New Orleans travels to Nashville for the first time since 2021. The last two meetings between the two teams have been decided by a total of three points, with the Titans winning 23-21 in the 2021 matchup and the Saints winning 16-15 in the 2023 season opener at the Caesars Superdome. The Titans hold a 9-7-1 record in the all-time series.

TITANS LOOK FOR THIRD WIN IN FOUR-GAME SPAN

The Titans hosted the Kansas City Chiefs last week and won for the second time in three weeks, defeating the Chiefs 26-9. They did not commit a turnover for the second consecutive game and outgained the Chiefs 376 yards to 133 yards. It was the third consecutive game in which rookie quarterback Cam Ward completed two touchdown passes and running back Tony Pollard reached the 100-yard rushing mark.

Ward's 122.3 passer rating against the Chiefs was the franchise's fourth best since 1970 by a rookie quarterback with at least 20 attempts in a game. The No. 1 overall draft pick improved his season passing totals to 2,866 yards, 13 touchdowns and seven interceptions. Needing 134 passing yards against the Saints to reach 3,000, he already surpassed Marcus Mariota (2,818 in 2015) for the most passing yards by a rookie in club history.

Defensively, the Titans totaled four sacks against Kansas City, and defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons registered a safety. The unit limited the Chiefs to a single third-down conversion on nine attempts (11.1 percent), and in the second half, Kansas City only managed 33 total yards—the third fewest by a Titans opponent in the second half of any game since the beginning of the 1999 campaign.

Two days after the Titans-Chiefs game, Simmons was named to his fourth career Pro Bowl, joining 11 previous Titans/Oilers to earn the honor four or more times. Simmons, a starter on the AFC squad, is joined by teammate Chimere Dike, who was selected as the starting returner. Dike is the franchise's sixth rookie since the 1970 NFL-AFL merger to be named to the Pro Bowl and the first since returner Marc Mariani in 2010.

THE SAINTS

The Saints are in their first season under head coach Kellen Moore. Prior to his current post, Moore served as the offensive coordinator for the Dallas Cowboys (2019-22), Los Angeles Chargers (2023) and Philadelphia Eagles (2024). In his lone year in Philadelphia, he helped the Eagles win Super Bowl LIX.

Last week, Moore's team hosted the New York Jets and won 29-6 to pick up its third consecutive victory. Kicker Charlie Smyth made five field goals on six attempts, and wide receiver Chris Olave accounted for 10 receptions for 148 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Saints.

New Orleans rookie Tyler Shough started his seventh consecutive game at quarterback after Spencer Rattler was the starter for the opening eight contests in 2025. Shough, a second-round pick from Louisville, has passed for seven touchdowns with five interceptions, and against the Jets, he passed for a career-high 308 yards and one score.

WHAT TO WATCH FOR THIS WEEK

TITANS FRANCHISE
- The Titans' next win will be the franchise's 500th all-time win, including the regular season and postseason.

TITANS ROOKIES
- The Titans have 58 combined starts by their rookie class in 2025. With three more, the current class will surpass the 2005 Titans rookie class (60) for the most by the team in its "Titans era" (1999–present).

WR ELIC AYOMANOR, WR CHIMERE DIKE & TE GUNNAR HELM
- Elic Ayomanor (34 receptions for 428 yards, three touchdowns), Chimere Dike (41 for 341 yards, four touchdowns) and Gunnar Helm (43 for 356, two touchdowns) can become the second rookie trio in NFL history to each record 30 receptions, 300 receiving yards and three receiving touchdowns. One more touchdown catch by Helm would secure the accomplishment. The only other time it occurred was 1960, when the Dallas Texans trio of Abner Haynes, Johnny Robinson and Chris Burford did so.

- Has three interceptions in 2025. He can become the team's first linebacker since Keith Bulluck in 2007 (five) with four interceptions in a season.

WR CHIMERE DIKE
- With a league-high 2,269 all-purpose yards in 2025, he ranks third all-time in the NFL among rookies. He needs four more yards to surpass Gale Sayers (2,272 with Chicago in 1965) for second place and 49 more to overtake Tim Brown (2,317 with L.A. Raiders in 1988) for the NFL rookie record.
- Needs 241 more all-purpose yards to surpass Chris Johnson's 2,509 all-purpose yards in 2009 for second place in franchise history. Dike's total would reside behind only Derrick Mason's 2,690 all-purpose yards in 2000.
- With a league-high 1,535 kickoff return yards in 2025, he needs 43 more to move into third place in NFL history among rookies, in front of the New York Jets' Justin Miller (1,577 in 2005). With 150, Dike will pass Arizona's Josh Scobey (1,684 in 2003) for second place and would trail only the Raiders' Chris Carr (1,752 in 2005).
- Can join A.J. Brown (nine touchdowns in 2019), Chris Johnson (10 in 2008) and Vince Young (seven in 2006) as the only franchise rookies since the start of the 1999 season with at least seven total touchdowns. Dike has six touchdowns going into Week 16.

LB CEDRIC GRAY
- Enters the game with 140 tackles on defense in 2025. With 10 tackles this week, he will become the team's fourth player since the beginning of the 2000 campaign to reach 150 in a season (GSIS tackle statistics), joining Azeez Al-Shaair (163 in 2023), Stephen Tulloch (160 in 2010) and Keith Bulluck (152 in 2004).

OLB JAYLEN HARRELL
- Has at least a half sack in three consecutive games and a solo sack in two consecutive games.

P JOHNNY HEKKER
- Enters the game with 398 career punts inside the 20, which ranks eighth in the NFL since the statistic has been tracked beginning in 1976. He needs two more to move past former Titan Craig Hentrich (399) for seventh place.

S AMANI HOOKER
- With 12 career interceptions, he needs one more to tie Jason McCourty (13) for the eighth-highest career total for the franchise during its "Titans era" (1999–present).

TE CHIG OKONKWO
- With 1,960 career receiving yards entering the week, he needs 40 more to become the sixth tight end in franchise history to reach 2,000.
- Enters the contest with 51 receptions in 2025, needing four more to set a career high (54 in 2023).
- Enters the week with 503 receiving yards in 2025, needing 26 more to set a career high (528 in 2023).

RB TONY POLLARD
- With a career-best streak of three consecutive 100-yard rushing games, he can become the franchise's first player with four consecutive 100-yard games since Derrick Henry accomplished the feat in 2022. It would be Pollard's 14th career 100-yard rushing game.
- With 949 rushing yards in 2025, he is 51 yards away from his fourth consecutive 1,000-yard season.
- He would become the fifth player in franchise history with multiple 1,000-yard rushing seasons, joining Eddie George (seven), Chris Johnson (six), Earl Campbell (five) and Derrick Henry (five).
- Can record his fourth consecutive season with at least 1,200 scrimmage yards and five scrimmage touchdowns. He has 1,128 scrimmage yards and five touchdowns going into Sunday. He would join Saquon Barkley and Derrick Henry as the only NFL running backs to have 1,200 scrimmage yards and five scrimmage touchdowns in every campaign from 2022 to 2025.

DT JEFFERY SIMMONS
- Has a career-high nine sacks in 2025. With an additional 1.5 sacks, he will tie Jurrell Casey (10.5 in 2013) for the most sacks in a season by a Titans defensive tackle in the franchise's "Titans era" (1999 to present).
- With 16 tackles for loss in 2025, he needs one more to move past Jason Babin (16 in 2010) for the most by a Titans player in any season since 2008.

K JOEY SLYE
- Has made seven field goals of at least 50 yards in 2025. With one more, he will surpass Stephen Gostkowski (seven in 2020) for the most field goals of 50-plus yards in a season in franchise history.

QB CAM WARD
- With 2,866 passing yards in 2025, he needs 134 more to record the first rookie 3,000-yard season in franchise history and the 21st overall 3,000-yard season in team annals—the first since Ryan Tannehill in 2021.
- Can extend his streak to four consecutive games with at least two touchdown passes. The last Titans quarterback to do so was Ryan Tannehill (five) in 2020.
- Can record a passer rating above 100.0 for the third consecutive game.

OLB JIHAD WARD
- Has 5.0 sacks in 2025 and needs a half sack to establish a new career high. He would top the five sacks he had as a member of the New York Giants in 2023.

G KEVIN ZEITLER
- Can secure his 11th consecutive season with at least 15 starts.

SERIES HISTORY

In head-to-head regular season matchups, the Titans and Saints have played a total of 17 times, with the Titans holding a 9-7-1 advantage. That includes a four-game winning streak by the Titans that was broken with a Saints victory in 2011. The last six outcomes have been split evenly, 3-3.

The Titans opened the 2023 regular season at New Orleans (Sept. 10) and fell by a final score of 16-15. Kicker Nick Folk provided the only scoring of the day for the Titans, connecting on five field goals. The Saints' one touchdown against the Titans defense—a 19-yard touchdown pass from Derek Carr to wide receiver Rashid Shaheed—broke a 9-9 tie in the third quarter and proved to be the difference in the contest.

While the teams are infrequent adversaries and the Saints have made only four appearances in Tennessee since the Oilers moved from Houston in 1997, the Saints visited Nissan Stadium in 2019 and 2021.

On Dec. 22, 2019, the Saints erased a 14-0 Titans lead to win 38-28, defeating a Titans team that was without running back Derrick Henry for the first and only time during the season. Wide receiver Michael Thomas caught 12 passes from Drew Brees for 136 yards, including a late score to seal the New Orleans victory.

On Nov. 14, 2021, the Titans hosted the Saints and earned a 23-21 victory. The Titans defense tallied four sacks—including two sacks by Jeffery Simmons—and stopped the Saints on a late two-point conversion that would have tied the score at 23-23. Ryan Tannehill passed for a touchdown and rushed for another score in the win.

The Titans played a memorable primetime game at Caesars Superdome on Monday night, Sept. 24, 2007. Titans linebacker Keith Bulluck recorded a career-high three interceptions of Brees, tying a franchise record, in helping the team to a 31-14 win.

The initial regular season matchup between the Saints and the then-Houston Oilers occurred in 1971, five seasons after the Saints began play as an expansion franchise in the NFL. The game resulted in a 13-13 score, one of the six ties in Oilers/Titans history.

TITANS-SAINTS: THE LAST MEETING

Week 1: Titans 15, Saints 16
Sunday, Sept. 10, 2023 • 12:00 p.m. CT • Caesars Superdome

In Week 1 of the 2023 season, the Titans traveled to New Orleans to face the Saints and fell by a score of 16-15. It was a game of field goals before the Saints scored the only touchdown of the day to take the lead and the win.

The Titans took a 3-0 lead on the first possession of the game off a 50-yard field goal from K Nick Folk. Titans were able to gain possession to set up the score after S Amani Hooker forced and recovered a fumble on the opening kickoff.

The Saints responded with a field goal of their own from K Blake Grupe after stringing together a nine-play 67-yard drive to tie it at 3-3.

The Titans then turned in an 11-play, 66-yard drive that ended with another field goal by Folk, this one from 27 yards, and it was 6-3 Tennessee at the 3:07 mark of the first quarter.

After another Grupe field goal made it 6-6 midway through the second quarter, Folk added his third field goal of the game, a 31-yard kick, making it 9-6 Titans with 1:40 remaining in the first half. The seven-play 57-yard field goal drive was highlighted by a 46-yard gain by RB Derrick Henry off a screen pass from QB Ryan Tannehill.

Tennessee held a 9-6 lead going into halftime after Hooker came up with his second takeaway of the day after intercepting QB Derek Carr with 37 seconds remaining in the half.

S Marcus Maye intercepted Tannehill on the opening drive of the second half at the New Orleans one-yard line. The Saints drove down and settled for another filed goal by Grupe to tie it 9-9.

Later in the third quarter, the Saints made the Titans pay after Tannehill's third interception of the game, as Carr connected with WR Rashid Shaheed for a 19-yard touchdown pass to make it 16-9 with 1:23 left to play in the stanza.

The Titans then strung together a 12-play 48-yard drive highlighted by three first down completions from Tannehill that culminated in a 45-yard field goal by Folk to make it 16-12.

Folk made his fifth field goal of the day with 2:17 left to bring Tennessee within one. But the Titans never got the ball back, as the Saints offense converted two third-down opportunities to run out the clock and seal the victory.

Kellen Moore was named the 19th head coach of the New Orleans Saints on Feb. 11, 2025, after serving as offensive coordinator for the Philadelphia Eagles in 2024.

Though he only spent one season in Philadelphia, the Eagles captured their second Super Bowl title and the offense set multiple team and league records. Moore's unit rushed for a single-season franchise record 3,048 yards to rank sixth in NFL history. Running back Saquan Barkley became the ninth player in league annals to rush for over 2,000 yards in a regular season and set the all-time mark with 2,504 rushing yards in the regular season and postseason combined. Barkley earned consensus first team All-Pro honors.

Through the air, the Eagles set a club record with a 103.4 passer rating, led by quarterback Jalen Hurts' career-high 103.7 mark. En route to Super Bowl LIX MVP honors, Hurts set a career high in completion percentage (68.7). Receiving duo A.J. Brown and Devonta Smith were one of three tandems in the league to record at least 60 receptions, 825 yards and seven touchdowns each.

In 2023, Moore served as offensive coordinator for the Los Angeles Chargers. This came after five seasons on the Dallas Cowboys' coaching staff of which he spent the last four as the team's offensive coordinator.

During his time in Dallas, Moore furthered the growth of quarterback Dak Prescott, whom Moore was a teammate with for two seasons before becoming his position coach in 2018. During Moore's tenure as a coach in Dallas, Prescott set several franchise and personal bests, including a career-high 37 passing touchdowns in 2021 and 4,902 passing yards in 2019, a franchise-record.

In 2022, the Dallas offense featured a 1,000-yard rusher (Tony Pollard) and a 1,000-yard receiver (CeeDee Lamb). The previous season in 2021, the Cowboys led the league in total offense (407.0 net yards per game) and scoring offense (31.2 points per game). Moore entered the coaching ranks as Dallas' quarterbacks coach in 2018 after three seasons as a quarterback with the team.

Moore played six NFL seasons for the Detroit Lions (2012-14) and Cowboys (2015-17) after originally joining the league as an undrafted free agent.

A native of Prosser, Wash., Moore played collegiately at Boise State. With a 50-3 record, Moore set the mark for the most wins by a quarterback in NCAA history.

LAST WEEK VS. THE CHIEFS

Week 16: Titans 26, Chiefs 9
Sunday, Dec. 21, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CST • Nissan Stadium

In Week 16 of the 2025 season, the Titans hosted the Kansas City Chiefs and won by a score of 26-9. The win snapped an 11-game losing streak at Nissan Stadium.

The Titans tallied four sacks in the contest, as the Chiefs managed just nine first downs and 133 yards of offense. The Titans won the time of possession 38:01 to 21:59. RB Tony Pollard accounted for 102 rushing yards while RB Tyjae Spears amassed 105 yards of offense (52 rush, 53 receiving) and a touchdown in the contest. It was Pollard's third straight 100-yard rushing performance.

The Titans took the lead early on a safety, when DT Jeffery Simmons exploded through the line of scrimmage and tackled RB Kareem Hunt in the end zone. The play gave the Titans a 2-0 lead at the 13:06 mark of the second quarter.

The Chiefs responded with a nine-play, 28-yard drive that resulted in a 54-yard field goal by K Harrison Butker to take a 3-2 lead with 7:40 left in the second quarter. QB Chris Oladokun entered the game for the drive in place of an injured QB Gardner Minshew. QB Patrick Mahomes had been placed on injured reserve the week prior.

The Titans reclaimed the lead on their next offensive possession. Tennessee strung together an 11-play, 89-yard drive and capped it off with a seven-yard touchdown pass from QB Cam Ward to TE Chig Okonkwo. Spears was a big contributor on the possession, running the ball and catching it out of the backfield for 64 yards.

The Chiefs kept it close heading into the half with a 41-yard field goal by K Harrison Butker that capped a quick seven-play, 45-yard drive to make it 9-6.

Tennessee came out hot in the second half with a nine-play, 75-yard touchdown drive. Ward connected with WR Elic Ayomanor on a 25-yard pass before finding WR Chimere Dike for 30 yards and then the one-yard touchdown to make it 16-6 with 10:32 left in the third quarter.

The Titans defense responded by forcing a long field goal attempt. Butker was wide right on the 51-yarder and the Titans reclaimed possession.

Later in the third quarter, Butker made good on a 27-yard field goal to make it 16-9 with 3:00 left in the third quarter.

The Titans responded with a 10-play, 64-yard touchdown drive. A defensive offside by Kansas City nullified a 51-yard field goal by K Joey Slye and gave the Titans a first down a the Chiefs' 28-yard line. Ward found Ayomanor for a 24-yard completion and Spears finished it off with a four-yard touchdown run to make it 23-9 with 11:56 left in the game.

The Titans then executed a methodical 13-play, 57-yard drive that took 6:17 off the clock and culminated in a 27-yard field goal by Slye to extend the lead to 26-9 with 3:44 left.

Tennessee's defense forced a three-and-out and the Titans ended the game in victory formation.

- With 51 receptions in 2025, he joined Frank Wycheck (six consecutive seasons) and Delanie Walker (five) as the only tight ends in franchise history to record at least 50 receptions in three consecutive seasons.

RB TONY POLLARD

- Rushed for 102 yards on 21 carries for an average of 4.9 yards per attempt.
- Notched his 13th career 100-yard rushing game.
- Marked the first time in his career with 100 rushing yards in three consecutive games. The last Titans player to accomplish the feat prior to Pollard was Derrick Henry from Dec. 11-24, 2022.

- Completed 21-of-28 passes for 228 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions.
- His 122.3 passer rating was his best through 15 NFL games. It was his second consecutive game with a passer rating above 100.
- His 122.3 passer rating was the franchise's fourth best since 1970 by a rookie quarterback with at least 20 attempts in a game. In that span, only Marcus Mariota (135.7 at New Orleans on Nov. 8 ,2015), Will Levis (130.5 vs. Atlanta on Oct. 29, 2023) and Vince Young (127.7 at Buffalo on Dec. 24, 2006) fared better with 20-plus attempts.
- Recorded his third consecutive game with two touchdown passes. With his 13th touchdown pass of the season, a one-yarder to Chimere Dike in the third quarter, he moved past Vince Young (12 in 2006) for the second-most in franchise history by a rookie, behind only Marcus Mariota (19 in 2015).
- Threw a screen pass to Tyjae Spears that went 34 yards in the second quarter, and later on the same drive, he was credited with a seven-yard touchdown pass to Chig Okonkwo.
- On the opening series of the second half, he completed a 25-yard pass to Elic Ayomanor, a 30-yard pass to Chimere Dike and a one-yard touchdown pass to Dike.
- Converted a third-and-10 in the fourth quarter with a 24-yard completion to Elic Ayomanor to set up a touchdown on the next play.

- Logged his second career start and his first in 2025.
- Led the team with a career-best nine tackles and added two quarterback pressures.
- Brought down quarterback Chris Oladokun for a loss of 11 yards on third down in the fourth quarter to notch his first career sack.

INTERIM HEAD COACH MIKE McCOY

Okay, obviously you guys know the one injury. He (Marcus Harris) is still being evaluated. Unfortunate situation with him, the way he's been playing. But I'll have more information tomorrow on him. What a great team win. That's the way it's supposed to be. It's been a long time coming since we've won a home game here, so it's just a great feeling for everybody in the entire organization, everyone who puts so many hours in, and then to be able to come home and play like this is phenomenal. Some numbers that people have told me about is that the first time not allowing a TD since 2023 by the defense. Outstanding. Most kick return yards by Chim (Dike) in franchise history. Cam (Ward), rookie yards, most. Outstanding. Just seeing him make those plays out there, unbelievable. Once again, Jeff (Simmons) is Jeff. What he's done, getting the safety and the way he played, the way he leads, it's unbelievable. You just feel so good for these guys because they work so hard, and this is what you want for our fans. To our fans, I'm glad we do this for them, too. It was a great atmosphere. Then you talk about the game going—you guys talked about finishing the end of the half, start of the second half, the way the offense did that. But just a great team effort overall by everybody. Give the coaches a ton of credit. The defensive coaching staff with three guys going down last week and what we did with the guys just learning this week, teaching whoever they had available, obviously, and then we have an injury, it's just, give them a ton of credit. And the offensive staff with the plan and once again, the way we ran the football. Like I talked about, that's the identity we want to have here in the way we're playing. Couldn't be happier for the players in the locker room, the entire organization, everybody that's bought in and worked so hard. There's nothing like winning at home. With that, I'll open it up.

How much of an explanation did they give you on the touchdown that they took off with Jeff Simmons? Did they just not see him report?
They said he has to go directly to the ref to report. He's running out there, 98, everyone in the whole entire stadium, but he has to go directly to him. You see everyone is saying Jeff's report and this and that, and they said he has to go directly to Clete (Blakeman), so they threw the flag.

The running game has been revitalized the last three weeks. Tony (Pollard) has been over 100 yards each week. How much has that not only helped him but also helped Cam (Ward) to be in better situations and able to use the passing game?
Well, this is with two minutes remaining. Obviously, we ran the one time, so we had 38 total runs I guess we had, the last one. It's a commitment to the running game. We said it. I've always wanted to run the football, and situations come up, this and that, and obviously we went on the road to Cleveland. We said we have to run the football. We cannot get out of this game running it 12, 14, it's got to be in the 30s. We've got to be able to get up there and do it in the weather with Myles (Garrett), this and that, you have to run the football, and it was a commitment, and we kind of challenged everybody. This is what the offensive line loves, obviously. But just give everybody credit. The coaches putting a great plan together, players going out and executing, the receivers blocking their tails off downfield, doing certain things. It's a whole team effort. Cam with the alerts and the checks and everything, getting us into the right plays, things like that. But it's a commitment to the run game. You have to commit to it. You have to practice it that way, and you've got to actually call it in the game, and that's what we've done the past three weeks, and it's paid off for us.

That 10-play 89-yard drive, how big was that for you guys, and how do you like the way you were able to layer the plays?
Oh, you love it. You love those 10-play drives. I don't care what plays you call. You get 10-play drives and go that many yards, it's awesome. That's what it's all about. This was a complementary game, everyone playing together today. So like I said, I'm so happy for the guys in the room.

Potentially Cam's best game?
He played well. We'll look at the film. You see some of the plays that he made, the one throw to Chim (Dike) when he was scrambling around there and threw it to the left side over on their sideline, wow, what a play. But he's getting better every week, and there's going to be some plays you miss. The fourth down, I think he's going to look back at and say we can make that throw, we've got to convert that there. But he's getting better. I've been saying it from day one, Cam loves to play the game of football. He loves to be coached hard, and he understands he's going to make some mistakes, but it doesn't bother him. He just keeps going, and he's Cam. Very happy with the way he played.

You've scored 24 or more in four out of five now.
I kind of like that.

How due was that, and how much is that a testament to the growth of everything, the play calling, the young guys?
I think it's everybody involved. You always go down to how do you execute and how do you block, how do you do certain things, how do you call games, how do you put players in a position to be successful, and it goes down to players executing and making plays. There's plenty of plays in there, especially in the run game, the attitude and the mindset of our backs right now, it's unbelievable. It's because they have the confidence in it, and that's what happens when you commit to something like that and you run it. It's amazing the number of times we run it and now we scored more points because we're more efficient. I think Cam is learning a lot, too, about when you run the ball like this, and now it's a lot easier to be in third-and-manageable than it is with third-and-longs if you have an incomplete pass, even second-and-longs are harder. So, when you don't have the incompletes and you're efficient, even if it's two yards, and all of a sudden two becomes four, four becomes—you keep multiplying it as you go, it helps everybody. It just goes to say when you go out there and do what we're supposed to be doing, you score points like this, it's great to see the number of points we've been scoring. Then give us credit, too, the defense getting the ball back for you, good field position. Leading up to this game the past two weeks we had 24 points off of three turnovers and a blocked kick, so that's part of it, too, scoring more points.

You mentioned the home losing streak a couple of times. Obviously the players were aware, too. What are the ways you guys emphasized it as a staff? How did they get ingrained and why was it so important to emphasize?
Well, you've got to be careful. Nick (Holz) said in the meeting the other day about being 412 days since we've won at home. So that was kind of where it stemmed from there. But it's hard to win in this league. That's why I just told the players, enjoy this. What a great Christmas gift for everybody involved, everybody in the organization, all our fans to be able to enjoy Christmas after a win. It's great. It's an unbelievable feeling. I'm just so happy for the guys and the veterans and the leaders that deserve this. The entire team deserves it, don't get me wrong. They work so hard.

We talked about the fourth downs before. This game there was no hesitation you were going for it. Was it a confidence issue? Was the game flowing better? What was it?
Got a little nervous after the one. It's just you do what you think is best there. Do you punt there? Cam went right to the line of scrimmage and tried to sneak it and we didn't get it, and we responded to it, but there was times earlier in the game we went the third down, we didn't get and then we went for it on fourth down. It's always going to be the flow of the game and what is the down-and-distance and what is the score of the game. I know I've told you guys this since the first game here; it's going to change week to week. There's times where you say, you've got to be more aggressive. You've got to finish drives with touchdowns and not field goals, so that changes things. There's so many things on a weekly basis, how are you running the football—it makes it a lot easier for those situations to go for it when you run the ball the way we do. Now, we didn't get it on the one third down we ran it. But other than that.

You talked about the commitment to the run game. How is that affecting those shorter swing passes and in effect the screen game? Looked like it was hitting today.
It's all part of—they've got to cover everybody. I know you guys had some questions about handing the ball off to Chim (Dike) and it's this and that, and the average is this. But when you look at it, and all of a sudden you hand the ball off the next time you'll see X number of defenders going with him, that helps the running game. So they've got to honor everybody. I think a number of times this year when we've thrown those bubbles and things like that, there have been some big plays, and Chig (Okonkwo) makes guys miss more often than not as long as you get that first guy going. It's just another way that whoever those players are, they've got to honor that because if they don't, as long as you make one block and get the play started, it's going to be a positive gain. It's just something we believe in, and it helps the running game. It may not always be the prettiest thing in the world. It might be some one and twos. There was a couple minuses in there, I know that. But it helps because that nickel or whoever that defender is has got to widen the box.

A lot of young players on this team, obviously. How important do you think this whole journey is going to be for them, that they're seeing what it's like over the course of a season and now having some success before it ends?
It's invaluable, the experience they're getting. I think a lot of times, too, and give the coaches credit. Give all the coaches all the credit in the world. The way these rookies are playing and the number of them that are playing and have been playing for a long time, and you see the success. We all talked about Gunnar (Helm) earlier in the year and what Luke (Stocker) just to mention one person, Luke, the way he got Gunnar rolling up early in the blocking and things like that. We weren't sure how it was going to be, and you just see where he is now from where he was. That's just one example. Then the DBs unfortunately have been dinged the last two weeks, but you see their growth and you see Cam's growth. I can go on and on about every rookie. I think one thing, it's hard to win in the NFL. It's brutal losing. But you're also teaching the guys how to win games. When you look at the whole game, you look at it, and you learn from the losses just as much, and it's not just the individual performances. But part of my job is to help teach these guys how to win. It's not just their individual performances, but you look at it as you never know what play is going to affect the game and when. So it's just a matter of getting these guys to execute at a high level. They're going to make mistakes. They're going to make mistakes. But be brutally honest with them about, 'Hey, this is what's going to help us.' The one thing I think the coaches have all stressed from day one here is don't worry about—the mistakes are on us as coaches. That's going to happen. There's a bunch of young players. Just don't make the same mistake twice, whether it's a decision Cam makes. Like I had to burn a time-out today. Don't do that again, please. Things like that that you don't want to do. You've got to avoid those things. But it's going to happen in the game. And you just keep growing.

The one play Dan Moore Jr. went down, Peter Skoronski bumped to tackle before Corey Levin came in, what was behind that? What was behind that?
It's because he was eligible the play before. So you can't go from an eligible to an ineligible in an injury because that's twice now that's happened this year. That's twice it's happened.

Can you challenge a replay assist?
You're asking about the one, the fourth down? I asked Clete (Blakeman) if I could challenge it, and he told me I could not challenge it.

That's wrong, by the way.
I went to ask him, I want to challenge. You cannot challenge. That's what he told me. He said we could not challenge it. When he told me we couldn't, we didn't challenge it.

Would you have if you could have?
There's a possibility.

What do you think about Cam Ward's decision making growth over the last month to five weeks?
It gets better. I think he plays faster and faster. He's more comfortable each week. This was a tough challenge because Spags (Steve Spagnuolo) is a phenomenal defensive coordinator, and the pressures, he understands all the protection schemes and all those things, and he got us a couple times. The good thing was Cam did the next best thing. He ate the ball, whether he threw the ball away, didn't turn the ball over, and that's critical against a team like this. But those are the things you see, the ball security in the pocket, things like that. You see the growth, and that's what it's all about, so you just continue to see him making the wow plays here and there and just the control and the command of the offense and the growth. Very pleased with where he's at these days.

QUARTERBACK CAM WARD

Jeff (Simmons) says he told you not to be a Grinch after this. How did you react to that, and how was this win in your eyes?
It's a good win, just because it was the first time we played good enough, complementary, all three phases. Defense, I think they kept us in the game the entirety, part of it, especially when we had our three-and-outs, but it was a good team win.

You weren't on the team the last time that they won a game at home. Have you guys as a rookie class felt kind of the weight of that this season?
No, we didn't feel the weight of it. We just want to win every game. We got to be able to establish a home atmosphere by winning games. So, the biggest thing is us how can we go 1-0 each and every week and try to continue to play complementary football.

How much did that opening drive in the second half to go down, and you get a couple of deeper shots, and you guys score and take the lead. How much of that set the tone for the whole second half?
I wouldn't say more setting the tone. I just think we continued to play high-level football, both sides. Everybody doing their job. And it's still going to be some stuff to clean up offensively and defensively just from little miscues. But I think we all just have the right mindset each and every play. Trying to be efficient on both sides of the ball and continue to keep the clock running, continue to score points.

The running game and Tony Pollard's emergence over these last three games, how much has that made it a little easier for you in the pass game when it's time to throw the ball?
It was made very easy. Tony (Pollard), he's one of the most unselfish people out there. And for him to continue to let his presence be felt when things are good, when things that are bad, I mean it's why we're starting to trend upwards. The O-line, I think they do a good job, the run game each and every week. We've just got to continue to play complementary football, help the defense out, and continue to be balanced on offense.

You, Elic (Ayomanor), (Chimere) Dike, Gunnar (Helm), are so instrumental in this, how significant is it that the young guys are kind of doing it together, experiencing winning together?
It's fun, especially when we all contribute. A lot of our work pays off, and I think the biggest thing for us as rookies is we just want to win football games. We all don't care about how we win, it's just we all have the will to win.

Would you say this was your most efficient game of the season?
I would say so, especially from just a continuing-to-stay-above-the-chain standpoint. I think in the pass game and run game, we were able to get what we wanted out of it. And I think that's why we were able to have one of our more productive days on offense.

With the comfort level and confidence that you seem to be playing in the pocket, is there a different level that you're reaching as far as feeling the flow of the game and just being able to function?
There is a different flow, because I think as a quarterback, if you can manipulate a lot of stuff, a lot of things will go your way, but you got to continue to play on schedule and on time of how the drive is going, you got continue to emphasize what's going in that drive—what's going good in that drive whether it's pass or run game, and you just got to continue have a next play mentality. You're going to have bad plays, but if you have the right mindset each and every down, you'll take care of a lot.

Is there anything other than reps that help you unlock that comfort level?
Just continue to watch a lot of film, knowing what a DC (defensive coordinator) wants to call here, knowing our best matchups, especially on third down, so just continue to watch film with my guys. Coaches have been helping me out a lot.

Where do you think you have improved the most as a team and how good does it feel to be kind of ending this year with some momentum?
I think the biggest thing that we've improved, just as a whole, with just our mindset, attacking each and every day, whether it's a walk-through, a jog-through, or actually in practice or in a game. Each and every rep, we have to have the right mindset that it's going to be a touchdown rep offensively, defensively having to be game-stopping rep. The more that we can emphasize the little things, the things that's going to win us games, we'll continue to go in the right direction.

When did that mindset flip as a team?
That's always been the mindset the whole time. But I think the switch flip is when we just got going. It's hard to—when you never get going and then try to get going, I think that's one of the hardest things to do. But once you get going, and you see what good football is supposed to look like, I think that real time switch just flips each and every day.

On a play that Patrick Mahomes and Travis Kelce pretty much made famous, which is a little mid tight end shovel pass. How good did it feel to be able to execute that play against that team?
I'm just glad we called it. I mean, all that crazy stuff, that's me every play. So, I think Bo (Hardegree) and Nick (Holz) and Stock (Luke Stocker), tight ends coach, I think they did an unbelievable job with the play. They let us freelance a little bit and I'm glad Chig (Okonkwo) got a gusto.

Cam, how difficult has this whole season been for you, just as somebody who wasn't used to probably not having success playing football? And do you feel like now that you're almost kind of on the other side of it, that you are going to be a lot better for what you went through this year?
Yeah, I think I've been better each and every week. Whether it's one thing or whether it's a major thing. And I've had stops where I didn't have good football, whether it was the team as a whole or just me individually. So, I know how to handle tough situations. And just the team that they have around me, the guys that we have in our locker room, we're able to handle those situations. So, I think just going forward, I just continue to control what I can control, lead my teammates, be a great team player and try to win games. I think everything else will take care of itself.

What's the most important thing for you for the final two games of this season?
To win games and continue to put up a lot of points on offense. We pride ourselves on scoring the football and we have to make an emphasis on that every drive. Every drive has to end with points, but then the more we can score the football, the defense continues to do what they're doing, the wins will stack on.

Van Jefferson is a veteran wide receiver on his team. He mentioned that he talked to you and gave you advice and things like that. How has his advice been critical to your development and your process on the field?
I think the best part of having Van J(efferson) is he can see it from a different point of view than I can. Not only the years he's played, where he's lined up because they don't see everything I see when I'm dropping back, and I can't see what they're seeing while they're running. So, he's able to let me know just certain leverages that a DB's playing, helps me with my ball placement, and when things get rough, he always stays in the right mindset. He never gets too high, never gets too low. And I know he's always there to make a play for us.

Are you excited to see Miami get the win yesterday?
Yes, sir. They got some stuff to clean up as well, man, but I mean for them boys to get the get they first ever CFP (College Football Playoff) win in the program history, something I wish I could have did, but I know the guys in that locker room they got us and I plan on them going out there and beating Ohio State.

LINEBACKER CODY BARTON

How did it feel to win at home?
It felt great. That's something we've needed for a long time. This is something we talked about all last week. Best way to celebrate Christmas, get a win and a victory Monday and stuff like that. And so, it's a testament to this team. Just all year, the record obviously hasn't been what we want it to be, but we've been talking about we're going to finish strong, no matter what. We're going to play hard no matter what. Hats off to the guys. No matter what the circumstance, always play hard.

You guys have been preaching all year, about playing complementary football. Did it feel like that today, with the way the offense, defense, all three phases were today?
Yeah, even in special teams, pinning them back in crucial situations. Punt team put them back inside their ten, a couple of times. Offense controlling the clock and controlling the ball. Defense getting off when it was time to get off. It was a full team game.

A lot of new faces on both sides, all three phases today. Guys really stepped up today.
Yeah, a lot of guys stepped up. I just think and can speak on the defense. We've had a lot of new guys in the building this week in the backend positions, and everyone's been dialed into the game plan, communicating, so it's been big.

Was it one of those, 'Hey, great play. I don't know your name, but great play?'
No, no. I always make sure when guys come in, they make sure I know their name. So, I don't just call them by number and stuff. It does get a lot when you got new guys back there. But a great opportunity for a lot of guys to get their first NFL snaps or whatever it is. So, I'm just happy for everybody.

The defense got challenged last week. San Francisco had a hot start. I think KC was only one-for-nine on third down today.
Yeah, coming off of last week, we always look at the things we need to improve on. And obviously, coming from last week, there was nothing special to what teams are doing. It's just, if we play disciplined, and do our jobs, and be in the correct leverage, or whatever it is, everyone just does their job, we can be damn good across the board.

SAFETY AMANI HOOKER

I know it wasn't the original quarterback you thought you might be facing when you saw KC, but how do you feel about the secondary, the way you guys shut him down?
Yeah, it was great. I mean, no matter who's out there, it's an NFL game. You always have to come out here with high expectations for ourselves. Guys stepped up all across the field on the on the defensive side. We just stayed top-down, not letting balls go behind us. So that was a good job.

You guys did a great job shutting them down on third down, as they were only one-of-nine. That had to make you feel good, knowing how close you've gotten in these past games.
It was a great day on third down. Just passing downs in general. We just had great communication across the board. And guys were playing what we were communicating, which is awesome.

Right before Christmas, a home win finally for the first time in over a year. How do you feel actually coming to your home locker room and getting to celebrate?
It feels awesome. We haven't had music playing after a game here in a long time, so it was awesome to have that. Ms. Amy (Adams Strunk) was here as well, so that's a good gift for everyone in the organization.

RUNNING BACK TONY POLLARD

How did it feel to get a Christmas present with a home win today?
Man, this was big for us, especially doing it at home, slowly toward the end of the season, kind of building that momentum, just carrying it into this game and just coming out with a win, that was big for us.

I know Jeff (Simmons) and a lot of the veterans have been preaching complementary football, did it feel like that today, getting it from all three phases today?
Definitely, it felt like we did a good job playing off each other. Feeding off of the momentum from either side, whether it's special teams, or whether it's offense, or whether it's defense, just playing off of each other.

How would you say Cam (Ward) did running the offense today, looked like maybe his most efficient game of the year?
He's doing a better job, week in and week out, just getting better with his decision-making. Just little things that you just watch film and see that he's getting better week after week.

How much fun you have running behind this offensive line because the last three weeks or last several weeks, the running game has really looked good?
I mean, when those guys move people off the ball like that, they make my job easy. It's easy for me to get the spotlight and recognition. But without them up front doing the dirty work, none of this would be happening.

Third straight week hat you guys have had the commitment to run. I think the final number of total carries today for you guys was 40. I mean, how effective can you guys be when the commitment is there?
I mean, that's just us finding our identity in this offense. Figuring out what we do best, and what gets us going, what allows us to put points on the board, and that's what we're doing right now.

How good does it feel just here toward the end of the season and your play is really getting stronger? What does that say?
It's just controlling what you can control and trying to finish on a high note, a positive. I know we had a lot of downs in this season, a lot ups and downs, but just trying to control what we can control on these last few games and just go out fighting.

You personally, how good do you feel seeing that you're able to be so productive at this time of year?
It feels good, especially in December, playing football. This is when you want to play your best ball anyway. So, it just shows that we have something going here and we have to build off of it.

It's a 100-yard game for you in three straight. You've never done that in your NFL career. How rewarding is something like that, especially with how the year started?
I mean, it's very rewarding. It's something that we've been working on all year, trying to get the run game going and now toward the back end of the season, we're starting to get that momentum going and build our identity around it.

Your first home win, I think it's been 412 days, I think you've had a child born since then?
Yeah, it's been a long time, so this win here at home for us today was huge. For the fans, for the owners, for the players, for everybody in the locker room, it was big.

DEFENSIVE TACKLE JEFFERY SIMMONS

How good does it feel to finally break the home and lose this week? I know you're trying to win every week.
It feels good. That's a good football team, even without their best player (Patrick) Mahomes and they tried to keep it close for a little bit, but what a feeling. It's a feeling to come in the locker room and celebrate with the guys and to feel that joy, to feel it lift, especially being at home. and then to see the resiliency that guys keep fighting. That's what I keep talking about. When you talk about the future of this football team, when you talk about what we are made of. We could have easily said the season was over with. You see how guys come in each and every day with the right mindset that no matter what the record is, we're going to continue to play for each other and play hard. Today showed that in all three phases. Shout out to the offense, they did their part. Everyone just did their job, and we keep talking about complementing football, and we finally got one at home. So, it felt good.

When you went in on the eligible play, was there contact with the official? Did it seem like he acknowledged it?
From my understanding, when I'm looking at him — I mean, I'm a defensive player. You see, I wear a big arm brace, red sleeve, looking right at you, and I'm throwing my arm up and rubbing my chest. He said he didn't acknowledge it. I guess he was reporting (Oli) Udoh first. I guess I should have actually went into his face and did it again I guess. But his explanation he was like, 'I got a lot to handle during that play.' But as I'm running on the field, I'm looking, I'm making eye contact with him, doing this. I don't know. I hate it for TP (Tony Pollard), knocked a touchdown that off the board. Hopefully they don't ban me from offense now, if I get another opportunity, I'll make sure that I go all the way to the referee. I did the same thing I did last week, as I'm running on the field, I'm doing this. And maybe he just took his eyes off me in the last minute as I coming on the field, but lesson learned.

How much does a defensive lineman lick his chops when a team has the near it's own goal line for chance for a safety and when is the last time you got one of those?
Been a while. I think that was my first safety I ever caused in my career, honestly. You know, from high school to college. When they got backed up, in my mind I'm like, 'Go make a play.' That's kind of my mindset every snap, honestly. But when you get in a moment like that, they get a false start, the crowd noise and the momentum is kind of going our way. That next play, I'm like, 'It's time to go make a play.' I switched up my technique a little bit to where I know I'm about to get a double team, which it was supposed to be a double team. And I swimmed him pretty good, and I whiffed them, and my eyes got big. I was just praying not to miss the tackle. So, it was a hell of a play on my behalf. And so that is my first one in my career, that one felt good.

We've talked about the need for these young guys to experience winning. Now that they've got this one, experience it at home, what do you think the value is to young guys, especially Cam Ward and some of the young guys on offense? What does it mean to them to feel it?
I think it means a lot to them. I think as a team, when you walk into that building, those young guys — sometimes you could, I mean when you've been on the team, when you been in the league for a minute, you know how sometimes young guys think. You kind of feel it at times where like these guys — they're going through adversity, this is one of the things where they're going into a shell. I would say starting with Cam (Ward), Cam hasn't changed. Us as a team, we know how close we've been. We know how vital it is for us to do the little things better. And I think that's when we come in and watch tape and we get the correction from the coaches, we see that and our young guys see that. This rookie class is pretty good, and they come out there, and they've been coming to work with the right mindset. And like I said, it starts with Cam. He was pissed off when we came in when we got the victory last time, and I was messing with him in the locker room. I was like, don't be the Grinch today. So, he was he was happy today and shout out to the young guys and this is just showing what we could be in the future. And those guys, they're going to play a big part of it.

It's 9-6 at halftime and the offense goes 90 yards to open the second half, putting them down two scores. How much did that change the game for you guys on your side?
It's changed the game a lot, especially when you've got a team that was still trying to establish the run game, and now it puts us in pass-rush mode. That's something that we've been harping on. That's what we've talking about. Dennard (Wilson) on the sideline, he over there telling us, even in the locker room at halftime, 'Let's get them to third-and-long.' And like I said, that's what you call complementary football. When your offense can go out there, 90 yards, that is big time football and that's something we dream for on defense. Especially when you can just pin your ears back and rush, as you saw at the end of the game. When you get two sacks back-to-back like that, that's big time. So, like I said, that's complementary football. That's something we've been preaching. It's something we have really been harping on, playing for each other and playing off each other.

You talk about feeding off of each other. I know you mentioned Cam being "a Grinch" after the last win. But that competitive attitude, how do you guys feed off of that knowing that he's kind of the captain on the other side of the ball and you being the captain and the competitor yourself on the defensive side?
Well, I mean, it wasn't a bad thing. I had a conversation with Cam, we all talked to Cam. But of course, when it happened, I told him it's hard to win in this league. But to understand and to know every time we come into the meeting room, there's always things to grow off of. And that's what Cam felt coming off the field, so I understood where he was coming from. One thing I told him, it's hard to win in this league no matter who it is against. I'm sure he wanted everything to be cleaner, but you got to enjoy every one of them. Especially the way this season is going for us, that's kind of my message to him. But I understood where he was coming from. It's not always going to be clean, but just like today, I got told him the most passing yards in Titans history for a rookie. I kind of threw that in and joked with him, but that's big time. That's the expectation that he had for himself, and that's the reason why — that's why I keep telling these people — that's the reason why I don't want to go nowhere. I see the competitive nature, I see the growth as a rookie of Cam. I can see where he could take this franchise. So, I'm looking forward to continuing to end the season the right way and we'll see how next year goes for us.

How much did you guys talk, did the coaching staff talk to you guys about how long it had been since a home win here?
I mean, we mentioned in before the game. When we talked about earlier this week, right after that last game, we talked about coming back home. We've been talking about it all week at practice. We didn't put, I guess, an exact number on how long it's been. But man, like I said, it's just it was like desperate. We were desperate to win at home and guys played that way today. I'm proud of this team, getting our first win at home this year. So we got one more, hopefully, we can finish it off the right way.

GUARD PETER SKORONSKI

You guys have been able to stack, that's got to mean more than, right?
For sure, for sure. I think we've got a little bit of an identity here in terms of what we've been able to do. We know that we can hang our hat on that in a lot of ways. So proud of the guys, proud of whole offense. Of course, up front, we're real proud of that.

9-6 at halftime, you come out in the second half and put a long one together to make it a two-score game. That seemed to be like a stake in the ground moment.
It feels like we hadn't done that in a long time. Been a while since we did that. That was awesome. Cam (Ward) made some great plays to extend the drive, and that's what you want to have at quarterback. Man, that was great to just go down and score, and really great job.

What's it say about the character of this team being able to finish this season so strong?
Yeah, I mean, guys have really stayed in it, man. We've had some lows, some low lows. The guys have come to work, guys have worked hard. Guys were trying to find solutions on how to be better, and guys are continuing to get better. So, just proud of the group of guys. Man, when you hit these moments and you're losing a lot of games, I mean, it just feels low. It's hard to be motivated, but this group has really stayed in it.

When it comes to the run game, and we talk about establishing an identity kind of here at the end of the season, how strong has it been just since the beginning when the commitment became we're going to push the run game because we have the guys who can do it?
Yeah, for sure. I mean, I think it starts with our staff and them, you know, really believing in us and trusting us. And then just our group, just saying, 'Hey, let's be the group to really make this go and get the run game going.' I think that's been the catalyst of all of our success.

We were here talking to Tony Pollard, he's closing in on 1,000 yards again. He's gotten stronger as the year has gone on. What have you seen from him?
Totally, man. We've had some games where he had to go away from him. He's had the best attitude about it. I'm glad that we're rewarding him, but we've got to get him over 1,000.

Do you guys as an offensive line take pride when you have a 100-yard rusher like that? He's done it in three straight games now.
Yeah, no doubt. I think we all wanted to get him over 100 at the end there. I think that was a cool moment, so it's a credit to him and his ability, but also just the whole unit.

OUTSIDE LINEBACKER JIHAD WARD

First time since 2023 this team has held a team without a touchdown. That's got to be a good feeling.
Yeah, it's a good feeling. We did, we came together, and I'm proud of this team. How it was time to wake up. So, we did what we had to do. All personnel, on offense, defense, special teams. I am glad we got the victory.

We talked about you guys up front getting it done. You close the deal with the sacks up front, and offensively, you rush for 160 yards. So, at the line of scrimmage, you guys won this football game today.
Yeah, man, I just can't thank Arden Key, Jeffery Simmons, and the rest of the young guys out there. But I want to give a special shout out to Dennard (Wilson). Dennard has been very consistent in everything. He's got our backs, and at the end of the day, when we need to be heard, he's out there listening. So, shout out to Dennard (Wilson)

How big was that two points?
Very big. It's next play mentality. You know what I'm saying? It was his next play. And you know, this isn't surprising when we see Jeff (Simmons) do stuff like that. I actually visioned him doing that, before the play even started. I'm like, man, Jeff is about to blow up and just get a tackle for loss, and call it a day. So, shout out to him.

How did it feel to get a victory today, a home victory, and you got a sack?
I feel good, man. You know, at the end of the day, we got two more. The sacks are going to come, man. You can't really rush it. You have got to do what you have got to do. You have got to do your job. I think everybody did their job, and we've just got to keep continuing to do our jobs. That's how the play came to me.

Walk through your sack, and how you knew you had him?
This quarterback, he's a hell of a quarterback. You know, he was scrambling, and we just had to keep getting him in the pocket. And we just had to contain him. We just do our games, and we have a rush plan. Once we get our rush plan, we keep him in the pocket so he won't scramble, and we got him.

The OTP: New Titans GM Mike Borgonzi

Video: Mike Borgonzi's Introductory Press Conference

Mike Borgonzi was named the 15th general manager in franchise history on Jan. 17, 2025.

Borgonzi arrived in Tennessee with 16 years of experience with the Kansas City Chiefs. For the last four seasons, he served as Kansas City's assistant general manager.

"Mike's experience speaks for itself: he has been part of the core team that delivered five AFC championships and three Super Bowls over the past six seasons," said Titans Controlling Owner Amy Adams Strunk. "It's the type of standard I want to build here in Tennessee. I know we have a lot of work ahead of us, and I'm excited for Mike to get started."

"During Mike's 16 years in the league, he has been a key part of transforming the Chiefs from a two-win team to a three-time Super Bowl champion," said Titans President of Football Operations Chad Brinker. "During our meetings, he articulated a clear plan to build a championship standard in Nashville through consistency, discipline, and hard work. I've admired him for many years and I'm thrilled to add him to the team as our general manager."

In Borgonzi's first offseason in Tennessee, the Titans acquired several veteran free agents. Among the most notable signings were tackle Dan Moore Jr. (previously with Pittsburgh); guard Kevin Zeitler (Detroit); linebacker Cody Barton (Denver); outside linebacker Dre'Mont Jones (Seattle); wide receiver Van Jefferson (Pittsburgh); safety Xavier Woods (Carolina); punter Johnny Hekker (Carolina); and kicker Joey Slye (New England).

In April, Borgonzi led the process that concluded with the selection of Miami (Fla.) quarterback Cam Ward with the first overall pick in the 2025 NFL Draft. The team's nine total draft choices also included UCLA outside linebacker Oluwafemi Oladejo (second round), Penn State safety Kevin Winston Jr. (third round), Florida wide receiver Chimere Dike (fourth round), Texas tight end Gunnar Helm (fourth round), Stanford wide receiver Elic Ayomanor (fourth round), Sacramento State offensive lineman Jackson Slater (fifth round), California cornerback Marcus Harris (sixth round) and Michigan running back Kalel Mullings (sixth round).

During Borgonzi's time in Kansas City, he contributed to 12 playoff seasons (2010, 2013, 2015-24) and 10 AFC West titles (2010, 2016-24). Borgonzi helped construct a roster that won the AFC five times (2019-20, 2022-24) and captured three Super Bowl championships (2019, 2022-23) over a six-season span.

From 2017 to 2024, Borgonzi worked under Chiefs general manager Brett Veach. As the assistant general manager from 2021 through 2024, he supervised and directed the college and professional scouting operations while closely supporting and advising Veach with the club's roster management and player acquisition via the NFL Draft, free agency, waiver claims and trades. During his four seasons as assistant general manager, the Chiefs built a league-best 52-16 regular-season record (.765). In the same four-year span, 10 different Kansas City players earned a combined 23 Pro Bowl selections: tackle Orlando Brown Jr. (2021-22), wide receiver Tyreek Hill (2021), center Creed Humphrey (2022-24), defensive tackle Chris Jones (2021-24), tight end Travis Kelce (2021-24), quarterback Patrick Mahomes (2021-23), safety Tyrann Mathieu (2021), guard Trey Smith (2024), guard Joe Thuney (2022-24) and punter Tommy Townsend (2022).

The Chiefs entered the 2024 postseason after capturing their ninth consecutive AFC West crown. They tied the Detroit Lions for the NFL's best record at 15-2, setting a franchise record for wins in a regular season and securing the AFC's top seed. Twenty original Chiefs draft picks started at least six games for the team during the 2024 regular season. Kansas City had five players voted to the Pro Bowl, marking the seventh consecutive year in which it had at least five players earn the honor.

Prior to his promotion to assistant general manager, Borgonzi served as director of football operations (2018-20), director of player personnel (2017), co-director of player personnel (2015-16), assistant director of pro scouting (2013-14), pro personnel scout (2011-12) and manager of football operations (2010). He joined the Chiefs in 2009 as the club's college scouting administrator.

Before landing in the NFL with the Chiefs, Borgonzi spent the 2007 and 2008 seasons at Boston College, where he was the assistant recruiting coordinator. He also coached tight ends at Amherst College in 2002 before working in the financial sector in Boston for several years.

A native of Everett, Mass., Borgonzi graduated from Brown University, where he was a four-year starter at fullback and was a three-time All-Ivy League selection.

He and his wife, Jill, have a son, Joseph, and a daughter, Nina. His brother, Dave, has served as the linebackers coach for the Indianapolis Colts and Chicago Bears and currently serves as the linebackers coach for the Dallas Cowboys.

INTERIM HEAD COACH MIKE McCOY

The Titans named Mike McCoy interim head coach on Oct. 13, 2025. He was hired in 2025 as senior offensive assistant.

McCoy, who is in his 23rd season as a coach in the NFL, served as the head coach of the San Diego Chargers from 2013 to 2016 and spent an additional six years as an NFL offensive coordinator.

He arrived in Tennessee after three seasons with the Jacksonville Jaguars as quarterbacks coach. While in Jacksonville, McCoy helped quarterback Trevor Lawrence register consecutive 4,000-yard passing seasons in 2022 (4,113) and 2023 (4,016). During those two seasons, Lawrence's 8,129 passing yards ranked fifth in the NFL, and his 46 touchdown passes ranked 10th. In 2024, injuries limited Lawrence to 10 games, during which time he passed for 2,045 yards and 11 touchdowns.

In 2023, Lawrence surpassed 4,000 passing yards for the second consecutive year and also eclipsed 10,000 career passing yards, becoming the third-youngest player in NFL history to reach 10,000 passing yards. Lawrence had eight consecutive games with at least 20 completions, which set a single-season franchise record.

In 2022, McCoy helped Lawrence improve in every major passing category from his rookie year to his second campaign. Lawrence produced his first 4,000-yard passing season in the NFL and finished the regular season completing 387 passes on 584 attempts for 4,113 yards. He threw 25 touchdowns against just eight interceptions. His four passing touchdowns in the Wild Card round against the Chargers were also a single-game postseason franchise record.

Before going to Jacksonville, McCoy served as the offensive coordinator for the Arizona Cardinals in 2018. He helped Josh Rosen complete 217 passes for 2,278 yards and 11 touchdowns in his rookie season, while wide receiver Larry Fitzgerald recorded a team-high 69 receptions for 734 yards and six scores. In addition, under McCoy's tutelage, the Cardinals rushing attack posted 1,342 yards and nine touchdowns.

In 2017, McCoy joined the Broncos in his second stint as an offensive coordinator in Denver and helped running back CJ Anderson finish ninth in the NFL in rushing yards (1,007).

From 2013 to 2016, McCoy was the head coach of the San Diego Chargers. During that time, San Diego ranked ninth in the league in total offense (365.9 yards per game) and second in offensive third-down percentage (44.6 percent). In addition, McCoy's group had a top-10 passing attack each season. San Diego qualified for the postseason in McCoy's first campaign at the helm (2013) and beat the Bengals in the Wild Card round.

Under McCoy, Chargers quarterback Philip Rivers finished with his three highest single-season completion percentage marks while averaging more than 31 touchdown passes per year. Rivers earned Comeback Player of the Year honors from the Associated Press in 2013 after completing a career-best and NFL-high 69.5 percent of his passes for 4,478 yards with 32 touchdowns and 11 interceptions (105.5 rating).

Prior to his tenure as head coach in San Diego, McCoy served as the Broncos offensive coordinator for four seasons (2009-12). During his final year in Denver in 2012, the Broncos tied Atlanta for the NFL's best record at 13-3 in quarterback Peyton Manning's first season with the team. The Broncos featured the NFL's fourth-ranked offense and fifth-ranked passing attack as Manning earned Comeback Player of the Year honors after passing for a then-franchise-record 4,659 yards with 37 touchdowns.

In 2011, the Broncos led the NFL and established a franchise record with 2,632 rushing yards. They earned a postseason berth and Wild Card victory with Tim Tebow at quarterback, marking the first of back-to-back playoff appearances (2011-12). Tebow finished that season with 660 rushing yards, the most by a quarterback in team history, while running back Willis McGahee tied for the NFL lead with seven 100-yard rushing games and earned his second career Pro Bowl selection after rushing for 1,199 yards.

McCoy oversaw the NFL's seventh-ranked passing attack in 2010 as quarterback Kyle Orton finished fourth in the league averaging 281 passing yards per game. Brandon Lloyd led the NFL with 1,448 receiving yards and earned his first Pro Bowl selection while also becoming just the fourth wide receiver in team history to be named All-Pro.

In 2009, Brandon Marshall tied for third in the NFL with 101 receptions, including an NFL-record 21 catches in one game. Running back Knowshon Moreno earned All-Rookie honors after leading all NFL rookies in rushing yards (947), yards from scrimmage (1,160) and total touchdowns (nine).

McCoy spent his first nine seasons as a coach in Carolina, working his way up from offensive assistant (2000) to wide receivers coach (2001), quarterbacks coach/offensive assistant (2002), quarterbacks coach (2003-06) and passing game coordinator/quarterbacks coach (2007-08). The Panthers totaled three playoff appearances, two division titles, two NFC Championship Game appearances and advanced to Super Bowl XXXVIII during McCoy's tenure.

During McCoy's time with Carolina, he worked closely with Jake Delhomme, helping the quarterback to four 3,000-yard passing seasons and his first Pro Bowl selection in 2005. Delhomme averaged the fifth-most yards per pass attempt (7.8) in the NFL during McCoy's two seasons managing Carolina's passing attack while wide receiver Steve Smith Sr. ranked seventh in the league with 2,423 yards in that span.

A college quarterback, McCoy spent his first two years at Long Beach State (1990-91) before spending his last two years at Utah (1993-94). He signed with the Broncos as an undrafted rookie free agent in 1995 and spent his rookie season on Green Bay's practice squad. He played in NFL Europe with the Amsterdam Admirals (1997) and spent one game on San Francisco's roster as its third quarterback in 1997. McCoy spent training camp with the Philadelphia Eagles (1998) before finishing his playing career with the Calgary Stampeders in the CFL in 1999.

McCoy and his wife, Kellie, have a daughter, Liv, and a son, Luke.

NISSAN STADIUM

In 2015, the Titans and Nissan North America announced the formation of an exclusive naming-rights partnership that rebranded Nashville's downtown stadium as Nissan Stadium.

Eight years later, on Nov. 17, 2023, the Titans and Nissan North America announced a new agreement: a 20-year, exclusive naming-rights partnership that brands the new Titans home venue as 'Nissan Stadium.'

Slated for completion in 2027, the new Nissan Stadium will host Titans home games, Tennessee State University football games, concerts, large-scale events and other community events.

"This partnership is a natural extension of our already longstanding friendship with Nissan," said Burke Nihill, Titans President and CEO. "Our mission at the Titans is to Win, Serve, and Entertain. We pride ourselves on collaborating with organizations who love this city and state as much as we do, and for the past 40 years, Nissan has invested more than $10.5 billion statewide, serving as a great example of an outstanding corporate steward and community advocate. We look forward to the continued positive impact of this relationship for the Titans organization and the City of Nashville."

"Since 2015 our fans and organization have called our home 'Nissan Stadium,' and we are proud to continue that tradition in the new stadium as we deepen and expand our relationship with them," said Titans Chief Revenue Officer Adam Nuse. "The new stadium will host the world's largest events, as well as serve as a community hub for our local neighbors. We're excited to have a partner like Nissan embark on this journey with us as we look towards the future."

The partnership will feature dedicated areas in the new stadium for brand experiences and displays, innovative technology integration, and involvement in Titans broadcast platforms. Nissan also will support a to-be-determined program in the Titans' ONE Community philanthropic platform, which reaches Nashville's most underrepresented and marginalized communities with a focus on three areas – Opportunity, Neighborhoods and Education.

"Nissan Stadium is a centerpiece of the Nashville skyline and has become a household name in Middle Tennessee. It is important for Nissan to keep our name on the new stadium," said Jérémie Papin, chairperson, Nissan Americas. "As more people come to Nashville both to visit and to live in this wonderful city, Nissan Stadium is true showcase for our brand and for the career opportunities we've offered here for more than four decades. This partnership sends a strong message about the bright future for Nissan, the Titans, Nashville and the State of Tennessee."

Nissan's ever-growing footprint in Tennessee includes vehicle and powertrain manufacturing facilities in Smyrna and Decherd respectively, along with its North American headquarters in Franklin. Nissan is home to more than 11,000 employees across all three locations.

"Nissan has been a strong partner to middle Tennessee for four decades, and I'm thrilled that the Titans have united with a partner that invests in our community and its people," said Nashville Mayor Freddie O'Connell. "The familiarity and trust they've established with the Titans in the last eight years will undoubtedly be a great asset as we plan for the

The new Nissan stadium will be built on the east side of the current stadium campus, along Nashville's East Bank. Features of the building include: a circular translucent roof; exterior porches with panoramic views of Nashville; improved sightlines for all spectators through a range of diverse seating experiences; and a 12,000 square foot community space available for use year-round. A waitlist for those interested in purchasing PSLs or suites is now open at NewNissanStadium.com.

On a 16-play, 77-yard touchdown drive, he threw an eight-yard touchdown pass to Elic Ayomanor on fourth-and-goal in the fourth quarter. On the drive, Ward completed eight-of-11 passes for 80 yards.

➢ At Houston (9/28), while joining Marcus Mariota (2015) as the only rookie quarterbacks in franchise history to start the first four games of a season, completed 10-of-26 passes for 108 yards with one interception. He added 22 yards and a first down on two rushing attempts. In the first quarter, he found Elic Ayomanor for a 33-yard completion, his longest career completion to date. In the second quarter, he converted a third-and-six with a 22-yard pass to Calvin Ridley.

➢ At Arizona (10/5), earned his first career win as a starting quarterback, completing 21 of 39 passes for 265 yards. He engineered a 15-point fourth-quarter comeback in the win, and in the fourth quarter, he was 13-of-18 passing for 193 yards in the fourth quarter. He was credited with his first career game-winning drive, which ended with Joey Slye's game-winning field goal as time expired. Ward completed five of his six passes on the drive for 67 yards, including a 38-yard pass to Calvin Ridley to help set up the field goal. The Titans trailed by 18 points in the second quarter, which tied for the second-largest deficit by any quarterback in their first career win as a starter in the Super Bowl era (21 by Atlanta's Mike Moroski in Week 13, 1983; 18 by New York Giants' Daniel Jones in Week 3, 2019; 18 by Seattle's Jon Kitna in Week 16, 1997). Since 2000, Ward joined Vince Young (Nov. 26, 2006 against the New York Giants) as the only NFL rookie quarterbacks to win a game in which they trailed by 15 or more points in the fourth quarter. Ward's 193 fourth-quarter passing yards were the fourth-most by an NFL rookie in a game since the beginning of the 1978 season. In that span, Ward ranked behind only Tampa Bay's Jameis Winston (238 at St. Louis on Dec. 17, 2015), Houston's Davis Mills (220 vs. L.A. Rams on Oct. 31, 2021) and Washington's Jayden Daniels (194 vs. Dallas on Nov. 24, 2024). From that group, Ward's total was the second-most in a road game and the most in a victory. He found Ridley in the fourth quarter for a 47-yard pass, which was the longest of Ward's career to date, to help set up a touchdown.

➢ At Las Vegas (10/12), completed 26 of 38 passes for 222 yards with one touchdown and one interception. He completed his first six passes of the game, and in the first quarter, he converted a third-and-10 with an 18-yard pass to Calvin Ridley. Ward connected three times with Van Jefferson on passes of at least 20 yards: a 20-yarder in the second quarter, a 23-yarder in the third quarter and another 23-yarder in the fourth quarter. In the fourth quarter, he converted a fourth-and-15 with a 20-yard completion to Chig Okonkwo and registered his third career touchdown pass on a one-yard toss to David Martin-Robinson. He became the first quarterback in franchise history to start at least the first six games of his rookie campaign.

➢ Against New England (10/19), completed 25 of 34 passes for 255 yards with one touchdown and one interception. His 73.5 completion percentage, 7.50 yards per attempt, 14 passing first downs, and 92.2 passer rating were his best marks through seven NFL games. His 73.5 completion percentage was the best in franchise history by a rookie quarterback with at least 30 attempts in a game, eclipsing Marcus Mariota's previous mark of 71.8 (28-of-39) as a rookie at New Orleans on Nov. 8, 2015. Ward became the team's first rookie quarterback in its "Titans era" (1999 to present) with 25 or more completions in back-to-back games. The last quarterback to accomplish the feat for the Titans was Mariota, who accomplished the feat in two consecutive games from Sept. 11-18, 2016. Ward completed 10 of his first 11 passes for 144 yards and one touchdown (149.1 passer rating), including a 38-yard touchdown pass to Chimere Dike in the first quarter.

➢ At Indianapolis (10/26), completed 22-of-38 passes for 259 yards and a touchdown, eclipsing the 250-yard passing mark for the third time in four games. He became the first Titans quarterback since Marcus Mariota in 2015 to have 20 or more completions in four consecutive team games. Ward threw a 21-yard pass to Chimere Dike to convert a third-and-10 in the first quarter and added a 26-yard pass to Elic Ayomanor in the second quarter. He also completed a 23-yard pass to Chig Okonkwo in the third quarter and a 22-yard strike to Gunnar Helm in the fourth quarter.

➢ Against the L.A. Chargers (11/2), completed 12 of 21 passes for 145 yards. He completed a 21-yard pass to Van Jefferson in the first quarter and connected with Tyjae Spears for a 26-yard completion in the second quarter. In the third quarter, he helped convert a third-and-seven with a 29-yard pass to Elic Ayomanor.

➢ Against Houston (11/16), completed 24 of 37 passes for 194 yards and one touchdown (87.0 passer rating). He also rushed for 33 yards on three attempts. He rushed for a 10-yard gain to convert a third-and-four in the fourth quarter. He became the first rookie quarterback in franchise history to start the first 10 games of a season. Previously, Marcus Mariota held the franchise's longest rookie streak to begin a season with starts in the first five games as a rookie in 2015.

➢ Against Seattle (11/23), completed 28-of-42 passes for 256 yards with one touchdown and no interceptions, amounting to a 91.0 passer rating. He added six rushing attempts for 37 yards and one touchdown, and four of his rushing attempts resulted in first downs. He tossed a one-yard touchdown pass to Chimere Dike in the fourth quarter. He also had completions of 25 yards to Dike and 26 yards to Chig Okonkwo. He scored his first career touchdown on a six-yard rushing attempt in the third quarter—the first rushing touchdown by a Titans quarterback since Mason Rudolph's 11-yard run at Detroit on Oct. 27, 2024. By increasing his total to 2,210 passing yards in 2025, he surpassed Vince Young (2,199 in 2006) for the second-highest total by a rookie in franchise history behind Marcus Mariota (2,818 in 2015).

➢ Against Jacksonville (11/30), completed 24 of 38 passes for 141 yards and added a seven-yard rushing attempt for a first down. It was his fourth consecutive game without throwing an interception, and he extended his streak to 143 pass attempts without throwing an interception. At the conclusion of the game, it was the second-longest active streak in the NFL behind the 156 consecutive attempts without an interception by Atlanta's Michael Penix Jr.

➢ At Cleveland (12/7), logged his first career performance with multiple touchdown passes, completing 14-of-28 passes for 117 yards with two touchdowns and one interception. During the game's opening drive, he completed all four pass attempts for 48 yards, including a 14-yard touchdown pass to Elic Ayomanor. In the fourth quarter, he threw a five-yard touchdown pass to Chimere Dike. He became the second rookie quarterback in franchise history to start at least 13 games in a season, along with Vince Young (13 starts in 2006).

➢ At San Francisco (12/14), completed 18 of 29 passes for 170 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions. It was his second consecutive game with two touchdown passes. His 101.2 passer rating was the best of his rookie season through 14 games. For the first time in his rookie campaign, he was not sacked. In the second quarter, he found Gunnar Helm for a 34-yard touchdown pass, his longest touchdown completion since a 38-yarder in Week 7 against New England. During a two-play span in the fourth quarter, he connected with Van Jefferson for a 43-yard completion and then found defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons on a one-yard touchdown pass. In the first half, he completed 10-of-15 passes for 106 yards and a touchdown, amounting to a 109.3 passer rating. Ward became the first rookie quarterback in franchise history to start at least 14 games in a season, surpassing Vince Young's previous mark of 13 starts as a rookie in 2006. Additionally, Ward joined Marcus Mariota (2,818 passing yards in 2015) as the only rookies in franchise history with 2,500 passing yards.

with two touchdowns and no interceptions. His 122.3 passer rating was his best through 15 NFL games. It was his second consecutive game with a passer rating above 100 and his third consecutive game with two touchdown passes. His 122.3 passer rating was the franchise's fourth best since 1970 by a rookie quarterback with at least 20 attempts in a game. In that span, only Marcus Mariota (135.7 at New Orleans on Nov. 8 ,2015), Will Levis (130.5 vs. Atlanta on Oct. 29, 2023) and Vince Young (127.7 at Buffalo on Dec. 24, 2006) fared better with 20-plus attempts as rookies. He threw a screen pass to Tyjae Spears that went 34 yards in the second quarter, and later on the same drive, he was credited with a seven-yard touchdown pass to Chig Okonkwo. On the opening series of the second half, he completed a 25-yard pass to Elic Ayomanor, a 30-yard pass to Chimere Dike and a one-yard touchdown pass to Dike. It was his 13th touchdown pass of the season, which put him past Vince Young (12 in 2006) for the second-most in franchise history by a rookie, behind only Marcus Mariota (19 in 2015). Ward converted a third-and-10 in the fourth quarter with a 24-yard completion to Elic Ayomanor to set up a touchdown on the next play. During the game, he set the record for the most passing yards in franchise history by a rookie quarterback, breaking Marcus Mariota's record of 2,818 passing yards in 2015.

Levis will spend the 2025 campaign on injured reserve due to a shoulder injury.

During his first two NFL seasons, Levis totaled 21 starts. In franchise history, only Warren Moon (30), Vince Young (28) and Marcus Mariota (27) started more games at quarterback than Levis within their first two NFL seasons. Levis' career numbers through his first two campaigns included 339 completions, 556 attempts, 3,899 yards, 21 touchdowns and 16 interceptions.

In his debut season, Levis recorded starts in all nine games in which he appeared, becoming the third rookie quarterback in franchise history to start at least nine games. Levis' rookie passing totals included 255 attempts, 149 completions, 1,808 yards, eight touchdowns and four interceptions. It was the Titans' longest kickoff return since Darius Jennings returned a kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown on Sept. 9, 2018 at Miami. His 71-yard kickoff return was the longest by a Titans rookie since Marc Mariani's 73-yarder at Dallas on Oct. 10, 2010. ➢ Against the L.A. Rams (9/14), totaled 37 yards on two punt returns, including a 21-yard long. He also returned five kickoffs for 83 yards (16.6 avg.), caught two passes resulting in a net loss of one yard, and added nine rushing yards on two attempts.

He totaled 162 kickoff return yards on six attempts (27.0 average), accumulating the most kickoff return yards in a game by a Titans player since Leon Washington's 209 kickoff return yards at Denver on Dec. 8, 2013. His 35-yard kickoff return in the first quarter helped set up a field goal. Also totaled three yards on two rushing attempts and two yards on three receptions.

➢ At Houston (9/28), returned six kickoffs for a 23.5-yard average (long of 29). He became the NFL's first rookie since Chad Morton of the New Orleans Saints in 2000 with at least four kickoff returns in each of the first four games of his rookie season.

It gave him two of the NFL's top five longest kickoff returns to date in 2025. His 71-yarder against Denver was the second longest of the season and his 65-yard return ranked fourth.

➢ At Las Vegas (10/12), totaled 66 yards on three kickoff returns and eight yards on a pair of receptions.

➢ Against New England (10/19), totaled four receptions for 70 yards and a touchdown. He added a 15-yard punt return and 84 yards on three kickoff returns (28.0 avg.). In the first quarter, he posted four receptions for 70 yards in the first quarter. His 70 receiving yards in the first quarter were the most by a Titans rookie in the first quarter of a game since Justin McCareins had 70 in the first quarter against Tampa Bay on Oct. 14, 2001. His first career touchdown came on a 38-yard pass from Cam Ward after he set up the scoring drive with a 29-yard kickoff return to the New England 41-yard line. In the first seven games of 2025, he totaled 1,025 combined total yards (scrimmage yards + return yards) to join two previous players in the team's "Titans era" (1999 to present) to reach 1,000 combined yards in the team's first seven games of a season: Derrick Mason in 2000 (1,221 yards in the first seven games) and Derrick Henry in 2021 (1,023). In the same span, only three previous NFL rookies reached 1,000 combined yards in the first seven games of a season: Adrian Peterson (1,251 in 2007), Percy Harvin (1,007 in 2009) and Kareem Hunt (1,002 in 2017). His 1,025 combined yards were the most in the NFL in a team's first seven games since Alvin Kamara had 1,031 in the first seven games of the New Orleans Saints' 2020 campaign.

➢ At Indianapolis (10/26), led the team with seven receptions and 93 receiving yards and added 175 yards on seven kickoff returns (25.0 avg.). His 93 receiving yards were the most by a Titans rookie since Treylon Burks' 111 at Green Bay on Nov. 17, 2022. Dike became the first rookie for the Titans to register back-to-back games with at least 70 yards receiving since Burks in Week 11-12 of the 2022 season. His 269 all-purpose yards at Indianapolis were the most in any NFL game in 2025 through Sunday, Oct. 26, and the total ranked third for the Titans since the beginning of the 1999 season behind only Derrick Mason's 302 all-purpose yards against Buffalo on Dec. 14, 2003 and Chris Johnson's 284 against Houston on Sept. 20, 2009. His 175 kickoff return yards were the most in a game by a Titans player since Leon Washington had 209 against Denver on Dec. 8, 2013. At the conclusion of the game, his 1,294 all-purpose yards in 2025 were the most for the Titans through eight games since Derrick Mason's 1,382 in 2000, and Dike had the most by any NFL player through eight games since New Orleans Saints running back Darren Sproles had 1,331 in 2011.

➢ Against the L.A. Chargers (11/2), totaled 220 all-purpose yards, including three punt returns for 98 yards, four kickoff returns for 117 yards and one reception for five yards. In the first quarter, he returned a punt 67 yards for a touchdown—the team's first punt return touchdown since Darius Reynaud had two against Jacksonville on Dec. 30, 2012 and the team's first special teams return score (punt or kickoff) since A.J. Brown's kickoff return touchdown at Indianapolis on Nov. 29, 2020. His 98 yards on three punt returns made up the highest punt return yardage total in a game by a Titans player since Reynaud's franchise-record 160 vs. Jacksonville on Dec. 30, 2012. He was the first Titans rookie in the team's "Titans era" (1999 to present) to log multiple games with at least 200 all-purpose yards, while becoming the NFL's first rookie to do so since Cincinnati's Ja'Marr Chase in 2021. Dike joined Pacman Jones (1,127 in 2005) and Marc Mariani (1,530 in 2010) as the only rookies in franchise history to reach 1,000 kickoff return yards in a season (1,108), and he also secured the ninth overall individual season in franchise history with 1,000 kickoff return yards.

➢ Against Seattle (11/23), caught five passes for 44 yards and a touchdown to go along with a 90-yard punt return for a touchdown, and he added 98 yards on five kickoff returns to give him 232 all-purpose yards—his second-highest total through 11 career games. It was his third time in a four-game span exceeding 200 all-purpose yards. In the third quarter, he returned a Michael Dickson punt 90 yards for a touchdown, and in doing so, he tied Pacman Jones' record (90-yard touchdown at Philadelphia on Nov. 19, 2006) for the longest punt return in franchise history. In the fourth quarter, he scored on a one-yard touchdown pass from Cam Ward. In doing so, he joined Billy "White Shoes" Johnson (Oct. 26, 1975 vs. Detroit) and Justin McCareins (Nov. 23, 2003 at Atlanta) as the only players in franchise history to record a punt return for a touchdown and a receiving touchdown in the same game. Dike became the first Titans player to return two punts for touchdowns in a season since Darius Reynaud did so in 2012, and Dike became the second NFL player in 2025, along with Jacksonville's Parker Washington, to return two punts for touchdowns. Only six previous rookies since 2000 recorded at least two punt return touchdowns: Patrick Peterson (four), Devin Hester (three), Jamal Agnew (two), Tyreek Hill (two), Dez Bryant (two) and B.J. Sams (two). Dike's highlights also included a 25-yard reception to convert a third-and-three in the first quarter. He finished the contest with 1,760 all-purpose yards in 2025 to join Derrick Mason (1,963 yards in the first 11 games of 2000) as the franchise's only players since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger with 1,700 all-purpose yards in the team's first 11 games of a season.

In the fourth quarter, he scored on a five-yard pass from Cam Ward for the third touchdown reception of his rookie season. He established a new franchise rookie record in all-purpose yards, surpassing Jerry LeVias' 1,946 all-purpose yards as a rookie in 1969. He also moved past Bobby Jancik (1,317 in 1963) for the second-highest single-season kickoff return total in franchise history, trailing only Marc Mariani (1,530 in 2010). Dike and Jacksonville's Parker Washington became the NFL's first players with at least two punt return touchdowns and three touchdown receptions in a season since Kansas City's Tyreek Hill (two punt return touchdowns and six receiving touchdowns) in 2016. He moved into second place in franchise history with 1,413 kickoff return yards, behind only Marc Mariani's 1,530 in 2010.

a touchdown, while adding five kickoff returns for 122 yards (24.4 avg.) and three punt returns for 23 yards (7.7 avg.). On the opening series of the second half, he caught a 30-yard pass and finished the drive with a one-yard touchdown reception. He joined A.J. Brown (nine touchdowns in 2019), Chris Johnson (10 in 2008) and Vince Young (seven in 2006) as the only franchise rookies since the start of the 1999 season with at least six total touchdowns. Dike also became the fourth rookie in NFL history with four receiving touchdowns and two punt return touchdowns, joining Tyreek Hill (2016), Dez Bryant (2010) and Eddie Kennison (1996). He surpassed Derrick Henry's 2,141 all-purpose yards in 2020 for third place in franchise history and moved past Marc Mariani (1,530 in 2010) to set the franchise record for the most single-season kickoff return yards. At the conclusion of the contest, his 1,535 kickoff return yards were the most in the NFL in a season since Arizona's LaRod Stephens-Howling had 1,548 in 2010.

➢ On Dec. 23, he was named to the Pro Bowl as a returner. He became the franchise's sixth rookie to be named to the Pro Bowl since the 1970 NFL-AFL merger and the first since returner Marc Mariani in 2010. The others to do so were running back Earl Campbell (1978), defensive end Jevon Kearse (1999), quarterback Vince Young (2006) and running back Chris Johnson (2008).

During the 2024 campaign, Ridley led the Titans offense with 64 receptions and 1,017 receiving yards and caught four touchdown passes. Ridley also rushed for 55 yards and a touchdown.

Ridley's 2024 season was his third career 1,000-yard receiving season (2020 and 2023), and it was the franchise's 12th 1,000-yard receiving season during its "Titans era" (1999 to present). He became the ninth player in NFL history to have at least one 1,000-yard receiving season with three different teams, joining Brandin Cooks (four teams), Brandon Marshall (four), Amari Cooper (three), DeAndre Hopkins (three), Irving Fryar (three), Randy Moss (three), Terrell Owens (three) and Tony Martin (three). Ridley became the first player in NFL history to secure his first three 1,000-yard receiving seasons with three different teams.

Prior to joining the Titans, Ridley appeared in 66 NFL games with 52 starts. He was originally drafted by the Atlanta Falcons with the 26th overall pick of the 2018 NFL Draft and was traded to the Jacksonville Jaguars in 2022. His statistical totals with the Falcons and Jaguars included 324 receptions for 4,358 yards and 36 touchdowns.

In 2023, Ridley started a career-high 17 games for the Jaguars and led the team with 1,016 yards and eight receiving touchdowns on 76 catches.

His 3,061 receiving yards ranked second in his draft class behind only DJ Moore's 3,156. Ridley's 90 receptions and 1,374 yards in 2020 were career highs.

As a rookie in 2018, Ridley played in all 16 games and accumulated 64 receptions. As a rookie in 2023, Skoronski started 14 games at left guard and helped running back Derrick Henry finish second in the NFL with 1,167 rushing yards. ➢ At Cleveland (12/7), finished with a team-high 1.5 sacks, seven tackles (second on the team), an additional quarterback hit and a pass defensed. Additionally, he established a career high with a team-high 11 quarterback pressures. It was his eighth career game with seven or more tackles. In the fourth quarter, he brought down Shedeur Sanders on third down to force a Browns punt, increasing his team-high total to eight sacks in 2025. During the preceding two plays on the three-and-out drive, he contributed a tackle on first down and a tackle for loss (three-yard loss by Quinshon Judkins) on second down. In the first quarter, he combined with Jaylen Harrell to bring down Shedeur Sanders on third down for a split-sack. By increasing his career total to 39.5 career sacks, he passed Kyle Vanden Bosch for 12th place in franchise history and fifth place for the organization during its "Titans" era (1999-present). He matched a career high (2021) with 12 tackles for loss in 2025.

➢ At San Francisco (12/14), finished with seven tackles, a strip-sack and a one-yard touchdown reception. He also led the team with seven quarterback pressures. With his strip-sack on Brock Purdy in the fourth quarter, Simmons recorded his ninth sack of the season, a new career high. It was his fifth career strip-sack and his first since Week 1 at Denver. After his strip-sack, the fumble was recovered by Kaiir Elam and returned nine yards. Two plays later, Simmons reported eligible on offense and recorded his second career touchdown reception (Nov. 19, 2023 at Jacksonville) on a pass from Cam Ward. He was the first defensive lineman to score an offensive touchdown during the 2025 season and the NFL's first player since J.J. Watt in 2014 with a strip-sack and touchdown reception in the same game. It was only the sixth time since individual sacks became an official statistic in 1982 that a player accomplished the feat. He was the ninth defensive lineman since the 1970 NFL-AFL merger to record multiple touchdown receptions in his career and the franchise's first defensive lineman to do so. Simmons increased his career sack total to 40.5, becoming the franchise's 12th player to reach 40 sacks and the fifth player to do so in the organization's "Titans era" (1999 to present). Also at San Francisco, he notched two tackles for loss to raise his season total to 14, a new career high.

In the second quarter, he tackled running back Kareem Hunt in the end zone for a safety—his first career safety and the first safety the Titans scored since Harold Landry III at Houston on Nov. 24, 2024. Simmons increased his total on the season to 16 tackles for loss, which tied Jason Babin (16 in 2010) for the most by a Titans player in any season since 2008. He joined Rocky Boiman (2003), Willie Rodgers (1975) and Doug Cline (1961) as the only players in franchise history with a safety and a touchdown in the same season.

➢ On Dec. 23, he was named to the Pro Bowl as a starter. It was his fourth career Pro Bowl berth (2021, 2022, 2024, 2025). He became the 12th player in franchise history to be named to a Pro Bowl (or AFL All-Star from 1960-69) at least four times with the team, joining Bruce Matthews (14), Mike Munchak (nine), Elvin Bethea (eight times), Robert Brazile (seven), Warren Moon (six), Earl Campbell (five), Jurrell Casey (five), Ray Childress (five), Ken Houston (five), Blaine Bishop (four), Eddie George (four) and Derrick Henry (four).

He appeared in the final seven games of the season and totaled 14 tackles on defense while ranking third on the team with eight tackles on special teams. His eight special teams tackles tied for the seventh-best total among rookies in 2024, and over the final seven weeks of the season, he led the rookie class and tied for second overall in the NFL (Oren Burks, Jeremy Reaves) behind only Pittsburgh's Miles Killebrew (nine).

In four seasons at the University of North Carolina, he played in 51 games with 37 starts and recorded 369 tackles, 30 tackles for loss, 8.5 sacks, five interceptions, 13 passes defensed, six forced fumbles and five fumble recoveries. He was named first-team All-ACC by the league and the Associated Press. He recorded five double-digit tackle games and ranked second in the ACC with 121 tackles.

2025 Game Notes:

➢ At Denver (9/7), made his first NFL start. He ranked third on the team with seven tackles and added a stop on special teams.

➢ Against the L.A. Rams (9/14), finished with four tackles on defense and added a tackle on special teams.

➢ Against Indianapolis (9/21), tied for second on the defense with five tackles.

➢ At Houston (9/28), collected 17 tackles—a career-high, the most for a Titans defender this season, and the most tackles for a Titans defender since Daryl Worley had 17 at Washington on Dec. 1, 2024. His 17 tackles tied for the highest figure by a Titans player since 2020 (Worley). It was the 11th time since 2000 (press box statistics) in which a Titans defender registered 15 or more tackles in a game. Through Sept. 28, Gray's 17 stops at Houston were the most of any defender in the NFL during a single game in the 2025 season. The last NFL player to register 17 tackles in a game was Philadelphia's Oren Burks on Jan. 5, 2025. He added a tackle for loss and a quarterback pressure.

