PRESS RELEASE

NEW ORLEANS SAINTS

SAINTS HOLD NINE SELECTIONS ENTERING NFL DRAFT FROM APRIL 25-27

The newest members of the New Orleans Saints will join the team this week, as the 89th annual NFL Draft will take place on Thursday, Friday and Saturday from April 25-27 in Detroit, Mich. The draft will kick off in its primetime format for the 14th consecutive year at 7:00 p.m. (CT) on Thursday evening, with the first round to be completed. The draft will resume on Friday evening at 6:00 p.m. for rounds two and three with the remaining four rounds to be completed on Saturday starting at 11 a.m.

The Saints own nine picks in the seven rounds, with their highest being a first round draft choice (14th overall). New Orleans will be looking to further supplement the roster following drafts the past seven seasons which have netted ten cumulative Pro Bowl selections, nine starters and several additional significant contributors with their picks, headlined by RB Alvin Kamara, CB Marshon Lattimore, WR Chris Olave and C Erik McCoy.

ABC/ESPN and the NFL Network will provide full live coverage and analysis of the 2024 NFL Draft on Thursday, Friday and Saturday in its entirety. The first round will conclude by approximately 10:30 p.m., the second and third rounds will end by 9:45 p.m. and Saturday's selections will conclude around 6:15 p.m.

Each team is permitted a maximum of ten minutes per selection in the first round of the draft, seven minutes in the second round, five minutes for choices made in rounds three through six and four minutes for choices in round seven. Trading is allowed throughout the course of the draft.

There will be a total of seven rounds and 257 selections (220 regular picks and 37 compensatory choices) in the 2024 NFL Draft. The NFL awarded 37 compensatory draft picks to 14 teams. The Saints were awarded three compensatory picks in 2024.

Entering the draft, New Orleans holds one pick in the first round (14th overall), one pick in the second round (45th overall), four picks in the fifth round (150th, 168th, 170th and 175th overall), two picks in the sixth round (190th and 199th overall) and one pick in the seventh round (239th overall).

In exchange for the contractual rights to former Head Coach Sean Payton and their original third round pick (81st overall) in this year's draft, the Saints traded for the Broncos first round pick (29th overall) in last year's draft as well as their second round pick (45th overall) in this year's draft. New Orleans is also left without their original fourth round pick (116th overall) after trading it to the Jacksonville Jaguars for the 127th overall pick in last year's draft which was used to select Fresno State quarterback, Jake Haener. New Orleans' original second round pick (50th overall) was traded to Philadelphia prior to the 2022 NFL Draft as part of a trade that saw the clubs exchange multiple draft choices.

BRYAN BRESEE
1ST ROUND: 2023

Sports Info Solutions
Second-Team All-Rookie

Appeared in eight games as a rookie for New Orleans and emerged as a solid contributor in the backfield after battling and overcoming several injuries. Totaled 156 rushing yards on 41 attempts and a touchdown while adding 10 grabs for 117 yards in the passing game.

Round 4a: Offensive Lineman Nick Saldiveri – The Old Dominion product appeared in four games last season, seeing time at right guard, at tackle in the jumbo package, and on special teams. He spent the last month of the season on Injured Reserve (shoulder).

Round 4b: Quarterback Jake Haener – Did not appear in a game for the Saints during the 2023 season. In the preseason, completed 38-of-72 passes for 395 yards with one touchdown.

Round 5: Safety Jordan Howden – Howden appeared in 16 games during his rookie campaign with seven starts, finishing with 43 tackles (23 solo), one sack, one QB hurry, five pass breakups, and a forced fumble. Heading into his second season, Howden is expected to compete for snaps at safety and provide quality special teams play.

Round 6: Wide Receiver A.T. Perry – Perry emerged as a reliable red zone weapon down the stretch in his rookie campaign. The former Wake Forest standout appeared in ten games with three starts, totaling 12 receptions for 246 yards (20.5 avg) and four touchdowns.

Round 1a: Wide Receiver Chris Olave – Appeared in 16 games with 11 starts, recording 87 receptions for 1,123 yards (12.9 avg) with five touchdowns in 2023. Led the Saints in both catches and receiving yards for the second straight season while adding his second 1,000 plus receiving campaign in as many years in the league.

Round 1b: Tackle Trevor Penning – Appeared in 17 games, including starting the first five

SAINTS DRAFT RECAP

The New Orleans Saints have made the most of their choices, selecting quality players that now form the foundation of the roster. Below is a synopsis of the club's draft picks:

2023

Round 1: Defensive Tackle Bryan Bresee – Appearing in all 17 games his rookie season, the former Clemson standout recorded 24 tackles, 4.5 sacks for a loss of 42 yards, seven stops for loss and six passes defended. Bresee's 4.5 sacks ranked sixth among all rookies. The second-year pro will look to build upon his debut season to fortify the Black and Gold interior.

Round 2: Defensive End Isaiah Foskey – After a stellar career at Notre Dame, where he finished as the school's all-time sack leader with 26.5 takedowns, Foskey appeared in ten games for New Orleans, totaling ten tackles (five solo) and a split sack and contributed on special teams.

Round 3: Running Back Kendre Miller –

CHRIS OLAVE
1ST ROUND: 2022

2022 PFWA All-Rookie Team
NFL Offensive Rookie of the Month (Sept.)

contests at left tackle for New Orleans in 2023 and taking the majority of snaps at the position at Houston, Oct. 15.

Round 2: Cornerback Alontae Taylor – Taylor continued to be a big piece of the Saints secondary in 2023, starting 13 of 17 contests and adapting to a new role as slot corner. Taylor recorded 75 tackles (56 solo), one sack, two interceptions, 14 passes defended, six stops for loss, and one forced fumble, all career-highs while his 14 passes defended tied for ninth in the National Football league.

Round 5: Linebacker D'Marco Jackson – Jackson contributed on special teams in all 17 games, making his defensive debut in Week 18 and finishing with four stops (one solo), eight coverage stops and one special teams fumble recovery for a touchdown.

Round 1: Defensive End Payton Turner – Appeared in two games in 2023 and finished with one tackle, two quarterback hits, and a fumble recovery. After injuring his toe in the season-opening win over Tennessee, he was placed on Injured Reserve for 16 weeks before being activated prior to the season finale vs Atlanta.

Round 2: Linebacker Pete Werner – Werner is coming off his most statistically productive campaign in year three, posting a career-high 93 tackles (career-high 60 solo) and tying for the team lead with his first two fumble recoveries, while starting all 16 games he appeared in.

Round 3: Cornerback Paulson Adebo – After missing two of the first four games of the 2023 campaign with a hamstring injury, Adebo returned to produce the best season of his career, starting all 15 games he played in, posting 76 tackles (60 solo), four interceptions, 18 pass breakups, ranked third in the NFL, two forced fumbles, and two fumble recoveries as New Orleans ranked tenth in the NFL in opponent net passing yards per game.

Round 6: Tackle Landon Young – Appeared in 13 games with four starts, three at right tackle, while also making contributions as a sixth lineman and on special teams in 2023.

ERIK MCCOY
2ND ROUND: 2019

2023 Pro Bowler
2019 PFWA All-Rookie Team

MARSHON LATTIMORE
1ST ROUND: 2017

2017 NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year
Four-Time Pro Bowler

2020

Round 1: Center/Guard Cesar Ruiz – In 2023, Ruiz started all 16 games he appeared in at right guard. After signing an extension at the start of last season, Ruiz will look to continue his consistent play and help lead the Saints offense in 2024.

2019

Round 2: Center/Guard Erik McCoy – PFWA NFL All-Rookie selection has started all 74 games and three postseason contests he's played at center. Started all 17 contests at center for New Orleans in 2023, the only member of the offensive line to open every game. Named to his first Pro Bowl.

2017

Round 1a: Cornerback Marshon Lattimore – Associated Press NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year in 2017 led all rookies with five interceptions. The former Ohio State standout started all 10 games he played in and posted 48 stops (39 solo), one interception and defended eight passes in 2023. Overall, he has started all 90 regular season games he's appeared in totaling 375 tackles (304 solo), 15 interceptions, five forced fumbles, five fumble recoveries and 86 passes defended, tied for fourth-most in the NFL since he entered the league in 2017.

Round 1b: Tackle Ryan Ramczyk – Has opened all 101 regular season games he has appeared in, 98 on the right side, in his first seven campaigns and being named to the Associated Press All-Pro team for three consecutive years (2018-20). He joined Willie Roaf as only the second Saints tackle to be named AP All-Pro three times. Since Ramczyk joined the team in 2017, the Saints have the second-fewest sacks allowed (169), the fewest in the NFC.

Round 3a: Running Back Alvin Kamara – In 2023, the 2017 Associated Press NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year led the team in both rushing and total yards from scrimmage (1,160) despite missing three games as he carried 180 times for 694 yards with two touchdowns and caught 57 passes for 490 yards with five touchdowns. Kamara became the Saints all-time leader in rushing touchdowns (54), total touchdowns (78) and all-purpose yardage (10,706). In 2023, Kamara also became the first Saint to reach 10,000 career yards from scrimmage (10,048), and tied WRs Marques Colston and Joe Horn for the most seasons with at least 75 catches in franchise history.

ALVIN KAMARA
3RD ROUND: 2017

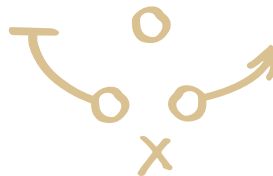

2017 NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year
Five-Time Pro Bowler & Two-Time All-Pro

2011

Round 1a: Defensive End Cameron Jordan – After battling an ankle injury suffered in the middle of the season, Jordan still managed to start all 17 games, registering 43 tackles (20 solo), two sacks, three tackles for loss, three passes defended and a fumble recovery in 2023. Jordan's eight Pro Bowl nods are the most for a defensive player in club history and second overall. His six consecutive selections (2017-22) trail only QB Drew Brees (seven from 2008-2014) and T Willie Roaf (seven from 1994-2000) for first in team record books. He finished the season with 117.5 career sacks and holds the franchise record for takedowns.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

Last Updated: April 10, 2024

1. Chicago Bears (via CAR)

Caleb Williams, QB, USC

I don't think we need to spend much time debating the direction the Bears will go here. Justin Fields is gone, and Williams is the clear best quarterback in this class. With Keenan Allen, DJ Moore and Cole Kmet as his top three targets, he's going to have a chance to hit the ground running in a way that Bryce Young just couldn't in Carolina last season.

Williams is a supreme talent with top-tier arm strength, accuracy and improvisational skills in and outside the pocket. Chicago doesn't have a second-round pick as a result of its trade for edge rusher Montez Sweat in October, so it has to add a high-ceiling starter with the No. 9 selection. The question is: Will it go with help for Williams on offense or an edge rusher to play on the other side of Sweat?

2. Washington Commanders

Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

I'm sticking with Daniels, whom I've projected to the Commanders in my three previous mock drafts. Why? I have him ranked higher than Drake Maye (North Carolina) and J.J. McCarthy (Michigan) and really like his fit in an offense designed by Kliff Kingsbury.

Washington traded away 2023 starter Sam Howell last month, clearing a spot for a rookie quarterback to take the reins. Daniels, who produced more than 15,000 combined passing and rushing yards at Arizona State and LSU, has all the tools to be a Pro Bowl passer. The Commanders need to keep building the infrastructure around him, though, and they have four picks on Day 2 -- two in the second round, two in the third -- to help.

3. New England Patriots

Drake Maye, QB, North Carolina

I made the case for the Patriots trading down in my Mock Draft 3.0, but if this is the way the board shakes out, I think they're more likely to take Maye and secure their franchise quarterback. Of course, they thought they were doing that in 2021, when they drafted Mac Jones in Round 1, and Jones is now the backup in Jacksonville.

Evaluating quarterbacks is hard, but I have a top-10 grade on Maye, who is an elite deep-ball thrower.

New England largely brought back all of its key free agents this offseason, but it hasn't added much to an offense that ranked 29th in yards per play (4.6) last season. Drafting Maye is a start, but the Pats still have a long way to go to compete for the AFC East title.

4. Arizona Cardinals

Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

I know, I know, I've been chalk in these first four picks, but I just don't see Arizona passing on its chance to take the top wideout in the class. For me, that's Harrison, but Malik Nabers (LSU) and Rome Odunze (Washington) aren't far behind. The reality is NFL teams will have clear preferences for each position, so Arizona will know which receiver it likes most and should take him here. Kyler Murray has to get some help, especially with Marquise Brown leaving in free agency.

5. Minnesota Vikings (via LAC)

J.J. McCarthy, QB, Michigan

OK, here we go with my first projected trade of the 2024 cycle. I have to believe there was a reason the Vikings made the deal last month with Houston to acquire a second first-rounder (No. 23). They needed extra capital to move up. With this trade,

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

Minnesota would send Nos. 11 and 23 along with a first-round selection in 2025 to Los Angeles, who could drop six spots and still get an offensive tackle. The Chargers and new coach Jim Harbaugh have multiple needs to fill.

At this point in the process, based on everything I've heard, I don't think the Vikings can afford to wait until No. 11 if they want one of the top four quarterbacks. They're going to have to trade up. Are they giving up too much? It's certainly possible. But if they believe McCarthy can be their long-term Kirk Cousins replacement, shouldn't they be OK with sending out their 2025 first-rounder?

I have McCarthy at No. 14 on my Big Board, but I can see on tape why a team might take him in the top five. He has intriguing physical traits and took a huge step forward as a precision passer in 2023. In Minnesota, with Justin Jefferson, Jordan Addison and T.J. Hockenson catching his passes, he would have the playmakers around him to succeed as a rookie.

6. New York Giants

Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

The Giants' pass offense fell apart last season as they finished 30th in the league in yards per dropback (4.9). Sure, most of that was without quarterback Daniel Jones, but he struggled in his six games before his ACL injury too, throwing three times as many interceptions (six) as touchdown passes. New York also ranked 30th in yards after the catch (1,601), which showed its need for outside playmakers.

Nabers could solve that problem, as he's ferocious after the catch. He can run any route, creating separation on even the best cornerbacks. This is how the Giants could instantly turn around their offense.

7. Tennessee Titans

Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

Here's another pick I've stuck with in all four of my mock drafts. Alt can step in and play left tackle as a rookie for the Titans, who parted ways with veteran Andre Dillard last month. Yes, they took an offensive lineman in Round 1 a year ago, but Peter Skoronski played mostly as guard as a rookie, and I ranked him as my No. 1 guard before the 2023 draft. Tennessee stills needs O-line help. The 6-foot-8, 321-pound Alt is a pure left tackle who started 33 games there for the Fighting Irish.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

8. Atlanta Falcons

Dallas Turner, OLB, Alabama

Atlanta's pass rush was abysmal last season -- it ranked last in the league in pass rush win rate (30.9%) -- and general manager Terry Fontenot hasn't done much to address the issues. That must mean he knows he can get help in the draft, right? The Falcons have an extra third-round pick to work with, too.

Turner is the most well-rounded edge rusher in this class. He had 10 sacks last season and 22.5 over three seasons at Alabama, and he can hold his own in the run game.

9. Chicago Bears

Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

This would be a dream scenario for the Bears, right? They would be adding an elite wideout on a rookie contract to play with Keenan Allen and DJ Moore, and they wouldn't have to move up from No. 9 to do it. Remember that Allen is a free agent in 2025, so wide receiver is a bigger need for Chicago than it might seem. The 6-3 Odunze was a nightmare for defenses to deal with in college. He had 92 catches last season, 23 of which came on vertical routes, the most in the FBS, according to ESPN Stats & Information.

If the Bears pass on a wideout, look for them to target an edge rusher. Laiatu Latu (UCLA) and Jared Verse (Florida State) are next up in my rankings.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

10. New York Jets

Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

This is really the first logical match I see for Bowers, the two-time Mackey Award winner who is head and shoulders above the other tight ends in this class. If the Jets are all-in around quarterback Aaron Rodgers this season, taking Bowers would give them the best chance to make a playoff run. They brought in left tackle Tyron Smith and right tackle Morgan Moses last month, which lessens the need for an immediate starter at tackle. This just makes sense.

11. Los Angeles Chargers (via MIN)

JC Latham, OT, Alabama

We're back to the Chargers, whom I projected to trade down six spots while adding pick No. 23 and a 2025 first-rounder. This is a super-talented and deep tackle class; teams can find rookie starters at the end of this round. That's why Jim Harbaugh & Co. should be OK with this move.

Latham is the best right tackle in this class, which fits perfectly with L.A.'s open spot along the O-line. He started 27 games there for the Crimson Tide. He's extremely powerful in the run game and is light on his feet as a pass-protector. Now the question is: Can the Chargers get their wide receiver of choice at No. 23?

12. Denver Broncos

Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

I thought hard again about giving the Broncos quarterback Bo Nix (Oregon), but I talked myself out of it. I just don't think Nix is a first-round signal-caller. I have a Round 2 grade on him based on everything I've seen on tape. He lit up defenses for the Ducks the past two seasons -- he had 74 touchdown passes to just 10 picks -- but there's some risk involved based on what he was asked to do in the Oregon offense. His average pass traveled 6.3 yards downfield last season, which was sixth shortest among 125 qualified FBS quarterbacks, according to ESPN Stats & Info.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

Instead, Denver can look to improve a defense that ranked 30th in yards per play allowed (5.8) last season and pair Mitchell with Pat Surtain. Mitchell, my top-ranked cornerback, had 46 pass breakups in four seasons at Toledo, and he ripped off an elite 4.33-second 40-yard dash at the combine. He's ready to play early and often as a rookie.

