interim gig

By Daniel Brown
October 9, 2014

ALAMEDA -- This is Tony Sparano, OK? And this is what he stands for, all right? The Raiders' new interim head coach is so adamantly straightforward that you wind up feeling like you're losing an argument you didn't know you were having. Speaking rapidly and with what The New York Times once described as "the thick accent of a Queens cabdriver," Sparano has no desire to swerve from the obstacles that he's up against in Oakland.

This is how he responded at his first news conference this week, when asked if he needed to light a fire in the locker room in advance of Sunday's home game against the San Diego Chargers (4-1).

"Let's be completely honest, OK? I said this the other day and it didn't get written, so I'm going to say it again, OK?" Sparano said. "We were all part of the problem, every single one of us -- quite honestly, every single one of us in this building, OK? We were all part of the problem, all right?"

To the Raiders (0-4), such straight talk probably sounds like sweet music after years of meandering under Dennis Allen, who was fired after the team's lifeless 38-14 loss to the Miami Dolphins in London in Week 4.

He finished with a losing record in each of his final three seasons there, but his claim to fame is engineering one of the greatest turnarounds in NFL history. Sparano inherited a team that went 1-15 in 2007 and led it to an 11-5 finish and an AFC East title.

"It was about practicing up-tempo, not letting people slide, not letting people be satisfied," Arizona Cardinals defensive coordinator Todd Bowles, who coached with Sparano for seven seasons, recalled.

BURYING THE PAST

He started by burying a football.

That took place on the Raiders practice field in Alameda this week, when the new coach asked his players to gather around a hole that had been dug behind the goal post.

"What this ball represents and what this hole represents are the first four games of the season," he said. "This ball, to me, goes in the hole, OK. It's four-games' worth, all right. It goes in the hole and I'm going to put the first piece of dirt on it."

Then he offered his players the shovel.

"We're about ready to go to work," Sparano said. "Everybody understand that?"

Improving the Raiders by more than symbolic rituals will be the hard part. They've been outscored 103-51 this season.

But defensive tackle Antonio Smith said the team's vibe changed as soon as they heard Sparano's first words. Yes, the new coach has been blunt about the team's problems -- "He'll shoot it to you blood raw," Smith said -- but he's also been straight about what the Raiders are good at, such as red zone defense, and is urging players to focus on their strengths.

"I think that that's a good technique. It's a powerful Jedi mind trick that Obi-Wan Kenobi used to use," Smith said. "I think it's something this team actually needs, to believe in itself. As of yet, I haven't seen a full belief in what we can be, who we are."

Sparano, who turned 53 on Tuesday, is a native of West Haven, Connecticut. He spent his early life on football's back roads, as a four-year letterman at the University of New Haven, a Division II school, where he played center then stuck around to coach offensive linemen from 1984-87.

His first gig as an offensive coordinator was with Boston University, where his signature victory was a Division I-AA playoff triumph over a Northern Iowa team led by a star quarterback named Kurt Warner.

Boston University ran a no-huddle offense that season that averaged 465 yards and 36 points per game.

"Tony was very, very, disciplined and demanding," Robert Dougherty, the quarterback for that BU team, said in a phone interview this week. "He wanted things done right, and he didn't want excuses. ... If you can't work your ass off, you can't play for Tony. But once you understood that, guys wanted to play for him."

Dougherty, now the athletic director at Seabury Hall, a private school in Makawao, Hawaii, also got to see Sparano's lighter side. That came when the city-slicker coach made a home recruiting visit to Dougherty's farmhouse in Visalia.

The quarterback's dad played a prank by turning the family's potbellied pig loose in the house.

"I'm a city guy, so I'd never seen one before," Sparano said. "I just about jumped through the roof."

MOVING UP THE RANKS

Sparano's first NFL job was as an offensive quality control coach with the Cleveland Browns in 1999, but he was fired as part of staff house cleanings in three of his first four stops in the NFL.

But along the way, he saw how some notable coaches -- Bill Parcells, Marty Schottenheimer, Tom Coughlin -- navigated teams out of choppy waters by demanding winning habits, even during lousy seasons.

Raiders offensive lineman Kevin Boothe, who won two Super Bowl rings under Coughlin with the New York Giants, said he can see similarities.

"Things are black and white, no-nonsense. 'This is what I want and this is how it needs to be done,' " Boothe said.

What did Parcells see in Sparano to make him the rare first-time NFL coach who had never even been a coordinator in the league?

"He has own way of doing things," Parcells once said. "He's not fearful. This guy is not looking for trouble. He goes by what he sees. He's not overbearing. He picks his spots."

NO MORE EXCUSES

Sparano said the biggest thing he learned from Parcells was the mantra that, "If you don't beat yourself, you've got a chance to win the football game." And right now, he sees the Raiders defeated before they even take the field.

"There are plenty of excuses out there right now, a lot of them. I say this with all due respect: You (reporters) will have them lined up a mile long," Sparano said at his introductory news conference. "We're not going to use those excuses.