➢ At Arizona (10/5), led the team in tackles for the second consecutive game, collecting 12 tackles, including a stop for loss. His 29 total tackles in Weeks 4-5 ranked second in the NFL behind Miami's Jordyn Brooks (31).

➢ At Las Vegas (10/12), collected 11 tackles to lead the team for the third consecutive week, and he added a tackle on special teams. He also tallied a career-best two passes defensed, becoming the first Titans defender to record at least 11 tackles and two passes defensed in a game since Kevin Byard III on Oct. 10, 2021 at Jacksonville. He also became the first Titans defender with 11 or more tackles in three consecutive games since Azeez Al-Shaair from Oct. 8-29, 2023.

➢ Against New England (10/19), collected 10 tackles to lead the team for the third consecutive week and added three quarterback pressures. Over a four-game span, he accumulated 50 total tackles, and since the beginning of the 2000 season, only two previous Titans players had produced 50 tackles (GSIS tackle statistics) in a four-game stretch during a single season: Brad Kassell (50 from Dec. 13, 2004 to Jan. 2, 2005) and Azeez Al-Shaair (50 from Oct. 1, 2023 to Oct. 29, 2023; 51 from Oct. 8, 2023 to Nov. 2, 2023). Gray joined Al-Shaair (2023) as the team's only defenders since the beginning of the 2011 season with 10 or more tackles in four consecutive games.

➢ At Indianapolis (10/26), tied for the team lead with five tackles, including a stop for loss. He added a quarterback pressure.

➢ Against the L.A. Chargers (11/2), led the team with 16 tackles, including a sack. He notched his first career sack by bringing down Justin Herbert for a seven-yard loss in the fourth quarter. Gray registered his second game of 2025 with at least 16 tackles, after tallying 17 at Houston on Sept. 28. Since 2000, Gray was the first Titans player to have multiple games in a season with at least 16 tackles (GSIS tackle statistics). Only five Titans defenders in that span had previously notched one game with 16-plus tackles. Gray also became the NFL's first player in 2025 to register multiple games with 16 or more tackles.

➢ Against Houston (11/16), tied for the team lead with 11 tackles and tied a career best with two passes defensed. He also recovered a Titans fumble on a kickoff return to prevent a turnover. In the second quarter, he brought down Woody Marks for a loss of three yards for his sixth tackle for loss of the season. Since the beginning of the 2000 campaign, Gray's 98 total tackles on the season were the most by a Titans player through the team's first 10 games of a season (GSIS tackle statistics). Previously in that span, Stephen Tulloch (96 in 2010) and Azeez Al-Shaair (94 in 2023) had the most tackles for the Titans in the first 10 games of a season.

➢ Against Jacksonville (11/30), led the team with nine tackles and added a quarterback pressure. With 114 tackles through the first 12 games of 2025, he became the third Titans player since 2000 to record at least 110 tackles in the first 12 games of a season (GSIS tackle statistics), joining Stephen Tulloch (127 in 2010) and Azeez Al-Shaair (114 in 2023).

➢ At Cleveland (12/7), led the defense with 10 tackles and added his first career fumble recovery and two quarterback pressures. In the fourth quarter, he recovered a Dylan Sampson fumble (forced by Marcus Harris) to set up a Titans touchdown drive. With 124 tackles through 13 games, he became the team's fourth player since the beginning of the 2000 campaign to reach 120 tackles in the first 13 games of the season (GSIS tackle statistics), joining Stephen Tulloch (136 in 2010), Azeez Al-Shaair (124 in 2020) and Keith Bulluck (120 in 2004).

➢ At San Francisco (12/14), finished with a team-leading 16 tackles and added two quarterback pressures before leaving the game with an injury. It was his third game of the season with at least 15 tackles, and only Las Vegas' Devin White (four) had more such games through 15 weeks in 2025. Gray's 11 tackles in the first half were the most by a Titans defender since at least the 2000 season (GSIS tackle statistics). There were five prior occasions over that span in which a Titans defender reached 10 tackles in the first half, and the last Titans player with 11-plus tackles in any half was Michael Griffin with 12 in the second half at San Diego on Sept. 16, 2012. Finishing the game with 140 tackles on the season, Gray became the team's second player since the beginning of the 2000 campaign to reach 140 tackles in the first 14 games of a season (GSIS tackle statistics), joining Stephen Tulloch (145 in 2010). Gray became the first Titans player to record five tackles in the first quarter since Roger McCreary had five against the Chargers on Sept. 17, 2023.

6-4, 233, 16th Year/5th with Titans, Tennessee

Click for complete bio

Long snapper Morgan Cox is in his 16th NFL season and his fifth campaign with the Titans in 2025. He was signed by the Titans as an unrestricted free agent on March 19, 2021.

In 2024, Cox handled all of the team's long snapping duties for the fourth consecutive season. With 68 consecutive games played in his first four seasons with the Titans, he finished the 2024 campaign with the longest active streak of games played for the team. It was the 12th time in his career he appeared in every game for his team.

With Cox serving as the team's long snapper, kicker Nick Folk led the NFL in field goal percentage for the second consecutive season in 2024. Folk connected on 21 of 22 field goals for an NFL-best rate of 95.5 percent. Meanwhile, punter Ryan Stonehouse ranked third in the NFL with an average of 50.6 yards per punt attempt. Also in 2024, Cox was a finalist for the NFL's Bart Starr Award for the second consecutive year.

Cox finished the 2024 season with a career total of 233 games played. He ranked 10th among all active NFL players, and his total also moved him past Reggie White (232 games) for the fourth-most NFL games played by a former University of Tennessee Volunteer behind tight end Jason Witten (271 NFL games), quarterback Peyton Manning (266) and punter Dustin Colquitt (255).

In 2023, Cox's efforts helped Folk lead the NFL in field goal accuracy (96.7 percent) and helped Stonehouse lead the NFL for a second consecutive season in gross punting average (53.1).

In 2022, Cox was named to his fifth career Pro Bowl. He has more Pro Bowl appearances than any other player at his position since the league began naming long snappers to the Pro Bowl in 2004.

His steady play in 2022 helped Stonehouse, a rookie, lead the league and set a new NFL record with a 53.1-yard gross punting average. Stonehouse also finished fourth in the NFL and set a rookie record with a 44.0-yard net average. Meanwhile, kicker Randy Bullock made 17 of 20 field goals (85.0 percent) and made all 28 extra point attempts.

In 2021, Cox handled all of the team's long snapping duties in 17 regular season games and one postseason game. He helped Bullock finish ninth in franchise history with 120 points in a single season, including three game-winning field goals (Sept. 19 at Seattle, Oct. 31 at Indianapolis and Dec. 23 against San Francisco). He also snapped for punter Brett Kern, who had the league's third-best ratio of punts inside the 20 to touchbacks (18:1).

In his first 11 seasons, Cox appeared in 165 regular season games for the Baltimore Ravens, serving as the team's primary long snapper after entering the NFL as an undrafted free agent in 2010. He was selected to four Pro Bowls and was a part of five playoff teams in Baltimore, totaling 10 postseason games played.

In 2020, he earned his fourth career Pro Bowl selection. He helped kicker Justin Tucker record his fifth consecutive season with at least 130 points, tying the NFL record of consecutive seasons with 130-plus points. Tucker connected on 26 of 29 field goals (89.7 percent) and was 52 of 53 on extra points (98.1 percent). Cox also snapped on all 51 of Sam Koch's 51 punts, as Koch was the NFL's only punter to place at least 20 punts (22) inside in the 20-yard line and have no more than one touchback.

A native of Collierville, Tenn., Cox played 38 games in three seasons (2007-09) as the primary long snapper at the University of Tennessee.

INTERIM HEAD COACH MIKE MCCOY PRESS CONFERENCE TRANSCRIPT

(on how the team is progressing in learning how to win)

I think they've done an outstanding job. It starts with the coaches, I think, really helping these players improve from week to week. The way the entire team has come in and competed week after week, the way they prepare. There's just so many things when you're a young player or a rookie in this league and even some of the younger players that haven't played a lot is there's a lot to learn and there's only one way to learn, and that's to go out there and actually play and play in games at the NFL at the speed you have to play at. And it goes to show, the more you play at your position and with your teammates, the better player you become. And I think there's been so many examples of that on our roster this year. Very pleased with the way the players are developing and growing and becoming better players and the way they've been coached all year long.

(on if there are any injury updates)

No, there's no update on injuries. With the schedule today, I have not met with Matt (Gregg) yet. That'll happen later today.

(on the influence Bo Hardegree is having in the offensive resurgence)

Well, I think he's done a nice job calling the game. I think the entire offensive staff, the way they work together, the way they put the plans together, they way they communicate on gameday, the week of preparation, the communication with the players, I think it's by committee of everyone having their role and getting the players ready to play on Sundays and then Bo (Hardegree) calling the games. And there's been great communication throughout the game with talking about, 'Hey, what we're doing next,' but I think Bo's done a nice job.

(on the difference in his involvement in game planning before he became interim head coach and his involvement now)

Well, obviously, my role now, I split the rooms during the week, going from offense to defense. But I've always met with the offensive staff at different times during the weeks since I've been my current role and I've always given my suggestions, and we talk about the game plan. Like I said about the way they've been communicating the past weeks and how we do it on game day, it really hasn't changed a whole lot because we all have our roles and we have the input, and there's certain suggestions and certain things we like to do. But I think there's been great communication by the offensive staff. And with that great communication, I think you've seen the offense do some really nice things in the past couple of weeks.

(on Cam Ward's current confidence level)

Cam (Ward) played an outstanding game yesterday. And I just think the way he prepares; I've told you guys a number of times that he wants to be great. He tries to play perfect. You're never going to play a perfect game. But he just continues to get better week in and week out. You saw him check into a play yesterday that became a big play for us. That was not—it was not a scripted play with an alert or anything tagged to it. He did it on his own. He took off and ran once again to get a big first down for us. And I just think you see him getting better week in and week out. Is it perfect? No, but it's never going to be perfect. But he just continues to get better. And I think the way we run in the football, it helps him tremendously. And I think Cam has really now understands the benefits of playing in second-medium-to-short and third down. Same type of deal. So. I'm just very pleased with his growth week in and week out.

(on the third down success yesterday)

It's players making plays. And I think when you do play in third-and-short and third-and-medium, it is a lot easier. We started out, unfortunately, the game with the third-and-17, whatever it was early on, which you don't want to have and that's what we had way too many of those early in the year of third-and-10-plus. But as you see, that's the way you want to play the game. I mean, when you can be in, what was it, 52 percent? That has a lot to do with the running game. There's certain things you're going to do when you're playing in the shorter situations, to be able to mix in runs, things like that. And then it comes down to players making plays. There are some plays that aren't always open, and there's some ad lib in there. But it was just great execution by the players. Give them a ton of credit for doing that, and that's why you start scoring more points. When you're good on third down and good in the red area, you score a lot more points.

(on why the offensive line responding so well to Scott Fuchs and Matt Jones)

I think they're two great coaches and I think they learned from one of the best in Bill (Callahan). They were in those rooms all the time with Bill. And they had a certain role with Bill, obviously leading the group. But when you learn from one the best of them, it makes it a lot easier to go in that room and they've done it together, which I think is great for the both of them, the way they run the room, the way they do practice, the way the are in game day. Obviously, it's Scott (Fuchs) being down on the field and Jonesy (Matt Jones) going upstairs a couple of weeks ago. So I think there's been great communication and they've done a great job helping these players. Then the players love it when you run the ball 40 times in a game, too. So I'm very pleased with what they've done and happy for how they've led the group.

When we first made the change, obviously the New England week, we sat down and I talked with both of them and said, 'Okay, listen, this is what we need to do. This is how we're going to do it. You're both going to have a hand in this, and I want you two guys to sit down and talk about it, and what is the best thing to do, and stay as close to what we've been doing and how they've been in their roles.' And I think they've done a nice job of doing that. So, there's been great communication on a daily basis, whether it's in the protections, whether it is in the run game, whether some practice, gameday, it all starts with communication. So give those guys credit for the way the offensive line is playing right now.

(on how much he has enjoyed seeing the team buy in and ending the season with momentum and good vibes)

I love leading an organization, a team. And I think the players have done a phenomenal job of buying in to how we want to play, what we want to do, the entire organization really, because we're all in this thing together. So it's very rewarding when you have a game like yesterday, because this is what the players, the organization deserve, is to go out and play the way we did against a really good football team, Kansas City, who's been one of the best for—they've been in seven straight championship games, and just the way our team has played in all three phases. And we've got some great leaders on our football team and in this organization. So, I'm just so happy for the players because they deserve to win. They put so much—they bust their tails week in and week out. They've worked extremely hard. They've stayed positive. Same thing with the coaches. The plans they've put together, it's been a lot of fun seeing the guys execute the way they did yesterday. It's not surprising all the way they've worked.

(on James Williams Sr.)

I'm so happy for James (Williams Sr). And I said that early in the week when we knew that Ced(ric Gray) was going to be out. As players, you wish you could play everybody. But that's not the way the game works. So the NFL game is an opportunity—you've got to make the most of your opportunity. And that's something that James did. James worked extremely hard the entire season. Did a great job whenever he was over on the look teams for the offense, in the kicking game, when he's playing, obviously being a core special teams player for us all year long. And you just love turning the tape on last night or this morning and watching it and seeing him making the plays that he made, getting the sack. Just so happy for him because it's, like I said, it's all about making the most of your opportunities. And he went out there yesterday and did that.

(on how Cam Ward has mentally matured)

Well, like we've mentioned from the very first day, there's going to be some ups and downs during the season with the rookie quarterback. And I think Cam (Ward) understood that. And it takes a couple of games to really get into that sync of each week, how they're going to attack you differently. And then obviously, being a rookie, there's got to be a change up. There's going be plenty of un-scouted looks. They're going to pressure you probably a little more than you might see on tape. But I think yesterday is a great example of seeing him making a check at the line of scrimmage, taking off running, picking up a first down in a certain situation, doing a good job in the running game of when to hand it off, when to throw it outside, whether it's an RPO or there's a bubble involved, certain things like that that he's doing. And you just see him managing the game. And when I say that, that's not being conservative at all because he takes his shots downfield also. But he's learned a lot in his first year in the league and he's doing an outstanding job and just really pleased with the way he played yesterday.

(on how he has been able to mentally dig out of the hole from the struggles throughout the year)

He wants to be great. Cam (Ward) works extremely hard. Early on, we talked about in the offseason program after the draft how he was here watching tape bright and early and that's the way a lot of the rookies have been since they've got here. So, it just goes to show when you work the way he does, how it's going to pay off in the long run. It may not happen right away, but when you play the way you did yesterday, there's a reason for it. And that is because of all the hard work and just the patience and I know there's been a lot of frustrations, too, through the season, because he wants to be great. But it's just a matter of the coaches and everybody just continuing to help him just keep rolling. It's just one play. The mistakes are on us. Just keep on going and try not to make the same mistake twice.

(on how validating the turnaround has been since he took over the team)

Well, give credit to everybody involved. It's just not me. It's the entire organization buying in, supporting one another through some tough times. It wasn't easy early on, obviously. That was a tough situation for all of us. But the entire organizations jumped on board and rallied with each other. And we stuck together through the tough times, we've got—give the players and coaches both for sticking together, working together. Nobody was pointing fingers. Some leaders on the team had to stand up and make sense. It's hard to lead at times because you got to cross the line every once in a while and speak your mind. And that's what great leaders do. And sometimes the truth hurts. But we've got great leaders here and give everybody in this entire organization top-down a ton of credit for sticking together. And when you do that and when you have the type of players we have with the work ethic and what that means to play this game, you get results like we had yesterday. So couldn't be happier for everybody in the entire organization for the way they've bought in. And it's not just about one person, it's everybody in this thing together.

(on Jaylen Harrell's uptick in production)

Well, I think it's making the most of your opportunities. You're playing more. You look at the players on the defense that he's playing with, the leadership, the way they work. He's got two vets that he is behind. He's been working in with. And they all rotate, obviously, during the games. You've got a great player like Jeff (Simmons) inside. And then it's a great example of a guy making the most out of his opportunities and more playing time. And give the coaches, give Ben (Bloom) credit for the way he's worked with him and how he's done and how he has helped them become a better player. And that's why, like I mentioned earlier, give these coaches a ton of credit for helping these young players play at a higher level and getting better every week.

(on if he gives examples of teams having one-year turnarounds of other young teams to show the team that can happen here)

Yeah, no doubt. You see the way we played yesterday. And that's an example of when you keep working, you just keep going. You can't worry about it. You get another opportunity every week. In the NFL, you only get 17 games on your schedule, obviously. And they're a gem. Every week, you have to go out there and prove how you play as a football team, how you individually play, it's an opportunity to get better. There's the ups and down. It's not easy to win in the NFL. And I think the way you've seen this team grow and the way that you've see them play week in and week out, they just keep fighting. And that's what it takes. And you've got to teach these guys how to win. And it's just going to carry over. And now after this week's win against Kansas City now we've got move on to New Orleans and find a way to start stacking wins. So continue to grow as a team and keep on playing. It'll all carry over. But this organization's got a very bright future with all these players playing in the way they're playing, but we got to worry about this week right now.

(on if there is a difference between learning how to win and learning how to stack wins)

Well, it's all about winning. It kind of works hand-in-hand. Once you start making the plays like we did yesterday in the game in all three phases, now you've got to carry that over to the next week. And that's critical. You can't worry about how we played yesterday. Now we've got move on to New Orleans. Have a great week of preparation and play our best game. You always want to be playing your best game week after week, and especially in December and January.

That was an easy one for me. Knowing—I'm a family person, we can't thank our families enough for the sacrifices we make as players and coaches and everybody in an organization. So when I started looking a couple weeks back at what we were going to do, I thought of family first and thinking that give these players and coaches and everyone in the organization the opportunity spend the entire Christmas day with their families, I think they deserve it. Your kids are only a certain age for so long, so the more time you can spend with them on Christmas morning, they deserve. And it was an easy decision for me to make the schedule because the type of players we have, and their work ethic, and how they've worked week in and week out, through the ups and downs of the season. They haven't flinched at all, so I had no hesitation at all of saying, 'Okay, hey, we're going to practice Tuesday and Wednesday. Get out of here Wednesday afternoon, and then enjoy Christmas Eve and Christmas with the family.' Because these players deserve it, and I got all the confidence in the world that they're going to prepare the right way, and come back Friday focused, and continue to work the way they have all week long. So I'd like to say Merry Christmas to all our fans out there, and everybody in the organization, to have a great Christmas with their families.

(on if he had any family on the field yesterday)

I had my son Luke with me, and then I had my adopted son. To what I saw last night on the media, that was Mike Borgonzi's son Joey that was with me. So it was kind of great to have him down there. And all the media post last night, my two boys out there, but that was actually Mike's son with me and having him come from Kansas City. Luke's now 23, so 13 years ago, I know what Luke went through on game days when we played another team, or through my days in Denver and San Diego, when you play the teams where you're coming from, or you coach what it means. So it was a great opportunity to take Joey out there with us and see some of his old favorite players. And obviously, Coach (Andy) Reid, what a great guy he is to go out there and shake his hand and talk about everybody. So it's a lot of fun being able to do that. And Luke had a great time taking him around also.

(on his pride in this year's rookie class)

Yeah, one other note on Chim (Dike), I just got this morning on my desk, he's the fourth rookie in NFL history with at least four receiving touchdowns and multiple punt return touchdowns. But what an outstanding year he's had, and really all the rookies. I mean, the way they've all played, it really goes back—you don't want to single any just one guy out, I think, but it's just they've all done such an outstanding job from day one. Even the guys we brought in midseason, last week, things like that, give these coaches a ton of credit for helping these players play the way they have. But it's a special rookie class. Just the way that they work together, it's neat to see. Because in this game, it is not just the Sundays or whatever day of the week you're playing. It's the relationships you build over time. It's a special group. So it's been a lot of fun to watch them and look forward to see them play the next couple of games at a high level and continue to get better.

It's one of those wow plays. Nothing's there, and then you just have an ad lib, and that's what great players do. It's just great to see that. As he scrambled to the left and outran everybody, and for Chim (Dike) to react the way he did and then to have the defenders chasing him and be able to make that play, that's Cam (Ward). And that's which you love about him. He has that ability to make those plays. That's what the great players in this league do. There's plenty of plays that are covered. But when you have players like Cam with athletic ability and the ability to throw on the run and the willingness to hold the ball as long as possible to get that ball out, that's what it's all about. So that was a phenomenal football play by Cam. And it's another big play for Chim to make, but just really pleased with the way those guys have been playing together.

Sunday Sept. 7, 2025 • 2:05 p.m. MDT • Empower Field at Mile High

In Week 1 of the 2025 season, the Titans traveled to Denver and fell by a score of 20-12 to start the season 0-1.

The Titans opened the game with a seven-play, 33-yard drive that culminated in a 50-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to take an early 3-0 lead. QB Cam Ward put the Titans in field goal range after avoiding a sack and finding RB Tony Pollard for a 29-yard gain on third-and-10.

Denver responded with a 39-yard field goal by K Wil Lutz to cap off a 10-play, 44-yard drive and evened the score at 3-3 with 8:35 left in the first quarter.

At the end of the first quarter, CB Roger McCreary intercepted a QB Bo Nix pass to give the Titans the ball on their own 46-yard line. It was the first of four turnovers the Titans would force throughout the day.

Tennessee was unable to capitalize as Pollard fumbled on the ensuing drive and Denver took over. But the defense stood tall and forced a three-and-out.

In the second quarter, the Titans reclaimed the lead after another turnover caused by the defense produced a field goal.

DT Jeffery Simmons sacked Nix, forcing a fumble, and DL Sebastian Joseph-Day jumped on the loose ball. The Titans took over at the Denver 38 and took it all the way to four-yard line. But Ward was sacked on third down and the Titans had to settle for a 33-yard field goal from Slye to make it 6-3 with 2:16 before halftime.

The Broncos cashed in on the time and field position with a 22-yard touchdown pass from Nix to WR Courtland Sutton to make it 10-6 with 16 seconds left in the half.

WR Chimere Dike responded with a 71-yard kickoff return to put Slye in position for a 42-yard field goal to make it 10-9 heading into the half.

The Titans came out of the half forcing another Denver turnover, this one an interception by S Xavier Woods and the Titans cashed in on the turnover with a 35-yard field goal by Slye.

The Broncos reclaimed the lead on their next possession with a 13-play, 48-yard drive that culminated in a 33-yard field goal by Lutz to make it 13-12 with 4:17 left in third quarter.

The Titans forced another turnover early in the fourth quarter when the Broncos muffed a punt and LB Dorian Mausi jumped on the football at the Denver 20. But the Titans allowed back-to-back sacks and were forced to punt.

Denver answered with a 19-yard touchdown run by RB J.K. Dobbins to extend their lead to 20-12 with 7:37 left in the game.

The Titans stuffed the Broncos on fourth-and-one at the Denver 46-yard line but was unable to move the ball and was forced to punt.

A late penalty by Simmons allowed the Broncos to run the clock down to 59 seconds. It was the 13th penalty the Titans were called for throughout the game.

When the Titans got the ball back, Ward was sacked and fumbled and the game was over dropping the Titans to 0-1 to start the season.

Week 2: Titans 19, Rams 33

Sunday, Sept. 14, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CDT • Nissan Stadium

In Week 2 of the 2025 season, the Titans hosted the Los Angeles Rams and fell by a score of 33-19.

The Rams took an early 7-0 lead on their first possession after the Titans were forced to punt to open the game. WR Puka Nacua took a handoff on fourth-and-one and raced 45 yards for a touchdown with 8:39 left in the first quarter.

The Titans cut the lead to 7-3 with a 55-yard field goal from K Joey Slye.

Los Angeles answered immediately to extend their lead to 10-3 with a 21-yard field goal by K Joshua Karty. The Rams were able to drive down to the Tennessee three-yard line, but the defense forced three incomplete passes by QB Matthew Stafford to force the field goal.

Later in the second quarter, WR Chimere Dike appeared to take a punt 57-yard to the end zone, but the play was called back because of an illegal blindside block. The Titans' offense took over at their own 44-yard line instead.

RB Tony Pollard gained 19 yards on three carries before QB Cam Ward converted on a third-and-one. Ward then found WR Elic Ayomanor who made a one-handed catch off his shoulder pads to bring the Titans to the Rams' nine-yard line. Facing third-and-nine, Ward scrambled to his right and then threw across the field to find Ayomanor in the end zone for the rookies first career touchdown to even the score at 10-10 with 38 seconds left in the half.

On the next possession for the Rams, LB Cody Barton intercepted Stafford's first pass attempt giving the ball back to Tennessee at the Los Angeles' 46-yard line. The Titans got into field goal range with two Pollard runs and a pass interference penalty, and Slye made the 37-yard attempt to give the Titans a 13-10 lead heading into the half.

The Rams opened the second half with a 11-play, 62-yard drive that culminated in a 21-yard field goal by Karty to tie the game at 13-13. CB L'Jarius Sneed had a nice pass defensed on third-and-three in the end zone to force the field goal.

The Titans responded with a 57-yard field goal by Slye, the second longest field goal in franchise history to give the Titans a 16-13 lead with 3:32 left in the third quarter.

The Rams reclaimed the lead four plays later. Stafford found Nacua for 46 yards on two completions. RB Blake Corum added 15 yards on a run before TE Davis Allen caught an eight-yard pass from Stafford and dove to the pylon for the touchdown to make it 20-16 with 1:17 left in the third quarter.

Ward was then stripped-sacked early in the fourth quarter at the Tennessee 21-yard line. The Rams scored three plays later when Stafford found WR Davante Adams for the 16-yard score to make it 27-16 with 9:40 left in the contest.

On the Rams next possession, they extended the lead to 33-16 with a five-play, 66-yard drive that was capped off with a one-yard touchdown run by Corum with 6:48 left.

Slye's fourth field goal of the game, this one from 35 yards, made it 33-19 and capped a 12-play 48-yard drive.

The Titans attempted an on-side kick but the Rams recovered and were able to run out the rest of the clock to drop the Titans to 0-2 to start the season.

TITANS-COLTS: GAME SUMMARY

Sunday, Sept. 21, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CDT • Nissan Stadium

In Week 3 of the 2025 season, the Titans hosted division rival Indianapolis Colts and fell by a score of 41-20.

The Colts took an early 7-0 lead after CB Kenny Moore II intercepted a QB Cam Ward throw and returned it 32 yards for a touchdown on the third play from scrimmage.

The Titans responded with a 57-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to make it 7-3.

Indianapolis extended its lead with a 24-yard field goal by K Spencer Shrader which capped a nine-play, 59-yard drive that saw the Colts drive down to the Tennessee six-yard line before settling for the field goal to make it 10-3.

The Titans went three-and-out on their next offensive possession and the Colts took over at their own 23-yard line. QB Daniel Jones strung together a nine-play, 77-yard drive that included three completions for 49 yards and a 17-yard scramble on third-and-seven. RB Jonathan Taylor capped off the drive with a one-yard touchdown run to make it 17-3 with 1:11 in the first quarter.

Tennessee responded with an 11-play, 54-yard drive that culminated in a 42 yard field goal by Slye to make it 17-6 with 10:50 left in the second quarter.

The Titans then forced the Colts to punt for the first time this season and took over at their own nine-yard line. Ward drove Tennessee to midfield before the drive stalled and Slye came out to attempt a 64-yard field goal which was no good.

Indianapolis then tried a 51-yard field goal on the ensuing drive that was also no good to keep the score at 17-6 with 3:15 left in the half.

The Titans took over at their own 41-yard line. After RB Tony Pollard picked up an initial first down and nine more yards, the Titans faced fourth-and-one at the Indianapolis 39-yard line. After a delay of game penalty, Slye attempted the 62-yard field goal which was blocked.

The Colts took advantage of the field position and ended the half with a 36-yard field goal from Shrader to head into the break up 20-6.

Indianapolis extended its lead with a six-play, 67-yard drive in which Jones found WR Michael Pittman for a 20-yard touchdown to make it 27-6 with 11:08 left in the third.

The Titans answered with a long scoring drive of their own. The 13-play, 73-yard drive culminated in a one-yard touchdown run by Pollard after RB Julius Chestnut broke loose for a 27-yard gain to bring the Titans to the Colts four-yard line.

But a 46-yard touchdown run by Taylor extended the Colts lead to 34-13 on the next possession.

The Titans strung together a 16-play, 77-yard drive that ended in a Ward eight-yard touchdown pass to WR Elic Ayomanor to make it 34-20 with 8:40 left in the game.

However, the Colts once again responded, this time with a five-play, 58-yard drive that ended in another Taylor touchdown to make it 41-20 and drop the Titans to 0-3.

TITANS-TEXANS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 4: Titans 0, Texans 26
Sunday Sept. 28, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CDT • NRG Stadium

In Week 4 of the 2025 season, the Titans traveled to division rival Houston Texans and fell by a score of 26-0. It was the first time the team has been shut out since 2019.

The Titans started the game with the ball. QB Cam Ward connected with WR Elic Ayomanor for a 33-yard gain to bring the Titans to the Texans 28-yard line. However after two incomplete passes and a five-yard run by RB Tony Pollard the Titans were forced to settle for a 41-yard field goal attempt by K Joey Slye which was wide right and no good.

The Texans took over and constructed an 11-play, 40-yard drive that culminated in a field goal by K Ka'imi Fairbairn to take an early 3-0 lead with 4:49 left in the first.

Another Fairbairn field goal on the Texans next drive made it 6-0 with 13:28 left in the second quarter.

Later in the second quarter, DT Jeffery Simmons tackled RB Woody Marks for a one-yard loss and the OLB Arden Key took down QB C.J. Stroud for a six-yard sack to force a third-and-17 which the Texans did not convert.

The Titans took over at their own 23-yard line with 1:48 left in the half. Ward drove the Titans down to the Houston 29-yard line on four completions for 44 yards to four different pass catchers. But the drive halted and Slye was off-target on the 43-yard attempt to keep the score 6-0 heading into the half.

The Texans opened the second half with a missed field goal of their own.

Tennessee was forced to punt on their next possession and Houston took over at their own 18-yard line. Despite facing second-and-33 due to penalties, Stroud found WR Nico Collins for a 37-yard gain to extend the drive. The Texans stretched the lead on a 12-yard touchdown pass from Stroud to Marks to make it 12-0 after the two-point conversion failed.

Ward was intercepted on the next Titans drive and the Texans cashed that in for another touchdown just six plays later on a 24-yard pass from Stroud to WR Jayden Higgins to extend their lead 19-0 with 9:26 left in the game.

Facing fourth-and-one on their own 31-yard line, the Titans were unable to convert and the Texans took over. Houston took advantage of the field position. Marks extended the lead to 26-0 with an 18-yard touchdown run to cap off the victory for the Texans and drop the Titans to 0-4.

TITANS-CARDINALS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 5: Titans 22, Cardinals 21
Sunday Oct. 5, 2025 • 3:05 p.m. MST • State Farm Stadium

In Week 5 of the 2025 season, the Titans traveled to Arizona and won 22-21 by outscoring the Cardinals 16-0 in the fourth quarter. It was the franchise's largest fourth-quarter comeback victory since a 21-point comeback to defeat the Giants in 2006.

The Cardinals jumped to an early 7-0 lead on a one-yard run by RB Michael Carter which capped off an eight-play, 67-yard opening drive.

The Titans responded with a 44-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to make it 7-3 with 5:00 left in the first quarter.

But the Cardinals answered right back. QB Kyler Murray connected with WR Marvin Harrison Jr. for two completions for 36 yards. Murray capped the drive with a 12-yard scamper into the end zone to make it 14-3 at the end of the first quarter.

Later in the second quarter, the Cardinals capitalized on a RB Tony Pollard fumble in Titans territory with a one-yard touchdown run by RB Zonovan Knight to extend the lead to 21-3.

WR Chimere Dike responded with a 65-yard kickoff return to give the Titans a spark. But they were forced to settle for another field goal by Slye to make it 21-6 with 8:29 left in first half.

Neither team scored in the third quarter. Tennessee came up with a fumble recovery by OLB Dre'Mont Jones after a snap gone wrong for the Cardinals but were unable to capitalize and went three-and-out on the ensuing possession.

The Cardinals began the fourth quarter deep in their own territory. RB Emari Demercado broke through for what would have been a 72-yard touchdown run. However CB L'Jarius Sneed chased him until the end zone, providing pressure before Demercado let go of the ball before crossing the goal line. Instead of a touchdown, it was a touchback.

The Titans capitalized on the mishap with a six-play, 80-yard drive that featured a 47-yard completion from QB Cam Ward to WR Calvin Ridley. Pollard capped off the drive with a one-yard touchdown run. A missed extra point by Slye made it 21-12 with 10:26 left in the game.

The Titans defense forced a three-and-out on the Cardinals next possession and took over at their own 19-yard line. Ward drove Tennessee down to the Cardinals 20-yard line before chaos ensued. A Ward pass was tipped by LB Mack Wilson Sr. before being intercepted by S Dadrion Taylor-Demerson, but he lost control of the ball, and as players scrambled to pick up the fumble, the ball was kicked by a Cardinals defender into the end zone, where WR Tyler Lockett fell on it for Tennessee. Instead of an interception, the Titans came away with a touchdown to make it 21-19.

The Titans defense stood tall and forced a punt to give the offense the ball back at their own 18-yard line with 1:53 left on the clock.

After a quick couple of completions, Ward found TE Chig Okonkwo for 16 yards to cross midfield. Then a 38-yard completion to Ridley in the final minute put the team in field goal range, before an 11-yard run by running back Tony Pollard put the team on the doorstep of the win.

Slye connected on the 29-yard kick as time expired to give the Titans their first win of the season.

TITANS-RAIDERS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 6: Titans 10, Raiders 20
Sunday Oct. 12, 2025 • 3:05 p.m. PDT • Allegiant Stadium

In Week 6 of the 2025 season, the Titans traveled to Allegiant Stadium for the first time and lost 20-10 to the Las Vegas Raiders.

The Raiders took an early 3-0 lead on a 50-yard field goal by K Daniel Carlson to cap off a 13-play, 48-yard drive.

Later in the second quarter, the Raiders were facing third-and-four at their own 41-yard line when OLB Jihad Ward hit QB Geno Smith. The ball came loose and LB Cody Barton recovered the fumble and took it back for a touchdown. However, a replay review ruled it an incomplete pass instead of a fumble to keep the score 3-0 with 11:04 left in the second quarter.

A couple of drives later, the Titans were backed up deep in their own territory when LB Devin Whtie sacked QB Cam Ward and forced a fumble in the process. DE Tyree Wilson recovered the fumble at the Titans' two-yard line and cashed it in for a short touchdown pass from Smith to TE Michael Mayer to make it 10-0.

The Titans appeared to be headed for points at the end of the first half, as Ward drove the Titans from their own 16-yard line to the Raiders 30-yard line with a 20-yard pass to WR Van Jefferson and 25 rushing yards by RB Tyjae Spears. But on second-and-10, Ward was hit as he threw the ball, and it was intercepted to keep it 10-0 heading into the half.

The Raiders stretched their lead on the opening drive of the third quarter with a three-yard touchdown run by RB Ashton Jeanty to cap a 13-play, 70-yard drive and make it 17-0.

The Titans got on the scoreboard on the following drive with a 46-yard field goal by K Matthew Wright to make it 17-3 with 1:06 left in the third quarter. Ward had three completions for 39 yards but a sack and penalty halted the drive and forced the Titans to settle for the field goal.

Despite an interception by Barton to start the fourth quarter, the Titans were unable to capitalize as the offense went three-and-out and punted right back to the Raiders who extended their lead to 20-3 on another Carlson field goal with 7:14 left in the game.

A one-yard touchdown pass from Ward to TE David Martin-Robinson capped a 12-play, 65-yard drive to make it 20-10 with 3:03 left in the game.

After an onside kick, the Titans defense forced a three-and-out on the Raiders next drive to give the offense a chance to make it interesting. However, after crossing midfield, Ward was pressured and the ball slipped out of his hands and was recovered by the Raiders who kneeled out the game.

TITANS-PATRIOTS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 7: Titans 13, Patriots 31

Sunday Oct. 19, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CDT • Nissan Stadium

In week 7 of the 2025 season, the Titans hosted the New England Patriots and fell by a score of 31-13 in Mike McCoy's first game as interim head coach.

The Titans took an early 3-0 lead on a 49-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to open the game.

The Patriots tied it with a 36-yard field goal by K Andy Borregales on the next drive.

Tennessee responded with a three-play, 59-yard touchdown drive. WR Chimere Dike returned the kickoff 29 yards to the Tennessee 41-yard line. Dike then caught two passes from QB Cam Ward, an 18-yarder followed by a 38-yard touchdown reception to make it 10-3 with 5:04 left in the first quarter.

Later in the second quarter, the Patriots tied the game with an 11-play, 93-yard touchdown drive. QB Drake Maye completed five passes to five different pass catchers for 51 yards, including the three-yard touchdown pass to TE Austin Hooper to even the score 10-10.

The Titans responded again, putting together an eight-play, 32-yard drive that was capped off with a 50-yard field goal from Slye. WR Van Jefferson had a pair of catches for 27 yards on the march to make it 13-10 with 1:48 left in the first half.

New England responded with a three-play, 60-yard touchdown drive. Slye's kickoff was out of bounds, giving the Patriots the ball at their own 40-yard line. Maye then found WR Kayshon Boutte for a 39-yard touchdown to give the Patriots their first lead of the day, which they never relinquished.

The Patriots began the second half with the ball and strung together a 12-play, 88-yard touchdown drive that was capped by a four-yard touchdown run by RB Rhamondre Stevenson to make it 24-13 with 7:31 left in the third quarter.

On the next possession, Ward lost control of the ball deep in the Titans territory and LB K'Lavon Chaisson scooped up the fumble and returned it four yards for a touchdown to make it 31-13 with 7:20 left in the third quarter.

Neither team scored for the rest of the game as the Titans fell to 1-6 on the season.

TITANS-COLTS: GAME SUMMARY

Sunday Oct. 26, 2025 • 4:25 p.m. EDT • Lucas Oil Stadium

In Week 8 of the 2025 season, the Titans traveled to Lucas Oil Stadium to face division rival Indianapolis Colts and fell by a score of 38-14.

The Colts jumped out to an early 3-0 lead with a 43-yard field goal by K Michael Badgley on the opening drive of the game.

After the Titans were forced to punt on their first offensive possession, the Colts extended their lead to 10-0 on a RB Jonathan Taylor 18-yard touchdown run that capped an eight-play, 73-yard drive with 15 seconds left in the first quarter.

Tennessee responded with a six-play, 69-yard drive that resulted in a one-yard touchdown pass from QB Cam Ward to TE Gunnar Helm to make it 10-7 with 11:14 left in the second quarter. The touchdown was set up by RB Tyjae Spears who broke through for a 41-yard run which put the ball at the Indianapolis one-yard line.

However, the Colts immediately responded with another touchdown to extended the lead to 17-7. QB Daniel Jones found WR Michael Pittman Jr. on a 21-yard touchdown pass.

With 26 seconds left in the second quarter, the Titans started to drive from their own 20-yard line. Ward connected with WR Elic Ayomanor for 26 yards and WR Chimere Dike for 14 yards to bring the Titans to the Colts 40-yard line. But K Joey Slye missed the 58-yard field goal attempt to keep the score 17-7 heading into the half.

The Titans opened the second half with the ball, but the drive stalled and Tennessee opted to punt on fourth-and-three at the Colts 42-yard line. The punt resulted in a touchback and the Colts took over at their own 20-yard line.

Taylor scored on the next play with an 80-yard touchdown run, making it 24-7 with 11:10 left in the third quarter.

After a three-and-out by the Titans on the next possession, the Colts extended the lead even further with a 10-yard touchdown pass from Jones to WR Josh Downs which capped an eight-play, 74-yard drive to make it 31-7 with 5:12 left in the third.

A 19-yard pass from Jones to Taylor made it 38-7 at the start of the fourth quarter.

The Titans got on the board again late with a three-yard touchdown run by Spears to make the final score 38-14.

TITANS-CHARGERS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 9: Titans 20, Chargers 27
Sunday Nov. 2, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CST • Nissan Stadium

In Week 7 of the 2025 season, the Titans hosted the Los Angeles Chargers and fell by a score of 27-20 to drop to 1-8 on the season.

The Titans jumped out to an early 7-0 lead on a pick-six from LB Cody Barton, who stepped in front of a QB Justin Herbert pass, intercepted it and raced 24 yards for a touchdown.

The Chargers responded with a seven-play, 76-yard drive that resulted in a two-yard touchdown pass from Herbert to FB Scott Matlock to tie the game at 7-7.

The Titans were forced to punt after their drive stalled at the Chargers' 49-yard line. However, the Titans defense forced a three-and-out after OLB Dre'Mont Jones sacked Herbert for a six-yard loss on the play. It was one of six sacks the Titans defense recorded on the day. P JK Scott punted 60 yards to the Tennessee 33-yard where WR Chimere Dike fielded it and returned it 67 yards for a touchdown to give the Titans a 14-7 lead. It was the first punt return for a touchdown for the Titans since 2012.

The Chargers opened the second quarter with a 27-yard field goal by K Cameron Dicker to make it 14-10 with 14:06 left in the first half.

After the Titans were forced to punt again, the Chargers took over at their own 30-yard line. Herbert constructed a six-play, 70-yard drive and capped it off with a 19-yard touchdown pass to WR Quentin Johnston to give the Chargers their first lead of the day at 17-14.

The Titans responded with a 49-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to tie the game at 17-17 with 5:02 left in the half. However, the Chargers took a 20-17 lead into halftime after a 52-yard field goal by Dicker with 20 seconds left in the second quarter.

After the Titans defense forced a three-and-out to start the second half, the Titans began to drive at their own 28-yard line. QB Cam Ward drove the team down to the one-yard line, but RB Tony Pollard was stopped short of the goal line on back-to-back plays to keep the score 20-17 and give the Chargers the ball on their own one-yard line.

On the ensuing possession, the Chargers drove the ball 99 yards in 9:03, using 15 plays, and capped the drive with a one-yard touchdown run by Herbert to extend their lead 27-17.

The Titans brought the game within one score on a 37-yard field goal by Slye with 4:13 left, but the Titans never got the ball back as the Chargers ran out the clock with three third-down conversions in the closing minutes.

Sunday Nov. 16, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CST • Nissan Stadium

In Week 11 of the 2025 season, the Titans hosted division rival Houston Texans and fell by a score of 16-13 on the last play of the game.

The game got off to an interesting start. The Texans won the toss and elected to receive. After driving down to the Tennessee 13-yard line, Houston elected to attempt a field goal facing fourth-and-two. K Matthew Wright's 31-yard attempt hit the right upright and was no good. But a penalty on DT Jeffery Simmons for unnecessary roughness gave the Texans first-and-goal from the six-yard line. The defense responded with a goal-line stand, and on fourth-and-goal from the one-yard line LB Cody Barton sacked QB Davis Mills and the Titans took over.

The Titans then strung together a 13-play, 50-yard drive that culminated in a 56-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to make it 3-0. QB Cam Ward found first down completions to WR Calvin Ridley, WR Chimere Dike, WR Van Jefferson, RB Tyjae Spears, and TE Chig Okonkwo throughout the drive.

It was a defensive battle for the rest of the half, and it was 3-0 at the break.

The Titans extended their lead on the opening drive of the second half with a 47-yard field goal by Slye to make it 6-0 with 10:45 left in the third quarter.

The Texans responded with a seven-play, 65-yard scoring drive that was capped with a three-yard touchdown pass from Mills to WR Nico Collins to make it 7-3.

The Titans went three-and-out on their next offensive possession and the Texans took over at their own 14-yard line. Wright capped a 10-play, 63-yard drive with a 41-yard field goal to extend the Texans lead to 10-6 heading into the fourth quarter.

The Texans cashed in on a Ward sack fumble forced by DE Will Anderson Jr. with a 43-yard field goal by Wright to extend their lead to 13-6 with 11:59 left in the game.

The Titans made it exciting towards the end. After the Titans defensed forced their second consecutive three-and-out, the offense took over at their own five-yard line. A 39-yard pass from Ward to Okonkwo gave the Titans a first-and-goal at the Houston seven-yard line in the closing minutes. Then, Ward connected with WR Van Jefferson for a four-yard touchdown to tie the game at 13-13 with 1:35 remaining.

The Titans were on the verge of getting the ball back, but the Texans converted a third-and-16 with a 17-yard completion from Mills to Collins to cross midfield. The Texans were able to burn the rest of the clock while setting up a 35-yard field goal by Wright on the final play of the game to drop the Titans to 1-9 on the season.

TITANS-SEAHAWKS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 12: Titans 24, Seahawks 30
Sunday Nov. 23, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CST • Nissan Stadium

In Week 12 of the 2025 season, the Titans hosted the Seattle Seahawks and fell by a score of 30-24.

The Titans opened the game with a 15-play, 63-yard drive that took 9:09 off the clock and resulted in a 22-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to take an early 3-0 lead. QB Cam Ward connected with TE Gunnar Helm for a 10-yard gain on fourth-and-two to keep the drive alive but a sack on third down at the Seattle three-yard line forced the field goal.

The Seahawks answered with a field goal of their own, a 47-yarder from K Jason Myers to tie the game at 3-3 with 2:14 left in the first.

Early in the second quarter the Seahawks extended their lead when QB Sam Darnold found WR Jaxon Smith-Njigba for a 63-yard touchdown to make it 10-3.

A quick three-and-out by the Titans offense on the next possession gave the ball back to Seattle. The Seahawks drove down to the Titans two-yard line, but the defense was able to hold them off to a 30-yard field goal to make it 13-3 with 4:44 left in the first half.

After driving to the Seattle 40-yard line, the Titans were stuffed for no gain on fourth-and-one. Seattle took over and stretched their lead to 16-3 with another field goal by Myers this one from 36 yards as time expired in the first half.

The Seahawks opened the second half with a quick three-play, 76-yard scoring drive. Darnold found Smith-Njigba for 56 yards before connecting again on a 13-yard touchdown pass to make it 23-3 with 13:19 left in the third quarter.

The Titans defense forced a three-and-out on the next Seahawks possession and Seattle was forced to punt for the first time of the day. WR Chimere Dike fielded the 60-yard punt at the Tennessee 10-yard line and returned it 90 yards for the touchdown to bring life back to the Titans and Nissan Stadium. The 90-yard punt return tied the franchise record for the longest punt return set by Pacman Jones in 2006.

However, the Seahawks answered with a six-play, 74-yard scoring drive on their next possession, stretching the lead to 30-10 with a five-yard run by RB Zach Charbonnet.

The Titans didn't quit. Ward drove the team 73 yards on nine plays, completing passes of 26 yards to TE Chig Okonkwo, 12 yards to WR James Proche II and 15 yards to Helm before capping the drive himself with a six-yard run for the score. It was his first rushing touchdown of the season and made it 30-17 heading into the fourth quarter.

Then, the defense got a big play from OLB Arden Key, who sacked Darnold on a fourth-and-three play from the Tennessee 41-yard line with 13:17 left, and the Titans had life.

The Titans drove deep into Seattle territory but a penalty and sack stalled the drive giving the ball back to the Seahawks.

The Titans defense came up big again with a three-and-out giving the ball back to the offense with 5:08 left in the game. The Titans strung together a 15-play, 62-yard drive capped off with a one-yard touchdown pass from Ward to Dike to make it 30-24 with 43 seconds left.

But the hope for a comeback win ended on the failed onside kick and the Titans fell to 1-10 on the season.

TITANS-JAGUARS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 13: Titans 3, Jaguars 25
Sunday Nov. 30, 2025 • 12:00 p.m. CST • Nissan Stadium

In Week 13 of the 2025 season, the Titans hosted division rival Jacksonville Jaguars and fell by a score of 25-3 to drop to 1-11 on the year.

The Titans got off to a good start. S Kevin Winston Jr. sacked QB Trevor Lawrence on the opening drive of the game to force the Jaguars to punt.

QB Cam Ward then drove the Titans down to the Jacksonville 10-yard line but a stalled drive led to a 28-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to give the Titans a 3-0 lead with 5:06 left in the first quarter. RB Tony Pollard contributed 36 yards on three carries throughout the drive.

The Jaguars answered with a seven-play, 84-yard drive that ended in a three-yard touchdown pass from Lawrence to WR Jakobi Meyers to give Jacksonville a 7-3 lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, WR Chimere Dike fumbled the return and RB LeQuint Allen Jr. recovered the ball at the Jacksonville 35-yard line. Jacksonville cashed in on the turnover with a 21-yard touchdown pass from Lawrence to TE Brenton Strange. An encroachment penalty on the extra point attempt allowed the Jaguars to attempt a two-point conversion which made it 15-3 one play into the second quarter.

The Titans were shut out for the rest of the half, including on a fourth-and-two attempt from the Jaguars 21-yard line to turn the ball over with 20 seconds left in the half. After coming up with a stop as time expired, OLB Arden Key was flagged for roughing the passer and K Cam Little cashed in for a 45-yard field goal on an untimed down to make it 18-3 heading into the break.

Jacksonville forced another three-and-out by the Tennessee offense to open the half and took over at their own 29-yard line. The Titans defense responded by a forcing a three-and-out of their own, but a roughing the punter penalty on S Mike Brown on fourth-and-20 gave Jacksonville a first down, and the Jaguars ended a 15-play drive with another score, this one a two-yard touchdown run by RB Bhayshul Tuten to make it 25-3 at the 6:45 mark of the third quarter.

Neither team scored again as the Titans offense failed to convert two fourth down attempts and lost a fumble in the final quarter.

TITANS-BROWNS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 14: Titans 31, Browns 29
Sunday Dec. 7, 2025 • 1:00 p.m. EST • Huntington Bank Field

In Week 14 of the 2025 season, the Titans traveled to Cleveland and took home a 31-29 victory.

The Titans got off to a fast start, scoring their first opening drive touchdown of the year. WR Chimere Dike opened the game with a 41-yard kickoff return. QB Cam Ward converted two third downs, the first to RB Tyjae Spears for a 24-yard gain and the next to TE Chig Okonkwo for nine yards to keep the drive alive. Ward then found WR Elic Ayomanor on a 14-yard touchdown pass to give the Titans an early 7-0 lead.

After a three-and-out stop by the Titans defense, Tennessee was on the verge of extending its lead, but Ward was intercepted by LB Devin Bush at the Cleveland 18-yard line, and after a 44-yard return, the Browns cashed that in for a 38-yard field goal by K Andre Szmyt to make it 7-3 with 1:42 left in the first quarter.

The Titans responded immediately with an explosive 65-yard touchdown run by RB Tony Pollard, which made it 14-3. Pollard finished the day with a career-best 161 rushing yards Barely two minutes later, the Browns cut the lead to 14-10 on a one-yard touchdown pass from QB Shedeur Sanders to TE David Njoku. It came after a 58-yard completion from Sanders to RB Quinshon Judkins.

Later in the second quarter, the Browns took their first lead of the game on a 60-yard touchdown pass from Sanders to WR Jerry Jeudy with 2:47 left in the first half.

Both teams punted multiple times in the third quarter before S Xavier Woods intercepted a Sanders pass and returned it 35 yards to the Cleveland 38-yard line with 1:41 left in the quarter.

Two plays later, Pollard busted loose again, this time on a 32-yard touchdown run to give the Titans a 21-17 lead with 51 seconds left in the third quarter.

Later in the fourth quarter after a Titans punt, CB Marcus Harris forced a fumble from RB Dylan Sampson and LB Cedric Gray scooped it up and returned it to the Cleveland eight-yard line. Ward found Dike in the end zone three plays later to give the Titans a 28-17 lead.

The Browns were forced to punt on their next offensive possession and LB James Williams Sr. blocked the punt - the first Titans blocked punt since their 2012 season. S Mike Brown recovered at the Browns 36-yard line.

The Titans cashed that in for a 41-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to make it 31-17 with 6:17 remaining in the game.

The Browns cut the lead to 31-23 on a seven-yard scramble by Sanders which capped a five-play, 66-yard drive. However their two-point conversion failed to make it 31-23.

After a three-and-out by the Titans offense, the Browns went 80 yards on seven plays and scored on a seven-yard touchdown pass from Sanders to TE Harold Fannin to make it 31-29. But once again, the Titans defense stopped the two-point conversion attempt.

Dike recovered the onside kick and the Titans took home their first victory since October to improve to 2-11 on the season.

TITANS-49ERS: GAME SUMMARY

Week 15: Titans 24, 49ers 37
Sunday Dec. 14, 2025 • 1:25 p.m. PST • Levi's Stadium

In Week 15 of the 2025 season, the Titans traveled to San Francisco and fell by a score of 37-24.

The 49ers jumped out to an early 7-0 lead after a 12-play, 70-yard touchdown drive capped off with a four-yard pass from QB Brock Purdy to WR Jauan Jennings.

The Titans drove to the 49ers five-yard line on the next possession, but were forced to settle for a 25-yard field goal by K Joey Slye to make it 7-3 with 1:22 left in the first quarter.

San Francisco responded with another 70-yard touchdown drive. RB Christian McCaffrey capped the seven-play drive with a one-yard touchdown run to extend their lead to 14-3.

The Titans responded with a long touchdown drive of their own. QB Cam Ward found TE Gunnar Helm for a 34-yard touchdown to make it 14-10. Helm's catch capped an eight-play, 68-yard drive that included a pair of first down completions to TE Chig Okonkwo.

A 33-yard field goal by K Eddy Piniero made it 17-10 with a minute left in the first half.

Ward then drove Tennessee to the San Francisco 32-yard line to set up for a 50-yard field goal as time expired, but Slye misfired on the attempt and the score remained 17-10 heading into the break.

49ers opened the second half with a four-play, 67-yard touchdown drive. Purdy found WR Ricky Pearsall for a 38-yard gain before connecting with Jennings for the 13-yard touchdown.

After a three-and-out by the Titans offense, the 49ers extended their lead on a 15-play, 95-yard drive capped on a one-yard touchdown pass from Purdy to TE George Kittle to make it 31-10 with 2:10 left in the third quarter.

DT Jeffery Simmons came up big to start the fourth quarter. Simmons knocked the ball out of Purdy's hand for a strip-sack that was recovered by CB Kaiir Elam at the 47-yard line. It marked Simmons' ninth sack on the season, setting a new career-high.

Ward then found WR Van Jefferson for a 41-yard completion to bring the Titans to the 49ers one-yard line. Simmons reported as eligible and lined up as a fullback on the next play. Simmons got behind the defense after Ward scrambled, and he caught a one-yard touchdown pass to make the score 31-17 with 14:16 left in the contest.

Another Piniero field goal, this one from 37 yards, made it 34-17 with 9:28 left.

On the next Titans drive, RB Tony Pollard and RB Tyjae Spears combined for 53 rushing yards including a six-yard touchdown run by Pollard to make it 34-24 with 5:37 left in the game. Pollard recorded 104 total rushing yards, marking the first back-to-back 100-yard rushing performance for the Titans since 2022 after he recorded 161 yards last week.

A 40-yard field goal by Pineiro with 1:14 left in the game accounted for the final margin.

QB Patrick Mahomes had been placed on injured reserve the week prior.

The Titans reclaimed the lead on their next offensive possession. Tennessee strung together an 11-play, 89-yard drive and capped it off with a seven-yard touchdown pass from QB Cam Ward to TE Chig Okonkwo. Spears was a big contributor on the possession, running the ball and catching it out of the backfield for 64 yards.

The Chiefs kept it close heading into the half with a 41-yard field goal by K Harrison Butker that capped a quick seven-play, 45-yard drive to make it 9-6.

Tennessee came out hot in the second half with a nine-play, 75-yard touchdown drive. Ward connected with WR Elic Ayomanor on a 25-yard pass before finding WR Chimere Dike for 30 yards and then the one-yard touchdown to make it 16-6 with 10:32 left in the third quarter.

The Titans defense responded by forcing a long field goal attempt. Butker was wide right on the 51-yarder and the Titans reclaimed possession.

Later in the third quarter, Butker made good on a 27-yard field goal to make it 16-9 with 3:00 left in the third quarter.

The Titans responded with a 10-play, 64-yard touchdown drive. A defensive offside by Kansas City nullified a 51-yard field goal by K Joey Slye and gave the Titans a first down a the Chiefs' 28-yard line. Ward found Ayomanor for a 24-yard completion and Spears finished it off with a four-yard touchdown run to make it 23-9 with 11:56 left in the game.

The Titans then executed a methodical 13-play, 57-yard drive that took 6:17 off the clock and culminated in a 27-yard field goal by Slye to extend the lead to 26-9 with 3:44 left.

LAST WEEK'S GAME CLIPS

SIX THINGS THAT STOOD OUT FOR THE TITANS IN SUNDAY'S WIN OVER THE CHIEFS

BY JIM WYATT

DECEMBER 21, 2025

NASHVILLE – The Titans beat the Chiefs 26-9 on Sunday at Nissan Stadium.

Here's a look at six things that stood out from the contest:

Cam's Best Game?

Cam Ward keeps getting better. On Sunday, the rookie quarterback arguably played his best game to date. Ward completed 21-of-28 passes for 228 yards in the contest, with a passer rating of 122.3. It was Ward's third consecutive game with two touchdown passes, and his passer rating was easily his best of the season. "He played well," Titans interim coach Mike McCoy said of Ward. "He's getting better. I've been saying it from Day One: Cam loves to play the game of football. He loves to be coached hard, and he understands he's going to make some mistakes, but it doesn't bother him. He just keeps going. Very happy with the way he played." Ward now owns the Tennessee rookie record for passing yards in a season (2,866), and his 13th touchdown pass of the year on Sunday allowed him to move past Vince Young (12 in 2006) for the second-most in franchise history by a rookie, behind only Mariota (19 in 2015). "I think I've been better each and every week, whether it's one thing or whether it's a major thing," Ward said. "I think just going forward, I just (have to) continue to control what I can control, lead my teammates, be a great team player and try to win games."

Safety Dance

Titans defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons keeps finding ways to make an impact. On Sunday, Simmons busted through the line of scrimmage to tackle Chiefs running back Kareem Hunt in the end zone for a safety. It gave the Titans an early 2-0 lead, and momentum. "I think that's the first safety I've caused in my career, honestly, from high school to college," Simmons said. "When they got backed up, in my mind I was like: Go make a play. That's kind of my mindset every snap honestly. … I switched up my technique a little bit to where I know I'm about to get a double team, which it was supposed to be a double team. And I swimmed him pretty good, and ... my eyes got big. I was just praying not to miss the tackle. So, it was a hell of a play on my behalf. And so that is my first one in my career, that one felt good." Simmons finished the game with three tackles, including two tackles for a loss, and he also batted two balls down at the line of scrimmage.

One Two Punch at RB

The Titans got big performances from both of their running backs on Sunday. Tony Pollard ran for 102 yards on 21 carries, while Tyjae Spears accounted for 105 all-purpose yards (52 rush, 53 receiving) and a touchdown in the contest. Spears caught a 34-yard pass, and he scored on a four-yard touchdown run. For Pollard, it was his third straight 100-yard game. "When those guys move people off the ball like that, they make my job easy," Pollard said of the offensive line. "It's easy for me to get the spotlight and recognition. But without them up front doing the dirty work, none of this would be happening. … That's just us finding our identity in this offense. Figuring out what we do best, and what gets us going, what allows us to put points on the board, and that's what we're doing right now." Pollard now has 949 rushing yards on the season, so he's 51 away from 1,000. How about that for some quick math?

Dike's Day, and Season

Titans receiver/return man Chimere Dike continued his memorable season on Sunday. Dike scored on a one-yard touchdown pass against the Chiefs, which gave Tennessee a 16-6 lead. Dike had two other catches in the game, including a 30-yarder from Ward. In Sunday's contest, Dike set the franchise record for the most kickoff return yards in a season in franchise history (1,535), surpassing Marc Mariani's 1,530 kickoff return yards in 2010. Dike also became just the fourth rookie in franchise history to tally six touchdowns. "Every single day I walk in this building, it is a blessing," Dike said. "Whether I am getting the results that I want or not, I am going to continue to work and have a process and I think the rest of the young guys have that mindset as well."

Defensive Performance

OK, let's face it – the Titans faced a banged-up and depleted Chiefs team on Sunday. Quarterback Patrick Mahomes didn't play in the contest after suffering a torn ACL last week, and back-up QB Gardner Minshew left the game in the first half with a knee injury, and he didn't return. That left little known Chris Oladokun to play most of the game for Kansas City, and the Titans held him and the Chiefs offense in check. The Titans held the Chiefs to nine first downs and just 133 yards of offense on a day when Kansas City managed just three field goals. Truman Jones tallied 1.5 sacks for the Titans, and Jaylen Harrell (1), James Williams (1) and Jihad Ward (0.5) all ended up in the sack column. It was the first time since 2023 season the Titans held a team without a touchdown. "Yeah, it's a good feeling," Jihad Ward said. "We did, we came together, and I'm proud of this team. We did what we had to do. All personnel, on offense, defense, special teams. I am glad we got the victory."

Breaking the Home Losing Streak

Sunday's 26-9 victory over the Chiefs snapped an 11-game losing streak for the Titans at Nissan Stadium. Prior to Sunday, the team's last home win came on November 3, 2024, over the Patriots. Yeah, it had been a while. Cam Ward wasn't on last year's team, of course, and McCoy wasn't with the team either. Heck, a bunch of players and coaches weren't around for the entirety of that dreadful streak. But everyone was happy to see it come to an end, for themselves, and the team's fans. "It feels awesome," Titans safety Amani Hooker said. "We haven't had music playing after a game here in a long time, so it was awesome to have that. Miss Amy (Adams Strunk) was here as well, so that's a good gift for everyone in the organization."

TITANS SNAP LOSING STREAK AT NISSAN STADIUM, BEAT CHIEFS 26-9

BY JIM WYATT

DECEMBER 21, 2025

NASHVILLE – Hail to the Titans.

And, to hell with that losing streak at Nissan Stadium.

Four days before Christmas, the Titans gave their fans – and themselves – a long overdue present: a home win.

Sunday's 26-9 victory over the Chiefs snapped an 11-game losing streak for the Titans at Nissan Stadium. Prior to Sunday, the team's last home win came on November 3, 2024, over the Patriots.

"We were desperate to win at home," defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons said. "And guys played that way today."

"It's been a long time coming since we've won a home game here," Titans interim coach Mike McCoy added. "So, it's just a great feeling for everybody in the entire organization, everyone who puts so many hours in, and then to be able to come home and play like this is phenomenal."

With quarterback Cam Ward leading the way, the Titans surged ahead in this one and controlled the game throughout. It was arguably Ward's best game of the season.

Ward threw a pair of touchdown passes for the third consecutive game as the Titans matched their win total from the 2024 season with two games left to play.

Ward finished the day completing 21-of-28 passes for 228 yards and two touchdowns, with a passer rating of 122.3.

"It's a good win," Ward said. "It was the first time we'd played good enough complementary in all three phases. Defense kept us in the game the entirety … and it was a good team win.

"We didn't feel the weight of (the home losing streak). We just want to win every game, and we have to be able to establish a home atmosphere by winning games. … We have to continue to play complementary football."

The Titans got big performances from both of their running backs in this one.

Tony Pollard ran for 102 yards on 21 carries, while Tyjae Spears accounted for 105 yards (52 rush, 53 receiving) and a touchdown in the contest. It was Pollard third straight 100-yard game.

By winning for the second time in three games, the Titans improved their record to 3-12 on the season.

"It was a good opportunity for all of us to go out there and put on for the Titans, and that's what we went out there and did," linebacker James Williams Sr. said. "It's a blessing, man. We go out there and fight every single week, and today was the week we succeeded. Thank you to the team, to all the guys coming out and performing."

Gardner Minshew started at quarterback for the Chiefs, in place of an injured Patrick Mahomes. But Minshew suffered a knee injury himself in the second quarter of Sunday's game, and he did not return. QB Chris Oladokun replaced Minshew and he finished the contest, but he had limited success.

The Titans tallied four sacks in the contest, as the Chiefs managed just nine first downs and 133 yards of offense. The Titans won the time of possession 38:01 to 21:59.

"Getting ahead and staying ahead," Williams said. "That was the key."

The Titans took the lead early on a safety, when defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons exploded through the line of scrimmage and tackled Chiefs running back Kareem Hunt in the end zone.

The play gave the Titans a 2-0 lead at the 13:06 mark of the second quarter.

After the Chiefs took a 3-2 lead at the 7:40 mark of the second quarter on a 54-yard field goal by kicker Harrison Butker, the Titans put together an 11-play, 89-yard drive, and capped it off with an eight-yard touchdown pass from Ward to tight end Chig Okonkwo. Spears was a big contributor on the possession, running the ball and catching it out of the backfield, and the Titans led 9-3.

The Titans led 9-6 at the half after Butker made a 41-yard field goal with six seconds left before the break.

But the Titans kept coming, starting the second half on a beautiful nine-play, 75-yard touchdown drive executed by Ward, who found receiver Chimere Dike open for a one-yard score to make it 16-6 with 10:32 left in the third quarter.

Butker misfired on a 51-yard field goal midway through the third quarter before making one from 27 yards out, and the Titans led 16-9 with 3:00 left in the third quarter.

The, the Titans put it away.

A four-yard touchdown run by Spears gave the Titans a 23-9 lead with 11:56 remaining.

Another Slye field goal, this one from 27 yards, made it 26-9 Titans with 3:44 left in the contest.

"Couldn't be happier for the players in the locker room, the entire organization, everybody that's bought in and worked so hard," McCoy said. "There's nothing like winning at home."

The Titans return to action next Sunday against the New Orleans Saints at Nissan Stadium.

SOLD ON CAM WARD'S FUTURE? TENNESSEE TITANS TEAMMATES SURE ARE | ESTES

BY GENTRY ESTES
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
DECEMBER 21, 2025

It says something important about rookie quarterback Cam Ward that his reputation among veteran Tennessee Titans teammates is that of a grumpy old codger.

“Don’t be a Grinch today,” defensive star Jeffery Simmons told Ward after the Titans — gasp — won a home football game, beating the Kansas City Chiefs 26-9 on Dec. 21 at Nissan Stadium, improving to 3-12 and getting to enjoy the holidays just a bit more.

Simmons was kidding with Ward. Well, he was kind of kidding.

The last time the Titans won (on Dec. 7 in Cleveland — not that it’s difficult to narrow it down), Ward showed up to his postgame news conference in a sour mood, relatively displeased with how the victory had gone.

On the flight back, Titans defensive end Arden Key reportedly used the plane’s speaker system to joke about Ward’s disposition after the game. We know that because Will Boling, the Titans’ sideline reporter and a host on 104.5-FM, relayed that on the air (which caused the team to subsequently remove him from traveling on the team’s plane).

So that’s the Grinch-iness Simmons was talking about.

It’s also, however, why Simmons said about Ward a few minutes later: “I keep telling people, that's the reason why I don't want to go nowhere. I see the competitive nature. I see the growth as a rookie. I can see where he could take this franchise.”

Ward got this far as a zero-star prep recruit, becoming the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft, because his nature is to never be satisfied, even while winning. This is a strength. So is the fact that he is genuine in his thoughts. Doesn't sugarcoat. Tells it like it is.

So this Titans season has been an experiment.

What happens when you take a quarterback like that and have him lose a whole bunch of games right away in the NFL?

You get quotes like “we ass,” which Ward famously said earlier this season after the Titans started 0-for-4. Some older teammates didn’t like hearing that at the time. But he wasn’t wrong, as this season has continued to demonstrate.

Ward’s first NFL head coach, Brian Callahan, was fired after six games this season. The Titans lost six in a row after that (seven in a row total), and five were at Nissan Stadium. It has been humbling, I'd imagine, for a touted rookie quarterback, especially because Ward’s performances have been mixed, if not overall underwhelming.

But as Simmons noted, “Cam hasn’t changed" during all the losses. That’s what teammates have noticed.

Joking aside, Ward has earned the respect of teammates — young and old — behind the scenes because of his fortitude. And of course, his ability.

“That guy is so talented,” rookie receiver Chimere Dike said of Ward, “but his work ethic is something that I really appreciate. I'm thankful that I've been able to grow with him this year, and I can't wait to continue to build that rapport going forward. Hopefully, we'll win a lot of games in Nashville.”

Win a lot? Could it be that Ward’s Titans are finally noticing a faint glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel? Perhaps all the struggles are beginning to bear fruit?

For Ward, this was a good weekend. His college team, the Miami Hurricanes, got a gigantic College Football Playoff win at Texas A&M. “I plan on them going out there and beating Ohio State (in the quarterfinals),” Ward chirped.

A day later, the Chiefs game may have been Ward’s best so far in the NFL. He went 21-for-28 for 228 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions, and while that might not sound too impressive, he led the Titans to three long TD drives and a 9-for-17 clip on third down.

Those eye-opening highlights, the ones that’ve flashed all season, haven’t gone away, either. Against Kansas City, Ward made a laughably absurd throw. Against his body and off his back foot, he found Dike for 30 yards to beat cornerback Kristian Fulton (remember him?).

“I’ve been better each and every week,” Ward said, “whether it's one thing or whether it's a major thing.”

The Titans, as an organization, may not be certain that they have their future quarterback yet. Ward's journey is ongoing, and it will stay this way through next season. But the arrow keeps tilting slightly more north as this rough season nears a merciful — yet increasingly optimistic — conclusion.

Titans teammates, for what it's worth, have sounded convinced about Ward for a while.

Teammates who matter.

Do not underestimate the importance of the quote from Simmons. It’s not a given that he’d want to stay with a franchise that’s gone 6-26 the past two seasons and not even sniffed the playoffs. A lot has been asked of Simmons here, and he’d be coveted by every other NFL team.

If Simmons is insisting he wants to stay amid all this losing, it’s worth paying attention to the reason why.

That reason just won his first home game as an NFL quarterback. And you know what? Cam Ward even seemed happy about this one.

WHY TITANS LONG-AWAITED HOME WIN MEANS MORE THAN JUST A SNAPPED LOSING STREAK

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
DECEMBER 21, 2025

The 2008-10 St. Louis Rams can do whatever the opposite of popping celebratory champagne is.

The Tennessee Titans finally won a game at Nissan Stadium on Dec. 21, beating the Kansas City Chiefs 26-9 and, in the process, snapping an 11-game home losing streak. The streak wasn't just tied as the longest in Nissan Stadium history. It was also tied as the second-longest home losing streak by any team in the 21st century and tied as the sixth-longest by any team in the Super Bowl era. Since 2000, only the sad sack Rams of the late aughts lost more consecutive home games with a 14-game losing streak.

In a team meeting early in the week, Titans offensive coordinator Nick Holz brought up the streak to the team. It'd been more than 400 days since the Titans last won at home. Thirty-one of the 53 players on the Titans active roster had never won a game at Nissan Stadium in the two-tone blue. Twelve more had only won one. That means only 10 players on the Titans active roster could say they knew what it was like to leave Nissan Stadium and go home happy on a repeat basis.

"We mentioned it before the game," said defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons, one of the 10 veterans standing,. "I think we talked about it earlier this week, right after that last game we talked about coming back home. We've been talking about it all week at practice. We hadn't put an exact number on how long it's been, but it was like desperate. We were desperate to win at home, and guys played that way today."

"What a great Christmas gift for everybody involved, everybody in the organization, all our fans to be able to enjoy Christmas after a win," adds interim coach Mike McCoy. "It's great. It's an unbelievable feeling."

This wasn't just any win. The Titans brutalized the injury-addled Chiefs. The defense held Kansas City to 133 yards of offense, the Chiefs' fewest in a game where they weren't resting starters in the Andy Reid era. The Titans' offense outgained the Chiefs' by 243 yards, the most lopsided Titans win in that area since the Thanksgiving Day win over Detroit in 2008. This was the Titans' first game with nine third down conversions since 2021, the Titans' first game holding an opponent to just one third down conversion since 2022, and the Titans' most dominant performance by time of possession in a win since 2017.

Put it all together and it's very easy to proclaim this was the best game the Titans have played in 2025. Probably would've been the best game the Titans played in 2024 or 2023 too. It was a complete, complementary rout.

So what's this all mean, in the long run?

"It shows the (young) guys it’s a different style of game," linebacker Cody Barton said. "When you have the lead, and there’s complementary football going on as a team, it’s a lot funner. It’s a lot funner defending the lead. That’s when the big plays start to happen. That’s when you can call it as you will. It’s just a lot of fun and a good example for the young guys."

Something however small seems to be clicking for the Titans' rookie class. Quarterback Cam Ward played his most efficient game as a pro, posting a career-high passer rating (122.3) and a career-best completion percentage (75%) while still showing off some of the swaggering arm-talent plays that made him the No. 1 pick in April's draft. Track down the highlight of Ward's third-quarter 30-yard pass to Chimere Dike from across his body and off his back foot for some proof of that.

Almost half of Ward's passing yardage came on completions to fellow rookies Dike, Elic Ayomanor and Gunnar Helm. Second-year linebacker James Williams Sr., led the defense with nine tackles in his first start of the season. Even on a day when cornerback Marcus Harris joined outside linebacker Oluwafemi Oladejo and safety Kevin Winston Jr., as rookie draft picks in the injury room, it's easy to see just how big of a percentage of the Titans' success is coming from younger players learning not only how to contribute, but how to win as a unit.

"I think the switch flip is when we just got going," Ward said. "When you never get going and then try to get going, I think that's one of the hardest things to do. But once you get going, and you see what good football is supfosed to look like, I think that real-time switch just flips each and every day."

"Yeah, I mean, I’ve obviously won football games before," Dike added. "But I think it’s just as a group. How to finish games. How to take advantage of opportunities when they arise. I think that we’ve been doing a better job."

It's important not to overhype one win against a Chiefs team that was playing an emergency third-string quarterback in its first game without playoff implications since 2012. The Titans outplayed a team that was a shell of a shell of itself.

But the way winning feels has a way of sticking with young players.

"It's invaluable, the experience they're getting," McCoy says.

CAM WARD'S GROWTH HITS NEW PEAK AS TITANS UPSET INJURY-RIDDEN CHIEFS

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
DECEMBER 21, 2025

It's not quite Christmas, and it's not quite a miracle, but in this era of Tennessee Titans football, it's awfully close.

The Titans snapped their 11-game home losing streak with a 26-9 win over the three-time defending AFC champion Kansas City Chiefs, riding a dominant defensive showing and a play-making day from rookie quarterback Cam Ward to a win on Dec. 21. The Titans (3-12) more than doubled the Chiefs (6-9) in total yardage and first downs gained. They had their best day converting third downs all season and controlled possession as well as they have all year with five drives of nine plays or more.

To be fair, the Chiefs weren't just without all-world quarterback Patrick Mahomes, who tore his ACL one week before the game. They also played most of the game without backup Gardner Minshew, who exited with a knee injury of his own. This thrust third-stringer Chris Oladokun, who had one career attempt coming into the day, off the practice squad and into the primary role. He was efficient, but the Chiefs couldn't convert scoring opportunities into points, with four drives that crossed the Titans' 40-yard line but didn't end in touchdowns. The Titans defense finished with four sacks, seven tackles for loss and five pass breakups.

Ward led the way for the Titans, finishing 21-for-28 with 228 yards and two touchdowns. Running backs Tony Pollard and Tyjae Spears combined for 207 yards from scrimmage with one touchdown, as Pollard posted his third straight 100-yard rushing game.

Cam Ward stats: More QB growth, more rookie performance

Ward has thrown multiple touchdowns in each of his last three games. He didn't post a multi-TD game in any of his first 12 games as a pro. For a team that's been as starved for points as the Titans have been over the last four seasons, that's progress enough to feel some sort of confidence that the game's slowing down for Ward.

Need a news break? Check out the all new PLAY hub with puzzles, games and more!

But it's not just about the game slowing down. Some of Ward's college swagger is starting to bubble through as well. Consider the touchdown drive he led to open the third quarter. He converted a third down with a 25-yard strike to fellow rookie Elic Ayomanor, picking on single coverage and putting the ball where only Ayomanor could catch it. Then two plays later, he scrambled, rolled and threw across his body to connect with another rookie, Chimere Dike, for a 30-yard gain on a play that looked lost. On a third down in the red zone a few snaps later, Ward extended a play and found Spears on a check down, allowing his back to scamper upfield and set the Titans up from the 1-yard line, from where Ward threw to Dike for a touchdown.

Series like those exemplify the potential the Titans see in Ward. He's still not accumulating big yards per attempt numbers, but the ball is going where it needs to, and more drives are getting down into the red area.

Jeffery Simmons continues to dominate

After an emotional week that included a break-in at his home, Simmons returned to action looking like a heightened version of his All-Pro self. Simmons logged three tackles with two TFLs and two pass breakups, and posted the first safety of his career along the way. Simmons is the first Titans defender to score a touchdown and a safety in the same season since linebacker Rocky Boiman in 2003, and Simmons did it in back-to-back weeks no less.

The home losing streak, snapped

The Titans had lost their previous 11 games at Nissan Stadium dating back to a 2024 win against New England. Since that game against the Patriots went to overtime, this is the Titans' first win in regulation at Nissan Stadium since Week 18 of the 2023 season. That game was Mike Vrabel's final as Titans coach.

With the win, the Titans' path to earning the No. 1 pick in the 2026 NFL Draft becomes a lot more complicated. The Titans will almost certainly lose the strength-of-schedule tiebreaker against any opponent across the league, meaning the Titans will need to finish with fewer wins than struggling teams like the Las Vegas Raiders, New York Giants, New York Jets and Cleveland Browns to beat them for draft position.

What's next?

The Titans play their final home game of the 2025 season at Nissan Stadium on Dec. 28 against the New Orleans Saints. Kickoff is scheduled for noon. The game will be broadcast on CBS.

CAM WARD'S GROWTH IS BECOMING THE MEASURE OF THE TITANS' SEASON

BY PAUL KUHARSKY
PAULKUHARSKY.COM
DECEMBER 21, 2025

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Once the Titans drafted Cam Ward first overall in April, the measure of this season became his growth.

The wins have been scarce and the roster around him remains thin. But by that standard, the Titans are seeing what they hoped to see late in his rookie season.

Ward spent most of the year saying that winning was everything. Then, after the Titans beat Cleveland on Dec. 7, he said winning felt the same as losing. That answer didn't sit especially well with veterans or coaches.

After Sunday's 26-9 win over the Chiefs, Jeffery Simmons jabbed him.

"Don't be The Grinch," Simmons told him.

This time, Ward sounded different.

"It was a good win because it was the first time we played good enough complementary, all three phases," he said.

That mattered because this was the most complete version of Ward the Titans have seen. He stayed within the structure of the offense, avoided negative plays and didn't force throws that weren't there. He was in command, not in a sling-it-everywhere way, but in how he ran the offense and managed the game around him.

Ward was decisive, completing a season-high 75 percent of his throws for 228 yards. He threw two touchdown passes for the third straight game and posted his best passer rating at 122.3. The inaccurate throws didn't matter as much. There were fewer of them and they were less costly. He ran four times for only 9 yards, but they didn't need him in that department the way they have at other times, when Tony Pollard and Tyjae Spears were not getting things done.

The Titans gave him help again. Pollard topped 100 rushing yards for the third consecutive week, allowing Ward to play on schedule.

The defense did its part as well, stifling Gardner Minshew before he left with a knee injury, and after he reportedly tore his ACL in the second quarter, the Chiefs' little-known third-stringer, Chris Oladokun. Kansas City gained just 133 net yards and converted just one of nine third downs.

The game turned early in the third quarter. With a narrow 9-6 lead, Ward guided a drive that seized control. He hit Elic Ayomanor for 25 yards, found Chim Dike for 30 more, and capped it with a 1-yard touchdown pass to Dike.

"Been a while since we did that, that was awesome," Peter Skoronski said. "Cam made some great plays to extend the drive, and that's what you want to have at quarterback."

Jihad Ward, now in his 10th season with his seventh team, has watched enough locker rooms to recognize progress when it shows up.

"They're trusting the process and everything is more calm," he said. "I'm glad everybody is coming together with good chemistry."

The Titans host the Saints next week. New Orleans came into Week 16 with the NFL's 26th-rated run defense by yardage.

Tennessee's offensive line could pave the way for Pollard to get into triple figures again and make things easier for Ward and the passing game.

Then comes Week 18 in Jacksonville, another chance to measure progress.

The Titans averaged 12.4 offensive points in their first 12 games. Over their last three, that number has jumped to 26.3. A softer stretch of the schedule has helped. Cleveland is the worst team they've faced. Kansas City is coming off a long playoff run. Arizona, the victim of the Week 5 win, has struggled as well.

But the Titans also played the league's toughest schedule and don't need to apologize for progress when it finally appears.

"I think the past three weeks our offense has performed close to where we want to," said Dike, who set a new single-season franchise record for kickoff return yards with 1,535.

The record won't tell the story of this season. Ward's command of the offense might.

TITANS KNOCK GARDNER MINSHEW OUT OF GAME AND END 11-GAME HOME SKID, BEATING CHIEFS 26-9

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Titans spent a few extra minutes celebrating a rare achievement for a franchise struggling through its fourth consecutive losing season.

The first home victory in more than a year deserves to be enjoyed.

Cam Ward threw for 228 yards and two touchdowns, and the Titans snapped an 11-game home skid by beating the Kansas City Chiefs 26-9 on Sunday.

“What a great team win,” interim coach Mike McCoy said. “That’s the way it’s supposed to be. It’s been a long time coming since we’ve won a home game here.”

The Titans (3-12) improved to 1-7 at home this season, ending a skid that matched the franchise’s worst since moving to Tennessee in 1997. They lost 11 straight in 2014-15, a stretch that also featured a coach fired early in his second season and finishing with an interim coach. Sunday was their first home win since Nov. 3, 2024.

“It’s a good win just because it was the first time we played good enough, complementary, all three phases,” Ward said.

With two games left, the Chiefs (6-9) are assured of their first losing record since 2012 — their most recent season without Andy Reid as their coach. Kansas City has lost four straight, its longest skid since 2017, and six of seven.

“Nobody likes to lose in this business,” Reid said. “But my hat goes off for the guys that put together all these years. That’s part of it. We can learn from it and need to do that going forward. Sometimes a good kick in the tail there helps you, coaches and players.”

A week after Chiefs quarterback Patrick Mahomes suffered a season-ending torn ACL, his backup, Gardner Minshew, was knocked out of the game with a knee injury early in the second quarter. Reid said he didn’t have any results after the game and that Minshew will have an MRI exam.

Ward posted his highest passer rating of this season at 122.3, and he overtook Marcus Mariota for the most yards passing by a rookie for the franchise. He helped the Titans roll up a season-high 376 yards of offense against a Chiefs defense that came in as the NFL’s eighth-stingiest in yards allowed.

The rookie threw a shovel pass to Chig Okonkwo that went 7 yards to put the Titans ahead to stay late in the first half. Ward also found fellow rookie Chimere Dike for a 1-yard TD in the third quarter.

Tony Pollard ran for 102 yards, giving him three straight 100-yard rushing games for the first time in his career. Tyjae Spears added a 4-yard rushing TD, and Joey Slye had a 27-yard field goal for the final margin.

Three-time Pro Bowl defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons tackled Kareem Hunt in the end zone for a safety and a 2-0 lead early in the second quarter. Simmons also batted down a pair of passes. The Titans finished with four sacks.

“Once again, Jeff’s Jeff,” McCoy said. “What he’s done, getting the safety, the way he played, the ways he leads. It’s unbelievable.”

The battered Chiefs came in with Mahomes on injured reserve along with right tackle Jawaan Taylor. They also declared nine players out Friday, including five starters, led by wide receiver Rashee Rice, left tackle Jaylon Moore and cornerback Trent McDuffie.

Minshew made his first start of the season. After he got hurt, the Chiefs turned to Chris Oladokun, just signed to the roster from the practice squad, to play in his second career game.

“I probably could give him better stuff to work with,” Reid said of Oladokun. “In particular, give him some more reps during the week. He didn’t have any reps to lead him in, but for what he was asked to do, I thought he did a nice job.”

Oladokun handed off on his first five snaps. Then he connected with Travis Kelce for his first NFL completion, and Oladokun drove the Chiefs to a trio of field goals by Harrison Butker. The quarterback finished 11 of 16 for 111 yards.

Simmons fails to report

The Titans had a 1-yard TD run by Pollard taken off the board with around 4 minutes left. Simmons was flagged for illegal formation for not reporting as eligible to referee Clete Blakeman.

The defensive tackle thought he was too big to miss.

“I mean, I’m a defensive player,” Simmons said. “You see I wear a big arm brace, red sleeve, looking right at you, and I’m throwing my arm up and rubbing my chest (pointing out his No. 98).”