13. Las Vegas Raiders

Taliese Fuaga, OT, Oregon State

Las Vegas could be another team to watch for the edge rushers, but I don't think it can ignore its void at right tackle, particularly in this great class. Fuaga, one of my favorite prospects in this draft, is a punishing blocker who plays with nastiness. He allowed just one sack over the past two seasons while playing right tackle for the Beavers. He and veteran Kolton Miller would make a solid duo of bookends. Cornerback is the other position I considered for the Raiders, with Terrion Arnold (Alabama) likely to go in this range.

14. New Orleans Saints

Olu Fashanu, OT, Penn State

This is a pairing I've projected for the past two months, as the Saints should be concerned with 2022 first-rounder Trevor Penning's play over his first two seasons. Penning hasn't proved to be an NFL-level left tackle. Fashanu, on the other hand, has high-end traits in a 6-6 frame. He allowed just one sack in almost 700 pass-blocking plays in his college career.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

15. Indianapolis Colts

Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

This is an easy match, right? Cornerback is the Colts' biggest need, and Arnold is my second-ranked corner. He had five interceptions last season as he developed into the Crimson Tide's top defensive back. He played a ton of press coverage in college, so he understands angles and knows how to knock receivers off their routes. He would have a chance to be Indianapolis' top CB as a rookie.

16. Seattle Seahawks

Troy Fautanu, G, Washington

The Seahawks traded away their second-round selection for defensive tackle Leonard Williams, which means they don't have the luxury of waiting to fill their biggest hole, which is at guard. They have to get their guy here. Day 3 picks Anthony Bradford and Olu Oluwatimi didn't prove last season that they could be starters.

Fautanu is an ideal fit if he makes it to this pick. He started 28 games at left tackle in college, but I see a higher ceiling for him if he moves inside at the next level. At 6-4, 317 pounds, he could develop into an elite guard.

17. Jacksonville Jaguars

Cooper DeJean, CB, Iowa

This is a spot to watch for the fourth wide receiver off the board, with Brian Thomas Jr. (LSU), Xavier Worthy (Texas) and Xavier Legette (South Carolina) next up in my rankings. Jacksonville could try to replace Calvin Ridley's production with one of these rookies. Still, I see cornerback as a necessary addition for the Jaguars, who signed Ronald Darby to a two-year deal but need more competition across from Tyson Campbell.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

DeJean, who suffered a broken leg in November, was a shutdown defender and an electric return man in college. He allowed only one completion of 20-plus yards in 2023.

18. Cincinnati Bengals

Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

As of now, I'm assuming the Bengals are keeping wideout Tee Higgins, who was franchise-tagged but requested a trade last month. If they plan to give Higgins an extension, they could instead look toward a defense that ranked last in the league in both yards per play allowed (6.0) and yards per pass attempt allowed (8.1) last season.

Murphy led the Big 12 with 33 QB pressures last season, which is even more impressive when you consider he played nearly all of his snaps along the interior. He has a lightning-quick get-off at the snap. He's the best 3-technique tackle in this class.

19. Los Angeles Rams

Laiatu Latu, OLB, UCLA

It might have gone under the radar outside of L.A., but the Rams got nine sacks from rookie defensive tackle Kobie Turner and eight sacks from rookie edge rusher Byron Young last season. Wideout Puka Nacua wasn't their only rookie who broke out. Still, they could use more help in the front seven, particularly with Aaron Donald now retired.

Latu is the best pure edge rusher in this class, and he already has an array of pass-rush moves. He ranked first in the FBS in total pressures (55) and had 13 sacks in 2023. I haven't heard any recent red flags around his medical reports, as there were some questions last fall because he medically retired from football because of a neck injury he suffered when he was at Washington in 2021.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

20. Pittsburgh Steelers

Graham Barton, C/G, Duke

Cornerback, wide receiver, center -- I wouldn't be surprised with any of these positions for Pittsburgh, which has made a few intriguing additions this offseason. The Steelers parted ways with starting pivot Mason Cole in February, and taking Barton, my top-ranked center, might even be an upgrade. Barton played center as a freshman but spent the past three seasons at left tackle for the Blue Devils, and I see his pro future along the interior. He allowed just three sacks over the past two seasons.

21. Miami Dolphins

Jared Verse, DE, Florida State

Yes, Miami has Bradley Chubb and Jaelan Phillips as its top edge rushers, but both are coming off serious season-ending injuries. Phillips tore an Achilles in late November, while Chubb tore an ACL in early January. There's no guarantee either is 100 percent healthy when training camp starts. That's why the Dolphins could take Verse, who has impressive power in his 254-pound frame. His 50 QB pressures last season were the eighth most in the FBS. Miami has to replace a few starters after offseason subtractions, but Verse would be a no-brainer selection if he's still on the board.

22. Philadelphia Eagles

Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

Philadelphia's defense fell apart at the end of last season, and top corners Darius Slay and James Bradberry are in their 30s. It's time to add an injection of youth in the secondary. Wiggins surrendered just one completion of 20-plus yards in 2023, and he has outstanding speed -- he ran 4.28-second 40-yard dash at the combine. The blend of cover skills and physical tools should make him an early contributor.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

23. Los Angeles Chargers (via CLE/HOU)

Xavier Worthy, WR, Texas

Here's where the Chargers could add a receiver to an underwhelming corps (on paper). After parting ways with Mike Williams and Keenan Allen, their top three wideouts are Joshua Palmer, Quentin Johnston and Derius Davis, who combined for four touchdowns last season. That's not good enough for quarterback Justin Herbert.

You might know Worthy for his speed -- he set the combine record for fastest 40-yard dash (4.21 seconds) -- but he has a well-rounded game. He had 26 career touchdown catches for the Longhorns, who used him on vertical routes, screens and crossers. He's tough to tackle once he gets a full head of steam. He also has a ton of value in the return game.

24. Dallas Cowboys

Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

This has to be a tackle, right? Tyron Smith is gone, and Tyler Smith, a first-round pick in 2022, has played extremely well at left guard. Would Dallas move Tyler Smith outside and take the risk that he's only an above-average left tackle? If I was the general manager, I'd take Guyton, one of the most physically impressive players in this class. At 6-7, 322 pounds, he moves like a tight end. He played mostly right tackle in college, but he could make the move to Dak Prescott's blind side for the Cowboys.

25. Green Bay Packers

Amarius Mims, OT, Georgia

While it's possible Rasheed Walker, a seventh-rounder in 2022, could be the long-term replacement for David Bakhtiari at left tackle in Green Bay, I'd take a tackle with upside here. Again, this is the draft in which teams should pursue a first-round tackle.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

The 6-8, 340-pound Mims started just eight games in college, but he was excellent when he was on the field. Once he locks into edge rushers, they get swallowed up in his massive wingspan. He didn't allow any sacks in his career. The Packers have an extremely young offense, and Mims would be another pillar to build around.

26. Tampa Bay Buccaneers

Chop Robinson, OLB, Penn State

How about Tampa Bay as the team for Robinson, an intriguing pass-rusher with upside? The Bucs have gotten just three sacks in two seasons from 2022 second-rounder Logan Hall, and 2021 first-rounder Joe Tryon-Shoyinka still hasn't broken out (13 sacks in three seasons). Robinson had 9.5 sacks over his final two college seasons, but his 18% pressure rate last season -- which ranked sixth in the FBS -- showed he can create havoc even if he doesn't take down the quarterback.

Cornerback is another position the Bucs might consider. I have T.J. Tampa (Iowa State) and Kool-Aid McKinstry (Alabama) next up on my Big Board.

27. Arizona Cardinals (via HOU)

Darius Robinson, DL, Missouri

I have the Cardinals taking receiver Marvin Harrison Jr. with their top pick, and they should go defense with their selections at Nos. 27 and 35. They ranked near the bottom in several categories on D last season, including QBR allowed (57.3), yards per play allowed (5.7) and sacks (33). They also haven't made many impact moves this offseason.

Robinson was one of the best prospects at the Senior Bowl in early February; he overpowered blockers in one-on-one drills. At 6-5, 285 pounds, he's a tweener between end and tackle, but he should take snaps at both positions at the next level. That versatility is valuable.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

28. Buffalo Bills

Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

What, exactly, is the Bills' plan at wide receiver? They just traded Stefon Diggs, and they let Gabe Davis walk in free agency. Khalil Shakir, Curtis Samuel and Mack Hollins top their depth chart at the position. Could Buffalo be a team to watch for a trade up into the top 10 for either Rome Odunze or Malik Nabers? I wouldn't rule it out, but it would be costly, likely forcing the franchise to sacrifice its 2025 first-rounder.

In this scenario, though, a talented wideout could fall into the Bills' lap. Thomas was an incredible vertical threat for Jayden Daniels last season, leading the country in touchdown catches with 17, 10 of which came on go routes or fades. He ran a stellar 4.33-second 40 at the combine. He could be a legit No. 1 WR, which quarterback Josh Allen now needs.

29. Detroit Lions

Adonai Mitchell, WR, Texas

Detroit general manager Brad Holmes had a tremendous 2023 draft class, which featured impact contributions from tight end Sam LaPorta, running back Jahmyr Gibbs, defensive back Brian Branch and linebacker Jack Campbell. Can he do it again? Looking at this Lions roster, there aren't many holes to fill. I could make the case for them taking a depth interior offensive lineman, an edge rusher or a corner, but receiver also stands out, particularly one who could run vertical routes and play on the other side of Jameson Williams.

Mitchell could be a fit. At 6-2, he ran a 4.34-second 40 at the combine, showing off impressive physical tools. He had 11 touchdowns last season. You might consider this a luxury pick, but this roster is so talented that the Lions can afford to take Mitchell.

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

30. Baltimore Ravens

Kool-Aid McKinstry, CB, Alabama

I had been focused on a tackle for the Ravens in my previous mock drafts, but I don't think we can discount their need at cornerback. Marlon Humphrey was limited to 10 games last season, and while Brandon Stephens emerged as a starter-level player, there aren't many other players on the roster capable of playing outside corner.

That's why McKinstry, a physical corner who allowed only one touchdown catch as the nearest defender in coverage over the past two seasons, could make sense. He's not the biggest defender (6 feet, 199 pounds), but he has experience matching up with the best of the best in the SEC. He's also a dynamic punt returner.

31. San Francisco 49ers

Roger Rosengarten, OT, Washington

I'm going to stick with my projection from Mock Draft 3.0, as Rosengarten could challenge Colton McKivitz for snaps at right tackle. Rosengarten didn't allow any sacks in his 1,158 pass-blocking snaps for the Huskies. He also has some familiarity with one of San Francisco's stars, as Christian McCaffrey's dad, Ed, was his high school coach for two seasons at Valor Christian in Colorado.

32. Kansas City Chiefs

Xavier Legette, WR, South Carolina

Another mock draft, another wideout connected with Chiefs to end Round 1. Legette made a leap in 2023, putting up 1,255 receiving yards with seven touchdowns. He had just 167 yards in the entire 2022 season. He then ran an eye-popping 4.39-second 40-yard dash at the combine, solidifying himself among the top 10 prospects at his position. Kansas City added Marquise Brown but needs to add more pass-catchers this offseason.

Last Updated: April 3, 2024

1. Chicago Bears (via CAR)

Caleb Williams, QB, USC

We know the Bears will use the first overall pick on a quarterback -- they traded Justin Fields to the Steelers last month -- and Williams is a safe bet to be the answer under center. His dazzling playmaking ability will travel to the NFL, and he'd be set up for early success with an enviable wide receiver duo of DJ Moore and Keenan Allen. Chicago might even be able to further improve his supporting cast with its second top-10 selection at No. 9. Either way, this pick concludes the stress-free portion of the draft, as things get interesting from here.

2. Washington Commanders

Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

Forecasting who the Commanders will take is a bit trickier, as the team has not tipped its hand in any meaningful way. So I'll go with Daniels, the second-ranked player on my board regardless of position, to replace Sam Howell after his trade to Seattle. Daniels was the best player in college football last season, winning the Heisman Trophy, and he blends rare mobility with excellent pocket passing. He averaged more rushing yards per carry (8.4) than any other FBS player in 2023 and led the nation in QBR (95.6).

3. New England Patriots

Drake Maye, QB, North Carolina

I am firmly of the belief that the Patriots should not trade down from this pick and should take a quarterback, regardless whether it is Maye or Daniels. Maye has the ideal quarterback build at 6-foot-4 and 223 pounds, a massive arm and very, very good mobility. While he had a lesser year in 2023 compared to 2022, I still see all the traits for him to be a franchise quarterback. And New England needs one after finishing 30th in yards per attempt last season (6.1). The Patriots must use the rest of this draft to surround Maye with wide receiver and offensive line help.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

4. Arizona Cardinals

Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

This feels too good to overthink it, as the pro-ready Harrison -- who has as much upside for his position as any player in the class -- would fill what is now Arizona's most obvious need at wide receiver. The team's leading wide receiver last season was Marquise Brown, and he departed in free agency. The depth chart is light, and Harrison averaged 100.9 yards per game as a junior. He'd bring size, speed and great hands to the position.

5. Minnesota Vikings (via LAC)

J.J. McCarthy, QB, Michigan

Three quarterbacks are already off the board, and Minnesota has a big hole there after Kirk Cousins signed elsewhere in March. So I have the Vikings sending Nos. 11 and 23 this year and an additional 2025 first-rounder to the Chargers to move up to No. 5 for the class' QB4. Los Angeles, meanwhile, picks up valuable assets to build its roster back up.

Minnesota would be betting on McCarthy's combination of very good ball placement and mobility helping him become its long-term answer, with Sam Darnold in tow for 2024 if McCarthy needs time to get his feet wet. The supporting cast in Justin Jefferson, Jordan Addison, T.J. Hockenson and an elite offensive tackle duo give him a shot for serious early success. McCarthy completed 72.3% of his passes and threw only four interceptions last season.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

6. New York Giants

Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

The Giants' wide receiver corps does not have a difference-maker at the moment, but that would all change with Nabers. He's the most explosive player in the draft and a run-after-catch nightmare for defenses; he forced 27 missed tackles in 2023 during a breakout season. While the Giants appear open to considering a first-round quarterback, there are already four off the board here, so I think the team would turn its attention to upgrading around Daniel Jones.

7. Tennessee Titans

Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

The Titans came into the offseason with a lengthy to-do list but have spent big to upgrade the roster, adding Calvin Ridley, L'Jarius Sneed and Lloyd Cushenberry, among others. But one massive need remains: left tackle. Alt, a 21-year-old former college tight end, would fill that hole in a hurry. He has great length at 6-foot-9 and is a smooth operator who would only get better under the guidance of Bill Callahan, one of the best offensive line coaches in the league. The Titans allowed 64 sacks last season, tied for fourth most in the NFL, so this has to be a priority.

8. Atlanta Falcons

Dallas Turner, EDGE, Alabama

It's time for some defense, and Turner is the ideal candidate to kick things off on that side of the ball in this draft. Atlanta spent a lot of money in free agency on offense but is desperate for edge help -- it was last in pass rush win rate in 2023 (30.9%). Turner is a standout pass-rusher who had 10 sacks last season, showcasing burst and power. New coach Raheem Morris would love this addition and be able to slot him in as a top option right away.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

9. Chicago Bears

Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

This pick projection really excites me. Odunze ranks sixth on my board, meaning he's a value pick at No. 9 and a great get for the offense, which will be led by a rookie QB. The idea of Odunze alongside DJ Moore and Keenan Allen is tantalizing, as Odunze tied for the most contested catches in the FBS last season with 24. His combination of 6-foot-3 size, great body control and high-end instincts makes him a threat at every level of the field.

10. New York Jets

Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

After trading for Morgan Moses and signing Tyron Smith in free agency, the Jets have a pair of veteran starters at offensive tackle. I have concerns about durability for Smith -- he has played in just 30 of 67 possible games over the past four seasons -- and the Jets face an urgent season with QB Aaron Rodgers turning 41 in December, so taking a quality offensive tackle is still very much appealing. That said, Bowers is a difference-making tight end who would complement star wideout Garrett Wilson and recently signed Mike Williams. He would thrive with no shortage of run-after-catch opportunities.

11. Los Angeles Chargers (via MIN)

JC Latham, OT, Alabama

Following the projected move down, the Chargers can now get to work building this roster how new coach Jim Harbaugh and GM Joe Hortiz envision it -- which I expect will be through the trenches. Though the Chargers have Trey Pipkins III under contract for another two seasons, Latham would represent a short- and long-term upgrade. And he has the positional versatility to play guard if Los Angeles wanted to keep Pipkins on the field. Latham's overwhelming strength is a perfect fit for a team that will want to wear opponents out with its physicality.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

12. Denver Broncos

Bo Nix, QB, Oregon

The clock is ticking for the Broncos to address the quarterback room -- they currently have only Jarrett Stidham and Ben DiNucci on the roster, and there are few remaining available options to boost the depth outside of the draft. With four quarterbacks off the board, the Broncos must act urgently. They don't have a second-round pick this year, making any sort of move up the board difficult to pull off. So I instead have them taking my QB5 despite him being the No. 37 prospect on my board.

Nix's accuracy and processing speed would appeal to coach Sean Payton, as he finished his college career by completing 77.4% of his passes in 2023 -- an FBS single-season record. His tape was impressive to watch.