"As soon as we taste -- and we will taste -- what it feels like to win, that's how change happens."

Some of the changes are already under way. As he did in Miami, Sparano started by shaking up the routines. Players stalls were reorganized in the locker rooms. The practice schedule was changed, incorporating a faster tempo early in the week with a more dramatic taper for Thursdays and Fridays.

How will it look on game days? Expect to see a heavier dose of running backs Maurice Jones-Drew and Darren McFadden.

In his first season in Miami, Sparano created a brief stir by utilizing a wildcat offense featuring a direct snap to a running back. Sparano unleashed 93 wildcat plays that season, according to Pro Football Focus, with 88 snaps to Ronnie Brown and five to Ricky Williams.

Things ended badly in Miami after Sparano's hot start. When the 2011 season began, he was on borrowed time -- made clear when owner Stephen Ross and general manager Jeff Ireland embarked on a public courtship of Jim Harbaugh, then at Stanford, the previous offseason.

Sparano was fired after a 4-9 start, despite the support of his players. The Raiders, though, sound happy to be giving him a second chance.

"When you don't embrace any change, all you're doing is helping you to stay the same you were," Smith said. "And where we were wasn't that damn good."

Raiders, Tony Sparano seek something they never had with Dennis Allen
By Jerry McDonald
October 11, 2014

OAKLAND -- Tony Sparano can achieve in a single afternoon the kind of bottom-line credibility that eluded Dennis Allen for two-plus seasons.

Should the winless Raiders upset the San Diego Chargers on Sunday, Sparano will have beaten a team with a winning record. The last time the Raiders managed that was Nov. 27, 2011, a 25-20 victory under Hue Jackson against a 7-3 Chicago Bears team.

Nine times the Raiders under Allen played a team with a record over. 500. Nine times they lost. Some were close. Most were not.

A sold-out home crowd will be watching closely for signs of a heartbeat from an 0-4 team on a 10-game losing streak. San Diego (4-1) has won four straight and owns a convincing win over the defending Super Bowl champion Seattle Seahawks.

With quarterback Philip Rivers completing 70.2 percent of his passes with 12 touchdowns and two interceptions and the Chargers owning the NFL's third-ranked defense, no rational person is giving the Raiders much of a chance.

Since being named interim coach Sept. 30 after Allen was fired following a 38-14 loss to the Miami Dolphins in London, Sparano changed the schedule, rearranged stalls in the locker room and concentrated on what the Raiders do rather than worry about the quality of opposition.

"It's not about me," Sparano said. "The message I've given our team is that this is about us. All due respect to the opponent, they're a very good team, but we need to worry about us right now."

The self-scouting process during the bye week concentrated on problem areas, with the goal of enhancing what works and discarding what doesn't. It's a strategy that gets the approval of cornerback Tarell Brown, who was part of the 49ers' rebuilding process under Jim Harbaugh.

"It's always about playing to the players' strengths," Brown said. "It's not always about X's and O's, it's always about playing to what the players like and what the players are comfortable doing. Once we get to that point, I look forward to it."

Identifying the strengths of an 0-4 team will take some creativity. Sparano's history is rooted in controlling a game with the run, keeping things close and then winning the fourth quarter.

The Raiders are ranked 32nd in rushing and have been hurt by large deficits, which makes it impossible to be persistent. With Miami, Sparano's use of the option-oriented wildcat formation with running backs Ronnie Brown and Ricky Williams was a key part of their attack.

With Darren McFadden having run the wildcat and Maurice Jones-Drew back to full health, San Diego could get a healthy dose of it.

"We've only run three snaps of it," Sparano said. "We've been efficient, it's been good to us ... we could see anything right now."

Defensively, the Raiders' philosophy under Allen and Jason Tarver of being multiple in terms of rush and coverage could be streamlined with Sparano's mandate of focusing on schemes that suit the talent on the field.

San Diego coach Mike McCoy acknowledged there could be some changes with the Raiders but noted their systems have been intact since training camp. Chargers outside linebacker Dwight Freeney isn't dwelling on what changes could be in store for the Raiders with a new coach.

"Who's to say they really wanted the change? That decision was made by upper management," Freeney said in a conference call. "I don't know how they feel, but I know this -- they're going to be playing the San Diego Chargers and they'll play hard regardless of who's coaching and who's not."

"Any time there's a scenario with someone handling the football it's something you pay attention to," Sparano said. "We need to make sure we pay attention to that and we test it."

Defensive tackle Antonio Smith, starved for a win after being on a Houston team that lost its final 14 games last season and now 0-4 with the Raiders, took one of Sparano's main themes to heart.

"He said he just wants to see us smile after a win on Sunday," Smith said. "You can't do nothing but respect that, because that is a wonderful thing in this game."

Raiders' new coach Sparano lays it on line to players
By Jerry McDonald
October 6, 2014

ALAMEDA -- Tony Sparano has seen the enemy, and it's wearing silver and black.