Injuries

Titans LT Dan Moore hurt a right knee early in the second quarter but returned. CB Marcus Harris hurt a knee in the second quarter and didn’t return.

10 BRANDON ALLEN

QUARTERBACK • 6'2" • 209 LBS
COLLEGE: ARKANSAS • ACQUIRED: UNRESTRICTED FREE AGENT (SF) - 2025
NFL EXPERIENCE (NFL/TITANS): 9/1 • HOMETOWN: FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.
GAMES PLAYED/GAMES STARTED: 18/10 (PLAYOFFS: 0/0)

PRO: The Titans signed Brandon Allen as a free agent during the 2025 offseason to bring experience to the quarterback room. The 6-foot-2-inch quarterback has appeared in 18 games with 10 starts in his NFL career. He spent the last two seasons with the San Francisco 49ers where he saw action in three games with one start. Allen's most extensive action came in 2020 when he started five games for the Cincinnati Bengals. The Fayetteville, Ark., native has completed 166 of 293 passes for 1,810 yards and 11 touchdowns in nine seasons. Allen has also spent time with the Jacksonville Jaguars (2017-18), L.A. Rams (2017-18) and Denver Broncos (2019).

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:
• Allen won his first career start against Cleveland on Nov. 3, 2019 by posting a passer rating of 125.6. He completed 12 of his 20 passes for 193 yards and two scores, including a 75-yard touchdown to tight end Noah Fant.
• On Dec. 27, 2020 on the road in Houston, Allen notched his second win as a starter. Allen began the game with seven consecutive completions and finished with a career-best 371 yards with two touchdowns in the 37-31 victory.

TITANS TIDBITS:
• Allen has been coached by Brian Callahan before when the Titans head coach served as the Cincinnati Bengals offensive coordinator while Allen played there from 2020-22. Allen started five games during the 2020 season after the Bengals' Joe Burrow suffered a season-ending injury. "I don't think people have enough respect for what Brandon Allen is," Callahan told Titans.com upon Allen's signing with the team. "Ultimately, Brandon has played 10 years for a reason."
• The tie between the Allen family and the University of Arkansas runs very deep. Allen's father, Bobby, spent over 20 years at the school as a position coach for the defensive line, linebackers, cornerbacks and free safeties and served as the team's defensive coordinator in 1998 and 2000. Allen's younger brother, Austin, led the SEC with 3,340 passing yards to go with 25 touchdown passes in 2016.
• In 2014, Arkansas super fan Canaan Sandy was able to score a touchdown during the Razorbacks' spring game when Allen handed him the ball and he ran for a 50-yard touchdown in front of fans. Sandy is a dedicated fan with special needs and formed a relationship with Allen among other Arkansas players and staff through his commitment to attending many of the school's athletic events.

• The Fayetteville, Ark., native was selected by the Jacksonville Jaguars in the sixth round (201st overall) of the 2016 NFL Draft.
• Waived by the Jaguars on Sept. 3, 2017.

48 JOE BACHIE

LINEBACKER • 6'2" • 235 LBS
COLLEGE: MICHIGAN STATE • ACQUIRED: FREE AGENT - 2025
NFL EXPERIENCE (NFL/TITANS): 5/1 • HOMETOWN: BROOK PARK, OHIO
GAMES PLAYED/GAMES STARTED: 64/7 (PLAYOFFS: 3/0)

PRO: The Titans signed Joe Bachie to the team's practice squad in mid-October and quickly added him to the active roster to add depth on special teams and in the linebacker corps. Prior to joining the Titans, the 6-foot-2-inch, 235-pounder spent five games with the Indianapolis Colts at the beginning of the 2025 campaign. The Brook Park, Ohio, native played four seasons with the Cincinnati Bengals (2021-24) and also spent time with the Philadelphia Eagles (2020) and New Orleans Saints (2020).

TITANS TIDBITS:
• Bachie is the son of a hard-nosed, get-your-hands-dirty concrete installer and he learned at a young age the importance of hard work. Growing up, he was constantly with his father, Joe Sr., as he coached the local high school football team and he'd hang around the weight room and sit in on film sessions. Even when he had time off from playing football at Michigan State, Joe Sr. would take him on concrete jobs. It was all gas, no brakes, and Bachie credits that mindset to helping him reach the NFL.

CAREER TRANSACTIONS:
• The Brook Park, Ohio, native was originally signed by the New Orleans Saints as an undrafted free agent on April 27, 2020.
• Waived by the Saints on Sept. 5, 2020 and signed to the team's practice squad a day later.

36 JULIUS CHESTNUT

RUNNING BACK • 5'11" • 228 LBS
COLLEGE: SACRED HEART • ACQUIRED: FREE AGENT - 2022
NFL EXPERIENCE (NFL/TITANS): 4/4 • HOMETOWN: BOWIE, MD.
GAMES PLAYED/GAMES STARTED: 41/0 (PLAYOFFS: 0/0)

PRO: The Titans signed Julius Chestnut as an undrafted free agent following the 2022 NFL Draft to provide depth to the running back rotation. The 5-foot-11-inch, 228-pounder possesses excellent play strength as a bigger-bodied running back and also adds value on special teams. In 2024, he set career highs with 22 carries for 102 yards and ranked second on the team with 13 kickoff returns for 337 yards. The Bowie, Md., native logged 593 carries for 3,467 yards (5.8-yard avg.) and 29 touchdowns over four seasons at Sacred Heart (2018-21).

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:
• In the Titans' 2024 season opener at Chicago, Chestnut recorded his first career fumble recovery, jumping on a Velus Jones muffed kicked in the first quarter.

• His father, Keith, owns a landscaping company. Throughout high school and college summer breaks, Chestnut would wake up at 5 a.m. to help load trucks and lay mulch.
• Despite having the opportunity to enter the transfer portal and play for a larger program, Chestnut chose to remain at FCS-level Sacred Heart because of his relationships at the school and within the program. "Everybody thinks about it," Chestnut said. "But I was like, why would I leave a place where people love me and care about me? If I left, would I get the same love that I get here? I don't think so. The coaches care about me — and I care about them, as well. I've made a lot of good friends here, met a lot of good people, and there are a lot of connections I can make in the outside world from here. So I was like, no — no way I can do that."
• In 2022, Chestnut became the second player from Sacred Heart University to appear in an NFL game, joining former Bills defensive back Jon Corto (2008-10).

SAFETY • 5'11" • 210 LBS
COLLEGE: IOWA • ACQUIRED: 4TH ROUND - 2019
NFL EXPERIENCE (NFL/TITANS): 7/7 • HOMETOWN: MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

CAPTAIN: 2025

PRO: The Titans traded up to select Amani Hooker with the 116th overall pick in the fourth round of the 2019 NFL Draft. The 5-foot-11-inch, 210-pound defender was coveted for his versatility, having played safety, and a hybrid linebacker/cornerback position at Iowa. Hooker played in 80 games in his first six NFL seasons and amassed 315 tackles, 12 interceptions and 31 passes defensed. He will be relied upon for his defensive leadership and saavy ballhawking ability in the Titans' secondary.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:
• In 2024, Hooker led the team with a career-high five interceptions while tying for the team lead with nine passes defensed.
• In 2023, Hooker started 13 games at safety and ranked fourth on the team with a career-best 80 tackles and finished second on the squad with seven passes defensed.
• In 2020, Hooker tied for the team lead with four interceptions while posting 44 tackles and eight passes defensed.

TITANS TIDBITS:
• Hooker was named a finalist for Minnesota's Mr. Football in 2015. Yet he had just two FBS scholarship offers. When the in-state university showed hesitancy after multiple workouts, Hooker knew he belonged at Iowa saying, "love who loves me."
• In February 2019, Hooker helped crowdfund about $1,200 for the Park Center high school football program through a Pledge-It campaign raising a dollar amount for every inch of his vertical jump at the NFL Scouting Combine. His 37-inch jump ranked fifth among safeties and equaled money for better equipment at his alma mater.
• Amani's brother, Quinton, played basketball for North Dakota and helped take the team to the NCAA tournament his senior year. Quinton was Minnesota's Mr. Basketball in high school and currently plays basketball professionally in Italy. For the past three years, the brothers have hosted a camp in their hometown, bringing together kids from all over the Brooklyn Park area to learn about both football and basketball.

PRO: The Titans signed Arden Key early in the 2023 offseason to add experience and bolster the defensive front. The Louisiana State product possesses a unique ability to come off the edge as a pass rusher and use his speed, athleticism and long arms to get to the quarterback. The 6-foot-5-inch, 240-pound defender originally entered the NFL as a third-round pick of the Oakland Raiders in 2018 and spent his first three campaigns with the organization. Over the next two seasons with the San Francisco 49ers (2021) and Jacksonville Jaguars (2022), Key saw action in all 34 contests and amassed 49 tackles, 11 sacks, 10 stops for loss and 63 quarterback pressures. In two season with the Titans, Key has racked up 12.5 sacks, ranking second on the team during that period.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:
• In 2024, Key logged career marks with 15 starts at outside linebacker, 42 tackles and a personal best-tying 6.5 sacks.
• In 2023, Key played in all 17 contests in his first season with the Titans and ranked second on the team with 57 quarterback pressures and third on the squad with six sacks.

TITANS TIDBITS:
• While preparing for the 2018 NFL Draft, Key decided to capitalize on his opportunities in the spotlight to help others. Key utilized his long jump at the Louisiana State Pro Day to support the organization "No Kid Hungry" to raise money for food for insecure children and their famillies, raising more funds with each inch he jumped.
• His father, Arden Key Sr., played point guard and shooting guard at Jacksonville State and also coached Arden Jr. in football.
• Key comes from a large family that includes four sets of twins, all who share in his athleticism on the basketball court. Arden's twin, Angel, was a cheerleader for her brother's football team.

CAREER TRANSACTIONS:
• The Atlanta, Ga., native was selected by the Oakland Raiders in the third round (87th overall) of the 2018 NFL Draft.
• Released by the Raiders on April 15, 2021.
• Signed by the San Francisco 49ers as a free agent on April 23, 2021.
• Signed by the Jacksonville Jaguars as an unrestricted free agent on March 30, 2022.

PRO: The Titans signed Tony Pollard early in the 2024 offseason to add experience and a playmaking threat to the offensive backfield. The 6-foot, 209-pounder entered the NFL as a fourth-round pick of the Dallas Cowboys in 2019. The Memphis product served primarily as a backup during his first three seasons with the Cowboys before enjoying a breakout 2022 campaign with 1,007 rushing yards and 12 total touchdowns which led to his first career Pro Bowl nod. Dallas used the franchise tag on Pollard heading into the 2023 season, and he responded with 1,005 yards on the ground and six scores. In his first season with the Titans, Pollard totaled career-highs in carries (260) and rushing yards (1,079).

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:
• In 2024, Pollard started 16 games and ranked third in the AFC with a career-best 1,079 rushing yards on a career-high 260 carries.
• In 2023, Pollard started all 17 games for the first time in his career and led the Cowboys with 1,005 rushing yards on a career-high 252 carries with six touchdowns.

TITANS TIDBITS:
• Pollard's family owns Pollard's Bar-B-Q restaurant in his hometown of Memphis. Starting from humble beginnings, Pollard's was first established as a mobile catering business in 1995. As the demand for their unique southern style of Memphis BBQ grew, Pollard's reopened in the fall of 1996 as a small carry-out catering business. In 2011, Pollard's answered the overwhelming demands of its growing customer base by becoming a dine-in restaurant. With the new expansion came bigger and better things, such as an expanded menu and an upscale renovation by Food Network's Robert Irvine from Restaurant Impossible.
• Pollard was a dynamic kickoff returner at the collegiate level, tying a FBS record with seven career kickoff returns for touchdowns during his Memphis career.

CAREER TRANSACTIONS:
• The Memphis, Tenn., native was selected by the Dallas Cowboys in the fourth round (128th overall) the 2019 NFL Draft.
• Designated by the Cowboys as the non-exclusive franchise player on March 6, 2023 and signed the franchise tag tender on March 23, 2023.

COMMUNITY MAN OF THE YEAR: 2023, 2024, 2025

He was rewarded with a multi-year contract extension during the 2023 offseason. The 6-foot-4-inch, 305-pound defensive lineman provides a rare blend of size, power and quickness, making him a disruptive force in the middle of the defense.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

• In 2024, for the second consecutive year, Simmons was named the Titans nominee for the NFL's Walter Payton Man of the Year Award that recognizes a player for outstanding community service, as well as excellence on the field. "Being considered for Walter Payton Man of the Year for a second time is truly one of the greatest honors of my career," he said. "I am grateful for the opportunity to play the game, but even more thankful for the platform it offers me and the ways I can bless others." Simmons finished the season with a career-high 76 tackles and five sacks in 16 games played.

Among all defensive tackles in the NFL, his 8.5 sacks ranked sixth.

• Simmons was one of only five NFL players to produce at least 50 tackles, eight sacks and six passes defensed in 2021, joining Maxx Crosby, Cameron Jordan, Cameron Heyward and T.J. Watt. Simmons and Heyward were the only interior defensive linemen in the league to accomplish the feat.

• In a divisional playoff game against Cincinnati on Jan. 22, 2022, he set a franchise postseason record with three sacks.

TITANS TIDBITS:

• In July 2023, Simmons paid homage to his hometown of Macon, Miss., with his first 'Community Fun Day,' which included local food vendors, games, inflatables and fireworks. He was then honored by city officials with a key to the city. Simmons has continued the tradition each year and in 2025, Jelly Roll made a special appearance to perform at the 'Community Fun Day.'

• In July 2022, the official ribbon cutting was held at the Jeffery B. Simmons Field House at Noxubee County High School in Macon, Miss. Simmons donated more than $50,000 to upgrade his former high school's athletic facilities. During the same week, he donated $75,000 to Starkville (Miss.) Parks and Recreation to be used for a new turf field at the Starkville Sportsplex. The field was also named in his honor.

PRO: The Titans signed Joey Slye during the 2025 offseason to add a strong leg and veteran experience to the kicking game. Prior to arriving in Tennessee, the 5-foot-11-inch, 213-pounder appeared in 95 games over six seasons with the Carolina Panthers (2019-20), Houston Texans (2022), San Francisco 49ers (2022), Washington Commanders (2022-23) and New England Patriots (2024). CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:
• In 2024, Slye connected on a 63-yard field goal as a member of the New England Patriots. The 63-yarder tied for the fourth-longest field goal in NFL history. Slye became one of nine NFL players to have two 60-yard field goals in a career (connected on a 61-yarder in 2023).

TITANS TIDBITS:
• Slye lost his older brother, A.J., to leukemia. Slye has a tattoo on his right shoulder that shows a picture of he and A.J. holding hands the last time they played football together in high school at North Stafford. The Slye family started the SlyeStrong#6 Foundation in honor of A.J. Every year, the foundations hosts a handful of events and charity drive to benefit hospitals and families navigating a cancer diagnoses. The Foundation also gives out six $2,000 scholarships. This year A.J. would've turned 31 and in honor of that, Slye is working to raise $310,000 for the Leukemia Lymphoma Society.
• While he was growing up, Slye's father worked for the United States Army so the family moved around a lot living in California, Montana, New Mexico before settling in Virginia.

2 TYJAE SPEARS

COLLEGE: TULANE • ACQUIRED: 3RD ROUND - 2023
NFL EXPERIENCE (NFL/TITANS): 3/3 • HOMETOWN: PONCHATOULA, LA.
GAMES PLAYED/GAMES STARTED: 40/2 (PLAYOFFS: 0/0)

PRO: The Titans selected Tyjae Spears in the third round of the 2023 NFL Draft. The 5-foot-11-inch, 195-pounder is a dynamic and explosive running back with superb instincts and the ability to play on all downs on offense and contribute in the return game. As a rookie, Spears appeared in all 17 games and accumulated 838 scrimmage yards to rank seventh in franchise history among rookie running backs. His totals included 453 yards and two touchdowns on the ground and 385 receiving yards and a score as a receiver. The Ponchatoula, La., native spent four years at Tulane (2019-22) prior to entering the NFL. Chosen by the Titans with the 81st overall draft pick, he became the highest pick from Tulane since running back Matt Forte in 2008 (44th overall by Chicago).

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:
• Spears has had a knack for finding the end zone during his first two NFL campaigns. He has scored eight touchdowns (six rushing and two receiving) from 2023-2024.
• As a rookie in 2023, Spears carried the ball 100 times for 453 yards and two touchdowns, and he added 52 receptions for 385 yards and one score. His 838 scrimmage yards ranked seventh in franchise history among rookie running backs, and the total also placed fourth among rookie running backs in 2023 behind Atlanta's Bijan Robinson, Detroit's Jahmyr Gibbs and Miami's De'Von Achane.
• Spears' 20 total third-down conversions in 2023, which included 11 receptions and nine rushing attempts, led all NFL running backs, including rookies and veterans.
• With 52 receptions in 2023, Spears became the franchise's first rookie running back with at least 50 receptions since Sid Blanks in 1964 (56).

TITANS TIDBITS:
• In the sixth round of the 2024 NFL Draft, the Titans selected one of Spears' best friends and his former college roommate, Tulane wide receiver Jha'Quan Jackson. Spears was with Jackson when he received the phone call from the Titans during the draft.
• Spears has worked with a non-profit organization in New Orleans called Son of a Saint, which provides "mentorship, education, recreation, camaraderie, cultural enrichment, emotional support and helping to fill the void for dozens of fatherless young men."
• Growing up on the New Orleans area, his favorite player was former Saints running back Reggie Bush.
• Spears is one of nine children in his family (five brothers and three sisters).
• His first job as a teenager was working at Walmart.

CAREER TRANSACTIONS:
• The Ponchatoula, La., native was selected by the Titans in the third round (81st overall) of the 2023 NFL Draft.

ADJ KO: Adjusted kickoffs are used to compute Avg. Team Drive Start. Adjusted kickoffs do not include onside kicks or kickoffs at the end of a half unless either kickoff is returned for a touchdown. Adjusted kickoffs also do not include non-onside kickoffs that result in the kicking team ultimately retaining possession.
IN20: The number of drives that start inside (not including) the 20-yard line.

RIVALRY VS TEXANS MATTERS TO AMY ADAMS STRUNK. TITANS MADE SURE TO DEDICATE WIN TO HER

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
NOVEMBER 24, 2024

HOUSTON — Moments after securing the first AFC South win and first sack of his NFL career, Tennessee Titans rookie defensive tackle T'Vondre Sweat came running into the locker room from the playing field at NRG Stadium, one emotion on his lips.

"This one was for Miss Amy," Sweat screamed, drawing applause from a small gaggle of fans gathered in the tunnel.

Sweat and the Titans bested their rival Houston Texans 32-27 on Sunday, the team's first win over the Texans in two years and the first in coach Brian Callahan's Titans tenure. After the game, owner Amy Adams Strunk addressed the team in the locker room, and players said she got emotional in doing so.

Callahan downplayed the narrative in the week leading up to the game, but after the win, he admitted that Adams Strunk and her family have some extra personal feelings about games against and in Houston, the city where her father founded the Titans franchise and the home of the organization until 1996.

"She was thrilled. Mainly because we won the game. But it’s OK to admit that these things sometimes mean more," Callahan said. "I know it does for her and it does for us. We wanted to make sure that we put on a great performance down here. We had a chance to win the game and we did. I think she’s more than anything else just proud of our football team and the way they came down here and fought and played."

The Texans swept the Titans in 2023, including an embarrassing loss in Nashville where the Titans wore their Houston Oilers throwback uniforms but lost 19-16 in overtime to a Texans team that was missing its starting quarterback.

Now the Titans are 1-0 against the division-leading Texans in 2024, doing so in electric fashion with touchdowns of 38 and 70 yards, plus two interceptions and four sacks, one of which registered two points for a safety. The Titans outgained the Texans by more than 100 yards, snapped running back Joe Mixon's six-game touchdown streak by holding him to 22 yards on 14 carries, and bullied the Texans' impressive rush defense with 132 ground yards on 33 carries.

Even the young players who haven't been in the organization long came to appreciate why this rivalry game matters so much.

"Our coach gave us the speech this week about how much it meant to (Adams Strunk) and her family," rookie cornerback Jarvis Brownlee Jr. said. "Just told us the history about it. That was the main goal. This game is a little more personal. Not just because of the rivalry, but because of Miss Amy, too, as well. We just wanted to go out here and give it our all. For Nashville, for Miss Amy and for everybody that’s a part of this organization. They deserve it."

THE DEAL BEHIND THE DOME: AMY ADAMS STRUNK AND HER STADIUM-WINNING DRIVE

BY JULIA MASTERS
NASHVILLE BUSINESS JOURNAL
AUGUST 24, 2023

According to those who know her, Amy Adams Strunk takes a small-business leader's approach to her role as controlling owner of the Tennessee Titans. She asks questions, identifies strong leaders and loves hanging out with fans enjoying a hot dog at a tailgate.

Since becoming controlling owner in 2015, her leadership style has seen six winning seasons, an AFC Championship appearance and contributed to Nashville playing host to the 2019 NFL Draft. In what may be the biggest accomplishment of her tenure, state and city leaders, after protracted debate, this year approved a $2.1 billion domed stadium for the team, which is expected to be completed in 2027.

Set to anchor Nashville's reimagined East Bank, the stadium is poised to become one of Music City's most transformative projects — prospects that are as concerning to some residents as they are exciting to others.

Adams Strunk made few public remarks throughout the approval process, allowing Titans president and CEO Burke Nihill to be the primary face of the project. Now, she shares her behind the scenes view of the deal in an email interview with the Business Journal. The following has been edited for length and clarity.

When the deal got approved, what was that feeling like, and where were you? Who was the first person you called? I was with my family, and Burke was keeping me updated throughout the evening. My first feeling when the stadium was approved was overwhelming gratitude. We moved here in the mid-1990s, and we're so humbled by the support this city and state has showed our team since day one. It's such a great feeling to know the Titans will be a part of this incredible community for another generation.

What excites you the most about bringing this deal to Nashville and Titans fans? What does it mean to the city? I'm thrilled that Titans fans will have a new home with the great fan experience they deserve. I'm also excited to see the biggest events in the world pass through Nashville's new stadium. But it has always been hard for me to think about this project without being most excited about what it means for Nashville as a whole. We've been a part of the conversations about the future of the East Bank for the past several years. While it won't be without its challenges, I've always supported the city's vision to transform the stadium property into something truly special for the city. Having seen the planning work, I truly believe the East Bank will be a celebrated area of Nashville for generations to come. To think the city's beautiful stadium building will be a part of that neighborhood … it's all so exciting.

How will you evaluate the success of the new stadium? How should the public evaluate its success? There will be things we will track that I'm excited to see, like the success of our events and how many new jobs and opportunities the stadium will bring. But I'm also the kind of person who likes to go directly to the fans and hear what they think. I like visiting with them before our events and listening to their real, direct feedback. We've engaged a lot with fans during this process and are continuing to do that now, and their feedback has been really helpful in shaping our vision for the new stadium.

What do you hope the East Bank looks like in five years? The future of the East Bank makes me so excited for Nashville. I love that we'll have large, beautiful parks, especially on the riverfront. I love the idea that the former stadium site will be used for transportation. From everything I've seen, I think the East Bank will be a place where everyone in Nashville will want to spend time. We've said before that we want the area around the stadium to feel like a neighborhood with a stadium in it, and not a stadium with a neighborhood built around it, and we look forward to being partners in that vision.

Initial renderings for a proposed Tennessee Titans stadium show outdoor terraces.

What was the most important thing to you during this process? The most important thing to me during the process was finding a long-term answer, and not dedicate resources to a short-term one that we'd just have to address again in a few years.

Was there something you did compromise on? All of the groups involved — the mayor's office, the state of Tennessee and so many others — were such great partners through this whole process. Negotiating a 30-year agreement takes a lot of time, and there was compromise during negotiation from everyone. I'm so glad we landed on a solution that resulted in a winfor all involved.

How do you see your job differently now? Did the process reveal anything or teach you anything new about the Titans' business? I'm focused on helping our football team and organization perform at our best, and that will never change. That's the great thing about our mission statement, "Win, Serve, Entertain," because it's our North Star regardless of what's right in front of us at the time. Stadium construction is new to most of us in the organization, but we have a great team of people with a lot of experience working to make sure we get it right.

What lesson from your dad [Bud Adams, the team's late founder] stuck with you throughout this process? My dad loved this city, and I thought about him often throughout this process. I know he would be proud to know the team he founded so many years ago will be a part of this community for decades to come. I want to honor his legacy and make this city proud.

What does it mean to you to be a female owner in the NFL, and how have you navigated that space? I talk with other female owners about how it would be amazing one day to have two female NFL owners playing against each other in the Super Bowl. At the end of the day, it's the same for any team owner, male or female — we just want to beat each other. It's important to me to support other women who are interested in getting involved in the NFL. We started the Amy Adams Strunk Women in Football internship a few years back, which is a program aimed at recruiting more women in sports operations roles. Our first two interns were so outstanding that we extended their time with us, then we eventually hired Mical Johnson full-time as a scouting assistant. We've also grown girls flag football here in several counties around Middle Tennessee, and this year the athletes from [Metro Nashville Public Schools] participated in a panel where they got to talk directly with some of our female leaders about different career paths in sports. We have nine women in vice president roles in our organization across a variety of departments, and I'm very proud of our progress in that area.

At what point did you feel the most confident in the deal? When were you most worried? Getting to a final agreement was a long, diligent process, but it needed to be to make sure we came to the right solution. We certainly encountered challenges along the way, but everyone involved recognized that old deal didn't make sense anymore and that we needed a new, long-term deal that made sense for all parties.

If you encounter a skeptic of the stadium, what is your message to them? I'm looking forward to making them proud of how we serve this community over the next 30 years and beyond. Again, this has always been bigger than just building a stadium. The new agreement secures our home in Nashville for the next several decades, and we take that commitment very seriously. We understand we have a platform here, and we're going to use it to make our community a better place and we're all partners in that.

THE STORY BEHIND THE TITANS UNVEILING OILERS THROWBACK UNIFORMS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 23, 2023

NASHVILLE – "Oilers history is Titans history."

Those are the words of Titans controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk from a year ago, when the organization was exploring the possibility of wearing Oilers throwback uniforms, with the classic oil derrick logo on the helmets.

The possibility has turned into reality, and now fans of the organization can see them for themselves.

The Titans will wear the same uniforms the Houston Oilers wore for nearly two decades in Houston, until 1998, when the franchise also wore them as the Tennessee Oilers. The uniforms represent the longest span of Oilers uniforms in franchise history, and arguably the most beloved uniform.

The uniforms will pay homage to the Luv Ya' Blue era.

"It allows us to honor as many players as we can, because it covers so much time," said Surf Melendez, Vice President and Executive Creative Director for the Titans. "It also represented our transition to Tennessee, because we wore these uniforms in Tennessee as well."

The Titans will wear the uniforms in two games this fall, both at home. The organization inquired about wearing them for a road game in Miami as well, but it doesn't appear that will come to fruition.

The light blue Oilers throwbacks will replace the light blue "Titans" jerseys as the third jersey, joining the navy and the white uniforms.

Amy Adams Strunk said last year the team wanted to continue paying homage to the franchise's history. The organization has honored Houston Oilers players at alumni events in years past, and a number of Oilers are in the franchise's Ring of Honor.

The Oilers left Houston for Tennessee after the 1996 season and played a year in Memphis, in 1997, before playing in Nashville at Vanderbilt Stadium in 1998. The Tennessee Oilers became the Tennessee Titans in time for the 1999 season.

"Oilers history is Titans history," Strunk said last year. "We know our fans feel passionately about showcasing that legacy on game day, and we're actively working on making throwback jerseys possible in the near future. Stay tuned!"

Those who stay tuned will see this:

-"Columbia Blue" jerseys with red around white on the numbers, and names on the back, with a red, white and light blue band on the sleeves.

-White helmets, with the famed oil derrick, with red facemasks and red stripes outside of a thicker light blue stripe on the top.

-White pants, or britches, with red stripes on each side of a thicker light blue stripe down the side.

-Red and white stripes on light blue and white socks.

The words 'Luv Ya Blue" will be on the back neckline of the jerseys.

Players will have the option of wearing red sleeves, red gloves, and red cleats to add to the look.

Current Titans Derrick Henry, safety Kevin Byard, defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons and quarterback Ryan Tannehill have already worn them – they took part in a photo shoot earlier this offseason.

"They loved them," Melendez said of the current Titans. "They really loved them."

Former Oilers have also seen them – Warren Moon, Robert Brazile and Elvin Bethea were given a sneak peek when they were in Nashville for an alumni event last year.

"They looooved them, and it took them back," Melendez said of the former Oilers. "The guys who wore the uniform, it took them back. And they were able to speak to the significance of wearing that uniform. This was an original AFL team, so there's a rich tradition there and now people are going to see this, and they are going to be reminded of this rich history."

Melendez knows fans are excited. The team has had Oilers merchandise available for two seasons and there has been an increased demand over the years.

Oilers jerseys are now on sale, and new merchandise will be available in the team store at Nissan Stadium.

"Amy is passionate about this, and we are lucky," Melendez said. "She loves Nashville, she loves Houston, and she loves those people. She lived it, and she's passionate about the Oilers history."

'EVERY DETAIL MATTERS': HOW AMY ADAMS STRUNK REINVENTED THE TENNESSEE TITANS

BY DENNIS FERRIER
FOX 17
FEBRUARY 1, 2022

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (WZTV) — When we think of what makes a pro football team great, we always talk about star players and coaches. But when it comes to the Tennessee Titans and their remarkable six-year streak of excellence, you have to leave the field to understand what has happened here.

It's 2015. The Tennessee Titans are the worst team in football. Their organization is small and, let's be nice here, not admired.

In walks Amy Adams Strunk—a woman with no experience in the NFL. The daughter of an eccentric billionaire. What are the chances she would be anything but more of the same old, same old?

"She took the first six months that she was in charge and just stayed in the back," said Titans announcer Mike Keith. "She wouldn't do interviews. She didn't get out in front with anything. She wanted to learn as much as she possibly could."

When she was ready, it was nothing short of a reinvention of the entire organization.

"Strip it down, challenge everything we value that just overhauled the culture both on the football team and on the business side of the organization," said Titans president Burke Nihill.

Nihill was one of her outside-of-the-box hires. A lawyer in retail and tech with no NFL background.

"I do think that professional sports lends itself to a wash, rinse, repeat cycle," said Nihill. "Every season you can kind of do the same things for a while and get away with it. And her mentality is 'Let's act like a start up, let's challenge everything, let's expect our best in every category of the business.'"

Although he won't take credit, Nihill was the one who decided to let Waverly High School play at Nissan Stadium after devastated floods gripped the community. That was a decision beyond inconvenient–a bold, impulsive act of service.

"When do we do it, it's the weekend after the first game," Keith said. "We played the home opener, we are going to Seattle the next weekend so everybody is going to travel. You've got the home opener and then you are going to the west coast and the organization does this on that Thursday night, Waverly is playing at Nissan stadium and we are going to make it happen. And I don't know anybody in the organization that just didn't pitch it. It was just one of the proudest moments that I've ever had of this entire organization."

Keep in mind this would have been unthinkable in the old days, you would have been laughed right out of the meeting.

"The service piece is really what has increasingly defined the people who work in this organization," said Nihill. "It's our heartbeat. It may sound cheesy, but the people who have come to our doors for whatever reason, it matters to them on a deeper level. We have paid a lot more attention to how we can leverage our platform, our resources to make Nashville a better place to live," said Nihill.

There's a famous story told around here. At a big staff meeting, Amy Adams Strunk said, "We have ugly tickets, and we will never go to the Super Bowl with ugly tickets." It was dead quiet in the room, maybe some skepticism. But now they believe everything matters.

Of course, none of it matters if you don't win football games. If you lose, you are viewed as a failure whatever you do for the community. That might not be fair, but it is an ugly truth.

Adams' first big hire was General Manager John Robinson. You know the winning streak started the same day as that hire.

And while it's pretty obvious he is a good judge of football players, their potential, what they have left in the tank, their value as a piece of the puzzle. What you don't know is his complete buy-in to the Titans culture.

"Everything matters, it's one of our mantras: everything matters," said Nihill. "Every bit of design around the stadium, our tickets, every detail matters. It also carries over to the football team. I have watched him walk around our practice field and pick up little pieces of athletic tape to make it so everything about everything we do is first class."

Even with the crushing loss to the Bengals. Even with a Super Bowl goal defeated for another year. The Titans will be back. Because it's just what they do.

"I tell people all the time, these are the good old days," added Keith. "Enjoy this because what you are seeing on and off the field from our organization, this is the best we have ever been in 23 years."

MEET BILLIONAIRE TENNESSEE TITANS OWNER AMY ADAMS STRUNK—AND NINE OTHER WOMEN CHANGING THE GAME IN THE NFL

BY AMY FELDMAN
FORBES
SEPTEMBER 23, 2022

Most female owners inherit a team from a father, husband or brother. Now some are buying their way into football. The Titans' titan goes deep on what it all means for the league.

Before the Tennessee Titans kicked off their NFL season with a home game against the New York Giants on September 11, team owner Amy Adams Strunk spent nearly two hours with tailgaters outside Nashville's Nissan Stadium. "Omigod, it's her," one young woman shouted, before asking for the requisite photos.

The fans, Adams Strunk says, are her favorite part of owning the team, which her late father Bud Adams founded (as the Houston Oilers in 1960) and of which she has been the controlling shareholder since 2015. "Our fans, to me, are not a statistic," she says. "I'm going to be the owner that comes up to you and thanks you."

At 66, Adams Strunk is worth $1.6 billion from her 50% stake in the Titans and is one of a growing number of women who own NFL teams: 18 of the league's 32 franchises are at least partially female-owned, with 10 listing women as majority owners or co-owners. Most inherited teams from their fathers, brothers or husbands—or, like the Buffalo Bills' Kim Pegula and the Cleveland Browns' Dee Haslam, bought into them with their husbands.

But there are signs of change—this summer, Ariel Investments' Mellody Hobson bought a 5.5% stake in the Denver Broncos for $245 million as part of the Waltons' ownership group that also brought in Carrie Walton Penner, granddaughter of Walmart founder Sam Walton, with a 30% stake.

"Fifty percent of our fans are women," says Adams Strunk, who is known as "Mom" to the Titans' faithful. "Even though we've never played the game, that doesn't mean we don't know the game. And we have some unique perspectives on reaching women that we can bring to the table."

While some female owners who inherited NFL teams are hands-off, Adams Strunk not only runs the Titans but has also delivered a stunning turnaround. Since 2016, the squad has had six winning seasons. More important, she helped bring the NFL draft to Nashville three years ago and has high hopes for the city to host a Super Bowl.

It's a vision her father could not have foreseen. Bud Adams, who died in 2013 at age 90, was a legend in professional football. A member of the Cherokee nation who made his fortune in oil, he was instrumental in founding the American Football League and started the Oilers for just $25,000. In 1997, when Houston wouldn't pony up cash to replace the aging Astrodome, he relocated the team to Nashville and its new 69,000-seat stadium.

"It was a game-changing moment for this city," recalls Butch Spyridon, CEO of the Nashville Convention & Visitors Corp. "It shocked the entire sports world, and Nashville started to believe in itself a little more."

But Bud Adams' death also led to a leadership struggle for the Titans as the team's losses piled up. Its ownership was split between his two daughters, Adams Strunk and Susie Adams Smith, and the wife and children of their brother, Kenneth Adams III, who died of suicide at 29 in 1987.

After a family scrum—which saw the ousting of her brother-in-law as CEO—Adams Strunk and her nephews wrested control of the team in 2015. "It was a hard decision," she says, "but my dad's legacy was very important to me and the boys."

Adams Strunk had grown up in football, but her father had never wanted his daughters working for the team. She had spent time as owner of a few of the family's car dealerships and oil interests, and raising horses (she still has a few dozen on the family ranch in Texas, along with plenty of rescue dogs). "I never thought—ever—that I would be running the football team," she says.

After she took over the Titans, she worked closely with her nephew, Kenneth Adams IV, who had worked for the team under her father since 2007, as well as with Steve Underwood, who she brought back from retirement as the team's top executive. Kenneth Adams, who is 38 and a Titans board member, says that having his aunt and other female owners running NFL teams makes a difference: "I think it's good for the NFL and we need it. It was a long time coming."

Adams Strunk brought in a new general manager, Jon Robinson, who was blunt about the team's problems on the field, and spent money on new facilities (including a new indoor training center) and new uniforms. "When you know you need to fix something you want someone telling you the brutal honest truth," Adams Strunk says. "Nothing is going to get solved if you don't know what needs to be done."

The willingness to spend money differentiated Adams Strunk from her frugal father. And while she could be tough when fixing problems, Jevon Kearse, the Titans' former defensive end, says it is her warmth that makes her a different kind of owner. "She's one of the first people to come up and give me a hug," he says. "Some of the owners come around for the

And all of that love has paid off. The value of the Titans' has more than doubled since 2015, to $3.5 billion from $1.5 billion, as revenue reached $481 million, according to Forbes' estimates. Even so, with the average NFL team now worth $4.5 billion and the Dallas Cowboys reaching a record $8 billion this year, the Titans remain No. 27 (of 32) on the list of most valuable NFL franchises.

Adams Strunk credits her success to having no preconceived notions about how to run a team. "Just because something has been done a certain way forever doesn't make it the right way anymore," she says, adding that it's often easier to come in with big ideas as an outsider. "We talk a lot about being a 60-year-old startup," says the team's CEO, Burke Nihill, who took over two years ago. "Amy has encouraged us to challenge everything."

Next up is the issue that vexed her father: a new stadium. While it is expected to cost more than $2 billion and the city has yet to sign off amid questions over taxpayer funding, Forbes has estimated that it could increase the Titans' value by $300 million. To pay for their share of the new stadium—the team ownership and an NFL loan are expected to cover at least $700 million—the family will sell some of its other assets. Adams Strunk believes a new stadium, which would be fully enclosed, could host not only the Titans but also concerts and, yes, that big game with the $7 million commercials.

Super Bowl aside, Adams Strunk thinks her father would be a fan of the job she's done. "I think if he was looking down now," she says, "he'd be super proud."

RAVENS FOURTH-ROUND ROOKIE CB JALYN ARMOUR-DAVIS' ATTITUDE ISN'T JUST MATURE. IT'S REFRESHING. | COMMENTARY

BY MIKE PRESTON
BALTIMORE SUN
AUGUST 3, 2022

A typical day during the fall and winter the last two years for Ravens rookie cornerback Jalyn Armour-Davis began with a 6 a.m. wake-up call followed by some form of weight training. Then it was off to classes for several hours before meeting with his position coach to break down film.

That would lead into treatment, followed by a team meeting, practice and tutoring. Armour-Davis would get home around 8:30 in the evening for some family time, a meal and another film session before heading to bed.

Then he would start again the next day.

It is a standard routine for most big-time college football players, except Amour-Davis, 22, got married to his high school sweetheart, Ahlea, in March 2019 and they have a 2-year-old daughter, Hazel Grace. And the team was Alabama, one of the most storied programs in the history of college football.

"It wasn't as tough as most thought it would be or was," Armour-Davis said. "I'm not saying it was easy, but it wasn't something that was stressing me in any way.

"I took on a similar role in high school. I went to a private school [St. Paul's Episcopal in Mobile, Alabama] that was very tough academically and played two sports. My mom [Johnta Davis] was a single mom and had to work extra to be able to take care of myself and two sisters [Brooklyn, 8, and Nyla, 5], so I was already doing things as a teenager that people do later in life."

Armour-Davis' attitude isn't just mature, but refreshing. This is the generation that cares more about themselves, with young kids quickly running away from responsibility and even faster from the consequences that might follow.

He is part of a draft class that might end up being one of the best in Ravens history. The team could start four rookies before the season ends, including Iowa center Tyler Linderbaum, Notre Dame safety Kyle Hamilton and Michigan outside linebacker David Ojabo.

And of course, there is Armour-Davis. Some draft experts labeled the fourth-round pick as a sleeper, and he has been impressive in all the offseason minicamps, as well as the first week of training camp.

Maybe it's because of his prototypical body type or that he played at Alabama, where coach Nick Saban's playbook is just as thick as the Ravens'.

But a lot of it has to do with his attitude and maturity, which are way beyond his years and among the reasons a lot of those inside The Castle are already rooting for him to make the roster.

That attitude was prevalent at Alabama. By the time he was married and a redshirt sophomore, his Crimson Tide teammates were already calling him an elder statesman.

"I wouldn't say I planned this, or it was a surprise," Armour-Davis said of having a family while in college. "My mom knew what type of person I was and that I enjoyed this type of responsibility. It was going to come soon, just didn't know it was going to be on this timeline. I just considered it another step in my life.

"Immediately in college, I was upgraded to the old head, old guard status. I had guys who were six-year seniors asking me advice on life, how do you do football and marriage? I was only 19 years old and they were treating me like an old head, even my family. I guess it's my new normal."

According to Armour-Davis, even his personal talks with Saban gravitated more around family than the usual player-coach conversations.

But they didn't need to talk about football. At 6 feet 1 and 195 pounds, Armour-Davis has that long, lean frame with long arms. He has great acceleration and quickness, running the 40-yard dash in 4.39 seconds.

He is big and strong enough to work through blocks and allowed only 30 catches on 49 targets for 209 yards during his final season at Alabama. He finished his redshirt junior year with three interceptions and 32 tackles.

He can play press coverage on the outside and is physical enough to play to match up with a slot receiver or tight end inside. Since drafting him, the Ravens have played him all over the field, which is the same way Alabama used him last season.

"That's the way it was in Tuscaloosa," Armour-Davis said. "Being able to play all over the field is not new to me. I want to stay on top of things and be available for every position so that when my name is called I can step in and not miss a beat."

The question one might be asking is if Armour-Davis was so good, why did he last until the fourth round?

There were some scouting reports that claimed he couldn't open up his hips immediately and run with receivers. That hasn't been a problem so far.

There were other reports that stated he was injury prone because a knee injury forced him to redshirt his freshman year and he missed two games last season with a muscle pull in the thigh area. And then there was criticism of Armour-Davis because he started only one season during his time at Alabama and could have played one more year.

But here is something to remember: Alabama plays in the Southeastern Conference and for a national championship pretty much every year. The Ravens can get a lot of value out of Armour-Davis, who has already moved his family to Baltimore.

“I am not a student-athlete anymore, it’s just business now, football all day,” Armour-Davis said. “I’m thankful that I went to Alabama. It prepared me for the heavy workload and the big playbook to get me adjusted. The outstanding players, outstanding coaching staff, accountability, leadership, attitude, winning standards, are the same here, the same things I felt in Tuscaloosa.

“I’m fully healthy. Everyone has their opinion and they are entitled to their opinion, but the Ravens drafted me and I’m appreciative of that. I waited all my life for draft day, and it was an emotional experience. Now, I just have to go out and prove the Ravens made the right choice.”

So far, the Ravens have no regrets.

FOR ALABAMA CB JALYN ARMOUR DAVIS, THE PROCESS MATTERS, AND NOTHING ELSE

BY IAN CUMMINGS
PRO FOOTBALL NETWORK
FEBRUARY 12, 2022

People don't know Alabama's Jalyn Armour-Davis like they've known past Crimson Tide cornerbacks. Even after a second-team All-SEC performance, and a career-altering campaign, there's still a sense that Armour-Davis is flying under the NFL Draft radar. But Armour-Davis isn't worried about commanding the spotlight, and he's not comparing himself to others. Armour-Davis cares about the process and nothing else. After all, the process has gotten him this far.

For Jalyn Armour-Davis, football has always been at the forefront

There's a light chime, and Armour-Davis enters the video call. He's soft-spoken, but there's a quiet, steady confidence in his voice. He's exactly where he wants to be, because being an NFL player is a dream he's had as far as he can remember.

"Football was something I was always interested in as a child," Armour-Davis said. "Obviously being from the state of Alabama, seeing Alabama play on Saturdays, it was something that you at least want to try. As a kid, I was fairly athletic, racing all the kids. I always liked to be a part of athletic events, so I was like, 'what's one way for me to go express it?' And that was on the football field. And once I started playing, I just never looked back."

Armour-Davis also played basketball and ran track, but there was something about the competitive nature of football that drew him to it. Living in Mobile only brought him closer to the sport, with the Senior Bowl rolling through each year — one of the top showcases for incoming NFL Draft prospects.

"Every year, my mom would allow one day out of the school week for me to go see the [Senior Bowl] practices. The games were always fun, but I was always way more interested in the practices, the 1-on-1's, just the practice environment. I thought it was more competitive. Every single year, being from Mobile, it was definitely a part of my agenda to make sure I made the Senior Bowl practice and the game. Every single year."

Each player that came through Mobile represented what Armour-Davis wanted to be. And soon enough, he'd get his chance to start climbing up the ladder.

Honing his talents in high school

It wasn't long before Armour-Davis became a star at St. Paul's Episcopal School. The Mobile native blossomed as a two-way standout, playing at both wide receiver and cornerback. Even to this day, Armour-Davis says his former experience as a wide receiver helps him at the cornerback position.

"Just kind of understanding what the guy on the other side is trying to do to you. The way he stems you on certain types of routes, why he may cut a split to run a certain type of route. Because I know when I was a receiver, I'm like 'Okay, I wanna stem it down a little bit so I can create space on this side of the field, or run this type of route.' When they cut their split, it can really mean something. Versus when they go wide, they don't have as much room to play with. So I had a better understanding of why they were doing certain things."

The recruitment process and coming to Alabama

Armour-Davis had offers to play receiver in college, but after talking with those in his circle, he chose to continue on his journey as a cornerback. As a four-star recruit and consensus top 250 national prospect, Armour-Davis drew interest from droves of Power Five programs. But if you're a kid from Alabama, you simply can't pass up a chance to play for the Crimson Tide.

Armour-Davis committed to Alabama in June of 2017, then officially signed his letter of intent in December. As it turns out, his final high school game — a Class 5A State Championship victory — was played in Bryant-Denny Stadium. It was surreal for Armour-Davis — as if he was looking at his future through a window.

"Yeah, it was really cool. In fact, that weekend was my official visit weekend. So I didn't even leave the city for another four or five days. It was also a great environment because of the state championship game. Spending the entire weekend up there, it was really a picture-perfect scenario for me, transitioning from high school to college. I was just speaking on that with my mom not too long ago because she was just as shocked, seeing how well things were flowing that weekend. It's something that we'll never forget."

Adversity and redemption at Alabama

Perfect moments, unfortunately, never seem to last. Armour-Davis enrolled at Alabama in June 2018 and took part in training in the lead-up to the new season. He was gearing up to live his dream and play football for the Crimson Tide when all of a sudden, that momentum came to a crashing halt.

During pregame warmups in Week 2, Armour-Davis suffered a non-contact knee injury, which was soon revealed to be a knee ligament tear. An entire offseason spent working toward something, and now it was gone. Armour-Davis commended Alabama's training staff for their calm response and referenced his now-wife and mother as vital supporting figures who helped him keep a positive state of mind. But he admitted it was a difficult time. It would be for anyone.

"Being a young freshman, it's easy to let your mind take you to all different places. So they did a good job to keep me pushing forward, not looking back or wondering why it happened — just understanding that it happened and figuring out how to get better from it.

"It could have been worse. I will say that. It can be a dark time for some people. It's easy to fall into a hole when you go through something like that at a young age. I think it's more difficult when you're a young guy. When you're older, you know how to bounce back, but when you're a young guy and never been through something like that, it can be difficult. So I'm glad I had the people that I had in my corner, and I wouldn't ask for it any other way."

Building his way back

With hard work and support from those close to him, Armour-Davis was able to work his way back to good health. He re-entered the lineup as a redshirt freshman in 2019 but was still light on experience.

During the 2019 season, Armour-Davis was at times a rotational defender, but much of his work came on special teams. A highly touted recruit could be frustrated with that situation, but Armour-Davis was just happy to be on the field.

"Just getting the experience alone in any type of way — it's going to give you some type of confidence. Even though it may not be as heavy as a defensive playbook or anything like that, special teams is about assignment football. So you still have to have that same amount of trust in your teammates and your coaches. I think some people look at special teams as a notch down because you're not a starter or anything like that. But it's still a phase of the game. So you still have to earn it, just like you would on offense or defense."

Not only did special-teams work give Armour-Davis confidence, but it also instilled a trust between him and his teammates. Although he was never a starter through 2020, simply being on the field was the best thing for the Alabama CB. Whether it's on special teams or defense, Armour-Davis emphasized the importance of live reps. "There's nothing like it."

Becoming a full-time starter in 2021

Rather than fixate on his lack of starting reps, Armour-Davis chose to use his chances to the fullest when they came. Eventually, that constant drive led to his first full-time starting opportunity in 2021.

It was a validating development after three long years. But it was difficult for Armour-Davis to be patient at times. At Alabama, you have to work, and you have to wait. But Armour-Davis knew what he'd signed up for.

"It was extremely hard," Armour-Davis said on waiting. "Obviously, I had guys in front of me that were extremely good football players. But … you know what you can do. You know what your abilities are. And you know that you're capable of going out and performing. It's not necessarily a thing like 'You're not getting your chance' or anything like that. You gotta do more to earn it. Even though I was earning time playing on special teams, I still had to dig deeper and figure out 'What is it gonna take for me to become a starter?'

"Once that Miami game came around in Week 1 … I remember to this day the joy I felt waking up that Saturday, knowing that it was time. It was definitely tough [waiting], but you come to Alabama, it's gonna be a part of it. There's guys everywhere. Everybody's good. You gotta find a way to stand out. It's tough, but if you can find a way to do it there, you'll find a way to do it anywhere."

Armour-Davis found a way. And the work didn't stop once he did. Armour-Davis excelled in his lone season as a starter, logging 3 interceptions and 4 deflections in 11 games. He also earned second-team All-SEC honors from the coaches — a sign that his strong play was finally being noticed.

TITANS ROOKIE MADE IT TO THE NFL THE HARD WAY (AND HE'S JUST GETTING WARMED UP)

BY JUSTIN MELO
TITAN SIZED
JULY 23, 2025

Making it to the NFL is a longshot. Making it to the NFL when you hail from Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada is borderline statistically impossible. Rookie wide receiver Elic Ayomanor defied those odds when the Tennessee Titans drafted him with a fourth-round selection in April. Despite his background, it wasn't a massive surprise. In fact, Ayomanor was considered a potential second-round pick who slid further than expected.

Ayomanor's origin story tells the unlikeliest of tales. Hailing from Medicine Hat, a town roughly 90 miles north of the Canadian border, meant he faced an uphill battle. Research indicates Ayomanor is just the second Medicine Hat native to go pro in the NFL. Offensive tackle Daniel Federkeil played four NFL seasons with the Indianapolis Colts after going undrafted in 2006, even winning a Super Bowl. Federkeil went on to enjoy a lengthier stint in the Canadian Football League (CFL) with the Calgary Stampeders.

It was Justin Dillon, owner of 730 Scouting, who first discovered Ayomanor's budding talents. Dillon runs a Canadian-based scouting service that succeeds in getting Canadian-born players to U.S. programs. He relies on “spotters” in every major Canadian province to initially place prospects on his radar.

Dillon has played a sizable role in ensuring Canadian talents don't go unnoticed across the border. His resume is star studded, including Josh Palmer, Chase Brown, Sydney Brown, Nathan Shepherd, Isaiah Adams (Arizona Cardinals, 2024 third-round pick), and dozens more.

Academics, character, and skill are some must-have traits Dillon looks for. Ayomanor popped immediately. Ayomanor is Dillon’s latest success story.

Dillon and Ayomanor recently spoke exclusively with Titan Sized to detail the initial scouting process, the adversities encountered when making the move from Canada to the U.S., and more.

This is the Elic Ayomanor story.

"I knew right away"

"When I was first introduced to Justin [Dillon], I was told he'd help get me in front of U.S. coaches," Ayomanor exclusively told Titan Sized. "It was an opportunity to be seen by D-I coaches. I didn't need to hear much more than that. Because I was so young, the conversations with Justin were being spearheaded by my mom [Pam Weiterman] to fully understand the process."

“Elic Ayomanor was as impressive as any Canadian kid I’ve ever scouted,” Dillon told Titan Sized. “There’s been a handful of times where I watched a few plays on film and knew right away. I didn’t need to watch the entire film. I was a handful of plays in and I already knew he would acclimate to the U.S. game.”

Canadian high-school football follows CFL rules — including 12 men on the field, three downs (instead of four), larger goalposts, and other notable differences. For Dillon, it’s crucial to evaluate certain traits that indicate a seamless transition could be made to the U.S.

“I’ve had great success with wide receivers," Dillon said. "I worked with Josh Palmer and Jared Wayne (2023 Houston Texans undrafted free agent). You have to look for movement skills, whether or not he’s a natural hands catcher. Speed is the key. The U.S. game loves speed. Is he shifty in space? It’s a long checklist. Elic Ayomanor checked every box.”

“Like most Canadians, I started playing hockey and basketball and running track at a young age," Ayomanor told me during a previous conversation. “At some point, one of my best friends introduced me to football. The more I played football, the more I fell in love with its intricacies.”

Though Ayomanor possessed the profile of a moldable talent from a young age, naturally, there were areas of his game that required sharpening and attention to detail. Lacking the resources of a U.S.-born prospect, Ayomanor was particularly raw as a route runner. Dillon compared him to Palmer, who he called “the best Canadian Football player I’ve ever seen.” Palmer, a 2021 third-round pick, has produced 2,287 receiving yards in four seasons, and recently signed a lucrative contract with the Super Bowl-contending Buffalo Bills.

Ayomanor wasn’t initially on Palmer’s level, but Dillon saw the potential.

"Elic Ayomanor was as raw as raw gets, but the athletic ability was there"

“The biggest knock on Canadians is they don’t run good routes," Dillon noted. "It’s not their fault. They’re not taught the nuance of running complete routes at a young age. Elic Ayomanor was raw as raw gets, but the athletic ability, the speed, it was way above average, even at that age. You saw burst and explosiveness. You could already see his ability to make people miss in a phone booth.”

Realizing that Ayomanor, who paired athleticism with character, could play in the U.S., Dillon played a role in getting him to the The Peddie School in New Jersey, a college preparatory school located in Hightstown, Mercer County, which was coached by former Northwestern quarterback Chris Malleo at the time.

Ayomanor displayed the necessary motivation when he made his big move at just 14 years old. "He was hungry," Dillon said. "He was locked in and 100% willing to make the sacrifices."

“At that point, I was just hungry for the opportunity,” Ayomanor added. “I grew up watching these videos of American football, kids who went D-I and stuff like that. To me, I felt like it was my time, my opportunity to shine. I didn’t think twice about it. I wanted to make the move. I didn’t even see it as a sacrifice, to be honest with you. I saw it as an opportunity I was blessed to have.”

"I sent his film to every prep school," Dillon added. "It came down to Deerfield Academy and Peddie. He chose Peddie because they were one of the top [prep] programs at the time."

"My goal was to someday play in the NFL"

"The day that I decided to move to New Jersey for my sophomore year was the day that I began taking football very seriously as my future goal," Ayomanor said. "Right then and there, my goal was to someday play in the NFL."

Ayomanor quickly realized the roadblocks ahead. Known as a big-time prospect back in Canada, he joined a top-notch program at Peddie that would eventually produce D-I athletes at every position. Ayomanor had to technically refine the rougher edges of his game to fit in appropriately. Dillon encouraged the staff at Peddie to take a patient approach with his development. It paid off. Despite the challenges and competition, he got off to a good start as a sophomore before breaking his collarbone.

“That first year was especially hard for me,” Ayomanor said. “I was used to being the best player on every team I’d ever played on. When I got to Peddie, I was easily the worst player on the team in my opinion. We had 26 guys on the team and all of them went D-I. At that point, I was the worst player there. It was a shock to the system. I also dealt with the culture shock of moving from Canada to the U.S. That was a tough year. I needed to get better in a lot of areas. I put my head down and went to work.”

The following year, fresh off an injury, Ayomanor decided to reopen his recruiting when Coach Malleo left Peddie. As fate would have it, he chose Deerfield, the top contender when he initially committed to Peddie. Coach Brian Barbato would be key to Ayomanor’s development, but new challenges would present themselves. His junior season was canceled due to COVID, and his senior season was shortened because of a knee injury.

Ayomanor had to get creative.

"The phone wouldn't stop ringing"

“Together, Elic Ayomanor, myself, and Coach Brian Barbato put together a route tree video,” Dillon said. “That route tree video went viral within the coaching community. We didn’t put it out publicly. Coach Barbato and I tapped into our contacts. We sent it everywhere. The phone started ringing right away.”

"It was a compilation video of me running routes versus open air, or against one of our defensive backs who had a bunch of D-I offers at the time," Ayomanor added. "We posted it on social media and tagged a bunch of people. I think my mom tagged every D-I coach (laughs). I started getting offers out of nowhere. My stock exploded."

The offers began rolling in for a Canadian-born prospect who played nine high school games in the U.S. Athleticism, size, and speed were evident on tape. Ayomanor received offers from the likes of Notre Dame, Tennessee, Duke, Kentucky, Virginia, Ole Miss, Cal, Penn State, and others.

“They saw what I had been seeing for a long time,” Dillon said. “It felt like the offers would keep rolling in forever.”

A dream realized

Ayomanor took multiple recruiting visits, to Cal, Tennessee, and Duke, among others, but had his sights set on a specific program dating back to being a bug-eyed kid dreaming about his NFL prospects.

“The first time I ever spoke with Elic and his mom [Pam Weiterman], they expressed their interest in attending Stanford,” Dillon recalled. “At the time, I had a Canadian at Stanford by the name of Wesley Annan. I always remember that. They wanted Stanford from the beginning.”

A past relationship paid off. Dillon’s first-ever client was Tevaun Smith, who attended Iowa under wide receivers coach Bobby Kennedy (Smith would go on to play professional football both in the NFL and CFL). As fortune had it, Coach Kennedy landed at Stanford at the opportune time.

“I sent Coach Kennedy Elic’s tape, including that route tree video. My phone pinged two minutes later (laughs). Who the hell is this kid? That’s Elic Ayomanor, a top wide receiver.”

When preparation meets talent

“When I moved to the U.S. and figured out what college football was all about, I immediately made Stanford my goal,” Ayomanor added. “My mom was big on academics. I wanted to pair academics with athletics. To me, Stanford and Notre Dame are the premier programs in the nation when it comes to that. I got offers from both of them, but Stanford was my dream school.”

Ayomanor lived out his dream, choosing Stanford out of the mass list of potential suitors. Despite taking another step in his illustrious journey, adversity just wouldn't stop rearing its head for Ayomanor. He suffered a severe knee injury — tearing his ACL, MCL and meniscus — before his freshman season of 2022, forcing a redshirt year.

As per usual, Ayomanor overcame that adversity. Across the next two campaigns, he'd establish himself as one of the most productive, reliable wideouts in college football. Ayomanor recorded a combined 125 receptions for 1,844 yards and 12 touchdowns in 2023 and 2024 before announcing his intention to enter the 2025 NFL Draft.

"Everything came together for me at Stanford, but a lot of preparation went into that success," Ayomanor added.

The Titans selected him with the 136th selection and he's heading into training camp in a unique situation for a fourth-round pick. Ayomanor possesses a realistic path to a starting role, with the Titans searching for someone to play the "X" position in Brian Callahan's offense for No. 1 overall quarterback Cam Ward.

From 2020 to 2024, a total of 79 wide receivers were selected on Day 3 of the NFL Draft. Only six of them surpassed 500 receiving yards in their rookie campaign. Ayomanor’s potential path to meaningful snaps could make him the seventh.

“I can play every wide receiver position, but I'm definitely a bigger guy," Ayomanor said about playing X receiver. "I’m very fluid in and out of my breaks. I think I can play in the slot if that’s what I'm asked to do, but I definitely have the size and traits to play X receiver."

Ayomanor is prepared for the challenges ahead. He's no stranger to adversity. Work ethic and sheer determination took Ayomanor from Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada to two decorated prep programs before Stanford. Now in Tennessee with the Titans, he'll continue attacking the process with the same will and vigor.

"I’m going to keep the same habits that got me here," Ayomanor concluded. "I’m going to do what I know, and that’s working hard. I respect the process. That’s what I’m going to do throughout my entire career."

‘WE KNEW HE WAS GOING TO BE SPECIAL’: DEERFIELD ACADEMY ALUM ELIC AYOMANOR SET TO HEAR HIS NAME CALLED DURING 2025 NFL DRAFT

BY THOMAS JOHNSTON
GREENFIELD RECORDER
APRIL 24, 2025

The Deerfield Academy football program has turned into a power under Brian Barbato, sending numerous players to compete at the Division I level.

Now, those players are starting to get looks at the highest level of football.

For the second time in four years, a Deerfield Academy alum is expected to have his name called during the NFL Draft, which begins Thursday in Green Bay and runs through the weekend.

DA alum Hunter Long was selected in the third round of the 2021 draft, and this year, former Big Green player Elic Ayomanor is next in line to be selected into the league.

Ayomanor, who plays wide receiver at Stanford, spent his final two years of high school at Deerfield, graduating in 2022. He’s expected to hear his name called at some point over next few days.

“It’s always so cool to be part of their journeys,” Barbato said. “Whether they end up in the NFL or the Ivy League, however their story goes, it’s just great to see kids from DA reach the highest levels.”

It wasn’t the easiest of journeys that led Ayomanor to the Div. I level.

Ayomanor grew up in Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada and began playing football when he was 13 years old. After playing well for Team Alberta in the U16 Western Regional Challenge, he made his way to America, joining The Peddie School in New Jersey.

“I saw right away that he was a baller,” Kwame Osei, who helped train Ayomanor in Canada, told ESPN in a story that ran last month. “He was faster than the other kids, he had soft hands, jumped out of the gym. He just looked the part.

“Everything I taught him, he really soaked in, and just asked the next question,” Osei continued. “... What sets the good from the great apart is the appetite to learn more.”

After an injury that cut his season short, Ayomanor came to Deerfield to play for the Big Green. His junior season was a wash due to COVID-19, as Deerfield had to wait a year to see his talent on the field.

During his brief tenure, he was everything he was hyped up to be. Ayomanor had a big game in the season opener against Lawrence Academy, but after scoring a pair of touchdowns against Williston in the Big Green’s second game of the season, went down with a torn PCL that ended his season.

In all, he played just nine games in three years at the U.S. high school level and just over six quarters of football with DA. Still, Barbato knew the kind of talent he had, not just the physical talent but the mental makeup always pushing to be great.

“We knew he was going to be special,” Barbato said. “He did some great things and did them consistently. He’s fluid and has a skill set that he has continued to lean into, work on and develop. Deerfield is between a rock and a river and it’s a slice of heaven here. This was his studio to work and improve. He spent countless hours on the field, on the turf, with our jugs machine, playing basketball, doing all the things you need to do to get better. This didn’t happen by accident. He wants to be great. Talent is just one piece of that.”

Despite his limited time on the field, Ayomanor had plenty of interest at the college level thanks to his natural talent. A 3-star recruit, 247Sports listed Ayomanor as holding 26 offers out of high school, including from Power Four programs Stanford, Cal, Notre Dame, Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Arizona, Boston College, Duke, Iowa, Kentucky, Ole Miss, Penn State, Virginia and West Virginia.

Barbato noted that David Shaw — Stanford’s head coach at the time — wanted Ayomanor to come out to a camp to see him in person before giving him a scholarship offer.

Already holding numerous offers, Ayomanor didn’t hesitate. He went to California and played well, earning the scholarship offer. He ultimately chose to attend Stanford.

“Stanford wanted him to go to their camp and he said ‘I’ll go earn the scholarship,’” Barbato said. “Most guys would take it as an insult but he didn’t. I laugh when NFL scouts call and ask about him. I tell them if you like his measurables, just wait until you meet him and see what kind of person he is.”

After redshirting his first year due to injury, Ayomanor broke onto the scene by catching 62 passes for 1,013 yards and six touchdowns as a redshirt freshman in 2023. He became a household name after he went off for 13 catches, 294 yards and three touchdowns in a primetime victory against future Heisman Trophy winner Travis Hunter and the Colorado Buffaloes. Stanford won the game, 46-43, in double OT after trailing 29-0 at halftime.

That performance on the national stage made him a household name in college football, though Barbato wasn’t surprised at all to see his pupil rise to the occasion.

“I would say it was such a cool, unbelievable thing to see but it was also very believable,” Barbato said. “Those who know him knew he had this in him. There was no doubt in our minds that he had greatness in him. To see it happen overnight on a national scale, it really was unbelievable but believable. He’s destined for big things.”

His numbers took a bit of a step back in 2024, as he hauled in 62 passes for 831 yards and six touchdowns on a struggling Cardinal offense. He declared for the draft as as 21-year-old redshirt sophomore.

Ayomanor measured in at 6-foot-2, 206 pounds at the NFL Scouting Combine in February, running a 4.44-second 40-yard dash. He hit 38½ inches in the vertical jump and measured a 10 foot, 7 inch leap in the broad jump, showcasing the athleticism that made him a star athlete on the track growing up.

“We would show up to colleges and beforehand, coaches would ask how tall he was,” Barbato said. “It’s amazing how many guys saw him in person and were in awe. In a day and age of underdelivering, he always overdelivers. He says he’s 6-foot-2 and he’s 6-foot-2 and a bit. He says he’s going to run a 4.5 and he runs a 4.44. He just always overdelivers. You see so many kids who say they’re 6-2 and you find out they’re really 6-1. Coaches anticipate that stuff with this generation. Not Elic. He overdelivers every single time.”

Ayomanor still keeps in contact with his coaches and some faculty at Deerfield. Barbato said everyone on campus has been impressed with his mindset and professionalism.

“He could have been an Olympic-level decathlete or sprinter,” Barbato said. “He developed a friendship with the head of our history department and they still talk and swap books to read on a regular basis. He was training for the Combine and she’s telling him about a book he needs to read and he goes down to the library to read it.

“It’s humbling knowing he has this thirst for knowledge. When you talk about transitioning to the NFL, it’s those things that make him such a good choice.”

It’s those type of intangibles that Barbato said makes him such a strong NFL prospect.

“He impacted this community and my family,” Barbato said. “My kids are always talking about Elic. He set a high bar here. The touchdown catches, the big plays, they’re all important. Where these kids go and how they impact the community they’re in are more important. That’s something that Elic epitomized. The character he has, who is is in the classroom… people loved teaching him. He’s a sponge for information.”

Where will Ayomanor get selected? NFL.com has him projected to go in either the third or fourth round, while ESPN’s Mel Kiper has him as his 79th ranked player overall in the draft. The Athletic’s Dane Brugler has Ayomanor as his 89th ranked player so expect him to hear his named called Friday night during the second and third round of the draft, or early on Saturday when the fourth round kicks off.

No matter where he ends up, Barbato is confident he’ll find success.

“I’d love to see him here with the Patriots,” Barbato said. “No matter where he goes, he’s going to do big things.”

NFL DRAFT: INSIDE ELIC AYOMANOR'S VIRAL NIGHT, JOURNEY FROM CANADA

BY ADAM RITTENBERG
ESPN.COM
MARCH 28, 2025

Just about everyone in Elic Ayomanor's life remembers where they were on the night of Oct. 13, 2023.

The wide receiver from Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada -- now an NFL draft prospect -- had waited more than a year for his breakthrough at Stanford. That night, he would face Colorado and Travis Hunter, the two-way star who would win the Heisman Trophy the following season.

At halftime, Stanford trailed 29-0 and Ayomanor had zero receptions. Then, something magical happened. After Stanford got on the board and forced a Colorado punt, Ayomanor caught a quick in-route, cut upfield and ran 97 yards for a touchdown. Following another Colorado punt, Ayomanor caught a back-shoulder pass in front of a bewildered Hunter and sliced across the field for a 60-yard score.

The ball kept going to Ayomanor, and Stanford kept scoring. The Cardinal sent the game to overtime, then extended it after Ayomanor's 30-yard touchdown. Stanford prevailed 46-43 in the second overtime, completing the largest comeback in team history.

Ayomanor's final stat line: 13 receptions, 294 yards, three touchdowns. He set a Stanford single-game receiving yards record and came within 51 yards of the Pac-12 mark.

"I remember being really tired because of the altitude," Ayomanor told ESPN. "Like, after every single play, I'm coming back to the sideline and I'm like, 'Where's the oxygen? Whoever has the oxygen, let me know right now, because I need it.'"

The performance reached the group of people who helped Ayomanor get to the big stage.

Kwame Osei, who helped train Ayomanor in Canada, watched the game from a bar at the Las Vegas airport.

"I literally got up, I'm screaming, I'm cheering," Osei said. "I was filled with joy. I had tears in my eyes, just because I knew that this is it, this is the moment that's going to set him up for the next stage."

Justin Dillon, the scout who had helped recruit Ayomanor to the U.S., watched in an Ontario bar that became glued to an American college football game.

"The majority of these people, they didn't understand," Dillon said. "I kept saying, 'He's doing this against [who] they say is the best athlete in the NCAA.'"

This was the culmination of an odyssey that began in a place where hockey rules. It continued with Canadian All-Star teams and prep schools in New Jersey and Massachusetts and, finally, Stanford.

Canada has produced NFL players before. Thirty players from Canada appeared in an NFL game last season. Recent draft picks include John Metchie III, Chase and Sydney Brown, Chuba Hubbard, Jevon Holland and Chase Claypool. In the Canadian Football League, Doug Flute won league MVP multiple times and parlayed it into an NFL career. But those around Ayomanor, a potential Day 2 pick next month, think he has a chance to be special -- and help pave the path for those after him.

"Elic can be the face for football in Canada," Dillon said.

Although Ayomanor's mother, Pam Weiterman, didn't push her kids into sports, she encouraged them, with a caveat: If you start an activity, you need to finish it. Elic cried through his first time in hockey because he hated skating. He switched to football at 13 and was hooked.

Osei, a former CFL player who has coached at multiple levels in Canada, first heard about Ayomanor while coaching receivers for Football Alberta's under-16 team in 2018. When he arrived in Edmonton for training, everyone was buzzing about the receiver from Medicine Hat.

"I saw right away that he was a baller," Osei said. "He was faster than the other kids, he had soft hands, jumped out of the gym. He just looked the part."

Ayomanor (10) took part in all-star events in Canada before coming to the United States. Pam Weiterman

Ayomanor's inquisitiveness convinced Osei he could have a different type of trajectory.

"Everything I taught him, he really soaked in, and just asked the next question," Osei said. "... What sets the good from the great apart is the appetite to learn more."

Ayomanor shined as Team Alberta won the Western Challenge, a competition against teams from other provinces, scoring three touchdowns in the third quarter of the championship against Manitoba. Osei pulled Ayomanor aside afterward, and Ayomanor told him he wanted to play in the NFL. When Osei told Ayomanor that it could mean finishing high school in the U.S. to generate recruiting attention, the 15-year-old didn't flinch.

"Our country is hockey," Dillon said. "The best football players play in the U.S., and they have schools out there that are good academic schools that will facilitate international kids. So why are we not using this to help and make it easier for NCAA schools to recruit you?"

Weiterman didn't know anything about the path to major American college football or the NFL. Osei contacted Dillon, whose 730 Scouting service helps place top

Canadian players with U.S. high schools. A week after the Western Challenge, Dillon called Weiterman and made his case.

The opposing argument came via a "six-page email" Weiterman received from members of the Alberta football community outlining why Ayomanor should stay in Canada. Promising Canadian players had moved directly from their home country to major college programs.

"I've been telling him for years to think outside the box," Weiterman said of allowing her son to go to the U.S. "No parent wants to miss any years of their kid's life, but you will sacrifice that if it's for the betterment of that child. You want them to follow their dreams."

In 2019, then 16-year-old Ayomanor enrolled at The Peddie School in New Jersey, where Metchie played. Ayomanor played the first half of his sophomore season before breaking his collarbone. After a coaching change, he transferred to Deerfield Academy in western Massachusetts, another prep school. Then, COVID-19 wiped out his junior season.

He didn't let the time go to waste, though. He tried to master every receiver spot, even training with a 5-foot-8 teammate.

"That's extremely unusual for a high school kid to lean in and say, 'I want to do the things maybe I'm not as good at right now,'" Deerfield coach Brian Barbato said. "He's not just going to sit there and catch deep balls because that's what he does best. He was a sponge."

Ayomanor was set to play in 2021, but sustained a season-ending knee injury in Deerfield's second game. His American football odyssey had yielded nine games over three years.

"I had to go to a few camps and post some practice film," he said. "It was fun. I love competing, so I was super happy and eager to go wherever I had to go to compete and prove my worth."

Although Ayomanor lacked game film, he had a workout video where he looked the part of a Power 4 recruit.

Ayomanor had more than 20 offers by late spring of 2021, but he wanted to hear from his dream school: Stanford. Dillon reached out to Bobby Kennedy, then Stanford's wide receivers coach, who had coached Tevaun Smith, another of Dillon's Canadian prospects, while at Iowa. Kennedy said he started digging into Ayomanor's background and liked what he saw, even with limited film.

Kennedy wanted to extend an offer, but then-Stanford coach David Shaw required Ayomanor to attend the team's camp. Kennedy worried about whether a player with offers from Notre Dame, Tennessee and others would want to do that.

"He goes 'Coach, I'll come to camp. If that's what I need to earn a scholarship at Stanford, then I'll do it,'" Kennedy recalled.

About 10 minutes into Ayomanor's workout at Stanford, Shaw approached Kennedy with the scholarship green light.

His journey from Medicine Hat to major college football was complete, but the wait to showcase his talents would continue. He redshirted his freshman season in 2022 after tearing his meniscus, and began the fall of 2023 practicing with a brace on his knee.

It would come off the week of the Colorado game.

Weiterman usually watches Ayomanor's games alone. She gets too worked up.

By halftime of the Colorado game, she started getting ready for bed. She came downstairs in her pajamas for the third quarter and saw Ayomanor streaking across the TV. Her phone began blowing up with every big catch and touchdown.

She didn't get to bed until 4 a.m., after speaking with her son.

"I was just like, 'You showed them, Elic. This was your day, this was your time,'" Weiterman said. "And what better day? Like, prime time! It was in his cards, it had to be in his cards."

Ayomanor's breakout game lit a spark. Two weeks later, he had 146 receiving yards against Washington and, later in the season, put up 122 yards against No. 12 Oregon State and 116 against Notre Dame. He finished with 1,013 yards on 62 receptions, and earned honorable mention all-league honors. He received the Jon Cornish Trophy, given to the top Canadian college football player.

This past season, Ayomanor had similar numbers -- 63 receptions, 831 yards, six touchdowns -- and was a second-team All-ACC selection. Stanford once again missed the postseason, and after only 24 college games, he elected to enter the NFL draft.

"For me to decide to go to the NFL, it's similar to the reason why I left my hometown in the first place," he said. "I've always wanted to pursue more difficult and challenging environments, so I can grow faster."

The 6-foot-2 Ayomanor has spent the past few months immersed in NFL draft prep. He had solid numbers at the combine earlier this month, running a 4.44-second 40-yard dash and putting up a 38.5-inch vertical, which ranked seventh among all wideouts in the class. Scouts believe he has the ability to see early playing time as a rookie. In ESPN analyst Matt Miller's recent seven-round mock draft, Ayomanor was projected to the New England Patriots at No. 69 overall.

Wherever Ayomanor lands it will be the next mile marker on his journey and a destination many around him knew he was capable of.

As Dillon left the bar in Ontario well after midnight the night of the Colorado game, he thought to himself, "You're going to the NFL, young man. You punched your ticket."

GRAVEL ROAD TO GREATNESS

BY DAVID KIEFER
GOSTANFORD.COM
NOVEMBER 26, 2024

EACH WEEK DURING the football season, Elic Ayomanor is introduced in some way – to a television audience, in a game program, on a flipcard distributed in a press box.

He is a redshirt sophomore wide receiver from Stanford, and one of the best in college football. His major is computer science. And he's from Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada.

But where is someone from exactly? Is it their birthplace? The town where they grew up? Or is it the place they feel they belong?

Medicine Hat is Ayomanor's point of origin. It's where he grew up, where his mother raised him, where his dreams sprouted. But where does he belong? Maybe it's a remote farm on a gravel road, a prep school in the countryside, or a green swath 100 yards long under bright lights.

'Medicine Hat' is the simple answer. The long answer is not so simple

THE CLOUDS PASSED in front of Edmonton's high summer sun as Team Alberta, an all-star football team of 15- and 16-year-olds from the Canadian province, struggled in a tournament game. The special teams weren't helping and Kwame Osei, an assistant coach, found himself taking glances at his injured receiver.

Finally, a frustrated Osei couldn't help himself and asked Ayomanor, "Can you return kicks?"

Though he'd never done so on this team, Ayomanor replied "sure" without hesitation, and jogged onto the field.

"We were behind," Osei recalled. "I see this athlete right beside me and we're not using him …"

Ayomanor caught the first punt at the 45-yard line, accelerated up the left sideline, cut inside a defender at the 25, broke a tackle at the 4, and kept his balance as he was knocked backward at the goal line. Touchdown.

Moments later, Ayomanor caught another punt, this time at his own 51 on Canada's 110-yard field. He found room again up the left side, stiff-armed a defender at the 10, and scored again. Later, he caught a touchdown pass as his team rallied to win. Ayomanor was named tournament MVP.

This was the validation Osei was looking for. As a 'spotter' for a service called 730 Scouting run by Justin Dillon, Osei kept an eye out for promising players from his province who had high goals in the game and would benefit from exposure in America.

Ayomanor made an impression on Osei with his great athletic ability, but what set him apart in Osei's mind was his inquisitiveness. "He seemed thirsty and hungry to know more about the game," Osei said.

In this instance, Ayomanor couldn't practice because of a hyperextended elbow, but remained engaged in everything around him, asking questions about alignments, positioning, game situations, and strategy. But game film was the catalyst.

Osei approached Elic afterward and asked what he wanted from football.

"To play in the NFL," he said.

"Then you need to go to the States," Osei replied.

Osei wanted that thought to marinate for a few days and, if truly interested, Elic could call back and bring his mother into the conversation.

Two days later, Ayomanor called. He was on board, but his mother was hesitant.

"I don't blame her," Osei said. "Single mom. This is her only son. He's young. Letting him go to America … It was risky."

PAMELA WEITERMAN split from Elic's father when her son was an infant. A farm girl growing up, Weiterman settled in Medicine Hat, a small prairie city of 63,000 along the South Saskatchewan River. It's known as the "The Gas City," for its natural gas reserves, and "The Sunniest City in Canada," belying the fact that temperatures dip to minus-40 Fahrenheit during the winter. And it's a hockey town, home of the Medicine Hat Tigers, a major junior team in the Western Hockey League.

Pam has two kids, Elic and Jill, the oldest by seven years. She spent half the time with her father. Mostly, it was Pam and Elic, a name created as a compromise between each parent's choice, Alek and Eric.

"He really just had me," Pam said. "I was the mom and the dad."

She raised Elic with structure and rules and an uncompromising style. If you're going to run the race, you'd better run to win. If you're going to take a class, you'd better try to get an 'A.' Quitting? Don't even think about it.

While most kids in town start playing hockey at 3 or 4, Elic didn't show interest until he was 6, and begged to try out like his friends.

"I didn't even know how to skate yet," he said.

Predictably, it did not go well. Elic didn't want to play anymore and Pam was having none of it.

"Once you start something, you finish it," she said. So, Elic returned and, in one day, taught himself how to skate. That moment was a revelation.

"Something just clicked," he said. "It sparked a certain type of competitiveness. I just kept going. I learned to really love figuring out a way to get to where I wanted to be."

When things don't go quite right, Elic reminds himself of that time and where he came from.

"Our family name is Weiterman, and there's a certain characteristic that comes with being a Weiterman, a certain grit," he said. "You know that person's a Weiterman, for sure. And a Weiterman definitely does not quit on anything."

ACCORDING TO Google Maps, the drive from Medicine Hat to Kincaid, Saskatchewan, is 313 kilometers (194 miles) and takes 3 hours and 16 minutes.

"They don't know the backroads," he said. "It's more like 2 ½ if you know the right way."

Pavement is overrated in southern Saskatchewan. If you want to get anywhere, it's gravel you need to take.

Kincaid is a 'village' of 120. It has a grain elevator, indoor rink, school, store, and Bouvier's Berry Basket (open all summer). Three miles outside on, you guessed it, a gravel road, is the Weiterman homestead.

The property once spanned 2,560 acres and the farm ran 100-150 cattle. Crops rotated among barley, canola, duram, flax, hay, lentils, mustard, oats, peas, and wheat. There's a well, but the water is undrinkable. Drinking water is brought home in five-gallon jugs. And there is no wi-fi. Too expensive in the Rural Municipality of Pinto Creek No. 75.

This is the home of Jack and Theresa Weiterman, Elic's grandparents. They're retired now. The last cow has been sold, and they're down to 160 acres. But this is the destination for every major holiday, family gathering, and summer vacation.

"Kincaid is in the middle of nowhere," Elic said. "And they live even more in the middle of nowhere."

Elic learned to ride a bike there. He drove go-karts and quads. There were races of every sort and countless competitions among family. There is a massive egg hunt at Easter, and at Christmas every year, they rent the entire Kincaid rink for 100 friends and relatives, with skating, food, and gifts.

The family brand was the Flying J and during branding season, Elic helped tag calves and hold them down while their ears were clipped.

Elic witnessed the difficulties of calving season, when pregnant cows need to be checked frequently, including in the middle of the night in the coldest of winters. If a mother was in trouble, Jack would have to pull the calf out, sometimes even bottle feeding until they were strong enough to return to the mother, who sometimes would reject it.

"They were long days, but that was farm life," Pam said. "We grew up as strong kids because we worked. We really worked."

How strong? Pam was known for arm wrestling. Jack would think nothing of pitting shy 11-year-old Pam against his friends. And she would win.

Her one regret is not knowing when to stop. For the first 13 years of Elic's life, Pam was undefeated against her son.

"One day, he came and said, 'let's arm wrestle,'" she said. "He was getting stronger, but I thought, let's do it. And he beat me. I knew I would never beat him again. I should not have said yes … Damn. Too late."

Childhood for her, when she wasn't working, was carefree. It meant walking an hour to town on her own, spending the day catching frogs, making mudcakes with twigs as candles, swimming in ponds while pulling leeches off her skin without a thought.

"To regular kids, that sounds disgusting," Pamela said. "But in your mind, you're just adventuring. You're outside in nature. You're making memories."

From the house, you can turn any direction and just see land. It seems to go on forever.

"There's no judgment on the farm," Pamela said. "You can just be you."

But as she got older, Pam itched for something different. "I wanted out," she said. "I was not going to do that with my life. But, now, looking back, those were the best days."

Elic would say the same.

"Farm kids are just tough," he said. "That's just how it is."

I could see it ... People ask me, 'how do you know?' I see something in them that is needed to take it to the next level. I knew this guy was different. There was hard work instilled in this young man. He realizes where he came from. This is not a suburban kid.

Justin Dillon

730 Scouting

DILLON SAID IT took three plays on film to be sold on Ayomanor.

"I could see it," Dillon said. "People ask me, 'how do you know?' I see something in them that is needed to take it to the next level. I knew this guy was different. There was hard work instilled in this young man. He realizes where he came from. This is not a suburban kid."

With Dillon's backing, prep school coaches began making house calls to Medicine Hat. From those who showed interest, Elic narrowed it down to The Peddie School in Hightstown, New Jersey, and Deerfield Academy in Deerfield, Massachusetts, for his sophomore year.

While visiting, Pam realized these were the best schools anywhere. Football or no football, they had just won the lottery.

"I was sold," she said.

After choosing The Peddie School, they applied for and were granted financial aid to cover costs that were more than Pam's annual salary.

Though the roster at Peddie was small, Elic quickly came to the conclusion that "I was the worst player on the team. Probably 90 percent of the players ended up playing Division I football," he said. "But the way I responded to being the worst player is the reason I got into Stanford in the first place."

Elic rarely watched sports growing up, with the exception of a shootout compilation by his favorite hockey player, Patrick Kane of the Chicago Blackhawks. And though Elic was a hard worker on the football field, it wasn't purposeful. But at prep school, he was exposed to players like him, with big goals. He was there to be the best, to reach the NFL. He now had a motive, a why, and a destination.

Ayomanor played seven games before breaking his collarbone, catching 17 passes for 253 yards and three touchdowns during an 8-0 season for the Mid-Atlantic Prep champions. It would be the most action he would see in a high school season.

A coaching change at Peddie prompted Ayomanor to transfer to Deerfield as a junior, but his season was wiped out by the COVID-19 pandemic. His senior season was wiped out by a knee injury in the second game.

Three years of American high school football amounted to only nine games and very little film, leaving little to show college recruiters.

"When I tell people I've got a kid from Alberta, they're like, 'OK, where is he from?' And I go, 'Medicine Hat,'" Dillon said. "Canadians, let alone Americans, go, 'What? From where? He plays football?'"