13. Las Vegas Raiders

Taliese Fuaga, OT, Oregon State

The Raiders addressed their most pressing need of the offseason by signing defensive tackle Christian Wilkins to a huge free agent deal, which forms one of the most devastating defensive line duos in football with him and Maxx Crosby. Next up is the right side of the offensive line, as the Raiders are thin at both tackle and guard there. Fuaga would alleviate that issue in a hurry. He is known for bringing a nastiness to an offensive line and setting the tone, but he's also an impressively smooth-moving right tackle.

14. New Orleans Saints

Olumuyiwa Fashanu, OT, Penn State

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

Stating anything with certainty around the draft is risky business, but I feel good about saying the Saints will address their offensive line in the first round. They have major questions at both offensive tackle spots, as 2022 first-rounder Trevor Penning has struggled and Ryan Ramczyk has an ongoing knee issue. Fashanu is a plug-and-play starter at left tackle, with excellent size and very good feet for the position. He has the talent to anchor this line for quite some time, and adding Fashanu would allow the Saints to try Penning at another spot.

15. Indianapolis Colts

Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

I was impressed with how the Colts' secondary held up last season with a largely young and inexperienced perimeter cornerback group, but they still need to address the position in this draft. Enter Mitchell, a fast perimeter cornerback whose nose for the football is impossible to miss. Mitchell's four-interception game in 2022 -- including two that were run back for touchdowns -- was one of the most enjoyable performances to study for any prospect in the class. He looks like a receiver with the football in his hands and has elite speed (4.33-second 40-yard dash at the combine).

16. Seattle Seahawks

Troy Fautanu, G, Washington

Fautanu wouldn't even have to move in this scenario, and he'd provide a huge boost for a razor-thin interior of the Seahawks' offensive line. Fautanu was an awesome college left tackle but has the flexibility to kick inside and play guard. Seattle lost Damien Lewis and Phil Haynes in free agency (the former on a lucrative deal with Carolina) and must shore up the position. Fautanu plays with an edge that shows up on tape.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

17. Jacksonville Jaguars

Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

The Jaguars had a couple of notable needs this offseason at center and cornerback, but because they added steady veteran Mitch Morse on a two-year deal to man the middle of the offensive line, cornerback takes center stage. Arnold is ranked much higher on my board than this (No. 9 overall), but the run on offensive positions could help the Jaguars get a standout on the other side of the ball here. He's aggressive, has awesome ball skills, is fearless in coverage and shows really good instincts -- all of which contributed to a huge 2023 season that included five interceptions.

18. Cincinnati Bengals

Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

Franchise-tagged receiver Tee Higgins still desires to be traded, and though a deal is not a certainty, it's a reminder that the Bengals have to examine the receiver spot in the draft. Higgins could choose to play out the season and test free agency in 2025 (a double tag is expensive), and the wideout room could become historically expensive if Higgins is extended with Ja'Marr Chase now also extension eligible. Thomas has the best second gear of any wideout in the class, as his effortless ability to separate down the field helped him lead the FBS with 17 receiving touchdowns in 2023.

19. Los Angeles Rams

Chop Robinson, EDGE, Penn State

There is a sudden hole in the Rams' defense after the retirement of Aaron Donald, so defensive tackle has certainly moved up their priority list. That made Texas' Byron Murphy II an intriguing consideration here. But the Rams' need for a pass-rush boost led me instead to the explosive Robinson. While his modest sack production (four in 2023) will be something teams dig in on, I see the best first step for any pass-rusher in the entire class and a player who can bend the edge in a hurry. It's easy for me to envision him stuffing the stat sheet much more at the NFL level.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

20. Pittsburgh Steelers

Graham Barton, C, Duke

Although wide receiver was a thought here after the Steelers traded Diontae Johnson, Pittsburgh's history of finding talented wideouts beyond the first round and the position's depth in this class made me go another direction. Barton is among the most versatile linemen available, having played left tackle his final three seasons at Duke after playing center as a true freshman. I view him as an interior player in the NFL and a center for the Steelers, as he is arguably the most impressive run-blocker in the class. His versatility, core power and handwork all stood out to me when watching tape.

21. Miami Dolphins

Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

The Dolphins just watched Christian Wilkins depart in free agency, but Murphy has some traces of Wilkins in his game as a disruptive interior defender. Murphy had a great season in 2023 with five sacks, but the stats are far from the full story of his impact. He has a unique ability to torque and hold up against the run, and he makes life easier for the players around him.

22. Philadelphia Eagles

Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

Philly has undergone a ton of change this offseason, but one area not yet addressed in a significant manner is the cornerback room. While Darius Slay and James Bradberry will remain fixtures this season, the Eagles need an infusion of both speed and youth. Wiggins certainly checks both of those boxes, as he was the fastest defensive player at the combine (4.28-second 40-yard dash). I've harped on these plays throughout the pre-draft process, but Wiggins chased down ball carriers who looked bound for the end zone and forced a fumble on two separate occasions last season. That level of effort helps teams win games.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

23. Los Angeles Chargers (via CLE/HOU)

Adonai Mitchell, WR, Texas

There is a plausible scenario in which the Chargers stand pat at No. 5 and take the best wide receiver available. After releasing Mike Williams and trading Keenan Allen, they have to reshape their wide receiver room. But here Los Angeles can stockpile picks and still take advantage of a deep receiver class, landing a buttery smooth route runner in Mitchell. He has excellent size, great speed and reliable hands, with just one drop in his lone season at Texas (he transferred from Georgia). He also averaged 15.4 yards per catch last season and would be a good fit with quarterback Justin Herbert.

24. San Francisco 49ers (via Dallas)

Amarius Mims, OT, Georgia

It would be no surprise if the 49ers act swiftly to fortify their offensive line. I have them sending No. 31 and a third-rounder to the Cowboys for No. 24, giving them a chance to add a potential future star.

Mims is 6-foot-8 and 340 pounds, and he has nearly 87 inches in wingspan and terrific footwork. He's inexperienced with just 803 college snaps and eight starts, but after extending right tackle Colton McKivitz through 2024, San Francisco could afford to develop Mims this offseason and work him into the lineup as needed in Year 1. Mims would also be a potential succession plan to Trent Williams long term at left tackle.

25. Green Bay Packers

Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

Green Bay's roster is full of youth with developmental upside -- many of whom hit their stride ahead of schedule in 2023 -- and Guyton fits right in. He was essentially a one-year full-time starter in college, manning the right tackle spot for Oklahoma in 2023 (he began his career in 2020-2021 at TCU, which included snaps at H-back). At 6-foot-8 and 322 pounds, his frame alone makes him an intriguing player, but toss in his solid footwork, and the potential is immense. I view Guyton as an NFL left tackle who would immediately compete with Rasheed Walker for the starting job and soon become a fixture there.

26. Tampa Bay Buccaneers

Laiatu Latu, EDGE, UCLA

The Bucs have holes at edge rusher and along the interior of their offensive line, and Latu -- my No. 16 prospect -- is the most refined pass-rusher in the class, showing off masterful hand usage and understanding of how to set up opposing offensive linemen on tape. A neck injury early in his college career forced Latu into medical retirement while at Washington, though he eventually received clearance after a transfer to UCLA. It's a significant part of the calculation in drafting him and why he might not hear his name called earlier, but his 23.5 sacks over the past two seasons speak to his talent.

27. Arizona Cardinals (via HOU)

Jared Verse, EDGE, Florida State

Arizona has three top-35 picks, making it a possible trade-up team late in the first round if it has a specific target. But the Cardinals' patience in this scenario would pay off in the form of Verse, a super powerful pass-rusher who many thought was bound for the draft last year (he was viewed as a possible first-round pick even then). Verse is a slightly older prospect -- he'll be 24 during his rookie season -- and doesn't have quite the same bend as the rushers taken prior to him, but he's going to be a good pro and can fill a major need for Arizona. He had 18 sacks over the past two seasons.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

28. Buffalo Bills

Xavier Worthy, WR, Texas

The Bills' glaring weakness at wide receiver became even bigger when Buffalo traded Stefon Diggs to Houston on Wednesday, and I have the Bills flagged as another potential trade-up candidate. But there will also be options available at No. 28 given the class's depth. I'm sure you've heard Worthy ran the fastest 40-yard dash time at the combine since at least 2003 (4.21 seconds), but the game speed he showed on film is just as important as his timed speed. Worthy has excellent tracking skills on vertical passes down the field, too, helping him to 1,014 yards last season. I'm envisioning Josh Allen moon shots thrown to a wide-open Worthy.

29. Detroit Lions

Cooper DeJean, CB, Iowa

Cornerback was already a priority for Detroit prior to the release of Cameron Sutton (amid allegations of domestic battery), and it now feels like an early must-have in the draft. DeJean would join former Iowa teammate (and 2023 first-rounder) Jack Campbell in Detroit and provide a boost to the Lions' secondary. He's springy with exceptional man coverage skills and on-ball production (seven INTs over the past two years). GM Brad Holmes and coach Dan Campbell would surely be drawn to DeJean's toughness and willingness as a tackler, two traits that also lead evaluators to think he could be the best safety in the class if he moved to that spot. But I view him as a corner -- and a really good one.

30. Baltimore Ravens

Kingsley Suamataia, OT, BYU

Baltimore will be filling at least one spot along the offensive line in the draft following the trade of Morgan Moses and departure of John Simpson in free agency. In fact, both tackle spots bear monitoring as Ronnie Stanley reworked his deal this offseason and is now scheduled to be a free agent in 2025. Suamataia moves extremely well and can open lanes in space, but he might require some time to develop.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

ESPN – FIELD YATES

31. Dallas Cowboys (via SF)

Jordan Morgan, OT, Arizona

The Cowboys figure to be locked in on a tackle following Tyron Smith's departure in free agency, especially if they intend to keep Tyler Smith at left guard. No other team has been more passive in free agency, but after the trade back, the Cowboys can fill holes and build depth through the draft. Morgan can be a starting left tackle, but he also can kick inside to left guard if Dallas ultimately prefers to move Tyler Smith to tackle full time. Morgan would make it eight offensive tackles in Round 1, which would tie the 2008 common draft era record (since 1967), per ESPN Stats & Information.

32. Kansas City Chiefs

Ennis Rakestraw Jr., CB, Missouri

I'm not sure any other team has a better recent track record of drafting cornerbacks than the Chiefs, but after the trade of L'Jarius Sneed, there's a bit of a gap in the overall depth of the unit on the perimeter. Rakestraw is a tailor-made fit for this roster, as he plays with an edge, similar to Sneed. Few corners can impose their will on a game like Rakestraw did at the collegiate level; that will travel to the pros. Alternatively, Kansas City could look at receivers or offensive tackles, but with six and eight, respectively, already drafted, it might be best to wait until Day 2 there.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

Last Updated: April 17, 2024

1. Chicago Bears (via CAR)

Caleb Williams, QB, USC

Nothing is official until commissioner Roger Goodell steps to the podium in Detroit and announces the selection, but Williams will be a Bear in a little more than a week.

2. Washington Commanders

Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

The draft winds will continue to swirl in unpredictable directions up until draft night. Right now, though, the buzz is pointing towards Daniels being the pick at No. 2. Truth is, new Washington general manager Adam Peters and head coach Dan Quinn aren't tipping their hands, so everyone is still guessing at this point.

3. New England Patriots

Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

Listening to trade offers is the responsible move for de facto general manager Eliot Wolf. But it is tough to imagine the Patriots passing on a quarterback here, especially if Maye makes it to No. 3. Owner Robert Kraft is not interested in another offensive season like last year in New England.

4. Minnesota Vikings (via ARI)

J.J. McCarthy, QB Michigan

It is no secret that the Vikings are quarterback shopping in the NFL Draft, but how high can they trade up to secure their guy? In this scenario, Minnesota jumps to No. 4 for

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

McCarthy, which would mark the first time in NFL Draft history we see quarterbacks drafted 1-2-3-4 overall.

5. Arizona Cardinals (via LAC)

Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

Just like last year, Cardinals general manager Monti Ossenfort works the phones to trade out of the top five ... but then jumps right back up to grab an Ohio State stud. In 2023, it was Paris Johnson Jr.; this year it's Harrison. The smooth maneuvering costs Arizona the No. 35 pick here, but it adds No. 23 and a 2025 third-rounder for essentially moving back one spot.

6. New York Giants

Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

I think the Giants will examine their trade-up options for a quarterback, but in this scenario, they stay put and add the true premier weapon they have been missing. Nabers would have been my No. 1 overall prospect in each of the last two draft classes.

7. Tennessee Titans

Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

For the sake of being different, I could throw another name in here — but why go away from what makes sense? Alt fills a clear hole and (along with 2023 first-round left guard Peter Skoronski) would give the Titans one of the more promising left sides of an offensive line in the league.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

8. Atlanta Falcons

Dallas Turner, EDGE, Alabama

There is a good chance we see something this year that has happened just once (2021) in the Super Bowl era: no defensive players selected in the first seven picks of the draft. If that comes to fruition, the Falcons will have their choice of the top defensive player on their board at No. 8 — and I don't think many people will be surprised if that is Turner.

9. Chicago Bears

Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

With only four draft picks this year, general manager Ryan Poles will be enticed by trade-back opportunities here to recoup draft capital. But when the Bears are feeling left out in the second round, they can throw on Odunze highlights and feel just fine about this decision. Adding Keenan Allen was a no-brainer, but he might only be a one-year rental.

10. New York Jets

Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

If you focus only on the "TE" positional designation here, you might not love this pick. But if you pay attention to the dynamic impact Bowers can bring to an offense, this isn't a hard sell. The Napa, Calif., native is as much a tight end as he is a slot receiver who can also block inline or line up outside. The Jets are in a win-now mindset, and Bowers makes the offense better from day one.

11. Los Angeles Chargers (via ARI/MIN)

JC Latham, G/T, Alabama

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

Trading back for an offensive lineman would be an unsurprising move for the Chargers. The bigger mystery might be which offensive lineman they prefer. Oregon State's Taliese Fuaga is a devastating run blocker and Washington's Troy Fautanu has legitimate position versatility, but I'll go with Latham, who is arguably the strongest player in the draft and was recruited out of high school not too long ago by Jim Harbaugh.

12. Denver Broncos

Taliese Fuaga, G/T, Oregon State

With Garrett Bolles entering the final year of his deal, the Broncos have done plenty of homework on the tackles in this draft class. Fuaga can compete for a spot at guard as a rookie while being the long-term plan at tackle.

13. Las Vegas Raiders

Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

The Raiders will certainly consider several offensive and defensive linemen at this spot. With two worthy cornerback prospects on the board, though, both Arnold and Quinyon Mitchell will be part of the conversation. I wouldn't be surprised to see either corner here, but Arnold has the dog mentality that speaks directly to Antonio Pierce.

14. New Orleans Saints

Olu Fashanu, OT, Penn State

Considering the Saints' depth chart and the players expected to be drafted in this range, offensive tackle makes too much sense. And Fashanu might be the best-case scenario for New Orleans.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

15. Indianapolis Colts

Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

It wouldn't be surprising to see the Colts go with a dynamic pass catcher at 15, especially if Bowers is still available. But Mitchell is an ideal fit, too, considering his tape, on-ball production and traits.

16. Seattle Seahawks

Troy Fautanu, G/T, Washington

The safe bet might be a trade down by the Seahawks, but it would be tough to move away from Fautanu if he falls here. Though the Huskies' left tackle can stay on the outside if needed, his skill set could be maximized inside and would give the Seahawks appealing versatility across the offensive line.

17. Buffalo Bills (via JAX)

Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

The Bills need their draft picks to remodel the roster with young, low-priced depth, but general manager Brandon Beane is an aggressive drafter and has never shied away from moving up in the first round to get his guy. Thomas is an outstanding size/speed athlete with better route-running skill than given he's credit for, and he'd give Josh Allen a new WR1 on offense.

18. Cincinnati Bengals

Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

With his explosive twitch and natural leverage, Murphy moves differently than any other defensive tackle in this draft class. He is equally disruptive versus the run and when rushing the passer — something the Bengals are looking to add to the roster.

19. Los Angeles Rams

Jared Verse, EDGE, Florida State

Since Sean McVay became head coach, the Rams have picked in the top 60 six times — all six have been offensive players. But it feels like that will change this year with the Rams back in the first round and needing so many upgrades on defense, including at edge rusher. Verse brings all-day power and disruption with a motor that doesn't quit.

20. Pittsburgh Steelers

Graham Barton, C, Duke

The Steelers have multiple needs on the offensive line, and Barton offers the five-position versatility that would allow Pittsburgh to get its best five on the field. In the long term, he'll lock down the center position for the Steelers' offense.

21. Miami Dolphins

Laiatu Latu, EDGE, UCLA

The Dolphins weren't scared off by Jaelan Phillips' injury past, and I don't think they will shy away from Latu's either. With Bradley Chubb and Phillips working their way back from injury, Latu and his savvy pass-rush skills can contribute immediately in Miami.

22. Philadelphia Eagles

Amarius Mims, OT, Georgia

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

This would be an ideal landing spot for the inexperienced Mims. After making just eight starts at Georgia, he can earn his graduate degree from “Stoutland University” (under the watchful eye of Eagles O-line coach Jeff Stoutland) before taking over for Lane Johnson as the right tackle of the future. The Athens-to-Philadelphia pipeline remains fruitful.