"One of the things that I believe is that you've got to look at reasons how Oakland is beating Oakland right now, never mind our opponents," Sparano said Monday after his first full practice as interim head coach of the Raiders.

Toward that end, Sparano wasted no time in shaking things up. He spent time over the weekend talking with Mike Holmgren, who came in at the behest of general manager Reggie McKenzie, with whom Holmgren worked with the Green Bay Packers.

Holmgren told KJR-AM in Seattle no jobs were discussed.

"I enjoyed getting a chance to visit with him," Sparano said. "It's good to get a different set of eyes, another perspective."

When the Raiders arrived Monday morning, they learned a handful of players had been relocated to different areas of the locker room. Sparano increased the practice tempo, added sessions to work on fundamentals and altered the schedule that had been set by predecessor Dennis Allen.

"I think right now there's a fire lit in that locker room," Sparano said."They see change. We were all part of the problem, every single one of us. ... They've got a lot of pride, and I'm proud of the way they came out there today and practiced."

Sparano, a disciple of Bill Parcells, arrived with the reputation of a straight shooter and did not disappoint.

"The moment he got up on the stage, he brought that commanding presence of what it's going to be, want he expects of us, what he sees out of us, even the bad," defensive tackle Antonio Smith said. "When he tells you the bad, he shoots it to you blood raw. It ain't sugarcoated."

Sparano stressed the good as well as the bad with his team, noting its solid standing in terms of red zone defense and creating negative plays and an offense that has struggled but protected the quarterback and had few plays that lost yardage.

"We got a chance to show the kids what they've done well and what they haven't done well and why," Sparano said.

Rather than explain himself to the team, Sparano simply instituted changes and wasn't interested in dialogue.

"I haven't let all my secrets out there with them yet," Sparano said. "I like keeping them, as I told them, a little uncomfortable sometimes. Comfortable is not good. Uncomfortable sometimes is not a bad thing."

Sparano said that he, secondary coach Marcus Robertson and defensive end Lamarr Woodley had been a part of teams that enjoyed dramatic turnarounds, and he used it as an example to tell the team what is possible.

"It's just something he brought up, but it wasn't discussed," Woodley said. "I think everybody in this locker room knows what we need to do. Me going out there and telling my story is not really important. What's important is what's ahead of us."

Running back Maurice Jones-Drew said Sparano's message was direct and to the point.

"We're all renters here, and you have to pay your dues and do the right thing all the time," Jones-Drew said. "That's what we did today. We came in, watched the tape of the four games, studied ourselves and after that got out to practice, and we're now on to San Diego."

Hope springs anew with Tony Sparano in charge of Raiders
By Vic Tafur
October 11, 2014

If not optimism, there at least will be some anticipation and excitement among the tailgaters at O.co Coliseum on Sunday morning. The fans who have been coming out for the Raiders' home games have pretty much packed away happiness with the leftover hot dog buns and chips when they walk in to see the games the past year.

Oakland has been abysmal, dropping 10 games overall in a row, and it has been even worse at home. The Raiders have lost six straight home games (the most recent was in London), by an average of 20 points. The Nick Foles seven-touchdown game and Jamaal Charles five-TD game were both in Oakland and sent fans to therapy.

But that was then and this is now, and the 0-4 Raiders hope firing head coach Dennis Allen and hiring interim coach Tony Sparano sparks something.

Sparano and the Raiders have a tough test, as quarterback Philip Rivers and the Chargers (4-1) might be the hottest team in the NFL. Rivers has a passer rating of at least 120 in four straight games, tied withKurt Warner and Johnny Unitas for the longest such streak in NFL history.

Sparano has changed the practice tempo and schedule, moved players’ lockers and even symbolically buried a football with the team as part of a new start. He plans to run the ball more, but he not only hasn’t told reporters (obviously) but he also has held back from players, too, all the changes he plans to implement in his first game.

“I haven’t let all my secrets out there with them yet,” Sparano said. “I like keeping them, as I told them, a little uncomfortable sometimes. Comfortable is not good. Uncomfortable sometimes is not a bad thing.”

He’s tried to focus on what the Raiders have done well in the first four games (pass blocking, red-zone defense), but hasn’t shied away from direct criticism when warranted.

“We’re all renters here, and you have to pay your dues and do the right thing all the time,” running backMaurice Jones-Drew said, when asked what Sparano’s message was.

Sparano, 53, has been waiting for this moment since his first stint as a head coach ended in 2011 after he went 29-33 with the Dolphins. It started well, as Sparano inherited a team that went 1-15 in 2007 and led it to an 11-5 finish and an AFC East title. But then Miami had three straight losing seasons, and he was fired, serving as the Jets’ offensive coordinator in 2012 and the Raiders’ offensive line coach in 2013 and the first four games this season.

“I look back on that (Miami) experience quite often, particularly now,” Sparano said. “I didn’t come into this league to do anything other than, honestly, to be a head coach.