AS A SINGLE working mom, Pam was conscious of outside influences and tried to keep Elic as busy as possible. That meant signing up for every sport imaginable.

His middle school doubled as a hockey academy and each day Elic alternated between a day of classes and a day of hockey. There were camps, trips, and games in whatever the sport and because Medicine Hat was so remote, Elic and his friends spent much of their time in Pam's car, traversing across the emptiness of the northern plains.

This was where Pam felt like she really got to know her son. She could hear his conversations, learn his music.

"Those were some of my best memories," she said. "At home, I'm busy. But when we're in that car, it's just us. I hear them talk about boy stuff or kid stuff, and I get to be part of it."

Pam does not tolerate swearing, but at the end of one trip, when someone cursed, Pam pulled into the driveway, turned to the kids and said, "'Here's the rule: The only time you can swear is if we're in this car in this driveway. I don't want to hear it any other time.' So, we sat in that driveway and just swore for five minutes straight. It was the funniest thing."

These were the moments that made her conversation with Osei even harder.

Born in Ghana, Osei was raised in Toronto with no guarantee he would escape the gangs, drugs, and violence of his neighborhood. Osei felt no one cared, not even his coaches. But there was a teacher who did. That teacher saw Kwame for who he was and invested time and effort into him. Osei grew in confidence, and would go on to play college football, earn two degrees, and become a gifted public speaker, mentor, and teacher.

"I understand that every child is one caring adult away from becoming a successful story," Osei said. That's why he needed to talk to Elic.

"I saw a kid who needed guidance," he said.

When Kwame got on the phone with Pam, her first reaction was, "I don't think so."

"You're always very proud of your kids," Pam said "At the same time, I didn't know how I would let him go. He was going to be in a different country, with people I didn't know, doing stuff I didn't know. As a parent, you just worry about every damn thing.

"I said, 'We're not doing it.' But Elic kept insisting. In the end, I believed in Elic.

"For a full year, I just cried."

If everyone is on board, Osei sends film to Dillon, who evaluates a player's Division I potential. If good enough, Dillon uses his connections to find a U.S. boarding school with a strong football program to attract a major-college scholarship and perhaps blaze a path to the NFL.

Complicating these conversations was pushback from the Medicine Hat football community who heard rumors of Elic's departure and felt he was being set up to fail. He was better off in Canada, they said. Meanwhile, Osei kept his involvement secret for fear of backlash, and Pam was hearing the talk too.

Pam was skeptical of Dillon's motives, but quickly realized that Dillon had Elic's best interests at heart and was someone they could trust.

"I realized he wasn't that guy at all," she said. "I was a lot calmer after that."

Ayomanor never wavered. "Justin has been doing right by us from the very beginning," he said. "He really just wants to get Canadians the opportunities Americans have. He always says to me, his goal is to flood the NFL with Canadians."

Elic saw no precedent for a path to football success from his home province as there was for hockey. Two examples he could think of were Chuba Hubbard and Ajoe Ajoe. Hubbard, a running back, stayed at home, got a scholarship to Oklahoma State and now plays for the NFL's Carolina Panthers. Ajoe, a receiver, transferred to a Florida boarding school, played at Clemson and South Florida, and now plays for the Canadian Football League's Saskatchewan Roughriders.

"There's not a lot of respect in recruiting for Canadian athletes," Ayomanor said. "If I had stayed in Canada, I maybe would have gone to an FCS school, but probably not even that. I probably would be playing Canadian college football right now."

FROM THE MINUTE Ayomanor met Deerfield teammate Geoffrey Jamiel, they became fast friends. They were like-minded receivers determined to be the best they could be.

Jamiel came from a football family. His father, Joe Jamiel, was one of Brown University's all-time greats as a running back and kick returner. Two older brothers, JoJo and Andrew, played receiver in college.

"Being from Canada, Elic hadn't really been exposed to football in the sense that I had – I grew up with a football in my hand 24/7," said Geoffrey, now a junior receiver at Lehigh. "I knew Elic had untapped potential, and he knew it too. And he was obsessed with getting better and unlocking that potential."

One difference between the two: Jamiel was 5-foot-8 and 180 pounds while Elic was 6-3 ½, 215 pounds. Jamiel knew that with his size, his shot at playing receiver in Division I depended on mastering technique, running precise routes, and catching the ball cleanly. But for a big receiver like Elic, route running typically wasn't a priority.

But Elic realized that if he also mastered route-running, and combined with his size and athleticism, he could be the perfect receiver.

They trained together every day, even while quarantined during COVID at the Jamiels' Cape Cod home. Andrew Jamiel sent professional level coaching plans. And Joe, a longtime youth and high school coach, offered his input.

"Elic didn't have a season, so he knew getting film out there was the most important thing," Geoffrey said. "We tried a ton of stuff. We tweeted videos of us lifting, sprinting, running routes and catching passes, and playing in intrasquad games. Anyone who knows anything about football could see how smooth and fluid of a route-runner he was."

One video of Elic running a route tree attracted particular attention. How could someone that size run the routes of a smaller receiver? In the COVID recruiting world, the video went viral and the offers started to come in.

Early on, Dillon put Stanford out there as the ultimate goal, the epitome of all that Elic and Pamela valued. Dillon had a Stanford connection through Wesley Annan, a 6-4, 275-pound defensive tackle from Whitby, Ontario, who Dillon steered through Lake Forest (Ill.) Academy to The Farm. Though Annan never played at Stanford because of injuries, he graduated with a human biology degree in 2019. That connection helped Dillon get the attention of Cardinal coaches, especially David Shaw's receivers coach, Bobby Kennedy.

After sending video to Kennedy, Dillon's declaration was being put to the test. Dillon, his wife and mother-in-law were on the way to visit relatives when a call came to Dillon's cell. It was Kennedy, who had just watched a compilation that Dillon provided the night before.

"I love this kid," Kennedy said. "This guy's going to be special."

The others in the car could sense this was a monumental and emotional moment. Dillon's mother-in-law said, "It looks like you did something big for a kid there."

"I did," Dillon replied. "I did something huge. You don't understand, this is what I told him in the beginning. I want this more than Christmas. I want this more than anything for this young man. Because I know if he gets this offer, it's over for him."

Ayomanor was invited to a Stanford camp and made a lasting impression by asking to be matched up for his final rep against the camp's best defensive back. Ayomanor beat him down the sideline and caught a deep pass on a fade. That afternoon, Shaw offered Elic a scholarship.

ON A FRIDAY NIGHT in Boulder, Colorado, Ayomanor was presented to the world. It was Game Six of the 2023 season. Ayomanor missed the 2022 season with injury, and was eager to make an impact.

With an ESPN audience, Stanford fell behind Colorado, 29-0, by halftime and Ayomanor had nary a catch. But in the second half, he exploded for touchdowns of 97 and 60 yards as Stanford rallied to force overtime.

The Buffaloes pulled ahead once again, but Stanford countered with a spectacular catch from Ayomanor, who gathered a pass from Ashton Daniels by pinning the ball on the back of cornerback Travis Hunter for a 30-yard touchdown – the signature play in Stanford's 46-43 victory. Ayomanor caught 13 passes for a school-record 294 yards.

Jamiel watched the first quarter, and not an especially good one for Ayomanor, before going to bed early to rest for a game against Georgetown the following day. When Jamiel woke up, his phone was blowing up. "Did you see your boy?!" "Your boy's going off!"

"I shot out of bed," Jamiel said. "I watched all the highlights. I texted Elic at 5 a.m. and he was still awake from the night before. It was surprising for everyone else, but not for me. I knew it was a matter of time."

Ayomanor felt the same.

"Truthfully, in my college football career, there was going to be a game where I did that, just because of the level of play I'm at," he said. "I just ended up doing it where there was the most media and against the most tracked team of the year."

Though Stanford has endured an uneven 2024 season, Ayomanor knows he's even better than he was last year when he earned the Jon Cornish Trophy as the top Canadian in college football.

"My route running is better," he said. "My endurance is better. My feel for the game is better. I play faster because I'm more sure of myself. I see things quicker. I'm just better at everything."

The one-handed grab at the pylon for a 17-yard touchdown in the 26-24 ACC-opening victory at Syracuse?

"Instinctual," Ayomanor said. "But how you make it instinctual is by working, by catching hundreds of balls and running hundreds of routes, and catching it at different angles a bunch of different times. The play is instinctual, but the work isn't."

IN THE CANADIAN PRAIRIES, "you don't need the highway," Pam says. "We're taking the gravel roads."

The same could be said for Ayomanor. Be wary of smooth. Be wary of easy.

"I'm a product of the values I was raised with," he said.

You're your mom's son. You don't quit, and you don't let her beat you in arm wrestling. Flash is unnecessary with dirt under your fingernails and miles of empty land in front of you.

"Authentic and genuine," says Mom. "That's how we grow up here."

TITANS CB DARRELL BAKER JR. IS THE TEAM'S NOMINEE FOR THE SALUTE TO SERVICE AWARD

BY JIM WYATT

OCTOBER 29, 2025

Titans cornerback Darrell Baker Jr. is the team's nominee for the Salute to Service award.

The NFL and USAA, an official NFL Salute to Service partner, announced the 2025 nominees for all 32 NFL teams on Wednesday.

The Salute to Service Award presented by USAA celebrates NFL players, coaches, staff, and alumni who actively honor and uplift the military community through meaningful service and advocacy.

A year ago, Baker's parents were named as the 12th Titan in last year's Salute to Service game, where they were celebrated for their service on the field pregame.

Additionally, Baker wore a helmet decal that included the initials NM to honor fallen soldier CW2 Natalie Wamsley.

He also spent time with Wamsley's family during a trip to Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park. Baker connected with the family on the sacrifice of service while giving the family a tour of the facility and gifting them a commemorative football.

This year, Baker will attend a Veterans Appreciation Lunch and Bingo event with Operation Stand Down Tennessee. He will also participate in the Titans TAPS program again and wear the initials of another fallen soldier.

Titans CB Darrell Baker Jr. Proud of Lessons Learned From His Parents, Both Retired U.S. Army Veterans

NASHVILLE – As a young boy, Darrell Baker Jr. found out what it was like to grow up in a military family.

Both of his parents served in the U.S. Army.

There was discipline, and the example of hard work set for him to follow.

Baker found out what it meant to sacrifice, even if he didn't truly understand it until he got older.

Darrell Baker Sr. and Johnetta Dixon, retired U.S. Army veterans, served stints in Baghdad, Iraq, and Kuwait, among other locations oversees. Darrell Baker Jr. was born on March 27, 1998, in Panama City, Panama, when his parents were stationed there.

Baker's parents moved to Georgia when he was young, and he was surrounded by six siblings as his parents were stationed in Fort Benning and Fort Gordon. There were times when his parents had to leave for months at a time, his father a contractor in the Army, his mom a cook.

"I remember when we'd get a surprise, and go to the airport to pick them up," Baker said with a smile. "That day was like heaven on earth."

It wasn't always easy, Baker Jr. said.

"We weren't the most wealthy family in the neighborhood," Baker said. "But my parents made sacrifices, and they did what they could to make sure all of us were fed, and taken care of."

And, there was discipline.

"It wasn't like crazy strict, but there was discipline in the household, doing chores all the time, having to clean," Baker said. "Little still you don't notice when you are younger, making up your bed, ironing your clothes, little stuff that matters today as an adult.

"When you get around new people, especially as you enter college, you realize not everybody was raised like you were. You see those differences it can make."

There are also some things Baker doesn't know about the emotional toll of being in war.

"As I got older, just seeing their reaction when asked about it," he said, "I didn't really want to talk about it with them."

Baker said he once considered going into the Marines, but he fell in love with sports, and football, instead.

Playing in the NFL became his dream.

Over the years, the toughness and perseverance he learned from his parents helped push him as he found his way.

Baker had zero scholarship offers for football out of high school at Hephzibah (Georgia).

After playing in college at Georgia Southern, he was not invited to the NFL combine

Baker signed with the Arizona Cardinals as an undrafted free agent following the 2022 NFL Draft, but he was waived by the team three months later. That's when he was signed by the Indianapolis Colts, where he earned a starting job with the team in 2023 after paying his dues on the practice squad most of the 2022 season.

When Baker was released by the Colts back in August, the Titans signed him.

He's been a regular contributor for the Titans ever since.

Teams across the NFL are celebrating Salute to Service throughout November, a dedicated time to recognize and pay tribute to the courageous men and women who have served or are currently serving our country. Salute to Service is the NFL's year-round initiative that focuses on honoring, empowering and connecting with service members, veterans and their families.

"Salute to Service is just a lot of respect shown to them, to the military," Baker Jr. said. "They go oversees, across the world, to fight to make sure everybody here in America is safe. You see the wars in Iran and things that take place in Palestine. … Those that serve our country go over there and risk their lives, and we get protected in turn.

"I'm very blessed to have my parents, very proud of them. And, very blessed to still have them, because there are so many people who don't make it out of those wars, and they are two people God put His hand over and I'm very thankful for that."

EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW: TITANS CB DARRELL BAKER JR. ON MAXIMIZING OPPORTUNITY

BROADWAY SPORTS MEDIA
NOVEMBER 13, 2024

Tennessee Titans cornerback Darrell Baker Jr. has been one of the defense's bigger surprise performers this season. Claimed off waivers in late August after initial 53-man rosters were finalized, Baker Jr. was supposed to join Tennessee as a depth cornerback. Injuries to L'Jarius Sneed and Chido Awuzie have instead catapulted him into the starting lineup, where he's played good football for a secondary leading the NFL in defensive passing yards allowed per game (156.7).

Baker Jr. recently spoke exclusively with Broadway Sports. Baker Jr. discussed joining the Titans via the waiver wire, preparing to play in Dennard Wilson's defensive system, what he's seen from rookie corner Jarvis Brownlee Jr., and so much more.

JM: I want to start at the beginning of this season. What was that weekend like when the Tennessee Titans claimed you off waivers? Navigating that 53-man roster stuff has to be a little hectic. Did it remind you of being an undrafted free agent again?

Darrell Baker Jr.: It kinda did remind me of being undrafted again. Being released by the Indianapolis Colts caught me by surprise after previously making their 53. After they made that decision, my fiance and I were talking about our options. It's funny, we actually talked about the possibility of landing in Nashville, Tennessee.

The next day came, it had been about 24 hours since the Colts released me. I was actually getting set to sign back to the [Colts'] practice squad when my agent texted me telling me I had been claimed. I was like by who?!? My fiance and I laughed when he said Tennessee.

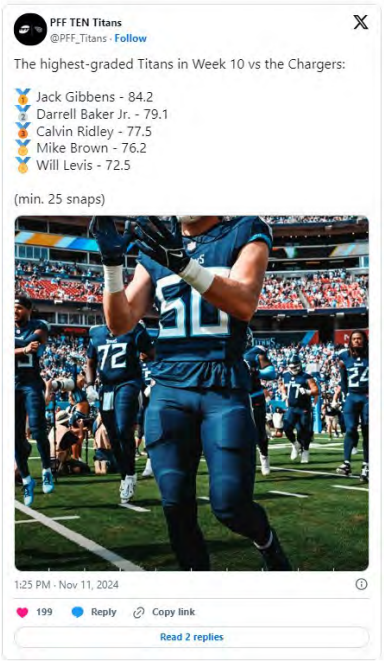

My agent and I hadn't spoken to any teams throughout that process. The Titans decided to make that move and it put a huge smile on my face. I spoke to one of the [Titans'] local scouts. I hopped on the road and drove right up to Tennessee.

JM: You come in and you're supposed to be a reserve behind guys like L'Jarius Sneed and Chido Awuzie. Fast forward to today and you've played more than 40 percent of all defensive snaps. You've been a boundary starter for multiple games in a row. What do you think it was about your mindset that allowed you to contribute right away?

Darrell Baker Jr.: I just prepare every day like I'm a starter. I was doing that when Sneed and Awuzie were healthy. You have to be ready when somebody goes down. I didn't want the coaching staff to feel like there was a drop off when I had to come into the lineup.

One of our coaches told me, "even when you're not a starter, you're still a starter because you're one play away from being one." They expected me to make plays when I entered the lineup. I've been trying to bring a burst of energy to the defense.

Ever said our coaching staff said they didn't expect a drop off, I've been living by that.

JM: Defensive coordinator Dennard Wilson blitzes a lot and plays a lot of man coverage. Corners have to play on an island in this scheme. How do you think coach Wilson's system suits your skill set?

Darrell Baker Jr.: I love playing in coach Wilson's system because I have terrific length to play man coverage. I love getting my hands on guys at the line of scrimmage. I've been encouraged to be a bit more physical than I was at my last spot.

We know we have guys up front that can get after the passer. That allows me to play physically at the line of scrimmage. Our staff has done an incredible job keeping me prepared and making sure I know what to expect. I'm staying on top of my game throughout this process.

JM: It's also not like coach Wilson made changes to his scheme to accommodate the injuries. He's shown a lot of confidence in you to execute what Sneed and Awuzie execute. What has that confidence in your game meant to you?

Darrell Baker Jr.: I love it. We play a difficult position. As a cornerback, I have to go out there and play with confidence no matter what. I'm always trying to stay true to myself out there. I have to make those plays when the ball is thrown my way.

JM: You also have three pass breakups this season in a few starts. You had seven with the Colts last year. What is it about your mentality that allows you to make plays on the ball?

Darrell Baker Jr.: My goal every game, every season, is to not allow any catches when the ball is thrown in my direction. I always bust my tail off for the guys in front of me. I play hard for everybody on our sideline, everybody in our organization.

JM: Who would you credit as being the leader in the secondary? Either the vocal one, or one that leads by example.

Darrell Baker Jr.: Amani Hooker has been here for a few years. He's done a great job catching me up on a lot of things. We're always talking and communicating on the field. We recently lost Quandre Diggs to an injury. He was a terrific resource for me as well. He was that voice for us, that veteran leader. We know we could depend on him, and I'm working hard to ensure he knows he could depend on me.

I would say we have a great combination in our defensive back room. Coming here on short notice, all of my teammates helped push me to get to this level. They helped catch me up on the playbook. They got me to a point where I feel extremely comfortable out here.

JM: You're a young corner, but you've played a lot of football. What have you seen from Jarvis Brownlee Jr. as a rookie? You guys have been the starters on the outside lately due to injuries, and you're the vet and he's the rookie.

Darrell Baker Jr.: Jarvis Brownlee Jr. is an extremely physical and feisty cornerback. I love the way he plays the game. There's nothing he can't do defensively. He can handle every assignment, every responsibility. I've loved watching him grow every single week. He's come in and played so well for us as a rookie.

It's been amazing to see. I'm not sure I've seen that from anybody at my previous stops. Credit to everybody in our defensive back room for helping get Jarvis ready for his opportunity. He's been doing his thing because he's well prepared.

JM: We've appreciated your time today, Darrell. This has been outstanding. In closing, what are your goals for the remainder of this season?

Darrell Baker Jr.: I'm trying to get at least two interceptions (laughs). That's a personal goal of mine. As far as our team goes, we're trying to finish strong. We believe we're better than our record indicates and we want to prove that before the 2024 season ends.

Let the chips fall where they may.

SALUTE TO SERVICE: TITANS CB DARRELL BAKER JR. PROUD OF LESSONS LEARNED FROM HIS PARENTS, BOTH RETIRED U.S. ARMY VETERANS

BY JIM WYATT

NASHVILLE – As a young boy, Darrell Baker Jr. found out what it was like to grow up in a military family.

Both of his parents served in the U.S. Army.

There was discipline, and the example of hard work set for him to follow.

Baker found out what it meant to sacrifice, even if he didn't truly understand it until he got older.

It will be a proud moment for Baker, a cornerback with the Titans, when his parents are recognized as the Honorary 12th Titans for Sunday's game against the Vikings at Nissan Stadium.

It will be part of the team's Veterans Day celebration during Salute to Service month across the NFL.

Darrell Baker Sr. and Johnetta Dixon, retired U.S. Army veterans, served stints in Baghdad, Iraq, and Kuwait, among other locations oversees. Darrell Baker Jr. was born on March 27, 1998, in Panama City, Panama, when his parents were stationed there.

HOW CORNERBACK DARRELL BAKER JR. MET HIS SON ON THE COLTS' FLIGHT TO GERMANY

BY NATE ATKINS
INDIANAPOLIS STAR
DECEMBER 1, 2023

FRANKFURT, GERMANY -- Darrell Baker Jr. slid into his seat on a plane headed for Germany, pulled out his phone and began punching in numbers as quickly as his heart could race.

The Colts starting cornerback needed to pay for high-speed WiFi so he could make the most important video call of his life. More than a thousand miles away, a distance increasing by the minute, his fiancé was headed into labor.

So he kept typing in his credit card info, only for an error message to pop up. The minutes crept by, and soon the lights would go out in the cabin so his teammates could get a night of sleep on the way to play the Patriots in Frankfurt.

As the plane soared, he feared a moment slipping away.

Finally, his phone connected and there she was on the other line: Jade Falcon, the woman he asked to marry him in the preseason. She was ready to give birth to the boy they'd name Dallas in honor of the impossible journey they'd taken to parenthood.

"You've got this!" Baker shouted in a plane of passed-out Colts. "Breathe! Push!"

Darrell Baker Jr. first met his son on the Colts' bye week after watching his birth from the team's flight to Germany.

An NFL-style romance

Baker has played less than two seasons in the NFL, but he already owns a story that peaks at 30,000 feet and plunges to depths most players would never come back from. This is the season that will shape his life – from engagement to fatherhood, in and out of a starting NFL defense, through a controversial loss to the Browns and into that heart-throbbing space in the clouds.

Just two years ago, Baker was in his sixth and final season at Georgia Southern, where he initially walked on, when a photo of a young woman from Tampa Bay popped up on his Twitter timeline. He followed her. She followed back. He waited four months to build up the courage to send a direct message.

She didn't respond, but she did send another tweet: "Chase the bag, not the boys."

So he sent another message: "How about we chase the bag together?"

That one got a response.

"I was like, 'Man, she looks good, and if I can get this one, I'm not letting her slip at all,'" Baker said. "As soon as she (direct messaged) me back and said what she said, I was like, 'Oh yeah, it's over with now.'"

This was Baker's hyper-competitive side coming out, the one that would later latch him onto the Colts in 2022 as an undrafted player. But in football and in love, he was chasing long odds. The NFL didn't invite this sixth-year cornerback from the Sun Belt Conference to the scouting combine, and the woman he met online didn't want a long-distance relationship.

Darrell Baker Jr. and his fiancé, Jade Falcon, have had a journey since meeting on Twitter in 2021.

So for three months, he didn't even tell her he played football. Not until he invited her to Dallas, and she asked why he was there. She put off the first date they planned, but after a month, she found the courage to go.

What she found was the kind and calm person she'd gotten to know through FaceTime, but she also saw his determination. He had an itinerary for the weekend, as they bounced from tacos at the mall to Go-Kart racing to riding a Ferris Wheel. They ended with dinner at a rooftop restaurant where a server brought an ice cream to the table with a card that read, "Will you be my girlfriend?"

He'd found the idea by reading her old tweets.

"How could I say no?" Falcon said later.

The first dream was in motion, but the second needed a destination. He went undrafted into the NFL but received a tryout with the Cardinals and made the offseason roster. He and Falcon moved in together for the first time, living for four months until she had to leave for Tampa Bay to finish up her master's degree. Shortly after she left, Baker got injured and was released.

He had two tryouts after that, and Indianapolis offered him a spot on the practice squad.

After appearing in three games as a special teamer in 2022, he and Falcon continued to fly back and forth from Indianapolis to Tampa Bay to see each other. In March, a pregnancy test came back, and it was positive.

His mind shifted to the future -- and about finding one in football.

"It was like, now we have to go all-in," he said. "Every day, give it everything we've got no matter what."

Darrell Baker Jr. proposed to Jade Falcon in Sept., days after making the Colts roster.

He planned a proposal for that fall. He found a rental house for the three of them to live in. He built a crib. They picked out baby names, too: They'd name a girl Indy and a boy Dallas, in honor of two cities where the match was lit.

To that point, "Dallas," was the name Falcon always called Baker.

To all her friends, he was “the boy from Dallas.”

But before he could pass along a name, he needed to make a team so he could afford this life for them. He attacked the weight room, meeting room and practice field like a man with a few names to fight for. He began the spring eighth on the cornerback depth chart, but after Isaiah Rodgers Sr. was released following a gambling suspension, Baker was suddenly in the mix in one of the youngest position groups in the league.

Two months later, he was a roster lock and on the first line of the depth chart.

“My mindset is, ‘Either I’m gonna win the rep or I’m gonna win the rep, period,” Baker said. “I always say if I’m going up against somebody 10 times, I’m winning 12 of those.

“… I don’t just want to be good in this league. I want to be great.”

Darrell Baker Jr. made the Colts roster for the second year in a row.

Confidence had fueled every step of his journey to that point, from a baby born in Panama to members of the army to a kid in a Georgia town of less than 4,000 people to a walk-on at Georgia Southern to a man direct messaging a girl he didn’t know in a state he didn’t live in.

And now, that girl was here in Indianapolis, building this life with him by multiplying that positive energy and packaging it into a human due in a few months.

“We are literally one,” he’d say later. “I can say that’s my best friend in the world.”

They’d need each other, too, because at the highest level of football, momentum often builds half as fast as it falls apart.

Darrell Baker Jr. was at the center of two controversial penalties against the Cleveland Browns.

A nightmare against the Browns

Nineteen days before his son was born, Baker crouched into his stance and stared into the soul of Amari Cooper with less than a minute left in the game.

He dropped back as Cooper engaged with his chest, right as E.J. Speed was obliterating P.J. Walker for a strip-sack to win the game – except it didn’t. Baker was called for illegal contact.

One flag on Baker left him rattled. The second would leave him hurt. The Browns had a first-and-goal when Walker lofted a ball to the back right corner of the end zone; Baker’s head was turned to the receiver as the ball flew well out of reach. Another flag came out. Pass interference.

Baker punched the air and screamed.

The ball moved inside the 1, and three plays later, the Browns punched it in for a 39-38 victory.

Afterword, Baker would face the cameras and say he believed he’d done his job. Soon, the NFL would inform the Colts that that at least one of the calls was incorrect, according to team owner Jim Irsay. A few teammates seethed about a game stolen from them by officials.

The next week, the Colts sent Baker to the bench.

“A lot to say, but I’ll keep it professional,” Baker posted to Instagram after the game.

Falcon called her best friend to game plan how best to comfort him.

“Sometimes he doesn’t even know that he’s stressing,” Falcon said. “It takes for somebody to tell him, ‘Hey, you’re losing weight. Are you OK?’ And he’s like, ‘Dang, I didn’t even realize.’”

Colts fans began direct messaging her, which was the place she first met Baker. She read enough of the nasty ones until she broke down to him.

“’I’ve never experienced this. I’m not even the one that’s on the field. Are you OK? How are you dealing with this?’” Falcon recalls telling Baker. “And he’s like, ‘Listen, this is what comes with it. This is how it is.’

“So at this point, I’m the one that’s crying because people are saying things and I want to say things back and I’m just like, I can’t say anything back because I’m a reflection of you and he’s like, ‘It’s OK. It’s fine. We’ll get through it.’ And I’m like, ‘Wow, I’m glad you’re the one in this position dealing with this and not me because they would have canceled me.’”

As an outside cornerback, Baker can’t let himself believe otherwise.

And this isn’t just a game to him.

Darrell Baker Jr. has worked his way up from the practice squad to becoming one of the Colts' starting cornerbacks.

“I obsess over the idea of being able to dominate and impose my will against somebody,” Baker said. “It’s the idea that no matter what they do, I have an answer for everything. It’s an obsession.”

The leaders of the Colts defense checked in. This was Baker's second benching.

“I told him, ‘We still need you. You’re still a part of this team. We still need you to perform, whether that’s on special teams or when the opportunity comes again,’” said linebacker Zaire Franklin, a former seventh-round pick. “’I’m no stranger to getting an opportunity and not taking advantage of it the first time around. Just make sure you don’t miss it again.’”

Said cornerback Kenny Moore II, who went undrafted and was cut by the Patriots, “If you think it’s going to be perfect, then don’t play at all. The good will be the good and the bad will be the bad, but you’ve got to keep pushing through both to be your best.”

Baker was forced to take a step back the next week, as he didn’t practice with the first-team defense or see a single snap in the game.

The flags against the Browns felt like a nightmare, but when he would lay down to sleep next to Falcon, the dreams had a different ending. In them, he’s out there at Lucas Oil Stadium shaking as a quarterback throws his way. But this time, he’s staring at the ball, leaping at just the right moment and making the play.

Meeting Dallas

By the time he boarded the flight to Germany to face the Patriots, Baker had already rebounded. His starting job returned, thanks to a 38-27 loss to the Saints that featured 500 yards allowed without him. He’d just held his own against the Panthers, the Colts won 27-13 on two Moore interceptions.

Doctors told Baker and Falcon to expect the baby to arrive the following Wednesday, which would be the middle of the bye week. But she was induced nine days early, and he was on a dark plane in the middle of the night, somewhere over the Atlantic Ocean.

At one point, Falcon rolled backward in pain as tears streamed down her face. Baker spoke through the phone to the nurse, asking her to sit Falcon upright.

“I literally felt like he was there without him physically being there,” Falcon said.

Then an infant started to cry. And as Baker stared into the white light illuminating his face, he felt two tears roll down his cheeks.

With most of the cabin passed out, Tyquan Lewis caught a glance at what was on the phone.

“Congrats,” he said.

A flight attendant grabbed the intercom and announced that Baker was a father to a baby boy named Dallas, and the whole team burst into applause.

Some knew how this would change his life in the game.

“When your kid’s six weeks and your wife or fiancé is getting up every night and being with him, you're missing those moments," said Zaire Franklin, who has a 2-year-old son. "You can’t come in here and not take what you’re doing serious."

Baker never slept on the flight over, and then the coaches had the players stay up the full day to adjust to the six-hour time difference. He called Falcon on every break to check in and say hi to his son.

By Sunday, he was starting at outside cornerback and held his own as the Colts defense dominated the Patriots for a 10-6 victory.

“It gives me that extra push," Baker said of fatherhood. "If I’m tired, immediately that’s my go-to thought. It’s everything that drives me to make the right decisions on the field and off the field.”

Darrell Baker Jr. has regained his starting cornerback position, at least for now, after getting benched twice this season.

The next day, Baker arrived at the hospital in Tampa Bay — Falcon temporarily returned to Florida with Baker on the road — and held his son in his arms for the first time.

The new family of three got six days together before Dallas’ daddy had to fly back for work.

His fiancé and son will be here in mid-December. Dallas’ first game will be against the Raiders. Baker has to earn his playing time in it with second-round rookie JuJu Brents due back from a quad injury.

When Baker said goodbye that day from the airport, he and Falcon cried together.

The next time she saw him was on a TV screen the next Sunday, when the Colts hosted the Buccaneers. It was another game at Lucas Oil Stadium where an opponent was driving to come back and nearing the goal line. This time, a receiver cut across Baker's face but he followed the crossing route like a shadow, causing Baker Mayfield to pull the ball down and take a sack in a 27-20 Colts win.

Down in Tampa Bay, Falcon cheered but in silence this time.

She didn't want to wake the baby asleep on her chest.

NEW TITANS LB CODY BARTON USING PAST EXPERIENCES TO HIS ADVANTAGE IN TENNESSEE

BY JIM WYATT

MAY 22, 2025

NASHVILLE – Cody Barton is on his fourth NFL team in seven years.

Bouncing around hasn't been easy, the new Titans linebacker said.

But Barton has used it to his advantage.

"It's cool experiences, you know," Barton said with a smile. "I have been able to learn from coaches and teammates from these different teams and gather these experiences. And, I've felt that has helped me as a player, learning from these different schemes so when I go to the next team it is nothing new. The lingo is new, I guess.

"But I don't look at it as a bad thing. I look at it as a positive thing, and the things I've learned from each experience helped me grow as a player."

A third-round draft pick of the Seahawks in 2019, Barton has played in 95 games, with 43 games, in his career, including 38 games in the last three seasons for Seattle, Washington and Denver.

Over the last three seasons, Barton is one of only five NFL linebackers (Fred Warner, Tremaine Edmunds, Roquan Smith and Logan Wilson) to post 100+ tackles each season and total 5 or more interceptions over that timeframe.

Barton tallied a career-high 136 tackles in 2022 before recording 121 tackles in 2023 and 106 in 2024 while in Denver.

The Titans signed Barton back in March, and he's been working with his new coaches and teammates during Phase 1 and Phase 2 of the offseason program. Next week, the team will move into Phase 3, when the defense will compete with the offense for the first time.

Barton said he's thrilled the Titans believed in him, and signed him to a multi-year contract.

"It felt really good," Barton said. "Me and my wife are very blessed to be here. We actually bought a house last week. It does feel secure, but at the same time, nothing is ever really secure in this league. You have to be able to perform on Sundays.

"But it is definitely a blessing. I think back in my career and … moving around was tough, the moving itself was. But to feel valued here and to find a home, we are very grateful. Hard work pays off.

"I tell the young guys – if you keep working hard and stay disciplined, at some point it is going to pay off," Barton continued. "I feel like the Titans wanted me to come here and be a part of this team. They signed me to a three-year deal, and it's a testament that if you stay true to yourself it will pay off."

A six-year pro, Barton racked up over 100 tackles for the third straight season last year for the Broncos.

Barton said he loves the look of the defense in Tennessee, and how the team will play.

He's already on the same wavelength as defensive coordinator Dennard Wilson.

"The style of defense, it's aggressive, similar to last year's scheme I was in," Barton said. "The biggest this is the aggressiveness of it.

"(Dennard) is a great coach, leader, demands a lot, is very intense. I feel like he just brings out the best of the group individually and as a whole. I am excited about where this defense is headed."

Barton said he likes what he has seen around him, from the young guys competing next to him at inside linebacker.

Now with a new team, he's ready to help lead the way.

"I've always prided myself in being a leader, someone who can gets guys lined up and take command vocally on the field," he said. "I am not going to change anything, I am going to continue to be who I am and just let it flourish here.

"There is no perfect player, but I try to be perfect. It's about always looking for ways to improve, not just focusing on run or pass, but being dominant in both."

Barton will make his Titans debut in Week 1 against his old team.

The Titans travel to face the Broncos on September 7.

"I am excited, very excited," he said. "But I am not going to make it bigger than what it is – at the end of the day it is a football game. But definitely exited to play against the team I was with last year. I am real excited to go back."

HOW CODY BARTON WENT FROM BEING THE "RUNT OF THE LITTER" TO A STARTING LINEBACKER IN THE NFL, NOW WITH THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT

NASHVILLE – Cody Barton kept the faith.

As a 5-foot-8, 160-pound sophomore – when he was dwarfed by a 6-foot-4, 290-pound brother who was just a year older – he always felt like his time would come.

From an early age, his athletic parents had Barton and his three siblings believing hard work would make anything possible.

The mindset resulted in him developing from the "runt of the litter" to a prep star, and earning a college scholarship. It also paved the way for him to earn an opportunity in the NFL, and it eventually led him to Tennessee, where the Titans are counting on the inside linebacker to be a key piece in the middle of their defense in 2025.

"My dad always told us: Hard work is the only recipe," said Barton, who joined the Titans as free agent back in March after playing previously with the Seahawks, Commanders and Broncos. "The thing my dad always taught me, and he would tell me personally, being that I was the late bloomer in the family: "The cream always rises to the top."

"And I've always applied that to my career. No matter what, always keep working and just outwork the competition, and eventually the cream is going to rise to the top."

Barton, who is 6-foot-2, 237 pounds these days, put the work in to get to where he is today.

It turns out Barton has been on a mission since he was 10 years old, after receiving a pep talk from his father, and then being put on a strict regimen with his siblings.

Playing sports, you see, is what the Bartons do.

Father Paul Barton, who is 6-6, played football and baseball at the University of Utah, and he had a brief stint in the minor leagues with the Toronto Blue Jays. Mother Mikki-Kane Barton, who is six-foot, played volleyball and basketball at Utah, and is a member of the school's Crimson Club Hall of Fame.

Jackson Barton, the oldest son, played on the offensive line at Utah and has spent time with five NFL clubs, most recently the Arizona Cardinals. Cody Barton came along 15 months later, then came sister Dani, a former member of the U.S. women's national volleyball team who was an All-America performer at Utah. Baby brother Jackson is currently a senior on the football team at Utah.

Cody Barton said his father trained all the children – mentally and physically -- to earn their way. His mother provided encouragement and support, resulting in what Barton, with a smile, a "good cop, bad cop" scenario.

"My dad said: I'm going to do everything I can to help you guys get a full scholarship at the University of Utah, and go pro," Cody Barton recalled. "He's like, if you guys are committed to that, I am going to do everything I can. He was like, "You're not going to like me, but …

"As a 10-year-old, I was like: "Let's do it."

Cody Barton remembers waking up every morning with his 11-year-old brother Jackson, initially doing jump rope, planks, wall sits, and running. As they got older, they began lifting weights.

"My dad would push us," Barton said. "It was more about teaching us the power of the mind, and when you're tired, you can really go a lot further than you think. Us getting up at 5 a.m., it was more learning the discipline of getting up at 5. No one wants to get up at 5. So, it was teaching us the power of discipline and hard work and how far that can get you."

All the Barton children earned scholarships to Utah, even though it took Cody until his second semester of his freshman year. He's still motivated by that.

The hard work continued as Cody Barton got older.

Barton's father and uncle are first generation ranchers – they started a ranch in Duchesne, Utah in 2002.

Cody Barton grew up working on the ranch, moving water lines, baling hay, fixing fences and other chores with horses, cows, chickens, turkeys, and other wildlife around him.

Barton admits when he returns to the ranch these days, he's more interested in fishing, riding horses and looking for deer and elk horns.

But he's still all about the hard work, especially on the football field.

A six-year pro, Barton racked up over 100 tackles for the third straight season last year for the Broncos.

A third-round draft pick of the Seahawks in 2019, Barton has started 43 games in his career, including 38 games in the last three seasons for Seattle, Washington and Denver.

Over the last three seasons, Barton is one of only five NFL linebackers (Fred Warner, Tremaine Edmunds, Roquan Smith and Logan Wilson) to post 100+ tackles each season and total 5 or more interceptions over that timeframe.

Barton tallied a career-high 136 tackles in 2022 before recording 121 tackles in 2023 and 106 in 2024 while in Denver.

In Tennessee, he's ready to do his part in a new defense, in a city he'd never visited prior to signing. When he drives his massive dually truck around Nashville, he still wonders why the residential roads aren't wider.

Yet he feels like his timing is perfect here.

Back in high school, Barton didn't play his first three years because he was a late bloomer, but he finally started on varsity as a senior.

In college at Utah, he wasn't a starter his first three years, only stepping into the starting lineup when others got hurt. In his final college season, however, he started all 14 games and led the team with 116 tackles, along with four sacks and an interception.

In the NFL, Barton paid his dues his first three years in the league on special teams, while playing behind some good, veteran players on defense. But his career took off in year four, and he's been a highly productive player ever since.

Barton, whose middle name Likeke is of Hawaiian origin and means "courageous chief," feels like he's in Tennessee at just the right time.

He's ready to lead, and produce.

"Even when I was younger, I knew at some point it was going to be my time," Barton said. "I've always been a pretty positive, optimistic person. I always have that belief it's going to happen. If you really believe in something, it's going to happen.

"I feel like I'm very blessed, and feel very fortunate to be here. And I am looking forward to growing this thing, growing the culture, growing the wins, and just keep going. Everyone is hungry, and so am I."

OWNER CLARK HUNT SAYS NEW TENNESSEE TITANS GM MIKE BORGONZI HAD 'BIG PART' IN CHIEFS' SUCCESS

BY NICK GRAY
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
FEBRUARY 4, 2025

Kansas City Chiefs chairman and CEO Clark Hunt shared some kind words about new Tennessee Titans general manager Mike Borgonzi during Super Bowl opening night on Monday.

While the Chiefs were in the middle of yet another playoff run, the Titans hired Borgonzi. He had spent 16 years working in the Chiefs' front office, building his résumé up from a scouting role all the way to assistant general manager. With Kansas City aiming for its third straight Super Bowl trophy and fourth in six seasons, Hunt took some time to reflect on what Borgonzi meant to his organization.

"First of all, I'm so excited that Mike's going to have an opportunity to be a general manager," Hunt told The Tennessean. "He's deserved the opportunity for a long time. He's somebody who worked his way up the personnel department, has had a variety of roles both on the college and the pro side. He's somebody who's a very good talent evaluator, which I think is critical for anybody who's in the general manager role. I just want to congratulate him and wish him all the success."

Borgonzi takes over the front office of a team that went 3-14 last season. He joins president of football operations Chad Brinker among the highest roles in the organization, and in his brief tenure, he already has hired former general managers Dave Ziegler and Reggie McKenzie as assistant general manager and vice president/football adviser, respectively.

The Titans own the No. 1 pick in the 2025 NFL Draft and are estimated to own more than $50 million in salary cap space for the offseason. Situations like these are relatively unfamiliar territory for Borgonzi, who spent the better part of the past decade helping the Chiefs compete for championships.

Hunt didn't want to give Borgonzi specific credit, but he did admit one thing about his longtime employee.

"I think you can look at the success that we're having and it's obviously a team effort," Hunt said. "But he was a big part of that team and I have no doubt that we wouldn't be where we are today without him."

NEW TITANS GM MIKE BORGONZI SHARES HIS VISION TO BUILD A WINNER

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JANUARY 22, 2025

NASHVILLE – Mike Borgonzi got the job.

Now, the new General Manager of the Tennessee Titans is ready to get to work building a winner.

But first, during his introductory press conference on Wednesday at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park, Borgonzi took a few minutes to let fans of the team know a little bit about him, and his vision.

"So, who am I?," Borgonzi said. "What are my beliefs and visions for this organization? First off, I'm a little bit of anomaly – I'm a Northeast guy with a funny Boston accent that loves country music. I am a proud husband and father that believes in the power of love and connection. I have a passion for the game of football. I have a passion for people. I have a passion for doing things the right way through the values of character, connection, commitment and communication.

"The identity of my leadership will be connected, it will be disciplined, and it will be detailed. I believe in what I like to call an "us" culture – unity over self in everything that we do. We will put the team above individual agendas and make the best decisions for the Titans. I believe in the power of alignment, and teamwork, throughout the entire organization, where ownership, management, coaching and scouting are all rowing in the same direction. If it's not, it simply won't work.

"My vision as a team-builder is to draft and develop," Borgonzi continued. "We want to build a foundation of home-grown talent, and reward those players that meet our standards. We will be relentless in our pursuit of building competition throughout the roster, whether that is the draft, free agency, waiver claims or trades. And I think it's imperative that we build the right 53 on this roster as well, and not just collect talent. We need the right mixture of talent and character in order to build a championship-caliber team. We want a big, physical team in the trenches that is fast and violent on the football field. We want players that love the game of football, that are tough, smart and dependable, and they believe in unity. … I am excited to finally start the process of building and sustaining a championship team here."

During a 40-minute press conference on Wednesday, Borgonzi thanked a long list of individuals who have influenced him over the years, while thanking those involved in the process of hiring him.

"To the people of Tennessee," Borgonzi said. "We will do everything within our power to represent you the right way and make you proud to be a Titans fan."

Borgonzi, hired last week, arrives in Tennessee with 16 years of experience with the Kansas City Chiefs. For the last four seasons, he served as Kansas City's Assistant General Manager. Prior to his promotion to Assistant General Manager, Borgonzi served as Director of Football Operations (2018-20), Director of Player Personnel (2017), Co-Director of Player Personnel (2015-16), Assistant Director of Pro Scouting (2013-14), Pro Personnel Scout (2011-12) and Manager of Football Operations (2010). He joined the Chiefs in 2009 as the club's College Scouting Administrator.

During Borgonzi's time in Kansas City, he contributed to 12 playoff seasons and three Super Bowl championships (2019, 2022-23).

In Tennessee, he takes over a team coming off a 3-14 season, with a 9-25 mark over the past two seasons.

"There is some talent on this roster, but we're a three-win football team right now, so that's not good enough," Borgonzi said. "So, we're going to have to look everywhere to improve it, whether that's upgrading starters, upgrading depth. I'll get to sit down more here with the coaches and get a better understanding of all the players.

"There's some talent on this roster, but we're going to have to upgrade some positions, though."

Borgonzi said the team will fill some holes in free agency, but he made it clear his plan is to build the team moving forward primarily with draft picks.

He'll work alongside Chad Brinker, President of Football Operations with the Titans, and head coach Brian Callahan to do it.

"Look, I know the urgency to win in this league, no matter where you are," Borgonzi said. "We're going to be disciplined in what we do. We're not going to make rash decisions to try and try and improve the roster in ways we don't think should happen. We'll supplement in free agency, but we want to build through the draft. We need to build that core foundation of players to really change the culture, and that takes a little bit of time."

TITANS HIRE FORMER CHIEFS ASSISTANT GM MIKE BORGONZI AS THE TEAM'S NEXT GENERAL MANAGER

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JANUARY 17, 2025

NASHVILLE – Mike Borgonzi has been hired as the next General Manager of the Tennessee Titans.

Borgonzi, who previously served as Assistant General Manager with the Kansas City Chiefs, will arrive in Tennessee with an impressive background and great reputation.

On Friday, the team officially agreed to terms with Borgonzi, who has spent the past 16 seasons with the Chiefs.

The hire comes after a thorough search that included interviews with ten candidates, including six interviews done in-person this week at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park.

A press conference is expected early next week in Nashville.

"Mike's experience speaks for itself: he has been part of the core team that delivered four AFC championships and three Super Bowls over the past five seasons," said Titans Controlling Owner Amy Adams Strunk. "It's the type of standard I want to build here in Tennessee. I know we have a lot of work ahead of us, and I'm excited for Mike to get started."

Ultimately, the pairing of Borgonzi with Titans President of Football Operations Chad Brinker was viewed as a perfect fit moving forward as the franchise aims to regain its footing following a tough stretch.

"During Mike's 16 years in the league, he has been a key part of transforming the Chiefs from a two-win team to a three-time Super Bowl champion," Brinker said. "During our meetings, he articulated a clear plan to build a championship standard in Nashville through consistency, discipline, and hard work. I've admired him for many years and I'm thrilled to add him to the team as our general manager."

Strunk and Brinker, along with President and CEO Burke Nihill, head coach Brian Callahan and others on the football staff, met with Borgonzi in Nashville earlier this week as the team conducted its search to replace Ran Carthon, who was dismissed at the end of the 2024 season.

During his interview with the team, Borgonzi shared his vision to help build and sustain a winning culture in Tennessee, doing so with a draft and free agency strategy aimed to create an identity focused on character, and commitment. His plan is to help build a championship roster in Tennessee.

Borgonzi comes from a Kansas City organization which has shown the ability to have sustained success. He's played a role in putting together three Super Bowl winning rosters, including back-to-back Super Bowl teams (LVII and LVIII). The Chiefs have participated in four of the last five Super Bowls (LIV, LV, LVII and LVIII) while winning eight-straight AFC West titles and appearing in six AFC Championship Games.

In an interview with TennesseeTitans.com on Friday, Brinker raved about Borgonzi's preparedness, and shared vision.

"He's literally thought through everything you could possibly think through as a general manager," Brinker said of Borgonzi. "He's mapped out the entire plan from everything he believes in, which is the same thing we believe in here, the draft, develop and retain model. From that to everything about being a general manager, in particular when it comes to the evaluation from pro to college, the calendar, what that looks like, the meetings … to his plan on working with the coaching staff to the player development side of it, player engagement, sports medicine. He literally had a plan for everything. And then he's also been at a place that's been able to execute that plan at a high level."

With the Chiefs, Borgonzi worked his way up through the ranks.

In 2021, Borgonzi was promoted to Assistant General Manager of the Chiefs after serving three seasons as the club's Director of Football Operations (2018-20) and three seasons as the club's Director of Player Personnel (2017)/Co-Director of Player Personnel (2015-16).

According to the Chiefs, Borgonzi supervised and directed the club's college and professional scouting operations while closely supporting and advising General Manager Brett Veach with the club's roster management and player acquisition via the NFL Draft, NFL free agency, street free agency, waiver claims and trades.

Prior to his current role, Borgonzi spent one year as Director of Football Operations in Kansas City. Before then, he took on the entirety of the Director of Player Personnel position in 2017 after serving alongside Veach as Co-Director of Player Personnel for two years (2015-16).

Borgonzi served as the club's Assistant Director of Pro Scouting (2013-14) and as the club's Pro Personnel Scout (2011-12) where he evaluated all professional players, recommended free agents, oversaw free agent workouts, evaluated college players and assisted the coaching staff with advance scouting reports for the teams' upcoming opponents. In 2010, he served as the club's Manager of Football Operations. Borgonzi joined the Chiefs in 2009, serving as the club's College Scouting Administrator.

Prior to joining the Chiefs, Borgonzi served two seasons as the Assistant Recruiting Coordinator at Boston College (2007-08).

Brinker noted when Borgonzi arrived in Kansas City the Chiefs were coming off a 2-14 season in 2008. Another 4-12 season then followed. But the results, and culture, ultimately changed.

"Our goal is to build a consistent winning football team that ultimately will bring a championship to Nashville," Brinker said. "And, hopefully every year we can be one of those four to eight teams that is competing for championships, that is ultimately what we'd like to get to. And, Mike has been a part of that.

"So, hopefully he can bring that with him here, and we'll work together."

In addition to Borgonzi, the Titans also conducted interviews with Dolphins Senior Personnel Executive Reggie McKenzie, former Falcons GM Thomas Dimitroff, Buccaneers Assistant General Manager John Spytek, Seahawks Senior Director of Player Personnel Matt Berry, Colts Assistant GM Ed Dodds, Bills Director of Player Personnel Terrance Gray, Browns Assistant GM & VP of Football Operations Catherine Hickman, Bears Assistant General Manager Ian Cunninghan and Packers Vice President of Player Personnel Jon-Eric Sullivan.

But it was Borgonzi who landed the job.

"Mike should have been a general manager two years ago. He is ready for this job. … And this was the place that he wanted to be," Brinker said. "When he came in the building, he said it just felt like a family here, and it reminded him a little bit of Kansas City and what they have been able to build there.

"Now we still have a lot to do from a culture perspective in our building, but he can see there's some good bones here. We have some really good people in this building, and he's looking forward to getting in here and helping us start turning the culture around and start turning over this roster and really working side-by-side with me and others. … He just said he felt something special when he left this building, and he felt like it was the right place for him."

"We're really excited to get him," Brinker added. "I think this will be a great partnership, that's what this is. And there's a humility to him that I love, and what he represents and who he is as a human being. I believe this will be a really good partnership."

COAL MINER'S SON: HOW CHAD BRINKER WORKED HIS WAY FROM MARTINS FERRY, OHIO, TO THE NFL

BY JON GREENBERG
THE ATHLETIC
DECEMBER 28, 2023

Football roads lead to football destinations so if you're wondering how someone gets to the NFL from Martins Ferry, Ohio, you start on Lou Groza Highway.

Groza is the famous son of Martins Ferry, a river town that was once busting at its seams with football and steel. Lou took his toe to Cleveland and eventually, Canton. So, as they do in small towns, they named a strip of Route 7 after him in 1986.

If you take Lou Groza Highway north alongside the Ohio River, you can find your way to Pittsburgh and that's where we find another of Martins Ferry's favorite sons, Chad Brinker, at a Thursday night football game in early November.

Brinker is in his first year as the assistant GM of the visiting Tennessee Titans and he's walking on the field at Acrisure Stadium with his boss, the impeccably dressed Titans GM Ran Carthon. But it's Brinker who's getting the attention.

It's Brinker who has a TV reporter following him around and who is greeting friends on the field and in the stands.

"Oh, yeah, you know we gave him s— for that," Carthon said later in a phone conversation. "The big homecoming of the great Brinker. … All jokes aside, it's a cool moment just to show you where the game can take people, you know what I mean? Chad's a coal miner's son, comes from a very small town, and we've had these talks about where do you think you would be if it weren't for the game of football."

Where would the 44-year-old Brinker be without football? He's thankful he doesn't know.

"For whatever reason, God made me the way he made me," Brinker said. "And I'm meant to be in football."

There's a poem about Martins Ferry. You might've read it in the epigram of the book "Friday Night Lights." It's titled "Autumn Begins In Martins Ferry, Ohio." It's written by a native son, Pulitzer Prize winner James Wright, and it's a haunting ode to small-town life.

The ending is worth highlighting:

Therefore,

Their sons grow suicidally beautiful

At the beginning of October,

And gallop terribly against each other's bodies.

There aren't many poems about football, said Denison University professor emeritus David Baker, who recently spoke at a James Wright poetry festival in Martins Ferry. Part of the reason for that, he thinks, is how football involves a sublimation of individuality. The players are ensconced in helmets and pads. And notice, there are no names in the poem, just descriptions of the ethnicities of people in a steel town.

"This is a kind of brutal, sacrificial sport," Baker said. "And, you know, James Wright's heart was with the working-class people. I mean, his dad worked in the steel factories and his family were farmers. That was part of his material and part of the specialness of his material. He's speaking for a group of people that aren't often or haven't often been woven into lyric poetry."

Brinker's father, Chuck, was a coal miner (he finally retired in recent years), but Chad's life in Martins Ferry wasn't bleak. He didn't play football to escape his fortunes, but he knew that football could provide a path to something greater. And boy did he "gallop terribly" as a Purple Rider running back.

"He is the best player that I ever coached and the best person I've ever coached," said Brinker's coach at Martins Ferry, Dave Bruney.

Bruney is football royalty in this slice of the Ohio Valley. Not only did he coach there for 39 years, but he has a connection to the NFL. His uncle Fred, who passed away in 2016, was employed in the NFL (or AFL) from 1953 to 1997, which was believed to have been a record until it was broken by Dick LeBeau. Fred Bruney was credited with developing the safety blitz.

Martins Ferry had its share of famous (or locally famous) athletes — the Niekro brothers and John Havilcek are from there and went to nearby Bridgeport High School, for instance — and when Brinker was a high school freshman he first wanted No. 7 because of Joey Galloway, who starred at nearby Bellaire High School. He then decided on No. 21. Bruney told him it was retired for record-setting running back Jimmy Johnson, who played in the late 1970s.

"I don't remember saying this because it doesn't sound like my personality," Brinker said, "but he claims that I sat there for a second and I said, 'Well, you can give me 32 and just go ahead and get prepared to retire that one too when I get done.' And then sure enough, they retired 32 when I got done."

Nearly 4,000 rushing yards and 51 touchdowns later, Brinker proved his younger self prescient. In his senior year, he ran for a whopping

2,024 yards and his coach remembers two games in particular, one from Brinker's junior year and one from his senior season.

As a junior playing against Indian Valley on a rainy night, Brinker's helmet popped off as he was fighting for yards and he got popped in the face by a defender's helmet. His face was ripped open under one cheek and he was rushed to a nearby hospital for stitches. When he returned, the game was in overtime and Martins Ferry was near the end zone.

"He walks up to me on the sideline, his whole face was swollen, and he said, 'Coach, if I can get my helmet on, put me in right here and I'll end the game,'" Bruney said. "And I said, 'There ain't anybody in the stadium who wants you in the game more than me right now, but I can't do it. I wouldn't do it to my son. I'm certainly not going to do it to you.'"

Indian Valley won the game, and the next year, when Martins Ferry faced that same team again, Brinker rushed for 319 yards and seven touchdowns in just over two quarters in a 71-6 win.

"I sent somebody in for him and he didn't want to come out," Bruney said. "And he said, 'Coach just let me finish one more drive because I owe these guys.'"

It was around this time that Jim Grobe, the new coach at Ohio University — where Bruney played in the 1970s — was building a program based on the triple-option offense he learned at the Air Force Academy. He made time to drive to Purple Rider Stadium for a game.

Purple Rider Stadium is set across the road from the town in the middle of an industrial park along the Ohio River. On Friday nights, it was the place to be, as Grobe, a native of Huntington, W.Va., found out.

"I was so impressed the first time I went, watched him play," Grobe said. "They had the gates (to the stadium) closed and they would open the gates and everybody would sprint to get their seats. It was the wildest thing I'd ever seen. You're talking about standing room only. I guess, the bottom line was football was really important to the community."

Brinker went on to Ohio University, where he anchored Grobe's triple option for two years before the coach left for Wake Forest. In his redshirt sophomore year, he pulled off a touchdown trifecta (running, catching and throwing) in an upset win at Minnesota, something a former Ohio beat writer reminded him of one day when Brinker was at the Metrodome scouting for the Packers.

"Well, we didn't have anybody who could outwork him," Grobe said. "He was one of those guys that was always early for everything and late leaving. You had to almost run him off the practice field. Just great work ethic and, of course, great ability. He was, if not the fastest guy on the football team, he was one of the fastest guys."

As a redshirt junior, Brinker was racking up yardage but he was also waking up with headaches, blurred vision. He didn't want to tell the team doctors so he trudged to the student health center, where a well-meaning doctor told him he might be having panic attacks. Brinker threw away his prescription on his way out of the building and kept playing.

"Where we're from, you're not raised to say anything," Brinker said. "You're supposed to be tough and you gut it out. You think my dad, he's retired now but he went in the coal mines for over 40 years, you think he felt good being in the coal mines every day?"

In the fourth game of the season, Ohio was at home against Toledo and Brinker couldn't tough it out anymore.

"I remember losing peripheral vision and just having the excruciating pain in my head and I guess I was forgetting plays and stuff," he said. "So my teammates are the ones that told the doctor that 'I think Chad's concussed, there's something wrong with him.' And then the doctor got a hold of me. And I think that was the first time I was a little scared."

Ohio's team doctor sent him in for a CAT scan.

"And that's when they found the mass on my brain," he said. An arachnoid cyst, to be exact.

Earlier that season, Ohio had played at West Virginia and on the sideline was Dr. Julian Bailes, a neurologist who had previously been a Steelers doctor. As Brinker was figuring out his next step from a medical standpoint, his mom happened to run into Bailes, the chair of the university's neurosurgery department, at the hospital she worked at in Wheeling, W.Va. Bailes remembered Brinker and agreed to meet with him and then perform surgery.

What could've happened if Brinker kept playing?

"First of all, he could've had sudden enlargement or swelling," Bailes said. "The cystic tumor could have bled, it could have hemorrhaged and anything can happen when that occurs and including someone having a stroke or dying. A lot of times people don't know they have something in their brain until something happens. His fortunately was headaches, but not many people are playing D-I football as a running back."

Bailes wound up removing the cyst that was lodged between Brinker's brain and his skull. The craniotomy wasn't a particularly memorable surgery for Bailes, but what happened next was a first for the neurosurgeon.

"The thing that made it unusual was his young age," Bailes said. "And the fact that he was a football player and he wanted to go back to playing football."

Bailes approved of Brinker's return for his senior season because the skull had healed and he felt Brinker's brain would be stable enough to take hits. But there wasn't much precedent to go on.

"There have not been many people after brain surgery who returned to play football at a high level," Bailes said. "I don't know of anybody who's had brain surgery and then gone on to play in the NFL. It is very likely it has happened, but I've never heard of it."

But to prove it's possible, a picture of Brinker in a New York Jets uniform hangs up in Bailes' Chicago-area office.

After a scary recovery, Brinker started running track for Ohio University in the winter and returned to the football field the next year for his senior season. He rushed for a career-high 1,099 yards and 10 touchdowns.

After finishing with 2,826 yards and 27 rushing touchdowns, Brinker went undrafted and was invited to the Jets training camp, where he was a late cut. The next stop was NFL Europe but not for long.

It was 2004 and Brinker was in Birmingham, Ala. Back then, when you got injured in NFL Europe, you got sent there to do your medical rehab.

Brinker was with his wife, Rachelle, and he was bored. They were at a bookstore and he picked up a copy of "Moneyball," the Michael Lewis blockbuster about Billy Beane and the statistical revolution in baseball. Brinker was hooked. Here was this guy who grew up in the cradle of smash-mouth, three-yards-and-a-cloud-of-dust football, where collision is poetry, and he's transfixed by the idea of arbitrage in sports.

"It was really interesting to me and it kind of sparked my interest in analytics on a small scale, because I didn't know how it would fit in football because football was so interdependent," he said. "And over time, obviously, the interest grew and you started to see where analytics could help in football."

But before that happened, Brinker went into medical sales and dealt with the usual post-football doldrums.

"I wasn't clinically diagnosed with depression, but I was going through some things, you know, just struggling to find out who I was, what am I gonna do next," he said.

The years went by, he was doing well in work in the medical sales business, and he decided to help coach high school football in the Columbus area with some friends. In 2008, he made a trip to the University of Cincinnati for a game against South Florida. He was on the sideline when he ran into Terry Bradway, the former GM of the Jets, and they got to talking about a potential future in football.

Brinker said he didn't really want to coach, so Bradway brought up a front-office job and started introducing him to scouts.

It was Packers assistant director of college scouting Shaun Herock, who had scouted Brinker in college, who recommended he try getting into the Green Bay scouting internship program.

Brinker moved his family to Green Bay and found himself in football heaven. Ted Thompson was the GM. John Schneider, Reggie McKenzie, Russ Ball and John Dorsey worked under him. Future Packers GM Brian Gutekunst was a scout and Eliot Wolf was a rising star and his dad, Ron, was still a big influence.

"I did not realize until later how special that place was," Brinker said.

Brinker started as a scouting assistant in 2010 and worked in both pro and college scouting. Then he was promoted to a pro scout.

Green Bay's approach was to teach its football executives how to embrace scouting and player acquisition from a holistic approach. Scouting pro and college players, learning about the salary cap, delving into analytics, they learn a little bit about everything. But in the end, scouting is about making educated guesses, right?

"Ron Wolf said something like, sure, you can teach people what to look for in players, the different attributes and different position specifics, and teach them how to watch film and all the things that go with it, but there is an instinct to what we do," Brinker said. "He said that we're in the prediction business. We're trying to predict human beings, right?"

He found that his football experience helped him trust his instincts. But beyond hitting the road to evaluate talent, Brinker also worked with his mentor Russ Ball, now the executive vice president and director of football operations, on the salary cap in Green Bay. He was getting a Ph.D. in football, but by this point, the Moneyball era had fully hit football, with new owners taking over teams and looking for the NFL's version of Theo Epstein. Ex-jocks now had to compete with Ivy Leaguers for jobs.

"I thought I was missing some formal training, so to speak, and I wanted to accelerate my growth," Brinker said. "Now, the 'school of hard knocks' works because Russ Ball is the poster child for it. The guy was a strength coach and he's considered arguably one of the best football personnel/salary cap people in the league. So I could have learned from Russ and I was learning the practical experience and all that, but I wanted some formal education."

In wanting to differentiate himself, Brinker, who already had a master's in sports administration from Ohio University, applied to get his MBA part-time at the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern. He surprised himself by getting in and his bosses not only agreed to him doing the program, but they offered him time off to complete the grueling two-year program. Instead, Brinker didn't slow down, juggling a full workload in Green Bay, classes and a wife and three kids at home.

It sounded hard, but it beat working in the coal mines.

"I used to talk about his schedule, and what it was like at that point in time, and it was pretty grueling," Ball said. "So he's definitely made a commitment to his craft and to try to be the best he can with his opportunity. And I think it's going to pay dividends."

Carthon knew Brinker from the scouting circuit and trusted him as a contact. So when Carthon got the Titans GM job, he reached out to him for the assistant GM job. Funny enough, he didn't even know about Brinker's MBA, the thing that was supposed to differentiate him from other candidates. Carthon just knew he wanted him around to help build something in Tennessee.

"He had this unique background, you know," Carthon said. "Former player, he has a scouting background, has an analytics background, has a cap background. It was just unique. I thought he would provide really good insight for myself."

So after 13 years in Green Bay, he left. Brinker's focus as assistant GM is on strategy, from roster construction to working on the kind of statistical analysis that will help the front office and the coaching staff. The Titans are 5-10 going into the last two weeks of the season and headed for a top-1o draft pick.

"He's also helping us build out our analytics department here, which is going to be a robust project," Carthon said. "He's heading that up. He also works alongside Vin Marino from the salary cap standpoint, right, while also maintaining his background as a scout. He's a man of many hats."

Brinker wants to be a GM one day, but first, he has a job to do in Tennessee.

So, how do you get from Martins Ferry to the NFL? Just like with anything else in life, you make your own road.

CRUCIAL CATCH: TITANS CENTER LLOYD CUSHENBERRY PLAYING FOR THE "STRONGEST PERSON I KNOW," HIS MOM

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
OCTOBER 16, 2025

NASHVILLE – Debbie Cushenberry was leaving work roughly 20 years ago when she saw a group of kids playing organized football.

When she got home, she asked her eight-year-old son, Lloyd, if he wanted to give it a try. He said yes, and not long after he was wearing No. 35 for the St. Amani Wildcats.

Cushenberry has been playing football ever since, from his days in Pop Warner to high school to college at LSU, all the way to the NFL, first with the Broncos and now the Titans.

Cushenberry's biggest supporter? His mom.

"She's my biggest fan, and my biggest critic, too," Cushenberry said with a smile. "She still considers herself my first coach. She is everything to me."

Cushenberry's mom will be introduced at Nissan Stadium during the first quarter of Sunday's game against the New England Patriots.

Debbie Cushenberry will be recognized as part of the NFL's Crucial Catch initiative, because of her brave battle with breast cancer. In the locker room on Thursday, Lloyd Cushenberry was happy to say that recent tests on his mom were encouraging, with no signs of cancer.

Debbie Cushenberry was diagnosed with breast cancer back in February, and she underwent chemotherapy treatments. At the same time, Lloyd Cushenberry was recovering from an Achilles injury, which ended his 2024 season.

The two encouraged one another. Debbie Cushenberry's body was weakened by the treatments, and she had pain and body aches.

"It rocked my world for a while," Cushenberry said. "I was going through my first major injury, trying to recover from that. I was here every week, but on Fridays I would fly back to Louisiana and take care of her, and then fly back on Monday morning and come here to get treatment. I wanted to be there for her because she's always been there for me.

"By the grace of God, she stayed strong, and my sister did a great job being there full time for her. My brother as well. But it was tough."

Cushenberry said it will be special to see his mom on the field on Sunday.

If he starts to fight his emotions, he'll think of his mom.

As part of the NFL's Crucial Catch campaign, teams honor cancer survivors while remembering those lost to cancer, while also doing their part to educate the public about the importance of early cancer detection.

"My mom always tells me to stray strong, keep pushing, go hard, and that's what I am going to try to do on Sunday, to make her proud," Cushenberry said. "She is the strongest person I know."

TITANS CENTER LLOYD CUSHENBERRY FEELING GOOD, HOPEFUL FOR WEEK ONE RETURN

BY JIM WYATT

JUNE 11, 2025

NASHVILLE – It's been a grind, Titans center Lloyd Cushenberry won't deny that.

But Cushenberry can see the light at the end of the tunnel following a long rehab and recovery process from an Achilles injury, and he has his sights set on being back for the season opener.

"I feel good, man," Cushenberry said. "I am close to being back, cleared and healthy and ready to go. The offseason has been good, I am locking in on my diet, getting in the best shape as I can. I am doing well."

Cushenberry suffered the season-ending Achilles injury in the team's November 3 game against the Patriots, nine games into his first year with the Titans.

He went on Injured Reserve and then began a long and grueling rehabilitation process.

"It's been long, and it's been tough," he said. "It's been a lot of long and lonely days in the training room with all the staff, but they've been great. It's been slow, trying to build my calf strength back up, and everything around it. It's a tough process, but I think it is going well."

While he's been recovering, Cushenberry said he's focused even more on his diet, and game preparation. He admitted the long absence has been a challenge mentally, but the time away allowed him to spend more time watching tape, and bettering his body, and his game. Cushenberry said his body percent percentage has gone down seven percent recently, when he's also lost five pounds.

Cushenberry has been taking part in the stretch periods during this week's minicamp, but he's still not practicing. He missed all of the team's OTAs.

"It's been a test," Cushenberry. "But I feel like it's just a test from God, and I am going through it right now."

After playing his first four NFL seasons with the Denver Broncos, the highly regarded center was voted a team captain by his new teammates in Tennessee at the start of the 2024 season.

He feels like the offseason additions on the offensive line will make a difference on the field this fall, and he's looking forward to being a part of it.

Cushenberry couldn't help but smile when he saw the Broncos are the Week 1 opponent for the Titans. In some ways, he thinks it's appropriate, since he began his NFL career in a game against Tennessee in 2020.

The 6-foot-4-inch, 315-pounder was selected by Broncos in the third round of the 2020 NFL Draft, and he started 57 games at center for the club during his first four NFL campaigns.

Cushenberry said he's as optimistic about being back for the opener, but he has to continue putting in the work.

It remains to be seen whether he'll begin training camp next month on the team's Physically Unable to Perform list.

The Titans don't open the season until September 7.

"I don't want to put a timetable on it yet, but I am on track," Cushenberry said. "Things are looking up, and I just have to take it one day at a time. This summer is going to be huge for me, getting back into football shape, and ready to go. But I'll be back. I'll be back soon.

"I am very optimistic about Week One, and being out there, starting, and ready to go. My body will tell me if I'm ready, but I feel pretty good."

TITANS TRUSTING IN CUSHENBERRY'S BRAINS, BRAWN AT CENTER

BY JOHN GLENNON
NASHVILLE POST
JUNE 11, 2024

Titans coach Brian Callahan spends the majority of his time bettering the team's offense.

Defensive coordinator Dennard Wilson focuses his attention on the other side of the ball.

But both men share the belief that when it comes to pressuring a quarterback, the middle of the pocket is the most critical of all battlegrounds.

"You can manage edge rushers," Callahan said. "You can help on edge rushers. But if the middle of your pocket gets pushed, there's not a lot of places for the quarterback to go."

Added Wilson: "When you dominate the offensive line through the [interior], there's no step-up lanes for the quarterback. And if there's no step-up lanes, if we go back to the corners being connected at the top of the route with no step-up lane, where is there for the quarterback to throw?"

Those comments are a clear reflection of the philosophy behind the Titans' offseason signing of center Lloyd Cushenberry, who will be asked to fortify a trench position that was all too often overrun in 2023.

Titans quarterback Will Levis was pressured on 45 percent of his throws last season, per Pro Football Focus, the second-highest rate among quarterbacks who played at least nine games.

Most of the problems stemmed from Tennessee's turnstile situation at left tackle. But the center of the line failed to hold all too often as well.

Former Titans starter Aaron Brewer, who stood 6-1 and weighed 295 pounds, was mobile but not particularly meaty — and as a result was on many occasions overwhelmed in pass protection. He surrendered the second-most sacks among league centers (six), allowed the second-most quarterback hits (seven) and the third-most pressures (34), per PFF.

Enter the 6-4, 315-pound Cushenberry, who allowed just one sack, four hits and 14 pressures in about the same amount of snaps while in Denver last season. His pass-blocking grade of 76.4 ranked third among centers who played at least 10 games, well above Brewer at 52.5.

"I've always believed in the firmness of the interior of the pocket," Callahan said. "Strong players tend to keep it that way, so there's a place for the quarterback to move and to run and to step up, when needed. That's a huge benefit. These guys inside on the other side of defense keep getting bigger and better and stronger and faster every year. You want people that can match that, and Lloyd can do all those things."

What the Titans have found so far in the offseason is that they admire Cushenberry's brains as well as his brawn.

Titans offensive line coach Bill Callahan began to understand that almost as soon as Cushenberry signed his four-year, $50 million deal with Tennessee, ending a multi-team pursuit of the four-year veteran.

"The thing that strikes me about Lloyd is he's a guy who could have gone anywhere," Bill Callahan said. "But he wanted to be with a team that could improve his game, and he wants to be great. It really struck me that the game goes deeper than the wallet for him. He has a tremendous passion, curiosity and intellect that goes beyond anything. So he's great for our room, super for the team in terms of running the show up front."

Likewise, Cushenberry said the presence of Bill Callahan, who's coached NFL offensive lines for 22 years, was a big plus for the Titans.

"That was a big reason [I signed]," Cushenberry said. "He's very detailed … He has a whole encyclopedia of terms and things he teaches. So, it's a lot to have learned.

"I love going back and watching old film and just picking his brain sometimes. He does a great job because he remembers things as well. I remember in meetings, he pretty much told us a whole series of what happened in a game in 2009 with the Jets. It was amazing to hear."

The Titans have wasted no time in challenging Cushenberry this offseason.

That's because one area the team wants improvement, in addition to pass protection, is efficiency on the offensive line. Tennessee was flagged for 30 false starts last season, the second-highest figure in the league behind the New York Jets (31). In comparison, Brian Callahan's Cincinnati offense last year was whistled 13 times for false starts.

Part of the problem in Tennessee was that there were cadence and communication issues between Levis and Brewer — and between Brewer and his fellow linemen.

What better time to work on that than the offseason?

"We've been hammering [Cushenberry] every single day, and the whole offensive line, about how we're not going to hold back when it comes to cadences, and we're going to empty the bag and start using them all right now," Levis said. "We can't be the team we were last year with all the shooting-ourselves-in-the-foot penalties.

"So they've been doing a really good job with that, and obviously [Cushenberry] is leading that group. He has a lot of great experience and has a really good hold on our protection system. He's been great for me, and he's been great for everyone else in the offense. I feel really comfortable with him when I get under center or when I'm in the gun with him."

It's possible, of course, that the bond between the two was strengthened in late April before a Predators playoff game, when Cushenberry assumed the center position on a Bridgestone Arena stage and snapped a sizable catfish — Nashville's unofficial good-luck charm — to Levis, sending the crowd into a frenzy.

"I didn't know we were going to do it until about 10 minutes before that," Cushenberry said. "So leading up to it, my heart was racing. In my head, I was just like, `Get the snap to him.' I didn't want to mess that up in front of thousands of people."

Cushenberry executed the shotgun snap smoothly, the same way he's handled his first offseason.

LLOYD CUSHENBERRY EAGER TO LEARN FROM BILL CALLAHAN TO REBUILD TITANS OFFENSIVE LINE

BY TERRY MCCORMICK
TITANINSIDER.COM
MARCH 14, 2024

As the Tennessee Titans begin the process of rebuilding their offensive line, they know the culture, as well as the personnel, has to change on a unit that gave up 64 sacks in 2023.

The first move along that road to a rebuild was signing center Lloyd Cushenberry to a four-year deal on the first day of freea agency.

Cushenberry, 26, comes over from the Denver Broncos to put a big body in the middle of the Titans offensive line. At 6-4, 315, Cushenberry replaces the undersized Aaron Brewer and gives the Titans three more inches of height, and more importantly, 40 pounds of man to play the center position.

Cushenberry was matter of fact when asked what attracted him to the Titans in his foray into free agency, and he replied, “Bill Callahan.”

“His resume speaks for itself. He’s coached a lot of great guys and I’ve heard a lot of great things about him. I think it’s a good opportunity for me to continue to grow my game and take the next step as a player,” Cushenberry said.

Cushenberry said it is his understanding that Callahan bring a high level of detail and expectation and he is eager to be his pupil.

“It’s a different level of offensive line play that he kind of unlocks. It’s a lot that goes in to his game planning,” Cushenberry said.

As for rebuilding the culture as part of revamping the offensive line, Cushenberry said it is of the utmost importance.

“It’s a big part of offensive line play, just having a good culture and having a good room, a good group of guys that’s willing to play for each other. That’s what I look forward to trying to build,” he said.

Cushenberry’s NFL foundation was laid by a familiar name to Titans fans, as he was coached by Mike Munchak in Denver.

“Coach Munch was amazing and I see a lot of similarities to what Callahan is teaching. Coming in, he helped me a lay a great foundation and since that point, every year I’ve gotten better and that’s what I want to continue to do,” Cushenberry said.

TITANS LONG SNAPPER MORGAN COX IMPACTED ONCE AGAIN BY "SOUL-SCARRING" MISSION TRIP TO UGANDA

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 2, 2025

NASHVILLE – Morgan Cox traveled to Uganda this offseason to make an impact.

Cox, long snapper for the Tennessee Titans, had also previously traveled to the country in East Africa as part of a mission trip.

It turns out the trip made an even bigger impact on Cox, and his perspective.

Nothing validated that feeling more than the lasting memory of a man living in a mud hut handing Cox a rooster as a show of appreciation for his work, and good deeds, for the people in Uganda. The man had recognized Cox from his first mission trip there in 2019.

"We always describe going to Africa and spending time there as a soul-scarring trip," Cox said. "It's not an easy trip, but it's a very impactful trip to see what goes on in the world and to see how people live.

"The nature of the Christian faith is going out and making disciples of all nations, so being able to share our faith but also taking care of basic needs is the premise, being able to help the people there take care of their children."

Cox, a Collierville, Tennessee, native who played at the University of Tennessee, is heading into his 16th NFL season, and his fifth with the Titans. He's been named to five Pro Bowls, and he was recently selected as the long snapper for ESPN's All-Quarter-Century NFL team.

Cox has made it part of his life's mission to give back to others, and his mindset was put on display once again when he traveled to Uganda as part of a mission initiative team from Grace Evangelical Church in Memphis.

Cox joined 12 others on a trip to Uganda, where the group spent a week assisting those at a village and school that houses 750 kids, ranging from ages from 3 to 22. The school first started years ago under a jackfruit tree, where the school administrator taught kids in the dirt.

Now the kids have a building and desks, and a secondary school, or high school, has been an added to the elementary school.

Cox and another member of the church started a team to travel and help those in a community in Uganda. During his trip in 2019, Cox was part of a group that started the boarding school, and a medical clinic.

During the two trips, including the most recent one, the group has built desks and tables for the school, provided a water well, provided a generator for lighting while also spending time with the kids, playing sports, hosting a field day, and a craft station. The group bought a cow for them to have protein.

Many people in the area live in mud huts, with little resources.

Cox and the others went there once again to help, and for ministry work, to talk about the gospel, telling them about Jesus and faith in Christ.

"God has blessed me with the occupation that I have, and I've always felt a calling for helping others through it," Cox said. "So going to Uganda and being able to help a community there that is clearly in need … You know anything that you give them is going to be received well and impactful."

Cox said the mission initiative team at the church plans to continue returning to Uganda to help those in need.

From his first trip in 2019 to his trip this offseason, Cox said he's been humbled to see the difference that has been made by those who've traveled from Memphis.

He's also aware of the appreciation from those in Uganda. He can see it on the faces of the kids, and from the gesture of the man with the rooster.

"From the kindness of his heart, he wanted to feed me, and feed our group," Cox said.

Cox said he will never forget the man's message – and the fact the rooster ended up defecating on him as he held it.

"Through a translator, the man said: Morgan, thanks for coming back to see us. We are so thankful. May the Lord bless you and your family. I would like for you to have this rooster," Cox said.

"I would never be able to repay him for the message he gave me."

LIFE LESSONS HELPED TITANS LONG SNAPPER MORGAN COX BECOME ONE OF THE FINALISTS FOR THE BART STARR AWARD

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
DECEMBER 12, 2024

NASHVILLE – When Morgan Cox was just a youngster, his father gave him a gift he'll always remember: an autographed poster from Hall of Famer Bart Starr.

Starr was at an autograph signing in Memphis, and Cox's father was a fan of the Packers quarterback.

"(My dad) had a poster signed: To Morgan. Best wishes, Bart Starr," Cox said on Wednesday. "I had it hanging in my room for years."

It makes this moment even more special:

Cox, in his fourth season as long snapper for the Tennessee Titans, is one of 10 finalists for the 2025 Bart Starr Award, honoring those who exhibit outstanding character, integrity and leadership on and off the football field.

Starr was a two-time Super Bowl champion during his playing days with the Packers, and an NFL MVP, while playing from 1956-1971. He later served as head coach of the Packers. Starr passed away in 2019.

"Just knowing the type of person that Bart was, as a family man and in the community, it's an honor to be even in the same breath as him," Cox said on Wednesday. "I've looked up to him. My dad told me about him when I was really young. I'm just truly honored to be selected.

"Bart Starr was a phenomenal man, and I know this award is given out to someone who is intentional, and values family life, and community. So, it truly is an honor."

Cox, who played at the University of Tennessee, joined the Titans in 2021 after playing 11 seasons with the Baltimore Ravens. The Collierville, Tenn. native, who attended Evangelical Christian High School, has been named to five Pro Bowls, and he's one of the team's captains once again this season.

After every game, Cox identifies a player or two from the opposing team's special teams unit, and he offers words of encouragement and support, while praising them for their work and commitment.

Cox also regularly brings together the two teams in postgame for an on-field prayer.

A year ago, Cox was one of the finalists for the Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award.

At some point later this month, an overall winner for the Bart Starr award will be named. The group was recently trimmed from 32 to 10. Voting will take place in conjunction with the Pro Bowl voting in the coming weeks.

Cox, a father of four, credits his entire family for making him the man he is today, from the example they've set, to their service in the community. Both of his grandfathers served in the military, and his father currently serves on the school board in his hometown. His parents rarely miss home games.

"As a strong, Christian believer, it's something that I have been raised on, in a Christian household," Cox said. "My mom and dad used to tell me, when I was really young: 'Be a leader, not a follower.' I remember that from grade school, and what that meant to me was not to just follow the crowd, but to make your own decisions and treat people with respect.

"Being that Athletes in Action is the one that does the (Bart Starr) award, being a part of that organization and having gone through Fellowship of Christian Athletes in school. … Service in the community is such an important part of our family backbone. It's always been important to my family, and to me."

TITANS LONG SNAPPER MORGAN COX NOMINATED FOR ART ROONEY SPORTSMANSHIP AWARD

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
NOVEMBER 22, 2023

NASHVILLE – Titans long snapper Morgan Cox has been nominated for the Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award.

The award is presented each year to an NFL player who best demonstrates the qualities of on-field sportsmanship, including fair play, respect for the game and opponents, and integrity in competition.

On Wednesday, the NFL announced the 32 player nominees for the ninth annual award. Each NFL team nominated one of its players for the award, which recognizes players around the league who exemplify outstanding sportsmanship on the field.

Created in 2014, the award honors the late founding owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Pro Football Hall of Famer Art Rooney Sr.

Cox, who played at the University of Tennessee, joined the Titans in 2021 after playing 11 seasons with the Baltimore Ravens. The Collierville, Tenn., native has been named to five Pro Bowls, and he's one of the team's captains this season.

After every game, Cox identifies a player or two from the opposing team's special teams unit, and he offers words of encouragement and support, while praising them for their work and commitment.

Cox also regularly brings together the two teams in postgame for an on-field prayer.

"I could not be more excited and prouder to hear that Morgan has been nominated for the Art Rooney award," Titans special teams coordinator Craig Aukerman said. "Morgan has demonstrated excellence in competition and sportsmanship both on and off the field. His respect of the game and to his opponents is second to none. As a team captain, Morgan's leadership qualities and willingness to mentor younger players have helped them achieve a high level of integrity to succeed in the National Football League."

A panel of former players from the NFL Legends Community — Warrick Dunn, 2014 Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award recipient Larry Fitzgerald, Pro Football Hall of Famer Curtis Martin and Leonard Wheeler — will select eight finalists (four in the AFC and four in the NFC) from the 32 nominees.

The eight finalists will be listed on the Pro Bowl ballot under the NFL Sportsmanship Award category when players vote in December.

"Sportsmanship is the core of the game, the vanguard of public confidence, the keeper of game integrity," said Troy Vincent, NFL executive vice president of football operations. "These Rooney Sportsmanship Award nominees exemplify the spirit of fair play and the values of respect, integrity, commitment to team and resiliency at the highest level of competition."

The winner of the Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award is determined by a vote of current NFL players. From the eight finalists, each team's players will submit a consensus vote of their choice for the winner. As in Pro Bowl voting, a team cannot vote for its own player.

The winner will be announced as part of NFL Honors. He will receive a $25,000 donation from the NFL Foundation to a charity of his choice.

FROM THE PRO BOWL: LONG SNAPPER MORGAN COX REFLECTS ON LIFE'S BLESSINGS, AND HIS JOURNEY TO THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
FEBRUARY 2, 2023

LAS VEGAS – Morgan Cox has experienced a lot during his 13-year playing career.

The Titans long snapper has played in a Super Bowl and been named to five Pro Bowls. He's played in over 200 career games, in stadiums all over the country. He's made lifelong friends, and countless memories.

As Cox took a helicopter ride on Thursday morning into the Grand Canyon, over Lake Mead and the Hoover Dam, and then over the Las Vegas strip, Cox reflected on his journey, and the blessings that have come with it.

"I've seen God's hands on a lot of things as I kind of reflect on my career," Cox said. "I am grateful for the opportunities I have been given, and the unique experiences I have gotten to have because of this game."

Cox is in Las Vegas for the 2023 Pro Bowl Games. It's his first trip as a Titan after being named a Pro Bowler on four earlier occasions during his playing days with the Ravens, where he won a Super Bowl ring during the 2012 season.

