

VOTE 2020

WHAT'S YOUR GAME PLAN?

LET'S ALL BE HEARD THIS ELECTION DAY

In the 2016 presidential election, only 60% of eligible Americans showed up to vote. To ensure that the 2020 election has the largest recorded voter turnout in American history, the Baltimore Ravens have worked with NFL Votes, League of Women Voters of Maryland and RISE to Vote.

NFL Votes is a league-wide initiative that serves to support, implement and encourage voting and civic engagement efforts of NFL fans, players, league personnel and NFL alumni leading up to Election Day. The initiative focuses on three key components of the electoral process: voter education, voter registration and voter activation.

The League of Women Voters of Maryland is a nonpartisan political organization that strives to educate and encourage active participation in government through knowledge and understanding. The organization has prioritized the 2020 election, as women outnumber men by nearly 10 million votes, and this year marks the centennial anniversary of the women's suffrage amendment.

RISE to Vote works with athletes to educate them on how to vote and why it matters. The organization offers Voter Registration, Civic Education and Community Engagement Opportunities. In August, RISE to Vote presented to Ravens players, coaches and staff members to discuss the power of a vote.

Ravens players joined forces to record a PSA advocating for Maryland residents and Ravens fans from across the country to register to vote, through RiseToVote.org. This week, LB/DB Anthony Levine Sr. proudly made headlines as a first-time voter. Levine voted early and encouraged everyone to let their voice be heard this election. On Sunday, Nov. 1, the Ravens will feature in-game branding, including painting VOTE logos and artwork on the sideline and end zone.