“You look at yourself and you say, 'How could I have done it better? What could I have done differently?’ For me to give you one example, I really couldn’t give you one example.”

“If you don’t beat yourself, you’ve got a chance to win the football game...,” Sparano said. “There are plenty of excuses out there right now, a lot of them. We’re not going to use those excuses.”

The Raiders are dead last in the league in rushing, but that doesn’t mean they can’t run the ball. Sparano went as far as saying he plans to “ride” running backs Darren McFadden and Jones-Drew (11 carries for 12 yards).

Heck, he might get them both on the field at the same time, something he did in Miami with the option-oriented wildcat formation.

The players and the fans are hungry for something new.

“When you don’t embrace any change, all you’re doing is helping you to stay the same as you were,” defensive tackle Antonio Smith said. “And where we were wasn’t that damn good.”

Raiders credit Sparano for keeping team together

By Scott Bair
November 25, 2014

Interim head coach Tony Sparano waited a long time to give his Raiders a victorious postgame speech. After trying in vain six straight tries, Sparano capped a week’s hard work with a win.

He thanked his players for their effort during a short week, which allowed the Raiders to beat Kansas City 24-20 last Thursday night in the team’s only primetime game. He told them to remember that winning feeling, and let it fuel them toward another one.

“Hold up, hold up,” Penn said. “Tony has been through a lot, man. He kept us together. He kept fighting and worked his butt off for us. That’s why he deserves a game ball. This one goes to the head coach of the Oakland Raiders.”

It’s not the first game ball Sparano has received in a long coaching career. It might have been the best.

“I have gotten some game balls before but, quite honestly, probably none more meaningful than that one,” Sparano said. “I say that because of what this team has been through and how far we’ve had to come, how much the guys have stayed together in that locker room.

“I really appreciated it last night. It was nice. But, (there are others) that deserve the game balls -- our owner (Mark Davis), our GM (Reggie McKenzie) and all of our fans that were out there (Thursday) night. It was fun last night to go out to dinner and see Oakland Raider fans out there last night with a smile on their face. It was good.”

If Sparano doesn’t keep this group together, focused and working hard, Thursday’s victory doesn’t happen. A disjointed team doesn’t beat the Chiefs. There was little argument about that fact among the Raiders.

Sparano deserves credit for that. He kept the team committed to the cause when it would be easy to check out, using a combination of sometimes-brutal honesty, an intense, yet player-friendly practice schedule and personal commitment to keep players invested.

That means Sparano was typically the first person inside his local Starbucks, typically entering and exiting the Raiders facility in darkness. All that without assurance he'll be around beyond the season.

It sent a simple message: I won't quit. Neither can you.

"Tony has been great," receiver James Jones said. "He's going through a lot himself on and off the field. I'm proud of my coach. He believed in us and we believed in him. ... He's been in that facility from sun up to sun down."

The Raiders did the hard work required to win games in this league despite being outgunned, and finally got a payoff. It came from one rare trait.

"Patient endurance," quarterback Derek Carr said. "That's hard. It's hard to continue to go to work and work your tail off when you're 0-and-whatever, but we kept fighting. We believed in what Coach Sparano was preaching to us. Our teammates believed in each other and … man, we finally got a win."

The Raiders want another one. They formally left the Kansas City game in the rearview on Monday's return to practice. They made changes from Thursday's game tape and applied it to the game plan for Sunday's match at St. Louis, where they hope to notch a second win.

"We needed it, man," safety Charles Woodson said after Thursday's win. "I don't think there's any other way to put it. We needed this win. It just lets you know that you can do it, even though we haven't done it to this point. We got it done tonight. Now there's no excuse not to get the next one."

JUSTIN TUCK

ALAMEDA -- Khalil Mack knows the look.

It could be a problem with the rookie linebacker's footwork, or that he didn't use his hands properly to disengage from a blocker. It's at that point that Raiders defensive end Justin Tuck will step in, the same way Michael Strahan did for Tuck nine seasons ago.

Mack, the No. 5 pick in May's NFL draft, drinks it all in.

"He'll give me that nod, and it's like, 'OK, what did I do this time?,' " Mack said. "J.T. is one of the best in the game and a cool person to be around. You learn a lot just by being around him."

Tuck, 31, is an avid reader who promotes literacy for school children, but it goes beyond a fondness for books. He reads people, reads situations and is fascinated to see how a story unfolds.

The tale started in Kellyton, Alabama, (population 217), continued with big-time college football at Notre Dame and eventually led to starring role in the Big Apple where Tuck became a two-time Super Bowl champion with the New York Giants.

Tuck will be back at MetLife Stadium on Sunday when the Raiders open the regular season against the New York Jets.

"There will be some history, some memories, but we're playing the Jets and not the Giants, so it's just an away game for me," Tuck said.

A self-professed "old soul," Tuck gravitated toward veterans as a young player with the Giants and understands that younger players are now gravitating toward him.