23. Arizona Cardinals (via CLE/HOU/MIN)

Cooper DeJean, CB, Iowa

Head coach Jonathan Gannon will be targeting savvy, high-character players in the draft. DeJean — and his versatility in the secondary — fits the bill.

24. Dallas Cowboys

Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

Ideally, the Cowboys would love to keep Tyler Smith at left guard, but it might depend on how this draft plays out. In this scenario, they add the raw but toolsy tackle, who they hope will be the next Tyron Smith.

25. Green Bay Packers

Jackson Powers-Johnson, C/G, Oregon

There are several ways the Packers can attack the offensive line in the draft. One of those is to select Powers-Johnson, who can provide an upgrade at center and allow Green Bay to keep Zach Tom at tackle while moving Josh Myers to guard.

26. Tampa Bay Buccaneers

Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

The Buccaneers have more questions than established answers on their cornerback depth chart, especially after the Carlton Davis trade. Although his marginal play strength is a red flag, Wiggins is a high-level athlete with cover awareness that will appeal to coach Todd Bowles.

27. Arizona Cardinals (via HOU)

Chop Robinson, EDGE, Penn State

With Harrison, DeJean and Robinson, this is an All-Big Ten first round for Arizona. Robinson doesn't have the body of work (15 tackles, four sacks over 10 games in 2023) that teams ideally target this early, but his first-step explosion is different than any other pass rusher in this class.

28. Jacksonville Jaguars (via BUF)

Kool-Aid McKinstry, CB, Alabama

In this scenario, the Jaguars are able to move down in the first round and still address the cornerback position with a strong option. McKinstry might not have elite speed, but he's confident, controlled and smart, which will get him on the field as a rookie.

29. Las Vegas Raiders (via DET)

Michael Penix Jr., QB, Washington

According to The Athletic's Vic Tafur, "the whispers are getting louder" that the Raiders might draft Penix at No. 13. But this scenario feels like the better option, even if it means parting with a pair of Day 2 draft picks. A polarizing player among NFL front offices, Penix is an aggressive downfield passer with the mental toughness that will certainly stand out for Pierce and his staff.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

THE ATHLETIC – DANE BRUGLER

31. Baltimore Ravens

Jordan Morgan, OT, Arizona

Considered a tackle by some teams and a guard by others, Morgan would provide immediate depth at both spots for the Ravens. He is well schooled as both a run blocker and pass protector and has the athletic balance to match up well against NFL defensive linemen.

31. San Francisco 49ers

Jer'Zhan Newton, DT, Illinois

Regardless of their perceived top needs, the 49ers are always looking for upgrades on the defensive line. Newton doesn't have ideal size for what San Francisco wants (similar to how he fits in most schemes), but his disruptive nature and relentless play personality are qualities that help him overcome average measurements.

32. Kansas City Chiefs

Adonai Mitchell, WR, Texas

This is a fun pairing of player and team. Mitchell is a loose, limber pass catcher and has the ingredients to be the top weapon for an NFL offense.

1. Chicago Bears (via CAR)

Caleb Williams, QB, USC

Trading Justin Fields to the Steelers paves the way for the Bears to add the USC standout as their franchise quarterback. Williams steps into an upgraded offensive lineup that should enable him to flourish as a starter from Day 1.

2. Washington Commanders

Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

Offensive coordinator Kliff Kingsbury's history working with Kyler Murray and other athletic quarterbacks could make Daniels the perfect fit for the Commanders' new offense.

3. New England Patriots

J.J. McCarthy, QB, Michigan

Given Tom Brady's success with the Patriots, taking McCarthy -- the best quarterback in Michigan history -- could be the move for Eliot Wolf. Despite his inexperience as a passer, McCarthy's athleticism, intangibles and winning pedigree could fit Jerod Mayo's profile for a QB1.

4. Arizona Cardinals

Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

The silky-smooth pass catcher is the WR1 Kyler Murray needs to take the Cardinals' offense to another level.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – BUCKY BROOKS

5. Los Angeles Chargers

Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

Jim Harbaugh's commitment to the running game could make the offensive line a priority in the draft. Alt is a technician with the toughness and tenacity that the coach covets in his front-line players.

6. New York Giants

Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

If the Giants remain committed to Daniel Jones, they must add more explosive playmakers to the lineup. Nabers is a catch-and-run specialist who can score from anywhere on the field.

7. Tennessee Titans

Olumuyiwa Fashanu, OT, Penn State

The Titans need to add an offensive tackle to complete the offseason makeover that will help Will Levis shine as a QB1.

8. Atlanta Falcons

Dallas Turner, EDGE, Alabama

After getting his franchise quarterback in free agency, Raheem Morris could prioritize landing an impact edge defender on draft day. Turner's size, speed and production should make him a Day 1 starter on defense.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – BUCKY BROOKS

9. Chicago Bears

Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

General manager Ryan Poles could add another weapon to the offense to help his rookie quarterback feel more comfortable as a first-year starter. A rugged playmaker with a high football IQ and positional flexibility, Odunze is a perfect WR3 to partner with a couple of veteran pass catchers (Keenan Allen and DJ Moore) on the perimeter.

10. New York Jets

Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

With the team in win-now mode and Aaron Rodgers nearing the end of his career, the Jets could opt to take a pass catcher who can dominate the middle of the field.

11. Minnesota Vikings

Drake Maye, QB, North Carolina

Kevin O'Connell and Co. might have to move up the board to land a franchise quarterback, and they have two first-round picks to help them maneuver. Maye, an athletic playmaker with A-plus arm talent and mobility, is a perfect fit for the Vikings' offense.

12. Denver Broncos

Jared Verse, DE, Florida State

Sean Payton is rebuilding the Broncos, with a premier pass rusher among the team's top needs. Verse is an energetic sack artist with the potential to reach double digits in that category.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – BUCKY BROOKS

13. Las Vegas Raiders

Taliese Fuaga, OT, Oregon State

Beefing up the offensive line should be a top priority for a team that wants to control the trenches. Fuaga is a mauler/brawler with the size, strength and nastiness to help the Raiders dominate the point of attack.

14. New Orleans Saints

JC Latham, OT, Alabama

With Ramczyk's knee putting his 2024 season in question, the Saints could opt for an offensive tackle at this point. Latham is a massive brawler with the strength, power and length to punish defenders in the running game.

15. Indianapolis Colts

Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

GM Chris Ballard is all about drafting talented prospects with prototypical traits and athleticism. Mitchell's game matches his supreme athletic talent.

16. Seattle Seahawks

Troy Fautanu, OL, Washington

The ultra-versatile front-line blocker reunites with his college offensive coordinator (new Seahawks offensive coordinator Ryan Grubb) as a potential plug-and-play starter at multiple spots.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – BUCKY BROOKS

17. Jacksonville Jaguars

Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

Adding a high-IQ cover corner with positional flexibility could help the Jaguars match up with the AFC South's dynamic offenses.

18. Cincinnati Bengals

Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

Thomas is an athletic playmaker with the size (6-foot-3, 209 pounds) and ball skills to thrive playing alongside Ja'Marr Chase and potentially Tee Higgins as well, if Higgins and the team are able to work through their stalemate.

19. Los Angeles Rams

Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

After Aaron Donald's recent retirement, adding an explosive interior defender should be a top priority. Murphy is an energetic playmaker.

20. Pittsburgh Steelers

Amarius Mims, OT, Georgia

The extra, extra-large edge blocker (6-8, 340 pounds) would help the Steelers control the trenches as they transition to a ground-and-pound squad under new offensive coordinator Arthur Smith.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – BUCKY BROOKS

21. Miami Dolphins

Jackson Powers-Johnson, IOL, Oregon

Beefing up the offensive line could help the Dolphins upgrade an offense that struggled against physical defensive fronts last season.

22. Philadelphia Eagles

Kool-Aid McKinstry, CB, Alabama

The Eagles need to improve on the island. New defensive coordinator Vic Fangio's scheme requires corners to read routes and tackle well on the perimeter. McKinstry might lack elite athleticism, but he plays like a 10-year veteran outside the numbers.

23. Minnesota Vikings (via CLE/HOU)

Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

Adding a defensive back with a high football IQ and positional flexibility would give defensive coordinator Brian Flores another weapon to feature in his aggressive, blitz-heavy scheme.

24. Dallas Cowboys

Graham Barton, IOL, Duke

Barton brings tackle-guard-center flexibility. The Cowboys could reshuffle the offensive line to put the best five blockers on the field, with Barton stepping in as a potential plug-and-play starter at multiple spots.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – BUCKY BROOKS

25. Green Bay Packers

Payton Wilson, LB, N.C. State

If Wilson clears teams' medical evaluations with an injury history that dates back to his high school days, he is a potential impact playmaker as a see-ball, get-ball defender. Though off-ball linebackers are not usually considered premium prospects in the current NFL game, Wilson's instincts, awareness and versatility could help him grade out as a blue-chip player early in his career.

26. Tampa Bay Buccaneers

Laiatu Latu, EDGE, UCLA

Bucs head coach Todd Bowles loves to bring pressure from all angles. Latu is the most natural pass rusher in the draft, with the potential to rush from a three-point stance or stand-up position.

27. Arizona Cardinals (via HOU)

Darius Robinson, EDGE, Missouri

Adding a disruptive pass rusher should be a top priority for the Cardinals. Robinson's inside-outside versatility could help him evolve into a Cam Jordan-like playmaker at the point of attack.

28. Buffalo Bills

Jer'Zhan Newton, DT, Illinois

The Bills re-signed DaQuan Jones, but they still need to plan for the long-term on the interior. Newton is a versatile one-gap penetrator with a non-stop motor.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – BUCKY BROOKS

29. Detroit Lions

Chop Robinson, EDGE, Penn State

The Lions need to find a complementary pass rusher to play opposite Aidan Hutchinson. Robinson is a freak athlete with exceptional first-step quickness.

30. Baltimore Ravens

Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

Ravens GM Eric DeCosta needs to address the edges, with Morgan Moses traded away and Ronnie Stanley struggling to stay healthy. Guyton is an intriguing option as a potential Day 1 starter at right tackle, and he has enough athleticism to eventually move to the left side.

31. San Francisco 49ers

Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

The 49ers' glaring need on the island makes Wiggins an ideal candidate for this spot. The slender speedster displays the footwork and instincts to flourish in the team's zone-based scheme.

32. Kansas City Chiefs

Kamari Lassiter, CB, Georgia

With L'Jarius Sneed out, the move could prompt the Chiefs to look for a corner at the top of the draft. Lassiter is a rock-solid cover man with superb tackling skills.

1. Chicago Bears (via CAR)

Caleb Williams, QB, USC

There's still plenty of time before Commissioner Roger Goodell officially puts the Bears on the clock for the first pick, but this pairing feels like a fait accompli.

2. Washington Commanders

Drake Maye, QB, North Carolina

There are plenty of reasons for the Commanders to choose LSU QB Jayden Daniels here, but Maye's ability to throw downfield will appeal to new GM Adam Peters.

3. New England Patriots

Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

First-year head coach Jerod Mayo is ready to put a new twist on "The Patriot Way" with a new QB at the helm. The 2023 Heisman Trophy winner packs his bags for Foxborough.

4. Arizona Cardinals

Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

Harrison declined to work out at the NFL Scouting Combine and Ohio State's pro day, but the Cardinals have watched his game tape. They're thrilled to make him the first non-QB off the board.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – CHARLES DAVIS

5. Los Angeles Chargers

Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

With Keenan Allen off to the Bears and Mike Williams signing with the Jets, the uber-competitive (and greatly needed) Nabers lands with the Chargers. Justin Herbert will greet him with open arms.

6. New York Giants

Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

I still feel that this is a prime spot for Michigan QB J.J. McCarthy, but after acquiring Drew Lock to provide insurance behind Daniel Jones, the Giants opt for the WR1 they desperately need.

7. Tennessee Titans

Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

Titans GM Ran Carthon has made some big moves in recent weeks, signing WR Calvin Ridley and trading for CB L'Jarius Sneed. Now he adds protection for QB Will Levis.

8. Atlanta Falcons

Dallas Turner, EDGE, Alabama

GM Terry Fontenot knows that the Falcons' history at edge rusher has not been pretty in the decade-plus since John Abraham departed. He seeks to remedy that situation with this selection.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – CHARLES DAVIS

9. Chicago Bears

Laiatu Latu, EDGE, UCLA

I've heard the mantra of "QB at 1, WR at 9" from Bears fans this offseason, but with the recent acquisition of Pro Bowl wideout Keenan Allen, GM Ryan Poles shifts his attention to bolstering a blossoming defense by adding a skilled pass rusher to help last year's trade-deadline pickup, Montez Sweat.

10. New York Jets

Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

The Jets have to go for it now, and that means finding more playmakers for QB Aaron Rodgers. The best tight end in the draft gets the call.

11. Minnesota Vikings

J.J. McCarthy, QB, Michigan

The Vikings made a big move, picking up a second selection in the first round to, presumably, help them make an even bigger move up the board for a quarterback. In this scenario, they stay put and still land their QB.

12. Denver Broncos

Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

Instead of reaching for a quarterback here, the Broncos add Mitchell, who should make a great running mate opposite Pro Bowl CB Pat Surtain II.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – CHARLES DAVIS

13. Las Vegas Raiders

Taliese Fuaga, OT, Oregon State

If the Raiders don't end up drafting a quarterback in Round 1, this stalwart OT would help their offense improve immediately.

14. New Orleans Saints

Olumuyiwa Fashanu, OT, Penn State

Ryan Ramczyk's 2024 season is in question and 2022 first-round pick Trevor Penning has not lived up to his promise. Tackle is a massive need, and the Saints have always taken pride in having a strong offensive line.

15. Indianapolis Colts

Cooper DeJean, CB, Iowa

DeJean goes a little earlier than some are expecting. The former Hawkeye's combination of athleticism, versatility and playmaking ability is too enticing for GM Chris Ballard to resist.

16. Seattle Seahawks

Michael Penix Jr., QB, Washington

Surprise! GM John Schneider should have no trouble doing his homework on the big-armed QB who starred just down the road in Seattle for the past two seasons. Penix reunites with former UW OC Ryan Grubb, who now holds the same title with the Seahawks.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

17. Jacksonville Jaguars

Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

The Jags have already added Arik Armstead to shore up their run defense. He will lead, teach and pair with this talented Longhorn.

18. Cincinnati Bengals

Jer'Zhan Newton, DT, Illinois

The recent signing of Trent Brown to play right tackle allows the Bengals to add a forceful and needed defensive tackle for DC Lou Anarumo.

19. Los Angeles Rams

Bo Nix, QB, Oregon

With Matthew Stafford heading into his age-36 season, Sean McVay finds his next pupil to groom for the QB1 role.

20. Pittsburgh Steelers

Jackson Powers-Johnson, C, Oregon

I had the Steelers taking an offensive tackle in the first round for the second straight year in my last mock (Broderick Jones was the pick in 2023), but a chance to get the best center in the draft is hard to pass up.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – CHARLES DAVIS

21. Miami Dolphins

Jared Verse, EDGE, Florida State

Need meets potential! The Dolphins lost their top two pass rushers to injury in 2023 (Jaelan Phillips and Bradley Chubb). Here they seize the opportunity to add one of the best edge rushers in the draft.

22. Philadelphia Eagles

JC Latham, OT, Alabama

Eagles GM Howie Roseman does a great job of thinking ahead to avoid leaving the cupboard bare at any position. Lane Johnson is still a Pro Bowl right tackle, but the selection of Latham gives legendary OL coach Jeff Stoutland time to get this tower of power ready to one day succeed Johnson.

23. Minnesota Vikings (via CLE/HOU)

Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

The Vikings continue to look to upgrade their defense and combat the potent offenses of their division rivals.

24. Dallas Cowboys

Troy Fautanu, OL, Washington

The Cowboys' offensive line is getting a bit of a makeover this offseason with Tyron Smith departing for the New York Jets. Will Dallas move 2022 first-round pick Tyler Smith to left tackle or keep him at guard? For now, Mike McCarthy says Smith is staying at guard. Either way, Fautanu works well here, as he's capable of starting at either spot.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – CHARLES DAVIS

25. Green Bay Packers

Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

The Packers give new DC Jeff Hafley another talented defender to play opposite Jaire Alexander in the secondary.

26. Tampa Bay Buccaneers

Kool-Aid McKinstry, CB, Alabama

Trading Carlton Davis created a need at cornerback. Head coach Todd Bowles will always take care of his defense, and it plays hard for him. A center like Graham Barton could also be in the mix with this pick as the Bucs look to replace the retired Ryan Jensen.

27. Arizona Cardinals (via HOU)

Zach Frazier, C, West Virginia

The Cardinals did a nice job of emphasizing physicality on the offensive line as the 2023 season progressed, and Frazier is a fit for that style of play. RB James Conner approves.

28. Buffalo Bills

Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

Yes, Malik Nabers will be the first LSU receiver off the board this year, but I believe the Bills would be getting a steal here. I think Thomas possesses Pro Bowl potential (and beyond).

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – CHARLES DAVIS

29. Detroit Lions

Braden Fiske, DT, Florida State

Surprise (again)! Lions GM Brad Holmes and HC Dan Campbell (with Detroit royalty Chris Spielman advising in the background) showed us last year that if they have conviction about a player, they will take him (SEE: RB Jahmyr Gibbs and LB Jack Campbell, both top-20 picks in 2023). Fiske has enjoyed one of the best offseasons of any prospect in this year's draft and he fits exactly what Detroit values in a player.