Cox, who just finished his second season in Tennessee, admits this one is special. A Collierville native who played at the University of Tennessee, Cox is representing his home state – and the team he grew up cheering for as a youngster.

While overlooking the Las Vegas Strip on Thursday, Cox told a story about the time he traveled to a Titans game his senior year in high school with his buddies.

They took his mom's Suburban, and they painted "Titans" on it. They also painted letters on their chests, spelling out T-I-T-A-N-S.

"It was a memorable trip," Cox said with a smile.

Long before that, Cox remembers watching the Titans play in Super Bowl XXXIV, at his aunt and uncle's house in Memphis. The Titans-Rams game was projected on a bed sheet.

"I remember (Kevin) Dyson stretching out the ball," Cox said, "and being heartbroken."

Cox never dreamed he'd end up playing in the NFL himself.

It started with a childhood competition, and it's continued because of a lot of hard work.

As an 11-year-old, Cox went out for a football team called the 'Buccaneers' in the Collierville Youth Athletic Association. The coach was his dentist, Bill Burriss.

On the first day of practice, Burris brought all the players up and said they needed to fill the position of 'long snapper'. Everyone got in line, and they all got a chance to snap.

"My first shot at it was really pretty bad," Cox recalled. "So, they moved onto the next person."

But Cox said his father, who happened to be at practice that day, encouraged him to try it again, so he went to the side and practiced. He started to get the hang of it, and he got back in line.

The following year he was back in the mix, as a seventh grader, for the long snapping position at Evangelical Christian School.

"Over time," Cox said, "I got better and better."

Cox played in high school at ECS, got recruited by the University of Tennessee, and after paying his dues for a few years at the school – and learning from FG snapper Adam Miles and punt snapper Ryan West – he got his chance.

Cox ended up playing in 38 games in three seasons at Tennessee, and was then signed by the Ravens as an undrafted free agent in 2010.

As they say, the rest is history.

Cox is humbled to be at the Pro Bowl again.

"It's an honor for me to be here, being a part of the Titans now," Cox said. "To be in my 13th year and to be able to experience the Pro Bowl again, it is truly an amazing honor and tough to put into words what it means to me."

Along the way, Cox said the backing from family and friends has made it even more special.

"The support from my home state has been amazing," he said. "No shortage of ticket requests, but that's been great as well. It's awesome to be able to play in front of people I've been around my whole life. I grew up in Memphis, went to school in Knoxville and everybody converging in Nashville is pretty cool."

Cox plans to enjoy the events surrounding the Pro Bowl Games this week.

He's scheduled to take part in a "Kick-Tac-Toe" event, and has other things planned as well.

"This isn't my kind of town to be honest," he said. "I'm a big saver, not much of a spender."

As he looks ahead, Cox plans to keep working to sharpen his craft.

Even after 13 years, he believes there's always room for improvement.

"I've put in a lot of time and work in kind of honing the craft," he said. "I can never say I have perfected it. I don't think there is such a thing. You're constantly want to chase perfection and find ways to improve your game, whether it be snapping, blocking, covering. I can always improve."

Cox is already looking forward to Year 14.

He's hoping it will be with the Titans.

"God has a plan, and I certainly hope to be back with the Titans next year," he said. "I am going to play as long as I possibly can. I love what I get to do, and I am grateful. I feel like I am still playing at a high level, and I am going to keep playing as long as I can."

TITANS DT JEFFERY SIMMONS, RETURNER CHIMERE DIKE NAMED TO 2026 PRO BOWL ROSTER

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
DECEMBER 23, 2025

NASHVILLE – A Titans veteran and a Titans rookie have been recognized for their exemplary seasons.

The rosters for the 2026 Pro Bowl Games were announced on Tuesday, and defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons and rookie returner Chimere Dike have been named to the AFC's roster.

The players were informed of the news during a team meeting this morning at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park.

It's the fourth time Simmons has been named a Pro Bowler, after also earning spots in 2021, 2022 and 2024.

Dike is the franchise's sixth rookie to be named to the Pro Bowl since the 1970 NFL-AFL merger and the first since returner Marc Mariani in 2010. The others to do so were running back Earl Campbell (1978), defensive end Jevon Kearse (1999), quarterback Vince Young (2006) and running back Chris Johnson (2008).

Player selections for the AFC and NFC rosters for the Pro Bowl Games were determined by the consensus votes of fans, players and coaches, with each group's vote counting as one-third toward determining the all-star players who will be selected to this year's Pro Bowl Games.

Simmons and Dike each finished first in the AFC at their respective positions in the fan voting.

It's been a monster year for Simmons, who leads the team with nine sacks while also recording 54 quarterback pressures, 58 tackles, 16 tackles for a loss, three passes defensed and two forced fumbles.

A first-round pick of the Titans in the 2019 NFL Draft, Simmons now has 40.5 sacks in his career, making him the franchise's 12th player to reach 40 sacks and the fifth player to do so in the organization's "Titans era" (1999 to present).

It's been a do-it-all season for Simmons, who caught a touchdown pass from quarterback Cam Ward in the team's game vs the 49ers on December 14, and he also recorded a safety in this past Sunday's win over the Chiefs.

Simmons is the only defensive tackle since at least 2000 to record both a safety and an offensive touchdown in the same season.

Earlier this month, Simmons was named as the team's nominee for the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year award.

It's been a breakout year for Dike, who on Sunday became just the fourth rookie in NFL history to record at least four receiving touchdowns and two punt return touchdowns, joining Tyreek Hill (2016), Dez Bryant (2010), and Eddie Kennison (1996).

As a rookie, Dike leads the league in all-purpose yards (2,269), kickoff returns (60), kickoff return yards (1,535) and yards per punt return (18.2). He is tied for 12th with 21 punt returns and ranks third in punt return yards with 382. He is one-of-five players this season to record two punt return touchdowns.

Dike also joined A.J. Brown (nine touchdowns in 2019), Chris Johnson (10 in 2008) and Vince Young (seven in 2006) as the only franchise rookies since the start of the 1999 season with at least six total touchdowns.

With a league-high 1,535 kickoff return yards in 2025, Dike moved past Mariani (1,530 in 2010) to set the record for the highest single-season total in franchise history. Dike's 1,535 kickoff return yards are the most in the NFL in a season since Arizona's LaRod Stephens-Howling had 1,548 in 2010.

For the first time, the 2026 Pro Bowl Games will move to Super Bowl LX Week in the San Francisco Bay Area. The event brings the league's top players together for an AFC vs. NFC flag football showdown, coached by Pro Football Hall of Famers Jerry Rice (NFC) and Steve Young (AFC), which will preview the elite athleticism and competition of the sport ahead of its LA28 Olympics debut.

The televised event will air live from San Francisco's Moscone Center on Tuesday, Feb. 3. Coverage of the Pro Bowl Games powered by Verizon will begin on ESPN starting at 5:30 p.m. CT with the flag game at 7 p.m. CT. The game will air on ESPN, Disney XD and ESPN Deportes.

TITANS RETURNER CHIMERE DIKE HONORS HIS FALLEN FRIEND ON WAY TO THE END ZONE, ONE STEP AT A TIME

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
NOVEMBER 24, 2025

NASHVILLE – Every Titans fan has probably seen Chimere Dike's 90-yard punt return on Sunday, when he raced down the sideline and toward the end zone against the Seahawks.

But did you notice what Dike did when he got there?

Dike pointed at his colorful cleats, before pointing to the sky.

Mike Lermer saw it, and he was flooded with emotions.

"It brought tears to my eyes," Lermer said on Monday, "to see Chim and Kai out on the field again that way. It was amazing to see, and it meant a lot to me and my family."

As part of the NFL's 'My Cause, My Cleats' initiative, Dike was honoring his high school buddy, Kai Lermer, with his cleats in Sunday's game. The cleats were designed with Waukesha North High School colors, some of the sports Dike and Lermer played together, and lettering from the memorial fund created in his name.

Kai Lermer died from an undiagnosed heart condition back in high school in 2019. Lermer was just 16 years old when he collapsed while playing basketball with friends. Dike and Lermer became friends when they were roughly 10 years old, said Mike Lermer, Kai's father.

A memorial fund in honor of Kai, who was a junior in high school, was set up. In the past, Dike has also taken part in football camps that have raised money for the cause.

Dike said the moment – scoring a touchdown wearing his buddy's cleats – was "super special."

And he hopes it brings more attention to Kai, and the memorial fund in his name.

Dike also added a second touchdown for the Titans in the fourth quarter of Sunday's game.

"I knew if I got the opportunity, I wanted to do something," said Dike, whose punt return tied Pacman Jones' 2006 record for the longest punt return in franchise history. "I was talking to his dad and the work that they do is truly amazing. To be in the position that they were in, losing their son suddenly like they did. … Obviously losing a child any time is hard, but when it comes sudden like that, I can't even imagine. And the first thing they did is think about other families, and how they can help other people. That inspires me.

"I am a man of faith, and I think one of the things we're put on earth to do is serve other people. The fact that I can have this platform and be in a position to give a small piece to highlight what they are doing and the work they put in, and the selfishness they have, it is definitely a blessing for me.

"I am just thankful for them and my friend as well, my brother looking over me."

Since their son's death, Kai's family has worked to prevent a tragedy from happening to others. The Kai Lermer Memorial Fund partnered with multiple groups to educate others and provide resources.

In March 2022, the Kai 11 Bill was passed in the Wisconsin Legislature. The bill informs parents of student athletes about the risk of sudden cardiac arrest and gives them the option of getting an EKG test done for their child. The city approved to put AEDs in schools and in some of the public parks. Kai's mother started a separate foundation where low-cost EKG screenings are available.

For those interested in contributing to the Kai Lermer Memorial Fund, here's the link: CLICK HERE.

"I obviously saw 'My Cause, My Cleats' growing up and thought this was the perfect opportunity to shine a light on (Kai and the memorial fund). … It was really tough on the whole community (when Kai passed away). Luckily, I have some really good family and friends that helped me through it.

"It just made me appreciate those around me and understand the bigger picture of how much people mean in your life."

MEET CHIMERE DIKE, THE NFL'S BEST RETURN MAN AND THE TITANS' ALL-SEEING STAR

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
NOVEMBER 25, 2025

Chimere Dike sees things.

Vision, above all else, is Dike's talent.

On the football field, he's got this uncanny ability to divide his eyes. Loft a punt his way to find out what that means. Watch him scan from snapper to punter to ball in the air to the gunners screaming down the sideline, back to the ball, back to the gunners, back to the ball again and back to the gunners without ever having to look at his feet or where he is on the field. Watch how still his feet are when he gathers under the arcing football.

Feel how quiet he looks. How serene he seems.

Science calls it proprioception. Humanity calls it a sixth sense. Dike is seeing without his eyes, recognizing patterns without having to look at them. He sees where everybody is. He sees where he is. Everything, every factor, every blade of grass, is seen and accounted for.

Calm. Patient. Steady.

Wait for it...

Wait for it...

Go!

It's only taken 11 games for Dike, the Tennessee Titans' rookie receiver and returner, to establish himself as the NFL's most effective and dangerous special teams ace. He leads the league in all-purpose yards with 1,760, working out to a rate of 160 yards per game. He's already returned two punts for touchdowns, the first of which erased a 13-year Titans drought and the second of which tied the franchise record for longest punt return (90 yards). He's the only player in the NFL this season with multiple kickoff returns that've gained 40+ yards and multiple punt returns that have gained 40+ yards.

And oh, right, in the last five weeks, the only rookie wide receivers who've put up more receiving yards than Dike are Tetairoa McMillan and Emeka Egbuka, the first two pure receivers drafted last April. Dike, a fourth-round pick, was the 14th receiver taken. And had a bye week in the middle there.

So what's the secret? Again, it's that vision. Chimere Dike sees things. And not just on the field.

Chimere Dike sees his future

The origins of Dike's dreams are impossible to spell out without verging on corny. When Dike was 10 or 11 years old, growing up in Waukesha, Wisconsin, he came home from basketball practice and asked his father Uche: "Do you think I can play in the NBA?" Uche, a serious but supportive man, said: "I know you will."

Close enough.

Dike was a better football player than basketball player. He claims he was even better at baseball than football, but he found the game boring. Despite his father's protests (baseball's where the money is, according to Uche), Dike focused on football, where his natural athletic traits shone through.

Then he got to Wisconsin for college and those natural traits weren't enough. For the first time in his life, Dike wasn't the far-and-away most gifted athlete around. And what's worse, those traits weren't even the end-all, be-all. He watched as a 5-foot-7 walk-on receiver named Jack Dunn led a receiver room stacked with bigger, stronger, faster and more versatile future pros.

"Everybody's like 'Why is he on the field?'" Dike remembers. "He learned the offense, he executed every single time, he was detailed, he worked his tail off, he knew defenses. I was like 'If I could have the gifts God gave me and have that process, that sort of football knowledge and that sort of work ethic, I could be special.'"

Another former Wisconsin walk-on, future Hall of Fame defender J.J. Watt, offered Dike a similar lesson.

During the offseason toward the end of his career, Watt would return to Wisconsin to work with fellow former Badgers like Zack Baun, T.J. Edwards and his brother, T.J. Watt. Dike frequented the same gym and observed Watt, already a three-time NFL Defensive Player of the Year, pushing the younger players by adding more and more weight to lifts and sleds.

"I was like 'If that guy can have that mentality, I've got to take advantage of my process right now,' Dike says.

It's not as if Dike necessarily needed lessons on work ethic. His father, a Nigerian immigrant, and his mother, a native Wisconsinite, draw plenty of compliments for their work ethic. So too, Dike says, do his sisters. And Dike says his girlfriend, a professional hockey player for the Seattle Torrent of the PWHL, has an unmatched work ethic even when the two are together.

But these are the things Dike has a knack for seeing, and absorbing too.

Chimere Dike sees his present

When Titans special teams coordinator John Fassel talks about Dike, he draws a distinction between "speed" and "courage speed."

Dike's an excellent runner. His eye-popping 4.34-second time in the 40-yard dash at the 2025 NFL Scouting Combine was third-fastest among receivers. Fassel doesn't really seem to give a hoot. He's seen enough track stars who let their 4.34-speed lag into 4.64-speed in games because of fear.

"To run up and just hit a seam as fast as he can takes a lot of courage," Fassel says. "(With Dike), there's not a lot of pitter-patter or bouncing it because it gets a little bit scary in there. You can definitely tell a player's courage speed once they put the pads on. So I've become somebody special teams wise that I really don't look at short shuttle times and 40-yard dash times because it changes when the pads come on."

Alvis Whitted, Dike's receivers coach for his first three years at Wisconsin, describes Dike similarly. A one-time track star and nine-year NFL vet himself, Whitted says he recognized pro potential in Dike early on, particularly because of the way blocked. Whitted recalls Dike laying a crack-back block against Michigan on a play Dike had barely practiced to spring a big gain on a reverse that epitomized "sacrifice." So too did Dike's fearless pursuit on special teams that meant barreling full-speed into linebackers and absorbing the blow.

Tyke Tolbert, Dike's receivers coach with the Titans, credits Dike's attitude to confidence. He's fast, he's versatile and he knows what to do. That breeds confidence, and a confident player won't play afraid. In that sense, Tolbert draws comparisons between Dike and Anquan Boldin, who won NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year in 2003 under Tolbert's tutelage.

Call it courage, call it fearlessness or call it confidence. Whatever it is, it's working. The stats prove it, but more importantly, Dike can feel it.

After his seven-catch, 93-yard breakout performance in Week 8 against Indianapolis, Dike fielded a call from Whitted.

"He was like 'Coach, I can play in this league,'" Whitted recalled.

"When you're a rookie, you feel it," Dike added in conversation with The Tennessean a month later. "…I want to be somebody who the organization can rely on, who my teammates can rely on and who helps bring winning football here. I know there are going to be mistakes along the way. I know I'm not going to be perfect, but I know I can work my tail off to be one of the best players that I can be and hopefully one of the best players in the world someday."

Dike sees the vision. Part of which is making the rest of the world see what he sees.

Not a bad start.

TITANS RETURNER CHIMERE DIKE NAMED AFC SPECIAL TEAMS PLAYER OF THE WEEK

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
OCTOBER 8, 2025

NASHVILLE – Titans returner Chimere Dike has been named AFC Special Teams Player of the Week.

Dike returned a kickoff 65 yards in the team's 22-21 win over the Cardinals on Sunday, which set up a field goal for the Titans.

Dike returned four kickoffs for 136 yards (34.0 average) against the Cardinals, along with three punts for 33 yards (11.0). Dike also had two catches for 17 yards in the game.

Dike's 65-yard kick return was the second-longest kickoff return of his rookie season (71 at Denver on Sept. 7). It gave him two of the NFL's top five longest kickoff returns to date in 2025. His 71-yarder against Denver was the second longest of the season and his 65-yard return ranked fourth.

So far this season Dike has returned 25 kickoffs for 666 yards (26.6 avg.), which leads league. Dike has also returned six punt returns for 82 yards (13.7 avg.).

Dike became the first rookie to garner the honor in 2025.

He's the first Titans returner to earn the award since 2012, when Darius Reynaud won the honor in Week 17.

Dike's award marks the 41st AFC Special Teams Player of the Week honor given to a Titans/Oilers player and is the 132nd overall Player of the Week honor in franchise history.

Dike became the first Titan non-kicker/punter to earn the honor since defensive back Dane Cruikshank (Week 2, 2018).

A fourth-round pick of the Titans in the 2025 NFL Draft, Dike currently leads the NFL with 783 all-purpose yards, which puts him ahead of Christian McCaffrey (669), Puka Nacua (640), Kavontae Turpin (617) and Jonathan Taylor (613).

The Titans return to action on Sunday at the Las Vegas Raiders.

ROOKIE CHIMERE DIKE THANKFUL FOR TRUST FROM COACHES AS HE EMBRACES JOB AS RETURN MAN

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
SEPTEMBER 3, 2025

NASHVILLE – Chimere Dike is ready for Week One.

And, the Titans are ready to put their trust in Dike, the team's fourth round pick out of Florida who is first on the depth chart as a punt returner and kick returner.

"I feel ready," Dike said. "The work I put in during training camp, the work I have put in throughout my career, it's a role that I really enjoy and I am thankful that Coach Bones (ST coordinator John Fassel) and coach (Brian) Callahan had trust in me to put me back there, and I am going to try and prove it every week and take it one game at a time."

The Titans drafted Dike and Elic Ayomanor in the 2025 NFL Draft, and both are set to have significant roles to start the season, beginning on Sunday against the Broncos in Denver.

Ayomanor is listed as a starter at receiver alongside veterans Calvin Ridley and Tyler Lockett, and Dike is in line to help as a returner, and at receiver after showing promise in practices, and games.

Dike averaged 23.6 yards per return on 20 kickoffs while at Wisconsin, and he averaged 11.5 yards on 26 punt returns at Wisconsin and Florida.

In the preseason, Dike returned four kickoffs for the Titans, averaging 27.8 yards, and he averaged 6.0 yards on two punt returns.

Dike said he's counting the days until his NFL debut.

"It's super exciting," Dike said. "To see the work you've put in since spring, obviously growing up playing football this is your dream to play at this level. So, to have the opportunity to play my first NFL game – my parents will be there, some of my family will be there to support me – it is going to be a really special moment."

GATORS RECEIVER DIKE HAS MADE IMPACT WHEREVER HE'S BEEN

BY SCOTT CARTER
FLORIDAGATORS.COM
SEPTEMBER 29, 2024

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — They have all moved on since that late 2022 lunch at Café Hollander, a favorite spot near the University of Wisconsin campus where Badgers gather for Belgian beers and European-style comfort food.

Tight end Clay Cundiff, whose career was wrecked by injuries, retired from the game prior to the 2023 season. Center Joe Tippmann heard his name called a few months later in the second round of the NFL Draft, and Tippmann is now the starter for the New York Jets, snapping the ball to quarterback Aaron Rodgers. Meanwhile, receiver Chimere Dike sensed what the lunch meeting might be about and wanted to offer his full support to quarterback Graham Mertz.

After four seasons at Wisconsin, Mertz informed a small group of close teammates that he was leaving to continue his career at Florida. Dike was the only player who would play for the Badgers last season, but he never took his eyes off Mertz.

"We stayed in touch," Dike said. "Every single game that we didn't play, we'd be in my living room with my roommates, and we were watching it. I remember watching the Tennessee game and being like, 'Let's go. That's my guy.' I've supported him all the way."

Unbeknownst to Dike on that Madison winter afternoon, his days catching passes from Mertz were not over. He rejoined Mertz when he transferred to Florida in January, eager to see if they could reconnect the way they did at Wisconsin during the 2022 season when Dike led the Badgers with 47 receptions, 689 yards and six touchdowns. Dike's numbers dipped to 19-238-1 last season.

"We kind of grew up together in college football," Dike said.

Following Florida's victory at Mississippi State last week, Dike smiled whenever Mertz's name popped up after Mertz completed 21 of 23 passes and three touchdowns. Dike finished with three catches for 43 yards in the 45-28 win.

Starting in front of true freshman DJ Lagway in the two-quarterback system utilized by head coach Billy Napier, Mertz was sharp from the beginning.

"He's competitive, resilient, and he doesn't give in to adversity," Dike said. "He's one of my best friends off the field, just being able to spend so much time with him, but that's a guy that has been through some adversity the past couple weeks, and I think when you turn on the film, you can see the character that he has. I'm thankful I get to play with him for one more year."

Mertz, Graham and Dike, Chimere (2024)

While Dike's previous relationship with Mertz has highlighted most stories about the UF newcomer, his departure from Wisconsin was a giant leap. A native of Waukesha, Wis., Dike left home when he opted to transfer for his final season of eligibility. Dike was a team captain for the Badgers last season and grew up in the Milwaukee suburbs, his hometown a 70-mile drive to Camp Randall Stadium.

Mertz, who grew up in Kansas City, said it was difficult for him to leave because of the team's culture. Still, when former coach Paul Chryst was fired and replaced by Luke Fickell, Mertz decided he needed a fresh opportunity and chose Florida.

First, he had to tell Dike.

"I mean, Chim's my brother," Mertz said. "I've known that guy. We've been through some great times and some hard times. I don't think anybody knows me as good as he knows me. I don't think anybody knows him as good as I know him. So that was not easy. I never thought I would be on a team with him again."

Their fates aligned when the Gators, seeking to replenish a position group that lost Ricky Pearsall to the NFL and Caleb Douglas and Thai Chiaokhiao-Bowman to the transfer portal, offered Dike via the transfer portal.

Soon after Dike enrolled, he and Mertz hit the golf course on a sunny winter day, a rarity from their days together in Wisconsin.

"We just looked at each other, and I'm like, 'What are we doing? Like, how do we end up here?' We're on a golf course in January in Florida," Mertz said. "We normally had like a month and a half to play golf in Wisconsin."

Dike's quick ascension on the Florida roster was evident following the season-opening loss to Miami. Following head coach Billy Napier's press conference, veteran defensive lineman Justus Boone and Dike were the only players to address the media from the podium in the team's meeting room at Ben Hill Griffin Stadium. Mertz was knocked out of the game with a concussion.

It was Dike's first game as a Gator, but he did not avoid discussing a defeat that sent ripples across Gator Nation.

"The thing is, I had the experience of having big losses before, and there's kind of two choices you can make," Dike said. "You can either concede and go into the loss, or you can respond from that. But I know the guys in our room, and I know the guys on our team are willing to grow from this, and that's the only choice we have."

The 22-year-old Dike has suffered much more significant losses than in football. One of his best friends growing up, Kai Lermer, died in 2019 from a rare undetected heart condition. The two spent countless hours together at Dike's home and went to high school together.

In the summer of 2022, Dike held a youth football camp to benefit a memorial fund in Lermer's honor shortly after the Kai 11 Bill, intended to help prevent sudden cardiac arrest deaths in young adults, was signed into law in Wisconsin. Mertz was one of more than a dozen Badgers who participated in the event at Waukesha North High, where Dike played football, baseball and basketball. Dike held the camp once again in the summer of 2023.

Kai Lermer is never far from Dike's mind. He keeps his keys on a Chicago Bulls keychain that belonged to Lermer, who was 16 when he died. The keychain was a gift from Lermer's father after Kia's death.

Mike Lermer told the Waukesha County Freeman he is grateful that Dike is "still passionate about keeping his [son's] memory alive."

As the Gators move deeper into the season, Dike figures to continue to be a key contributor and a player fans will learn more about. The Gators won two of three entering their bye week and return to action on Saturday when UCF visits The Swamp.

Dike is off to a good start, hauling in 11 passes for 189 yards and a touchdown. He has excelled on special teams, averaging 16.7 yards on six punt returns and downing two punts inside opponents' 5-yard line.

He impacts in ways that surprise no one who knows him in Wisconsin. It's the way Dike has always approached the game – and life.

"I think if I can help any aspect of the team, I want to," Dike said. "I'm a student of the game, and I like taking things and learning from different people. There's so many different things that you can take."

'I THINK ABOUT HIM EVERY DAY': UW'S CHIMERE DIKE USES HIS PLATFORM TO HONOR A FALLEN FRIEND, RAISE AWARENESS OF THE VALUE OF EKGS

BY JEFF POTRYKUS
MILWAUKEE JOURNAL SENTINEL
JUNE 21, 2022

MADISON – Chimere Dike hasn't forgotten the friend he lost a little more than three years ago.

"His memory and his impact still is with me and he pushes me every day," Dike said. "I think about him every day."

The friend to whom Dike referred was Kai Lermer, a classmate and teammate at Waukesha North High School who went into cardiac arrest while playing basketball on March 25, 2019. Lermer, a 16-year-old junior at the time, survived after being rushed to a hospital but was taken off life support several days later. The lack of oxygen had left him with little brain activity.

"I was with him that day," Dike recalled. "We went to Q'Doba to get lunch."

Lermer had an undiagnosed heart condition called Wolff-Parkinson-White Syndrome. Individuals who have WPW have an extra electrical pathway between the upper and lower chambers of the heart. The result is a rapid heartbeat.

The condition can be diagnosed with an EKG but such tests typically are not included in physical examinations for Wisconsin high school athletes.

Dike, hoping to raise awareness about EKGs and support the Kai Lermer Memorial Fund, is set to host a youth football camp June 25 at Waukesha North High School.

Lermer would have turned 20 on June 16.

"I grew up playing with him in all sports," said Dike, who was a junior at North in 2019. "It was tough, but our community really came together and we got through it.

"And when his family started the foundation, I knew it was such a good cause that I knew it was something I wanted to be able to give back to. Obviously, I have aspirations of playing pro ball. And I knew if I was fortunate enough to be able to reach that level, I would do something with my platform.

"But with NIL (Name, Image and Likeness) I realized that maybe my platform could be used now, even if it is on a smaller scale. I said: 'Why wait to do something? Why wait to get it started?'

"So, I thought about doing the camp, not only to give back to the foundation but also to my community. We've got a lot of really good players coming so I'm excited."

The camp is open to students entering third through 10th grade. Camp packages are either $50 or $85 and Dike plans to contribute some of the proceeds to the memorial fund.

Several UW players are set to work the camp with Dike. They include safety Hunter Wohler, quarterback Graham Mertz, tailback Braelon Allen, linebackers Nick Herbig and C.J. Goetz and wide receiver Dean Engram.

"It has been great that the guys have been volunteering to come," Dike said. "That means a lot to me because they are supporting something that is important to me. It speaks to the kind of guys they are."

In the wake of their son's death, Lermer's parents worked to introduce a bill to raise awareness about sudden cardiac arrest in young athletes.

Gov. Tony Evers signed a bill — Kai-11 — into law March 29.

Gov. Tony Evers signed the Kai-11 bill into law March 29 at Waukesha North High School, a measure aimed at educating parents and coaches on the dangers of sudden cardiac arrest in youth by using EKG testing. Waukesha North student athlete Kai Lermer died three years earlier of an undiagnosed heart condition.

The bill requires the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association and the Wisconsin Department of Instruction, along with a minimum of two pediatric cardiologists, to work to educate coaches, athletes and their parents about the risk of sudden cardiac arrest.

It also requires that parents and athletes are given information about EKGs, including the benefits and any potential risks, as well as how to request such testing from a health care provider.

The information is to be given to athletes 12 years and older at the beginning of each youth sports season.

“An EKG could have detected his heart condition and that could have saved his life,” Dike said. “That is why the foundation is so impactful because it could save lives. That is why I am so passionate about it.

“It is something that is so simple. When I came here to UW, we do EKG testing. And that was an eye-opener. It almost made me angry because I saw how quick it was and how seamless it is. That fact that it’s not required in (high school) health checks is kind of ridiculous to me.

“It is a five-minute process that can help save lives. The more we can raise awareness … it is really important.”

‘THERE’S NOTHING HE CAN’T DO’: WHY DYNAMIC IN-STATE WR CHIMERE DIKE IS READY TO MAKE AN IMPACT AT WISCONSIN

BY JESSE TEMPLE
THE ATHLETIC
JANUARY 15, 2020

Waukesha (Wis.) North football coach Matt Harris knew his star player was exhausted, running on fumes in an effort to keep his team in a September game against defending Division 1 state champion Muskego. Chimere Dike had barely come off the field, used at wide receiver and running back on offense, as a safety on defense, as a punt returner and kick returner and as a gunner on the punt and kickoff teams. He needed a water break, and he needed it now.

The problem, Harris realized, was that this was a really bad time. Dike was about to field a third-quarter kickoff with Waukesha North trailing by two touchdowns, and the team required a big play. Harris informed Dike, half-jokingly, that if he simply scored a touchdown he could rest. After all, Dike was not on the field goal or extra-point units — the only phases of the game where he didn’t contribute.

Dike caught the kick and ran straight ahead behind his blockers. He bounced off a would-be tackler at the 27-yard line and slipped through a small crease. Then came magic. He eluded two separate shoe-string tackle attempts from behind at the 33 and the 38 and outran three more defenders down the left sideline, pulling away as he hit full speed. His 92-yard kick return for a touchdown trimmed the deficit to 28-20. Dike earned his water break.

“It’s ridiculous the amount of output he had in games considering he really never came off the field except for on field goals and extra points, and that’s it,” Harris said. “But he didn’t ever want to come off. He always wanted to make plays. You don’t do it with everyone, especially in our conference. There’s not many players who can pull that off, and he did. And he did it for one reason, and that was to help his team win. That’s all he cared about.”

Chimere Dike (pronounced Chim-Ray Dee-Kay) possesses a skill set that makes him one of the best wide receivers to come out of the Wisconsin prep ranks in the past decade. That’s why the Badgers extended a rare in-state scholarship offer to someone at that position. Dike, who grew up dreaming of playing for Wisconsin, took less than a week to commit.

He signed as a member of Wisconsin’s 2020 recruiting class in December and arrived this week as an early enrollee ready to begin classes, winter workouts and prepare for spring practice to give himself the best chance to contribute right away. Dike became the first in-state scholarship wide receiver to sign with Wisconsin in seven years, since Jazz Peavy in 2013.

Dike, listed at 6-foot and 175 pounds on Wisconsin’s signing day roster, consistently showed he was a versatile threat. He caught 59 passes for 962 yards and six touchdowns as a senior. He also carried the ball 43 times for 318 yards with six more scores. Dike recorded 93 total tackles, two forced fumbles and two interceptions and added two kick returns for touchdowns.

He was a two-time all-state selection at wide receiver and earned first-team all-state as a senior on offense, with honorable mention all-state honors on defense from the Wisconsin Football Coaches Association. Dike also collected the Al Toon Award as the state’s top senior wide receiver.

Harris can supply a steady stream of Dike’s most impressive highlight-reel plays. One of Harris’ first encounters seeing Dike’s competitiveness and talent shine through came in his second varsity game as a freshman against Whitnall. Waukesha North had dialed up a pass designed to beat one safety over the top on a play that nearly always went for a touchdown in practice. Harris wanted to pull Dike from the game and have a more experienced receiver run the play.

“Chimere looked me in the eyes and said, ‘Do not do this. I will score,’” Harris recalled. “And I just laughed. I couldn’t believe he thought to tell me that in the game. So I just looked at him and I was like, ‘Man, I actually believe him.’ So I put him in and I let him run it. We threw the seam to him and he caught it and he ran so fast, even though those kids were probably faster than him at that age. But he knew he was not going to come back to the sideline without scoring. Sure enough, he scored and came up to me after and said, ‘I told you.’”

During Dike’s all-state junior season, he caught 79 passes for 1,091 yards and 12 touchdowns, none more jaw-dropping than in a Week 5 game against Oconomowoc. Dike hauled in a screen on the right side of the field at the 20-yard line with a defender directly next to him. He shook the defender while trying to cut across the field, only to meet two more defenders. Dike cut upfield and dropped both players. Another defender reached him at the 15 but missed the wraparound tackle at his waist. Dike ran up the right sideline and beat the rest of the defense to the end zone. Waukesha North escaped with a 35-34 victory.

Harris singled out one more play from Dike’s senior season against Waukesha West in which he was used at running back near the goal line. Dike fielded a handoff and was met by a defender, who bent low to tackle Dike at the 3-yard line. Dike used his left arm to push himself upright, spun off four more potential tacklers and crossed the goal line for a touchdown run. The sequence highlighted his intelligence, athleticism, balance and strength. That play, as well as Dike’s kickoff return for a touchdown against Muskego and a long touchdown catch, were featured on his video highlight package that Wisconsin compiled on signing day.

"For us on our level, especially in high school, there's nothing he can't do," Harris said. "He had incredible hands. His route running abilities were as good as anyone I've ever seen, and I've had a couple other D-I wide receivers. He just was the whole package."

Dike was a four-sport athlete for the first two years of his high school career. He played football in the fall, basketball in the winter, track in the spring and baseball in the summer. When the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association moved baseball to the spring, he dropped the sport in order to focus on track, where he starred. Dike said his personal best in the 100-meter dash is 10.85 seconds.

His dedication to multiple sports and ability to excel in all of them caught the eye of Wisconsin special teams coach Chris Haering, the football program's in-state recruiter, as well as offensive coordinator Joe Rudolph.

"I'll be honest, everything stood out about Chim," Rudolph said. "I went there with Coach Haering. He loved him. He said, 'I want you to come see this guy. I'm pumped about him.' Man, by the time I walked out of the school hearing everyone talk about him, watching film, going through things, I'm like, 'Shit, I love him too, man.'

"Here's a kid with all-conference (honors) in four different sports. I'm like, 'I don't know if there's anything he can't do.' So I'm excited. He'll be in at the mid-year. I think that'll give him a great opportunity to impact this place. But whenever he does make the impact, he surely will. I'm really excited about him and his future here."

Dike was the only signee in the 2020 class listed by Wisconsin as an athlete rather than having a defined position, although Rudolph said he anticipated Dike beginning his career at wide receiver. Harris said Dike's skills translated all over the field, including at safety, cornerback and running back but that he would do whatever the team asked of him.

Dike finally beginning his Wisconsin career is the culmination of a childhood dream. Dike's mom, Mary, said she and her husband, Uche, both attended Wisconsin, as did Mary's father. Uche recalled that the family visited campus when Chimere was 12 because his older sister was touring colleges. They attended a track meet at the Shell, a recreational sports complex located next to Camp Randall Stadium. As they walked in the shadows of the football stadium, Chimere turned to Uche and said: "I'm going to play football here someday, dad."

"Wisconsin is basically in our blood," Mary said.

Dike said he and his friends used to play backyard football and fight over which person could pretend to be tight end Lance Kendricks and wide receiver Nick Toon, both of whom played for Wisconsin. Dike insisted on being Toon.

"I always had aspirations of being a Badger," Dike said. "When I started going through the recruiting process, I really wanted to pick the school that was best for my future. But as I got around the program and was around the coaches and players, I could really see that Wisconsin was a fit. And every time I would go back, I would feel most at home there. I wanted to take a little bit of time to think about it. But every single time I thought about it, I would just come back to the same decision."

Dike's first scholarship offer came from Iowa State in January 2019. Wisconsin followed with an offer the next week while Dike visited campus for junior day and took in a Badgers basketball game against Michigan. He committed five days later on Jan. 24 and then immediately shut down his recruitment, even as other Big Ten programs inquired about his availability.

"There were all these recruiters that were still coming to the high school," Uche said. "He pretty much came home after two or three days after the offer from Wisconsin and said, 'Dad, I am not going to play for other schools over Wisconsin. So what's the point of waiting?' He didn't see any value in waiting to get offers. He was not really interested."

Added Mary: "When they offered, it was a no-brainer. He felt like he had to hold out and wait. But the more the days went by, it was actually more stressful for him to not tell them. It was an easy decision for him."

Uche had spoken with Wisconsin head coach Paul Chryst during the recruiting process and came away impressed with his straightforward approach. Chryst didn't make any promises about playing time and said Dike was free to visit other schools if he wanted. But Chryst made it clear that coaches thought Dike would be an excellent fit for the program and that they could help him develop on and off the field.

Wisconsin's wide receiver pecking order is in flux a bit this offseason with the departure of No. 1 receiver Quintez Cephus, who declared for the NFL draft, as well as A.J. Taylor using up his eligibility and Aron Cruickshank entering the transfer portal. Danny Davis and Kendric Pryor figure to step into more prominent roles within the offense. But if a playmaker emerges elsewhere, even as a true freshman, he could potentially work his way into the rotation. Harris said Dike's skillset reminds him of what Cephus provided for Wisconsin's offense.

Wisconsin returns seniors Jack Dunn and Adam Krumholz, who combined for seven catches for 61 yards with one touchdown. None of the other receivers on the roster have been regular contributors, and only Taj Mustapha has a catch from that group. Dike enrolling early could give him the head start he needs to make inroads toward playing time. His ability as a returner is intriguing as well, particularly considering Cruickshank, the Badgers' No. 1 kick returner last season, is gone.

“I think my goal is to impact the team in any way I can,” Dike said. “Whether that’s starting or being a practice player, whatever I’m going to be, I’m just going to try to get better every single day and hopefully impact the team in a positive way.”

Dike said his two biggest strengths entering college were his ability to run clean, crisp routes, as well as to make plays once he had the ball in his hands. He praised Badgers wide receivers coach Ted Gilmore for his ability to develop players mentally and physically. Harris said Dike mapped out his high school curriculum so he could graduate early and enroll in college. He told Harris he had nothing more to prove in high school and couldn’t wait to get a head start at the next level.

Dike isn’t the only one excited about what he can offer Wisconsin.

“He’s been getting double- or triple-teamed on every single play the past two years,” Harris said. “We’re a smaller school in our conference, and teams can afford to put two or three guys on him because they can make up for it in other spots against us. For him to do the things that he did and basically change every team’s defense when we played them to focus entirely around one player, a wide receiver, nonetheless, I can’t wait to watch somebody try to cover him 1-on-1.”

‘YOU CAN’T TEACH THAT SIZE’: ALI GAYE’S JOURNEY FROM THE GAMBIA TO LSU STARTER

BY BRODY MILLER
THE ATHLETIC
SEPTEMBER 22, 2020

BATON ROUGE, La. — When Ali Gaye came to visit Baton Rouge, Bill Busch ensured it was different from most college visits. Because Gaye is a little different than most players he recruits.

Gaye is a Muslim. A devout one. He’s a 6-foot-6 defensive lineman born in The Gambia in West Africa who moved to the Seattle area when he was 12. He was a soccer player. His first language is Wolof. His parents’ first languages are two different dialects. Gaye himself speaks three fluently and knows a good amount of five or six.

Busch did his research. The LSU safeties coach is known for recruiting the details. He often starts his texting campaign to recruits at 5:30 a.m. And with this visit, he was going to make Gaye and his parents, Omar Gaye and Afsatou Jallow, feel comfortable.

“We did a lot of things with how his Muslim religion fit in here in Louisiana,” Busch told The Athletic in December.

Busch planned what meals they’d eat. They introduced the family to former Gambian LSU athletes to explain their experiences. One they discovered was from Afsatou’s neighboring town. He had LSU Muslim outreach groups meet with them. He even made sure Gaye’s high school coach — John Gradwohl, who Gaye at one point lived with — got a waiver to come on the visit.

So by the final day of the trip, after LSU made Gaye and his parents feel comfortable he could continue following his faith, Gradwohl asked Gaye what he thought. It was the first of five scheduled college visits.

“This is where I want to be,” Gaye decided. He committed to LSU by the end of the weekend.

Fourteen months later, less than a week before LSU’s season opener against Mississippi State, Gaye called Gradwohl with some surprising news. Ed Orgeron named him LSU’s starting left defensive end.

“I was just so happy because I knew the winding road he took to get there,” Gradwohl said. “And if anybody appreciates it, I tell you, he sure does.”

Let’s go back, though. Back to the eighth-grader moving to Washington from The Gambia. There were problems there, and Omar and Afsatou wanted their children growing up in a better education system (All three of their children are now either in college or have earned their degree).

Gaye was sharp, but he had understandable issues that went with jumping into a school where they speak a language that isn’t your natural one. Plus, the education system in The Gambia left him behind. And it was somewhere around this time a junior high football coach spotted Gaye walking around — you couldn’t miss him — and told him he ought to go out for the football team. With Gaye’s affable personality, he just said, “Sounds like fun. I’ll try it.”

Soon he joined Gradwohl at Edmonds-Woodway High. He was raw, but he was also huge and athletic and became a three-time all-conference standout with an offer from the University of Washington.

But during his high school career, his parents’ home was severely damaged. There was a fire, a small one, but the water from the sprinklers caused a great deal of harm. Gaye, his cousin and his sister, Ida, moved in with the Gradwohls. There, the Gradwohls were able to help him a great deal academically. Ida and their cousin eventually moved out, but Gaye stayed. He was developing so much there.

The initial adjustment for the Gradwohls was the increase in Costco runs to feed the large child, but they also became invested in his life. Gradwohl’s wife, Margie, always reminded him when it was time to pray. She helped him with school. They call him their nephew, making sure never to say son because Gaye has two great parents.

Fasting was another adjustment. During Ramadan, Muslims must abstain from food or drink from dawn to sunset for the entire month. One of his junior college assistant coaches, Tom Orthmann, would look at his cafeteria plate when he could eat during Ramadan and joke, “Whatever you can eat, eat more of it.”

“I think one of the biggest problems was a lot of these kids wanted to do all these activities, and we had to restrict them,” Gradwohl said. “Because if it’s hot out and they’re trying to do all these exercises, it wasn’t healthy for them.”

Gaye signed to play football for Chris Petersen and Washington in 2017, a dream come true for a local prospect. But his SAT scores weren’t high enough, and he had to take summer classes. Even after that, he wasn’t eligible to play for the Huskies. He was informed of that on a Monday. By Wednesday, Gradwohl took him on a visit to check out Arizona Western Community College, a junior college that’s developed many professional athletes.

He enrolled by the spring semester and got right to work under coach Tom Minnick. That fall, he showed his potential despite not showing much on the stat sheet.

“He was a little bit raw on film,” Minnick said. “He was raw as a freshman, and he got better and better and better. You knew he was going to get better … You can’t teach that size.”

Then, the Arizona Western football program was shut down in December 2018. So Gaye followed Minnick and his staff to Garden City Community College in Kansas. Once again, he developed a close relationship with a coach's wife, this time Minnick's — who ran study halls — helping Gaye with his academics.

Busch made a trip out to Kansas that spring, and he was all in on Gaye right away. He only had eight career tackles, but Busch could see the talent. Mix that with his character, and LSU offered him a scholarship soon thereafter.

Gaye began to put it all together in 2019 at Garden City. He compiled 44 tackles, one sack and 7.5 tackles for loss. Even if the stats weren't impressive, the growth was evident.

"He was dedicated," Minnick said. "He's such a great kid. He does everything right. He works his butt off. That's what you get from a lot of international kids. Those kids work their butts off. We always used to tease him that he hasn't been Americanized yet."

Gaye eventually came to LSU as an afterthought in a loaded 2020 class. It wouldn't be an exaggeration to say he was the least-discussed player coming in. But he enrolled early in January. He got to work. He developed his body. He began earning the trust of the coaching staff.

Still, Gaye was by no means a projected starter this summer. He was often the sixth or seventh name Orgeron mentioned at defensive end. Even just two weeks ago Orgeron implied Gaye was just a rotation guy. Few expected the news that came Monday.

The hardly discussed new guy who didn't even focus on football until midway through high school is now LSU's starting left end. He'll split reps with Travez Moore, but Gaye is the one who knows his assignments and who the staff can trust.

"I like his range," Orgeron said Monday. "He's 6-foot-6. He's smart. Works hard every day. Very humble young man, wants to learn, physical at the point of attack. A very good pass rusher. He's tall; he's got a lot of batted balls. He had a batted ball for an interception I think the third play of the scrimmage last Friday. Great young man."

We have no clue how ready Gaye is to be an SEC starter. We don't know how polished he is or if his 262-pound frame is strong enough. He got the job at the last second, and he still has plenty to prove.

But he's here. He came over from The Gambia. He caught up in school despite obvious limitations. He adapted to a football world that rarely sees Muslim players. He went from an afterthought to a starter for the defending national champions. It's a journey to stop and appreciate.

"A kid like that," Orthmann said, "that is that good a kid, that always tries to do his best, that always tries to do the right thing, is an easy kid to encourage. He never got down. He felt like if he continued to work hard the opportunities would come.

"That proved to be the case."

ROAD LESS TRAVELED LEADS FORMER E W FOOTBALL STAR TO LSU

BY ZAC HERETH
HEARALDNET.COM
JUNE 18, 2019

The road less traveled is a familiar path for former Edmonds-Woodway High School football standout Ali Gaye.

The 6-foot-6, 270-pound defensive end came to the United States from Gambia as a 12-year-old and although he didn't start playing football until the eighth grade, he developed into a major-college prospect.

By his senior year, he was a three-star recruit with scholarship offers from several Pac-12 schools. Gaye signed a national letter of intent with the University of Washington after his senior season and planned to grayshirt — which allows a signee to enroll during the second term of the following school year.

Gaye never ended up being a Husky. He said his SAT scores weren't high enough to enroll at UW. The three-time All-Wesco 3A/2A South selection was tasked with finding a different avenue for his college football career. He ended up going the junior-college route, enrolling at Arizona Western College in 2018.

A year later — and now at Garden City Community College in Kansas after Arizona Western dropped its football program — Gaye has earned himself another chance at his dream, this time with perennial Southeastern Conference power LSU.

Gaye made a verbal commitment to the school last week via Twitter, and hopes to suit up for the Tigers beginning with the 2020 season.

"I've always been interested in playing in the SEC, especially at a school like LSU," Gaye said in a phone interview. "It's a place I can see myself being successful on the field, (in) the classroom and just as a person."

Gaye was a soccer player when he moved to the United States from Gambia. He said he stood just 5-foot-5 when he was 12 and had more of a soccer player's body. Turning out for the football team in eighth grade was an "experiment" with the sport.

The following year is when Gaye started to grow. He said he shot up about 5 inches and put on around 50 pounds his freshman year, eventually measuring in at 6-3, 225 pounds.

"I didn't really get into (football) until freshman year going into sophomore year," Gaye said. "That's when I really got serious with it, and that's when I really got bigger and started to look more like a football (player)."

He also played basketball and wrestled in middle school, which he credited along with soccer for helping develop his footwork and agility.

"You got a kid that's 6-6 while weighing 265, 270 who moves like a basketball player," said John Gradwohl, Gaye's football coach at Edmonds-Woodway. "Not a lot of those guys move that well. He's competitive, he loves to learn, he's coachable, he's got all those qualities."

While Gaye was on the football team, he developed a close relationship with the longtime Warriors coach.

"He's been able to walk through (the recruiting process) with me, just give me advice and just mentoring me through my journey," Gaye said. "I'd say he's been kind of like a second father figure who really just cares for me — him and his family."

Said Gradwohl of Gaye: "He's just a warm-hearted, nice young man."

As Gaye developed into a major-college football recruit, he still was adjusting to school in the United States.

"In high school, my grades weren't all that well because the learning here is really different than the learning back home," he said. "Everything here is a whole other level."

Gaye said he's doing better than ever academically since entering junior college, and he's "keeping his head down" while working toward his goals.

"I feel like my parents really set me up in the right direction bringing me here to this country and there's a lot of opportunities for me," he said. "I just gotta go get it, so that's what I'm trying to do right now."

But junior-college football presents its own challenges.

"Juco is not for everybody. A lot of guys quit it. Sometimes people go through it and be successful," Gaye said. "I'm blessed enough to be able to have the opportunities that I have and have the people that have supported me through it, especially my coaches and my mentors, my parents and friends. Without them, there's no way I could've gone through it."

After Gaye's freshman year at Arizona Western, it was announced the program would come to an end. Luckily for Gaye, his head coach at Arizona Western, Tom Minnick, took over at Garden City and asked him to come along.

"He knows the type of dude I am and the type of player I could turn into. So he asked me to go with him and I did," Gaye said. "I believe in him and I believe in what he's doing. He's had a lot of success in bringing players to the next level. I'm really thankful to have him."

Gaye has one season of junior-college football remaining and won't be able to make his commitment official until the early signing period for junior-college transfers opens Dec. 18. He also has offers from Iowa State, Kansas

State, Minnesota, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Mississippi State, according to recruiting website 247sports.com.

And while the path for the Gambia native has been the one far less traveled when compared to the routes taken by his future teammates, it ultimately led to the same destination.

“With the opportunities I’ve been given, I never thought I’d be in the position I’m in — coming from a third-world country and being a stranger in this country and just now adjusting,” Gaye said. “I’m just a person trying to make it out and be somebody the kids — anybody like me — can just look at me and just know that there’s always a way. No matter how little you are or how big you are, there’s always an opportunity out there for anybody that wants to accomplish something.”

TITANS LB CEDRIC GRAY MOTIVATED, AND READY TO COMPETE FOR STARTING JOB IN YEAR 2

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 5, 2025

NASHVILLE – Patience.

When Titans linebacker Cedric Gray reflected on his rookie season, it didn't take him long to come up with an answer for what he learned most.

"The biggest thing that I learned, honestly, has nothing to do with football," Gray said. "I think the biggest thing I learned last year was patience. For me, personally, coming in I had these high expectations, and this, that and a third. And really, I think calming down and learning how to be patient and learning the game more, growing, it is something I learned last year."

A fourth-round pick of the Titans in the 2024 NFL Draft, Gray was sidelined during the first half of the season with a shoulder injury that resulted in him being placed on Injured Reserve.

Gray eventually got healthy, but he still had to wait to get playing time, and snaps.

Gray admitted the waiting wasn't easy.

"It was definitely hard on me," he said. "I've never really had a serious injury before in my life, so that was kind of hard for me miss 10 games. That was definitely a challenge for me. But I think I tried to manage it, and got through it pretty well. I tried to keep high spirits during that time, and keep learning and growing, so when I got back I could take advantage."

Gray ended up playing in seven games in 2024, and he finished the year with 14 tackles on defense, and eight more on special teams. He had an especially productive game at Indianapolis on December 22, when he tallied 11 tackles, and four more on special teams.

Heading into the 2025 season, Gray has his sights set on a starting inside linebacker spot alongside newcomer Cody Barton, who has made a nice early impact on a group that also includes James Williams, Otis Reese, and others.

"Cody has really stepped up as a leader," Gray said. "He is a very smart player. He helps me out a lot, helps James out, helps all of us. And I think we are all continuing to grow, myself, James, Otis and others. Just stepping into more of a leadership role as well."

The 6-foot-2, 234-pound Gray is ready to make a difference himself.

He feels like he's improved in the classroom, and with his speed and strength. He focused on being more flexible this offseason, working on his hips and bending, so he can stay low at all times on the field.

He's motivated, and ready to compete.

"I am definitely highly motivated this year," said Gray, a two-time All-ACC performer at North Carolina who racked up 369 tackles, 30 stops for a loss, 8.5 sacks and five interceptions during a very productive college career. "I feel like I missed out on the opportunity of preseason and training camp (last year) because I got hurt early on in camp, so I am looking forward to that part, because that's where I think I can really grow my game in that area of time.

"I just think I have to keep doing what I am doing, being a smart football player, showing the coaches that I understand what is going on out there, that I can make the adjustments and can make the reads and continue to hone in on my technique, and just be myself.

"I feel like I have the ability and all that stuff, I just have to keep growing, just keep trending upward and I think I'll be fine."

HOW TENNESSEE TITANS PICK CEDRIC GRAY SAW HIS MOM'S ADVICE PAY OFF IN 2024 NFL DRAFT

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
APRIL 27, 2024

Cedric Gray's mother Esther has officially been proven right.

The Tennessee Titans drafted Gray, a linebacker out of North Carolina, early in the fourth round of the 2024 NFL Draft. A two-time All-ACC player who ended his college career with three-straight 100-plus tackle seasons, Gray said he turned down opportunities to transfer in high school and college to stay where he felt most comfortable, bearing in mind what his mother likes to tell him.

"Something my mom always told me was ‘Don’t rush your blessing,’" Gray said. "This blessing, it came today."

Gray prides himself on being a "sideline-to-sideline" linebacker, someone who plays a complete game with an emphasis on athleticism who's just as comfortable filling in against the run as he is rushing the passer or dropping in coverage. He looks up to star NFL inside linebackers like Zaire Franklin and Fred Warner. He was North Carolina's defensive play caller for two seasons in college and thinks he'll be able to take over that skill with the Titans as well.

He admits his knowledge for the game developed later in his career. When he was in high school, he was a "see ball, hit ball" player. It wasn't until the summer before his sophomore year of college when his understanding broadened. And from there, he quickly emerged as one of the best linebackers in the ACC.

Despite this success, and the Titans' need for an inside linebacker, Gray says the Titans never met with him in the pre-draft process and he didn't have that big of a sense that the Titans would be picking him Saturday.

The Titans had the confidence to pick him anyway, slotting him into a linebacker room that also includes Kenneth Murray II, Otis Reese and Jack Gibbens.

This is the type of player Gray says Titans fans should expect in him.

"A guy who gets to the ball a lot. A guy who can cover a lot," Gray says. "Linebackers today in the NFL need to have the athletic ability, the athleticism to be able to match up with running backs, tight ends and receivers and be able to make plays."

CHARLOTTE'S CEDRIC GRAY GAVE UP CATCHING TDS AT UNC. IN EXCHANGE, HE GOT A CHANCE AT THE NFL

BY ALEX ZIETLOW
CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
APRIL 16, 2024

Ask Cedric Gray about his football-playing life before he arrived at UNC, where he eventually became a standout four-year linebacker as the Tar Heels surged into a new era of success, and you learn something pretty quick: All along, he thought he'd be a receiver. He made that known to everyone. "Oh yes!" said Cedric's mother, Esther, when asked about her son's wide receiver dreams. She laughed. "I mean, a receiver is all the pride and joy. You get to have all the fun and score touchdowns."

Four years ago, Cedric Gray exchanged touchdown catches for interceptions. Yards for tackles. Playing with Drake Maye in youth 7-on-7 camps to practicing against him in college. When he arrived on the Chapel Hill campus from Ardrey Kell High School in Charlotte, he even exchanged his No. 11 jersey number he wore throughout his life — his favorite player was the remarkable Julio Jones — for No. 33. As a result, he's now a few days away from the NFL.

Gray, the 6-foot-2, 234-pound linebacker, will be one of the handful of prospects from the Carolinas to hear his name called at some point during the 2024 NFL Draft, which will be hosted in Detroit from April 25-27. Gray's draft profile states that he'll contribute most as a weak-side linebacker at the next level, that he has the athleticism and traits to handle man coverage and that he can be a disruptive defender when "playing proactively and taking aggressive, downhill shots" through gaps. He's projected to be a third-round pick — a result of his prolific career at UNC and the agility and speed (4.64 40-yard dash) he showcased at the NFL Scouting Combine in February. And when he does hear his name called, he'll be proud to call Charlotte home, he said.

"I'm very proud to come out of Charlotte," Gray said at his Pro Day in March. "We have a lot of talented guys to come out of Charlotte. Definitely the best football that's being played in North Carolina at the high school level. So just glad to be a part of that group, glad to represent my city well, and to be the next Charlotte guy to come out and put on."

Gray, 21, was born in Fort Washington, Maryland, about 20 miles south of Washington, D.C. He's the youngest of three brothers, Devon (nine years older) and Michael (six years older), and has played football and basketball all his life. He's remained competitive and singularly focused throughout. A few flashpoints that give you a picture of who Cedric Gray is: There was the time when he was 8 years old, when he scored the game-winning touchdown in a youth championship game on a fourth-and-goal from the 1-yard line, a result of a play that his coaches spelled out simply for their team: Get Cedric the ball. (Cedric's mother still has a photo of that day, with Cedric holding up a trophy larger than him and smiling ear to ear.)

At 11, Gray moved from Fort Washington to Charlotte and used football to find his friends, find his community. Throughout high school, with all the pressures to transfer to another football program, he stayed at Ardrey Kell.

At 19, in the third game of his sophomore season, he started his first game at linebacker for the Tar Heels and "it was on" from there, posting 99 tackles and 2.5 sacks and two interceptions that sophomore year — one INT was the game-sealer against Miami in a 45-42 shootout that marked Gray's arrival. And simply throughout college, he was consistent — as a player on the field, yes, but also as a presence; not resentful because he only played special teams as a freshman; not tempted to leave by any other opportunities out there; not motivated to do anything but lead the team he's on.

Gray finished his senior season with 121 tackles, five sacks, two forced fumbles and a fumble recovery en route to a First-Team All-ACC nod, a Butkus Award Semifinalist nomination and a second-team All-American accolade. He hopes to showcase all this at the next level. "This is something I've dreamed of since I was a child," Gray said, reflecting on his move from Maryland to Charlotte, his transition from wide receiver to linebacker, his switch from college standout to an NFL prospect with everything to prove. "So if this is what it takes, this is what it takes."

MARCUS HARRIS NFL DRAFT INTERVIEW: COMPETITIVE PLAYER

THE DRAFT NETWORK
APRIL 20, 2025

Cal cornerback Marcus Harris played his best football in 2024 after transferring to the program from Idaho. The Golden Bears standout showcased an improved ability to disrupt the catch point by recording seven pass breakups and two interceptions. Harris also recorded 46 tackles, making plays around the line of scrimmage.

Harris recently spoke exclusively with The Draft Network. Harris discussed entering the portal and going from Idaho to Cal, playing man and zone coverage, making plays around the football, and more.

JM: I thought you played your best football at Cal this past season after transferring to the program from Idaho. You had seven pass breakups and two interceptions. What changed for you in 2024?

Marcus Harris: I was able to step up and showcase more confidence in my game. I had a nice career at Idaho, spending three-and-a-half years there. I came to Cal and improved even more in 2024.

JM: You made plays at the catch point. What do you think led to that increased production?

Marcus Harris: My philosophy as a defensive back is to make plays on the ball. There's usually five secondary defenders on the field on any given play. Going out there and disrupting the catch point is our job. We have to be around the football to make the plays that come to us.

JM: Talk to me about your ability to play man and zone coverage. You showed that ability at Cal.

Marcus Harris: I feel like I'm a pretty versatile cornerback. I've played in like three different schemes. Applying those tools and the knowledge I learned in different systems, I can play man and zone coverage as necessary.

I applied those tips to the scheme at Cal and it made me more versatile. It allowed me to utilize my entire skill set in the secondary.

JM: Do you have a preference between man and zone?

Marcus Harris: I don't have a preference. Like I said, I've played in systems that were both man and zone heavy. I'm very comfortable with both schemes.

JM: I'll put you in a scenario then. Say it's 3rd-and-long with the game on the line. It's an obvious passing down. Would you rather be manned up or playing zone with a chance to make a play on the ball near the sticks?

Marcus Harris: That's a tough question. I'm a big game plan guy. I guess it depends on what our game plan was leading up to the game. If we're sending pressure, we can definitely play man coverage. If we know the quarterback likes certain things, we can go zone coverage and take it away and see how he reacts, making him panic.

Either way, we're getting a stop.

JM: I love the commitment to the game plan. You also had 46 tackles this past season. You made plays behind the line of scrimmage in the run game.

Marcus Harris: I'd credit my willingness to be aggressive and make plays behind the line of scrimmage in the run game. I didn't second-guess those plays. Instead of making a tackle after a one-yard gain, I tried to kill those plays at the line of scrimmage. I wanted to help my defense out.

JM: You recently put forth an outstanding performance at Pro Day. I believe you ran a 4.38. Wow, what a huge showcase that was for you.

Marcus Harris: I was pleased with the performance, but I do think I could have possibly ran even faster. I was pleased with that time. It was 4.38.

JM: Have you met with many NFL teams throughout this process?

Marcus Harris: I've met with a bunch of teams on Zoom. I've had great meetings with a number of organizations. I've been blessed with those opportunities. I'm going to keep the team list private at this time. I met with teams locally to Cal, from East to West, North to South.

JM: We've appreciated your time today. What kind of impact is Marcus Harris going to make at the next level?

Marcus Harris: You're going to get a competitive player. I'm going to showcase my skill set every chance I get. I'm a dog who is ready to compete.

HEADING INTO YEAR 14, VETERAN PUNTER JOHNNY HEKKER STILL HAVING FUN, AND READY FOR MORE

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 26, 2025

NASHVILLE – Johnny Hekker signed with the St. Louis Rams as a rookie free agent way back on May 8, 2012.

Over 13 years later, the veteran punter is headed into his 14th NFL season, now with the Titans.

In his career, Hekker has punted the ball for 45,052 yards – or 25.6 miles – in 212 games.

And, he's still going strong.

How has he done it?

"I'd say every day is a gift from the Lord," Hekker said with a smile. "I'm not going to shy away from the fact that I wouldn't be here if it weren't for my loving wife, and God directing people into my life to be a positive influence on me and showing me the way to be a pro, to take care of my body, be humble and serve every opportunity that you get.

"So, how you have a long career is taking every day like you don't get another one. So, I'm just having fun, and trying to make an impact however I can. And, trying to be a use to this organization in every imaginable way."

The Titans signed the 6-foot-5, 225-pound Hekker earlier this offseason.

The Oregon State product spent 10 seasons with the Rams, in St. Louis and Los Angeles, before spending three years with the Carolina Panthers from 2022-24.

He's known for his net punt skills, and his ability to pin opponents deep in their own territory. And, for his engaging personality.

Hekker has punted the ball 963 times in his career for a 46.8 gross average, with 378 punts placed inside the 20-yard line, and a 42.9 career net punting average.

Hekker was named to the NFL's 2010's All-Decade Team and he's been an All-Pro first teamer on four occasions (2013, 2015, 2016, 2017), and a second-team All-Pro on two occasions (2018, 2014), in addition to being named a four-time Pro Bowler (2017, 2016, 2015, 2013).

Hekker said he was excited about the chance to join the Titans, in part because the team's new special teams coordinator, John Fassel, is one of the guys that God put in his life to help him. The two are now reunited, after spending time together with the Rams.

"It was an opportunity to come and be somewhere where my contributions will hopefully help a team turn the page into a bright future," Hekker said. "And being reunited with Bones (Fassel) had a huge part to do with it, too, the impact he's had on my career, from my time with him, and him coaching against me. Even then I could still pick his brain and still be a friend. We've always had a great relationship.

"So, the door being open to join him again was a dream come true. I'm just thankful to be on a team that's hungry to improve and turn the tides here. Excited about the future of the program. I'm excited to be a Titan."

Hekker first started punting at Bothell High School in Washington, and he was the starting quarterback of a team that advanced to the state championship during his senior year.

Looking back, Hekker said the reason he began punting was as simple as this: "My coach trusted me back there to catch the snap and get (the ball) off."

Hekker began training more seriously headed into his freshman year of college at Oregon State.

"And I never looked back," he said. "I realized it was a great gig."

Hekker has made the most of it, ranking among the league's best in net yards over his career.

Hekker played in every game for Los Angeles (161) from 2012-21, making 727 punts for a net average of 42.87 with a long of 78 yards and 300 punts inside the 20. In 2016, he set NFL record with 53 punts inside the 20 with just one touchback and had a league-best 4,508 net yards for 46.0 net average, breaking the NFL single-season record for net punt yards. In 2021, Hekker helped the Rams win Super Bowl LVI as he punted six times for 261 yards in the title game.

In the last three seasons with the Panthers, he averaged 45.7 yards on 73 punts in 2024, with a 41.5-yard net.

Hekker has also been used for some special teams trickery during his career, as he's completed 15-of-26 passes for 193 yards with a touchdown and interception in his career, with 12 of the completions going for first downs. His career passer rating is 77.9.

"It's a ton of fun," Hekker said of being used on trick plays. "I wish I could have completed every one of them, but it's a ton of fun to go out there and be a part of the game plan, and knowing, aside from just punting, you could have an opportunity to extend offensive drives and get the juice going for the guys."

Hekker aims to keep doing his thing in Tennessee, where he'll show off his all-around skills.

Mostly by punting.

"To punt in today's NFL, you have to be well-rounded in a lot of different areas," Hekker said. "I pride myself in being great directionally, I really try to hang my hat on that, where we tell our guys where I'm going to punt the ball, and put it over there. Also, having some kind of misdirection stuff, too, to keep punt returners guessing.

"I've tried to develop those things over the course of my career, and I still try to add things to the bag. And, I'm still having fun doing it."

JOHNNY HEKKER IS THE MOST INTERESTING PUNTER IN THE WORLD

BY WILLIAM POWELL
STLMAG.COM
NOVEMBER 14, 2014

While I explain the ground rules, Johnny Hekker talks smack. We've lured the St. Louis Rams punter to the city's Tilles Park early on a fall afternoon. The sun hangs high, threatening our freckled skin, but the grass is sleeping in, snuggled beneath a blanket of auburn and scarlet leaves. We're not here to gaze at the foliage, though. We've come to answer one of life's most pressing questions:

Who is more athletic, an NFL punter or a magazine editor?

To settle this score scientifically, we devised a series of competitions, arranged in a best-of-five format. I mention to Hekker that if he wins the first three, the final two won't be necessary. "That's what I'm aiming to do," he says, "wipe the floor with you."

He's come dressed for battle, in a pair of Kevin Durant basketball shoes (a gift from Sam Bradford), Jordan shorts, and a Mob Squad T-shirt. "A group of rams is called a mob," he says. "Most people don't know that."

Not to be outdone, I'm sporting a pair of Mizuno sneakers I've had since high school, LeBron James shorts, and a bright pink T-shirt I got for winning a rec volleyball league.

We begin on the basketball court. I try to strike fear in my opponent's heart by mentioning I played in high school. Because the punter has 6 inches and 80 pounds on me—and because I don't want an angry Rams mob after me, should he roll an ankle—we decide to play Horse, a noncontact shooting contest, instead of one-on-one.

Hekker begins the game with "one of my famous starting shots." He calls for a bank-shot free throw and bounces it in. Going glass from the foul line is universally loathed by basketball purists—so of course a punter would do it. I attempt to match his shot and miss. I've got an H.

"A waterfall begins with one drop," Hekker taunts. He nails a three from the right wing. I fire a brick. H-O. "You're a ho, Bill."

Hekker finally misses, and it's my turn. I go for an eyes-closed free throw, a classic Michael Jordan maneuver. Swish.

"I wasn't even looking to make sure the eyes were closed," Hekker protests.

"I saw it," confirms the photographer who's here to capture the spectacle.

Hekker misses, giving him his first letter. He curses under his breath. For a professional football player, he seems to be taking this seriously, pleading with the ball, cheering his makes, coaching himself in third person.

He misses from half court. ("Dang it!" he yells. "I thought that was going to be a net-ripper right there!") I miss from behind the hoop. ("Yes! Yes! Yes!" he exclaims.) A shot from the baseline sends me to H-O-R, though Hekker misses the opportunity to call me a whore.

I get him to H-O on a shot from the left wing, but he sends me to H-O-R-S on a pull-up three. "I got to put the nail in the coffin," he declares. "This is my signature shot: jump from the free-throw line, between the legs, lay it up."

He uses his long arms to pull off the complicated motion, rolling the ball into the hoop. I surprise both him and myself by getting the ball through my legs and to the rim, but it bounces away.

"I'm not trying to say I stereotyped you," he says, "but when I first met you, I didn't anticipate that being as close of a game as it was."

Hekker leads 1–0.

Many professional athletes understandably loathe media. How would you like 100,000 screaming people watching as you work, booing every time you mess up, then a bunch of reporters crowding around to ask why you choked? You'd probably be terse, too. Players at the other end of the spectrum use media as a bullhorn, bursting into self-aggrandizing rants, promoting their "personal brand."

Hekker's found a sweet spot between extremes. Either in social or traditional media, he's always up to something, but it seems to come from a place of joy, not ego. "I've always considered myself something of a yes man," Hekker says when asked how he ends up on TV so often.

In September, Hekker and linebacker Jo-Lonn Dunbar hosted Ram-Oke, a charity karaoke party to benefit SSM Health Care's Kick Cancer initiative. Hekker's dancing to "Thriller" was so bad, the video made TMZ.com under the headline "St. Louis Rams Punter: The White(er) Michael Jackson."

He has a weekly radio show on 101 ESPN, and last year, he did a regular spot on FOX 2 KTVI-TV called Hang Time with Hekker. In one episode, he attempted to anchor a newscast. In another, what was billed as a gift-wrapping contest turned into a slideshow of embarrassing childhood photos. Here he is in SpongeBob SquarePants boxers; there he is playing with dinosaur toys. In a third segment, he and a reporter raced go-karts. Afterward, a coach mentioned he might not want to do that again.

"I'm not the best guy on TV," he says. "I hocked a loogie during one of the segments. I had a cold. I didn't know we were live yet. It was bad."

He has a longstanding Twitter stunt called #JohnnyHekkerSketchTime.

Followers make suggestions, then Hekker draws them, signs them, and tweets pictures back to the fans. He's also a gamer. Look him up on Xbox One; his tag is WhatTheHekk. He even took a flight with the Blue Angels, after a coach dared him on Twitter. The pilot flipped and rolled. They broke the speed of sound.

"I'm like pasted to my seat," Hekker says. "I almost lost my lunch. It was so much fun."

His most famous off-field stunt, though, was his collaboration with Dude Perfect, a group of friends who turned their trick-shot basketball videos into an online sensation. Appearing in a "Punters are people too" shirt, Hekker kicks a football into a basketball hoop from 40 yards away, then joins the Dude Perfect dudes in going bananas. The YouTube video, titled "NFL Kicking Edition," has more than 10 million views.

In the interview portion of the film, Hekker is asked which three Pokémon characters he'd take into battle. Without hesitating, he responds, "Charizard, Blastoise, and Venusaur—the three main Pokémon styles: grass, fire, and water. I don't think you could be beat with those three." Then he punts a stuffed Pikachu.

Yeah, he's not a typical professional athlete.

I pull out a pair of tennis rackets and a can of balls. Since I lost at basketball, I decide to give myself the upper hand this time, taking the serve, the better racket, and the better side, forcing Hekker to look into the sun.

We decide to play best-of-three games. We both confess to being terrible, which I hope will work to my advantage. "I feel like you're just sandbagging here," Hekker says, "and you're really good at tennis."

It doesn't take long to prove him wrong: I smack two wild serves for a double fault. Hekker dances back and forth while waiting to return, mimicking the motions of a professional. I win three straight points on his errors. "Get it together, John," he chastises himself. He climbs back to deuce, but I win when he hits a shot in the net and shanks another off the fence.

"Idiot!" he yells at himself.

Hekker has the serve for the second game. "1–0. Back's against the wall," he says, focusing. Taking advantage of his superior height and strength, Hekker rips his first serves. When they're in, I have no chance at a return, but he usually misses. His second serves are lolli-pops. "Weakest serve in America coming at you," he says.

We trade points and exultations. "Come on!" he cries.

"Vámonos!" I scream back.

Between points, I accidentally hit a ball back to him when he's not looking.

"Dude, are you trying to kill me?" he exclaims.

"Take that," I shoot back. Sportsmanship is for sissies.

We end up at deuce again. "John, you need to win this," Hekker says. "Eye of the tiger."

He wins the next two points to take the game. Before game three, we play rock-paper-scissors at the net. I pick paper; he goes rock. I take the serve for the decisive final bout. He chooses to switch sides, so I'll have to fight the sun.

Again, I begin with a double fault. The next point, he hits a ball that sticks in a crack on my side of the court. "I'm definitely complaining about that when I write about this," I promise.

Then I battle back to tie the game, 30–30. "I have some graffiti over here that's messing with my concentration," Hekker complains.

On the next point, after exchanging a few shots, I hit a ball into the middle of the court, right at Hekker's feet. He pulls his elbow in next to his body and tries to flick at the ball, with disastrous results.

"Did you get a photo of that?" I ask the photographer.

"The disgrace?" he responds. "Yes."

"It was a terrible, terrible choice of shot," Hekker laments. "I didn't go with normal tennis. I went with spatula."

I win the next point to seal the match.

"You were who I thought you were, and I let you off the hook!" he gripes.

We're tied, 1–1.

Hekker grew up in Bothell, Washington, a Seattle suburb that Hekker describes as "awesome" and that, if a cursory glance at Wikipedia is any indication, is known for a large chicken statue. So it's no surprise that he says life there revolves around high-school sports. Johnny is the youngest of five boys, and as a child he wanted nothing more than to follow in his brothers' footsteps by playing football and basketball for the Bothell High School Cougars.

The family's lives revolved around sports and their church, where Joy Hekker worked and Johnny went to day care. "I was able to build my faith and spend a lot of quality time around quality people and be brought up the right way," Johnny says.

One of his first sports experiences came in a noncompetitive Christian soccer league. They didn't keep score, "but me and my brothers, we couldn't be stopped," he says. One time, when his brothers' team had a few players out sick, Johnny got to play with them. At one point, little Johnny and the biggest kid on the other team went running after a loose ball. "I knocked him over, and I remember I felt so cool after that," he says.

With four older brothers, he was usually the one who ended up on the ground. “I got my lumps and bruises,” he says. “It was mostly necessary tough love.” The boys played football and basketball in the street. He’d rebound for his older brothers. Then, when it was his turn to shoot, they’d leave him to chase his own ball. They taught him respect. He gives them credit for where he’s ended up.

Johnny’s father, Bob, worked at Fircrest School, a residential facility for adults with severe disabilities. (He and Johnny have matching WWJD tattoos.) “It kind of just instilled a bit of gratitude in your heart for how blessed you are,” Johnny says.

In high school, he was the quarterback and punter, but because the team was good, they rarely needed to punt. He led the Cougars to the state final twice. Western Washington University recruited him as a quarterback, and going there would have meant playing with his brother. But whenever Johnny and his father would drive past the University of Washington’s Husky Stadium, Johnny would say, “Dad, I’m going to play there one day.”

“You can do that,” his father would answer. “Let’s make that happen.”

He sent a highlight video to Oregon State University, where the coach had shown some interest. Johnny tacked a couple of punts on the end. The Beavers already had six quarterbacks, but they did need a punter. Their special-teams coach called. Johnny could come as a preferred walk-on. There would be an open competition for the punting job. Whoever won would get a scholarship.

To prepare, he went to Alabama to work with Mike McCabe of One on One Kicking. “He had a lot of work to do,” McCabe says. “He had potential, but he had such great work ethic.”

Because he’s so big, Hekker’s leg was slow. They worked all summer on speed, trying to get more pop into his kicks, having him drive his leg through the ball.

Back at school, Hekker competed with Ryan Allen for the starting job and scholarship. Allen kicked the ball farther, but Hekker earned the job by a hair—maybe because of consistency, maybe because his background as a quarterback would help with fake punts. He’s not sure how he won, but he did.

Allen transferred to Louisiana Tech University and became the best punter in the country. Now, he’s the punter for the New England Patriots. Imagine that: two walk-ons from Oregon State, both in the NFL. “Isn’t that wild?” says McCabe, who trains both of them.

Little coincidences in life make all the difference. If Hekker had lost the starting job to Allen, who knows where he might be now?

“I’m just really happy to see that it worked out well for both of us,” he says.

In planning the competition, I’d considered a Pokémon game, but I wanted to at least have a chance. I settled on Pass the Pigs instead.

As we sit down to play, I tell Hekker, who’s never heard of the game, that the wind might affect the action.

“Really?” he asks.

“No.”

He surveys the rules. “I want to get so many snouters,” he says.

Pass the Pigs is a dice game, but instead of numbered cubes, players roll two rubber pigs. Points are earned on the basis of how the pigs land. A pig on its back, called a razorback, is worth five, as is one that lands on its feet, called a trotter. The rarest of rolls, a leaning jowler, where the pig is balancing on its nose, one foot, and an ear, is worth 15. A double leaning jowler, the holy grail of Pass the Pigs, is worth 60. “That’s pretty special,” Hekker says.

The trick is knowing when to pass the pigs. Each turn, a player can keep rolling as long as he wants. But a pig out, where the pigs land lying on opposite sides, costs a player all of the points he’s accumulated during that turn.

The game is usually played to 100 points, but we decide to do an even 10 rounds. We both pig out on our first rolls. On Hekker’s second turn, he has 15 points, but decides to keep rolling.

“You better not pig out,” I tell him.

He pigs out.

“No! You stupid pigs!” he shouts. “Lesson learned.” In fact, Hekker does not learn. He continues to press his luck—and for the most part, it works. He rolls a double razorback, worth 20. “Fortune favors the bold!” he proclaims.

He builds a small lead, but I keep pace, playing a conservative style, usually stopping with 10 or 15 points. “You coward,” Hekker jokes.

In the ninth round, Hekker rolls another double razorback, giving him an 89–59 lead. “Gosh, I love you guys,” he tells the pigs. I answer with a sider, a snouter, and a double razorback, worth 31, to take a 90–89 advantage. “Damn, that’s big,” he observes.

In the 10th and final round, Hekker scores 10 points, then stops. I need nine to tie, 10 to win. I roll a double razorback.

“I never thought seeing two little pigs on their back would bring me so much sorrow,” Hekker says. “I’m just disgusted.”

Powell leads, 2–1.

For our fourth contest, I suggest playing Pictionary, though we would need to borrow a couple of kids from the playground. Hekker points out how creepy it would be for two adult men to ask children to play Pictionary. We settle on a drawing contest, with the photographer acting as judge.

Given his Twitter art, Hekker seems to have the upper hand. We decide to do three rounds. The first will be five minutes. He goes to a different table, to prevent me from copying his work. The judge gives us a prompt: "Let's draw Mike Matheny enjoying his favorite Ted Drewes dessert."

I start by drawing the manager in his uniform, then outline the custard stand. I put one concrete in Matheny's hand and have the clerk handing another out the window. Five minutes is a lot of time, so I start adding details: clouds, the sun, a flock of seagulls. I give Matheny a long, low dog that looks more like a Komodo dragon.

Hekker draws Matheny smiling, saying, "Yumm." The sun wears shades, while a plane overhead pulls a Go Cards banner.

The judge deliberates. He incorrectly picks Hekker. "I'm not feeling this long dog," he says.

For the second round, we drop the time limit to three minutes and draw a Blues player holding the Stanley Cup. This time, we create similar scenes: a character with skates wearing a blue-note sweater and hoisting the trophy. I add some fruit and a child in the Cup, with the player crying.

"It's highly unrealistic that a child could fit in there," Hekker argues.

Again, the judge gives the victory to the punter. Hekker gives himself a standing ovation.

We're tied, 2–2.

Kickers and punters, you might say, are the ugly ducklings of football. Compared to their mammoth, muscle-bound teammates, they tend to stick out like a gaunt thumb on the sideline. And that's usually where you find the punter, since of the 140 or so plays in every NFL game, a team's punter will be on the field for maybe five of them. Unlike a wide receiver, who runs routes, catches balls, and blocks, a punter has one job: punt—and occasionally tackle (but hopefully not).

And punter is the only position where the better the team plays, the less you participate. "I love getting a chance to get out there," Hekker says, "but I also want to sit on the sideline and have our offense score touchdown after touchdown."

McCabe says punters' contributions are underrated. If a team has a good punter and a good kicker, like Hekker and the Rams' Greg Zuerlein, that's a third of the game, he says: "If you've got 16 games, they're probably winning you three to four ballgames right there with points and field position."

About the only time a punter makes Sports-Center, though, is when he shanks a kick or makes an embarrassingly poor attempt at a tackle.

Hekker knows. During a game against Wisconsin in college, he hit the ball off the side of his foot and shot it straight out of bounds for –4 yards. "I've never seen the ball punted backward," the announcer said.

Another time, against Arizona State, Hekker tried to make a diving tackle. When he landed, the guy's towel was in his hand, and the runner was celebrat-ing in the end zone.

"That's the kind of stuff you can't make up," Hekker says.

But even in this thankless role, he has found ways to shine. During his freshman year, Oregon State traveled to El Paso, Texas, for the Sun Bowl. In the lowest-scoring bowl game in half a century, Oregon State beat Pittsburgh 3–0. Hekker punted 10 times for an average of 45 yards and went home with a trophy as the Special Teams MVP. "That was a great springboard for my career," he says. Hekker also kicked the school's all-time second-longest punt, a 74-yarder.

With the Rams, he's distinguished himself as an excellent punter, but also a dangerous trick-play passer. Twice, he's used his arm to defeat his hometown Seahawks. During Hekker's rookie year, in 2012, St. Louis beat Seattle 19–13, after the Rams' only touchdown came on a fake field goal. Hekker, who was acting as the holder, threw to receiver Danny Amendola in the end zone. "All my friends back home were like, 'Oh yeah! Oh no!'" he says, laughing.

Two days before we met in the park, he did it again. In the fourth quarter, with the Rams leading the defending Super Bowl champs 28–26, St. Louis faced fourth down from its own 18-yard line, with just under 3 minutes left in the fourth quarter. Giving the ball back to Seattle might have spelled doom. So the Rams faked the punt, with Hekker throwing an 18-yard pass to Benny Cunningham. The game was theirs. Once again, his friends texted him their conflicted feelings.

At press time, Hekker was 4-for-5 for 60 yards and a touchdown in his career. His passer rating of 156.3 is more than 50 points higher than that of Peyton Manning or Tom Brady. (Obviously, the comparison is absurd.)

Hekker's greatest career achievement came last season, when he set the NFL record for net punting average, with 44.2 yards per kick. Unlike total punt yardage, the net statistic is a team effort, because it takes into account the return. McCabe says the record shows Hekker's outstanding directional punting and hang time, lofting the ball for 5 seconds and giving his teammates time to sprint down the field.

"The number is really indicative of my teammates more so than myself," Hekker says. "Leading the best punt team ever to play the game is pretty awesome."

For the decisive fifth competition, I challenge Hekker to a footrace. He refuses. Instead, he proposes an obstacle course, involving various playground equipment. A red-bearded writer and a redheaded kicker climbing over walls and swinging across monkey bars? We dub it American Ginger Warrior.

We agree to a time trial, rather than a race, so we won't be stepping on each other. We start at a set of benches, run up a slide, and climb back down a zigzag ladder. Then it's up a rock-climbing wall and across a set of monkey bars. From there, we go up some steps, down a slide, and across the park to another slide. We finish by leaping over two rocking horses and returning to the bench.

We go over the course verbally twice and walk it once. The photographer asks whether we should get one or two runs.

"One—winner take all," we respond in unison.

I go first. Hekker keeps time. I dash up the first slide…then freeze. My mind blanks. I don't know where to go next. I spin around in a circle, confused. "The clock is ticking!" Hekker calls out. "Go!"

Mercifully, he stops the clock for a second and yells "zigzag." I go down the ladder, then trip a bit while climbing the wall. I swing across the monkey bars, and now I'm back on track, picking up speed. I show off my vertical while hopping the horses, then turn on the jets. I finish in 1 minute, 8 seconds.

"Man, I choked," I say.

It's his turn. With his long limbs, he can cover each stage of the course in a couple of strides, practically stepping over the rock wall and taking the monkey bars in one big swing. He shows impressive speed between the slides and launches himself over the horses with ease. He finishes in a cool 56 seconds.

In the eternal battle between punters and journalists, Hekker reigns supreme.

"That was much more tiring than you would think," he says, panting. "How do kids do this all day?"

What means more to him, beating the Seahawks or beating me?

Hekker smiles. "I think beating the Seahawks means more to St. Louis—that game takes the cake.

"But on a personal competitive level?" he adds. "This means quite a bit."

TITANS ROOKIE TE GUNNAR HELM ASKING QUESTIONS, LEARNING FROM VETERANS, AT START OF HIS NFL CAREER

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 19, 2025

NASHVILLE – Gunnar Helm is familiar with Nashville.

Leading up to the NFL Combine, the former University of Texas tight end trained in Nashville at David Lipscomb to get ready for the next level.

Something else he did to prepare himself for the NFL: Pick the brain of veterans.

Now with the Titans, he's still doing it.

"I talked to a lot of NFL vets throughout this process, throughout the combine, post-combine, post-Pro Day about just what to expect," said Helm, who was selected in the fourth round of the NFL Draft by the Titans. "All of them kind of said the same thing: The biggest difference from college to the National Football League is not only the speed, but it's really attention to detail. It's all mental at this level, so just grasping the new playbook and figuring out the concepts. … The chemistry, the timing all of it, just kind of falls back on that mental piece."