"I can see it, and it's humbling to know that," Tuck said. "I still remember walking into the locker room my rookie year and watching Michael Strahan as a person of influence and watching how he handled things.

"For someone like Khalil Mack, I want to make sure I do my due diligence to make sure he understands what this game can do for him and he gets the best of this game the way Strahan did for me."

Raiders defensive tackle Stacy McGee, in his second season out of Oklahoma, has paid close attention.

"You're playing alongside one of the greats of the game, learning about tendencies and all the things he's seen," McGee said. "He's got so much to share with us, and not just about football, but about life. And he's very humble and approachable."

Middle linebacker Nick Roach said, "Justin has such a strong influence he can pull other players along with him.'

As detailed in an E:60 feature on ESPN, Tuck ended up at Notre Dame purely by accident. Two recruiters in the area to scout another player ended up at a gas station after taking a wrong turn. When told the recruiters were in town to look at a linebacker, the attendant assumed they were talking about Tuck and directed them to Central Coosa County High.

Tuck, a tight end, defensive end and linebacker, had a big game and was offered a scholarship that night.

After starring at Notre Dame and leaving as the all-time leader in sacks with 241/2, Tuck lasted until the third round because of a persistent knee injury. His nine seasons with the Giants included 601/2 sacks and coming up huge in Super Bowl wins over the New England Patriots after the 2007 and 2011 seasons with two sacks in each game.

Despite 11 sacks last season, the Giants made no serious effort to sign Tuck for a 10th season, and the Raiders reeled him in with a two-year deal worth $11 million.

"You've been in one place nine years, and you know what to expect," Tuck said. "Now I don't know what to expect. We're going into our first game. I don't know how certain guys will respond to adversities or successes. It's all fresh. It keeps you on your toes and it's exciting."

Tuck has instituted MMA training with his usual fitness regimen and firmly believes that "age is a number." Coach Dennis Allen said, "He can still play at a high level and is primed for a very good year."

In New York, Tuck and his wife, Lauran, founded RUSH to Literacy (Read, Understand, Succeed, Hope) to promote literacy among school children. Tuck made personal appearances at schools in New York, New Jersey and Alabama and donated more than 50,000 books.

In 2011, Tuck authored a children's book called "Home Field Advantage" that included humorous accounts of his youth in Kellyton, growing up as the youngest of seven children -- including five older sisters.

Tuck said he's working on a second book that in a way mirrors his NFL career.

"I've written most of it, but I'm not finished with it yet," Tuck said.

MENELIK WATSON

Jolly ol' homecoming for Raiders' Menlik Watson
By Jerry McDonald
September 24, 2014

BAGSHOT, England -- Growing up poor in working-class Manchester, Menelik Watson would let his mind wander as countless other pre-teens did growing up in the United Kingdom.

"Playing in the FA Cup at Wembley was something you always dreamed of as a kid," Watson said of soccer's grand stage after the Raiders completed their first practice session on a rugby pitch Wednesday. "It's like a dream, really."

Watson's return to his homeland Sunday against the Miami Dolphins won't be the perfect dream -- not because he'll be playing the wrong kind of football. Only that he won't be hearing his number called as the offensive line starter he expected to be for the Raiders.

The second-year player, who had never played American football until 2011, understands his is already a remarkable story -- even if he must settle for snaps as a blocking tight end until he wins the right tackle job.

"It's folklore," Kyle Long, a Chicago Bears tackle and son of Raiders Hall of Fame defensive end Howie Long, told Yahoo Sports in 2013. "It's almost a tall tale."

Manchester is more than 200 miles north of London but may as well be a world away. Watson's father left when he was 9, and Menelik lived with his mother in a steadily deteriorating neighborhood rife with drugs and crime. Two older brothers ended up in prison.

Watson broke his leg so badly in a pick-up soccer game at age 12 that doctors wondered if he'd ever walk again without a limp. He eventually turned to basketball and at age 18 was spotted by Rob Orellana, an AAU coach who convinced Watson to attend his academy in the Canary Islands.

With nothing but raw skill and no idea how to put on shoulder pads or a helmet, Watson got a crash course. But he was soon doing damage as a right tackle, with Kyle Long on the left side.

Howie Long, who is in England and watched the Raiders practice Wednesday, smiled in recounting that single season at Saddleback.

"Kyle walks in the office one day and says, 'Hi, I'm Kyle Long and I would like to to try out for your team,' " he said. "And then Menelik Watson walks in and says, 'Hi, I'm Menelik,' and the two tackles, there they are."

Howie Long remembers helping teach Watson blocking technique in parking lots at 10 p.m. following Saddleback games. Watson was a quick study and earned a scholarship to Florida State, where he played a single season before declaring for the NFL draft and becoming a second-round pick by the Raiders.

Howie Long calls Watson "our adopted son." Another son, Howie Long Jr., is working in the Raiders personnel office. Watson considers the Long sons "like brothers" and Howie Long Sr. an uncle.

