MY CAUSE MY CLEATS

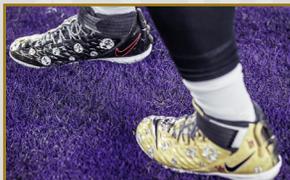

MARK ANDREWS
TIGHT END, RAVENS

Pro Bowl TE Mark Andrews was diagnosed with Type 1 Diabetes when he was just nine years old. Andrews is one of the 1.6 million Americans who currently live with Type 1 Diabetes, which is why he elected to support the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation through the 2020 My Cause My Cleats awareness campaign. Andrews strives to use his platform to help families who are struggling with diabetes and show them that they can do whatever they set their mind to do.

Since 2016, the NFL My Cause My Cleats campaign has allowed NFL players and coaches the opportunity to highlight their charitable passions beyond the game of football. Additionally, players have the opportunity to raise funds and support their selected charities by auctioning off their cleats through NFL Auction. In addition to TE Mark Andrews, nearly twenty Ravens players decided to participate in the 2020 My Cause My Cleats initiative, including OLB Tyus Bowser (American Cancer Society), G/C Bradley Bozeman (The Bradley and Nikki Bozeman Foundation), S DeShon Elliott (Black Lives Matter Foundation), DB/LB Anthony Levine Sr. (4Every1 Foundation), QB Trace McSorley (Penn State Thon), LB Patrick Queen (St. Jude Children's Hospital), G/C Matt Skura (Pediatric Brain Tumor Foundation), DE Derek Wolfe (Wolfe Pack Foundation) and more. Ravens players showcased their customized cleats during the Ravens vs. Cowboys Week 13 game on Tuesday, Dec. 8.