During his first few weeks in the NFL, starting with the rookie camp earlier this month, Helm has been spending time early in the day watching film with rookie quarterback Cam Ward and some of the team's other receivers.

He's also been working on the field alongside veteran tight ends Chig Okonkwo and Josh Whyle, along with returning tight ends David Martin-Robinson and Thomas Odukoya. Undrafted free agent Drake Dabney, who played at TCU, is also in the mix.

The Titans are hoping Helm can get up to speed as quickly as possible after finishing his college career on a high note.

At the University of Texas, Helm appeared in 54 games, with 25 starts and he totaled 79 catches for 1,022 yards and nine touchdowns.

After three years of playing behind upperclassmen, Helm (6-5, 241) was a second team All-SEC and a John Mackey Award semifinalist as a senior behind a career-high 60 catches with 786 yards and seven touchdowns.

Helm acknowledged he had to pay his dues in college at Texas, and he's willing to do the same in Tennessee.

"I kind of worked myself into a locker room guy, a culture guy," Helm said. "I like to pride myself in doing things the right way around the facility and off the field. … (Texas assistant) Mike Bimonte used to tell me every day to trust the process, and while it got hard at some points, some guys don't develop overnight and that always kind of lingered in the back of my mind – I had developed through high school, too. I didn't even touch the varsity field until I was a junior, and that's when I made the switch to tight end. So, it is not going to happen right away for everybody, it could be middle school, high school, college or the National Football League."

Helm said he plans to watch the veterans during his early days with the team, taking notes on their study habits, how they treat their bodies, and how they carry themselves on and off the field.

"And, asking a bunch of them for help," Helm said. "Seeing how they did it, asking how they learned it. And obviously, just doing the exact same thing."

Helm said he's ready to play wherever the team needs him, whether it's as a blocker, or as a pass catcher.

He takes pride in both.

"It's however Coach (Brian) Callahan wants to use me," he said. "I've always been super blessed to have great hands. It was like that in high school, and obviously when I got to college. I always had that trust in myself – I've been on the JUGS (machine) quite a bit, been on the JUGS since I've been here."

TEXAS TIGHT END GUNNAR HELM A STANDOUT WHO STAYED PATIENT AND STAYED PUT IN TRANSFER ERA

BY JIM VERTUNO
ASSOCIATED PRESS
DECEMBER 28, 2024

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Scan the rosters of Texas and Arizona State ahead of the Peach Bowl and the usual names pop out.

Texas quarterback Quinn Ewers and Thorpe Award winner Jahdae Barron. Arizona State All-American running back Cam Skattebo.

Another Longhorn who draws a lot of attention from Sun Devils coach Kenny Dillingham is Texas senior tight end Gunnar Helm, who has been catching everything thrown his way and even hurdling over defenders in a breakout season.

Helm's 55 catches for 688 yards are both Texas tight end records as the No. 5-seeded Longhorns head into a New Years Day Peach Bowl matchup against No. 4-seed Arizona State in the College Football Playoff quarterfinals. He also has six touchdowns.

"He's dynamic," Dillingham said. "He's not a tight end that clumsy and catches it and falls. He catches it and extends completions, which is something you never like to see when you're going (against) a tight end ... You don't want them to catch it and run."

Staying patient

In the transfer portal era of college football, Helm is a rare case of relatively unheralded recruit who stayed patient, stayed put and developed in to a first-team all-Southeastern Conference player this season.

"I think somebody this predicted me to have nine receptions this year," Helm after he caught six passes for 77 yards and a touchdown in a 38-24 first-round win over Clemson.

"We've just got a great connection, and (he) just always is open it seems like," Ewers said.

Rated a 3-star recruit out of Edgewood, Colorado, some recruiting analysts had him as the lowest-ranked player in the Texas class that came to campus in coach Steve Sarkisian's first year in 2021. Helm had initially committed to former coach Tom Herman but stuck with Texas through the coaching change and a 5-7 season.

"I didn't really have a choice," Helm said earlier this season.

Also signed in that class was high school All-American Ja'Tavion Sanders, who over the 2022 and 2023 seasons would catch 99 passes and set the school's single season and career pass catching records for tight ends. Helm caught 19 passes those two seasons.

Breaking records

The field finally opened up for Helm when Sanders turned pro after Texas made the playoff last season and was drafted by the Carolina Panthers.

Helm's breakout game came in a 31-12 win at Michigan when he had seven catches for 98 yards and a touchdown. Against Clemson, Helm caught a touchdown pass in the second quarter. He was wide open in the end zone but had to leap high to cradle the ball and still toe-tap his feet in the end zone to stay inbounds.

His size (6-foot-5, 250 pounds), athleticism and versatility as a blocker have Helm projected as an early round draft pick in the NFL.

"We all know the path, his journey, the development that he's had in our program. I'm super proud of him," Texas coach Steve Sarkisian said. "(Ewers) can place balls in certain spots where he knows maybe if Gunnar doesn't catch it, it's probably incomplete ... They've been together for three years now, and I think there's a lot of trust there."

GUNNAR HELM'S BREAKOUT SENIOR SEASON: THE EVOLUTION OF TEXAS' TRUSTED TIGHT END

BY KATIE BORCHETTA
THE DAILY TEXAN
NOVEMBER 15, 2024

This season, Texas football's roster is loaded with highly skilled newcomers and transfers, resulting in a recruiting class ranking sixth and fifth-ranked transfer portal recruiting, according to 247Sports. These new Longhorns have not disappointed, with players such as junior wide receiver Isaiah Bond, senior defensive back Andrew Mukuba and five-star freshman wide receiver Ryan Wingo who helped lead the Longhorns to an 8–1 record and now a No. 3 Associated Press Poll ranking.

However, a familiar face on the field stands out this season.

Senior tight end Gunnar Helm has had a breakout role this season despite being at Texas since his freshman year in 2021. This season alone, Helm has held 461 receiving yards and three touchdowns in nine games, surpassing his cumulative stats for his first three years on the team.

One skill from Helm exclusively seen this season is an explosive hurdle over the defense during the run after catch. These runs have not only gained a lot of attention but have helped the Longhorns accumulate yards after the catch. Helm also had an impressive 62 yards on six receptions against Georgia last month, in a matchup where the offense didn't have much success.

However, Helm's progression might be overlooked because he has played almost every game on the Longhorn schedule dating back to his first year. Looking back at his first season, Helm said that he was just thrown into his role and had to learn by doing.

"I think I've made leaps and bounds since my freshman year," Helm said. "I was behind Jared Wiley my freshman year. He's on the Chiefs now and doing a great job but a week before our first game, he gets hurt. So, you know, I'm on the road in Arkansas, and then home against Louisiana Lafayette. It was definitely very eye-opening. I was thrown kind of right into the fire."

Since his freshman year, Helm has prided himself on working hard to get where he is this season. In his time at Texas, he has improved his passing-catching game, yards after the catch, stretching the defense and perfecting his routes. Yet, he doesn't just credit himself.

"I've had the pleasure of playing with a lot of really good tight ends, a lot of NFL tight ends," Helm said. "So taking things from Ja'Tavion (Sanders') game, taking things from Jared Wiley's game, taking things from Cade Brewer's game, I think it's made me the player I am today. And obviously trusting Coach Sark (Sarkisian) and Coach Banks and Coach Flood, and when you know that; when they were telling me; when it was tough to believe, 'Just trust the process.'"

With his transformative success, Helm has turned into a potential NFL tight end, and, being from head coach Steve Sarkisian's "inaugural recruiting class," he could not be more excited for Helm.

"I've been really proud of Gunnar," Sarkisian said. "Gunnar continued to work at it, and I think the dedication that he made to developing himself in the passing game, we saw glimpses of it last year, but what he's been able to do this year has become a real weapon … a guy that can not only catch the ball but can create explosive plays and can make people miss in the open field."

NEW TITANS OC NICK HOLZ READY TO WORK ALONGSIDE HC BRIAN CALLAHAN

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
FEBRUARY 14, 2024

NASHVILLE – On the same day he was hired as head coach of the Tennessee Titans, Brian Callahan last month made his plans of calling the team's offensive plays known.

On Wednesday, Callahan introduced Nick Holz, the man he hired as his offensive coordinator.

So, what will the dynamics between the two look like?

Callahan said the working relationship will develop further in time, but he knows it can work since he operated in a similar structure at his previous job, as offensive coordinator with the Bengals.

"It's a little different than maybe you're used to around here," Callahan said, "having an offensive head coach that's calling the plays with an offensive coordinator by title, that doesn't call the plays. But it's a set-up I'm trying to emulate from how we were set up in Cincinnati with myself and (head coach) Zac Taylor. And it's a system that I know is important, and I know that it works.

"(Most) of Nick's job is to make sure the offensive staff and the offensive players and the offensive scheme keeps running all the moments I am not available to be there, particularly during the course of the week. There's a preparation part of it that is critically important to me."

Holz brings 11 years of NFL coaching experience to the Titans, and a total of 16 years coaching.

He joins the Titans after one season with Jacksonville as their Passing Game Coordinator.

"You need to be yourself first," Holz said of how he'll handle the set-up, and approach his job. "I am not going to try and be Brian. We are different people in that regard. … As each day goes, just seeing a few more things I can take off his plate …. It is really kind of an open dialogue the whole time in how we're trying to figure stuff out, and structure it this way."

Holz has deep ties with the Callahan, and his family. Holz and Brian Callahan were teammates at De La Salle High School (Calif.), and Holz got his start in coaching on Bill Callahan's staff at the University of Nebraska in 2007. Bill Callahan was officially named offensive line coach with the Titans.

Prior to joining the Jaguars, Holz spent 10 years (2012-21) with the Oakland/Las Vegas Raiders and served in a variety of roles on offense, mostly focused on wide receivers.

As an offensive unit, Holz said he wants to see players playing with effort and toughness, and "we really want to see guys playing with great speed, detail and execution."

Callahan and Holz believe they're like-minded in their offensive philosophy, and approach.

He plans to do his part to help the Titans be successful as a unit.

"Everybody has their own management style," Holz said. "I don't think you'll see me as a yeller and a screamer or anything like that. But I think if you build relationships with people, you kind of empower them to do their jobs.

"I feel like the people I have worked for, they empowered me … As a leadership style, the same thing with the players, 'We're going to give you this, and you keep going and we'll build the connection in that regard."

TITANS SIGN SAFETY AMANI HOOKER TO A MULTI-YEAR CONTRACT EXTENSION

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
SEPTEMBER 6, 2025

NASHVILLE – The Titans have signed safety Amani Hooker to a multi-year contract extension.

Since being drafted by the organization in 2019, Hooker has been one of the team's most consistent and reliable players. He was recently elected by his peers as one of the team's captains for this season.

The development comes one day before the team's season opener against the Denver Broncos.

"This is a reflection of all the people that believed in me along the way," Hooker said. "I want to thank Ms. Amy for wanting me to be here, to Chad (Brinker), Mike (Borgonzi) and Coach (Brian Callahan) for supporting me and giving me the opportunity. Most importantly, I want to thank my family and my teammates and those who've been in my corner since the beginning. I'm proud to be a Titan for many more years and look forward to building towards one goal."

In six NFL seasons, Hooker has played in 80 games and totaled 315 tackles, 12 interceptions and 31 passes defensed.

Hooker led the Titans with a career-high five interceptions in 2024 while tying for the team lead with nine passes defensed. In 2023, Hooker started 13 games at safety and he ranked fourth on the team with a career-best 80 tackles and finished second on the squad with seven passes defensed.

During the franchise's "Titans era," which began in 1999, Hooker's 12 interceptions are the ninth-most for the team and rank fourth among the club's safeties.

Kickoff for Sunday's game at Empower Field at Mile High is set for 3:05 p.m. CDT.

WITH NEW FACES AROUND HIM, TITANS VETERAN SAFETY AMANI HOOKER READY TO LEAD THE WAY

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 5, 2024

NASHVILLE – When veteran safety Amani Hooker looks around, he sees a lot of newness.

New head coach, new defensive coordinator, new position coach, and plenty of new faces around him on the defense.

Hooker, heading into his sixth season with the Titans, wants to do his part to help lead the way.

"It's all about accountability, with me as well," Hooker said. "This is all new for me – it's a new style, a new defense, new scheme, so just like everyone else is learning, I am doing the same thing.

"But my job is to make sure everyone learns at a progressive level and we're doing it together as a unit."

Hooker is the second-longest tenured Titan alongside defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons, behind only outside linebacker Harold Landry. Hooker and Simmons were part of the 2019 draft class, and they've been mainstays ever since.

Before looking ahead, Hooker looked back at last season, and it reminded him of things he can do better moving forward.

"(Things I can) improve on is having ball disruption, getting my hands on the ball, whether that is interceptions, pass break-ups, forced fumbles," Hooker said. "Overall, just being the best overall safety I can be. I know I have a long road to get there, but I know my capabilities are there and I just have to improve this offseason and help my guys around me."

In five NFL seasons, Hooker has played in 66 games, with 37 starts. He's tallied 245 tackles, seven interceptions, and 22 passes defenses, along with two quarterback pressures and two forced fumbles.

In 2023, while playing in 13 games, Hooker totaled 80 tackles and an interception, along with three tackles for a loss.

Hooker said he's excited about the additions the team has made around him, including the addition of veteran cornerbacks L'Jarius Sneed and Chidobe Awuzie.

"We have two dogs – we have Chido and Sneed out there," Hooker said. "I can't wait to go full speed with them, with the pads on. I have been watching them make plays for the other team against us, so I am excited that they're on our team now and it's going to be a lot of fun.

"These guys have proven they can be in the right position to make the plays, and when I'm out there I am able to do my job now, and start searching for plays as they come to me. Knowing you have guys that are aggressive out there, it makes me as a safety have that same mentality that they have and bring it to our defense."

Hooker said he's also fired up about new defensive coordinator Dennard Wilson, and the mindset he's preaching.

Across the board, Hooker said guys are excited, and they see opportunities, whether they're new to the team, or been around several years like himself.

"I'll just say it's a lot more aggressive," Hooker said of the defense. "It has been aggressive there's times when it can be aggressive and there's times when not to, so our coaches are doing a good job teaching that."

TITANS SAFETY AMANI HOOKER THANKFUL FOR CONTRACT EXTENSION WITH THE TEAM

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
SEPTEMBER 9, 2022

NASHVILLE – The Titans on Friday agreed to terms on a multi-year contract extension with safety Amani Hooker.

After practice on Friday, Hooker said he's thankful for several reasons.

"It means a lot," Hooker said. "It shows how much the Titans believe in me and trust me, and I have that same trust and confidence in them. I am just going to do my job to make sure I can help this team win and help them win a Super Bowl."

Hooker said he called his parents when the deal became official.

Growing up, Hooker recalled cutting grass, walking dogs, and working a construction job to make money. Hooker said he knew after two days the construction job wasn't for him.

The NFL has worked out well for Hooker and his family.

"My parents, they were with me when I was in little league and they knew my dream when I was in kindergarten," Hooker said. "For them to see where I am at today, I know they are very proud of me, and I wouldn't be here without them.

"Growing up, the dream was for me to get to the NFL, and it was also my dream to stay in the NFL and be able to provide for my family. Being able to do that is a blessing from God."

Hooker, heading into his fourth season, has played in 44 games, with 15 starts, for the Titans since being picked in the fourth round of the 2019 NFL Draft.

Over the years, Hooker has developed into a key player on the team's defense.

In 2021, Hooker started 12 games and finished the year with 62 tackles, and an interception. Hooker also added an interception on the team's playoff contest against the Bengals.

Hooker had a team-high four interceptions in 2020.

In three seasons, Hooker has recorded 119 tackles, five interceptions, 12 passes defensed and a forced fumble.

With five career interceptions, Hooker is tied with Juan Thornhill for the third-most among safeties from the 2019 draft class, behind only Darnell Savage Jr. (eight) and Taylor Rapp (seven). From 2020 to 2021, only 11 NFL safeties had more interceptions than Hooker.

Hooker, whose contract was set to expire after the 2022 season before the extension, said the thought of playing alongside veteran safety Kevin Byard long-term is key.

"It is definitely a blessing," Hooker said of Byard. "Watching KB and how he is around the building, I wanted to mimic that because I've seen the success that he had off the field, and on the field as well.

"We have been together for four years, and we're about to be together for another four right now. So we're going to be able to be on the same page and be able to make plays and we'll be the best we can be."

The Titans kick off the 2022 season against the New York Giants on Sunday at Nissan Stadium.

BYARD SAYS HOOKER HAS FOLLOWED PROPER PATH TO LEADERSHIP

BY MICHAEL HOGAN
SI.COM
JUNE 3, 2021

Amani Hooker figures to make a bigger impact in more than one way this season.

First, the Tennessee Titans safety figures to be a full-time starter for the first time in his career after the team released veteran Kenny Vaccaro as part of a secondary overhaul in March.

He also hopes to be more of a leader for the defensive unit.

And nobody knows how to properly establish leadership than the man he will be playing beside in the defensive backfield this season, Kevin Byard, who has been a team captain in each of the past two seasons.

In order to become a good leader, Byard said, one must first be a good follower. And Hooker has done that well over his first two NFL seasons.

“I think Amani has been a great follower since he’s been here,” Byard said. “Watching me and (Vaccaro), or just watching any of the veteran guys and learning from them, learning how to be a pro.”

A third-round pick out of Middle Tennessee State in 2016, that’s exactly how Byard became one of the Titans’ most prominent voices in the locker room, for both on and off-field matters.

The Pro Bowler and All-Pro observed and learned from the likes of defensive back Jason McCourty and linebacker Brian Orapko.

Not only would Byard listen to what veterans had to say on a daily basis, but he paid close attention to the smallest of details. In the NFL, of course, doing the “little things” matters most.

“One thing that I did when I first got into the league was I looked at the parking lot,” Byard said. “When I got there in the morning, I was looking at cars ... what car is here early in the morning? Okay, this guy here. I was asking Jason, ‘Hey, what time are you getting here in the morning? Why are you coming here so early?’ They were getting rehab or doing the little things.”

A fourth-round pick out of Iowa in 2019, Hooker’s ascension to a more significant role on the defense started last season. His snaps with the defense increased, and when Vaccaro missed three games due to a lingering concussion, Hooker was called upon to start.

He finished tied for the team lead in interceptions with four and second in passes defended eight while also making 51 total tackles. All of those marks are career-highs.

Entering the 2021 season, Hooker is in a position to evolve as a leader for many reasons. Many younger players will fill the secondary after numerous moves in free agency and the NFL Draft.

But most importantly, he’s taken after many veterans over his first two seasons, including Byard.

“He’s into that role where he’s out there playing, he’s out there being more vocal, making calls and checks. That’s the start of it,” Byard said. “Going out there being sure of yourself, knowing what you need to do. When you assure yourself and know what you need to do, you can coach another guy up. I think he’s been doing pretty great at that.

“I think we’re going to be pretty good running mates this year.”

BACK IN TENNESSEE RECEIVER VAN JEFFERSON READY TO MAKE THE MOST OF HIS OPPORTUNITY WITH TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 21, 2025

NASHVILLE – Van Jefferson is back in Music City, hoping to flourish in the city he grew up in.

The Titans receiver knows what he needs to do to give himself the best chance.

"Every day, working," Jefferson said. "It's just about staying ready, and staying ready for the opportunity when the opportunity presents itself. I think if I do that, I'll be fine."

Jefferson, who played at Ravenwood High School, signed with the Titans back in March.

Wearing No.11, he's been running routes in offseason workouts on the same practice fields where his father, Shawn, was receivers coach with the Titans. Back then, the young Jefferson was a regular at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park, when he'd cross paths with then-Titans receivers Nate Washington, Kendall Wright, Kenny Britt and others in the hallways.

He's thrilled to be back.

"I remember coming here with my dad, walking with him throughout the facility," Jefferson said. "So, just coming back was crazy to see. So, it's great. Obviously, I am just here to compete and win and get to know my teammates. It's a full circle moment."

The 28-year-old Jefferson played last season in Pittsburgh, where he tallied 24 grabs for 276 yards and two touchdowns for the Steelers.

In five NFL seasons, Jefferson has totaled 137 receptions for 1,876 yards and 12 touchdowns in 78 games. His breakout season came in 2021 for the Rams, when he recorded 50 receptions for 802 yards and six touchdowns. His receiving and yardage totals ranked third on the team that would go on to win Super Bowl LVI.

Jefferson is excited about his opportunity in Tennessee.

"It's a great opportunity," he said. "We have a great group of guys in the room, guys I can learn from, guys that are there who are hungry as well. I am just coming in and doing my part and letting the chips fall where they fall. At the end of the day, we are just here working right now, in OTAs, and progressing into training camp.

"(Right now) I am just learning the playbook – that's my main focus. I am just learning plays and learning each position so I can be on the field at any position I need to be."

Jefferson said he likes the group around him in the receiving corps.

"Obviously I've known Calvin (Ridley) from afar, and the things that he's done from college to the league," Jefferson said. "He's just savvy in his routes, and stuff like that. I'm learning from Tyler (Lockett), who is a savvy vet, and all the great things he did in Seattle. And you have some other guys in the league like Bryce (Oliver), who has played some here, learning from him and Mason (Kinsey) and those guys. So I am just soaking it all in – we have some great guys in the room that I can learn from and we're all just going to be competing."

Jefferson said he's also already been impressed by rookie quarterback Cam Ward, who was selected by the Titans with the first pick of the NFL Draft.

"I think Cam's leadership, the way he has come in and put his nose into the playbook and how he has bee around the guys, after practice, getting throws in, that is something you like to see," Jefferson said. "He is very adamant about learning the playbook as fast as he can, so he can play his best when he is on the field.

"As he continues to grow and grow, you are going to see that come out of him. I am excited for his opportunity and what he can do."

LOCAL PREP STANDOUT VAN JEFFERSON EXCITED ABOUT HIS "FULL CIRCLE MOMENT" AS HE EMBARKS ON HIS OWN CAREER WITH THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MARCH 21, 2025

NASHVILLE – When Van Jefferson walked into the Titans facility to sign his contract with the team last week, he couldn't help but think about how much his life had changed since his last time in the building.

It was back in 2014, when Jefferson was a senior at Ravenwood High School, and his father, Shawn, was receivers coach with the Titans. The young Jefferson was a regular visitor those days, when he'd cross paths with then-Titans receivers Nate Washington, Kendall Wright, Kenny Britt and others in the hallways.

He cheered on the Titans, mainly because he was pulling for his dad.

Fast-forward to last week, when Van Jefferson returned to Ascension Saint Thomas to sign with the team.

Jefferson, already with five NFL seasons under his belt, returned as a father of five, and a husband.

With him on his trip back was his wife, and the five children who range in age from 10 months old to eight years old.

"I have a crew," the 28-year-old Jefferson said with a smile. "I've been blessed."

A prep standout at Ravenwood who garnered Tennessee Sports Writers Association all-state and Tennessean all-Midstate honors before playing in college at Ole Miss and Florida, Jefferson is thrilled about being back with the Titans after playing for the Los Angeles Rams (2020-23), Atlanta Falcons (2023) and Pittsburgh Steelers (2024).

"Tennessee, it provided a lot of firsts for me," Jefferson said on Thursday from Pittsburgh. "I got my first exposure there, got my first (college) offer. I met some of my best friends to this day there.

"Being back, it's a full circle moment. Just coming to the facility, I remember when I used to drive there with my dad in the morning. To come back, and now be with the Titans myself, it's amazing. It's a blessing to play in the NFL regardless, but it's a little sweeter when you're able to come back and play for the team where you lived for an extended period of time. I'll always be grateful for that, and it adds more sweetness to it, playing for the hometown team."

News of Jefferson's signing also meant hearing from a lot of folks with a 615 area code.

"I got a lot of those texts, a lot of those calls, from my buddies who are excited for me to be back," Jefferson said with a smile. "And my high school coach, Will Hester, we were on the phone for probably an hour, just talking about me coming back and being around now, and how he'll be able to come see me play. It was hard for him to come see me play in L.A., and away from here.

"So, it was a great welcome from all the people I know. I am glad to be back."

In five NFL seasons, Jefferson has totaled 137 receptions for 1,876 yards and 12 touchdowns in 78 games. His breakout season came in 2021 for the Rams, when he recorded 50 receptions for 802 yards and six touchdowns. His receiving and yardage totals ranked third on the team that would go on to win Super Bowl LVI.

Last season in Pittsburgh, Jefferson tallied 24 grabs for 276 yards and two touchdowns for the Steelers.

Jefferson said there were a number of reasons he opted to sign with the Titans, in addition to his Tennessee roots, and it being his dad's former team. Shawn Jefferson, who played 13 NFL seasons himself, coached from 2013-2015 with the Titans. He's now receivers coach with the New York Jets.

"I had coach (Brian) Callahan coach me when I was at the Senior Bowl, coming out of college," Jefferson said of the Titans head coach. "And their offense is very similar to the West Coast style, similar to what I ran with the Rams. And (Titans receivers coach) Tyke Tolbert has a really good reputation around the league. So, that ultimately helped lead me to come to the Titans.

"In my conversations with the staff, it just felt really comfortable. In my heart it felt like Tennessee was the right place."

A 6-foot-1, 200-pounder, Jefferson has played in 78 games in his five-year career, with 47 starts.

After some modest numbers in recent years, he feels like he can surge even higher in Tennessee.

"Just me being consistent," Jefferson said. "Coming into the league, you always feel like you can get better each year and that is kind of where I am at right now. So, I just want to keep proving to myself I can put up the big numbers and can reach things I've always strived to get.

"Now it is about me putting it all together, and what better place to do it than back home and with an organization that wants to win and hopefully I can be a part of that."

Jefferson said he's already looking forward to getting to work this offseason.

He knows there's some uncertainty at the quarterback position in Tennessee, so he'll have to wait to see how things play out.

Jefferson knows one thing he can control is himself, so he plans to be ready to help.

"I think it's a waiting game, and I don't know if they're going to address that in the draft or if they're going to address it with a veteran free agent who is still out there," Jefferson said of the team's quarterback position. "At the end of the day, I know Will (Levis) was there last year and I'll get some work in with Will, and if we roll with Will, we roll with Will. Will is more than capable of coming out there and playing, and getting the job done. But if it's someone else we'll roll with that.

"Right now, it is just a waiting game and whoever steps out there, we'll do our best to win."

‘A BABY, AND A LOMBARDI’: RAMS WR VAN JEFFERSON, GROWING FAMILY PREPARING FOR THEIR BIGGEST WEEK

BY JOURDAN RODRIGUE
THE ATHLETIC
FEB. 12, 2022

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Van Jefferson will play in the biggest game of his life on Sunday, but Friday night was just as important.

It was Jefferson’s first “daddy-daughter” dance with his 5-year-old daughter, Bella, at her school.

Jefferson, a second-year receiver for the Rams who is blossoming into a key player in their offense, has been inundated with media and marketing requests all week as the Rams took a global stage ahead of a Super Bowl appearance against Cincinnati. But this was the event circled on his calendar. And as Jefferson presented Bella with a bouquet of roses to kick off their own big evening, it was the only thing that mattered.

“It’s their first one, and he was like, ‘I’m not missing it. I don’t care that it’s two days before the Super Bowl. I’m going to be there, I’m going to be there for her. I have to show up for her,'” said Samaria, Jefferson’s wife. She is also expecting their second child, a son, at any moment — the official due date is Feb. 17, but Samaria is preparing for any scenario in a week like this.

“I’m feeling pretty good — I’m definitely feeling 40 weeks (pregnant),” she told The Athletic this week, laughing. “I’m definitely feeling the pressure and the pain. Nerves for Van, nerves for our family — but it’s OK.”

“I’m excited about it,” Jefferson added this week. “Excited to play in the Super Bowl as well. … Two things going on. I’m happy about both of them. Maybe he can wait just a little bit longer, until after the Super Bowl!”

Samaria and Van are high school sweethearts who began dating while they attended Ravenwood High School near Nashville, Tenn. She fondly remembers cheering him on from the bleachers Friday nights in his No. 2 jersey. The two had Bella as Samaria finished high school, and with Jefferson in college (first to Ole Miss, and then to Florida), but shortly after, they split up. But Samaria still watched every game. About four years later, they found each other again.

“We left it to God. We let him do his thing and we said, ‘Hey, if it’s meant to be, then we’ll come back to each other.’ And that’s exactly what happened,” she said. As Jefferson prepared to enter his second NFL season, the two got married.

“It’s been crazy, for sure. Adjusting to (NFL life), marriage, new baby, all of those things. But it’s so great to see how well he manages it,” Samaria said. “He’s a great dad, a great team player, all of the things. I don’t know how he does it, but he does it.”

Jefferson has worked to make a difference for the Rams despite a talent-loaded receivers room that features Cooper Kupp, a triple crown receiver, and Odell Beckham Jr. It could have been easy to get lost behind the “names” on the Rams’ star-studded roster. But Jefferson has put together a solid season.

In 17 regular-season starts, Jefferson caught 50 passes for 802 yards and six touchdowns, averaging 16 yards per catch. The Rams have needed his length and speed to help stretch the field in their evolved, explosive offense. They also needed him to step up after the loss of Robert Woods to an ACL tear in November (right after the team signed Beckham).

“He’s a very gifted player,” coach Sean McVay said this week. “I think he’s only gotten better as he’s gotten more confident, more experience. He’s made a handful of big plays, a bunch of crunch-time catches for us. I think the future is really bright for this guy. … He’s only going to get better. I love Van Jefferson.”

Jefferson’s season of growth has been punctuated by new moments for his family — Samaria’s pregnancy, playing in a division against his father, Shawn (who is the receivers coach for the Arizona Cardinals and who played in two Super Bowls himself), and showing Bella that all of her moments are just as important as his own.

One day this season after the team broke down the huddle to signal the end of practice, Jefferson left the field at a full sprint. That was the day of his first parent-teacher conference at Bella’s school, he explained breathlessly as he passed a row of media members on the sideline, and he didn’t want to be late.

Samaria marvels at the journey the two have been on since the days of cheering for him from the bleachers at Ravenwood. Sunday, she — yes, at 40 weeks pregnant — will cheer him on from a suite at SoFi Stadium. She hasn’t missed a home game this season.

“Just like any other game, I’m going to be there this Sunday and I’m going to stay calm … and pray to God my water doesn’t break,” she said. “I am 100 percent going to be there. I would not miss this moment for anything. I will be 40 weeks pregnant at the Super Bowl, supporting my husband 100 percent.”

The family, and the Rams’ support staff, are under strict instructions from Samaria to not tell Jefferson during the game if she does go into labor — her decision, despite Jefferson’s protests.

“He is going to play. He is going to keep playing,” she said. “I said, ‘You play, I’ll see you at the hospital afterwards.’ That’s what it is. I will never take that moment away from him. I want to see him glorify God on the field that day. … Knowing Van and how he is so caring, he just worries so much about me and the kids. … If I did tell him or someone told him during the game, he would come off that field. We're saying, 'Hey, you go play. We'll see you after.'"

Samaria is hopeful there's not just one but two new additions to their family this week.

"A baby, and a Lombardi!"

‘HE HAD TO OVERCOME BEING MY SON’: HOW VAN JEFFERSON FORGED HIS OWN PATH OUTSIDE THE SHADOW OF HIS NFL FATHER

BY WILL SAMMON
THE ATHLETIC
AUGUST 10, 2018

Shawn Jefferson’s full name — Vanchi LaShawn Jefferson — embarrassed him so much while growing up that he made a decision by fifth grade to identify with only part of it.

“I hated that name,” Shawn Jefferson told The Athletic. “Could you imagine going to the first day of school hearing the teacher say, ‘Hey, do we have a ‘Vanch-ee’ or ‘Van-cheye’ here?’ I’d be down in my desk like, ‘Yeah, here, I go by Shawn.’ ”

For the record, Shawn Jefferson’s mother told him that his aunt recommended the name “Vanchi.” But the name “Shawn” has stuck, through 13 years as a player in the NFL and another 13 years as an assistant coach, including his current job as Miami Dolphins receivers coach.

The legacy of “Vanchi” didn’t end there, though, as much as Shawn Jefferson would’ve originally preferred it to. His father was a strong proponent of a man naming his first son after himself, and Shawn Jefferson always did what his father told him to do. So on July 26, 1996, in Jacksonville, Fla., Vanchi LaShawn Jefferson Jr. was born.

Van Jefferson shortened his first name but didn’t abandon it. Like his father, Van Jefferson is a skilled wide receiver. He transferred to Florida after three years at Ole Miss, and he has been ruled eligible to play for the Gators this season by the NCAA and the SEC. He profiles as the Gators’ most complete threat on the outside. The way Van Jefferson lines up, waits for the snap and runs is all very similar to his father.

But Van Jefferson’s first name is a reminder — an irresistible metaphor, even, for a relationship that has evolved over the years — that he is not his father. Shawn Jefferson will always be part of his story, but Van Jefferson’s decision to transfer from Ole Miss to Florida is the latest example of him becoming his own person.

“A lot of times, he had to overcome being my son,” Shawn Jefferson said. “Van is very driven. He’s extremely driven. Not that he hates the fact … I think what kind of fuels him sometimes is that they’ll mention him as the son of former NFL player and coach Shawn Jefferson. Van wants to dispel all of that, which I love — I absolutely love it. That’s why when I get requests for interviews, I never call back. I want them to focus on Van and not the fact I’m his father and blah, blah, blah …

“Van is self-made. Trust me when I tell you that. Van gets out there, works his ass off. I think his goal is, hey, look, when they mention him, don’t say the son of former NFL player … and I love the fact that I think that fuels him. I want him to be his own thing. Like, ‘This is the story of Van Jefferson.’ ”

Tying Van Jefferson’s growth to Shawn Jefferson as a receiver may seem like a tired tale. But every time someone close to Van Jefferson is asked a question about the hardest challenge he has faced to this point, they offer a similar answer.

The part of the story that gets twisted is that, though Shawn Jefferson’s past helped, Van Jefferson didn’t make his name off his father’s, even though it’s undeniable that he wouldn’t be who he is now without his father. And to use a phrase from Shawn Jefferson on the topic: “It wasn’t always pretty.”

“My dad is more of a stern guy,” Van Jefferson said. “He wants everything done the right way. Not saying I don’t want to do things the right way, but I’m saying he’s more of a disciplinarian. Our personalities are very different because I like to joke around a lot and he’s more work, work, work, work.”

Shawn Jefferson like to tell the story about how when Van Jefferson was 10, his mother would say he’s going to be a special football player because of coordination, athleticism and the way he ran. Van Jefferson didn’t actually play football with pads on until the seventh grade because his father wouldn’t allow him to sooner.

From there, the stories those close to Van Jefferson enjoy sharing the most about his pre-college football days all sound similar.

• There was the time Van Jefferson showed up to a Nike Opening event for the first time in Birmingham. His father told him not to worry about the plethora of five- and four-stars, that he would earn each star he received. After a while, no defensive back volunteered to go 1-on-1 with him. He was named MVP.

• Once, Van Jefferson had the flu the day of a game. He spent the early portion of the day with doctors. His mother, Marla Jefferson, remembers seeing him laying on the ground resting on the field prior to kickoff. Still, he played.

• He suffered a nose injury once in a game and was taken out. His father, as he recalled, walked over and only asked if he was going back in. He went back in.

• He broke his fibula early in his freshman high school season. He grew up wanting to attend Ohio State. The Buckeyes hosted a camp a few weeks after he got his cast removed. Not yet 100 percent, he went and competed.

“That was when I was like, ‘OK, I got something here,’” Shawn Jefferson said. “Most kids don’t want to go. For the mere fact that he did that, as a father, you put that in the back of your mind like, ‘OK, he has these traits.’ After that, (Ohio State was) on him. They recruited Van until the last freaking second. They wanted him bad."

Van Jefferson moved to Tennessee for his sophomore year of his high school after his father left the Detroit Lions to coach receivers for the Titans. He enrolled at Ravenwood High School shortly after the family met football coach Will Hester, then in his first year at the school.

"I just remember the intensity of his father," Hester said. "He told me his son was pretty good but he didn't want anything handed to him and just wanted an opportunity where he can come in to compete to play."

Van Jefferson set himself apart early. His film from those days tells the story of how: Often, he was able to sink his hips, take minimal steps, get out of his breath and separate from a defensive back quickly.

"Van was — and still is in my 21 years of coaching — the most polished receiver I've ever been around," Hester said. "Van was one of those guys who could come to the sideline and say, 'Coach, listen, the corner is playing me like this, the safety is rolling like this, this is there and that's there.' "

Van Jefferson started collecting major college football offers ahead of his junior year. The boy who grew up watching college football all day on fall Saturdays and getting exposed to greats like Calvin Johnson through his father's job informed Hester of his pro aspirations, confirming what Shawn Jefferson always thought he knew.

"When he told me that, my blinders went on," Shawn Jefferson said. "Sometimes I was brutal on him. It would be, OK, this is what you need to do to get there and it's going to be uncomfortable at times."

That it was.

"As far as challenges go, the biggest challenge was living with his dad," Hester said. "His dad is an uber-intense guy. Their workouts would rival anything you would put an NFL guy through. At times, Van, early on in his life, would resent that a bit just because it was so hard and so intense. Shawn was coaching him like an NFL receiver and Van wanted him to be his dad a little bit more.

"I don't know if it was ever off. It was always on, and I think that wore on Van."

Hester played the role of "good cop" for Van Jefferson, often serving as a listener as much as a coach.

"Van is a very, very, very loving kid," Hester said. "Van craves affirmation from everyone, and the hardest thing was he wasn't getting a whole lot of that from dad. And not because dad didn't love him or didn't want to give it to him, but because dad knew what kind of ability he had and wanted to make sure he reached that potential."

Shawn Jefferson fathered his son like a coach, one who would harp on a missed block instead of glorifying receptions and yards. He wouldn't degrade his son, but he would be direct. He didn't want Van Jefferson to just be the best receiver, he wanted him to be the best blocker, too.

"Sometimes, as a father, there's no filter time," Shawn Jefferson said. "I have to make sure he gets what I'm trying to get across to him. I don't know if I'm Van's worst critic. But I'm after perfection. I'm always a stickler on just being perfect on everything. And I know there's no one perfect but the man upstairs. But that's where I want his mindset to be.

"If you keep that mindset, you'll always hover around excellent."

Ask Van Jefferson about the pros and cons of having a father who is a coach, and he doesn't list any grievances. Instead of talking about how demanding his father was, his brain goes in a different direction: He mentions needing to block out the criticism and speculation that Shawn Jefferson, like any NFL coach, faces.

"My dad instilled in me everything I know," Jefferson said. "Getting out of breaks, creating separation, I owe it all to my dad. He's been a great influence on my life."

Van Jefferson isn't "in your face" with teammates and in any setting, really, as Marla Jefferson put it, and he is far more reserved than his father, whom Marla Jefferson describes as a "strong-fisted-type of a guy." There are reasons for the differences, and they shed light on Shawn Jefferson's style of parenting. He never wanted Van Jefferson to be the next Shawn Jefferson, but he did want his son to develop the same kind of mindset that he was forced to have growing up, the idea of working for everything.

Shawn Jefferson grew up with six brothers and five sisters in the Jacksonville projects. His father worked a construction job to support his family of 12. His mother ran the household. His father believed in hard, tough, rugged training.

"You see some of your friends getting killed and you realize how grateful you are for a family structure like we had," Shawn Jefferson said in a 1991 article in the Los Angeles Times. "You have to have a strong mind to resist (drugs and gangs). Your mother and father instill that in you."

Van Jefferson lived a suburban lifestyle with his two sisters. "Privileged," was the way Marla Jefferson put it. In a family of faith, Shawn and Marla Jefferson took their children to soup kitchens, homeless shelters and poor neighborhoods to "bless homes." One such trip happened in a poverty-stricken area of Detroit when Van Jefferson was in eighth grade. The family visited a woman and her two sons in a tiny two-bedroom apartment. This was the only time the Jeffersons were invited inside someone's home on such a visit. The woman fried fish for everyone, creating a thick smoke throughout the small house.

The car ride back home that day featured questions from Van Jefferson about why his family lived the way it did and why the woman couldn't live elsewhere.

"We did not want him to grow up looking at life through one type of lens," Marla Jefferson said.

Compassion and introspection have long been parts of who Van Jefferson is. The recruiting process, when every writer covering every new school that offered him a scholarship wrote the same biographical information, compelled Jefferson to reflect more. Marla Jefferson often heard her son say, 'Why do they always say 'the son of Shawn Jefferson' all the time?"

"So much of who Van is, what he does and the accomplishments that he acquires have always been associated with his father," Marla Jefferson said. "When he was being recruited, that's when the battle actually started really. There were peaks and valleys before. But that's when it really came head to head."

Van Jefferson grew up wanting to play for Ohio State, but his father didn't think it was the right program after weighing several factors such as fit in the offense and the depth chart. "He kind of forbid him not to go there," Marla Jefferson said. Oklahoma was also in the mix, but Shawn Jefferson didn't want his son to go there, either. Shawn Jefferson was particularly fond of Georgia, but Van Jefferson decommitted from the Bulldogs after a visit.

"I don't know if Van couldn't really receive Georgia well because his dad pushed it so much or if he just really didn't feel at home," Marla Jefferson said. "And I kind of believe that. When he went to the campus he liked everybody, but there wasn't a connect."

After redshirting his first year, Van Jefferson caught 91 passes in two seasons for Ole Miss. (Stan Szeto / USA TODAY Sports)

The draw for Ole Miss when the Rebels entered the recruiting picture was Hugh Freeze, Marla Jefferson said. Van Jefferson and the family liked Freeze. But his mother, with a laugh, also said choosing Ole Miss may have been the act of a rebellious 18-year-old.

"He was sick of the back and forth, the roundabout, the 'I can't go here, I can't go there,' " Marla Jefferson said. "He was torn. At that point, he was depleted. It was kind of like, 'Whatever I have to deal with with dad, I'll just deal with, this is what I'm doing.' "

When Van Jefferson signed with Ole Miss, his father made the following clear: Whatever school you choose to go to, you're making a commitment to that school … So that means you're stuck there … There's no going back and forth … There's no transferring.

Three years later, Van Jefferson wanted to do just that. As a redshirt freshman in 2016, he finished second on the Rebels with 49 catches and third with 543 receiving yards. Things all changed in 2017. Phil Longo became the offensive coordinator. Freeze resigned a few weeks before camp opened. After Van Jefferson missed time in the summer following knee surgery, A.J. Brown moved to the slot. He didn't receive as many targets. The Rebels were hit with another bowl ban after an NCAA investigation.

"I remember very distinctly when he said, 'Things are changing around here and I just don't think that this is a good fit. I don't want to be here. And I'm not going to be here,' " Marla Jefferson said. "It was definitively that sort of thing."

Unlike the recruiting period, those close to him said, Van Jefferson based his decision to leave Ole Miss and transfer to Florida on what he wanted to do first without worrying about his father's approval.

"For Van, someone who is very obedient to his dad, that would be like the worst thing, to do something dad told me not to do," Marla Jefferson said. "For him to do that, I knew then that he was coming into his own.

"Van really came into his own during that time. I would love to say that he found himself a little bit before that, but no. And I still think he is just working some stuff out to figure out who is this guy and what is it that God has for Van to do that sets him apart from everyone else?"

That question is easier to answer in regards to how Jefferson stands out on the field for Florida, the school he said he chose for a few reasons: It's in his birth state, he has family there, there was room atop the depth chart and he has knowledge of Dan Mullen's offense.

"He understands the little intricacies and he's an attention-to-detail guy," Florida receivers coach Billy Gonzales said. "That's probably one of the things that kinda separates him is he understands, he's got the playing experience, but understands that the little things — and if you talk to him he takes it really, really personal as far as being able to, 'Hey listen, he told me to do this. I've got to try to work.' "

As usual, Gonzales mentioned Shawn Jefferson when discussing Van Jefferson. But Shawn Jefferson doesn't want that public credit. Instead, in an hour-long conversation with The Athletic, he stressed that Van Jefferson seeks knowledge about the game through other avenues and he recently caught him studying clips of Antonio Brown in their basement. Shawn Jefferson mentioned that anecdote because the part of his son's story that he is most fond of nowadays is how Van Jefferson isn't a carbon copy of his father.

And that speaks to the growth of both father and son.

"My dad deserves a lot of credit," Van Jefferson said. "We talk every day. He asked me how the first day of camp went, what we are doing, what can I do to get better. We talk very often."

"My son is his own person," Shawn Jefferson said. "Van wants to know the 'why' in everything. He makes his own decisions and I love that. I absolutely love that. He is building his own name."

Part of that is on the field, where Shawn Jefferson often says his son is far more advanced at this point than he was in college at UCF. The other way is through fatherhood. Van Jefferson has a 2-year-old daughter of his own who lives in Tennessee with her mother. Jefferson often posts photos of her on Twitter. The tweet pinned to his profile is a video of her running with the caption that reads, "Superstar in the making!"

"I think Van will make a very good father because of being raised by a coach and dad really not being around a whole lot because of coaching," Marla Jefferson said. "It is a lifestyle, and it wasn't like they were whining and crying like, 'Oh, my gosh, where's dad?' I mean, they knew the gig and grew up in it. I don't think that the fist would be as hard — not fist by hitting, of course — about things.

"Shawn was raised by a very proud, strong man, and work was a big part of being a man who takes care of his family. He walked in that vein, whereas Van, being raised the way he was by Shawn, and kind of lacking some of the things that some kids of coaches go through, I think he will have a greater respect of the time and the quality time he will spend with his children. He'll be a great dad."

HEADING INTO YEAR 8, TITANS DL SEBASTIAN JOSEPH-DAY IS STILL WILLING TO DO THE DIRTY WORK

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 25, 2025

NASHVILLE – When the subject is the Titans defensive line, the name Jeffery Simmons usually comes up first.

Then, more time than not, T'Vondre Sweat's name is mentioned.

It's understandable, of course. Simmons is a three-time Pro Bowler, and Sweat was the team's second-round pick in 2024, a guy with enormous potential.

Mentioned third on the Tennessee defensive line is usually Sebastian Joseph-Day, who didn't get a lot of attention when he signed a new contract with the team back in March. Joseph-Day, in fact, has managed to keep a pretty low profile this offseason, on a team with so many new storylines.

But that's just fine with Joseph-Day.

"Listen, man, it's OK," he said with smile. "I don't mind. I'm an under-the-radar guy. I just try and do my job at a high level."

The truth of the matter is the addition of Joseph-Day was one of the better moves made by the Titans last offseason. Joseph-Day ended up playing in all 17 games, with 12 starts, and he tallied 44 tackles, 2.5 sacks, 14 quarterback pressures and three tackles for loss in his first year in Tennessee.

Joseph-Day was a leader in the locker room who also turned into a reliable player on the field.

The Titans liked what he did so much they re-signed him back in March, and this fall he expected to play alongside Simmons and Sweat once again.

"Obviously it is a blessing (to be back)," Joseph-Day said. "I am able to be somewhere I am familiar – familiar with the coach, familiar with the scheme, familiar with everything. So, I don't have to start all over. It is great, especially for my family as well. It was nice to come back."

Heading into his eight NFL season, Joseph-Day said he believes in what's around him, and he wants to do his part to make a difference.

"100 percent," Joseph-Day said. "The draft for us went amazing, all the players we added. Everyone looks really good, and I feel like the chemistry is great, kind of like night and day. You see everyone is jelling, everyone is familiar with one another. I am truly excited for this year.

"As for myself, I want to be known as a guy that is dependable, is a great teammate, someone who does his job at a high level, and someone who brings positive, great energy to the building. I want to be known for being a pro's pro. You may not know who I am, but I want to be known as a guy who does all the dirty work, is a great teammate, and gets his job done."

A sixth-round pick of the Los Angeles Rams in the 2018 NFL Draft, Joseph-Day is still going strong at age 30.

In 88 career games, including 80 starts, he's tallied 274 tackles, 13.5 sacks and 91 quarterback pressures, in addition to two forced fumbles, and a fumble recovery while playing with the Rams, Chargers, 49ers and Titans in his career.

He played alongside Aaron Donald in Los Angeles, when the Rams won Super Bowl LVI.

In Tennessee, Sebastian-Day said he felt like he played the run well in 2024, and he had his moments rushing the passer.

"I felt like when I had my opportunities to rush, I did some positive things," he said. "But that's one of the things I want to improve on. I want to be able to make every opportunity count when I rush, I want to try and affect the quarterback as much as I can whenever I have a rushing opportunity his year, I feel like that's where I can improve."

Joseph-Day said he likes the group around him.

He believes the defense can be better as a whole, with veterans leading the way.

Time will tell, of course.

"I love the guys around me," he said. "I feel like we have a really good shot to do something special as a group. We have a lot of veteran leadership, me being an eight-year guy, Dre'Mont Jones being a seventh-year guy, Arden Key, eighth-year guy, Jeff, seventh-year guy. Sweat, even though he is going into Year 2, he is still a very good player.

"We have a lot of guys who have been starters and played in meaningful games, so I feel like we have a lot of talent, veteran savvy and knowledge. And that can create something special."

LA RAMS NOSE TACKLE JOSEPH-DAY DONATES NEARLY 7,000 MEALS TO HELP FIGHT CHILDHOOD HUNGER

BY FRANK PISCANI
POCONO RECORD
MARCH 29, 2021

Brittney Smith isn't normally one to break down in front of her kids.

But in mid-February, the 35-year-old Houstonian sat atop the stairs to her house at nearly 3 a.m., sobbing. Texas' historic snowstorm had left Smith, a mother of three, without power for days. The temperature inside her house had dropped into the 30s. She knew she had to get her kids somewhere warmer.

Eliminating the possibility of escaping to a storm shelter was the fact her oldest son, Kentory, 17, had tested positive for COVID-19 just before the snowstorm. Luckily, Smith said, she was able to find a motel with heat and power that would offer her family a room where they could also safely quarantine.

Smith arrived at the motel with her three boys at 4 a.m. and waited in her car for over six hours before they could check in. When she finally could, it meant heat and electricity for the first time in days.

When he first saw the news of February's historic and devastating snowstorms in Houston, Sebastian Joseph-Day knew he had to take action. The news of Texans losing power and heat inspired the Stroudsburg native to do what he always has: help others.

Joseph-Day, the starting nose tackle for the Los Angeles Rams, reached out to then-teammate Michael Brockers, who grew up in Houston. More like brothers than teammates, the defensive linemen decided they would join forces off the field to provide support for Houstonians in need.

The Rams' community service team communicated on their behalf with the Houston Texans organization, which connected Joseph-Day and Brockers to Kids' Meals, Inc., a Houston-based charity that aims to end childhood hunger by delivering meals to children whose families are fighting the cycle of poverty and helping parents .

It was with the help of Kids' Meals that Smith made it to the motel.

Donations to Kids' Meals, Smith said, allow struggling parents to focus on finding employment and spend quality time with their children rather than stressing every second about whether there would be food on the table.

Former Los Angeles Rams teammates Sebastian Joseph-Day, No. 69, and Michael Brockers, No. 90, stand together on the sideline before their division round playoff game against the Green Bay Packers at Lambeau Field on Saturday, January 16, 2021. Although the Rams traded since Brockers to the Detroit Lions on March 17, Joseph-Day describes the veteran defensive tackle as his big brother.

"You could not put a price tag on the amount of, you know, strength that gives me," Smith said. "The worst thing I think a parent could go through, other than losing a child, is sitting there watching your children not being able to eat."

Asking for help wasn't easy. Smith worried that admitting she struggled to provide for her children could result in her losing custody of them.

Smith found the courage to seek support two years ago, after years of struggling on her own. In August 2011, Smith escaped from an abusive relationship, but it came at the cost of financial security.

The day she walked into Kids' Meals changed Smith's life. She met chief development and communications officer Cynthia Stielow, who, after hearing Smith's story, told her everything would be all right. Stielow has personally played a key role in the support Smith receives.

"Cynthia has been more to me like a mother than … a coordinator at Kids' Meals," Smith said.

With that help, Smith has been able to make major strides professionally. Currently Smith volunteers time at Kids' Meals, but Stielow and the organization have helped Smith improve her resume, build experience and skills in social work and search for jobs.

Smith is actively searching for a job that will allow her to support domestic violence victims.

On March 2, Joseph-Day and Brockers donated nearly 7,000 meals to Kids' Meals.

"Kids growing up, man, that shouldn't be their worries at all," Joseph-Day said. "Their worry shouldn't be next time they're going to eat a meal."

Relieving that worry allows kids like Smith's to focus instead on living their lives. Kentory, a senior in high school who loves video games and soccer, has been better able to pour energy into pursuing his goal of becoming an underwater welder.

Smith described seven-year-old Dorrian as inquisitive, art-loving and a perfectionist. Smith's youngest, four-year-old Jordan, loves motorcycles, four-wheelers and race cars. With food in their bellies, Dorrian and Jordan have the freedom to be little kids who can play outside and color and spend time with their mom when she's off work.

'Use your blessings to bless others:' The origin story of Joseph-Day's volunteer work

Even before he became an NFL player equipped with the resources of a professional athlete, Sebastian Joseph-Day always stood out among football players.

Sure, his talent was obvious, but the 2013 Stroudsburg High School graduate's welcoming personality, booming laugh and radiant smile set him apart from all other high schoolers. It was clear that even as a teenager Joseph-Day, also known as "Bash," was a role model to those around him.

"He was just such a great presence in the school," Stroudsburg High School principal Jeffrey Sodl said. "He just was kind of an inspiration to a lot of people."

Joseph-Day took the younger guys under his wing, creating a fun environment by always joking around but also offering help to anyone who needed it. Jim Miller, who coached Joseph-Day in football from seventh through ninth grade and all four years of high school track, added that Joseph-Day's willingness to help others also extended off the field.

Whether it be in school or outside of school, academically or athletically, Joseph-Day actively sought to help others and become involved in the community. He participated in Best Buddies, a nonprofit that seeks to create friendship and learning opportunities for those with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

While it was his kindness that others noticed, his size certainly played a role in highlighting it.

The image sticks in Sodl's mind today. Joseph-Day, the massive defensive lineman, reading a princess book to the elementary school student sitting on his lap when he volunteered at book fairs.

To help his wife, who organized the book fairs at B.F. Morey Elementary School, Sodl asked varsity athletes to volunteer and help spark young students' interest in reading. Joseph-Day was always among the first to sign up.

In addition to reading to the young students, Sodl said Joseph-Day would help students pick out books and even help out the kids who didn't have money to buy one.

"He was always a very giving person," Sodl said.

When it comes to his charity work, Joseph-Day credits his family and faith for forming his passion for volunteering. One particular piece of advice from his father has stuck with him: "Always use your blessings to bless others."

That single piece of advice has most fueled the former Mountaineer's passion for charity and volunteering, which Joseph-Day focused in on helping youth.

"They're the future of this country," Joseph-Day said. "I just want to help them succeed as much as they can."

Empowering the future through authentic philanthropy

After seeing the news of the suffering the snowstorm caused in Houston, there was never a question in Joseph-Day's mind about what he'd do next. It was simply a matter of figuring out how to support kids in Houston.

His donation with Brockers to Kids' Meals came during a massive outpouring of global support for the Houston charity. Kids' Meals CEO Beth Harp said the organization now provides about 7,400 meals every weekday, with the COVID-19 pandemic forcing many more families to need the support. The snowstorm caused Kids' Meals to lose power, spoiling its inventory of perishables.

Combined with dangerous road conditions and staff members suffering from their own losses of water and electricity, Kids' Meals was unable to make deliveries for four days. Donations from all over the world like that from Joseph-Day and Brockers completely replenished Kids' Meals' shelves.

"It was just like Heaven's gates opening, it was amazing," Harp said. "A real tribute to the American spirit."

"I hope his hometown is proud," Stielow added. "That is just an authentic philanthropist."

Part of that authenticity is his efforts to be involved by volunteering his own time.

The fourth-year Rams defender comes home whenever he can, even though the COVID-19 pandemic has made that difficult. He planned to organize his own camp over the summer but was unable to with the pandemic. Joseph-Day said he still hopes to organize something similar in the future.

Most recently in Monroe County, Joseph-Day donated an autographed game-worn jersey to Big Brothers Big Sisters NEPA for a February fundraising auction. An acquaintance of Miller's asked him to text Joseph-Day to see if he could contribute, and Joseph-Day responded with an enthusiastic "yes" almost immediately.

"I don't even think he questioned it," Miller said. "He just, you know, got a jersey to them and that was it."

Miller's right that Joseph-Day acts without hesitance when it comes to charity, but there is one question he asks.

"If I don't do it, then who else, you know?" Joseph-Day said. "That's kind of just my mindset about it."

TITANS LOVE WHAT THEY'RE SEEING FROM EDGE RUSHER ARDEN KEY FROM A LEADERSHIP STANDPOINT

BY JIM WYATT
JUNE 9, 2025
TENNESSEETITANS.COM

NASHVILLE – Arden Key is headed into his eighth NFL season, and now less than a year away from his 30th birthday.

The Titans edge rusher is preparing for his third year in Tennessee, and he's getting others ready as well.

In fact, Titans defensive coordinator Dennard Wilson recently bragged about Key, and his development as a leader.

"I love where he is at right now," Wilson said of Key. "He has taken a leadership position with the people in the group. I think he is maturing on and off the field, and you just see it each and every day.

"We talk about each one, teach one, and he is one of the first guys that is teaching the young guys how to be better, what to do, the tricks of the trade, things he's messed up throughout his career. Where Arden is at right now, I love where he is."

A third-round pick of the Oakland Raiders in the 2018 NFL Draft, Key joined the Titans in 2023 after playing with the Raiders (2018-2020), 49ers (2021), and Jaguars (2022).

In 2024, Key matched a career high with 6.5 sacks during a season when he also recorded 42 tackles, 38 quarterback pressures and 11 tackles for a loss.

Following the departure of Harold Landry, Key and others will be counted on to provide a big boost to the pass rush, while showing others the way.

Titans outside linebackers coach Ben Bloom credited Key for helping players like rookie Femi Oladejo, and others.

"Arden has been around the league long enough, and he's had production as a pass rusher. He has played with different teams, been around different players," Bloom said. "So, he has a lot of knowledge about rushing the passer in different things, using his hands, and specific moves, and he does a nice job of sharing that and showing leadership in that area with the other players."

Key knows some of the faces have changed around him on the defense.

He's been around the league long enough to know nothing stays the same.

"Harold is not here, but we have to move on," Key said. "We have to make sure the room is right. We have a lot of rookies in our room, so a lot of technique areas we have to fix, and just getting them caught up in the NFL game of football. … The new guys are energetic, especially Femi. But these guys are hungry to come in and play, and they know they have to help us. It's a great group."

Key, known for his big personality and outgoing way, said he's more than willing to help lead.

After a 3-14 season, he said there's an urgency around the team to fix the problems from a year ago.

He's ready to step up, and speak up.

"Femi, he comes up and asks questions about different pass rush techniques, because he is new at outside linebacker," Key said. "Yeah, we talk a lot. I feel like I am coaching now, but it's all good. I love it."

ARDEN KEY IS SET TO PLAY CRITICAL ROLE FOR TITANS' DEFENSE, WRITES MIKE HERNDON

BY MIKE HERNDON, COLUMNIST PAULKUHARSKY.COM AUGUST 2, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- It has been impossible not to notice Arden Key early in Titans' training camp.

When the free agent addition isn't popping up in the backfield again… and again… and again, he's – loudly – rooting on his defensive teammates and chirping at the offense. His energy level is intense and unrivaled among players on both the current Titans squad and any other version of the team that I've covered over the past six years.

Key brings an easy smile, a big personality, and a loud voice to a team that has sometimes lacked that type of presence. Defensive coordinator Shane Bowen talked on Tuesday about him being able to bring some teammates along, which can be an asset for a team over the grind of a 17-game season.

Of course, being loud and energetic means nothing if there isn't production to go along with it. Practice sacks don't count, but if they did, Key would probably already be ready to renegotiate his contract. His current running total – as estimated by Key and Austin Stanley of AtoZ Sports – is now at 14 through his first five training camp practices in Tennessee, including a seven-sack day last Friday.

Speaking of Key's contract, it's worth noting that he received the most guaranteed money ($13 million) of any of the Titans' veteran additions this offseason, including DeAndre Hopkins ($10.98 million) and the man often tasked with blocking him in camp, Andre Dillard ($10 million). That's a pretty clear indication of how Ran Carthon and Mike Vrabel viewed him as a free agent and it makes him one of a very short list of Titans players who are virtually guaranteed to be on the roster in 2024.

Key was the first name I mentioned back in February when I previewed the market for edge rushers. As I wrote then:

"The best options aren't big names, but could be good investments, starting with Arden Key, who saw his career get revived in San Francisco in 2021 and then provided good value as a rotational rusher for the Jaguars last season.

His 18.1 percent win rate was 15th among 49 edge rushers with at least 325 pass rush snaps last season, sandwiched between Montez Sweat and teammate Josh Allen. He'll be 27 next season and seems to still be ascending as a player at the NFL level after a slow start to his career."

Key's career has become quite a redemption story. After breaking out with 11 sacks as a sophomore at LSU, he was largely viewed as a future first-round pick. Injuries and off-field issues, which included him checking into rehab for marijuana addiction, dropped his draft stock in 2017, leading to him being selected by the Raiders in the third round with the 87th overall pick.

In Oakland, he was thrown directly into the fire, playing more than 50 percent of snaps in 13 of 16 games as a rookie for the league's worst defense. Key struggled to produce, notching just one sack despite heavy playing time.

He was reduced to a rotational role in 2019 and had his season ended early by a foot fracture, producing no sacks and just 12 total pressures by PFF charting. After getting healthy before the start of the 2020 season, Key remained in a depth role, contributing two sacks in over 14 games. Before the start of the 2021 NFL draft, Key was released by the Raiders.

Key's time with the Raiders was clearly a failure, but there are some advanced numbers that suggested the career rebirth that we've seen over the past two years was coming. His pass rush win rate, again as charted by PFF, went from 9.1 percent in 2018 (60th among 109 qualified edge rushers) to 11.2 percent in 2019 (38th out of 118) to 11.6 percent in 2020 (36th out of 117).

Next came an extremely smart move by Key.

He signed a one-year, $1 million contract to go play under defensive line guru Kris Kocurek in San Francisco, a man widely viewed as the best in the business at developing young pass rushers. Despite playing just 35 percent of defensive snaps on a loaded defensive line that also featured Nick Bosa, Arik Armstead, Samson Ebukam, and D.J. Jones, Key produced career highs in sacks (6.5), total pressures (39), QB hits (14), and pass rush win rate (11.8 percent) while lining up all over the 49ers' defensive front.

That breakout season earned him a pay raise, and he signed a one-year, $4 million contract in Jacksonville, where again, he found himself in a rotational role behind Josh Allen and first overall pick Travon Walker. Like in San Francisco, Jaguars defensive coordinator Mike Caldwell deployed Key all over the defensive line, giving him almost 100 snaps as an interior rusher as well as his rotational spot on the edge. Key's performance continued to improve, setting yet another career-best mark in pass rush win rate at 13.8 percent to go along with 51 total pressures and 13 QB hits.

While in Jacksonville, Key also produced the highest PFF run defense grade that he's earned in his career at 75.1, good for 17th among edge rushers, something that the Titans will want to see expanded as he transitions into more of a full-time role.

There is good reason to believe that Key's best football may be ahead of him as well. He's still just 27 years old, and by his own self-admission, has grown a lot over the course of his five-year NFL career.

While talking to the media – and teammate Azeez Al-Shaair – on Tuesday, Key claimed that he "used to be fat" during his time in San Francisco, something he's focused on during training over the last two offseasons. His performance in training camp to this point indicates that the increased focus on conditioning has paid off for the talented edge rusher.

What will be fascinating to watch as the season begins is how the Titans choose to deploy their pass rush pieces. Both Denico Autry and Key have inside-outside versatility from a rush standpoint as Key has primarily lined up as a defensive tackle on third downs for both the 49ers and Jaguars the last two seasons. That's something Autry has done frequently since signing with Tennessee in 2021. In fact, Key mentioned Autry last week as a guy who he's studied and modeled some of his game after even before joining him with the Titans.

That versatility should allow Bowen to hunt matchups throughout the season and keep defenses from knowing where any of the Titans' top pass rushers might be lining up consistently.

To get a feel for Key as a player, let's look at some snaps from last season in Jacksonville, starting with his usage as an interior pass rusher. This first clip features Key lined up in as a three-technique in the gap between the left guard and left tackle. He uses an impressive chop-swim combo to beat Dalton Risner and sack Russell Wilson.

Here is another similar rep.

Key's positioning is even wider here as he's lined up outside of Titans' right tackle Nicholas Petit-Frere, but he quickly jumps inside and uses another swim move to beat Jordan Roos and flush Josh Dobbs from the pocket. Key was a menace in both matchups against Tennessee last year.

While I think he's most effective rushing from inside, Key can also create pressure as a traditional edge rusher. Here, he beats Broncos left tackle Calvin Anderson with a nice cross-chop move, forcing a rushed throw from Wilson.

And here, he uses his hands to get inside leverage against Cowboys left tackle Tyler Smith and pushes his way all the way to a sack of Dak Prescott.

As I mentioned above, Key scored highly as a run defender last season and the tape backs it up. He only played limited snaps on early downs, but when he was out there, he was effective at setting the edge as he does here against Tyler Smith. This is textbook from Key here.

I'll finish with something that was a bit of a surprise for me when I really cut on the Key tape… his motor and instincts are outstanding. Here, he flashes high-level awareness as he notices the back leaking out for a screen during his pass rush, redirects, and breaks up the play, nearly grabbing a one-handed interception in the process.

Key's motor was non-stop on tape, constantly making plays like the one below where he chases down a screen from the backside of the play and puts a massive hit on Chargers running back Joshua Kelly.

Key's fit into this defense is excellent, especially from a pass-rush standpoint. No team likes to use games and stunts up front more than the Titans and Key should thrive in that scheme with his athleticism benefitting from playing with two of the best "pickers" in the NFL in Jeffery Simmons and Autry.

I'd describe Key's game as a mash-up of Landry and Autry, bringing some elements of Landry's athleticism and Autry's length and power to the table for a unique blend of skills.

The Titans' ability to mix and match where Simmons, Autry, Landry, and Key all line up along with the talent level of those four players give Mike Vrabel's defense one of the best fronts in the NFL heading into 2023, and early returns on Key suggest that we all may be underrating what this group could be.

HOW TITANS RETURN MAN MASON KINSEY'S LIFE CHANGED TUESDAY

PAULKUHARSKY.COM
DECEMBER 12, 2024

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Mason Kinsey was very conscious of the time on Tuesday.

"I was checking my phone all day, like "Please, please, please, please," he said. "Then I was with my fiance and I was like, 'Hey, check your phone, what time is it? And she said, "4:03" and I was like, 'We made it!'"

When a player is on an NFL roster at Tuesday 4 p.m. CT, it ensures he is paid for the week.

But this week for Kinsey, it was more important than that.

It meant he was on the 53-man roster for a third game, and three games make for a credited season. Three credited seasons with five years of service make him fully vested. Fully vested NFL veterans get a wide array of benefits.

Life-changing benefits for an undrafted rookie who came out of Berry College in 2020, was released from New England's practice squad twice and has been waived by the Titans on seven different occasions.

"It's awesome," he said. "Now I have the pension plan, which goes from being nothing to a decent amount of money per month when I turn 55 which is damn near a mortgage for a house, you know what I mean? With the health benefits and insurance, I recently just got engaged, and being able to put my future wife on insurance that will last after football, that's an expense I won't necessarily have to worry about. You're eligible for severance pay, so there is some money to be given out the first year that you're done with football.

"From my perspective, I think about getting a game check (for the weeks I've been active, currently about $55,000), just from being a p-squad guy a lot of my career. The money that you see in the long run, is 10-fold or more the amount of a game-check so it's more of a long-game goal that I've really focused on and hoped for, 'Man, I really want to get this.' To finally be able to get it, it's definitely a blessing."

Here is Kinsey with details of the puzzle that makes him vested when on the Titans' roster passed out Thursday he's listed as a second-year player:

"My rookie year was Covid, so you only needed one game to get a credited season, and I got cut. I was in New England, didn't get a game, they released me around Thanksgiving. They were out of playoff contention a week or two later and they called a bunch of guys up to get a credited season. So technically I was one game short my rookie year.

"My second year, I played in two games, so I was one short my second year.

"My third year I played in two games, so I was one game short my third year.

"Then last year I played six.

"Then this will be three this year.

"So I got my credited seasons from last year and this year. And they're going to go back and count 2022 as credited, which gives me the pension, the 401k, all the health insurance, the severance pay, all that stuff.

They give me 2022, because technically one of the rules is to become fully vested you have to have three credited seasons or five years of service, and when you have five years of service – just because the average NFL career is what, two years, two and a half years, whatever it is – once you get to that five years of service they go back and give you one of your practice squad years and count it as a credited season.

"I don't know necessarily why, I just know that's a rule and I'm glad that it is one. They will give you back your latest practice squad year.

"And they go back and they match your 401k, which is probably the biggest part, because they match it two-to-one. If you're a practice squad guy or a rookie they only match two to one up to $1,500, the max you can get is three grand. If you get a credited season, they two-to-one match it to the max.

"From 2021, 22, 23, 24 I've maxed it out every year so they've got to go back and give me all that.

"In 2022, I want to say the max you could put in there was $19,000 or 20,000 so I maxed it out then, so they owe me $40,000, they already put $3,000 in there so technically they owe me $37,000.

"My first two years I was just struggling to stay in it, but around 2022 I became aware of all of this.

"Now I need to find something else to chase. I played six games last year, hopefully I can play these last few this year. Next year shoot to play the whole year. And an explosive return, punt return touchdown. We want to go get this one for Cally (Brian Callahan) and Colt (Anderson)."

HOW – AND WHY – TITANS TACKLE JC LATHAM LOST 33 POUNDS THIS OFFSEASON WHILE SWITCHING SIDES ON THE OFFENSIVE LINE

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 29, 2025

NASHVILE – JC Latham can't say he wasn't warned.

Leading up to and during his rookie season, the Titans offensive lineman said those around him told him to watch his weight, how it could sneak up on him if he wasn't careful.

When Latham was feeling good, and playing well, he wasn't overly concerned.

But the team's first-round pick from the 2024 NFL Draft didn't play up to his own expectations as his rookie season neared an end. He was especially troubled by his performance against the Texans during the second half of the year.

So, when the season ended, he made it a point to get his weight in order and come back in much better shape for 2025, when he'll switch from left tackle to right tackle.

"I felt a lot heavier, and slower (at the end of the year), and it was embarrassing for me," said Latham, who started all 17 games at left tackle last season. "That's when I had a talk with (offensive line coach) Bill (Callahan) about the level, and the standard that we want to play at, and that I can hold myself to, that I know I can play at.

"So going into the offseason my biggest focus was to get into a lot better shape and lose a lot of weight."

The 6-foot-6 Latham, who is listed at 342 pounds on the team's current roster sheet, said he ballooned to "365 to 370 pounds" at the end of last year.

Latham said he currently weighs 337 pounds, which was below the team's goal of being in the 340-345 range, and he wants to play at 325 pounds in 2025.

"Looking at a lot of the top tackles in the league," Latham said, "the majority of them are 320-325, or anywhere less, depending on their play style. So, I know they wanted me at 340, but we talked about it, getting to that 325-range is where I need to be."

Latham said he changed his diet after meeting with nutrition coordinator Lauren Silvio, and he got a plan for an ideal weight. He began counting the calories he can consume each day, and he followed a meal plan. He's cut out fast food, and is now eating more fish, and granola bars.

He can tell a difference in the weight loss in the offseason program.

"The conditioning, the running in between," Latham said. "In plays, in drills, being able to finish a lot longer, move a lot more fluid, the foot speed. Everything (feels better) because when you have weight on you it is going to slow you down in your movement."

In addition to his weight change, Latham is also changing positions.

With the addition of veteran Dan Moore Jr., who will play left tackle, Latham is now working at right tackle, a position he played at the University of Alabama.

Latham said he's happy with the switch, and he feels comfortable.

"I'm a team player, so wherever they need me to play, I'll play anywhere," Latham said. "It's all about the team and whatever I can do to help the team win, it's what it's all about it."

FROM MOTOR CITY TO MUSIC CITY: TITANS FIRST ROUND PICK JC LATHAM ARRIVES IN NASHVILLE, AND HE'S READY TO GET TO WORK

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
APRIL 26, 2024

NASHVILLE – A lifelong dream became reality for JC Latham on Thursday night in Detroit.

A day later, the newest member of the Tennessee Titans opened up his portable gaming monitor on the plane ride to Nashville, and he played Madden – as the Titans.

"It was surreal," Latham said with a smile. "It's a surreal moment, knowing I'm a Titan now, and I'm finna be in the game. It's a great feeling."

Latham slept a few hours last night in Motor City, after being picked 7th overall in the first round of the NFL Draft.

When he woke up, he noticed the text messages and DMs had piled up even more from the night before. Former Titans lineman Taylor Lewan congratulated him, and new teammate Calvin Ridley followed him on social media. On Thursday night, Titans quarterback Will Levis and offensive lineman Peter Skoronski FaceTimed him, welcoming him to the team.

"At some point, I'm going to get back to everyone who wished me congratulations," Latham said. "But it's going to take a while. I probably got like a thousand."

Yes, after playing at the University of Alabama the last three seasons, Latham is now a Titan.

On Friday morning, he boarded a plane in Detroit with his mom, dad, stepmom, brother, girlfriend, and his best friend, and went from Motor City to Music City.

A few hours later he was entering the front door at Saint Thomas Sports Park, where he was greeted by Titans controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk, along with Kenneth Adams IV and Barclay Adams from the team's ownership group.

Titans General Manager Ran Carthon also greeted Latham with a handshake and a hug, and so did head coach Brian Callahan.

Levis was on the lobby as well, welcoming him to town.

"How was your draft night?," a smiling Levis asked Latham.

Latham said it was great, and his first day in the facility as a Titan was officially underway.

"It's been crazy busy," Latham said of the last 24 hours. "But it sums up everything I have been doing, having traveled all over the place and meeting so many people. This is kind of like a crash course on everything."

Latham, who made a pre-draft visit to the Titans earlier this month, took another tour of the facility on Friday. He saw his locker inside the team's locker room, and he walked around the indoor practice facility.

He also picked out his NFL number. Latham wore 65 at Alabama, but that number is retired with the Oilers/Titans organization. Hall of Famer Elvin Bethea wore 65 for the Oilers during his 16 seasons with the team.

"But 55 will do me just right," Latham said, smiling again. "That was my number originally."

The 6-foot-6, 342-pound Latham also grabbed lunch in the cafeteria.

"I had me some barbecue chicken," Latham said. "Had some macaroni & cheese, baked beans and some broccoli, too."

Latham, who made a total of 12 30 visits leading up to the draft, said after a whirlwind life the past few months, he's ready to play football.

Latham played in 41 games at Alabama over the past three seasons, with 27 starts. He was a first team All-SEC selection in 2023, when he started all 14 games at right tackle. Latham was also a second team Associated Press All-American in 2023.

Carthon said on Thursday night the team plans to start Latham out at left tackle in the NFL.

"Every night I am thinking about it, every time I put some music on," Latham said of playing his first game. "Every single hour of the day that goes by, it's like, 'pretty soon you are going to be (on the field).'

"I'm just so happy to be here, and ready to get going."

TITANS DRAFTED JC LATHAM TO PLAY LEFT TACKLE — BUT HE PLAYED ON RIGHT SIDE AT ALABAMA

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
APRIL 25, 2024

JC Latham played 1,753 snaps in three years at Alabama. A big, whopping zero of them were at left tackle.

Meet the Tennessee Titans' new left tackle.

"We're going to start him at left tackle," Titans general manager Ran Carthon said Thursday night, minutes after selecting Latham with the No. 7 pick in the 2024 NFL Draft.

One year after drafting All-American left tackle Peter Skoronski in the first round and bumping him inside to guard, the Titans took a first-round right tackle and move him to the left side. They're confident in his traits. His 6-foot-6, 342-pound frame. His power. His ability to anchor himself in pass protection. His athleticism that led coach Brian Callahan to say: "There's not a whole lot of guys who look like him on Earth."

Latham played left tackle in high school, as the best linemen often do. But he flipped to the right side when he got to Alabama out of courtesy to upperclassman and eventual top-10 pick Evan Neal. Neal headed to the NFL after Latham's freshman year, but Alabama passed the left tackle baton to Tyler Steen, the Vanderbilt transfer who became a third-round pick in 2023. Heading into Latham's junior year, Alabama brought in five-star recruit Kadyn Proctor, who immediately produced as a freshman All-American at left tackle, with Latham staying on the right side.

"There's a precedent. Guys have played right and played left and made the switch," Callahan said. "It's not super uncommon. It's happened before. We have a comfort level with the player and the athlete and what he's capable of. Having him go to left and starting out there, look, if he doesn't feel comfortable there and it doesn't look natural, we'll move him back to right. Like I said the other day, we need tackles, period."

JC Latham: Tennessee Titans OT history

Latham is quick to point out this won't be the first time he has switched positions. Or the second, for that matter. When he transferred to IMG Academy in Florida after his sophomore year of high school in Wisconsin, he was a defensive end. And a good one at that, ranked the No. 8 overall prospect in his class by Rivals.com. But he got to IMG, arguably the nation's premier college feeder program, and had other talented defensive ends in front of him.

So, just as he'd later do because of Neal, he saw an opportunity and changed positions.

"I was the No. 2 player in the country, No. 1 at my position, after two seasons," Latham said. "One of my closest friend's family tells me that success is when preparation meets opportunity. I hold that near and dear to my heart. I apply that as soon as I get into the building and get to work."

But can he play left tackle for the Titans? Quarterback Will Levis was bullied, bruised and battered from his blind side as a rookie, and his predecessor Ryan Tannehill dealt with the same level of punishment for the year and a half prior. The Titans allowed a higher pressure rate on pass plays than any team in the NFL in 2023.

The team is clearly investing in and building around its passing attack with Levis, receivers Calvin Ridley and DeAndre Hopkins, dual-threat running backs Tyjae Spears and Tony Pollard, high-priced center Lloyd Cushenberry III and Callahan's experience as a quarterbacks coach and offensive coordinator. Finding a left tackle was the last step, and arguably the most important one.

But as Callahan sees it, the Titans didn't explicitly need a left tackle. They needed a good tackle. And that's how they see Latham.

"He almost expected (to move to left tackle), which is the attitude you want guys to have," Callahan said. "I think he possesses the requisite traits to do it. There's not going to be too many guys that are going to turn down a chance to play on the left side, either. They all think they can do it. So I think he's fully capable of it."

INSIDE THE EDUCATION OF TITANS QB WILL LEVIS

BY ALBERT BREER
SPORTS ILLUSTRATED
MAY 28, 2024

NASHVILLE—Will Levis had been in Tennessee Titans coach Brian Callahan's office for all of five minutes, still in workout clothes after finishing a May OTA day filled with practice and meetings, and Callahan shot Levis a smirk as he fired up footage of the quarterback's first start.

I'd asked Callahan to take me through some tape to show why he was so all-in on Levis, to the point where the Titans, in Callahan's first year and in possession of the seventh pick, didn't so much as sniff around on the quarterbacks available high in the draft. The first play he showed was a first-and-10 at Tennessee's 36 in the first quarter, right after the Titans converted a fake punt, with Derrick Henry square behind Levis and tight ends to each side.

"This is one of them," Callahan says, now smiling as if to anticipate the reaction. "Some of these play-actions, some of these deeper shots. I watched this …"

"This is a stupid f---ing throw," Levis interjects with a grimace.

"I didn't have to have to say it," Callahan responds. "But, yes. That's the point."

We'll go through this particular snap in-depth in a bit. But for now, in a nutshell, what would play out on the screen was a microcosm of how Callahan's initial, and more thorough, study of his quarterback had gone. On one hand, on this play, the coach saw a 24-year-old make a throw that no more than a couple of dozen people on the planet could execute. On the other hand, as Levis intimated himself, the throw was also the wrong one to make.

So continues the education of Will Levis.

It's been a weird road here for the first pick in the second round of the 2023 NFL draft. He flashed early on at Penn State from 2018 to '20, but was stuck behind veteran Sean Clifford. His stock soared after his '21 transfer to Kentucky, with his arrival coinciding with the hire of offensive coordinator Liam Coen from the Los Angeles Rams. Things weren't as smooth in '22 after Coen's departure, which left Levis's draft projections—after five collegiate seasons—scattered all over the map. He fell out of the first round and landed with the Titans.

Now, he's here in Nashville, entrenched as the starting quarterback after nine up-and-down starts last year with a lot to prove. His first NFL coach, Mike Vrabel, is gone. He's fully aware of how things might've gone a different way with a different hire.

Instead, this latest turn just so happened to break his way.

Levis plans on taking advantage of it—and paying off the gamble by Callahan and the Titans. Reaching the comfort level the quarterback and coach have already, with brutal honesty on the agenda daily, is just the start, as Levis sees it.

June's almost here, offseason programs are in high gear and the NFL break is right around the corner. Here's what we've got in the takeaways …

• Why Patrick Mahomes is even more valuable to the Chiefs than you might think.

• A timeframe for, and the trouble with, an 18-game schedule in the NFL.

• The only player who was the subject of trade talks at the top of the draft.

And a whole lot more. But we're starting with Levis, the Titans, and the chance for everyone to take advantage of a unique opportunity.

Tennessee Titans coach Brian Callahan

Callahan's research ahead of the 2023 draft into Levis was cursory at best. He was the OC in Cincinnati, the Bengals have Joe Burrow, and there were better uses of his time than to grind tape on a player his team was never going to pick.

So while a little film work, and a little more from Bengals quarterback coach Dan Pitcher (who'd watched Levis more intently) gave Callahan some depth of knowledge going into his January interviews, he had catching up to do as he prepped for his four Zoom interviews. The one he did with Titans GM Ran Carthon revealed, to both, a level of chemistry everyone wanted to explore, which was one reason why Carthon pushed to get Callahan in-person for a second interview the Monday (Jan. 22) after the divisional playoffs.

With Tennessee up first, and Carolina and Atlanta slotted for their second interviews with him that Tuesday and Wednesday, Callahan crammed on those three. It meant studying rosters in general, quarterbacks in particular and, as part of it, Callahan watched four full games of Levis, along with cut-ups of all of his 2023 pass attempts.

"Every time I watched him, I was like, 'This guy's a pretty good player,' " Callahan says. "And I think everybody was a little shocked that he slipped the way he did [in 2023]."

Callahan communicated to Carthon, president of football operations Chad Brinker, and the rest of the Titans crew what he saw, which was captured succinctly on that Week 8 snap against Atlanta—Levis had what you can't coach, and could be coached up on what he wasn't bringing to the table yet.

Callahan told the Titans, in fact, that a lot of what he saw in Levis's 2023 rookie tape matched the Kentucky tape from '21, when the quarterback broke through working with Coen.

"You see he's athletic, he's strong, he's tough," Callahan says. "He'll stand in the pocket and he's got a great release. It's quick. And he's got a really legitimate arm. And he will play a little bit in that kind of swashbuckling style. He was trying to earn guys' respect. He was trying to show people he could play. That's part of earning your way as a young quarterback. He did some things that I think that his teammates rallied around, which was fun to watch."

Carthon's instinct on Callahan was confirmed quickly, and the Titans never let him leave Nashville—hiring him that Monday before he could even get on the plane to Charlotte. In turn, with the perception that Tennessee—with Ryan Tannehill a free agent—had uncertainty at quarterback, Callahan acted quickly. His first call after being hired was to two-time All-Pro and captain Jeffery Simmons, and his second call was to Levis.

He told the quarterback he wasn't going in with any preconceived notions, which was music to Levis's ears after his personality had been dissected nonstop before the draft. He told Levis he just wanted him to be himself.

"I remember being very at ease," Levis says. "He instilled a lot of confidence in me as a player and did his best to explain to me what he saw on tape with me and that he was excited to coach me and that he knew that I could be a great player in this league. To hear that from a dude who's going to be walking in, leading the charge for hopefully a long time from here on out, was cool."

And as Carthon, Brinker, Callahan and the coaches and scouts dove into their draft prep, it only reinforced what the coach said to the GM in their interview about Levis.

"I'd told Ran the truth," Callahan says. "I said he has real talent, real ability and I think he's got a chance to be a very good starting quarterback in the NFL. He's got enough tools to where his ceiling is high. If he's all the things mentally you need to be to play quarterback, his physical talent, it's a high ceiling. He's got a chance to be (a) really, really good, top-end starting quarterback. And I believe that. …

"[The scouts] still do their due diligence and put grades on guys and all that. I had the conversation with Ran. Part of it was like, If Will's coming out in this draft class, I don't know that I feel like anybody is better than him at this point."