"He told me from the first day he met me about my ability and told me to stay working, constantly improving and to stay patient," Watson said. "That's something he told me on the field just now. I value everything he says because nobody did it like Howie did it."

Raiders coach Dennis Allen said Watson, 26, is still in the learning stages of a sport he took up so late.

"I'm not in any way disappointed as far as where he's at," Allen said. "He's still relatively young to the game. He's just got some development to do, some growing up to do."

Watson has enjoyed being an NFL ambassador in his home country but not as much as being reunited with his daughter. Orellana, now 6 and named after the man who guided Watson through basketball and into football, lives with her mother in England.

"I got to pick her up from school and give her a hug and a kiss," Watson said. "It was her birthday Saturday, so I took her into town and spoiled her a bit. She got a little emotional when I was leaving. But I get to see her this weekend, so it's not that bad."

Raiders' lineman Menelik Watson returns to his Manchester roots
By Vic Tafur

BAGSHOT, England — Menelik Watson had a news conference in London on Wednesday, 200 miles south of where the Raiders tackle grew up and dreamed of being someone who would one day have a news conference.

One day when he was a kid in Manchester, Watson was picturing himself as a Manchester City soccer player when the stomach growlings became too much to bear and he went off looking for food. The kid whose single mom was busy working to support five kids found a cafeteria, but he had no money.

So he ate all the packets of ketchup he could find. It happened more than once.

"I had a tough childhood at times, but I wouldn't change a thing," Watson said. "I love my family and my city, and they made me who I am today."

Watson turned to sports to escape a life of gangs and drugs in Manchester that swallowed up two of his older brothers and sent them to jail. He played soccer until he was 12, when he broke his leg so badly, "the word amputate came up for a second," Watson said.

Doctors were convinced he wouldn't be able to walk again without a serious limp, but Watson pushed on, trying to find his ticket out of the "tough, working man's town," as he called it. He tried basketball, boxing and then football.

Basketball got him to the United States, and American football got him back to England, as a member of one of the two NFL teams playing at Wembley Stadium on Sunday.

"As a kid, we all had dreams to play in the Premier League and stuff. Playing in the FA Cup in Wembley was always something you dreamed of as a kid. American football wise, no. Not even after I got drafted.

"I watched the Steelers out here last year versus Minnesota and then I didn't really think until the schedule came out. It's like a dream, really."

"I got to pick her up from school and give her a hug and a kiss," Watson said. "It was her birthday Saturday, so I took her into town and spoiled her a bit. She got a little emotional when I was leaving. But I get to see her this weekend, so it's not that bad."

Orellana is named after Rob Orellana, who noticed the now-6-foot-5 Watson as kid and recruited him to his play for his basketball academy team in Spain. That was Watson's ticket out of Manchester, and from there he punched another one with a basketball scholarship offer from Marist College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

But basketball didn't take. And after a brief flirtation with boxing, Watson went to live with Orellana and his family in Southern California. When he said he wanted to try football, Orellana called Saddleback College coach Mark McElroy and asked him if he wanted to try out a 6-5, 300-pound lineman.

Guess what the answer was.

Watson's raw ability was enough to win the job at right tackle, and a former pitcher was at left tackle. That was Kyle Long, current Chicago Bears guard and the son of Raiders Hall of Famer Howie Long.

Howie Long was at Raiders practice Wednesday watching Watson.

"Kyle is a brother to me and Howie is like an uncle," Watson said. "He told me from the first day he met me about my ability and just told me to stay working, constantly improving and to be patient.

"That's something he just told me out there on the field just now. I value everything he says because nobody did it like Howie did it."

With his power, fast hands and feet, Watson moved through the ranks quickly. He played one year at Saddleback and then one year at Florida State before the Raiders drafted him in the second round last year.

"Football was my last option or I would have to go back to England," Watson said. "It was my last opportunity to make something of myself, and I threw all of my eggs into one basket. You don't want your eggs to break, so you do everything you can to make sure they're fine."

"I'm not in any way disappointed as far as where he's at," Raiders coach Dennis Allen said. "He's still relatively young to the game. He's just got some development to do."

Watson is disappointed that he is not starting, but he will play a little bit and will enjoy what the applause Sunday means for him and for kids in this country like him.

"It brings a lot of attention to England and eventually it will open more doors for kids," Watson said. "I have been blessed with so many opportunites, and maybe a kid will see one that he hadn't thought of."

Waston: Homecoming, reunion with daughter "will be special"
By Scott Bair
September 23, 2014

LONDON – Menelik Watson is in demand this week. The Raiders offensive lineman has a press conference scheduled for Wednesday, when the British media circus will descend on one of the NFL's only Englishmen.

If a summer press tour promoting Sunday's game between his Raiders and the Miami Dolphins is any indication, his countrymen will pull him in a thousand directions.

There's one thing Watson really looks forward to. His daughter Orellana turned six on Saturday, and there's a belated birthday celebration in the works.