30. Baltimore Ravens

Ennis Rakestraw Jr., CB, Missouri

The Ravens did a magnificent job of mixing and matching in the secondary during the 2023 season. Rakestraw's build is slight, but he makes plenty of plays on the ball and is extremely aggressive against the run. In short, he plays like a Raven!

31. San Francisco 49ers

Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

The 49ers' offense will flourish as long as HC Kyle Shanahan is diagramming plays, and this agile former tight end has a chance to plug in immediately at right tackle.

32. Kansas City Chiefs

Amarius Mims, OT, Georgia

In my first mock, I had Kansas City going with the fastest player in the draft, Texas WR Xavier Worthy. However, after the recent signing of speedster Marquise Brown, GM Brett Veach turns to the offensive line and takes the ultra-talented yet inexperienced (eight college starts) tackle from Georgia.

1. Chicago Bears (via CAR)

Caleb Williams, QB, USC

The Bears have cleared the runway by trading Justin Fields. I'll be stunned if Williams isn't their choice at No. 1, and they've built an outstanding supporting cast for him.

2. Washington Commanders

Drake Maye, QB, North Carolina

I don't have any more clarity on this pick than I did in my last mock. The Commanders did move on from Sam Howell, and I'm sticking with Maye here.

3. New England Patriots

Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

I'm sure the Patriots will receive lucrative offers for this pick. At the end of the day, they need to address the most important position on the field and could do so with the third overall selection.

4. Minnesota Vikings (via ARI)

J.J. McCarthy, QB, Michigan

Now the fun really begins. After their recent trade with the Texans, it seems the Vikings are situated to aggressively move up to draft Kirk Cousins' replacement. The Cardinals trade down, bypassing a chance to pick the first receiver off the board, but they address the position later in Round 1 (SEE: Pick No. 23).

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

5. New York Jets (via LAC)

Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

The Jets are all-in with a veteran quarterback and they recently acquired two offensive tackles to shore up the O-line. They desperately need another playmaker in the passing game to complement Garrett Wilson, so they trade up to select Harrison, the top receiver in the draft and Wilson's former Ohio State teammate.

6. New York Giants

Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

I wouldn't rule out the Giants trading up for a quarterback this year. If they stick and pick at No. 6, adding Nabers' playmaking ability would be a good move.

7. Tennessee Titans

Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

The Titans' experiment with Andre Dillard did not work out last season, so they select Alt to be a staple at left tackle for the next decade.

8. Atlanta Falcons

Dallas Turner, EDGE, Alabama

The Falcons took care of their offense in free agency, most notably with the signing of quarterback Kirk Cousins. They still need to address their annual pass-rush concern.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

9. Chicago Bears

Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

The Bears could go pass rusher here after adding Keenan Allen at receiver, but I can't resist the prospect of playing Odunze alongside Allen and DJ Moore to give projected first overall pick Caleb Williams a Bengals-like receiving corps.

10. Los Angeles Chargers (via NYJ)

Taliese Fuaga, OT, Oregon State

The Chargers have stressed that they want to be able to protect Justin Herbert and run the ball under Jim Harbaugh. Fuaga is the most physical blocker in the draft and would start at right guard in Year 1 before becoming the long-term right tackle. I know there are Bolts fans who want to see them pick a receiver early in Round 1, but they can get a first-round-caliber wideout in the second round this year -- and they'd also pick up a second-round pick in next year's draft by making this projected trade with the Jets. Getting extra picks is going to be part of the building plan here, allowing Los Angeles to add starters via the draft at an affordable price after paying Herbert big bucks.

11. Minnesota Vikings

Jared Verse, EDGE, Florida State

The Cardinals trade back and still get an elite edge rusher in Verse.

12. Denver Broncos

Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

I know tight end is not a pressing need for the Broncos, but this is a "best player available" situation. They can deploy Bowers in the slot, similar to the way Sean Payton utilized Michael Thomas in New Orleans.

13. Las Vegas Raiders

Michael Penix Jr., QB, Washington

The Raiders signed Gardner Minshew to compete against Aidan O'Connell. However, I don't think those two quarterbacks have the ceiling that Penix does in the NFL. There's an assumption that Penix is more of a second-rounder, but I believe his skill set is a unique fit for the Raiders' style of play.

14. New Orleans Saints

Olumuyiwa Fashanu, OT, Penn State

2022 first-rounder Trevor Penning has not worked out for the Saints. Fashanu is the new solution at left tackle.

15. Indianapolis Colts

Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

I'll always look to connect the Colts to toolsy prospects. Mitchell ran a 4.33-second 40-yard dash at the NFL Scouting Combine and he was phenomenal at the Senior Bowl.

16. Seattle Seahawks

Troy Fautanu, OT, Washington

Fautanu reunites with Seahawks offensive coordinator Ryan Grubb, who was his OC at UW. Fautanu can play tackle, but he would slide in at guard as a rookie with the 'Hawks.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

17. Jacksonville Jaguars

Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

Arnold plays much faster than he timed at the NFL Scouting Combine (4.50 40-yard dash). He can line up inside and outside for Jacksonville.

18. Cincinnati Bengals

JC Latham, OT, Alabama

Addressing offensive tackle is a must for the Bengals, even with Trent Brown signing a one-year deal with the team. In a draft that is stacked at the position, they should be able to stay patient and have a talented player fall to them.

19. Los Angeles Rams

Laiatu Latu, EDGE, UCLA

I think adding a complementary edge rusher makes a lot of sense, with 2023 rookie sensation Kobie Turner the main man in the middle following Aaron Donald's retirement. Latu is the most natural pass rusher in the class.

20. Pittsburgh Steelers

Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

The Steelers have undergone a complete makeover at quarterback, but they still need an upgrade at tackle to play opposite last year's first-round pick, Broderick Jones.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

21. Miami Dolphins

Graham Barton, IOL, Duke

The Dolphins have endured a lot of losses in free agency, including on the interior of the offensive line. Barton has legitimate five-position flexibility.

22. Philadelphia Eagles

Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

The Eagles' pass defense was atrocious last season. Wiggins is the most natural cover man in this year's draft.

23. Arizona Cardinals (via CLE/HOU/MIN)

Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

The Cardinals passed on a chance to pick a receiver at No. 4 in this scenario, but they still land a premier pass catcher after trading down.

24. Dallas Cowboys

Jackson Powers-Johnson, IOL, Oregon

Eleven years ago, the Cowboys took center Travis Frederick near the bottom of the first round and that worked out well. They go back to the same formula with Powers-Johnson.

25. Green Bay Packers

Amarius Mims, OT, Georgia

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

The Packers have moved on from injury-riddled LT David Bakhtiari. I could still see Green Bay going in several different directions with this pick, but Mims' upside would be very tempting here.

26. Tampa Bay Buccaneers

Darius Robinson, EDGE, Missouri

Robinson offers versatility, physicality and athleticism to the Bucs' front. He would be a great complement to one of the best sleeper picks in last year's draft, third-rounder YaYa Diaby.

27. Arizona Cardinals (via HOU)

Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

The Cardinals make the last of their three first-round picks in this projection and get the best interior pass rusher in the draft class. So, in this scenario, they wrap up Round 1 with arguably the best outside and inside pass rushers available and a receiver who offers as much upside as any pass catcher in this prospect crop.

28. Buffalo Bills

Jer'Zhan Newton, DT, Illinois

Buffalo gets some help for the interior D-line with Newton. Florida State's Braden Fiske and Michigan's Kris Jenkins could be DT possibilities here, too.

29. Detroit Lions

Kool-Aid McKinstry, CB, Alabama

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

This was a tough call for me, deciding between McKinstry and Penn State edge rusher Chop Robinson. The Lions end up going with the talented outside cornerback to pair with his former Alabama teammate, slot corner Brian Branch.

30. Baltimore Ravens

Cooper DeJean, CB, Iowa

Baltimore has a knack for watching tough, smart and versatile players fall into its lap. We see it happen once again with DeJean, who comes from a noted Ravens factory at the University of Iowa, the alma mater of current Raven Tyler Linderbaum and former Ravens Geno Stone and Marshal Yanda.

31. San Francisco 49ers

Chop Robinson, EDGE, Penn State

The 49ers signed Leonard Floyd and Yetur Gross-Matos to join Nick Bosa, but they love to have a deep rotation of pass rushers to keep players fresh. Robinson has the best get-off in the class, and that's the hallmark of a Kris Kocurek-coached defensive line.

32. Kansas City Chiefs

Adonai Mitchell, WR, Texas

A lot of people might expect to see Mitchell's Texas teammate, Xavier Worthy, go here, but I feel like the Chiefs got their version of Worthy by signing Hollywood Brown. Mitchell gives Kansas City more size and physicality without sacrificing a speed element.

1. Chicago Bears (via CAR)

Caleb Williams, QB, USC

At this point, any outcome other than the Bears taking Williams with this selection would be a shock.

2. Washington Commanders

Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

Kliff Kingsbury helped Johnny Manziel win the 2012 Heisman Trophy as offensive coordinator at Texas A&M and handpicked 2018 Heisman winner Kyler Murray as head coach of the Cardinals. I see the Commanders giving their new OC another dual-threat quarterback in Daniels, who just so happened to hoist the Heisman this past December.

3. New York Giants (via NE)

Drake Maye, QB, North Carolina

In this three-spot move up the board, the Giants probably have to pay more than the standard trade chart would indicate, since the supply side of the quarterback position is dwindling but the demand remains high. Brian Daboll fostered Josh Allen's raw talents in Buffalo and could have a chance to do the same with this toolsy but inconsistent North Carolina product.

4. Minnesota Vikings (via ARI)

J.J. McCarthy, QB, Michigan

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – LANCE ZIERLEIN

In the wake of the Giants vaulting into the No. 3 spot for a quarterback, the Vikings are still able to move up for a signal-caller of their own by giving the Cardinals Pick Nos. 11 and 23. McCarthy should pair nicely with Kevin O'Connell in Minnesota.

5. Los Angeles Chargers

Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

If the first four picks are not spent on quarterbacks, this could be a trade-out spot for the Chargers. But if the draft plays out like it did in this exercise, Los Angeles' decision could come down to an offensive tackle vs. one of the top three receivers. Harbaugh saw this Ohio State star up close during his Michigan tenure and trusts his eyes here.

6. New England Patriots (via NYG)

Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

The Patriots are willing to pass on the quarterback position with the third pick in order to add more draft capital for their rebuild. After moving down, they grab the wideout with the highest ceiling in the draft.

7. Tennessee Titans

Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

Tennessee might have to choose between WR Rome Odunze and an offensive tackle here. While this deep receiver class promises plenty of enticing talent beyond Round 1, the ballyhooed OT crop will be picked over on the draft's opening night. Alt is one of the safest picks available.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – LANCE ZIERLEIN

Pass rusher or pass catcher? This could be the decision at hand for Atlanta, with Verse, Dallas Turner and Rome Odunze on the board. I'm planting a flag for Verse, who has the explosiveness and power that Raheem Morris is likely to covet.

9. Chicago Bears

Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

Every time I put together a mock draft for the Bears, I keep coming away with Caleb Williams and an ultra-talented wideout. In this case, they sit tight with the ninth pick and land a terrific ball-winner with untapped potential as a route-runner.

10. New York Jets

Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

The Jets addressed their offensive line issues in free agency and are currently set up to consider the best player available at about three different positions. Bowers is a good athlete with great run-after-catch value, which would allow Aaron Rodgers to get rid of the ball quickly.

11. Arizona Cardinals (via MIN)

Dallas Turner, EDGE, Alabama

After trading down from No. 4 in exchange for a pair of first-round picks from the Vikings, the Cardinals are still able to grab immediate pass-rush help off the edge in the form of the freaky-athletic Turner.

12. Denver Broncos

Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – LANCE ZIERLEIN

The Broncos don't own a second-round pick, so they might have interest in moving back and adding more draft currency. If not, Mitchell has the athletic and cover traits to start early opposite Pro Bowl CB Pat Surtain II.

13. Las Vegas Raiders

JC Latham, OT, Alabama

Latham is a powerhouse with solid technique, good size and the ability to start right away at right tackle. Al Davis would have loved him.

14. New Orleans Saints

Olumuyiwa Fashanu, OT, Penn State

The Saints could be choosing between offensive tackle and pass rusher in this spot. 2022 first-rounder Trevor Penning hasn't proven he has a handle on the starting left tackle role, so the Saints opt for the Penn State pass protector.

15. Indianapolis Colts

Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

Figuring out the Colts is a challenge in terms of which position they will address here. What we do know is that this Indy regime covets traits and trench warriors. Murphy's undersized, but the DT might be too talented for Chris Ballard to pass on.

16. Arizona Cardinals (via SEA)

Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – LANCE ZIERLEIN

After initially trading out of No. 4, Arizona uses the draft capital GM Monti Ossenfort has been collecting to move back up from No. 23 to this slot in order to grab LSU's other high-ceiling speedster. Thomas led the FBS with 17 touchdown receptions last season.

17. Jacksonville Jaguars

Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

C.J. Stroud and the Texans put AFC South defenses on notice last season. Arnold is an in-your-face coverage talent with high football character and the competitive fire Jacksonville coaches will love.

18. Cincinnati Bengals

Troy Fautanu, OL, Washington

The talented Fautanu offers the versatility to compete with free-agent addition Trent Brown for the right tackle spot or immediately start at left guard, if that is what the Bengals require of him. Either way, he upgrades Cincy's pass protection.

19. Los Angeles Rams

Laiatu Latu, EDGE, UCLA

The Rams really need to find an edge rusher to complement 2023 third-round hit Byron Young. This pick could come down to Latu vs. Chop Robinson. If everything checks out medically for Latu, it will be hard to pass on his game-ready rush talent.

20. Pittsburgh Steelers

Taliese Fuaga, OT, Oregon State

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – LANCE ZIERLEIN

Pittsburgh adds a pass-protecting technician at right tackle, allowing 2023 first-rounder Broderick Jones to kick over to the left side and giving the Steelers a promising, young bookend set.

21. Miami Dolphins

Chop Robinson, EDGE, Penn State

With Jaelan Phillips and Bradley Chubb both rehabbing from season-ending injuries, it won't surprise me if the Dolphins grab a veteran edge rusher in free agency and draft Robinson. Raw but ridiculously explosive, this Penn State product has immense upside with more tutelage.

22. Philadelphia Eagles

Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

Wiggins is quite slender at 173 pounds, but he possesses blazing speed and smooth footwork to mirror and match routes outside. Clearly, corner is a big area of need in Philadelphia.

23. Seattle Seahawks (via CLE/HOU/MIN/ARI)

Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

Fans often moan when their GM moves down, but Seahawks fans are used to it. John Schneider's trade from No. 16 back to 23 pays off, as Seattle still lands the best true interior lineman in this class.

24. Dallas Cowboys

Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – LANCE ZIERLEIN

The Cowboys choose to grab the talented but inexperienced tackle out of Oklahoma. Despite still being pretty new to the OT position, Guyton's plus athleticism should allow him to step in and compete for a starting job on Day 1.

25. Green Bay Packers

Tyler Nubin, S, Minnesota

Green Bay has a hole in the back end next to blockbuster free-agent addition Xavier McKinney, so why not add the best safety in this year's draft? Nubin has good size and is highly instinctive.

26. Washington Commanders (via TB)

Amarius Mims, OT, Georgia

With Washington currently holding two picks in the second round and three in the third, it would make perfect sense for the Commanders to jump back into the first round and grab any offensive tackle who slips a little, bolstering the protection for the quarterback selected at No. 2 overall.

27. Arizona Cardinals (via HOU)

Kool-Aid McKinstry, CB, Alabama

Finishing off an active first round, the Cardinals take a steady cornerback with good size and athleticism.

28. Buffalo Bills

Adonai Mitchell, WR, Texas

The departure of Gabe Davis stings less after the Bills add a faster vertical threat with a higher floor.

2024 NFL MOCK DRAFTS

NFL NETWORK – LANCE ZIERLEIN

29. Detroit Lions

Cooper DeJean, CB, Iowa

DeJean is a unique addition for the Lions, possessing the size, speed and toughness to compete for a starting spot as either a cornerback or a safety.

30. Baltimore Ravens

Jordan Morgan, OT, Arizona

This is a tough spot to project, based upon how the board sits in this simulation. The Ravens could look to move out of Round 1, but if they stick and pick, Morgan offers starting-tackle potential on either side.

31. San Francisco 49ers

Darius Robinson, DL, Missouri

Robinson has the potential to play as an early-down base end before reducing inside on throwing downs, thus allowing the newly acquired Leonard Floyd to get after the quarterback as a designated pass rusher.

32. Kansas City Chiefs

Ladd McConkey, WR, Georgia

The Chiefs snag an inside/outside receiver who is one of the most polished, game-ready targets in this class.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

1. Caleb Williams, QB, USC

6-1, 214 pounds

The Trojans struggled at the end of the regular season, losing five of their last six games, but it wasn't Williams' fault. There's a reason why defensive coordinator Alex Grinch was fired. Williams threw 30 touchdown passes to just five interceptions. He had a really tough game against Notre Dame, when he threw three of those picks, but he bounced back and played really well. He also surpassed his rushing touchdowns total from the previous season, finishing with 11.

Just turn on the tape from any of the games from Williams' Heisman-winning 2022 season and you'll see why he's the top quarterback in this class. He had 52 total touchdowns -- 42 through the air -- with just five interceptions while completing 66.6% of his passes. He ranked in the top 10 in the FBS in QBR (87.6), passing yards (4,537), yards per attempt (9.1) and throws of 20-plus yards (69).