It may sound like a strong statement to make, given the type of class that was coming.

That said, it was backed with actions. The Titans didn't have any quarterbacks to Nashville for visits prior to the draft, and they didn't have big contingents at their pro days, either. The assumption had been, from the start, that Tennessee would take a tackle. That's exactly what it did, selecting Alabama's JC Latham with the seventh pick.

Meanwhile, the Titans spent the money they were saving in having a cheaper quarterback to support Levis, signing top free agents Calvin Ridley, Tony Pollard and Lloyd Cushenberry, which helped fortify the foundation of younger talent they'd be bringing along.

So, the idea goes, one way or the other, they'll know if they're right on Levis faster than they might have otherwise.

Now, we can go back to that first-quarter play against the Falcons, and a few more from that game that explain the gamble, with Callahan holding the clicker and Levis following along.

The two paint a vivid picture of where they're going.

• On that first play, Levis carries out play-action to Henry to his right, and drops straight back in the pocket. As he sets up, Atlanta clearly isn't fooled. Nose tackle LaCale London's quickly in Levis's face, as he looked to his left. London gets to Levis, knocks him off-balance, and Levis somehow wills the ball deep downfield and to his right, just outside corner Dee Alford and past safety Richie Grant. It fell incomplete, but hit Treylon Burks on the hands.

Meanwhile, tight end Chigoziem Okonkwo was wide open in the opposite flat, releasing late into his route, as the play intended, to give Levis an outlet.

"This was not an advisable throw, nor was it an advisable position to be in," Callahan says. "It was like, Holy s--t, this is not smart. I look at it as I go. God, if Will can just learn that on a first-and-10, let's just throw the ball right there in the flat. That's Chigs in the flat. Chigs in the flat is going to catch this ball, and he's going to run for 12 yards and it's going to be first-and-10 again at the 50-yard line. Instead, Will's trusting his arm and his ability."

"That's a clear out," Levis adds. "We're trying to take the safety out of it, throw the dagger behind it. Dagger slips. I can sort of see out of the corner of my eye that the clear wins. I'm trying to pull him to the sideline. Just come down and take the check down."

"The other part of this, it's a f---ing unbelievable throw," Callahan continues. "You watch it from the end zone, there's a guy in his face, it's horrendous eyes, horrendous progression, guy bearing down on him. He can't step into the throw. This guy's 40 yards down the field, and he just sort of flicks it while he's getting hit and drops the ball right in his hands. It's an incredibly accurate throw for what was going on. I'm watching this, I'm like, Goddamn."

Gathering himself, Callahan then summarizes: "First of all, decision-making can be coached. This right here, you don't coach that. Will's mom and dad gave that to him."

• The next play was a third-and-1 from the Titans 48, with Tennessee down 3–0 at the end of the first quarter. From under center in an I-formation with two tight ends, Levis carries out play-action to his right to Henry, then is patient in letting Henry leak out to the flat.

With Atlanta linebacker Nate Landman blitzing, Levis calmly stands his ground, and feathers a ball over Arnold Ebiketie's head to Henry, who turns it upfield for 5 yards and a first down.

"I was watching this game and I was like, Man, this reminds me of the junior year tape that I watched from Kentucky," Callahan says. "This doesn't seem like much, but this is a third-and-1, and this is thrown to a back that generally isn't a great catcher of the football. Just knowing that, he puts it in an accurate spot and puts a little touch on it so he can handle the ball. Small, minor thing, but just shows some awareness."

"This is one of my favorite plays of this game, too, just for that reason," Levis adds. "This wasn't the premier [option on the play]. We're trying to get to the shallow backside, have him get lost and come back. We always say if we have the back, take it. He's there. There's [a linebacker] in my face, not a throw that you necessarily practice. You got to get it up and down, put it in his hands, just let him get the first."

Callahan then says, "What I kept reminding myself of when I'm watching the game, I'm like, This is this kid's first start. He played the game like someone who's played the game. It didn't look, at any moment, like the game looked too big or too fast. I didn't feel like I was watching a rookie."

Levis, by the way, hit DeAndre Hopkins for a 47-yard touchdown on the next play.

• From there, Callahan pulls up a third-and-3 with 10:29 left in the first half. Levis identified the coverage, saw a look, and took a shot—standing in with Calais Campbell closing on him, and delivering a perfect pass down the right sideline that hit Treylon Burks on the hands. It was incomplete but subtly showed things the earlier shot did, too.

In watching it, Levis immediately mentions how off-rhythm he is during the play. The key, though, and the reason Callahan is showing it is because it almost didn't matter.

"Bad timing, bad footwork, but I like the decision," Callahan says. "I had a feeling that there was probably some alert here and there was a go route that was versus the press. Great, he's got it, take it. The timing was wrong. The footwork was bad. This is the same idea as the first play. These are all things that are incredibly easy to fix and incredibly easy to impart the knowledge where, OK, good, you want to take the go route."

Except that, as Callahan continues, "If you knew it was zone coverage and you just wanted to take a completion on third-and-3, that is situational awareness."

And, indeed, slot receiver Kyle Philips was open in the flat, running a pivot route out of a bunch look for an easy first down.

"Early in the game, we got pressed and I didn't throw it," Levis says. "Coach said next time we get any press with Treylon, let's hit the go. If it's first or second down, take it. Or third-and-long, yeah, take it. But that was in my head. It's third-and-3. I see press, I'm on it, but I know the situation. I know that pivot's going to get it."

• After that, Callahan puts up a first-and-10 at the two-minute warning that looks like, well, not much. Levis drops back off play-action, subtly shuffles to avoid the rush, and puts the ball on Okonkwo a little low. Okonkwo drops it, but still there's a lot for a coach to like.

"Watch his pocket movement, a little slide away from the pressure, trying to buy himself an extra second, off-platform throw but still accurate, puts the ball in a good spot, obviously it's a drop," Callahan says. "That's NFL quarterbacking. That's what it looks like. That's what your pocket looks like. That's what the throws feel like. It was just the subtleness of how that played out, you're like, This doesn't feel like he's making his first start."

"This is the play all day," Levis says. "We're running play-action off split zone. Tight end's going to take the Will [linebacker] here. He's thinking he's blocking it. He's coming up the pipe. We're clearing out the safety and the corner on the front side. Those two receivers, it's really Chig down to the running back. … I could lead him to the sideline more. The movement probably changes the location."

"If you're nitpicking," Callahan adds, "you'd love to see him hit him in stride on the move so he doesn't have to stop and turn."

• Callahan wrapped up the film session with the final two big-play touchdowns of Levis's four-touchdown afternoon. The first one was good for 61 yards to Hopkins and the second for 33 yards to Nick Westbrook-Ikhine.

On the Hopkins score, Callahan says, "He puts the ball … it's in a great spot. It's a big touchdown. I don't know how you couldn't watch this and not be like, Hell, yeah, I want to coach this guy."

"Earlier in the game, we were seeing these safeties getting a little [aggressive] with the depth they were playing at, really when they ran their quarters coverage," Levis adds. "This is his cloud, and he's still very aggressive inside. Seeing that inbreaker (route), he's playing that, and we end up, we would call it pump, so we'd pump to the inbreaker. He's just showing like he's coming in, safety stutters his feet for a second, throw it behind him."

Touchdown, Titans.

And on the second snap, playing the tape back, Levis rolled right, had two defenders coming free at him, and threw the ball back to the left corner of the end zone for the score.

"They're running the corner post here, and you get Jesse Bates in the post who's a smart player but a little over aggressive and you get the win," Callahan says. "To throw this ball with two guys bearing down and just putting it in an unbelievable spot, I didn't need to watch a whole lot more after I watched this game."

Then, there was the other part of the assessment on Levis coming out—his personality.

Some of it Levis understands, and some of it he sees as ridiculous. And headlining the latter category is all of the stuff you've seen on social media. That he eats bananas with the peel on. How he puts mayo in his coffee. Which, he gets, is largely his own doing.

Carthon told Callahan that he'd addressed the stunts already with the quarterback. The GM's stance to his 2023 second-round pick was that if what everyone saw on video really is Levis, then roll with it. But if any of it was an act, or a swing at boosting engagement on Instagram or TikTok or whatever else, he should knock it off.

Callahan called the hysteria over it "really bizarre" and Levis agrees.

"It was mostly people that don't know me," he says. "Any team or any coach that got a chance to sit down with me and understand who I am as a person realized that, sure, that's definitely part of my personality, but it's nothing that you should be worried about. I don't regret it at all. I still think it's funny. It's still something that I get a laugh at. That's the reason why I did it. I don't care how people responded to it.

"It's something that I enjoyed and got a little laugh out of. And, hopefully, that's the case [for other people]. Then I'm happy about it. It's all good, and it's something that's going to be tied to me forever. A little Hellman's marketing deal came out of it, too."

The other part is, well, actually important to Levis's professional success.

The same way teams raised it in the pre-draft process, Callahan and Carthon discussed it as they got to know each other—Levis can come off as, and really can be, wound pretty tight. And the coach was explaining it this Thursday afternoon as Levis was walking into the room. Callahan didn't stop, or pause, as the quarterback sat down. "Come on in, Will," he says before continuing. None of it was anything that they hadn't already talked through.

"It doesn't have to be head down all the time," he says as Levis sits down. "You can be relaxed and you can enjoy the process and you can enjoy practice and you're gonna enjoy communication back and forth. I think those things are where you start."

"It's been tough," Levis says. "I'm just hard on myself. That's [the] individual I am. I mean, I have very high standards. And if I'm not perfect, it's easy for me to get down on myself sometimes. But with a new offense, for the first time, taking the reins and having the ability to be the guy, I definitely felt that at first."

On the flip side was the intent of not just fishing around the quarterbacks in the draft, but giving Levis the job from the start—the hope being that he, Callahan, OC Nick Holz and quarterbacks coach Bo Hardegree could accelerate the process of establishing trust.

That was key for a guy who hasn't had the same OC in consecutive years since he was a teenager and, as such, is more at risk of getting confused during the learning process.

"Right now, it's our first time as a team going through it all," Levis says. "And I'm able to live in that 100-200 world, but he's starting to mix in, sprinkle in the different layers and further the things that we could think about doing."

Callahan then explained how, from his vantage point, it's part of not just building an offense, but tailoring it to Levis.

The first stage is showing players everything that's available to them. From there, it's going over things a second time during OTAs, and then a third time in training camp to figure out what's best for the group, and the quarterback. That way, when the season starts, gameplans seem like light lifting.

And that'd be much more difficult to pull off if Levis was in some faux competition for the job. As Callahan saw it coming in, that's one big reason why establishing the guy he saw as clearly the best option at the most important position made sense.

Which, again, worked to unwind any tension Levis had, and strengthen their trust.

"I think you do a disservice to guys, particularly if you're drafting them, and you make them compete for a job. Guys need to play," Callahan says. "They need to be put in a position where they are the quarterback. There's something about that that matters to a team and a locker room. If you're going to do it, do it. It all sounds good—He should sit. That's not the reality. That's not the financial reality of the NFL, either. You're trying to take advantage of a young quarterback on a rookie contract, that's the other part of it.

"There's something about being the quarterback and knowing … when you walk into the building and walk onto the field, you know that you're the quarterback and you know that everyone around you knows that you're the quarterback. It allows you some freedom. Especially when you're a young player, there's no growth unless you make mistakes.

"The problem is, if you're competing for a job, you're not going to be willing to make the mistakes you need to make in order to improve at a rapid rate. You're more worried about the perception of the mistake than actually learning from the mistake. I think that does guys a disservice, and I think it stunts growth when you have to be constantly worried about it. If I know I can make this throw, but it's going to be kind of hairy, and I probably shouldn't, but I'm going to do it anyway. Maybe it takes a hell of a throw, but I can coach off that."

"It's the first time in my career where I've felt comfortable going to a coach and suggesting something, because I feel like I'm comfortable enough with the offense to where I know the machinations of it."

- Will Levis

It'd be silly, of course, to say in May that this will all turn out like things did for Callahan, Zac Taylor and Pitcher in Cincinnati with Burrow. Levis is far from that, which, of course, is something he'd readily admit.

But, obviously, all of these guys think that by doing things this way, like Callahan did with Burrow, Levis is getting his best chance to get there. And that's something Levis feels every day, even in May.

"It's the first time in my career where I've felt comfortable going to a coach and suggesting something, because I feel like I'm comfortable enough with the offense to where I know the machinations of it," Levis says. "That's been cool for me, to be able to speak my mind. And even if they say no, I know at least I tried and we talked about it."

That effectively means that Callahan's intent, to accelerate Levis's development by getting him to trust his coaches and make and learn from mistakes, is being carried out.

For now, it's created a situation where both Levis and Callahan answer quickly when I ask whether they think that the NFL missed on the ex-Kentucky star by letting him fall all the way to the 33rd slot in the 2023 draft.

"Yeah," Levis says, smiling.

"I do, too," Callahan says.

Even better, now Levis has the chance to reward the people around him for having that faith in him—both those who were with him last year, and those that are here now.

"It definitely leaves a little bit of a chip on my shoulder and makes me want to go out there and work and keep showing people that teams might have made a mistake by not taking me," Levis said. "Hopefully I'm that guy that they talk about that did slip, and I can be that example for other kids that are in that same position in the green room like me."

"There's a part of that, I feel it from Will," Callahan adds. "I don't feel this, I'm going to show the world that they were all wrong. I don't feel that. What I more feel, and this is just my opinion of how I see his demeanor, it's more about I'm trying to prove these people right."

"I'm trying to prove this organization right," Levis says.

And the Titans are giving him every opportunity now to do just that.

HOW WILL LEVIS EARNED LIFETIME SUPPLY OF HELLMANN'S, AND HOW THE 'MAYO MOCHA' RECIPE WAS BORN

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
NOVEMBER 22, 2023

The leaves are changing. There's a chill in the air. Every day gets dark a little earlier. And there's a creamy dollop of Hellmann's mayonnaise plopped in your coffee mug.

You know, football weather.

Long before rookie Will Levis was the Tennessee Titans' quarterback of the future, he was the man who drank coffee with mayonnaise in it. Now he has the pleasure of being both. Back in August, Levis secured a lifetime endorsement deal with Hellmann's, America's biggest mayo brand, to be the condiment's athletic spokesperson. Hellmann's announced the partnership with a faux press conference, in which Levis proudly advocated on behalf of the Mayo Mocha, sipped his signature drink and even ate a mayo-topped muffin for good measure.

"It’s hard to articulate, but people love talking about him," said Chris Symmes, director of marketing for Hellmann's. "He has this charisma that I don’t think you see too often with athletes. He’s clearly very comfortable in front of a camera. He likes to have fun. He’s clearly a very gifted athlete. And people love talking about him. He does stuff that makes people want to talk about him."

The story behind Will Levis' lifetime mayonnaise endorsement

Levis had been on Hellmann's radar as a potential spokesperson since his culinary quirk started going viral on social media when he was still in college at Kentucky. In addition to his coffee experiment, he also gained notoriety for eating bananas, peel and all. The stunts were what they were: stunts. He's since said he doesn't actually drink coffee with mayonnaise on the regular (he's a one-cream, one-sugar guy), but he knows gimmicks attract attention and get people talking.

Brands salivate at the value of charismatic athletes who are game to get silly. Hellmann's sent Levis a care package in February complete with a Letterman's jacket and bucket hat to rep the brand as well as a panini maker and recipes. Still, in the process of preparing for the NFL draft with a cadre of aspiring quarterbacks, Levis said the care package provided him, Max Duggan, Clayton Tune and Dorian Thompson-Robinson roughly a week's worth of meals.

Levis took to TikTok to thank Hellmann's for the haul. Symmes' courtship only intensified from there, culminating in the press conference ad in August.

"I think there’s always some doubts like ‘mayonnaise and coffee, it’s a little peculiar,’" Symmes said. "But that wasn’t really the intent. The key part of this was how Hellmann’s can be used as a versatile ingredient."

Titans quarterback Will Levis squirts mayo onto a muffin in an advertisement for Hellmann's, the company he's a spokesman for.

Versatile for Will Levis, and for Nashville

Ahead of Levis' NFL debut in October, Hellmann's partnered with Humphrey's Street, a nonprofit South Nashville coffee shop with two locations, to make the Mayo Mocha available to curious Titans fans with adventurous palates. Humphrey's Street's baristas competed to perfect the recipe, going through several rounds of drink creation and taste testing, before landing on a concoction that's been described as having a brownie batter or chocolate ganache taste.

The drink was only supposed to be available from Oct. 25-31, but thanks to Levis' four-touchdown debut; positive press for Humphrey's Street's business model of providing job training for teenagers in national outlets such as Axios and Buzzfeed; and customers actually liking the product, the Mayo Mocha has twice returned to menus.

"I personally wish we had done a blind taste test with customers so they didn’t know," said Camille Cannada, senior director of development for Harvest Hands CDC, the nonprofit arm of Humphrey's Street. "Because I don’t think they would’ve known."

For enterprising roasters, Hellmann's recipe for an at-home Mayo Mocha is simple to replicate:

Pour 1 ¼ cups of hot milk into a bowl and whisk vigorously for 1-2 minutes until frothy.

Pour two hot espresso shots into another bowl. Whisk in one tablespoon of Hellmann's REAL mayonnaise and one tablespoon of chocolate or mocha flavored syrup until smooth and well-blended.

Pour into a large coffee mug and top with frothed milk. If desired, add a sprinkle of cinnamon.

'It Must Be The Mayo'

As part of his sponsorship deal, Levis gets a "lifetime supply" of Hellmann's. The average consumer, Hellmann's says, goes through three 30-ounce jars per year. Since Levis' passion for the product outpaces the average consumer, Hellmann's is starting him off with six jars per year and he can request more whenever he's running low.

Levis says he's already on his second shipment.

After Levis threw for 238 yards and four touchdowns in his NFL debut, Titans fans online started rallying together with the cry "it must be the mayo." Symmes jokes that he didn't coin the phrase but he supports the idea.

Hellmann's can't comment on whether there are more projects planned with Levis or how the partnership has helped sales or boosted their profile. But Symmes says the goal is to get people to use more mayonnaise, and targeting tailgaters and Super Bowl party hosts is part of the plan.

"As a marketer, it’s fantastic to have an athlete/celebrity that is game to do fun stuff," Symmes said. "I think that was evident before he even joined the NFL or the Titans. So I think it gives us, as we think about what the future holds, I think it gives us a lot of freedom to think about ways to partner with him in the future. It’s fun to have different ideas floating around given his willingness to not take himself too seriously and also just have a good time with things."

TITANS ASSISTANT LORI LOCUST BREAKING DOWN DOORS FOR FEMALE COACHES IN THE NFL

BY TASHAN REED
THE ATHLETIC
OCTOBER 23, 2024

Editor's note: This article is part of The Changemakers series, focusing on the behind-the-scenes executives and people fueling the future growth of their sports.

All Joe Headen could hear was yelling. The Susquehanna Township (Pa.) High School football coach was walking out of a practice in 2010 when the sound of two adults going at it lured him back to the field. Once there, Headen found veteran defensive line coach Rick Pierce and first-year assistant defensive line coach Lori Locust in each other's faces in a heated argument.

Pierce and Locust had a strong relationship, but a disagreement sparked because Locust felt he was taking it too easy on a star defensive lineman. Although Pierce vehemently disagreed, Locust didn't back down. Headen let it play out without interrupting.

"Everybody's like, 'Coach, aren't you going to do something?' And I was like, 'Nah, she's got to earn her stripes,'" Headen said. "And, honestly, that was the moment I knew she was going to be all right."

Locust grew up nearby as a Pittsburgh Steelers fan and pretended to be Hall of Fame linebacker Jack Lambert in backyard pickup games as a child. But her connection to organized football was limited to fandom until the National Women's Football Association, a professional women's tackle football league, brought the Harrisburg Angels to her hometown in 2006. She tried out and made the team.

"I was like, 'Wow, I get a chance to play football,'" Locust said. "And that translated a love of the game to a different love, right?"

In her fourth season, Locust suffered a torn ACL that ended her playing career. She grew up with Headen, and their sons played youth football together. Shortly after while they were sitting together at one of their practices, Locust told Headen of her desire to stay connected to the game. That's when he offered her the opportunity to transition to coaching.

"At that time, there were no female coaches in our area," Headen said. "And it was one of those things where she just fit right in. She knew what she was doing. She knew what she was talking about. The respect factor was there. It wasn't, 'Oh, that's Coach Locust or Coach Lo, my female coach.' It was just straight Coach Lo.

"I didn't realize how intense she was and how far she wanted to take it until we got to about the third year," Headen continued. "She really got bitten by the bug, and that's when she just started putting her nose to the ground and grinding like crazy."

That tenaciousness drove Locust to pursue any coaching opportunity she could find. Over the next decade, she held nine different coaching positions — including coaching at the high school, college and men's and women's professional levels.

In 2019, it culminated in Locust becoming the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' assistant defensive line coach, the first woman position coach in NFL history. The number of women coaching full-time in the NFL has now grown to 15, the most ever.

Locust is a changemaker in the NFL, but while she's part of the push for there to be more woman coaches, she has made it clear that she and her colleagues aren't looking for any handouts.

"You have to be the right fit," the 60-year-old Locust, now a defensive quality control coach for the Tennessee Titans, said. "I've never been one to be like, 'Because I'm in, all women should be in.' You still have to earn it."

The track Locust took to get to where she is — and put herself on course for what she's still hoping to achieve — was filled with obstacles, ranging from unemployment to sleeping in her car to selling off most of her belongings. Navigating that has required unwavering perseverance.

"I never put parameters on how far I could go," Locust said, "and I still don't."

Locust's first role coaching men came in 2013 when she was hired as the tight ends coach for the Central Penn Piranha, a now-defunct semipro team. When team owner Ron Kerr initially brought her on, he received pushback from the staff and players alike.

"Back then, you didn't hear of it," Kerr, now the defensive line coach at Shippensburg University, said. "And they're like, 'Are you kidding me? You're going to bring a female to our team?'"

Locust shined through her attention to detail, tough demeanor and ability to give constructive criticism. Kerr coached the offensive line, so he often had a firsthand view of her work with the tight ends.

There were times during practice when she "dug into their rear ends" over mistakes. But there were also moments during games where she would take time on the sideline to calmly explain how to adjust hand placement while blocking. The players appreciated the balanced coaching style. They listened to her and respected her.

"She was better than some of our male coaches," Kerr said. "I was like, 'She's not going to quit until she makes it.'"

Three years later, Locust was hired as the defensive line coach of the Central Penn Capitals of the American Indoor Football league. After she helped the Capitals knock the Lehigh Valley Steelhawks out of the playoffs, the Steelhawks hired her in 2017 as their defensive line/linebackers coach and co-special teams coordinator.

Locust often roamed between the offensive, defensive and special teams meetings to expand her football knowledge. Growth wasn't something she viewed as optional.

"She had this thirst to learn," former Steelhawks executive vice president/general manager Mike Clarke said. "She just always wanted more. … Nobody worked harder than Lori."

Washington's Jennifer King, Bucs' Lori Locust making history

Although her coaching roles were paid, Locust's primary source of income was working as an insurance salesperson. Her combined salaries frequently weren't enough to cover the cost of living, especially as she raised her two sons, not to mention traveling to attend football clinics, conventions and college football all-star games to network and further her career.

One of her most frequent stops was Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Va., a five-hour drive from Harrisburg. The school's defensive line coach, Jeff Comissiong, had become a mentor and would always invite her to spring practice. The drive was doable, but she didn't have money for a hotel room. Instead of telling Comissiong, she just slept in her car.

"She was just on a different level of wanting to become the best coach (she) could be," Headen said.

To Locust, it was worth it.

"I was trying to learn. I was trying to get better," she said. "And it just kept building."

Locust received validation in 2017 when she was invited to the inaugural NFL Women's Forum focused on increasing the number of women in football operations positions. The connections she made there helped earn her a spot in the NFL's Bill Walsh Diversity Coaching Fellowship.

She was on another trip, this time to Philadelphia to coach in the Globe Bowl, an annual international all-star game featuring both college players and professional free agents, when she got a call from the Baltimore Ravens offering her a position as a defensive line coaching intern. The other coaches in attendance swarmed her in congratulations.

"To do all those things — be a mother, be a coach and then take care of (the) home and then pursue your dreams — it's the same journey that most of our players pursue, and we just wanted to be a part of helping her," said Mike Quartey, owner of East Preps LLC, which presented the Globe Bowl. "It was that breakthrough that gave her the opportunity, and she ran with it."

To keep doing so, however, would take more sacrifice.

Two weeks before her Ravens internship began, the insurance company Locust worked for told her they wouldn't accommodate her temporary relocation to Baltimore. She was essentially forced to choose between making ends meet and chasing her dream.

In addition to her own living expenses, she was helping to pay for each of her sons' tuition costs and sending them spending money. She knew the internship alone wouldn't be enough to keep that going. But even though it meant getting fired from her insurance job, she took a chance on football.

"It was extremely difficult," Locust said. "I went to Baltimore with no job and no benefits and no income other than the internship."

The experience only strengthened Locust's desire to coach, but the Ravens didn't hire her to a full-time job afterward. After training camp ended that August, she returned to Pennsylvania with no plan for what would come next.

Locust spent the next few months working odd jobs. She worked at the Chewy pet food warehouse, walked dogs and picked up a marketing job for a fire restoration company. She moved out of her apartment and tried selling off her furniture and other belongings.

"Anything that I had of value I just got rid of because bills don't stop," Locust said. "I didn't want to not be able to provide for my kids. … It was terrifying to be without medical benefits and to feel like I might not be able to help my kids if they needed it."

In December 2018, Locust received a call from the Birmingham Iron of the Alliance of American Football with an offer to become their assistant defensive line coach. She readily accepted, but the league went bankrupt and folded just two months into the position.

Before the AAF went under, there were rumors the league's future was in jeopardy. Concerned, Locust reached out to then-San Francisco 49ers offensive assistant Katie Sowers to inquire about potential opportunities. Sowers had attended the NFL Women's Forum that year and heard that then-Buccaneers head coach Bruce Arians had committed to hiring a woman for a full-time role on his coaching staff.

Sowers gave Arians' email to Locust, who immediately began constructing an introduction. Locust reminded Arians that her ex-husband, Andrew Locust, had played college football at Temple during Arians' tenure as head coach there (1983 to 1988). She was also close with several members of Arians' coaching staff who worked with him at Temple and had reunited with him in Tampa. She hoped Arians would remember her.

Unbeknownst to Locust, Iron GM Joe Pendry had recently spoken to Arians about her at a coaching clinic. The two men had a longstanding relationship, and Arians trusted Pendry's recommendation. Within an hour of receiving Locust's email, he told her he'd get back to her.

"And then a couple of days later, he called me on the phone," Locust said. "We talked for like 10 minutes and he offered me (a job). I left and like, four or five days later, the (AAF) folded."

Locust was hired as the Bucs' assistant defensive line coach in 2019. In 2021, Locust and assistant strength and conditioning coach Maral Javadifar became the first woman coaches to win a Super Bowl when the Bucs beat the Kansas City Chiefs in Super Bowl LV. It was a dramatic reversal of fortunes that Locust described as "divine intervention."

"I benefited from relationships," Locust said. "I was around great male mentors that taught me like they would teach any other coach and treated me like they would treat any other coach. So it set the tone for me with the other coaches on staff and it set the tone with the players."

The Buccaneers' unsung Super Bowl LV MVPs

Following the 2022 season, the Buccaneers fired Locust.

"A lot of guys called me afterward and said, 'Now you're a real coach.'" Locust joked. "You're not a real coach until you get fired and then hired back."

The getting hired back piece of the equation worried Locust. She had a year left on her contract when she was let go, so she would still get paid, but she didn't want to stay inactive for a full season. She and her agent contacted multiple NFL coaches in search of opportunities.

Three days before Locust planned to make the 8.5-hour drive from Tampa to Mobile, Ala., for the Senior Bowl, she got a call back from then-Tennessee Titans head coach Mike Vrabel. Locust interviewed with Vrabel twice and, by the end of the week, he offered her a job as a defensive quality control coach. Vrabel was fired this offseason, but Locust was retained and feels she's working her way back toward becoming a position coach again.

Locust knows it remains difficult for women in this line of work. She's confident the demand for woman coaches is there, but the supply ebbs and flows.

"I feel like the pool of candidates right now is slim," Locust said. "We're kind of building it backward."

Beyond serving as an example for other women to follow, Locust has taken other steps to help improve the pipeline. She has taken on a larger role in the NFL Women's Forum and helps recruit woman coaches from the high school, college and professional ranks.

The forum is informative and is a good place to make connections, but Locust thinks there needs to be more robust opportunities for women to sharpen their skill sets. That led her to help the Tropical Bowl, a postseason all-star game for FBS college seniors, launch its Lori Locust Women's Coaching Internship Award for rising woman coaches in 2021. The interns work on the coaching staff at the Tropical Bowl and interact with NFL coaches and executives in attendance. For Locust, it's a means of helping to develop the next generation of woman coaches.

"They're credentialed, have been around, know their stuff and they're good," Quartey said. "And, in the end, as long as the women are judged on those merits — that they're good or have the potential to be good but maybe just need an opportunity — I think that's all we need, and she's a big part of that.

"That's why I say she's a trailblazer. She's the one knocking down a lot of those doors for the ladies."

TENNESSEE TITANS' LORI LOCUST WORKS TO BE A FOOTBALL COACH, NOT A FEMALE FOOTBALL COACH

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
JUNE 19, 2024

Football is a toothless snarl. Football is a menacing glare through a full-cage facemask. It's grass stains and blood and broken bones and the chronically deranged mentality players have to possess to get back up and keep snarling in the face of all those grass stains and blood and broken bones.

To a young Lori Locust, football was Hall of Fame Pittsburgh Steelers linebacker Jack Lambert.

"There was just this intensity that he had when he played the game," Locust, the Tennessee Titans' first-year defensive quality control assistant and first female coach in franchise history, tells The Tennessean. "The whole toothless thing. To me, he was the epitome of '70s, hard-nosed, real football. It was brutal."

She pretended to be Lambert when she'd scrap her way through backyard pickup games growing up in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. That meant playing mean. Playing intense. Hitting people and enjoying it.

Decades later, as a 60-year-old mother of two, Locust still has that un-exorcised Lambertian spirit in her. That spirit earned her four knee surgeries, a bone graft from her hip, a plate and a cervical fusion in her neck and one shoulder ripped out of place in four seasons of semi-professional women's football. And even that wasn't enough to expel the football from her.

Football is perseverance. Football is action. It's scars and limps and sacrifices and living every moment so that the scars and limps and sacrifices weren't in vain.

Lori Locust's story isn't that of a woman in a male-dominated field.

It's a football story.

Lori Locust's journey to NFL

Playing semi-professional women's football in the mid-2000s made you Jack Lambert about as much as singing "The Night The Lights Went Out In Georgia" at a karaoke dive makes you Reba McEntire. But Locust and her teammates on the Central PA Vipers didn't play in search of glory.

Locust found out about the team from a newspaper ad. Mary Pratt-Lauchle, the Vipers' center and Locust's close friend, tried out after hearing a radio commercial. Both were professionals and full-time mothers looking for connection, looking for an outlet. So they made time for passion.

Passion, unfortunately, didn't pay. It actually cost roughly $1,500 to be on the team. Players also paid their way to road games, carpooling up to 10 hours in minivans and staying eight to a hotel room. They rarely had locker rooms, often changing in cars or parking lots.

Field conditions were spotty. Some fields were overgrown, others were littered with trash. Pratt-Lauchle remembers an afternoon in Connecticut where temperatures were so hot and playing surfaces so questionable that the bottom of a teammate's cleat melted midgame. Squads in bigger cities like Philadelphia and Boston had relatively good coaching, but smaller markets like Harrisburg had to make do with whoever was around.

So Locust, from her defensive end spot, emerged as something of a player-coach. Pratt-Lauchle remembers players joking about Locust's deep, guttural "Lori coach voice." One of Locust's innovations was devising a numbered system with the defensive tackles and linebackers calling out stunts and blitzes.

Locust remembers in slow-motion her signature play, a blindside sack against Cleveland. She remembers the crunch of the quarterback's ribs. But memory is all she has. The game was a rare one where the Vipers had someone filming from the stands, but the videographer was focused on the scoreboard during her moment of glory.

Injuries eventually added up, so Locust turned to coaching. First with the Keystone Assault, a rebranded iteration of the Vipers co-owned by Pratt-Lauchle and several teammates. Then with local high school, semi-pro and arena league teams. None of those jobs paid the bills, of course.

"Obviously I love football. That’s at the heart of all of it," Locust says, explaining her decade of moonlight-coaching. "But there’s something about being able to translate something that you believe in and seeing that come to life. Seeing the lightbulbs go on and helping people get better at something they also love and have worked so hard to also get to . . .

"I’d rather still be playing. At the end of the day, I’d still like to have the helmet and shoulder pads on myself. But this just feels like a gift every day I get to walk in here."

Lori Locust's big chance

Her break came in the form of a 2018 coaching internship with the Baltimore Ravens. It didn't last long, but it convinced Locust to abandon the half-measures and dive fully into football.

She was fired from her job in digital marketing sales two weeks before the internship and she made no effort to return to the corporate world. She was a house sitter for a friend's friend. She walked dogs. She worked in a Chewy warehouse. She found part-time work doing fire-restoration marketing. All in anticipation of the opportunity that finally came in 2019 — an assistant defensive line coach for the Birmingham Iron of the Alliance of American Football.

Naturally, that league folded after one season.

No matter. Within the year, Locust landed with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, coached by fellow central Pennsylvania native Bruce Arians, who was the coach at Temple when Locust was a student there and her ex-husband played on the team. By Year 2, Locust was one of the first two women in NFL history to win a Super Bowl as a coach.

"She started at the bottom," Pratt-Lauchle says. "She was coaching high school and semi-pro and didn't get paid. She coached indoor men's and didn't get paid. And worked in a factory and walked dogs and slept on couches. She went from having this six-figure career to only having enough to live on because she wanted to pursue her passion.

"She did that for years to get to where she is. She made connections and worked her way up. That's the story people need to hear. It's the journey it took for her to get there. It's the perseverance that's truly inspiring."

Lori Locust: Tennessee Titans coach, not trailblazer

Pratt-Lauchle jokes about how teammates used to hate watching football with her and Locust. It was like watching a whodunit with Sherlock Holmes and Bruce Wayne. They saw everything coming before it came.

That anticipation and football savvy is essentially Locust's full-time gig now. On a Friday in early June, for example, Locust's job was to write a report on the Seattle Seahawks' 2023 offense to scout the tendencies of Chicago Bears offensive coordinator Shane Waldron and what he might have brought with him from Seattle as its former coordinator.

The Titans play the Bears in Week 1. In September.

Locust doesn't try explaining her job to people anymore. There's too much to explain. There's on-field coaching, advance scouting, analytics, administrative planning, teaching. And a knack for anticipation.

"If she's like, 'Are you going to take them into the indoor to walk them through something?' and I'm like, 'Yeah, I think I might,' she's like, 'OK. I'll make sure to talk to equipment and get things set up,' " says Ben Bloom, the Titans' outside linebackers coach who Locust works closely alongside. "There's a lot of logistics of things that go on throughout the day. Sometimes they happen and you've got an extra 20 minutes of meeting time that you didn't think you were going to have, so how are we going to use that?"

Locust distanced herself from women's football early in her coaching career. Making it in the men's game meant having to avoid being pigeonholed. But going back to assist at women's camps now, she realizes the advantage her past affords her. Locust says women want to know the "why" more. It's not enough to say "blitz the B gap." Everything has to click, so there has to be more of a holistic approach to teaching why blitzing the B gap makes everything on the defense work.

"Which really forces you to come down and be progressive in your coaching style, which I think is beneficial across the board," Locust says. "I think a lot of coaches that have been successful have been progressive and have built on the basics and the fundamentals as opposed to this exotic drill or this play or whatever."

Locust, obviously, has found success. The Super Bowl ring in her safe-deposit box in Tampa is proof. So is the display at the Pro Football Hall of Fame showcasing the sneakers she wore that night, little shreds of confetti still embedded inside.

Nevertheless, she doesn't like the phrases "role model" or "trailblazer." She thinks trailblazers set out with one specific objective and find what they're looking for, and she thinks being a role model infers the path you took is a road map to replicate.

Locust prefers "possibility model," if she has to have a label at all, hoping her story is proof that anyone can coach if they want it bad enough. She'd like to be a position coach, but knows those jobs are earned by succeeding in jobs like hers now. She says it'd be nice to see a woman head coach or coordinator someday, provided that woman was truly the right person for the job, but she's not holding her breath. She says it'll take time before a woman rises to coordinator, let alone head coach. But she views it as a "probability down the line."

Pratt-Lauchle, for what it's worth, does see Locust as a trailblazer and an inspiration. But she's not surprised her friend shies from those labels. Locust doesn't seek out the limelight and doesn't want to be reduced to her gender. She's a coach, not the woman coach.

Football is Locust's sanctuary. She can't put on a helmet and shoulder pads anymore, especially not after another knee surgery this spring. But she can put foam rollers on her arms and whack at edge rushers' helmets in individual drills. It's the closest she gets to living her passion again, and she relishes the opportunity.

Locust loves football, and loves football history. She met Lambert once at an autograph signing at a Delaware mall, marveling at how he still walked like a football player, still had the broad shoulders of a football player. Now she gets to count some of the best defensive linemen of their generation as students: Ndamukong Suh, Vita Vea, Jason Pierre-Paul, Jeffery Simmons, Denico Autry.

Being a part of that history keeps Locust going.

"This is something that is, in my brief time, it still feels like rare air to me," she says. "Not just because of 'woman coach' or whatever. It’s because these kids have worked their entire lives, young or not, to be where they are right now. That’s special. The men that I get to be around, the other coaches I get to be around, the knowledge they have, it’s just something that is so motivating and fueling. You’re lucky enough to find that one job that gives you that type of passion, that type of feeling every day that you walk in the building. This has always been it for me."

'KEEP DREAMING:' HEMPFIELD GRAD DAVID MARTIN-ROBINSON READY TO JOIN THE TENNESSEE TITANS

BY JASON GUARENTE LANCASTERONLINE.COMA PRIL 29, 2024

David Martin-Robinson's first team was called Mean Green because of the color of its T-shirts. The 5-year-olds played at LANCO Fieldhouse.

If Martin-Robinson didn't know it then, he knew it soon. He loved football, even the flag variety, and he wanted to play in the NFL someday.

"That was my first dream ever," the Hempfield grad said. "Everyone who has been part of my life through this whole process knows I used to talk about that as a child."

Martin-Robinson is about to get his chance. The 6-foot-4, 255-pound tight end from Temple has signed with the Tennessee Titans as a free agent.

The deal came together during the seventh round of last week's NFL Draft. Martin-Robinson had an offer from the Dallas Cowboys and interest from the Carolina Panthers. His choice came down to the Philadelphia Eagles and the Titans.

The Titans showed the most consistent interest as 257 names were called during the three-day draft. Martin-Robinson agreed to terms Saturday.

It's always a longshot for an undrafted player to make a 53-man roster or even the 16-man practice squad. The Titans only have three tight ends plus Martin-Robinson and Iowa's Steve Stilianos, who also signed after the draft, on their depth chart.

Martin-Robinson decided this was his best hope to stick around past Week 1.

"The foot's in the door," he said. "That's all that matters right now. I'm just gonna go after it. Every opportunity they give me, I'll make sure I'm as prepared as I can be."

It wasn't an easy road from Landisville to Nashville. Martin-Robinson graduated from Hempfield in 2018 and played six seasons at Temple. Injuries and COVID-19 stalled his progress. He caught just 21 passes combined in his first four years.

The lowest point came in 2021 when Martin-Robinson was limited to five games because of a broken collarbone and broken foot. He said he struggled with depression and began to ask himself difficult questions.

"I'd say my time at Temple built my character," Martin-Robinson said. "The lows definitely were lows. Every time I would get injured, I would question whether football was trying to give me a sign. If this was really for me."

Martin-Robinson's college fortunes started to shift in Year 5 and continued last season when he caught 40 passes for 537 yards and four touchdowns while being named second team all-conference.

A great all-around athlete, who played basketball and ran track for Hempfield, was recruited to play wide receiver in college. Temple shifted Martin-Robinson to tight end his first year.

Conestoga Valley grad Jose Barbon gets his NFL chance with the Dallas Cowboys

The 110s nearly broke Jose Barbon. He made the required time for a few before his legs start…

Martin-Robinson returned home for the weekend and had a party with friends and family as the draft reached its conclusion. Although some teams gave him a draft grade, he knew he was likely going to sign as a free agent.

It doesn't bother Martin-Robinson that he wasn't selected. All he wanted was an offer.

"Everybody's path is different," he said. "It's all about staying consistent, keep showing up and keep dreaming. That's really what it was for me. It was a test of my perseverance through all these years and my development as a football player."

Martin-Robinson follows in the footsteps of Conestoga Valley grad Jose Barbon, who also went to Temple and signed as an undrafted free agent with the Cowboys last year. Barbon signed with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League in January.

Both played flag football at LANCO. Both were MVPs at the Tri-County All-Star Game six years ago.

Martin-Robinson will attend rookie minicamp starting on May 9 and will try to make a strong first impression with the Titans. That's where his next chapter begins. He said he won't be intimidated when he walks into that locker room.

"It's gonna be surreal in the moment," he said. "I've been playing football for so long and I have belief in myself. When I get on the field, it's a comfortable thing."

From Mean Green to the Titans, Martin-Robinson has kept his childhood dream alive.

NEW TITANS LINEMAN DAN MOORE JR. FEELS LIKE HE FOUND THE PERFECT FIT IN TENNESSEE, AROUND SOME FAMILIAR FACES

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MARCH 20, 2025

NASHVILLE – Veteran NFL lineman Dan Moore Jr. first met Titans guard Peter Skoronski a few years ago, when they began training together in Dallas.

More recently, another Titans lineman, JC Latham, joined the group in Texas, and they immediately hit it off.

"As an older guy, I think JC naturally kind of gravitated toward me," Moore said. "Now, I consider him my little bro."

The personal connection between the three became even more special when Moore, the starting left tackle for the Pittsburgh Steelers the past four seasons, signed with the Titans at the start of free agency.

The move to Tennessee seemed perfect for a lot of reasons for Moore, who was raised not far from Houston and knows all about the roots of the franchise, as well as his new linemates with the Titans.

"It's pretty cool how it all ended up falling place," Moore said. "It's kind of like it was meant to happen, I guess."

The 6-foot-5, 315-pound Moore joined the Titans after starting 66 games at left tackle for the Steelers from 2021-2024. In Pittsburgh, he became the first Steelers rookie to start at left tackle since 1970. During his four years in Pittsburgh, Moore only missed two games out of a possible 68.

In Tennessee, he wants to prove the Titans right for going to get him, and for rewarding him with a nice contract, in free agency. The 26-year-old Moore wants to reward the team with his play on the field, and his impact on the team.

"Obviously I want to exceed expectations," Moore said. "But it's not only about proving the team right, it's about proving myself right. I feel like my expectations will always be higher than anyone else's are for me. I feel like by meeting my expectations, I'll exceed the team's expectations.

"So, not only do I want to prove them right, I want to prove them damn right, where (they're thinking): "We got our guy. He didn't just do what we needed him to do, he did that and more." That is the consensus I want in the organization."

The Titans attacked the offensive line position in free agency.

Not only did the Titans sign Moore, they also signed NFL veteran Kevin Zeitler, most recently with the Lions. The addition of Moore will allow the 22-year-old Latham to move to right tackle in his second NFL season. Moore likes the group, which also includes another player he's familiar with in center Lloyd Cushenberry.

"With JC moving to the right, it's great for him. It's always easier for a tackle when you have a smart guard next to you and he'll have that in Zeitler. It will allow him to just go out and play," Moore said. "I know about big Lloyd Cushenberry, too, he's a great player. I played against him when he was at LSU (and I was at Texas A&M). And Pete, just knowing who he is, and training with him the last couple of years, he's a workhouse. Going into Year 3, I just want to help Pete get the most out of his career. And hopefully I can help his game and in return he can help mine, too, and we can secure that left side.

"I really like the group, and as an organization, I like what the team is trying to accomplish, what they are prioritizing. I think they are wanting to put an emphasis on the front, and I think that is where games are won, in the trenches. Obviously in the AFC South we have some really good rushers on the other side of the ball, and you have to make sure your front five is on point. I think what we did in the offseason and the young guys that we have in that room, I think we have the potential to be one of the best groups in the division, and one of the better groups in the league as well."

Moore said he wants to do his part as well.

He believes Titans offensive line coach Bill Callahan will get the most of him, and help him reach his potential.

Over the last four years, Moore ranks third in the league in offensive snaps (4,109) played by tackles, trailing only Penei Sewell (4,328) and Jawaan Taylor (4,135).

In each of Moore's four seasons with the Steelers, running back Najee Harris surpassed 1,000 rushing yards. In 2023, the Steelers offensive line allowed only 36 sacks, which ranked ninth in the NFL.

In Tennessee, he'll have running backs Tony Pollard and Tyjae Spears behind him.

The team's starting quarterback for 2025 remains to be seen, however.

Moore said he's focusing on himself, and making those around him better.

"Every year I feel like I have progressed and have gotten better each offseason – that's something I take pride in," Moore said. "Obviously, Pittsburgh wouldn't have had me as the starting left tackle the last four years if not. I think this past season I was able to tap into some things that I wasn't able to in the past, just being an older guy, things slowing down for me, things happening more naturally for me. I really feel the game is coming to me now.

"Me and Bill had a good conversation, and he talked about how he can help me and my game.

'HE'S DONE EVERYTHING FOR US': KALEL MULLINGS' REDEMPTIVE ARC TO BECOME MICHIGAN'S RB1'

BY MICHAEL COHEN
FOXSPORTS.COM
SEP. 26, 2024

In a cavernous and crestfallen Michigan locker room, amid the stunned silence of a dream season gone unexpectedly and unfathomably awry, an unlikely protagonist waited for the inquest he knew was coming. Inch by inch, reporters tiptoed closer and closer to running back Kalel Mullings, a converted linebacker whose goal-line fumble in the second quarter had swung momentum even further toward the emboldened underdogs from Texas Christian. The media members danced around the ball security-shaped elephant in the room with questions about the stunning nature of the Wolverines' second consecutive loss in the College Football Playoff semifinals and about Mullings' move to tailback following a season-ending knee injury to starter Blake Corum.

But the unavoidable questions could only be avoided for so long. And soon enough, the painful subject was delicately broached: What happened on the botched handoff between quarterback J.J. McCarthy and Mullings, who was aligned as a fullback in a three-point stance and then lost the ball in a pile of bodies when Michigan faced first-and-goal from the 1-yard line, a double-figure deficit already showing on the State Farm Stadium scoreboard?

"I just went to take the handoff like usual," Mullings said. "I didn't really get it too cleanly. I kinda went to put it away and fall forward for that half yard, really. And then it just slipped, obviously. And then it took me like — I didn't even process that the ball had — it was so fast that, like, I didn't even process that the ball was on the ground. By the time I went to go try and get it, they're D1 football players, too. If the football is on the ground, they're gonna hop on that."

And sure enough, they did. The Horned Frogs recovered Mullings' fumble in the end zone for a touchback that robbed Michigan of its best scoring opportunity in a lopsided first half. Another touchdown from TCU extended the lead to 18 points by the 4:56 mark of the second quarter in a game the Wolverines never led, their undoing largely attributed to self-inflicted wounds: questionable playcalling, unusual substitution patterns from running backs coach Mike Hart, two pick-6s thrown by McCarthy, a mistimed snap with the game on the line in the fourth quarter, and the mishandled goal-line exchange with Mullings. When it finally ended after nearly five hours of real time, the Horned Frogs advanced to the national championship game with an unforgettable 51-45 win.

That Mullings stood dutifully by his locker and faced the music spoke volumes on an evening that was unquestionably among the most painful of his career. He politely fielded questions from any and all media members who sought an explanation for his fumble, even as some of his more prominent Michigan teammates — most notably McCarthy, who had thrown two interceptions and fumbled twice in the most turnover-prone game of his career — refused to fulfill their postgame responsibilities. It was Mullings who personified accountability.

All of which has made Mullings' early-season redemptive arc in 2024 that much more satisfying for a player who changed positions multiple times, alternating between linebacker and running back during the first few years of his career, before finally earning his place as the No. 1 tailback in a run-heavy, run-dependent Michigan offense that would suddenly be lost without him. Mullings carried 17 times for 159 yards and two touchdowns in last week's pulsating win over No. 11 USC, including a breathtaking 63-yarder in which he broke tackles, dragged defenders and willed the stagnant Wolverines toward the end zone for an eventual game-winning score. He leads the team in carries (53), rushing yards (429) and rushing touchdowns (four) through the first four weeks of the season.

"He can take it the distance, as he's shown," Michigan head coach Sherrone Moore said after Saturday's win. "He can run you over. He's just done everything for us. He's a great pass protector. He's been incredible. Last year he averaged 6 yards a carry. So it's not a surprise with how good he is and what he's done. But to see him take the next steps and really make those explosive plays [is awesome]. And when the game is on the line, he wants the ball in his hands and he makes plays happen. He's a star. He's a game-breaker."

The quote from Moore is one that, a few months ago, most fans might have expected would be attached to Donovan Edwards, the former five-star recruit who appeared poised to inherit the workhorse role once Corum's career concluded. After all, it was Edwards who had exploded for 104 yards and two touchdowns in the national championship game against Washington. And it was Edwards who rampaged for 520 combined yards and three combined touchdowns in games against Ohio State, Purdue and TCU to conclude the 2022 season after Corum tore his meniscus and underwent surgery.

But despite entering the year as Michigan's unquestioned lead back — and being voted a team captain along the way — Edwards has been the statistically less-effective runner than the 6-foot-2, 233-pound Mullings in three of the Wolverines' first four games:

The production Mullings managed against USC was particularly herculean given the Wolverines' change in quarterback from Davis Warren, a pocket passer, to Alex Orji, a non-vertical threat. So limited was Michigan's downfield passing attack with Orji running the offense that it wasn't until the team's final drive that he finally completed a pass for more than 9 yards.

Instead, Moore and offensive coordinator Kirk Campbell entrusted Mullings to carry the ball eight times for 83 yards on what proved to be the game-winning possession, even as the Trojans understandably stacked the box with defenders who knew Michigan was unlikely to pass.

"I just feel like that's just a representation of who we are, you know?" Mullings said after the game. "Always straining until the very end. Throughout that drive, you know, it was just grit and grinding out. We like to say, ‘grinding meat.' We were just grinding meat that whole time, killing the clock and getting down there.

"Shout out to the O-line, shout out to [H-back Max Bredeson], shout out to everyone, man, clearing out holes. And we were just able to execute. At the end of the day, a lot of football is about what you do when you face adversity, so it feels good to be able to face some adversity and overcome it."

The punishing 10-play, 89-yard drive that won Michigan the game underscored key differences between the running styles of Mullings and Edwards, with the former appearing to be better suited to anchor the offense, regardless of who plays quarterback for the remainder of the season. Mullings churned out 5.65 yards per carry after contact against a revitalized and revamped Trojans defense coordinated by D'Anton Lynn. And he's averaging 5.3 yards per carry after contact across the Wolverines' first four games, which ranks fourth nationally behind Ashton Jeanty of Boise State (6.3), Kaleb Johnson of Iowa (5.8) and Jonah Coleman of Washington (5.4). Edwards, meanwhile, is averaging 2.9 yards after contact per carry, including a lowly 1.6 against the run-minded USC defense.

Even Moore couldn't deny what has become obvious for the outside world to see when asked if Mullings should be the team's No. 1 tailback against Minnesota on Saturday (Noon ET on FOX and the FOX Sports App) and beyond.

"I think he earned the right to be in that conversation and talk about it, have those conversations with both of those guys," Moore said earlier this week. "But those are the things we'll talk about with them. Kalel played a heck of a game, and you can't deny the effect that he had on the game. So we'll just have those conversations as an offense."

‘THAT’S HOW I LIVE’: THROUGH HIGHS AND LOWS AND ACROSS POSITIONS, KALEL MULLINGS STAYS LEVEL

BY NOAH KINGSLEY
THE MICHIGAN DAILY

It’s hard to find Kalel Mullings without a smile on his face.

Lately, the graduate running back has plenty of reasons to smile. He’s in the midst of a breakout season for the Michigan football team and is coming off of the best game of his career. After four years of flipping between linebacker and running back, waiting his turn, Mullings is taking full advantage of his opportunity.

Mullings’ smile isn’t merely circumstantial, though.

“The best thing about Kalel is, I love the dude, he just lights up the room,” Mike Mason, Mullings’ defensive coordinator at Milton Academy and current Mustangs head coach, told The Michigan Daily. “He’s always smiling. There’s never a bad day in his world. It can be, I’m sure he has many, but you never see it. He’s always got a smile on.”

Off the field, that’s Mullings’ default — he’s seemingly always in a good mood. Whether he’s gearing up for a big game, showing someone around campus or performing in Milton’s all-male a cappella group, the Miltones, he does it with a smile.

On the field, though, Mullings approaches things a little differently. He still never strays too far from his off-field default, but his default isn’t entirely as joyful as it is when he’s going about his day-to-day life. Mullings has seen plenty of ups and downs throughout his career with the Wolverines, and not all of them make him smile.

But whether he’s going through his lowest moments or reaching his highest peaks, Mullings always stays level.

Back in 2019, during his senior season in high school, Mullings had a bad day — or at least a bad first half. The Mustangs were losing 21-6 heading into halftime, and their opponents delivered a hit on one of Mullings’ teammates right before the break, which Milton collectively deemed a cheap shot.

According to Mason, Mullings was fuming. But he didn’t let that stop him from taking charge and creating a change.

“In the locker room, (the coaches) didn’t even go in,” Mason said. “Kalel and another senior took over, they spoke to the team. We came out of halftime, we scored 28 straight and won the game.”

Mullings single-handedly led the charge, scoring four touchdowns during the game. No matter how poorly the first half went, no matter how angry he was about the cheap shot, he kept his cool and moved forward.

That second half much more closely resembled the rest of Mullings’ 2019 season. Playing at running back, linebacker, wide receiver and on special teams — wherever the Mustangs needed him to — Mullings excelled in his final year in high school. To cap it off, he was named the 2019 Gatorade Player of the Year in Massachusetts.

But even as things went his way, Mullings stayed level.

“Any game we played, he always stayed the same,” Mason said. “He could score five touchdowns, and you’d think he had a bad game. He could have a bad game, and you’d think he’d scored five touchdowns. He was level all the time.”

At Milton, Mullings found ways to stay steady through highs and lows, setting himself up for the level of public scrutiny that some of his moments have had at Michigan.

Mullings played linebacker for most of the Wolverines’ 2022 season, same as he had during his first two years in Ann Arbor. But when then-junior running back Blake Corum got hurt in the penultimate game of the regular season, Michigan called on Mullings to revisit his old position ahead of a top-five clash with Ohio State.

And on a pivotal third-and-1 in Buckeyes territory, Mullings reintroduced himself to the world as a running back — or more accurately, a quarterback.

Mullings took the handoff and started running up the gut, before suddenly pulling up before the line of scrimmage. He leapt into the air and tossed the ball 15 yards downfield to tight end Luke Schoonmaker, who brought it in for a key first down. For as much as onlookers were in disbelief at a linebacker being called upon to throw the ball on a trick play, Mullings himself could barely believe it.

“(I) got it completed, even though I could have led him a little bit, but got it completed,” Mullings told The Daily. “We won the game, and that’s all that matters. Just surreal honestly, and just craziness going on in my head.”

Successfully executing a key trick play in his first game at running back in three years, and against Ohio State, to boot, was about as high as it could have gotten for Mullings. Barely more than a month later, however, Mullings experienced a similarly large low.

With the Wolverines trailing TCU 14-3 early in the Fiesta Bowl, Mullings came in on the 1-yard line to attempt to punch the ball into the end zone. But Mullings never got possession of quarterback J.J. McCarthy’s handoff, a Horned Frogs defender recovered his fumble and Michigan walked away empty-handed.

Once again, the spotlight was on Mullings — only this time, it was in a negative light. While Mullings' confidence didn't take a hit, he felt like he let his team down. Outsiders, meanwhile, weren't as kind to Mullings, once again wondering why a linebacker was involved in a key play. They didn't understand why he was getting the ball on the goal line.

Of course, Mullings had plenty of experience playing running back prior to Michigan. But that didn't change the fact that he was a scapegoat.

And still, even with hate swirling around him, Mullings stayed level.

"Just overcoming that and working through that, and accepting that, but at the same time knowing that there's room to grow, that was really just the biggest thing," Mullings said. "It's never being too down with the lows and never being too high with the highs. That's how I live."

After a rollercoaster finish to Mullings' 2022 season, his 2023 was comparatively mellow. Both Corum and then-junior Donovan Edwards came back for another season, leaving very few touches available for now-full-time running back Mullings. Mullings had fewer ups and downs throughout the season, but the lack of playing time was a low in and of itself.

Just like he always does, though, Mullings didn't get too down.

"He's not the type of kid that said that should be me," former Milton coach Kevin MacDonald told The Daily. "He's the type of kid that said, 'when my time comes, you know, my time will come and I'll be ready to go.' "

After three years away from running back, and three years building a linebacker's frame, Mullings admits that he lost his knowledge of the position a little bit. When Mullings transitioned back and refound who he was as a running back, he was no longer the speed-focused back he had been for the Mustangs. But with Edwards and Corum ahead of him, his size provided more of a pathway to carve out a role for himself.

"Looking at Blake, looking at Dono, they're great backs, but they don't have my size," Mullings said. "If I'm gonna try to get on the field, I have to bring something that those two guys aren't necessarily bringing. … That's really when I tried to hone in on getting some power in my game, and bringing that kind of physicality"

Mullings still barely got on the field on offense during the 2023 season, totaling just 38 touches and 254 yards from scrimmage. But he got more experience under his belt as a running back at the college level, and got the chance to learn from Corum and Edwards.

While others might have gotten down about the lack of playing time, Mullings took a different perspective.

"I looked at it like, if I can take this break from running back, come back, and get any playing time with these two guys, I mean, I can't be that bad right?" Mullings quipped. "I gotta be some type of good."

With Corum now in the NFL, Mullings is finally getting to show how good he can be this season. He has the power that he developed while staying steady last season, and has shown it by bruising his way through would-be tacklers. After two years shaping his frame back to that of a running back, he's finding his speed once again — even if Edwards and the rest of the running backs mess with him about being slow.

As the Wolverines' offense has labored through growing pains, Mullings' impact has only grown. No longer is anyone wondering why he's touching the ball — they're calling for him to touch it more. Against Arkansas State, Mullings showed just how far he's come, totaling a career-high 153 yards and two touchdowns while breaking off three 30-plus yard runs.

And for as level as Mullings tries to stay while he's on the field, when he saw nothing but green ahead of him to score his first touchdown in nearly a year, Mullings couldn't hold himself back.

"One thing I always say is that one of the best feelings in sports, and really all of life, is getting out an open field knowing you're about to score," Mullings said. "… I couldn't do anything but smile."

Through highs and lows, through anger and jubilation, Mullings stays level. But with the way things are going for him this season, he just can't help himself from breaking back into his smile.

A MICHIGAN MAN

BY JAY N. MILLER
THE PATRIOT LEDGER
OCTOBER 21, 2019

Milton Academy's Kalel Mullings was presented his jersey for the 2020 All-American Bowl on Oct. 15, 2019. Mullings will play in the annual East vs. West matchup on Saturday, Jan. 4, 2020 in the Alamodome in San Antonio, Texas. The Bowl will be nationally televised, live on NBC and will feature the nation's top 100 high school football players. (Courtesy photo/All-American Bowl)

MILTON -- It's safe to say Kalel Mullings was an early bloomer. Milton Academy football coach Kevin Macdonald first saw Mullings play as a fifth-grader, and knew he wanted the youngster to one day become a Mustang.

Starting for Milton Academy by the time he was a freshman, Mullings got to November of that year and had defensive coordinator Don Brown from the University of Michigan offering him a full scholarship. Earlier this fall, after sifting through more than 40 college offers, Mullings indeed committed to join head coach Jim Harbaugh's Wolverines next year as a linebacker.

Oct. 15 was another celebration for the Mustang senior, as more than 200 of his schoolmates crowded into the Milton Academy gym to see him officially recognized as an All-American, and receive his official jersey for the All-American Bowl -- an East vs. West matchup of top-notch high school players scheduled for Jan. 4 in San Antonio's Alamodome, broadcast live on NBC. Mullings is the only Massachusetts player invited and is widely judged to be the top gridiron recruit in the Bay State this year.

Boston City Councillor Matt O'Malley started the festivities with a pair of official proclamations, one a resolution from the Boston City Council lauding West Roxbury resident Mullings for his glittery athletic career and academic excellence. Boston Mayor Marty Walsh also sent a certificate recognizing Mullings for his achievements as well as his commitment to West Roxbury and Boston.

"To be the No. 1 player in Massachusetts, and offered a scholarship to Michigan at age 14, as a high school freshman is just amazing," said O'Malley. "At that age I was just hoping someone would invite me to the school dance. Kalel now goes on to join the Michigan football tradition that includes Ty Law, Tom Brady, Charles Woodson ... and President Gerry Ford. I mention that because Kalel is a real renaissance man, whose mother tells me he is also quite the saxophone player, but also an outstanding student. Kalel is exactly what this country needs."

Mercedes Resendis, representing the All-American Bowl and NBC Sports, took the podium next. Posters of some previous participants in the game flanked the stage, including Tim Tebow (2006), Patrick Peterson (2008), current Ohio State defensive end Chase Young (2017) and current Clemson quarterback Trevor Lawrence (2018). Resendis noted that the All-American Bowl is the most elite high school game in the country, and going into its 20th year. Explaining that only 100 players from all over the United States are invited, she noted that the game has been the highest-rated high school sports event on television.

Macdonald then admitted he'd seen few athletes with Mullings tools when he first laid eyes on that fifth-grader.

"Kalel was clearly the best fifth-grader in the state," said Macdonald. "I was not surprised when he was starting for us on varsity as a 13-year old freshman, and he more than held his own against 17-, 18-, 19-year-old kids. The best part is that Kalel never changed -- he's the same kind, affable, outgoing kid he was when we first met him."

Macdonald then told of how a parent with a student playing sports for Roxbury Latin had written the Milton Academy Athletic Department a letter about Mullings, not knowing he was a football star. The parent had come to Milton Academy to see their child's team play against a Mustang squad, but was momentarily lost on campus. They asked the first student they saw for directions to the field and game they were seeking, and Mullings not only helped them, he walked them across campus to the field, asking about their school and team and telling them all about Milton Academy. That simple request for directions led to a warm and wonderful encounter with such a warm and gregarious young man, the letter read, that this parent had to write and note the indelible impression of the school and Mullings it had left.

Mullings himself was short and sweet when he got up to speak.

"My selection to this bowl has been one of my goals since my freshman year," said Mullings, who has helped the Mustangs off to a 5-0 start this season. "My past four years at Milton Academy have been a dream come true, and I plan to represent our state well. I fully admit none of this would be possible without my teammates, my classmates and everyone else here -- we are a family at Milton Academy, and I thank all of you for embracing me. This is your award, too. I am happy to join the list of players who've played in this game before, Ezekiel Elliott, Odell Beckham Jr. and Jalen Ramsey, among others."

Later, offstage, Mullings said he was excited to play in the bowl game after his Mustangs career concludes.

"It's a great feeling to know that all of my hard work paid off," said Mullings. "It will be hard to leave here, because everyone has supported me, and cares about me here. I don't have too much preference whether they play me on offense or defense in this game -- I just want to play ball."

The two proudest people in the gym had to be parents Del and Calicia Mullings, as speaker after speaker lauded their son.

"Kalel started playing football at 7 years old," Del Mullings explained. "Although he stood out, we realized he was often bigger, stronger and faster than the other kids, so we never tried to hold him back. We always let him 'play up,' against the older kids, so he always knew he had to keep working hard. As a 13 year old playing varsity, his size didn't matter like it had, but he still did well."

"I'm a sports fan overall and so I guess kind of a Michigan fan," Del admitted. "Coach Don Brown was our contact here, and he is, of course, well known from his years coaching UMass and at Boston College. He and Coach Harbaugh made an agreement with us early on, when they first offered Kalel in his freshman year. They just asked us to remember they'd been the first ones to offer him a scholarship, and please allow them Kalel's last official campus visit -- you are allowed five different campus visits as a senior. They said if we could agree on that, they would not harass us, and they kept their word."

"It came down to five schools basically at the end," noted Del Mullings. "Michigan, Boston College, Wisconsin, Stanford and Northwestern. Interestingly, Northwestern and Michigan wanted him as a linebacker, and the other three all wanted him as a running back. But we were more focused on schools with top academics, so it came down to Michigan, Stanford and Northwestern. And ultimately we decided playing in 'the Big House' fulfilled all of our hopes and desires, playing on that kind of stage, and also getting the benefit of top-notch academics."

Kalel will be heading off to play for Harbaugh, a former NFL quarterback and head coach, and defensive coordinator Brown next season, but in the meantime has he heard from that other Michigan guy living and working in the Boston area?

"We haven't had any contact from Tom Brady yet," Del Mullings chuckled. "But there is a connection, so you never know. Kalel's first Pop Warner coach was Dan Kraft, one of Bob Kraft's sons. And Joey Kraft, Dan's son, was one of Kalel's best friends at that time when they were both playing. Joey has gone on to become quite a lacrosse player, but he and Kalel were good friends as young kids, and Dan was their first Pop Warner coach."

FEEL BETTER, PLAY BETTER: TITANS TE CHIG OKONKWO EXCITED ABOUT HOW HIS BODY FEELS, AND VIBES AROUND TEAM

TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 19, 2024

NASHVILLE – Feel better, play better?

Tight end Chig Okonkwo believes changes he's made this offseason, as well as a new feel on the team this offseason, could pay off for the Titans this fall.

Time will tell, but right now it's all smiles for the third-year pro.

"A fresh start is always good, especially when you are coming off losing a lot," Okonkwo said. "The building, the vibes are immaculate right now. They are great. The future is exciting right now.

"I feel like guys are more relaxed now, in the building. Guys are coming in and they're not as tense, not as stressed out. And it allows people to be a lot more free in the locker room, a lot more free on the field."

A fourth-round pick of the Titans in the 2022 NFL Draft, Okonkwo is looking to be at his best in 2024.

In 2023, Okonkwo caught 54 passes for 528 yards and a touchdown while playing in 17 games, with 11 starts. A year before, Okonkwo caught 32 passes for 450 yards, but with three touchdowns, and a 14.1 average per reception (compared to 9.8 yards in 2023).

This offseason, Okonkwo said he focused on making changes to the way his body moves on the football field.

Earlier this offseason while in Florida, he worked to prepare himself to make strides.

He did a lot of stability work, in an effort to get in and out of his cuts better. Okonkwo said he could tell a difference in practices in May and June.

"I feel like I maximized the potential I had in my body, and if I wanted to get better, I had to change the structure of how I move and stuff," he said. "(I feel) a big difference, even the way I feel, my body. I feel a lot better when I move. After a long day of moving, I don't feel as sore."

A new coaching staff, and new offensive weapons around him, also has Okonkwo optimistic about what's head.

Brian Callahan is known for his offensive mind, and receivers Calvin Ridley and Tyler Boyd coming aboard alongside DeAndre Hopkins should make things better for the offense.

And, the way Okonkwo sees it, all of the team's tight ends should benefit, from himself to Josh Whyle and Nick Vannett.

"I think more down the field, attacking stuff, I would say," Okonkwo said of potential changes for the tight end. "Using our speed to get those balls down the field. A lot of stuff has been shorter stuff in the past. I think we're going to be able to open up a lot more things.

"It is very exciting when you see the stuff we're bringing in. It feels like we're going to be relying a lot on the pass, and that is going to be a big part of my game, too. So, I am very excited for that. I am very excited to have those guys on the outside, and get a lot of the attention, and then make plays on the inside."

He is obviously one of the best coaches in the NFL. So many players have developed under Bill Callahan, and I know that. Just talking to him, I know he's going to make me better and get the most out of me. Bill thinks he can help my game a lot, and I believe he can as well. Hopefully we can do some great things together, and Bill can tweak my game here and there, and shoot, maybe I'll be looking at a Pro Bowl or an All-Pro in the future."

Moore, who was born and raised in Beaumont, Texas, roughly 80 miles east of Houston, said he's happy to be back in the south.

He said he believes in history, and southern hospitality.

"I am familiar with Tennessee organization, being a Houston area kid." Moore said. "The hometown team used to be the Oilers. When I came up, the Texans were already kind of established, but you hear stories about Warren Moon and some of the great Oilers, the colors.

"I love the fact Tennessee has taken over the branding of the Oilers, it's kind of cool."

Moore wants to do his part on the field, and off it.

"I feel like I am a hard worker, without a doubt," he said. "Definitely a guy who is going to lead young guys, try to be vocal in the room when need be. I am a guy who is easy to get along with. I would like to say I have somewhat of a big personality at times. I love to bring smile and joy to people. So, hopefully I can bring energy to the room.

"I also want to bring a type of demeanor and a type of swagger that we need on the offensive line to go and compete against some of these defensive ends and defensive tackles in this league. I want to put the onus on the offensive front, and I want us to be the leaders of the offense and be the reason why our offense is successful. I am just going to carry that mentality, that energy with me every single day and hopefully the team and the players and the coaches will see that."

‘JUST A FINAL SHOVE, MAN.’ A DAY IN THE TRAINING CAMP LIFE OF TITANS TE CHIG OKONKWO

BY JOE REXRODE
THE ATHLETIC
AUGUST 2, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Chig Okonkwo emerged from the Tennessee Titans locker room at 9:25 a.m. Tuesday, the second day in full pads for a team and player pursuing the same objective — block better.

Okonkwo showed as a rookie fourth-round pick out of Maryland last season that he can run, change speeds, nail routes, win downfield and make plays in the passing game. Fellow second-year pro Treylon Burks has been the early standout of camp, and that in tandem with the addition of DeAndre Hopkins makes the Titans look a lot more dangerous on the outside than anyone would have guessed as of mid-July. Add Okonkwo and healthy second-year slot receiver Kyle Philips to the equation and Ryan Tannehill has intriguing options at hand when he’s not handing to Derrick Henry.

And when he has enough time to throw behind a highly unproven offensive line. One thing that can help this offense is Okonkwo getting to the point where he can more effectively help that front when needed, which will also get him on the field more often. Which will remove his presence as any sort of tell for defenses. The Athletic watched Tuesday’s practice from the perspective of Okonkwo as he continues to work on blocking, special teams and the skills that should allow him to improve on last year’s 32 catches for 450 yards and three touchdowns — 24 of those catches, 278 yards and two touchdowns in the final seven games.

Okonkwo guzzled a bottled water and started jogging toward Field 3, the most distant of three grass practice fields at St. Thomas Sports Park. He gave a “Shhhh” sign with his right index finger into the filming camera of social media coordinator Katie Moseley, then did some head bobs into the filming camera of social video producer Troy Wisneski. Team stretch ended at 9:40, at which point Vrabel gathered the entire team close for a few words that could not be picked up by observing media or fans.

Then it was time for individual drills. The first two for Okonkwo were special teams drills on Field 2, and Vrabel was front and center for the first, stopping it often to give technique instructions as would-be blockers tried to hold up would-be tacklers. Most of the participants were receivers, but Okonkwo, rookie tight end Josh Whyle and rookie linebacker Thomas Rush took turns engaging each other.

Then it was a kickoff return drill for Okonkwo, with special teams coordinator Craig Aukerman running the show. The point was to “flatten your guy out so he can’t cut across your face and make the tackle,” Okonkwo said later, and he did his best to stay in front of receiver Nick Westbrook-Ikhine and redirect him. Then Rush did the same with Okonkwo sprinting toward him.

At 9:51, it was time for Okonkwo to leave the skill group on Field 2 and get with the big uglies on Field 1. Combination blocks were the order of the day. Okonkwo and Jamarco Jones — who is trying to earn the starting right tackle spot for the first six games while Nicholas Petit-Frere sits out a gambling suspension — lined up next to each other and fired forward when offensive line coach Jason Houghtaling barked, “Turbo!”

Petit-Frere was waiting for them with a blocking pad, and they combined to drive him backward. Players rotated spots often, Okonkwo holding the pad for a rep and combining on another rep with Chris Hubbard, the primary competitor with Jones to fill Petit-Frere’s spot.

“Pad level! Pad level!” Houghtaling reminded one and all, and it’s leverage and precision that have occupied Okonkwo’s focus in an offseason of trying to become a more well-rounded player.

“And you can feel it too, when you’re going, if you can stick a guy versus not quite getting it right,” he said. “Technique is a lot more important than strength. Strength doesn’t matter. Everybody’s strong.”

At 9:57, Okonkwo got back into skill mode on Field 1. A Titans practice tradition is a gathering of the entire team and Vrabel in the center. An offensive player and defensive player face each other. At Vrabel’s whistle, the offensive player circles back and is flipped the football, the defensive player circles back the other way, and they meet in the middle to see if the ball carrier can elude the defender. There’s no tackling to the ground, but there’s an “Oooooooohhhhhh!” every time a defender is juked and left grasping air.

Okonkwo elicited no such reaction, but he made a nice move on linebacker Chance Campbell, getting past him going left with Campbell getting a touch on Okonkwo. The 6-3, 238-pound Okonkwo got a defensive rep too — he may not play as much on special teams this season, but he has to be ready — and that was more impressive. He was all over one of the shiftiest players in camp, 5-11, 196-pound rookie receiver Kearis Jackson.

At 10:04, it was time for a 25-minute team period on Field 3. The closest thing the Titans have to real football in practice. No tackling to the ground. No hitting quarterbacks. But serious hitting all the same. And the first play of the team period illustrated the work Okonkwo is trying to get done.

He lined up as an in-line tight end, on the left side of the line. In front of him was new outside linebacker Arden Key, whose energy, voice and playmaking have been constants throughout camp. Key has been trouble at times for new left tackle Andre Dillard. On this play, it was Okonkwo who engaged him with a big pop on a handoff to Derrick Henry, and Henry cut left off the block to reach the second level.

To the naked eye, it also looked like Okonkwo may have given Key's jersey a tug. Key said later it was not holding, and Okonkwo said of the finish to the block: "A shove. Just a final shove, man."

But the fact that it looked like it might have been speaks to the details Okonkwo and the Titans are pursuing.

"I think the biggest thing for Chig is going to continue to be his hand placement," Vrabel said. "I don't think we're going to make him any bigger, he's not going to be a 260-pound player. But I think we have to just continue to focus on his hands and making sure that they're inside, that they're strong and they're powerful. (He's) not going to be able to sustain against Arden or any player with your hands outside. You just don't have enough power. He's willing. I just think that the technique has to improve."

So … holding then?

"No, I felt like on the first glance … like he let go when Arden broke the framework of his body, and tried to give him a shove, as what we coached to," Vrabel said. "I looked at it with a critical eye and I didn't see restriction at the point of attack. But again, I'm not an official. I just try to look and see what they call. I felt like he did let go and he did try to give him a shove. Then we'll see if that guy, in that case, Arden, can tackle Derrick. So again, I think it could have been better. I thought that it was smart not to grab him and tug him. It was smart to give him a shove at the end like we teach. So started off not so well and probably then finished OK."

That's the level of analysis that can go into one rep. For the rest of the team period when the first-team offense was on the field, Okonkwo was in the lineup more often than not. He moved all around, did some more blocking — including a good pass protection rep on a completion to Hopkins — and ran several types of routes downfield. Tannehill targeted him on a short pass over the middle, but Amani Hooker read it perfectly and broke up the pass.

Okonkwo got open with sharp routes against Kristian Fulton, Sean Murphy-Bunting and Kevin Byard, but the ball went elsewhere each time. When the twos and threes hit the field, he mostly stood close to Tony Dews, who has switched this season from running backs coach to tight ends coach. Dews' instruction, for Okonkwo and other tight ends, was frequent.

More special teams drills followed the team period, with Okonkwo and others getting low to bat a large blue ball back toward Dews three times while shuffling from left to right — a drill designed to work on lateral quickness. After that, Okonkwo and Whyle were back at each other, one trying to block and the other trying to slip past. At 10:47, it was time for another long team drill. But this time, as planned before practice, just the twos and threes would go.

Okonkwo and other starters ran 10 sprints on Field 2 while it got started. Then they jogged over and cheered on their teammates. The horn sounded at 11:12 after a series of plays run by Malik Willis and Will Levis. Vrabel gathered the team close in the middle of Field 3. And at 11:16, it was time to break – some players heading to fans to sign autographs, some doing media interviews, some getting in individual work such as catching passes from the Jugs machines.

Okonkwo and Dews stood by those machines for several minutes, Dews grabbing Okonkwo's arms and getting into some technique intricacies. Reporters gathered around Okonkwo a few minutes later and he was asked about playing for Dews.

"It's been fun, it's been interesting," Okonkwo said. "The man's loud. A loud guy, man, he likes to coach you really hard. It's a different coaching style, you just have to understand it, and you just have to get used to it. He just coaches you hard and that's how I wanted to be coached."

And that was after a light day. Heavier ones are on the way.

TITANS TE CHIG OKONKWO, P RYAN STONEHOUSE NAMED TO PFWA'S ALL-ROOKIE TEAM

JANUARY 24, 2023

NASHVILLE – A pair of Titans have been named to the Pro Football Writers Association's All-Rookie team – tight end Chig Okonkwo and punter Ryan Stonehouse.

Okonkwo, a fourth round draft pick of the team from Maryland, finished the 2022 season with 32 catches for 450 yards and three touchdowns.

Stonehouse, signed as an undrafted free agent from Colorado State, finished the 2022 season with a gross average of 53.10 yards per punt (90 punts for 4,779 yards). Stonehouse broke Sammy Baugh's single-season NFL record of 51.40 yards per punt, which was established in 1940 and was never matched among qualifiers (2.5 punts per team game) until Stonehouse's rookie campaign.

The rookie team was chosen in voting conducted by the Professional Football Writers of America (PFWA).

CHIG OKONKWO'S CREW: TITANS REMIND HIM OF HOME, REFLECT NFL'S AFRICA PUSH

BY JOE REXRODE
THE ATHLETIC
AUGUST 22, 2022

Titans rookie tight end Chigoziem Okonkwo got the football bug in second grade, his first year of playing and the first year he realized he could make some money off it.

So obsessed was young Okonkwo with the sport that he made sure it was on any TV he was around in his hometown of Powder Springs, Ga. He read whatever he could read, memorized every stat, every player, every bit of analysis he could find. He so impressed his classmates at the lunch table that he started charging them $1 apiece — or an ice cream cup, their choice — for his commentary. They paid it, until the principal found out, halted the operation and called Okonkwo's parents.

"I told (the principal) it would never happen again," Okonkwo's mother, Isioma, recalled of a conversation from 15 years ago. "But I was so proud of that boy. He came home and thought he was in trouble, but I said, 'That's a very, very good thought, that is our culture, and maybe some time in the future you can bring that out. For now, allow your friends to come listen to you talk about the football for free.'"

Entrepreneurship is a staple of the Igbo people of Nigeria, Isioma said, and that's the first thing that came to mind for her and her husband, Charlton, when they heard of their youngest child's exploits. Nigerian culture is something they talked about throughout the raising of Okonkwo and his two older sisters. It is something Okonkwo became more aware of at 15 when his father tragically passed away of a heart attack while out to dinner with his mother. And it is something he celebrates daily now.

Saturday, a night that saw Okonkwo catch a touchdown pass from Malik Willis in a 13-3 preseason win over Tampa Bay at Nissan Stadium, could be the last time a group of Titans who have bonded over their shared heritage are all in uniform together. Tuesday is another roster cut day, to get it down to 80. The Titans waived four players Monday, so one more must go. Okonkwo and four Nigerian teammates have very different stories and football trajectories.

Okonkwo, a promising fourth-round tight end out of Maryland, will be on the team and potentially a handy addition to the passing game. Ola Adeniyi, born in Nigeria, raised mostly in Houston and a Nashville revelation last season, should again provide quality outside linebacker depth. David Anenih, born in Dallas to parents who had recently moved from Nigeria, has been a pass-rushing standout in two preseason games, and the rookie looks like a practice squad candidate at least. Rookie tight end Thomas Odukoya, born in Amsterdam to a Dutch mother and Nigerian father, can occupy that practice squad without costing the Titans a spot — that's the advantage of the NFL's International Player Pathway program, which got Odukoya to Nashville.

"But I feel like I've got to come out every day and prove I deserve that spot," said the 6-foot-6, 253-pound Odukoya, who dominated club football in the Netherlands, sent highlight tapes to coaches all over the United States, played for two junior colleges and finally found success at Eastern Michigan.

The guy to watch Tuesday is defensive tackle Sam Okuayinonu. "Sam O.," as they call him around Titans camp, is a popular figure around the team. He's close with Okonkwo, his Maryland teammate, and that relationship is part of why Okuayinonu signed with the Titans after going undrafted. He was a captain at Maryland and he's doing all he can to add his name to an NFL trend and pursuit — the league is pouring resources into outreach efforts in Africa. Last season it reported more than 100 players on active rosters who were either born in Africa or whose parents were born in Africa.

Okuayinonu also is quite undersized for an NFL defensive tackle at 6-1, 269, and based on his opportunities and play in camp he's an active roster long shot, a practice squad hopeful and a Tuesday cut candidate. Ask Okonkwo about Okuayinonu and he'll tell you he's "an inspiration to me" and someone who shouldn't be underestimated. He's certainly been through more than most, seeing things as a young child that no one should have to see.

Born in Monrovia, Liberia, to a Liberian mother and Nigerian father, Okuayinonu was raised there by his mother, Clara, and was attending her college graduation party as a 5-year-old in 2003 when gunfire turned the celebration into chaos. The Second Liberian Civil War, which had been raging since 1999, had reached the doorstep of Monrovia. He ended up separated from his mother, fleeing with his aunt and cousin.

"The gunfire was so heavy, we couldn't turn around," said Okuayinonu, who ended up south of a primary bridge near the city, hiding in an uncle's house, protected from becoming a child soldier but not from seeing dead bodies floating in the water or starving people resorting to cannibalism.

He found out his mother was still alive when her first shipment of food — delivered by clandestine kayak — arrived. They could not speak or communicate for months, until the August 2003 ceasefire resulted in the reopening of the bridge and thousands of people streaming across to find their loved ones. That's a memory seared into Okuayinonu's brain.

"An incredible moment, a blessing," he said. "My mom's my everything. I got to reunite with her, and a lot of kids didn't get that privilege."

They moved together a few years later to Lowell, Mass., where some of their family members had already relocated. That's where he fell in love with American football. That's how it usually goes for kids from other parts of the world with a sport that dominates American culture but does not have the global pull of sports such as soccer or basketball, and that's what the NFL wants to change. That's how it went for Chic Ejiasi, too.

Ejiasi was born in Houston to parents who had recently emigrated from Nigeria. The family moved a few years later to Iowa, where Ejiasi's parents worked as nurses and he became an Iowa Hawkeyes enthusiast. He eventually walked on to Kirk Ferentz's program, lettering all four seasons as a defensive back and contributing to Big Ten championship teams in 2002 and 2004. He graduated with a health and sports studies degree in 2005, tried coaching briefly but ultimately returned as the program's first director of player development — helping players transition from high school to college, helping them excel in college, helping them find internships and employment.

The Titans hired him away from Iowa in 2016 to be their director of player engagement. He has been with the franchise since and he and his wife, Ellie, have a 2-year-old son named Obi — officially Miles Obioma, Obioma translating to "kind hearted." Ejiasi's job is much the same, helping Titans transition to this life. He loves serving and seeing young professionals benefit from and give to their community. He might be having as much fun during this preseason camp as he's had in this job.

"Taking over the league," Ejiasi said with a smile of the increase of African players in the league and with the Titans, which has meant in recent weeks a lot of sharing of stories, conversations about culture and even discovering others on the team with African heritage — such as receiver Nick Westbrook-Ikhine and safety Josh Kalu.

"It's like we kind of all have that understanding of how we grew up," Ejiasi said, and they all have strong feelings on how that culture led them here.

Ejiasi: "For me it was, we were very academically focused in our family. All about giving our best and trying and being the best we could be, especially academically."

Anenih: "I would say it's a pretty big difference from American culture. In terms of how to live, maturity. Like my parents, they've done a really good job of teaching me how to live and good habits to have. … Respect. Respect for your elders, that's probably the biggest thing I would say."

Adeniyi: "We see our elderly, we respect them. We respect everybody we come around. Coaches, custodians, cafeteria ladies. That's what it is."

Okuayinonu: "To me it's like there's a little bit more pressure to go harder, knowing the sacrifices my mom made to make this possible for me."