"I'm sad I'm going to miss the actual day, but we'll celebrate as soon as I can go home and go see her," Watson told CSN Bay Area last week, in the calm before the media storm. "We're going to go out to eat and we're going to find her something nice for her birthday."

Watson rarely gets the chance. He's missed far too many birthdays for his taste, stuck across the pond following a dream and a business venture. He couldn't afford to come home as a collegian bouncing around the country, trying to find a place to stick.

He played basketball at Marist College, then football at Saddleback JC in Orange County, then a year at Florida State before being selected in the second round of the 2013 NFL draft.

"I've been on this road for a long time now," Watson said. "I'm used to the routine and I'm used to being away from home. You miss it, but a lot of times you have to be cold and not let it weigh on your mood. But the time I do get to spend there is precious, and I value every second."

That's why Watson feels like he's stealing something this week. He was ecstatic when the schedule was released and a London stop was on the agenda. It remains a business trip and his focus will fix on football, but the free time spent with Orellana will be precious.

The offseason schedule keeps Watson stateside most of the time, with roughly a month reserved for Manchester. That's where Watson grew up, poor but loved in a working class town. There were opportunities to take the wrong path, to make a quick buck with huge, huge risk.

Some friends and family got caught, and ended up paying an unwelcome debt to society. Athletics was his way out of that life, but celebrity wasn't the ultimate goal. He wanted to do something special, be better than what was expected.

"I come from simple beginnings and I had simple dreams," Watson said. "I never wished for fame and fortune. All I wanted was a family.

"The area I was growing up in started getting worse and we were struggling. That's when I decided I was going to do different. I wanted to do something great with my life. I knew I had athletic gifts, but I had to put in time and effort to turn it into something."

Watson did, and it has brought him to a big stage in his homeland. He isn't starting as he and the Raiders thought he would this offseason, but he'll be a player in jumbo packages and will see his share of playing time on Sunday.

He'll have more than 50 close friends and family in attendance, and plenty of fans rooting for him at Wembley. As always, Orellana is the one he wants to impress.

"This is a chance for her to see what her dad does, and hopefully she better understands why I'm not there every day," Watson said. "Hopefully Sunday will be special for her. I know it will be special for me."

CHARLES WOODSON

BAY AREA NEWS GROUP (OAKLAND TRIBUNE, CC TIMES, SJ MERCURY NEWS)

NFL preview: Raiders' Charles Woodson right at home in wine country
By Daniel Brown
September 4, 2014

Even as the superstar face of his own wine label, Charles Woodson likes to mix things up with the vineyard's special-teamers. He and a Raiders strength coach once arrived for harvest time at 5 a.m. on the team's day off, each of them wielding shears and snipping grapes off the vine.

"We're just plugging away one bunch at a time, and all of a sudden you see this wave of guys -- whoosh! -- blowing through this vineyard," the eight-time Pro Bowl selection recalled. "We might have gotten three bunches off the vine by the time they finished the whole row."

Woodson tells this story with a glass of the finished product in his left hand, a 2008 cabernet sauvignon. This is his wine, his wine bar, his way of winding down. The defensive back sits in a corner booth of the Cult Following in downtown Napa so freshly removed from the Raiders practice field that he still is dressed in shorts and a silver-and-black Windbreaker.

TwentyFour wines, named in honor of Woodson's jersey number in Oakland, originated in 2001. It is an unusual pairing, the kid from small-town Ohio and the masters of the Napa Valley, but Woodson has found his niche with a well-reviewed cab that sells for $112 a bottle.

"He's really well thought of up here in the wine country," said Carmen Policy, a former 49ers executive who has his own acclaimed Casa Piena label. "A lot of people around here really roll their eyes, 'Oh, great, another celebrity who wants to put their name on the label.' But Charles is serious about wanting to produce a quality wine and about understanding the process."

Woodson, 37, enters this season on a one-year contract with the Raiders and, though he has said he has no plans to retire, it's easy to speculate that 2014 will put the cork in his Hall of Fame career. Woodson is two years removed from his last Pro Bowl selection and is one of only three players still active from the 1998 draft (Peyton Manning and Matt Hasselbeck are the others).

Whenever he does decide to hang 'em up, retirement sure looks inviting. He strolled into Cult Following about 20 minutes after practice, found a comfortable chair and a server who, without being asked, handed him a glass of the 2008 -- always the 2008.

The vineyard is down the road, about 25 miles on the St. Helena Highway, to Calistoga. From those 12 acres, Woodson expects to produce 1,200 cases of cabernet and 1,000 cases of sauvignon blanc this year.

The patch of land sits below the towering spectacle of Sterling Vineyards -- all 1,200 acres of it -- and the shadow serves as a reminder that Woodson is still just a role player here.

"You know that little cap on your bicycle that keeps the air in? That's how small we are compared to the rest of the wineries in the world," said Rick Ruiz, the director of operations for TwentyFour Wines.