Williams is a fabulous playmaker, and there are "wow" throws all over his tape, even going back to his freshman season at Oklahoma. He's incredible escaping the pocket and making off-platform throws, excelling when plays break down. His improvisational skills are off the charts -- it's incredible how he can make the first defender miss and create first downs out of thin air. He has great field vision and throws dimes to receivers while under duress. He's incredibly creative, which is not something we can usually say of quarterbacks.

Now, Williams is not the prototypical passer in terms of size. At 6-1, he'd be below-average for a starting NFL quarterback. But as we saw with 2023 No. 1 overall pick Bryce Young, size matters less and less to the execs making decisions in front offices.

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

LSU

2. Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

6-4, 210 pounds

I went deep on Daniels' future ahead of him taking home the Heisman Trophy. In short, he was consistent enough over the final two months of the regular season that I now feel comfortable moving him into my Big Board. I have a first-round grade on him, and he could go as high as No. 2. Over two seasons at LSU -- after he transferred from Arizona State -- Daniels threw 57 touchdown passes with just seven interceptions and added 21 rushing scores. He ranked No. 1 in the country in Total QBR last season (95.6), completing 72.2% of his passes while averaging 11.7 yards per attempt. Those are spectacular numbers.

Daniels has rare ability as a dual-threat playmaker. He can evade, elude and blow by defenders, but he also impressed with the way he can run through contact. But it's his improvement as a passer that has him looking like a Round 1 selection. Yes, having blue chip wideouts Malik Nabers and Brian Thomas Jr. to throw to was a huge benefit, but they also were fortunate to have a passer like Daniels with a big-time skill set directing the offense.

3. Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

6-3, 209 pounds

I have an elite grade on Harrison, whose name should be familiar. His dad is that Marvin Harrison, whom I scouted coming out of Syracuse in 1996 and is now in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. The younger Harrison is on track to get my highest pre-draft grade for a wideout since Calvin Johnson (2007) and Larry Fitzgerald (2004). Harrison has everything, from outstanding size and stellar hands to incredible body control and blazing speed. His dad ran a 4.33-second 40-yard dash before the 1996 draft but was just under 6 feet when the Colts took him in Round 1. Harrison Jr. is four inches taller and could have similar speed.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

He caught 77 passes for 1,263 yards with 14 touchdowns in 2022. He had 67 catches for 1,211 yards and 15 total touchdowns last season.

LSU

4. Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

6-0, 200 pounds

I love watching Nabers, whose best trait is his speed. He can take the top off the defense. He was consistent in 2022, showing elite separation skills and the ability to high-point receptions. He also was balanced, catching 35 passes when lined up in the slot and 37 when lined up out wide. That versatility will matter at the next level. He finished with 72 catches for 1,017 yards and three touchdowns. He didn't work out at the combine, but he ran a 4.35-second 40-yard dash at his pro day in late March, which would have been a top-five time among receivers in Indianapolis.

Nabers blew away those numbers in 2023, catching 89 passes for 1,569 yards with 14 scores. He has good hands and showed toughness in taking a shot while hauling in a catch over the middle of the field. He tracks the ball exceptionally well. He gets easy separation on cornerbacks. I've been impressed with his run-after-the-catch ability. He lit up Mississippi State with 13 catches for 239 yards and two scores early in the season.

W

5. Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

6-3, 212 pounds

Odunze put up four straight 100-yard receiving games to begin the 2023 season, and he has a tremendous combination of size and speed. He's big, and he knows how to use his body to shield defenders. Watch him adjust on this touchdown catch against Boise State. Since 2020, Odunze put up 203 catches for 3,113 yards and 24 scores. He's used both inside and out. He can make defensive backs miss after the catch.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

If Odunze had entered the 2023 draft, he likely would have been a Day 2 pick, but I have a top-five grade on him now. He could be a No. 1 target in the NFL.

6. Drake Maye, QB, North Carolina

6-4, 223 pounds

Maye had a fantastic debut season as the starter at UNC, throwing for 4,321 yards with 38 touchdowns and seven picks in 2022. He looks the part of a big-time NFL signal-caller. He can make every throw with ease. He's accurate on the move and can pick up first downs with his legs. Maye varies his pass speeds really well -- he knows when to take a little off to make it easier for his receivers. He has outstanding touch on vertical throws.

The biggest question about Maye heading into the 2023 season was about who was catching his passes, as his top two receivers -- Josh Downs and Antoine Green -- are now in the NFL and transfer target Devontez Walker was finally made eligible.

Breaking in new playmakers was part of the reason for predecessor Sam Howell's up-and-down 2021 season for the Tar Heels, and Maye has had to figure things out with a new group.

Maye completed 63.3% of his passes during the season, and his best performance came when he threw for 442 yards and three scores against Syracuse. Still, he has had a few sloppy interceptions, and I wanted to see him clean up those mistakes. He finished with 24 touchdown passes and nine picks.

7. Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

6-3, 243 pounds

Bowers was an instant difference-maker for the Bulldogs as a true freshman in 2021, catching 56 passes for 882 yards and 13 touchdowns. He followed up that season with 63 catches for 942 yards and seven scores as Stetson Bennett's No. 1 target, winning his second-straight national title. He's an advanced pass-catcher and should make an instant impact when he gets to the NFL.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

Though he's not huge -- former teammate Darnell Washington made him look small at times -- he's a matchup nightmare for defenses. He has great hand-eye coordination and run-after-the-catch ability, and he can stretch the field down the seams. I also love the way he tracks the ball, high-pointing it above defenders. Bowers had 56 catches for 714 yards and six touchdowns during the season, his first with Carson Beck throwing him passes. He had surgery on his injured left ankle in October but was able to return a few weeks later.

8. Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

6-8, 321 pounds

Alt started 33 games at left tackle for the Fighting Irish, and I was most impressed by his technique on a snap-to-snap basis. He rarely gets caught out. He mirrors well in pass protection, adjusting easily to secondary moves from edge rushers. He does a great job keeping his huge frame between the defender and his quarterback. In his career, he allowed just 16 total pressures in more than 1,000 pass-block snaps.

Alt's father, John, was a first-round offensive tackle, too, going No. 21 overall to the Chiefs in 1984. He was 6-7, 275 pounds when he entered the NFL, which shows you how the game has changed since then.

9. Troy Fautanu, G, Washington

6-4, 317 pounds

Fautanu really impressed me in 2023. He played 114 snaps at guard over the past three years, but the majority of his time has been at left tackle, where he has allowed just two sacks and 25 total pressures in 28 starts. That's on more than 1,100 pass-blocking snaps. He is a hard-nosed, intense tackle, but he plays under control and has excellent feet and strong hands. He kept the pocket clean for quarterback Michael Penix Jr., who was sacked just 11 times in 15 games.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

I see Fautanu's future at guard as a way to best maximize his skill set, but I'm not ruling out that he'll end up at tackle. He reminds me a little bit of Alijah Vera-Tucker, who went No. 14 overall to the Jets in 2021. Fautanu's versatility will be a huge asset at the next level.

A

10. Dallas Turner, OLB, Alabama

6-3, 247 pounds

I struggled a bit with Turner's 2022 tape because of who was on the opposite side of him. He's not the caliber of pass-rusher as former teammate Will Anderson Jr., who went No. 3 overall in April. Turner had 60 quarterback pressures from 2021-22, while Anderson had ... 130. So, when Anderson was always getting to the passer first, it's tough to judge the other guy.

Still, when projecting what Turner could be, there's a lot to like. He shows flashes of stellar pass-rush moves, and he's good at shedding blocks in the run game. He always has the physical traits to chase down running backs. He had 10 sacks for the Crimson Tide in 2023. He also ranked eighth in the FBS with a 16.7% pressure rate.

A

11. JC Latham, OT, Alabama

6-6, 342 pounds

Latham is a mountain of an offensive tackle who is light on his feet. I really like the way he explodes out of his stance. He's tough at the point of attack. He blows defenders off the line of scrimmage in the run game, driving and sustaining his blocks in space. Where Latham needs to improve is in his technique -- he can be sloppy. Latham started 27 games at right tackle, but he also has played guard. He'll likely be a right tackle at the next level.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

Ucla

12. Laiatu Latu, OLB, UCLA

6-5, 259 pounds

NFL teams crave edge rushers, and there's a case to be made that Latu was college football's best edge rusher in 2022. He ranked first in the FBS in total pressures (55) and pressure percentage (19.1%), and his 10.5 sacks ranked ninth. He was just as good in 2023. During the regular season, he ranked first in pressure percentage (20.1%) and pressures (56) and was fourth in sacks (13). He had a midseason stretch of 5.5 sacks and 5.5 tackles for loss over three games.

Latu is a polished pass-rusher who knows how to use his hands and has a knack for slipping by offensive tackles. What I like, too, is that he understands that a sack is great but a strip sack is even better; he had three of those in 2022 and one more in 2023. The Washington transfer consistently disrupts plays behind the line of scrimmage. Latu plays on his feet off the edge of UCLA's defense, and he could be an ideal 3-4 outside linebacker at the next level.

13. Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

6-0, 195 pounds

I put Mitchell at No. 30 to the Lions in my debut mock draft, and now it's time to move him into my Big Board as well. He was one of the most impressive prospects at Senior Bowl practices, holding his own against other top prospects. Mitchell is a ball hawk who had six interceptions in his final two seasons at Toledo. In his four-year career, he finished with 46 pass breakups. He's technically sound and instinctive; he didn't allow a single touchdown as the nearest defender in coverage in 2023. He has the speed and ability to close on the ball and jar it loose from a receiver. He's also a solid tackler in run support.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

M

14. J.J. McCarthy, QB, Michigan

6-2, 219 pounds

McCarthy has first-round arm talent and can beat defenses with his legs too. He ranked third in the country in Total QBR (89.2) and completion percentage (72.3%) in 2023. Since he took over as the Wolverines' starter in 2022, he threw 44 touchdown passes and nine interceptions. Five of those INTs have come in two games, however; he threw three against Bowling Green earlier in 2023, and he had two pick-sixes in the College Football Playoff semifinal loss to TCU in 2022. Outside of those two games, he has managed games effectively and made great decisions with the football.

I recently projected McCarthy in the middle of Round 1 in my debut mock draft. Sure, he averaged just 22.1 pass attempts per game in 2023 and only needed to complete 10 passes in the national title game, but his upside is immense.

15. Olumuyiwa Fashanu, OT, Penn State

6-6, 312 pounds

Fashanu had been moving up my Big Board last fall, before he announced in November that he planned to return to school in 2023. He could have been a top-10 pick in that draft, challenging Paris Johnson Jr. to be the top tackle off the board. Fashanu has the size, footwork and physical traits teams want in a high-end left tackle. He moves effortlessly and with urgency, getting his hands on second-level defenders with ease. The exciting part? Fashanu is still developing. He has started just 21 career games and turned 21 years old in December.

LSU

16. Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

Thomas is a fun player to watch, and he excelled catching passes from Daniels on the other side of Nabers. He has great length and a huge catch radius, which makes him a nightmare to match up with for smaller defensive backs. He can take the top off a defense -- he averaged 17.3 yards per catch last season. I really like the way he uses his acceleration ability to get late separation. Thomas finished the season with 68 catches for 1,177 yards and led the FBS with 17 touchdowns. The arrow is pointing up; Thomas needs a little bit more polish, but he's just scratching the surface of his talent.

17. Xavier Worthy, WR, Texas

5-11, 165 pounds

Worthy is an electrifying player with the ball in his hands (and I wrote this before he broke the NFL combine 40-yard dash record with a time of 4.21 seconds). His quickness and movement in space reminds me a little bit of Marquise "Hollywood" Brown, who starred at Oklahoma and was a first-round pick in 2019. Worthy is tall but very thin. He can fly by cornerbacks on vertical routes and take the top off the defense. He had 60 catches for 760 yards and nine scores in 2022 and had 75 catches for 1,014 yards and five touchdowns last season.

His biggest problem? Catching the ball. He had 10 drops in 2022 -- he also dealt with a hand injury, to be fair -- but he was more consistent last season, with five on 114 targets. Worthy also could be a dynamic punt returner at the next level.

18. Taliese Fuaga, OT, Oregon State

6-6, 324 pounds

Fuaga is a physical right tackle who started 25 career games for the Beavers. He brings a defensive mentality to the position; the defender he's matching up with better be fully prepared for a battle in the trenches. He is the ultimate finisher as a run blocker, getting easy movement, and he more than holds his own in pass protection. He allowed just one sack over the past two seasons. He has powerful hands and can handle secondary moves from edge rushers.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

The more I watched Fuaga in 2023, the more excited I was about his future in the NFL. He is still a work in progress and has yet to reach his full potential.

A

19. Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

6-0, 189 pounds

Arnold, who started 21 career games for the Crimson Tide, has developed into a shutdown defender. He picked off six passes and had 20 total breakups as quarterbacks completed just 43.7% of their passes when he was the nearest defender in coverage over the past two seasons. He allowed just four receptions of 20-plus yards in 2023. Arnold understands angles in press coverage and is aggressive in rerouting wide receivers at the line of scrimmage. He has great speed and acceleration when he turns his hips. He's going to be a great pro.

20. Jared Verse, DE, Florida State

6-4, 254 pounds

Verse is another prospect who could have gone in Round 1 this past April. He decided to return to school, however, in order to try to move into the top 10 picks. He had nine sacks in his first season at FSU after transferring in from Albany, where he had 10.5 sacks in 2021. He was a little inconsistent for the Seminoles -- a knee injury likely contributed -- but his combination of power and speed off the edge is impressive. Verse is super quick off the line of scrimmage and is tenacious as a pass-rusher. He is a perfect fit as an end in a 4-3 defense.

He had a two-sack performance against Wake Forest in late October and a dominant 2.5-sack game against Florida in late November, but he still has a tendency to disappear at times. He finished with nine sacks on the season.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

21. Cooper DeJean, CB, Iowa

6-1, 203 pounds

Iowa's defense produced two first-round picks (Lukas Van Ness and Jack Campbell) and a third-rounder (Riley Moss) in the 2023 draft, and yet it was DeJean who kept catching my eye when I went back through the 2022 film. He had five interceptions, including three that he returned for touchdowns. But it wasn't just the big plays -- I was impressed with his technique on a snap-to-snap basis. He played in the slot and out wide, showing off tremendous speed to stick to receivers. He's just silky as a cover man.

DeJean has the physical tools to be the top corner in this class, but unfortunately, his 2023 season ended early because of a broken leg he suffered in practice in mid-November. He finished with two picks.

22. Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

6-7, 322 pounds

Physically, Guyton is exactly what NFL teams want in a future Pro Bowl-caliber right tackle. The progress he made over the past two seasons under the direction of highly regarded Oklahoma O-line coach Bill Bedenbaugh has allowed him to steadily move up my draft board. In addition to his natural talent, what I really like about Guyton is the attitude and rugged approach he brings on every snap. He has excellent feet and agility in pass protection, gets to the second level of the defense with ease and also can deliver a pop as a run blocker.

What Guyton needs to work on is maintaining more consistency; he started just 14 college games at right tackle, so he's not yet a finished product. Still, his skill set and upside could put him in the mid first-round discussion. He did not allow a sack in the 2023 season.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

ESPN – MEL KIPER JR.

23. Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

6-1, 173 pounds

Clemson had a disappointing 2023 season, but Wiggins stood out all over the Tigers' defensive tape. He was impressive despite missing two games with a knee injury. He allowed 18 catches for 179 yards as the nearest defender in coverage, and two of those were turned into touchdowns.

He has the length and recovery speed to match up effectively with any wideout he goes up against. Wiggins shows a smooth turning motion, good instincts in coverage and can make up ground in a hurry while using his height and arm length as a major advantage.

24. Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

6-1, 297 pounds

As I wrote in my second mock draft, when I projected Murphy to the Raiders at No. 13 overall, he has the highest pass-rush upside of any of the interior defensive linemen in this class. He created 33 QB pressures from his interior spot, which was 19 more than he had in 2022, and he had five sacks. He understands leverage and is quick off the snap. He can bully guards and centers in both the pass and run game. He's a little short for a 3-technique tackle, but then again so was Aaron Donald. No, Murphy is not Donald; I'm just saying there's precedent for smaller (relatively) interior pass-rushers to have NFL success.

25. Xavier Legette, WR, South Carolina

6-1, 221 pounds

Legette made a huge improvement in 2023, averaging 17.7 yards per catch and racking up 1,255 receiving yards. He had just 18 catches -- 10th-most on his own team -- for 167 yards during the entire 2022 season. And then he went and had a fantastic combine performance, running a 4.39-second 40-yard dash and testing well in the other drills. He can make contested catches. As I wrote in my Mock Draft 3.0, he dominated cornerbacks on crossing routes last season, lining up in the slot and outside. Legette can be a legit No. 1 wideout at the next level. I love his upside.

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

1. Caleb Williams, QB, USC

6-1, 214 pounds

Williams has average height and a thick/muscular build. He is a natural thrower and delivers the ball with accuracy/velocity from a variety of platforms and arm angles. He can power the ball into tight windows while stationary or on the move. He can also finesse the ball when needed. He has lightning-quick hands in the RPO game. He's a dynamic runner and makes defenders look silly in space. He can run by you, through you or make you miss. He did fall into some bad habits at USC during the 2023 season. He hunts big plays and always looks to exhaust plays with his legs instead of taking check downs. Also, he can get too loose with the ball when creating, swinging it wildly, which leads to fumbles. His creativity makes him special, but he will need to play more on schedule at the next level. Overall, Williams has areas in which he needs to improve, but he has franchise-altering upside.

