BALTIMORE CITY MOTORCYCLE DONATION

The Ravens thanked the City of Baltimore for its continued service and support through a donation of three motorcycles and 12 jackets to the Baltimore City Police Department. On Tuesday (9/17), the Ravens, with the help of president Dick Cass, director of security Darren Sanders and LB Jameel McClain, pictured below, presented these gifts to Mayor Stephanie Rawlings-Blake and Commissioner Anthony Batts outside City Hall.

The Baltimore PD is critical to city and team success on gamedays and other events held at M&T Bank Stadium. With its assistance, the Ravens have also been able to implement numerous community initiatives. In addition to the long-standing relationship with the department, a number of retired Baltimore officers are current members of the Ravens' security staff.

Children and teachers at Catonsville Elementary and Hillcrest Elementary gathered together for a Ravens-themed pep rally to kick off the 2013 home season.