The two agree on everything about wine -- except for how they met. Woodson said it was through a promotional event at Raiders camp; Ruiz said it was in the tasting room at Mondavi, after he spotted the Heisman Trophy winner drinking a bottle he had worked on.

Woodson concedes the tiebreaker when Ruiz argues that he is much more likely to remember the day he met Charles Woodson than the other way around.

Either way, the friendship began in 2001, when Woodson was in his fourth season in the NFL -- and still a fledgling rookie when it came to wine. He lacked versatility.

"When I started trying wine, I started drinking merlot, and that's all I had," Woodson said. "I would go to dinner, and I'd see people drinking wine, and if I ordered anything, it would just be a merlot."

"Merlot. Merlot. Merlot," Ruiz said, still exasperated. "It got to the point where I told him, 'Charles, you're missing some of the best things in the world by only drinking merlot.' "

It took about six months of pestering, but Woodson eventually expanded his game. That was a turning point. Soon, Woodson wanted to know everything about the process -- from the agriculture to the economics to the marketing -- and started to impress Ruiz, 44, with his knack for pairing the right wines with any dish.

"Initially what drew me to it was that it seems to be a culture here in the valley, and there always seems to be a family atmosphere around wine," Woodson said. "People are truly into it. They come to the restaurant, they have their own bottle. They bring it in as a conversation piece.

"It was a culture. And I was interested in the whole deal. What is this all about?"

For kicks, they made a single barrel for charity -- merlot, of course -- starting in 2004. But a funny thing happened on the way to the glass: It was delicious.

"That's when we realized that we should start getting serious," Ruiz said.

With Gustavo A. Gonzalez, who also began his career at Mondavi, aboard as the winemaker, TwentyFour Wines had its release party in 2009, when they shared their '05, '06 and '07 vintages.

Among the early converts was Scott Lewis, the proprietor at V Wine Cellar, who said that Woodson's creation now ranks among the best cabs from the region, a conversation that includes Outpost, Melka Wines and Policy's Casa Piena.

"Sometimes, with these vanity projects, people don't always put in the time and effort into making something great," Lewis said. "But Charles is like Carmen in that he put in his due diligence when it came to getting something to his liking. He's not a flash in the pan."

Woodson's beloved '08, for example, offers brier notes and black fruits. The oak is integrated but not overdone, as with so many luxury Napa reds. It's a big wine with firm tannins, but not saddled with the uber-ripe fruit that has become the industry standard.

"What I'm trying to do as a winemaker is reflect Charles' taste, what he wants," Gonzalez said. "The reason we picked the vineyard we did is because it was the one most capable of producing his style."

In creating his own label, Woodson joined a deep roster of other sports figures that have made a name in the wine business, such as Tom Seaver, Dick Vermeil, Rich Aurilia, Jeff Gordon and Ernie Els.

All along, Woodson has retained the charity element. With every bottle sold, Woodson donates $10 to the C.S. Mott Children's Hospital at his alma mater, the University of Michigan.

At the time of the original release party, Woodson was in Green Bay, where he spent seven seasons monitoring his vineyard via text messages and emails back home. Ruiz also made frequent visits to Packers country, and the two delighted in converting cheeseheads into wine snobs. The wine events had fun with food pairings. (Handy tip: A bratwurst goes best with a red.)

Ruiz recounted those ambassador trips while standing amid the rows at TwentyFour vineyards on a soft summer morning. He plucked from a vine and held a single grape in the palm of his hand.

"This thing right here has built us a friendship with people for life. We have so many friends in the Midwest," Ruiz says. "So now our thing is, we're trying to get those kinds of friendships with the Bay Area people. One Raider fan at a time, we want to come toward them."

When Woodson returned to Oakland last season, he resumed trying to pair his reds and whites with the Silver & Black. TwentyFour Wines set up a tent in the parking lot on game days in an attempt to make Woodson's wine the drink of choice at tailgate parties -- the Raiders Libation.

At first, nobody bothered to look up.

"Even the cops looked at us like we were from Mars," Ruiz said. "And by the third home game, everybody was our new best friend. People started to realize that you can drink a Coors Light every day of the week. It's not very often you can taste a 2007 Calistoga Cabernet from Charles Woodson's vineyard, especially because we were limited in our production."

There is no winery to visit, but the public can meet at the vineyard by appointment. For now, Woodson steers people toward Cult Following, the wine bar on First Street in downtown Napa.

Next up are tentative plans for a Woodson wine tasting room to open in September, another place to toast one of the greatest careers ever put together by a defensive back. Woodson enters this season needing one more interception return for a touchdown to tie Rod Woodson's NFL record of 12. (Charles and Rod Woodson are not related.)

Once he is done picking off passes, Woodson can really focus on picking off those grapes. He will savor retirement soon, but he sees no reason to wait for the good life.

"I like to call my wines 'anytime wines,' " he said. "You just want to sit and open up a bottle and watch 'The Blacklist' on a Monday night? Open it up, and it's very easy. It's very approachable."