2. Marvin Harrison Jr., WR, Ohio State

6-3, 209 pounds

Harrison has ideal size, speed and production. Built like a power forward, he plays with a blend of physicality and explosiveness. He uses his upper-body strength to power through press coverage. He's a smooth/fluid route runner and closes the cushion quickly. He gets on the toes of cornerbacks before sharply breaking off his route. He can tap into another gear when the ball goes up and he tracks over his shoulder with ease. He knows how to use his big frame to wall off and shield defenders. Harrison has a huge catch radius, but he did have some contact drops in traffic this fall. After the catch, he relies on speed and physicality more than elusiveness. Overall, Harrison is a prototypical No. 1 receiver and should enjoy immediate NFL success.

3. Rome Odunze, WR, Washington

6-3, 212 pounds

Odunze is a big, athletic wideout with exceptional hands. He can play outside or in the slot. He is refined and polished in everything he does on the field. He uses a variety of releases at the line of scrimmage and is a clean route runner. He uses his strength to lean into defenders before separating out of the break point. He thrives in traffic, possessing the ability to pluck the football and absorb big shots over the middle of the field. He makes some incredible adjustments on poorly thrown balls. He tracks naturally over his shoulder. After the catch, he is very tough to bring down and has some nifty make-miss ability. He plays with a ton of passion and energy. Overall, Odunze is a complete player and reminds me of Larry Fitzgerald coming out of college.

LSU

4. Malik Nabers, WR, LSU

6-0, 200 pounds

Nabers is a dynamic receiver with outstanding competitiveness and production. He explodes off the line in his release, creating immediate separation. He sets up defenders before snapping off his route. He isn't afraid to work in the middle of the field and has strong hands to finish through contact. When working back to the quarterback, he prefers to let the ball travel into his body, but his drops are limited. He can scoop low throws off his shoes and easily adjusts to balls on his back hip. He does a lot of damage on slot fades, where he uses his speed to win early, and he tracks the ball with ease. After the catch, he explodes through tackles and also has a nasty stiff arm. Overall, Nabers is an electric playmaker who reminds me of DJ Moore with the ball in his hands.

5. Drake Maye, QB, North Carolina

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

Maye has prototypical size, athleticism and arm strength. He has quick feet and quick hands, but his delivery can get long at times. He's a gifted thrower who drives the ball without much foot space in the pocket (including with defenders hanging on him). He can take pace off the ball on swings and shallow crossers. He has a nice touch on bucket throws down the field. He is athletic to escape and create with his legs and he's tough to tackle in space. He is ultra-competitive as a runner, something he'll need to dial back a bit at the next level. His pass protection wasn't good last season at North Carolina and there weren't always answers in the route to bail him out, which led to some poor decisions and carelessness with the ball. Overall, Maye has some things to clean up, but he has every ingredient to be a top-tier starter at the game's most important position.

LSU

6. Jayden Daniels, QB, LSU

6-4, 210 pounds

Daniels is a tall/lean quarterback with exceptional accuracy, decision-making and speed. He is very poised and comfortable in the pocket. He likes to use a rhythm bounce at the top of his drop before settling his feet into the ground and smoothly transferring his weight to throw. He has an extremely quick release and beautiful throwing motion. He throws with anticipation, touch and accuracy. He flashes the ability to manipulate safeties with his eyes to create separation downfield. When he gets pressured, he doesn't hesitate to explode out of the pocket. He has elite suddenness. He is more of a linear/speed runner than a break-down/make-you-miss type of ball-carrier. He needs to do a better job of protecting himself, though, as he took some huge hits in the games I studied. Overall, Daniels took a massive leap in 2023 and now offers both a high floor and ceiling.

7. Brock Bowers, TE, Georgia

6-3, 243 pounds

Bowers is an undersized tight end with elite speed, strength and playmaking ability. He lined up all over the field at Georgia -- in-line, on the wing, split out and even at running back. He is very sudden in his release, and he uses his upper-body strength to chuck defenders when pressed at the line of scrimmage. He catches a lot of quick-hitters in the flat and he's a maniac on screens. He attacks the ball in the air and is quick to transition up the field. He has the speed to pull away, but his greatest asset is his tackle-breaking power. He runs through contact without gearing down. He is an effective run blocker when he can get his hands on opponents, but he will get pressed out by longer-armed edge rushers. Overall, Bowers reminds me a lot of George Kittle, and I see him having a similar impact in the NFL.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

8. Joe Alt, OT, Notre Dame

6-8, 321 pounds

Alt started at left tackle during all three of his seasons at Notre Dame, boasting exceptional size and length for the position. In pass pro, he plays with a wide base and is very under control. He will mix up his pass sets, occasionally jump-setting and stunning opponents. He has the quickness to kick out and cover up outside speed rushers, while also possessing the length to keep power rushers from getting into his chest. He is always very aware and is a valuable helper when uncovered. In the run game, he gets movement on down blocks, looking to finish to and through the whistle. He takes proper angles to the second level, but he's not elite in space when it comes to adjusting to moving targets. Overall, Alt isn't a rare athlete, but his combination of size, instincts and youth (he'll be 21 for his entire rookie season) is easy to bet on.

9. Terrion Arnold, CB, Alabama

6-0, 189 pounds

Arnold has ideal size, play speed and instincts for the position. He plays both outside and inside at the nickel. He is effective in press and off coverage. He is fluid to open up and mirror in press. He has plenty of speed to stay in phase on deep balls. From off coverage, he has a quick and smooth pedal, and he doesn't waste steps in his plant drive. He is also effective playing with a side turn and anticipating routes before cutting them off. He has outstanding ball skills, and the production (five interceptions and 17 passes defensed in 2023) reflects his ability. He is a physical, face-up tackler. He doesn't miss tackles in space. Overall, I struggled to find much to criticize in Arnold's play, despite his lack of experience at the position, having arrived at Alabama as a highly regarded safety prospect. He has all the tools and traits to be a Pro Bowl-caliber cornerback.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

10. Taliese Fuaga, OT, Oregon State

6-6, 324 pounds

Fuaga has outstanding size, power and balance for the position. He lines up at right tackle, but I believe he could play on the left side if necessary. In pass pro, he has quick feet out of his stance and is explosive with his punch. He stuns rushers, stays attached and is always on balance. He is aware versus games and blitzers. In the run game, he is dominant. He uncoils out of his stance to strike and remove defenders over his nose. He creates movement on down blocks and always looks to finish. He is surprisingly nimble to reach and cut off on the back side. He takes good angles working up to the second level and made several de-cleating blocks against linebackers in the games I studied. Overall, I don't see much weakness in Fuaga's game. He has Pro Bowl potential at tackle -- and if needed, could slide inside and play guard.

W

11. Troy Fautanu, G, Washington

6-4, 317 pounds

Fautanu is an explosive left tackle prospect for the Huskies. He has average height and a thick, square build with long arms. In pass pro, he is a very easy mover, bends well and has a sharp/jolting punch. He redirects smoothly and is a nasty helper when uncovered. His biggest issue is when he gets overaggressive and loses his balance trying to pummel pass rushers instead of playing with more patience. In the run game, he can get underneath defenders and uproot them at the point of attack. He is very explosive as a puller and on screens, with the ability to get all the way to the third level in a hurry. He does have some starting experience at guard, and some NFL teams will project him inside. Overall, I view Fautanu as a starting tackle with positional flexibility to play all five O-line spots if needed.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

A

12. Dallas Turner, OLB, Alabama

6-3, 247 pounds

Turner is a long, athletic edge with excellent production and an intriguing skill set as a pass rusher. He has a quick first step and wins a lot of reps by stabbing with his inside arm and collapsing the offensive tackle's outside shoulder. He can also bend, wrap, flatten and finish once he gets to the top of his rush. He is inconsistent with his pure bull rush. The longer the runway before contact, the more success he finds. Against the run, he can set a physical edge or slip blocks to make plays at the line of scrimmage. His effort is excellent. Overall, Turner has played a pivotal role on the 'Bama defense for three years and he's ready to make an immediate impact at the next level.

13. Quinyon Mitchell, CB, Toledo

6-0, 195 pounds

Mitchell has excellent size, speed and toughness for the position. He is at his best in off-man coverage, where he plays out of a side turn and eyes the quarterback through the wide receiver. He is very situationally aware, settling at the sticks before triggering on the ball. There's a noticeable burst when he drives downhill. He has plenty of speed to turn and carry go routes. He also can quickly restart and recover versus double moves. Occasionally, there is a little tightness when he must flip his hips down the field. He has exceptional ball skills (SEE: his tape from 2022, when he had five interceptions, including a pair of pick-sixes), but he wasn't challenged very often in 2023. I love his desire and physicality against the run. He never hangs on blocks, and he bursts to the ball-carrier before coming to balance and collecting tackles. Overall, Mitchell is a feisty competitor with outstanding speed and a history of ball production.

14. Jared Verse, DE, Florida State

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

Verse is a rugged, twitched-up edge rusher with a thick/powerful build. At Florida State, he moved around the defensive front. Against the pass, he explodes off the edge and tries to run right through offensive tackles, doing so in two different ways: 1) He will stutter to get OTs off balance and then charge right through with his hands; or 2) he'll simply bury his head into the blocker's chest and walk him right back to the quarterback. He has also been effective using a chop/swim move and occasional inside counter. He doesn't have elite bend at the top of his rush. When aligned inside, he relies more on his quickness to work the edge of an offensive guard. Against the rush, he is stout at the point of attack. He closes the back door quickly on runs away from him with great speed and effort. Overall, Verse is not only a productive pass rusher -- he's a violent tempo setter for the defense.

15. Olumuyiwa Fashanu, OT, Penn State

6-6, 312 pounds

Fashanu has ideal size, length and strength for the left tackle position. In pass pro, he explodes out of his stance, redirects easily and has strong hands to stab and steer defenders. He can bend his knees and anchor when his eyes are in the right place. However, there are times (SEE: Ohio State tape) where his eyes get him in trouble and he gets uprooted by power rushers. In the run game, he is effective shielding and staying attached, but he could improve his consistency to finish. He is very quick in getting up to the second level. There is a little ankle tightness when he has to adjust in space. Overall, Fashanu is still very young and developing. He has all the tools to be a solid starting left tackle once he cleans up some small areas of his game.

Ucla

16. Laiatu Latu, OLB, UCLA

6-5, 259 pounds

Latu has ideal size, quickness and instincts for the position. As a pass rusher, he can win with his quick get-off or a variety of hand moves. He has an excellent feel for when offensive tackles overset or underset and adjusts accordingly. He doesn't have elite speed or power, but he wins with technique, bend and savvy. He can corner well at the top of his rush and is an outstanding finisher. Against the run, he's been inconsistent when it comes to setting the edge. He's shown the ability to shoot his hands, leverage blockers and hold the point of attack. However, there are other times his pad level is too high and he gets controlled. His effort is outstanding to chase, against both run and pass. Latu did have serious medical issues while at the University of Washington. Overall, Latu is the most skilled pass rusher in this class and should have an immediate impact at the next level.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

LSU

17. Brian Thomas Jr., WR, LSU

6-3, 209 pounds

Thomas is a big, explosive wideout with incredible production, including an FBS-best 17 touchdown catches this past season. He lines up outside and in the slot. He easily defeats press coverage with his quickness. He is very sudden in his release and can find another gear once the ball is up in the air. He is very loose and fluid as a route runner. He has snap at the top of the route and doesn't waste steps. He has a very large catch radius because of his frame, leaping ability and ball skills. After the catch, he has some wiggle to make defenders miss and also boasts home run speed. Overall, Thomas is a big-play machine and has the upside to develop into a No. 1 receiver for his drafting team.

18. JC Latham, OT, Alabama

6-6, 342 pounds

Latham is a massive right tackle. He has an enormous power base and taps into it in both the run and pass games. In pass pro, he has average quickness, but plays with good knee bend and a flat back. He can anchor power rushers immediately. He has vise grips for hands; once he gets attached to defenders, the pass rush is over. When caught out of position, he flashes the ability to recover, torque and dump opponents. His awareness versus stunts and blitzers has been inconsistent. He gets surprised too often, leading to penetration and pressures. In the run game, he is a mauler. He latches on, runs his feet and dumps defenders. He is very good on combo blocks.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

Overall, Latham doesn't have ideal foot quickness or awareness, but his size and physicality are very tantalizing.

19. Byron Murphy II, DT, Texas

6-1, 297 pounds

Murphy is a very explosive, nimble and instinctive defensive tackle. He is a dynamic disruptor against the pass game. He explodes out of his stance and can roll his hips on contact, creating instant push. He consistently gets underneath blockers and prevails in the leverage battle. He has quick hands to win with swipe moves, a push/pull maneuver or a violent club. Once he feels a blocker leaning left or right, he has elite change-of-direction quickness. Against the run, he can utilize his quickness to penetrate and create negative plays. He also has incredible balance to take on blocks while going to one knee before uncoiling and making plays. (I haven't seen anyone else use this technique before, but it's very effective.) He has plenty of range to make plays laterally. Overall, Murphy might lack ideal size, but he's a leverage machine who makes an impact on all three downs.

20. J.J. McCarthy, QB, Michigan

6-2, 219 pounds

McCarthy is a lean, athletic quarterback with a live/loose arm. He is very consistent because of his ability to always throw from a firm base, with his feet and eyes connected. He is selectively aggressive as a passer. He has the combination of velocity and accuracy to fit balls into tight windows, but he is also very comfortable taking check downs and piling up completions. He is very efficient. He shows the touch to take speed off the ball underneath and provide optimal run-after-catch ball location. The only throws that gave him some trouble were over-the-top outside shots, as he let too many of those leak and end up out of bounds. He is a very explosive straight-line runner. Overall, other quarterbacks in this class have more volume in the passing game, but it's hard to argue with McCarthy's results. I see some similarities to Alex Smith coming out of college.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

21. Chop Robinson, EDGE, Penn State

6-3, 254 pounds

Robinson is an extremely twitched-up edge rusher with limited production. He has average size but is incredibly explosive. As a pass rusher, he has excellent get-off quickness, but it looks odd because of his short/choppy steps. He will cause more stress for OTs when he learns how to lengthen his stride and gain ground. He flashes a nifty two-hand swipe maneuver and a push/pull move. He has some tightness that shows up when he gets to the top of his rush. His sack production is limited, but he was very disruptive in every game I studied. He was asked to drop into coverage on occasion and looked comfortable in space. Against the run, he consistently generates knock-back versus head-up blockers, but he struggles versus angle blocks and double teams. He gets washed down the line too often. Overall, Robinson isn't a smooth/bendy type of player, but his mix of speed and power provides a lot of disruption.

22. Amarius Mims, OT, Georgia

6-8, 340 pounds

Mims is an enormous right tackle prospect with long arms. He has very limited starting experience (eight total starts in three years at Georgia), partially due to injury. While the résumé is light, the skill set is impressive. In pass pro, he plays with a firm, wide base and uses his length to control defenders. He stays square and patient. When he does throw his punch, it jolts defenders, making them take a second to recover. He can sink his weight against power rushers and doesn't give up ground. He plays with good awareness. In the run game, he can latch, run his feet and finish. He struggles in space on occasion because he's out of control. To see him at his best, watch the College Football Playoff game against Ohio State in the 2022 season, when he was healthy and dominant. He battled through an injury during the 2023 season. Overall, there is risk because of the limited body of work, but Mims is a unique talent.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

23. Tyler Guyton, OT, Oklahoma

6-8, 322 pounds

Guyton is a tall, long and rangy right tackle. He doesn't have a ton of starting experience (15 total starts over four years at Oklahoma and TCU), but he is very gifted. In pass pro, he explodes out of his stance and has the range to cover up speed rushers. He is very fluid and smooth in his redirect versus counter rushers. He plays with excellent knee bend. His problems arise versus power rushers, where he can look a little flimsy up top and get tugged/pulled. He has very good awareness for someone with limited reps. In the run game, he moves like a tight end. He can reach and cut off easily, excelling in space. He is exceptional as a puller because of his athleticism and balance on the perimeter. He does a great job staying off the ground. Overall, Guyton is still a work in progress, but he has elite traits and tools.

24. Graham Barton, IOL, Duke

6-8, 322 pounds

Barton started at left tackle during his final three seasons at Duke. Prior to that, he started five games at center, and that's where I see him playing at the next level. He has ideal size for the position and average length. In pass protection, he is quick out of his stance, plays with knee bend and has the agility to redirect. He does struggle against power rushers. He doesn't play long-armed, exposes his chest and gives ground. Fortunately, he loses slowly on most occasions, allowing the quarterback time to get the ball out. He is a technician in the run game. He always hits his landmarks with his hands-on down blocks before sinking and driving with his lower half. He is excellent on combo blocks and he's under control as a puller. Overall, I see Barton as an athletic center with the ability to survive at tackle if needed.

25. Cooper DeJean, CB, Iowa

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

DeJean is a playmaking cornerback with size and speed. In off coverage, he plays with his butt to the sideline and displays excellent vision. He does have a brief pause in his plant/drive before exploding and attacking the football. His production -- including three pick-sixes in the 2022 season -- speaks for itself. He has enough speed to carry vertical routes, but he will panic on occasion and get grabby at the catch point. He's an outstanding blitzer, displaying timing and burst to close in a hurry. He is very willing in run support, and he's a dependable tackler. He is also an exceptional punt returner because of his combination of speed, elusiveness and bravery. Overall, I believe DeJean could stick at cornerback, but I wouldn't rule out a move to safety, where his strengths as a player would be featured. He reminds me of a bigger Eric Weddle coming out of college.

26. Edgerrin Cooper, LB, Texas A&M

6-2, 230 pounds

Cooper is a long, rangy linebacker with excellent speed and coverage ability. Against the pass, he is very smooth in his drops, playing with vision and awareness. He is very comfortable in man coverage and has plenty of speed to carry tight ends up the seam. He is an explosive blitzer and has shown the ability to separate the quarterback from the ball. Against the run, he is quick to fill in the hole and displays stopping power as a tackler. He will have some fly-by missed tackles when in lateral pursuit. Overall, Cooper is an instinctive and explosive prospect who generates a bunch of splash plays. He's ready to start right away, and I believe his best football is still ahead of him.

27. Adonai Mitchell, WR, Texas

6-2, 205 pounds

Mitchell has outstanding size, toughness and polish for the position. He is fast and has a long stride. He has surprisingly good route polish for a bigger receiver. He understands how to change tempo, and he's clean getting in and out of breaks. He gave Kool-Aid McKinstry a lot of trouble in the Alabama game last September, finishing with three catches for 78 yards and two TDs. He has some wow catches on fades and 50/50 balls. He can climb the ladder, hang and finish. It looks like he gets a little lazy at times on the back side of routes, assuming the ball is going elsewhere. He doesn't have a ton of production after the catch. Overall, though, Mitchell is an ideal X receiver. He can make plays when covered, and he's a real weapon in the red zone.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

28. Ennis Rakestraw Jr., CB, Missouri

5-11, 183 pounds

Rakestraw is a rangy, fluid cornerback who plays with energy and toughness. He is physical in press coverage, and he stays attached underneath and vertically. He is a loose athlete who can flip his hips smoothly. He does a nice job staying on top of deep routes, and he can locate the ball. I'd like to see him do a better job of finishing with the ball instead of simply poking it away. He is awesome against the run; not only is he quick to key/read, but he attacks blockers, including offensive linemen. Watch the Georgia tape from this past November to see him thud off an offensive tackle before delivering a physical stop. He is always bouncing around; his energy is palpable through the screen. Overall, players with this profile at this position traditionally translate very well to the next level.

29. Bo Nix, QB, Oregon

6-2, 214 pounds

Nix is an experienced quarterback (61 starts at Oregon and Auburn) with outstanding accuracy and toughness. He has average height and a thick/sturdy frame. He is at his best in the quick-rhythm passing game. He has quick feet in his setup, scans the field with urgency and accurately delivers the ball. He has a compact release and generates velocity to drive the ball to all three levels. He shows touch to layer the ball over linebackers and under safeties. He is accurate on designed rollouts. He does need to improve habits under duress, though, as he occasionally fails to feel back-side run-throughs and also falls off some throws when faced with interior pressure. He's an urgent athlete and is effective as a runner, especially on zone reads. His coaches rave about his leadership and toughness. Overall, Nix's combination of competitiveness, intelligence and experience reminds me of Jalen Hurts coming out of college.

30. Jackson Powers-Johnson, IOL, Oregon

6-3, 328 pounds

Powers-Johnson has experience at all three interior offensive line spots and has spent time at defensive tackle, as well. He was outstanding at the center position in 2023, and that's where I expect him to play at the next level. He has good size, exceptional quickness and steady balance. In pass pro, he sets vertically and is able to catch and absorb versus power rushers. He does an excellent job reworking his hands to maintain position and is a nasty helper when uncovered. In the run game, he uses his upper-body power to torque/turn defenders, generating a lot of movement at the point of attack. He is quick working up to the second level and takes good angles. Overall, there aren't many holes in his game. I love his bulldog playing style.

31. Nate Wiggins, CB, Clemson

6-1, 173 pounds

Wiggins is a tall, thin and long cornerback with outstanding speed. He is effective in press coverage. He gets his hands on receivers, but he'll need to let go earlier at the next level. He is a fluid mover and has plenty of deep speed. He can locate and play the ball down the field. He will have concentration lapses at times, trying to peek back at the QB, which makes him lose position. From off coverage, he is efficient in his transition, and he closes in a hurry. I was a little disappointed in his lack of aggression against the run. He is content to hang on blocks at times, and his effort to chase from the back side is spotty, at best. Some of this could be due to high play counts, but it's still bothersome. Overall, Wiggins is dripping with athleticism and physical traits, but he needs to be more invested in the run game.

I

32. Jer'Zhan Newton, DT, Illinois

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

Newton is a slightly undersized defensive tackle with quick and powerful hands. As a pass rusher, he has shock in his mitts to jolt blockers. He mixes up his moves to generate sacks/pressures, routinely employing a violent club/swim and a quick-swipe maneuver. He also incorporates a Houdini-like move where he sticks his hand out and gets OTs to lunge at it before pulling it away and clearing the block. He isn't a loose, nimble rusher due to some hip tightness. Against the run, he generates knock-back at the point of attack and gives effort to chase plays down the line. Overall, Newton lacks ideal lower-body flexibility, but he's a very skilled rusher and holds up versus the run.

W

33. Michael Penix Jr., QB, Washington

6-2, 216 pounds

Penix has exceptional arm strength and toughness. He has a unique, whippy, three-quarters delivery from the left side, and the ball explodes out of his hand. He can hang on his back foot and effortlessly drive the ball 55 yards. He excels driving throws outside and tosses a beautiful, lofting deep ball. He does have issues getting throws up and down in the middle of the field. His ball can stay flat. He is quick to process and consistently gets to No. 3 in the route progression. He flashed the ability to avoid, escape and create against Texas in the College Football Playoff. He's been through a litany of injuries during his career, but he managed to overcome them and led Washington to the national title game. Overall, durability is a legitimate concern, but I believe in his combination of vision, accuracy and arm strength.

G

34. Ladd McConkey, WR, Georgia

6-0, 186 pounds

McConkey is a slightly undersized receiver with excellent speed, quickness and polish. He lines up both outside and in the slot. He is quick off the line, and he understands how to attack the leverage of his man. He changes speed throughout the route and is efficient getting into and out of breaks. He will utilize head nods to sell routes and create separation. He has an excellent feel to settle in space versus zone coverage. He has strong hands to pluck balls thrown away from his frame, and he is quick to transition up the field. After the catch, he relies on his quickness to make defenders miss. Overall, McConkey isn't quite as physical as former Seahawks receiver Doug Baldwin, but I see a lot of similarities in their route running and instincts. I could see McConkey having a similar career.

35. Xavier Worthy, WR, Texas

5-11, 165 pounds

Worthy has average height and a very lean frame. The 40-yard dash king is extremely twitchy and can take the top off the defense. He plays inside and outside. He was used in a variety of ways at Texas, but he is at his best on double moves, shot plays and pure takeoffs. He is dynamic off the line and can tap into a second and third gear down the field. He also is crispy out of the break when asked to work back downhill. His hands have been spotty over his career, but he was much more reliable this past fall than he had been before. After the catch, he has a jet pack on his back. He explodes away from defenders and racks up big plays. Overall, Worthy seems like a taller version of Hollywood Brown -- you can feel his speed in every game.

36. Kool-Aid McKinstry, CB, Alabama

5-11, 199 pounds

McKinstry is a smooth, athletic cornerback with average play speed. In press coverage, he carries his hands low and prefers to play under control rather than attack. He doesn't have any tightness when opening up. There are some concerns with his deep speed when he's challenged vertically. From off coverage, everything he does is smooth, but he lacks twitch and urgency. He does find and play the ball well, both in front of him and down the field. He isn't ultra-aggressive when it comes to getting involved in the run game, but he's a reliable tackler in space. Overall, Kool-Aid has a lot of redeeming qualities. He's not the fastest cornerback, but he showed enough speed at his pro day to help his stock heading into the draft.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

37. Zach Frazier, IOL, West Virginia

6-3, 313 pounds

Frazier is a very physical center with average size and length. In the pass game, he is quick out of his stance, plays with a wide, firm base and immediately anchors. He has the lateral quickness to redirect and mirror while playing with excellent eyes/awareness. He will occasionally get overaggressive, duck his head and put himself in a tough spot, but he's athletic enough to recover. In the run game, he locks on with strong hands, rolls his hips and uproots defenders. He is quick to the second level and adjusts well in space. He is a bulldog, collecting one knockdown after another to finish plays. Frazier was a four-time state wrestling champion in high school and he carries that tenacity over to the football field. He will be a Day 1 starter and tempo setter for the team that drafts him.

38. Braden Fiske, DT, Florida State

6-3, 313 pounds

Fiske is an explosive, versatile defensive lineman. He aligns up and down the defensive front and he's very disruptive in every game I've studied. As a pass rusher, he has a quick first step and he jolts blockers with his powerful hands. He doesn't have long arms, but he still keeps blockers away from his chest. He flashes the ability to bull rush, but most of his wins come by working through the edges of opponents and not through their chest. In the run game, he has the balance/strength to hold up against double teams and the quickness to shoot gaps for negative plays. I love his effort/tenacity. Overall, Fiske is a competitive, athletic and impactful defensive lineman capable of starting right away.

39. Darius Robinson, EDGE, Missouri

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

Robinson is a big, long and versatile defensive lineman. He lined up all over the Tigers' defensive front. As a pass rusher, he wins on the edge primarily with a violent push/pull move. He will flash some other means to get home, including a club/rip maneuver or a pop/separate/close move. He doesn't have a dynamic first step, but his raw power showed up in every game I studied. As an inside rusher, he loves to use a swooping arm-over move, but he needs to improve his pad level. He plays too high at times and gets stuck. Against the run, he dominates. He sets a physical edge and can shed blockers to get in on tackles. His evaluation is similar to Arik Armstead's coming out of college. He can do a lot of things well, and teams will have different visions for how to best use his abilities.

40. Ricky Pearsall, WR, Florida

6-1, 189 pounds

Pearsall is a loose, smooth wideout with outstanding hands and toughness. He is quick in his release and he understands how to change gears as a route runner. He is fluid getting into and out of breaks. He has outstanding hands. He attacks the ball at the highest point and makes some circus catches. After the catch, he is quick to transition up the field and has the elusiveness to make defenders miss in space. He has a lean frame, but he plays with excellent toughness and competitiveness. Pearsall followed up an excellent 2023 season with a solid week at the Senior Bowl and should have a starting role from Day 1 for his drafting team.

41. Payton Wilson, LB, N.C. State

6-4, 233 pounds

Wilson is a height/weight/speed linebacker with excellent instincts and playmaking ability. He has the tools to play stacked in the box or as the hole defender in space. Against the pass, he is fluid in his zone drops. He relies on his eyes to jump routes and get his hands on the ball. He has the speed/agility to mirror backs and tight ends. To see his ball skills and playmaking ability, check out his pick-six against Clemson. Against the run, he uses his length to stack and shed blocks. His hands are strong and violent. He is quick to key, read and flow to the ball. He is a firm chest-up tackler with a high batting average. The major concern with Wilson is durability. He's suffered a multitude of injuries during his career, but he's always managed to come back and play at a high level.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

O

42. Troy Franklin, WR, Oregon

6-2, 176 pounds

Franklin is a tall, lanky wideout with big-time speed. He lines up outside and in the slot. A very smooth runner, he almost floats over the turf. He can destroy coverage cushions very quickly. Franklin understands how to set up defenders at the top of the route, and he is very efficient at the break point. He caught a lot of fades and go balls in the system at Oregon. He can really track and high-point the ball, but does have some contact drops in traffic. He also struggles to corral balls on his back hip when he's running away on crossers. Franklin piles up yards after the catch because of his pure speed. Overall, he needs to be more consistent with his hands, but he's shown the ability to provide plenty of explosive plays for his offense.

43. Keon Coleman, WR, Florida State

6-3, 213 pounds

A big, physical wideout with average play speed, Coleman has the versatility to play inside and outside. He is a smooth and fluid route runner with some nuance to his game. He understands how to use his body to keep defenders on his back and attack the ball in front of his frame. He doesn't have ideal vertical speed, but he can play above the rim and make contested catches. He also might have the best highlight reel in this draft class, with one-handed wow catches littered throughout his tape. After the catch, he is competitive to fight for extra yards and will occasionally hurdle defenders. He's an excellent athlete. Overall, Coleman lacks ideal speed to separate, but he makes a lot of big plays in crowded environments and should be a red-zone menace at the next level.

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

M

44. Junior Colson, LB, Michigan

6-2, 238 pounds

Colson is a big, physical linebacker with excellent instincts. Against the pass, he has a knack for diagnosing routes and positioning himself properly. He has enough speed/agility to mirror tight ends underneath and down the seam. He closes to the flat in a hurry and takes excellent angles. He also shows timing and a burst as a blitzer. All that said, he is at his best against the run. He is quick to key and fill. He attacks lead blockers, thuds off and makes tackles. He is a very physical, chest-up tackler. He would've posted more impressive numbers this past season if Michigan had played in more close games. (The Wolverines rolled through a lot of players on that side of the ball, especially early in their national championship campaign.) Overall, Colson's speed-physicality combination will fit any defense.

45. Malachi Corley, WR, Western Kentucky

5-11, 215 pounds

Corley is a compact, physical slot receiver with outstanding run-after-the-catch ability. He lives on quick hitters, with an average depth of target of 6.1 yards in 2023 (according to Pro Football Focus). When he's not running screens or quick hitters, he is very explosive working down the seam. He wasn't asked to run a lot of traditional routes in the system at Western Kentucky, but I don't see any physical limitations or stiffness that would preclude him from developing a more diverse route repertoire. He has some drops on tape, but he can offset a few of those with special catches outside his frame. After the catch, he runs through tackles, makes defenders miss and has legit top-end speed. Overall, Corley can have an immediate role as a starting slot receiver next fall.

46. Marshawn Kneeland, EDGE, Western Michigan

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

Kneeland is a rugged, powerful edge defender. Against the pass, he relies almost solely on his ability to generate force and power through blocks. He doesn't have an elite get-off, but he's quick to shoot his hands inside and he has the lower-body strength to walk offensive tackles right back to the quarterback. He flashes the feel to win inside when OTs overset. He will also occasionally spin when he catches opponents off balance. Against the run, he manhandles tight ends on the front side and plays with effort to chase from the back side. He is quick to adjust pass to run, redirect and make tackles. Overall, Kneeland isn't a special athlete, but he reminds me of a Baltimore Ravens-type player. He's tough, physical and plays with max effort.

M

47. Roman Wilson, WR, Michigan

5-11, 185 pounds

Wilson is a compact, muscled-up wideout with elite burst and explosiveness. He didn't see as many targets as others in this draft class because of Michigan's dominant rushing attack. He is at his best when he's on the move, especially on deep-over routes. He attacks the leverage of the cornerback before exploding across the field and running away from his opponent. He gets matched up with safeties at times and that leads to enormous separation and explosive plays. He showed more versatility as a route runner at the Senior Bowl. He can drop his weight at the top of routes and work back downhill. He has strong, reliable hands. After the catch, he relies on his speed to generate chunk plays. Overall, Wilson lacks ideal size, but he has rare speed and quickness. He reminds me of Packers WR Jayden Reed and I expect Wilson to make a similar impact at the next level.

LSU

48. Maason Smith, DT, LSU

6-5, 306 pounds

Smith is a tall, long and athletic defensive tackle. He had a very productive freshman campaign for LSU before suffering a season-ending knee injury in the first game of his sophomore season. He didn't look like the same player in 2023, but he did improve throughout the season. As a pass rusher, he flashes quick hands and feet to win on the edge of blockers. His power hasn't fully returned yet and he doesn't have a solid rush plan. Against the run, he uses his length to hold the point of attack and he has above-average range. Overall, there is risk here, but the upside should be very appealing to teams with a strong D-line coach.

2024 PLAYER RANKINGS

NFL NETWORK – DANIEL JEREMIAH

49. Jordan Morgan, OT, Arizona

6-5, 311 pounds

Morgan is a very athletic left tackle with average size. In pass pro, he is quick out of his stance to meet and cover up speed rushers. He can sink his weight and drop levels when bull rushed. He also does a nice job re-working his hands when he gets knocked back to regain leverage. He struggles to redirect inside when facing counter moves, getting beat on that inside shoulder too often. He also will occasionally duck his head, which is correctable. In the run game, he is more finesse than power. He can use his quickness to cut off the back side and he takes excellent angles to the second level to wall off linebackers. He doesn't have a lot of knock-back power to displace defenders over his nose. Morgan is just over a year removed from ACL surgery, and I'm hopeful he can add more strength/power now that he's healthy. Overall, he has starting tackle ability.

50. Max Melton, CB, Rutgers

5-11, 187 pounds

Melton offers an exciting mix of size, speed and toughness. He can align outside or in the slot. He has quick feet and he's fluid to open up and mirror. The former Scarlet Knight has plenty of top speed to carry vertical routes, though he does get a little grabby down the field. He's had consistent ball production throughout his career (eight INTs, 22 pass breakups over the last three seasons). I love his feistiness and toughness against the run, and he's a reliable tackler. Overall, Melton has the ideal tools to step in and start right away outside or at the nickel position.