Odukoya: "Obviously there's the genetic component of being big and strong, and I'm proud of that, but I also think Nigerians are known for their hard work and work ethic, which you need in the NFL. That shared culture, we definitely take pride in that."

Okonkwo: "Relentless hard work. That's the only way you're going to get anything in life."

Okonkwo also realized he had misperceptions of Nigeria until he visited for the first time. This was in 2017, three years after the tragic passing of his father, to visit extended family and celebrate the life of his father with them.

"People obviously have a negative perception of Africa. They think it's like dirt, everything is poor. That's not the case. It's literally like anywhere else," Okonkwo said. "If you see my uncles' houses over there, they're bigger than multi-million dollar houses here. That's a big thing I took away, the perception and reality. Everything isn't dirt and poverty."

Okonkwo would like to go back soon to get involved in outreach efforts, NFL-devised or otherwise. Adeniyi is committed to doing so next offseason, as part of NFL Africa. Former Giants star defensive end Osi Umenyiora, who was born in London to Nigerian parents, brought the idea to NFL commissioner Roger Goodell years ago and led in June in Ghana an event called NFL Africa: The Touchdown.

It included a combine-like development camp, a flag football clinic and fan events. The idea is to find and develop talent but also to increase international exposure to the game. The Philadelphia Eagles, for example, are marketing in Ghana as part of an effort to create regional fandom for various teams in different parts of the continent. This had to make business sense for the league to happen. The NFL reports 85 foreign-born players took at least one snap in the 2021 season — compared with 62 in 2014 — and that Nigeria, Canada and Australia are driving the growth.

But for Umenyiora and others with African roots who took part and will continue to take part, it's personal and about providing opportunities. The NFL isn't the only pathway for football to change a life. College football can open many more doors for kids with ability. Foreign-born FBS players more than doubled from 2014 to 2020, from 162 to 325. Roman Oben, the NFL's vice president of football development and the first Cameroon-born player drafted into the NFL, said he got emotional on the trip to Ghana.

"The school kids, the genuine passion and excitement they had, the appreciation, it takes you back," said Oben, a 12-year offensive tackle who won a Super Bowl with the Bucs. "It makes you think about where you came from."

And sometimes that's best explained with a story. Second-grade Okonkwo was surprised that day he came home from school and his parents weren't mad about his entrepreneurial efforts. A couple years later, he came home proudly showing them a 93 he got on a math test.

"A 93?" Isioma Okonkwo said to her son. "Did somebody get 100? Why weren't you the one who got 100?"

CONNECTED BY THEIR WEST AFRICAN LINEAGE, TITANS TEAMMATES CHIG OKONKWO AND SAM OKUAYINONU DISCUSS THEIR JOURNEY TO THE NFL IN MUSIC CITY FOOTBALL, TRACK 2

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
AUGUST 4, 2023

NASHVILLE – The second edition of Music City Football takes a look into the NFL journey for second-year Titans teammates Chig Okonkwo and Sam Okuayinonu, two players with African lineage.

The 11-minute feature, titled "Afrobeat", went live on Thursday night on Tennessee Titans YouTube channel.

There are more than 125 African-born or first-generation players in the NFL, including Okonkwo and Okuayinonu.

At the start of the episode, Okonkwo and Okuayinonu sit down with Director of Player Engagement Chic Ejiasi, whose parents are from Nigeria, for a dinner, and it spawns into a deeper dive into the personal lives of the two Titans.

Okonkwo, a tight end, discussed the impact his father's death had on him at a young age. Okonkwo was just 15 when his father died of a heart attack.

"In the Nigerian culture, I became the man of the house right then, at 15," Okonkwo said. "All I wanted to do was make sure my family was straight. … When my dad died, it opened my eyes to, Man, the world is real."

Okuayinonu, a native of Liberia, lived in the country until he was 12 years old, when he escaped the country's civil war.

"Growing up in Liberia, it was great," Okuayinonu said. "My mom and my grandmom, my grandmom worked really hard to get us into a comfortable place in Liberia. (Then) in 2003, the civil work broke out in my country, and it was a really tough time. A lot of kids didn't get to see their parents again.

"Me and my mom ended up getting separated during the war, and that was a tough time for me, because my mom is my best friend. She's my everything."

Okuayononu and his mom reunited after the war. Okuayinonu returned to Liberia in 2021.

Music City Football, which will air exclusively on YouTube, will include roughly four to six stories that will air into the fall.

The premier episode, which debuted in May, featured new Titans General Manager Ran Carthon.

"We have incredible access, and we feel like with that access, there's another level to the layer we can tell," said Surf Melendez, Vice President and Executive Creative Director for the Titans. "We're trying to create a closer connection with our fans, with our team, so they see things they don't normally get to see. We want to be close with our fans."

Also in the works:

-A feature on new Titans linebacker Azeez Al-Shaair and his road to the NFL. A crew went to Tampa, Fla., to visit with Al-Shaair and his mother, showing his long journey, which included a time when he was homeless.

-A feature on Titans fan Colin Jones, a drummer in Circa Waves with a Middle Tennessee connection. Jones, who lives in London, is a big Titans fans who even named his son "Tennessee."

All the episodes will be roughly eight to 12 minutes.

"Every episode has its own story," said Michael Fertig, Producer, Video Content with the Titans. "We're trying to humanize our players, coaches, and members of the organization. We're trying to go beyond the podium, beyond what people see on a Sunday. We're trying to show these are real people with real lives, and they struggle with real things just like everybody else, but they're a part of this great organization."

ROOKIE EDGE RUSHER OLUWAFEMI OLADEJO LOOKING TO MAKE HIS MARK WITH THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 14, 2025

NASHVILLE – Keith Bulluck wore the No.53 well for the Titans for 10 seasons, doing so with athleticism, enthusiasm and a relentless approach to reach greatness.

On stage at the NFL Draft in Green Bay, it was Bulluck who called Oluwafemi Oladejo's name when announcing the second-round pick of the Titans.

So, it seemed almost fitting when Oladejo took the field wearing Bulluck's old number in Tennessee.

Now, Oladejo is on his own quest to reach greatness.

Just a few weeks into his own NFL journey, Oladejo has already displayed plenty of athleticism and enthusiasm on the practice field himself, just like Bulluck did playing linebacker from 2000-09 in Tennessee, where he earned All-Pro and Pro Bowl honors, and eventually a spot into the Tennessee Sports Hall of Fame.

But Oladejo is going to have to put in the work to settle in and excel, and he knows it. He's still adjusting to playing on the edge, after making the transition in college.

This much is pretty certain: He'll be doing it with a smile.

"I would say as a kid, I was always the extrovert, leading chants," a smiling Oladejo said after rookie minicamp. "I think it is just who I am, and I try and impact players in a positive way."

Oladejo's common response when asked how he's doing: "Can't complain. It's a great day to be a Titan."

The Titans picked Oladejo, who played at UCLA, with the 52nd overall pick of the NFL Draft.

The 6-foot-3, 259-pounder sure looks the part with his size – during rookie minicamp, Oladejo flew through drills with teammates, and he was physical hitting the sled, or practice dummies.

Oladejo tallied 57 tackles, 13.5 tackles for a loss, 4.5 sacks and six quarterback hurries for the Bruins in 2024, when he started all 12 games. He earned the Kenny Clark Award for the most outstanding defensive lineman at a year-end team banquet.

This came following a season when he began focusing on a new position, playing at outside linebacker. In Tennessee, Oladejo said he's focusing on improving his hand placement, and knowing what to expect from tackles in the NFL by the way they line up across from him.

"Right now, I'm just focusing on continuing to be a better pass rusher," Oladejo said. "(Setting) the edge, playing football, and (I want to) help the team win.

"I have learned a lot of the basics of playing edge, but there's a lot to improve on. I feel good, but I'm not satisfied."

In four college seasons, Oladejo started 27 of 46 games while playing at UCLA (2023 and 2024) and California (2021 and 2022) and he recorded 238 total tackles (120-118-238), 20.5 tackles for loss, six sacks, one forced fumble and three fumbles recovered across his collegiate career.

Oladejo was invited to the Senior Bowl, where he was among the week's standouts.

He made a 30-visit to Tennessee during the pre-draft process.

"Femi is a tough, physical kid that really just started playing outside backer the fourth game of the season this year – he was playing MIKE before," Titans General Manager Mike Borgonzi said after Oladejo was picked. "So, he is developing as a pass rusher, so I think he has a lot of upside there as well. But I tell you what, he can set the edge, is physical, is violent and the kid loves football, too – that was a big part of it."

Oladejo began practicing with the veterans this week, something he'd been looking forward to.

He wants to learn from them, and make the team better.

He's just getting started.

"I'm very excited, being to be with the vets, getting under their wing," he said. "I want be a great teammate."

OLUWAFEMI OLADEJO'S BEAUTIFUL VIOLENCE HAS UCLA BELIEVING IN ITS PASS RUSH

BY HALEY SAWYER
LOS ANGELES DAILY NEWS
AUGUST 26, 2024

When UCLA linebacker Oluwafemi Oladejo went to Nigeria for the first time in nearly 13 years over the summer, he showed his friends and family videos of him slipping and dodging opposing players or thrusting them to the ground.

"I was showing videos and they're like, 'What's the point of that? You guys are hurting yourself, basically,'" Oladejo said. "So they don't understand it. Some do, but most don't."

True to his optimistic self, he continued training and working out while abroad while football remained largely unmentioned. He came back to Southern California refreshed and ready to rejoin a UCLA pass rush that was equally starting anew.

The Bruins ranked 10th nationally in total defense at the end of last season, allowing an average of 301.5 yards per game. Additionally, they had the No. 2 rushing defense with just 80.8 yards allowed per game and averaged 3.31 sacks per game, which was fifth-best in the country.

Players like edge rusher Laiatu Latu, defensive ends Gabriel Murphy and Grayson Murphy as well as linebacker Darius Muasau were all critical components of that aggressive defense.

All four moved on to earn roster spots in the NFL, and defensive coordinator D'Anton Lynn moved to USC, forcing UCLA's defense to rebuild.

"I feel like a lot of us are looked at as like a ragtag group just put together," defensive lineman Devin Aupiu told reporters during fall camp. "But it definitely adds a motivational factor for us to go get it and be our own players, be our own type of group and create the same pass rush, just in a different way."

The duality of Femi

Oladejo, also known as "Femi," is one of multiple players who could be shuffled around the field at different positions and has spent time learning how to play edge at the college level throughout fall camp.

He finished the 2023 season with 54 total tackles and recorded multiple tackles in every game except for one. His 6-foot-3, 250-pound frame moves around the field smoothly and fearlessly, but its his athleticism that allows him to oscillate between the linebacker and edge rusher.

His cheerful disposition helps, too.

Oladejo crashes into whatever is opposite of him with startling physicality, testing the seams of tackling dummies and the will of human opponents. Every tackle is a crescendo, but his attitude off the field is gentle.

"Right off the first approach, people are intimidated," Oladejo said. "But as I start speaking a few sentences, I see people kind of warm up a little bit more."

There's a video on social media of Oladejo rallying his team after a weight room workout, getting his teammates to chant, "Don't cheat yourself, treat yourself" with him. He's thoughtful and well-spoken with the media as well as his team, which has earned him respect ever since he transferred from Cal (Berkeley) ahead of the 2023 season.

Oladejo says he's always been a vocal person – a trait that was amplified when he shouted out directions as a power forward in basketball, which he played since he was 9 years old.

His positivity stems from his faith. His first name translates to "God loves me," his middle name is Moses and he had always attended church growing up, but his religious journey didn't truly begin until he was baptized in the Pacific Ocean while at Cal. He's now a signatory for Chosen Campus Ministry at UCLA.

"Faith isn't a feeling, it's a decision," he said. "It's based on what you do, so I started living it out. I've just been a cheerful guy, having a good spirit. Bringing good energy to people and just letting people know they can do it. It's believing in people, being a good person."

Pass-rushing as a team

Oladejo's infectious positivity is being spread to multiple position groups. His versatility could also improve his stock as a potential NFL draft pick. He's not the only one who will move around the field.

"We've got some great pieces," defensive line/outside linebackers coach Tony Washington Jr. said midway through fall camp.

"We're starting to figure out who can do what and moving some guys around a little bit, trying to figure out who can play with who, switching up the groupings. They're not always used to the same people next to them but overall I like how they've been responding."

While coaches have not indicated specific multi-position players aside from Oladejo, they have pointed out some driving forces of the defense. Washington said that defensive lineman Jay Toia is "a dog on the field" and defensive coordinator Ikaika Malloe believes the depth at linebacker will be an asset.

Kain Medrano, Ale Kaho, JonJon Vaughns and Carson Schwesinger are all returning linebackers with significant playing experience.

"Pass rush is an art that people overlook," Malloe said. "We pass rush as a team so everybody can learn the same thing and speak the same languages. If we can get better at that, then those fundamentals can transfer over to the team regardless of our scheme."

Oladejo's beautiful violence is a brushstroke in the art of the pass rush. The duality that's been shaped by his faith and revisiting the culture of Nigeria makes him one major piece of the UCLA defense.

CAL FOOTBALL: FEMI OLADEJO'S LEADERSHIP SKILLS FIRST BLOSSOMED IN AAU BASKETBALL

BY JEFF FARAUDO
SI.COM
APRIL 11, 2022

Cal coach Justin Wilcox calls sophomore inside linebacker Femi Oljadejo a natural leader. Those qualities first began to show themselves when Oladejo took up basketball as a 10-year-old.

Playing for his uncle on the Predators in an AAU league, Oladejo saw himself as a defensive player first, of course.

“I’m just a vocal person,” Oladejo recalled. “On a screen, `We’ve got to switch, switch, switch.’ Kind of the same thing applies to football.”

Oladejo, who grew up in Elk Grove, played in nine games as freshman last season, totaling 36 tackles and 2.5 tackles for loss. He is emerging as a likely starter along with Washington transfer Jackson Sirmon at a deep and important position on the Cal defense.

Providing leadership is part of the job description, as Oladejo sees it.

“Personally for me, being a leader in everything in life that’s kind of my mindset,” he said. “If I see something wrong, I’m going to correct it. If it’s right, I’m just going to say, `OK, we can do this a little bit better.’

“So overall, yes, I’m trying to become a leader. Just got to keep developing as an overall player.”

Wilcox says he’s liked everything he sees in Oladejo since he arrived on campus.

“His demeanor, first and foremost, is very, very impressive. He is a leader by nature,” Wilcox says in the video above. "The way he approaches everything, whether it’s meetings, practice, his workouts, his life off the field, he just has a very special way about him.

“On top of that, the physical tools that Femi has . . . he is a big, physical guy. He loves contact, he loves football. He’s going to get better and better the more he plays. And he played really good for us as a young guy last year. He’s just got a very high ceiling and he’s got the demeanor and attitude that you’re looking for at that position and just as a football player in general.”

Oladejo says his experiences last year have helped make him a more confident and fluid player. "I have a better feel for the playbook now, so I can just go play fast. I don’t have to think," he said.

He believes the Bears can be better than most onlookers will probably envision. “We expect to be a Pac-12 championship team," Oladejo said. "That’s what we’re working toward every single day.”

Inside linebacker is perhaps Cal’s best position, with Nate Rutchena, Muelu Iosefa and Trey Paster also very much in the mix.

Content is unavailable

“Everybody in that room can play football. It’s really a good group to compete with, grow with and to learn from,” Oladejo says in the video above. “Everybody in our group is connected. There’s no hatred toward one another, no envy, nothing. It’s just all love in there. It’s a great room.”

The newcomer is Sirmon, whose 92 tackles last season at UW are the second-most among any returning Pac-12 player. He is the son of Cal defensive coordinator and inside linebackers coach Peter Sirmon, but Oladejo says it’s been obvious since he arrived that Jackson Sirmon will be an asset to the Bears.

“The first week or two I was in the weight room with Jackson, I just knew he was a worker. That caught my attention. I just knew from there it was going to be all good,” Oladejo said. “Jackson’s also a leader. He’s a great guy.”

Because the Bears have more talent at inside linebacker than outside, Wilcox said it’s possible one or more players could switch positions. That hasn’t happened yet, and it’s unlikely to be the 6-foot-3, 250-pound Oladejo.

“Right now we’re really focusing on keeping Femi at inside linebacker,” Wilcox said. “We feel he has the ability and the instincts and the demeanor to be a very, very good inside linebacker.”

Oladejo also says he can play some hoops. He and several of his teammates will sometimes venture over to Haas Pavilion or the RSF to play some casual pickup ball.

He views himself as one of the team’s better players. “I can get some buckets, too, coach.”

The football team’s best basketball player?

“Believe it or not, Robby (Rowell) can hoop. Quarterback Robby,” Oladejo said of the 6-2 redshirt senior walk-on who played three years of varsity basketball at Acalanes High in the East Bay. “He has a shot on him. Robby can hoop, for sure. He might be No. 1 on the team.”

Oladejo’s full name is Oluwafemi Moses Oladejo, and he explains in the video below the evolution of how he’s asked to be addressed over the years.

FORMER YSU RECEIVER OLIVER MAKES HIS MARK AS A ROOKIE

BY NEEL MADHAVAN
THE VINDICATOR
FEBRUARY 8, 2025

Tennessee Titans wide receiver Bryce Oliver (80) is tackled by Minnesota Vikings cornerback Shaquill Griffin (1) after catching a pass during the second half of an NFL football game, Sunday, Nov. 17, 2024, in Nashville, Tenn. (AP Photo/John Amis)

After a record-breaking final season at Youngstown State in 2023, Bryce Oliver went to work in pursuit of a long-time dream — a career in the NFL.

Despite going undrafted in the 2024 NFL Draft, the Penguins alum was offered an undrafted free agent contract with the Tennessee Titans and he made the most of his opportunity, having just completed his first season in the league.

“It’s a blessing, man. It’s a blessing just to be able to get those reps under your belt and just to see how the game is played, to see how guys operate and how guys play, and to get the whole flow of the game down,” Oliver said in a phone interview. “When I come back for OTAs next year, God willing, it’ll be nothing unfamiliar. I’ll have multiple game reps under my belt, so I won’t be shocked by anything I see. I’ll be a little more seasoned than I came in last year.”

Oliver had his options after the draft, receiving UDFA offers from the Dallas Cowboys, Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the New England Patriots, in addition to the Titans.

But for him, the Titans stood out because of the veteran receivers that the team had at the time, including Calvin Ridley and DeAndre Hopkins, and due to his familiarity with the team’s former general manager Ran Carthon.

“I had guys I knew on the team already, with Calvin Ridley being another South Florida native I could look up to, then just being able to compete with guys like DeAndre who was here at the time,” Oliver said. “Being able to be led by those two leaders would be the ultimate blessing. That’s ultimately why I chose to come to Tennessee, because I wanted to be able to compete with the best of the best and be able to learn under those guys as well.”

After signing the deal with the Titans, Oliver reported to rookie minicamp in mid May, where he received his first taste of life in the NFL.

Organized team activities (OTAs) then progressed throughout the summer and culminated with mandatory minicamp in June, before training camp began at the end of July.

It was a whirlwind experience for Oliver, as he slowly began to acclimate himself to the next level.

“It was very difficult — it’s a big learning curve from college to being a professional,” Oliver said. “The playbook is tremendously bigger than my one in college, even though some of the terms and stuff are similar, the depth of the playbook is way more. The details are much more spot on. In the NFL, you have less room for error.”

While Oliver went through drills and received reps on offense at receiver, the Titans’ coaching staff also tried him out on special teams, despite not having had much experience there previously.

“It’s good to be uncomfortable,” Oliver said. “I put myself in very uncomfortable situations with doing some of the special teams stuff that I really wasn’t accustomed to doing when I was in college just because Coach (Doug Phillips) never really had me on special teams.”

By the end of training camp, Oliver had the chance to showcase himself during the Titans’ preseason.

In three preseason games, he had eight receptions for 90 yards and two touchdowns. In the final preseason game against the Saints, his 5-yard touchdown reception from quarterback Malik Willis in the final minutes proved to be the game-winner for the Titans.

But Oliver’s strong showing during the preseason games was just representative of how he had captured the attention of the coaches and scouts during camp.

He picked things up quickly, steadily improved and demonstrated consistency during camp to the point where he was right on the cusp of possibly earning a spot on the Titans’ 53-man final active roster, according to multiple media reports on the team’s training camp.

By the end of training camp and preseason, the waiting game for Oliver began.

“I was actually very nervous because I was one of the last people they brought in,” Oliver said. “So I was thinking the whole time that I had made the 53.”

On deadline day, the Titans waived Oliver, but almost immediately, they signed him to the practice squad.

“They called me in and told me to bring my iPad, so I was thinking the worst at that point,” Oliver said. “I felt like I played very well in the preseason games and was doing well in practices, so I wasn’t really mad. I was sure I had played well enough to at least make the practice squad.”

Oliver spent the first half of the season on the Titans’ practice squad, where he bided his time, waiting for his opportunity.

The day before Tennessee’s Week 9 game against the Patriots, Oliver finally got the call, as he was promoted to the Titans’ active roster.

“At that point, it was just all about taking advantage of my opportunity,” Oliver said. “I knew that most of my role was going to be on special teams, and I just tried to take pride in that. This is how I'm going to be able to stay on the 53-man roster."

Oliver spent the rest of the regular season on the Titans' active roster, hauling in six receptions for 95 yards and tallying five tackles and three kickoff returns for 113 yards on special teams.

"It's just about the opportunities you're given," Oliver said. "You want to use them all, you don't want to leave no stones unturned."

Now that his season is over, Oliver has already set his sights on trying to keep his place on Tennessee's 53-man roster for next season.

"Every year, I want to have the same approach I did when I was coming in as a rookie," Oliver said. "I want to make the 53-man roster. Ultimately, I want to have a pivotal role on this team, whether it's being on special teams or whether that's being a starter on offense as a receiver. It really doesn't matter, I just want to be able to contribute."

TONY POLLARD'S JOURNEY FROM FAMILY'S MEMPHIS BARBECUE JOINT TO TENNESSEE TITANS RUNNING BACK

BY PAUL SKRBINA
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
SEPTEMBER 25, 2024

MEMPHIS — Tony Pollard wasn't there.

Tony Pollard is always there.

Everywhere.

Arms outstretched, the first-year Tennessee Titans running back is on a poster on the wall to the left of the menu hanging behind the counter at Pollard's Bar-B-Q. Two words are spelled out in white.

WELCOME HOME

There he is a few feet to the right, in the window and next to it, on posters touting his college success at Memphis.

CHANGE THE GAME

PLAYER OF THE YEAR ALL-AMERICAN

Tarrance Pollard, Tony Pollard's father and the owner of Pollard's Bar-B-Q, and Terrion Pollard, Tony Pollard's brother and an employee at Pollard's Bar-B-Q, pose for a portrait at the counter in the family's restaurant in front of a poster celebrating Tony Pollard's return to Tennessee with him in his Titans uniform in Memphis, Tenn., on Friday, September 13, 2024.

There he is again, around the corner, framed and matted in black and Memphis blue, in a Commercial Appeal story with a larger-than-life headline.

A SPECIAL PLAYER

Add the entire wall dedicated to Tony Pollard inside the brick building with the red roof on 4560 Elvis Presley Blvd., and you get the point: Tarrance Pollard is proud of his son, who led the Titans with 82 yards and a touchdown on 16 carries during the team's season-opening loss to the Chicago Bears.

"I wish all of 'em could have been like Tony," he said.

The smell of the ribs he had started smoking was still stuck to his black T-shirt when he took a seat at a table near the front window.

"Truthful. Never got in no trouble," he continued.

'A stampede of kids trying to fight my brother'

Well, almost never.

Tony Pollard showed his moxie as a running back early — and out of necessity — all the way home from a friend's house.

He was there with his brother, Terrion. Most of the boys were much older than him.

"We were on a trampoline, jumping around and stuff," said Terrion, who helps run the family business with his father. "Tony hit some kid, busted his nose by accident."

The boy didn't take too kindly to it and went after Tony. So did a lot of the other boys.

"It was basically a stampede of kids trying to fight my brother," said Terrion, who played collegiately at Lane, an HBCU in Jackson, Tennessee. "I remember him running up the street, a line of guys chasing him. He ran back home so fast I couldn't even catch him."

Neither could anyone else.

His speed also came in handy one day in third grade after he returned home from school and thought the family's home had been robbed. Some cabinets had fallen off the wall and it looked "like chaos."

Tony panicked. Visions of the time his family's apartment was robbed danced in his head.

Tarrance, who was returning home, caught a glimpse of his son "running till he got almost clean off the two acres of land."

'He told me he wanted to run'

Once upon a time, Pollard was afraid of football.

He was 4 years old playing against older boys, some twice his age. Terrion, four years Tony's senior, was one of those kids.

"He's standing out there with his little uniform as I pull up to a practice," Tarrance said of Tony. "The coach had a line of dudes running, and Tony gets the tackle. He tackled maybe two or three of those little boys."

And then?

"And then the next one came," Tarrance continued. "Man, came and laid him out.

"Them eyes were really heavy with the water, but he wouldn't let it run out."

That day, Tony Pollard told his father he wanted to quit football.

The way Tarrance remembers it, Tony didn't play again until he was 8. Terrion remembers it differently, said Tony never quit.

Either way, Tony was a lineman by then, "a tackling machine."

"But he used to nag me all the time, told me he wanted to run," Tarrance said.

Tarrance "nagged" the coach. Tony eventually ran in practice. Tony eventually ran in a game.

He's been a running back since.

Derrick Henry helped convince Tony Pollard to play for Titans

How did Tony Pollard end up playing for the Tennessee Titans?

The man he's trying to help replace, Derrick Henry, had something to do with it.

Pollard and Henry, who signed a two-year deal with the Baltimore Ravens in March after eight seasons with the Titans, work out together in Dallas. That's where Pollard used to play for the Cowboys.

"Derrick let him know it's going to be real good in Tennessee," Tarrance said. "He told Tony it was great, he loved it in Tennessee."

Playing close to home was a consideration when the 6-foot, 209-pounder pondered where to sign. That's what he did in March, for three years and $21.75 million.

"That definitely went into my decision making," said Tony, who was picked by the Dallas Cowboys in the fourth round of the 2019 NFL Draft. "Just being close to family, having games so close to home so I can have a good home crowd coming out to support. Just coming where I was wanted."

'I was getting paid something'

Tony Pollard worked one summer at Pollard's Bar-B-Q, before his sophomore year at Memphis Melrose.

He helped ring up orders, cooked burgers and hot dogs and smoked sausage.

"I don't remember what I was getting paid," he said, pausing to try to recall. "But I was getting paid something."

Then football got in the way.

"I just got too heavily involved in football," Tony said.

'We think this is going to be his best year'

Tarrance Pollard learned how to cook barbecue from his grandfather, who worked at a packing house and helped raise him in Memphis.

He seared rabbit. He slaughtered cows. He made barbecue.

He began working at Gridley's Bar-B-Q in Memphis when he was 16. Two years later, he joined the Navy.

He began his business in a food truck in 1995. He moved to a small carryout location a year later and landed on Elvis Presley Boulevard in 2011. Four months later, the restaurant was featured on The Food Network's "Restaurant: Impossible," a show that helps renovate and reinvigorate eateries.

Tarrance feels right at home here. He thinks his son will feel right at home being so close to home with the Titans, for whom he hopes to cook barbecue the way he and Terrion once did for the Dallas Cowboys.

Tony Pollard has come full circle. The 2019 NFL Draft was held in Nashville.

"We think it's going to be his best year," Tarrance said.

WHY NEW TENNESSEE TITANS RB TONY POLLARD FEELS RIGHT AT HOME IN NASHVILLE

NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
JULY 31, 2024

Tennessee Titans fans leaned over the blue padded wall at Nissan Stadium and took turns screaming his name.

Tony! Tony! Tony! Tony!

A woman with a blue Titans flag. A young boy with a football. A young girl with a mini helmet. A boy with a powder blue Oilers jersey.

They all wanted the attention of new Titans running back Tony Pollard.

They got it.

Pollard obliged requests for autographs and fist bumps and selfies for more than 20 minutes Saturday after a Titans open practice, part of the team's "Back Together Weekend."

Shadowing him most of the time was his girlfriend, Kania Taylor, and their 1- and 3-year-old daughters.

Pollard, who grew up a Titans fan in Memphis, feels at home in Nashville after signing a three-year, $21.75 million free agent contract in March. His professional career was born in Nashville, too, where the 2019 NFL Draft was held, and the Dallas Cowboys picked him in the fourth round.

"That definitely went into my decision making," he said. "Just being close to family, having games so close to home so I can have a good home crowd coming out to support. Just coming where I was wanted."

Pollard, who spent the past five seasons with the Cowboys, had just finished posing for pictures with his family in the end zone before he spoke.

Fans at Nissan were screaming Pollard's name earlier Saturday, too.

Quarterback Will Levis acquainted Pollard's hands with the football 40-some yards downfield and watched him run another 33 yards to the end zone, causing fans to rise to their feet in salute of the feat. Pollard had snagged the ball away from cornerback Roger McCreary's reach.

They cheered again when his last-second block in the backfield allowed a scrambling Levis to find a receiver downfield.

"That's a little showcase of what Tony's capable of," first-year Titans coach Brian Callahan said. "He runs routes and catches the ball like a receiver. He runs the ball as good as any running back."

Pollard was a receiver during his senior season at Melrose High School. With the Memphis Tigers, his receiving yards outdid his rushing yards 1,292 to 941. He also tied an FBS record with seven kick-return touchdowns.

"I love being able to show all of my ability on the field," he said. "I was more natural, more comfortable at running back but I was always good at open field."

Pollard was signed to try to help fill the void left by Derrick Henry. Pollard's contract makes him the 10th-highest paid running back in terms of average per year.

A little help from his friends

With Henry gone to the Baltimore Ravens, the load of the Titans' backfield has been left to the legs and hands of Pollard and Tyjae Spears.

They are similar backs who both can run and catch the ball.

Pollard, who topped the 1,000-yard mark the past two seasons and was given the franchise tag by the Cowboys last season, is used to sharing responsibilities.

He shared a backfield with Ezekiel Elliott for four seasons, during which he accumulated 3,621 rushing yards to go with 23 touchdowns. He also caught 176 passes for 1,319 yards and five touchdowns.

He shared time in the backfield with Darrell Henderson at Memphis, where Pollard is second all-time in all-purpose yards (4,860) and Henderson third (4,790).

How he and Spears will complement each other remains to be seen.

"That's a good question," Callahan said earlier during camp. "I think Tyjae's got a little bit different route-running ability. Tony, he's a smoother runner. They're both really explosive. Of all the groups that we have, I think those guys are the ones that are the most exciting for me."

CALKINS: TONY POLLARD A SPECIAL PLAYER FOR MEMPHIS

BY GEOFF CALKINS COMMERCIAL APPEAL OCTOBER 13, 2016

The sign looms over Elvis Presley Boulevard, just past Graceland itself. It's the kind of sign you'd see outside any barbecue joint, with individual block letters arrayed to spell out out the day's best deal.

"GO TIGERS," it says. "ASK FOR THE TONY POLLARD SPECIAL."

So, naturally, I did.

"It's chicken tenders, french fries and a drink," said Tarrance Pollard, the proprietor of Pollard's Bar-B-Que.

And when did Pollard's start offering the special?

Need a break? Play the USA TODAY Daily Crossword Puzzle.

"After Tony returned that kick," said Torria Pollard, wife of Tarrance. "We wanted to celebrate."

Tiger Football Mailbag: Memphis-Tulane, RBs and more

So celebrate they did. With the Tony Pollard Special. It gives a whole new meaning to fast food.

Memphis running back Tony Pollard — the son of Tarrance and Torria — ran about as fast as you can run for 95 yards and a touchdown against Temple at the Liberty Bowl.

He settled under the football, headed upfield, and ran straight toward his family at the other end of the stadium.

"There were uncles and cousins and a whole bunch of us in the stands," said Tarrance.

University of Memphis kickoff returner Tony Pollard runs back a 95-yard kickoff return against Temple during a 34-27 victory at Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium on Oct. 6, 2016. It was Memphis' first kickoff return for a touchdown since Nov. 9, 1996.

"They had to tell me to sit down," Torria said.

"He's always been good at scoring touchdowns," said Tarrance.

"It was special because he's from Memphis," said Torria. "It just means a little more."

And it does, doesn't it?

Hometown kid breaks homegrown streak.

Torria and Tarrance Pollard are the proud parents of University of Memphis football player Tony Pollard.

For 20 years, no Memphis Tiger managed to return a kickoff for a touchdown. The streak and the ignominy grew and grew.

Then the Tigers put a guy back there who got his start when he suited up for the Whitehaven Ravens at the age of four.

Then they put a guy back there who played his high school football at Melrose, less than two miles from the Liberty Bowl.

Then they put a guy back there who knew about the streak because he had been hearing about it for years, and took it personally.

"Me being from here, when they put me back there, I felt that it was only right that I had to break the streak," Pollard said. "Memphis gave me my first scholarship offer out of school.

And here, Pollard unspools his recruitment story, which may remind you of another recruitment story, the one that delivered Paxton Lynch.

Like Lynch, Pollard was overlooked because injuries kept him away from the field in high school. A broken ankle forced Pollard to miss most of his junior year. .

Analysis: Tigers' comeback over Temple a tone-setter

Like Lynch, Pollard drew the attention of Memphis coach Justin Fuente, who flipped on the tape, and was immediately intrigued by Pollard's raw tools.

Like Lynch, Pollard had a lot of new suitors late in the recruiting process — Mississippi State and Missouri came at him hard — but, again like Lynch, Pollard stuck with the school that had offered him first.

"He never wavered," said Memphis running back's coach Darrell Dickey. "He was true to his word."And then he showed up on campus, and the Memphis coaches realized they had a dilemma. Where to play the guy?

"When we put him at safety, we really liked him there," Dickey said. "When we put him at wide receiver, we really liked him there. When we putting him at running back, we really liked him there."

Fuente finally put Pollard at receiver for his redshirt season. But when Mike Norvell took over, that changed.

"We'll always be looking for guys who we can get the ball to in space and they'll make big plays," Dickey said. "Instead of making a decision, we said, `Let's see if he can learn both running back and receiver.' That's what he's doing now."

Pollard spends most of his time at practice with the running backs, but he's gotten more snaps as a slot receiver in games. He's already blocked a punt, returned a kickoff for a touchdown, rushed for a touchdown and caught a touchdown pass.

A wall at Pollard's Restaurant showcasing the athletic achievements of Tony Pollard is updated with new art.

Thus, the question for the Memphis coaches becomes: Is it clear what Pollard will be in two years?

“Yes,” said Dickey. “An unbelievable weapon. He can line up in the backfield and be a Division 1 legitimate running back. And, without substituting, he can be out there at receiver and be a legitimate Division 1 wide receiver. He’s going to be a matchup nightmare.”

So it should be fun, watching Pollard — who is still just 19 — develop over these next few seasons. His parents have some idea what to expect.

“We used to promise to get him a treat after he scored a touchdown,” Tarrance said. “I thought he’d want to go to McDonald’s or someplace like that. But he wanted to go to Houston’s and get a big steak. He scored so many touchdowns, we had to change the rules after that.”

Now it’s chicken tenders, french fries and a drink. Which you, too, can buy for just $7.50!

“Just order the Tony Pollard special,” said the proud father.

"Special" being the operative word.

'JUST GO GET THE BALL:' CALVIN RIDLEY, CAM WARD START CARVING OUT TITANS CONNECTION

PAULKUHARSKY.COM
JUNE 3, 2025

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Before the Titans dug into the meaty part of Tuesday's practice, when five targets were breaking formation and spreading themselves out, Cam Ward launched a deep ball for Calvin Ridley that settled perfectly into his top receiver's arms as he crossed into the end zone.

It did not mean a lot, but the moment made me think of all of the struggles Ridley had getting timed up with Will Levis last year as they were getting to know each other, and in a small way, I saw some promise in it.

For Ward to have the rookie season Tennessee is hoping for, the Ward-Ridley connection will have to be more reliable, more often, and sooner, so the receiver who was a big free-agent acquisition from Jacksonville a year ago can go beyond the 64 catches for 1,017 yards and four touchdowns he collected in 2024.

That was a solid season, but consider what it might have been if Ridley started better. In the Titans' first six games, he pulled in just 12 of 36 targets for 183 yards and one score.

He said he sees lessons in last year's slow connection with his quarterback that will benefit him now with Ward.

"Just go harder," he said. "Just go get the ball. I'm telling myself, 'If he throws the shit, go get the ball Rid, man.' Be the way you need to be, be healthy, take care of your body and just be on point so there is none of that. … I want to be in the spot where he wants me. 'What do I need to do to make you feel better?' He's easy to relate to, fun. I just like him."

Ridley said a quarterback can't be an overthinker or a jittery guy, and Ward's calm makes it clear he's not that.

"You've got to have that 'Fuck-it' mentality, Ridley said, "and he's kind of got that."

Ward had previously praised Ridley for being a pro and one of the most experienced players on the team.

In a seating scramble in the locker room, it was no accident that Brian Callahan put Ward between Ridley and Lloyd Cushenberry, the center with whom he'll have to make regular clean exchanges.

Again, this week, after an open practice, the young quarterback was raving about his most skilled receiver.

"That man's a dog," he said. "He can win versus press-man, he knows zone, I think he's one of the top five receivers in the NFL if not the best. I'm blessed to play with him. He's going to make me look good every chance I get to throw the ball to him."

I had Ward as 11-for-20 in seven-on-seven and team periods, suffering from two drops and one play where there was a major miscommunication, as no one was near his throw.

As I felt the two other times I've seen him, he was OK, fine, but there was nothing dazzling going on.

And for what he had going with Ridley, that early deep ball was a nice moment.

But there is work, of course.

He hit him once mid-range over the middle.

Later, they held a quick chat about positioning, with Ridley walking Ward to a spot, showing him something about the specifics of where he would be and the movement there. They agreed on the point and slapped hands.

In the middle of three late snaps of third and long, Ward overthrew Ridley who was one-on-one up the left side with safety Mike Brown.

And then on Ward's final throw of the practice, after Thomas Odukoya had dropped one, Ward threw one far enough behind Ridley that it was hard to call it a drop when Ridley couldn't turn his hip enough to get his hands back to it.

Ridley's brought a new training device to practice this year, a weighted football that Tyke Tolbert throws to him when he's alone (or working with Tyler Lockett) during special teams periods. But he's got all the receivers giving it a shift and working with it at other times.

"It's just a way to make the ball lighter, the actually ball is like a feather then, you just pluck it out of the air," Ridley said.

Ridley said Evan Engram had it when they were teammates in Jacksonville.

NEW TITANS WR CALVIN RIDLEY HAS A NEW TEAM AND PLENTY OF MOTIVATION

BY JIM WYATT

MARCH 15, 2024

NASHVILLE – Calvin Ridley has a new team, and plenty of motivation.

Ridley, who officially signed a lucrative, multi-year contract with the Titans this morning, said he's ready to go.

"This is my first day, and I'm learning what it is to be a Titan," Ridley said at a Friday morning press conference. "But it's amazing, man. This is my third team. They gave me some years here, so I am excited to show my talent and my skills and learn the city and learn the fans. Honestly, I am overwhelmed."

A first-round pick of the Falcons in the 2018 NFL Draft who jumpstarted his career last season with the Jaguars, Ridley agreed to terms with the Titans earlier in the week after drawing interest from a number of teams.

Ridley said he's looking forward to a new start.

He knows he has something to prove.

"I do listen to some of the stuff," Ridley said, "just to give me a boost to go out there and play well."

During his five-year NFL career, Ridley (6-1, 190) has totaled 4,358 yards and 36 touchdowns on 324 receptions while playing in Atlanta (2018-22) and Jacksonville (2023).

Last year for the Jaguars, Ridley recorded 76 receptions for 1,016 yards and eight touchdowns. He registered four of his 15 career 100-yard performances in 2023.

"I'm a good player," Ridley said. "I am the type of player who deserves this contract, I am going to say that. I am the type of player you want in the building, someone who is going to work for your organization. … (The Titans) got a player who is going to come in and work for whatever ya'll gave me. Ya'll got a player."

Selected 26th overall by the Falcons in the 2018 NFL Draft, Ridley got off to a great start in his first three NFL seasons, recording 1,374 yards and nine touchdowns on 90 catches during the best season of his NFL career in 2020 after posting 60-plus catch and 800-plus receiving yards seasons in 2018 and 2019.

After a shortened 2021 season, Ridley was acquired by the Jaguars in a trade with the Falcons while he was suspended for the 2022 season for a violation of the league's gambling policy.

Then came the 2023 season, which helped change the course of his career.

Ridley wants to change the recent fate of the Titans as well.

"I want to bring this team through the roof," Ridley said, "and do everything I can to help. From now on, I'm only going up, because my work ethic is good. I am going to put the work in to be good. I am only going up from here. I am ready to take off."

BROTHERS CALVIN RILEY RIDLEY GIVE BACK TO SOUTH FLORIDA PROGRAM THAT HELPED THEM IN THEIR YOUTH

BY DAVID FURONES
SOUTH FLORIDA SUN SENTINEL
JULY 13, 2019

For every career milestone Calvin Ridley has reached, younger brother Riley Ridley has been right behind him to achieve it a year later.

A year after Calvin went off to college at Alabama out of Monarch High, Riley went to Georgia – but from Deerfield Beach High. After Calvin was selected in the 2018 NFL draft by the Atlanta Falcons following a three-year college career, Riley did the same, going to the Chicago Bears in the past draft.

The similarities don't stop with football milestones.

After Calvin Ridley hosted his inaugural charity bowling event last summer benefiting TUFF Start, a nonprofit organization that helps underprivileged youths in Broward County, Riley Ridley on Friday night at AMF Margate Lanes made it a joint effort. The two combined to put on the second-annual "Bowling for the Boys," a night of fun for kids currently in the same program that helped the Ridleys when they were younger.

"I [saw] what my brother did last year, and it was a really cool thing," said Riley Ridley, who heads into his rookie NFL season after going to the Bears at pick No. 126, a fourth-round selection. "It was just to give back to the community, give hope to the young kids and just come show face and have fun with younger guys that we were in their shoes at one point."

"I'm very proud of him," said Calvin Ridley, who had 64 receptions for 821 yards and 10 touchdowns as a rookie. "Just happy he's here with me and makes it more fun for him to be here and for us to enjoy this."

Zack Rehman, who started TUFF Start in 2012 by offering free training sessions to kids at an open field in Margate and has now grown it into an organization that has its own facility and nearly 500 members, recalls the Ridleys being some of those initial participants.

"It's awesome to have both of them come back," Rehman said. "Our youth is important to us because it's our future. I know they see it, they believe it. … [The kids] are able to see, talk and touch somebody that's on TV and a superstar in the NFL. It's amazing for them."

Calvin Ridley and Riley Ridley, a Deerfield Beach alum who played at Monarch while his brother was there, added a youth football camp and 7-on-7 tournament at Fort Lauderdale's Joseph C. Carter Park on Saturday to this year's installment. Along with them at Saturday's camp: Bears safety Eddie Jackson, who is a Boyd Anderson product.

Having Jackson in Chicago has helped Riley Ridley during organized team activities and minicamp this offseason.

"Eddie's a local guy from around here, so it's respect," Riley said. "It's competition and we do what we got to do."

For Calvin, he looks to expand on a standout rookie season.

"I just really need to relax," he said. "I'm more relaxed right now. I know the playbook pretty good. I know what's pretty much coming."

And having Calvin's rookie season to aspire to, Riley heads in motivated.

"He sets a high standard and you just want to always try to compete the best you can, but when you have a brother that's doing good, you just want to keep things going," Riley said.

TUFF Start looks to provide a combination of athletic training, tutoring and opportunities for children to enhance their reading, art and music skills among much else.

"We're just trying to take up their time, trying to make sure they don't have that idle time out there in the streets, running around unsupervised," Rehman said. "For them, it was football, but for other kids, maybe it could be being a teacher, a motivator, being the next President of the United States."

THE RIDLEY BROTHERS: SEC STARS MAKING MOMMA PROUD

BY WALTER VILLA
SATURDAY DOWN SOUTH
2016

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. – It can now be revealed.

The secret as to where Alabama wide receiver Calvin Ridley, a projected first-round pick in 2018, and Georgia wide receiver Riley Ridley, his talented younger brother, got their abilities is simple.

The answer is Kay Daniels, their 49-year-old stay-at-home single mother.

“When the boys were coming up, I used to run with them and throw footballs with them,” said Daniels, who has two other, younger sons who are not big-time athletes. “I wanted to make them stronger.

“Football, basketball, track – those are (usually) men’s things. But I was a single parent. I felt I had to go out there and teach them. I wanted to keep them active.”

Daniels said she was a track star at Fort Lauderdale High, running the 100 and 200 and doing the long jump, among other events.

“I didn’t go to college – that’s where I messed up,” Daniels said. “I was supposed to be in the Olympics because I could run fast – I’m serious. That’s where the boys get their speed.”

Daniels said her mother, Dorothy, was a prep basketball player in South Carolina.

Calvin and Riley’s biological father was Colin Ridley.

“He was deported to Guyana when Calvin was 7,” Daniels said. “They never saw him again.”

It all began at Sunland

When Calvin was in middle school, he and his brother began playing football at Sunland Park in Fort Lauderdale.

At their side was their cousin Shawn Burgess-Becker. And soon enough, they met another outstanding young athlete, Ronnie Hoggins.

All four ended up at Monarch High School in Coconut Creek, one of many small cities that essentially are an extension of Fort Lauderdale. And all four became Division I college football players.

Calvin started his career as a freshman at Fort Lauderdale Dillard and played as a sophomore at Hollywood Chaminade.

But when he transferred to Monarch, he and Riley joined forces with Burgess-Becker, a defensive back/wide receiver who would later sign with Alabama before transferring to Central Florida, and Hoggins, a defensive back/running back now at South Florida.

Monarch also had a young Jerry Jeudy, now a star senior wide receiver at Deerfield Beach and another Alabama recruit.

“Somebody’s gonna be in trouble,” Hoggins said when asked for his reaction when he heard Calvin and Riley had arrived at Monarch. “They couldn’t stop us.”

Indeed, that 2013 Monarch team, during Calvin’s junior season, went 8-3 and made the state playoffs for the first time in program history. They were only stopped, Hoggins said, because Monarch lacked enough talent “in the trenches.”

Hoggins said he covered Calvin in practice every day. Once he got to college, Hoggins said there were no big surprises. He had already spent countless hours trying to stay with a fast, elusive, college-level wide receiver.

“Steel sharpens steel – we both benefitted from each other,” Hoggins said. “Calvin is explosive. But the biggest thing about him is that he’s always wanting to get better, learning how to run routes and how to get open.”

Riley, meanwhile, was bigger than Calvin and played to his strengths.

“Riley was our possession receiver,” Hoggins said. “If we needed a catch on third down, and coverage was tight, we could go to Riley.

“Don’t get me wrong: Riley could stretch the field, also, like his brother. But he was our ‘first down’ guy.”

Hoggins said Calvin is more outgoing than Riley. If you were to spend an entire day with Calvin, Hoggins said, you would be laughing 24 hours straight.

But there is at least one thing Calvin is very serious about – and that’s his younger brother.

“Seeing them together, you could always tell who was the older brother,” Hoggins said. “Riley has always looked up to Calvin like a father figure.”

How Bama found Calvin Ridley

With their biological father out of the picture, it was only natural that Calvin served as a father figure for Riley.

But who was Calvin’s male role model?

The answer has been Calvin Davis, who coached the brothers at Monarch.

Davis met Calvin in January of the youngster’s sophomore year. Calvin had just transferred from Chaminade, where he had grown disenchanted with his “touches,” Davis said.

Offering to help, Davis put together a highlight film of some of Calvin’s best plays at Chaminade, and that was enough for the youngster to get his first college scholarship offer, from Louisville.

When Calvin finally got on the field for Davis as a Monarch junior, it only took three games before his tape caught fire with college scouts.

Alabama had heard about Calvin from his cousin, Burgess-Becker. The Crimson Tide coaches checked the tape and quickly became Calvin's second scholarship offer.

After that, it was on.

"Within hours," Davis said, "LSU, Tennessee, Miami and Florida State all came through with offers.

"Calvin remained humble. He was the same funny have-fun kid when he had one offer that he was when he had 50."

Despite the small sample size of production, Alabama coach Nick Saban and his main South Florida recruiter, Mario Cristobal, were correct about Calvin, who went on to earn a five-star ranking and a designation as the No. 1 prep wide receiver in the nation.

Calvin caught 41 passes for 1,131 yards and 12 touchdowns as a junior at Monarch. He also picked off three passes as a defensive back that season.

But because Calvin turned 19 during his senior year, he was ruled ineligible – as per Florida high school rules – for the second half of the season.

Instead of playing, Calvin spent the rest of the season as an unofficial Monarch assistant coach, passing his knowledge on to his brother and the rest of the wide receivers.

Calvin also played in the season-ending Under Armour All-America Game. He went on to set the Alabama freshman record with 1,045 yards. He also caught 89 passes, the second-most ever by a freshman among all FBS schools.

That surprised nobody who saw him at Monarch.

Riley Ridley: Out of the shadows

While Calvin was dominating the SEC, Riley – who previously went by his first name, Cavin – was being heavily recruited on a national basis.

Riley had a breakout junior season, catching 25 passes for 586 yards and six touchdowns.

But Riley was seemingly stuck in his brother's shadow. Where Calvin was a Miami Herald first-team All-Broward County selection as a junior, Riley never got the same recognition. Riley made third-team as a junior and second-team as a senior.

Nationally, it was the same story. Where Calvin had been ranked the No. 1 wide receiver in the nation as a five-star recruit, Riley was a solid four-star player in the eyes of the media. 247Sports.com's composite ranked Riley the No. 234 player in the 2016 class, the No. 46 receiver. He was No. 35 in his own state.

College coaches, though, seemed to hold Riley in higher esteem. He was heavily recruited during his senior year, and his mother wanted him to join Calvin at Alabama.

But that's not what Riley wanted.

"Riley didn't want to follow in his brother's footsteps," Hoggins said. "He wanted to make a name for himself. He didn't want to be known as Calvin's little brother. He wanted to be known as Riley Ridley."

That's why Riley chose South Carolina, at least initially, picking the Gamecocks on Jan. 2, 2016.

But that's when things got crazy.

On Jan. 4, he backed out of his South Carolina commitment.

On Jan. 6, he took a trip to Georgia.

On Jan. 7, he committed to Georgia.

And on Jan. 11, he made it official, taking his first classes as a member of the Georgia Bulldogs.

New Georgia coach Kirby Smart, a former defensive coordinator at Alabama, told media members that Calvin Ridley persuaded his younger brother to switch to Georgia.

"His brother was very adamant that Riley come here," Smart said this past spring. "I don't know why. He just wanted him here."

Making their mark in the SEC

Daniels said she has had no communication with the Georgia coaching staff.

Alabama, on the other hand, is very familiar with Daniels.

"Coach Saban, he is a blessing from God," Daniels said. "He is a serious man, a wonderful man. He made my son who he is today.

"He makes boys into men. He is like a father to my son, teaching him how to be a respectful young man, teaching him how to pray. Coach Saban is a praying man."

Daniels said Saban, Cristobal and all the Alabama coaches give her hugs before and after every game.

"The Alabama coaches, when they tell you something, their word is their word," Daniels said. "They told me they were going to take care of Calvin, and they have, 100 percent."

Daniels said she makes one road trip per week, flying or driving to one of her son's games on a rotating basis.

This Saturday, she plans to be rooting for Riley in Athens, where Georgia plays host to Auburn.

So far, Riley has been slowed by surgery on a broken right thumb, an injury he suffered on Sept. 10 against Nicholls State, and then a sprained left ankle he suffered two weeks ago against Florida.

Since coming back from the thumb injury, Riley has been solid, catching two catches for 59 yards and one touchdown against Tennessee on Oct. 1, five catches for 67 yards against Vanderbilt on Oct.

15 and one catch for a 14-yard touchdown vs. Florida.

That's it – that's the extent of his freshman numbers, a vast difference between him and his brother's monster 2015 numbers.

Riley's ankle injury is not believed to be serious, And when he's healthy, Riley, a 6-2, 197-pounder, has proven to be a willing blocker, according to Smart.

"That's not normal for a wide receiver," Smart told media members in the spring. "Riley sticks his face in there. He is a South Florida kid. He's not afraid to block. He competes."

Calvin, of course, is highly competitive, too.

He showed it again Oct. 1, when he had a season-high 11 catches for 174 yards and two touchdowns in a 34-6 win over Kentucky.

Despite virtually eternal double coverage, Calvin, a 6-1, 190-pounder, leads Alabama with 45 catches for 527 yards and five touchdowns. He is also dealing with a knee injury that has him listed as questionable for Saturday's game vs. Mississippi State.

Sights set on the NFL

That slight injury is not nearly enough, however, to slow predictions that have Calvin leaving school after his junior season to enter the NFL Draft.

Lance Zierlein, an analyst for NFL.com, wrote recently that Calvin is "Amari Cooper 2.0, except faster."

The reference to the current Oakland Raiders star wide receiver is a comparison many others have drawn. That's because Cooper has made a similar journey to what is being projected for Calvin – from a South Florida high school to Alabama to a first-round draft pick in the NFL.

Zierlein said Calvin is the most talented receiver in the nation, even though he is not draft eligible until 2018.

"With exceptional play speed, elite separation ability and advanced instincts as a receiver," Zierlein wrote, "Ridley simply needs someone to get him the ball."

Davis, who coached the Ridley brothers in high school, said Riley is not as much in Calvin's shadow as one might think.

But that remains to be seen.

For now, there is a significant gap in production between them.

"Riley is more physically imposing and probably stronger than Calvin," Davis said. "Calvin is more of a deep threat. His speed and work ethic are what separate him. He is just so must faster than anybody else. The first time we ever threw him the ball in high school, he went 70 yards with a short slant pattern."

Davis also remembers the last time Monarch threw to Calvin.

With the age limit, everyone knew the game against Piper would Calvin's last. On the final play, Davis called "65 back-side post," where the quarterback rolled to his left and threw it up to Calvin in the middle of the field.

"It went for a 40-yard touchdown," Davis said. "It was the perfect way to end his high school career."

When and how his college career ends remains to be seen, but there is no question that Calvin's draft prospects are delightful to Daniels, who calls herself a "proud super mom."

She had never been on an airplane until she started going to Calvin's games last year. Now she's a pro at flying, securing that window seat whenever possible.

Daniels foresees an easier life ahead.

"It's been hard raising four boys into young men as a single mom," Daniels said. "I've asked God to help us through life. Calvin said he's going to buy 'Momma' a big house with five bedrooms and five master bathrooms and a three-car garage.

"He and Riley are going to put their money together after they make the NFL," she said. "They are determined."

"THAT WAS FOR TIM": BLOCKED PUNT IN CLEVELAND GIVES TITANS ANOTHER REASON TO CELEBRATE TIM SHAW

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
DECEMBER 8, 2025

NASHVILLE – Not long after Sunday's win over the Browns, Titans interim head coach Mike McCoy stood in front of players in a celebratory locker room and rattled off highlights from the team's 31-29 win.

When he mentioned the franchise's first blocked punt since 2012, a number of Titans immediately put their arms together to make a T.

It was for Tim Shaw.

"That was for Tim," Titans linebacker James Williams Sr. said of the blocked punt against the Browns. "That ball is for him. It's a blessing to do that for somebody like Tim, who comes out every day and coaches us no matter what."

In the fourth quarter against the Browns, it was Williams who blocked a punt by Browns punter Corey Bojorquez.

It was the first time the Titans had blocked a punt since Tim Shaw recorded one against Pittsburgh on Oct. 11, 2012.

Titans special teams coordinator John Fassell had been preaching to players to "Change the Date" on the blocked punt, and on Sunday the Titans made that happen.

It was extra special because of Shaw, a former Titans linebacker who has been an inspiration to this Titans team, and many others, for his courage and determination while battling ALS – and helping the team on a weekly basis.

Shaw, who played from 2010-12 with the Titans, was diagnosed with ALS in 2014, not long after his six-year playing career ended. In addition to the Titans, Shaw also played for the Panthers, Jaguars and Bears.

Despite his diagnosis, Shaw continues to be a frequent visitor to Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park, in his wheelchair, where he's been a part of special teams meetings, and provided tips to players. Shaw still has a locker in the team's locker room.

"We do celebrate Timmy Shaw," Fassel said. "And Timmy Shaw is a huge part of what we do on special teams, and being a part of the meetings. He writes up post-game reports for all the players. We keep telling Timmy: Someday, you're not going to be the last one to block a punt, but the second to last one."

That someday took place on Sunday in Cleveland, which gave Williams and the Titans even more reason to celebrate.

"We'd been preparing all year for this, waiting on the right opportunity, and it finally presented itself," Williams said. "(Tim) is always giving me pointers, and tips. (He'll tell me): Keep applying pressure, get vertical.

"He's going to love (seeing this), he might jump out of his chair, man, watch. That ball is for him. It's a blessing to do that for somebody like Tim, who comes out every day and coaches us no matter what. That was for Tim."

In 2016, the Titans signed Shaw as a "Titan for Life," an idea of then-Titans General Manager Jon Robinson.

Often referred to as Lou Gehrig's Disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis is a progressive neurodegenerative disease that affects nerve cells in the brain and spinal cord. According to the ALS Association, patients in the later stages of the disease may become totally paralyzed.

Shaw continues to help raise money while bringing awareness to people who wake up every day battling ALS.

"I was with Tim in Carolina, when he came out of college," McCoy said of Shaw. "It is unbelievable for him to be out here every single day, supporting everybody. Everybody loves having him around. … It is unbelievable to have him here every single day. He is in meetings, and he is out at practice. It is great to have him around with us."

TITANS DT JEFFERY SIMMONS, RETURNER CHIMERE DIKE NAMED TO 2026 PRO BOWL ROSTER

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
DECEMBER 23, 2025

NASHVILLE – A Titans veteran and a Titans rookie have been recognized for their exemplary seasons.

The rosters for the 2026 Pro Bowl Games were announced on Tuesday, and defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons and rookie returner Chimere Dike have been named to the AFC's roster.

The players were informed of the news during a team meeting this morning at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park.

It's the fourth time Simmons has been named a Pro Bowler, after also earning spots in 2021, 2022 and 2024.

Dike is the franchise's sixth rookie to be named to the Pro Bowl since the 1970 NFL-AFL merger and the first since returner Marc Mariani in 2010. The others to do so were running back Earl Campbell (1978), defensive end Jevon Kearse (1999), quarterback Vince Young (2006) and running back Chris Johnson (2008).

Player selections for the AFC and NFC rosters for the Pro Bowl Games were determined by the consensus votes of fans, players and coaches, with each group's vote counting as one-third toward determining the all-star players who will be selected to this year's Pro Bowl Games.

Simmons and Dike each finished first in the AFC at their respective positions in the fan voting.

It's been a monster year for Simmons, who leads the team with nine sacks while also recording 54 quarterback pressures, 58 tackles, 16 tackles for a loss, three passes defensed and two forced fumbles.

A first-round pick of the Titans in the 2019 NFL Draft, Simmons now has 40.5 sacks in his career, making him the franchise's 12th player to reach 40 sacks and the fifth player to do so in the organization's "Titans era" (1999 to present).

It's been a do-it-all season for Simmons, who caught a touchdown pass from quarterback Cam Ward in the team's game vs the 49ers on December 14, and he also recorded a safety in this past Sunday's win over the Chiefs.

Simmons is the only defensive tackle since at least 2000 to record both a safety and an offensive touchdown in the same season.

Earlier this month, Simmons was named as the team's nominee for the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year award.

It's been a breakout year for Dike, who on Sunday became just the fourth rookie in NFL history to record at least four receiving touchdowns and two punt return touchdowns, joining Tyreek Hill (2016), Dez Bryant (2010), and Eddie Kennison (1996).

As a rookie, Dike leads the league in all-purpose yards (2,269), kickoff returns (60), kickoff return yards (1,535) and yards per punt return (18.2). He is tied for 12th with 21 punt returns and ranks third in punt return yards with 382. He is one-of-five players this season to record two punt return touchdowns.

Dike also joined A.J. Brown (nine touchdowns in 2019), Chris Johnson (10 in 2008) and Vince Young (seven in 2006) as the only franchise rookies since the start of the 1999 season with at least six total touchdowns.

With a league-high 1,535 kickoff return yards in 2025, Dike moved past Mariani (1,530 in 2010) to set the record for the highest single-season total in franchise history. Dike's 1,535 kickoff return yards are the most in the NFL in a season since Arizona's LaRod Stephens-Howling had 1,548 in 2010.

For the first time, the 2026 Pro Bowl Games will move to Super Bowl LX Week in the San Francisco Bay Area. The event brings the league's top players together for an AFC vs. NFC flag football showdown, coached by Pro Football Hall of Famers Jerry Rice (NFC) and Steve Young (AFC), which will preview the elite athleticism and competition of the sport ahead of its LA28 Olympics debut.

The televised event will air live from San Francisco's Moscone Center on Tuesday, Feb. 3. Coverage of the Pro Bowl Games powered by Verizon will begin on ESPN starting at 5:30 p.m. CT with the flag game at 7 p.m. CT. The game will air on ESPN, Disney XD and ESPN Deportes.

NICE SURPRISE: JEFFERY SIMMONS NAMED TITANS' NOMINEE FOR WALTER PAYTON NFL MAN OF THE YEAR AWARD FOR THE THIRD YEAR IN A ROW, AND JELLY ROLL DELIVERED THE NEWS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
DECEMBER 4, 2025

NASHVILLE – Surrounded by kids at a football camp he hosted last week, Jeffery Simmons provided the perfect example of an NFL player giving back in his community.

Since joining the Titans in 2019, the defensive tackle has built a strong reputation for his off-field work, when he's spread his time, and wealth.

"Everything I do," Simmons explained. "I do it from the heart. And I enjoy doing what I do."

On this day, Simmons had no idea he was going to be surprised by his good friend, Jelly Roll.

As Simmons was speaking, the country music star came up from behind to surprise him with a hug, a trophy, and some big news: Simmons was the team's nominee for the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year award for the third year in a row.

The campers on hand, roughly 60 in all, cheered on the moment as Simmons wiped tears from his eyes.

"Now that was a good surprise," Simmons said with a smile. "I didn't expect Jelly here today, and I didn't expect this (award) honestly. There are so many guys on this team that do a lot of work. Guys are constantly in the community. For me to (named) three years in a row, that means so much honestly.

"I don't do this for the publicity, and the awards that come with it. But that means a lot, to be able to represent the Tennessee Titans. … Even the commissioner says, this award is probably one of the biggest awards in the NFL. And it just shows that no matter what is going on on the field, our community needs us."

Jelly Roll, a CMA and CMT Awards winner, a two-time Grammy nominee, and a longtime Titans fan, was happy to deliver the news.

And he's happy to be friends with Simmons, a three-time Pro-Bowler, and a five-time team captain.

"I almost cried with him," Jelly Roll said. "Jeff deserves this, but he doesn't do this for attention. He'll go do 100s of thousands of dollars of philanthropy and not tell a soul. When you do that much work in the dark, it has to feel a little good to be acknowledged in the light. And he deserves all the praise."

"Any time I can see Big Jeff, or surprise him, or hang with him. He has such a kindred spirit to mine."

Considered one of the league's most prestigious honors, the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year Award recognizes an NFL player for outstanding community service activities off the field, as well as excellence on the field.

As a nominee, Simmons will wear a Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year helmet decal through the end of the season in recognition of his accomplishments on and off the field.

All 32 nominees will be recognized for their achievements during the week leading up to the Super Bowl LX in the Bay Area. The winner of the 2025 Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year Award will be announced during NFL Honors, a primetime awards special to air nationally on FOX and the NFL Network on Thursday, February 5.

"The night we drafted Jeffery, he committed to making an impact on the Titans organization on and off the field," Titans controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk said. "We could not ask for a more dedicated and passionate player, which is why we are thrilled to announce Jeffery Simmons as our Walter Payton Man of the Year nominee for the third consecutive season. Jeffery has displayed tremendous leadership as a five-time team captain and continues to be a cornerstone for this team. As impressive as he is on the field, it is his unwavering commitment to positively impacting youth in both Nashville and in his hometown (in Mississippi) that earns him this honor. We are grateful for all he has done for the Titans and our community."

Since launching the Give Em A Reason Foundation in 2022, Simmons, raised by a single mother with five children, has consistently hosted a number of giveback initiatives as part of his non-profit's mission to serve others through youth empowerment and self-esteem-building opportunities.

Through his "Give Em a Reason" Foundation, Simmons hopes to offer kids from a similar background a reason to hope, reach, grow and never give up. Simmons hand selects the organizations who will benefit, and he goes beyond writing checks, he shows up. He sees the need for male role models and mentors, and he answers the call.

As part of the work with his foundation, Simmons has partnered with countless non-profits and community engagement programs around Nashville and his hometown of Macon, Miss., such as Big Brothers Big Sisters of Middle Tennessee, Rally on the Runway, Backfield in Motion, Seacrest Studios, MNPS HERO program, Fund Recovery, Reach Unlimited, Noxubee Titans, and the Nashville Juvenile Detention Center. In addition, he hosts an annual Thanksgiving turkey drive, Christmas shopping spree, youth football camp and community day in his hometown. Simmons remains committed to serving the youth and acting as a source of inspiration for those battling adversity. Whether it is a cancer diagnosis, poverty, incarceration, or any other obstacle,

Simmons wants to instill a belief of hope in the next generation.

"This franchise is known for giving," Jelly Roll said. "We've had a lot of givers, Derrick (Henry), Jurrell (Casey), we've had some legendary givers in this franchise. Jeff is a man who grew up with nothing in Macon, Mississippi, and he acts like it.

"But I always tell people there's two different versions of Jeff. There's the Jeff I see during the week, and I see him on FaceTime and he's all happy. And then there's the Jeff I see at the football games, and I don't recognize that guy. He is a killer man.

"(Jeff) is literally the most gentle giant, until he walks on the football field."

The Walter Payton Man of the Year award was established in 1970. It was renamed in 1999 after the late Hall of Fame Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton.

Fans are once again encouraged to participate in Nationwide's annual Charity Challenge, a social media and online contest that allows fans to show support for their favorite Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year club winner. Fans can vote on X/Twitter by posting #WPMOYChallenge along with the last name/X handle (Simmons/GrindSimmons94) of their chosen player or by voting directly on NFL.com/ManOfTheYear. The charitable beneficiary of the player who receives the most collective hashtag mentions and online votes will win an additional $35,000 donation from Nationwide, with the nonprofit partners of the runner-up and third-place finishers receiving $10,000 and $5,000, respectively. Charity Challenge voting takes place from Dec. 4 through Jan. 5, 2026.

A look at some of the highlights from Simmons, and his work in the community, just in the past year:

-During Thanksgiving week, Simmons, along with his Give Em a Reason Foundation, hosted an event for 60 students from the Martha O'Brien Center, ages K through 8th grade.

The camp tied into Give Em A Reason's focus on sports equity this season, by first hosting a fun, skills and drills football camp for the students, put on by Simmons and his teammates. Afterward, they split into groups and participated in a mental health talk and Q&A session, assisted by representatives from NAMI Davidson County. Following the session, students will be provided dinner catered by Hattie B's Hot Chicken, and all attendees will take home a turkey, collard greens, and mac and cheese from Hattie B's Hot Chicken.

-Simmons started a Sack for Sports Equity Campaign – an initiative aimed at eliminating the financial and logistical barriers to sports participation for students in Nashville experiencing housing instability. Simmons has pledged to donate $980 for every sack he records during the 2025 season. These funds will directly support students enrolled in the HERO Program, providing essentials like sports physicals, transportation, and essential sports gear like cleats or other personal items needed to play. He also donated new shoulder pads for the Maplewood High School football team.

-Simmons has hosted multiple events with Big Brothers Big Sisters of Middle Tennessee. This fall, Simmons hosted a fishing event for 15 BBBSMT matches, in which he taught everyone how to fish. He also took six local high school students in the BBBSMT program to Men's Warehouse where they were fitted for brand new suits as Simmons offered support as a friend and mentor.

-This year, Simmons partnered with the Fund Recovery and Reach United to "Tackle Overdoses Now" by installing vending machines that dispense free naloxone. Vending machines have already been installed in Jackson, Mississippi; Fentree County, Tennessee; and downtown Nashville, Tennessee, with plans to expand to other cities across the country. Simmons is lending his face and voice in effort to erase the stigma of carrying naloxone.

In his hometown, it was common for Simmons' peers to turn to drugs as something to do, thus preventing them from achieving their full potential. In an effort to reduce the number of youth who turn to drugs to begin with, Simmons, as part of his Give Em a Reason Foundation, has worked to create secondary prevention methods for the youth, in addition to providing free naloxone.

These methods include reviving the youth football and cheerleading teams, the Noxubee Titans in Mississippi, by providing a $50,000 donation and continued support in growing the programs. The funds helped participants afford uniforms, practice equipment and field maintenance. In addition, Simmons hosted his third annual Community Funday in his hometown of Macon, Mississippi, inviting neighbors to a block party that featured live entertainment, including a surprise performance by Jelly Roll, a wide array of food and apparel vendors, as well as water slides for families to enjoy. Simmons also hosted his annual free football camp in Starkville, Mississippi, which featured a record-high 600 campers this year.

Also, during the Thanksgiving season in 2024, Simmons hosted over 60 students from the non-profit Backfield in Motion to Nissan Stadium for a dinner of Hattie B's while treating the students to new Crocs and a turkey to take home for the holidays. In true team captain fashion, he recruited other members of the team to join him. It continued his streak of giving back during the holiday seasons.

In 2023, he fed more than 500 families by organizing a drive-thru turkey distribution event at Nissan Stadium.

For the past several Christmas seasons, Simmons has provided local kids in need with a shopping spree prior to the holiday.

Simmons has also served as the honorary chair for Rally on the Runway for the last two years, supporting a leading pediatric cancer research foundation. As honorary chair, Simmons recruits fellow Titans players to escort kids impacted by childhood cancer down the runway for a fashion show fundraiser. Over the last two years, the event has raised $984,837 towards fighting childhood cancer.

Simmons has also made it a priority to visit Seacrest Studio at Monroe Carell Jr. Children's Hospital at Vanderbilt multiple times throughout the years. While there, Simmons spends time answering patients' questions on a live broadcast and offering encouragement.

In addition to all of his community work through his foundation, Simmons continually shows up for Titans community activations, such as attending local high school football games for Titans Fireball Fridays and elementary schools for T-Rac School Shows, as well as NFL Flag Regional Tournaments.

Simmons also visited the Juvenile Detention Center, located next to Nissan Stadium, with Jelly Roll and other Titans players. He shared a meal with the young residents while engaging in conversations to provide hope, inspiration and encouragement for their futures.

TITANS DT JEFFERY SIMMONS LAUNCHES "SACKS FOR SPORTS EQUITY" INITIATIVE TO SUPPORT NASHVILLE STUDENTS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
SEPTEMBER 4, 2025

NASHVILLE – Titans defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons wants to make a difference on and off the field this season.

If things go according to plan, the two will work hand in hand.

This season, Simmons, who wears No. 98, is pledging $980 per sack to help "eliminate barriers preventing Metro Nashville Public School students in unstable housing from participating in school sports."

Simmons is teaming with up with Nashville nonprofit, Nashville Community Connections, and the MNPS' HERO Program, to launch "Sacks for Sports Equity," an initiative aimed at eliminating the financial and logistical barriers to sports participation for students in Nashville experiencing housing instability.

Through his Give Em a Reason Foundation, the $980 for every sack will directly support students enrolled in the HERO Program, providing essentials like sports physicals, transportation, and essential sports gear like cleats or other personal items needed to play.

"The way my foundation, and the way I try to implement it through the school system, I just want to create an opportunity to play sports, and that aligns with my foundation's mission by empowering youth with purpose," Simmons said. "And it provides an opportunity to be able to play the game, no matter what sport it is.

"My goal this year is to rack up some sacks this year, hopefully double digits. I want to push myself to the limit to get more sacks, and that will help (raise money)."

Simmons, a two-time Walter Payton Man of the Year nominee for the Titans for his work in the community, recorded five sacks last season, and he has 31.5 for his career. Simmons tallied a career high 8.5 sacks in 2021.

Fans will also have the opportunity to join Simmons by pledging a donation per sack or making a one-time donation through a secure online platform. Every contribution helps level the playing field for students who deserve a chance to play, compete, and belong.

"This is about more than sports—it's about connection, confidence, and community," said Catherine Knowles, Co-Founder of Nashville Community Connections and Director of the HERO Program. "When students are included in extracurriculars, they show up more, engage more, and thrive. Jeffery's commitment will open doors for so many."

As noted in a release from William Raymond Communications, students in unstable housing often miss out on sports due to cost and access, while participation in sports improves attendance, mental health, and academic performance. This initiative will work to ensure that every student has a reason–and a way–to play.

The program kicks off with the NFL season and will run throughout the year. For more information or to pledge, visit https://go.rallyup.com/reason2sack.

TWENTY POUNDS LIGHTER, TITANS DL JEFFERY SIMMONS COULD STILL BE SEEN – AND HEARD – IN HIS RETURN FOR MINICAMP

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 10, 2025

NASHVILLE – Big Jeffery Simmons is back.

The big defensive lineman could be seen – and heard – at Titans minicamp on Tuesday.

After training on his own in recent months, Simmons said he's hungry for more – after losing 20 pounds to prepare for the 2025 season.

"It feels great," Simmons said. "It's great to be back on the field with the guys, getting to work with the guys. It's not always an easy decision, making the decision not to be here (for OTAs) with your teammates, especially with a lot of new guys. … But I made that decision, it was a personal decision.

"But today was a good day, and I was glad to be back."

With teammates surrounding him, Simmons did some up-downs, a welcome back of sorts, after being away.

Titans defensive coordinator Dennard Wilson started that tradition last year, and Simmons knew he had to keep it going.

"Of course I haven't been here," Simmons said with a smile. "It took me a minute to catch my wind. I was like, I'm in shape, but (expletive), those up-downs, they hurt."

When practice started, Simmons looked good running to the ball.

He also exchanged words with rookie quarterback Cam Ward with what looked like playful banter.

"It was predetermined," Simmons said, smiling bigger. "I've been hearing how much smack he talks … and I saw him this past weekend and was like: I'm going to be talking smack to you, too. It's fun. … We went back and forth talking smack to each other and he was able to get back in the huddle and throw the ball down the field. That was the most impressive thing, not talking smack to me, but being able to get back in the huddle, get the plays to the guys, and still be able to operate the offense."

But make no mistake, Simmons is serious about being even better in 2025.

Simmons weighed in at 301 pounds, and he thinks the lighter weight will help him on the field.

"To get out here and put it to test," Simmons said of his lighter, 6-foot-4 frame. "I feel great, I feel light on my feet, and I still feel very explosive."

NFL STAR JEFFERY SIMMONS COMES HOME TO MACON FOR SECOND ANNUAL COMMUNITY FUN DAY

BY BENJAMIN ROSENBURG
COMMERCIAL DISPATCH
JULY 9, 2024

MACON — When Jeffery Simmons was growing up in Noxubee County, the youth football infrastructure was not exactly robust, despite a strong pipeline of players making it to the top levels of college football and even the NFL.

Now that Simmons has become arguably the most decorated player to ever come out of Noxubee County High, the Tennessee Titans' star defensive tackle has dedicated much of his time off the field to giving back to his hometown.

He was back home in Macon on Saturday for the second annual Jeffery Simmons Community Fun Day — featuring food, games, live music and fireworks — and he also spent time with the players in the Noxubee Titans youth football program he founded earlier this year. More than 120 boys and girls aged 5-12 are part of the Noxubee Titans, according to Simmons' business manager, Freddie Poindexter.

"At the end of the day, we have to be there for the kids," Simmons said. "This is about the kids and whatever we can do for the kids, promoting good behavior and whatever it may be to stay in school. When you've been through it, you've been there before, you don't want to go back. I don't want these kids to experience what I went through as a kid."

Simmons played for the Macon Broncos youth program before becoming a dominant force on the football field in high school, helping the Tigers win three MHSAA state championships. The top prospect in his class in Mississippi, Simmons had offers from Alabama, Ole Miss and plenty of other top programs, but he chose to remain close to home and play at Mississippi State.

In three years with the Bulldogs, Simmons racked up 32.5 tackles for loss. Even after tearing his ACL while training for the 2019 NFL Draft, Simmons was selected 19th overall by Tennessee, returning to the field midway through his rookie season. He became a true star in 2021, finishing with 8.5 sacks and making his first of back-to-back Pro Bowls.

Following his second Pro Bowl in 2022, Simmons signed a four-year contract extension with the Titans worth $94 million, and he has spent a good chunk of that money helping kids back in Macon. The practice facility at Noxubee County High has beared Simmons' name since 2020 and was officially dedicated as the Jeffery B. Simmons Field House in 2022 after Simmons presented the program with all new equipment.

"I do it because I care about my community," Simmons said. "I just want to push something positive to our community. At the end of the day, that's what it's about, just giving back. I enjoy doing this and we want everyone to have a good time. You get on social media, you see things you don't want to see, but hopefully today, we just bring everybody together for one big fun day for the kids and for the community."

Tyre Phillips, J.T. Gray and Willie Gay, all former MSU players currently in the NFL, were also in attendance Saturday to support Simmons and the Noxubee Titans. The high school team has remained a powerhouse since Simmons graduated, winning another state title in 2017 and appearing in the championship game each of the last two years.

The Tigers are now led by rising senior quarterback KaMario Taylor, a Mississippi State commit and the No. 6 player in the state for his class, according to the 247Sports Composite rankings.

"(Simmons) definitely inspired me," Taylor said. "When he signed that big contract, it inspired a whole bunch of kids to keep playing football, keep grinding, because he's been through the same things we've been through. It means a lot because we know he doesn't have to do this. He takes his time to give back to this small town, and we're thankful for it."

Simmons also started the Give Em A Reason Foundation to "inspire youth and youth empowerment through sport, by way of self-esteem building and opportunity creation" in 2023. He was rewarded for his philanthropy as the Titans' nominee last year for the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year Award, which recognizes an NFL player for excellence on and off the field.

"The award's cool and all, (but) I don't do it for the publicity. I don't do it for the awards," Simmons said. "Being a nominee for the Walter Payton Man of the Year, it's a dream come true, but the real dream come true (would be) winning it. That just shows how much I care about my community. I don't do it for publicity; I do it because I care."

WHY NEW TENNESSEE TITANS RUNNING BACK TONY POLLARD MADE MEMPHIS MENTAL HEALTH SUMMIT A PRIORITY

BY DAMICHAEL COLE
MEMPHIS COMMERCIAL APPEAL
MAY 4, 2024

Tony Pollard was on a tight schedule. The former Dallas Cowboys turned Tennessee Titans running back was making a quick stop in Memphis, and it was important for him to attend a mental health summit.

Pollard stopped by the Bend Dxnt Break Athletes Summit on Saturday afternoon at Hope Church. He was joined by keynote speaker C.L. Shepherd and notable Memphis celebrities, former Grizzlies player Tony Allen and rapper Project Pat.

The group spoke to Memphis-area high school students on Saturday. The two-day event started on Friday. Nearly 500 students across the Memphis area attended the events, coming from high schools such as Whitehaven, KIPP, Manassas, Germantown, ECS, Oakhaven, Houston and Briarcrest.

“Just being able to talk to the youth, I’m just trying to make sure they’re going down the right path and got their heads on right,” Pollard, a former Memphis football and Melrose standout, told The Commercial Appeal.

Shepherd, who goes around the country speaking at engagements similar to two-day summit, wanted to empathize with the students as someone who struggled with mental health as a teenager.

For Project Pat, Saturday was about continuing to show up and let his voice be heard around Memphis where he can leave an impact. Allen has increased his presence at these type of events in Memphis over the past few months.

“I love to target areas in need, because at one point, I was that person,” Allen told The Commercial Appeal. “Growing up, I had a lot of issues that I thought was normal. That’s what I want to do. Change the community norm.”

Tony Pollard talks joining Tennessee Titans

Multiple students at Hope Church attended in Dallas Cowboys No. 20 Pollard jerseys. After Pollard signed with the Tennessee Titans, those jerseys are now throwbacks.

Pollard joined the Titans in March, putting him closer to his Memphis roots. While Pollard said he made a business decision in going from Dallas to Nashville, he called being closer to home “the icing on the cake.” Playing less than three hours from Memphis impacted his decision.

“I’ve been enjoying it. I’ve been able to come home a lot more, see my family, kids get to play with their cousins and things like that,” Pollard said.

Being close to home also means Pollard can keep a closer eye on the Tigers football team.

“Ever since I’ve been there, it’s been a good program,” Pollard said. “Every year, they’re getting guys in the league, so they’re definitely in the right direction.”

WHY TENNESSEE TITANS STAR JEFFERY SIMMONS IS SENDING 'SECOND DAD' TO SUPER BOWL | ESTES

NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
FEBRUARY 4, 2024

High school football coach Tyrone Shorter long believed his first Super Bowl would be to see former pupil and current NFL star defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons.

In a way, Shorter was correct.

While Simmons' Tennessee Titans won't be playing in Sunday's Super Bowl, it's because of Simmons that Shorter and his wife are planning to be in Las Vegas to witness the game.

As the Titans' nominee this season for the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year Award, Simmons had two Super Bowl trips — tickets, flights, hotel accommodations — to give out.

"They were the first people that came to mind," Simmons said, "because he has done so much for me, just mentally or off the field. . . . He's not just my high school coach. I look at him as a second dad."

Simmons surprised Shorter in person, telling him he had a Christmas present for him.

Shorter and his wife are to fly out Friday and back on Monday, enjoying a weekend that'll include time spent with Simmons, his former player at Noxubee County High School in Mississippi.

"It's just the guy he is," said Shorter, now the coach at nearby Louisville High School. "To me, I'm just glad that I had an influence on his life and helped mold him to be the man that he is today. He could have given those tickets to anybody, but he decided to give them to me and my wife. It just makes me feel good. That's the reason why I do what I do, coaching high school football."

The Payton Award is one of the most prestigious in the NFL because it recognizes outstanding service and impact away from the field in addition to strong play on it.

The reasons for Simmons' inclusion, according to the Titans, are his community efforts for families and children both in Nashville and back in Mississippi.

Among the highlights: In November, Simmons handed out more than 500 turkeys to families for Thanksgiving. In July, he held a full week of events in his hometown of Macon, Mississippi, hosting a football camp and community fun day while giving gift cards to local athletes for a shopping spree.

"Some of the things that he's doing now (in giving back)," Shorter said, "we talked about that stuff when he was in high school. . . . It makes me so proud of the man that he's become."

Simmons referred to Shorter as "Coach Dad," an indication of a relationship that's far deeper than most high school coaches and players have. It goes back to when Simmons was a fifth grader, hanging around the football fields. Shorter put him to work as a water boy then.

Louisville head coach Tyrone Shorter signals for a time out at the MHSAA Class 4A State Football Championship on Saturday, December 5, 2020, at Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium in Jackson, Miss.

Years later, when Simmons entered high school, he was determined to play quarterback. That wasn't going to happen. "You're going to be a d-lineman," Shorter told him.

"He looked at me like, 'Huh? I ain't going to play football then if I can't play quarterback,' " Shorter recalled with a laugh.

Shorter wasn't about to let him quit playing football, either, telling him as far back as ninth grade that he had the potential to make it to the NFL.

"I think (the tight relationship) is because he looked up to me as a father," Shorter said. "He called me Coach Dad, because he didn't grow up with his father. He didn't have that male figure in his life. . . . I was there for him, whatever advice, whatever he needed, we made sure that he had it."

At the Super Bowl, Shorter says he'll be rooting for the Kansas City Chiefs, because he coached against defensive lineman Chris Jones and linebacker Willie Gay — both attended Mississippi State, like Simmons — during their high school careers.

For Simmons, too, it'll be a nice moment. He was thrilled to get the chance to treat someone who he says taught him how to be a man and told him: "Use football. Don't let it use you."

"He always held me accountable," Simmons said. "I was grateful to have him in my life, so it's like a small token of appreciation to him and his wife to get to go to the Super Bowl."

TITANS DL JEFFERY SIMMONS NAMED WEEK 12 NFLPA COMMUNITY MVP

NOVEMBER 24, 2023

NASHVILLE – Titans defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons has been named the Week 12 NFLPA Community MVP after providing turkeys to more than 500 Nashville families for the Thanksgiving holiday.

"The Bible says in Luke 12:48 that 'To whom much is given, much will be required.' Growing up in Noxubee County, Mississippi, I watched my mother make countless sacrifices for me and my four siblings, especially during the holidays," Simmons said in a release provided by NFLPA. "Knowing that God has put me in a position to be a blessing to others means the world to me, and I realize there is still so much work for me to do in the community. I want to sincerely thank everyone for helping with the Give Em A Reason Foundation Turkey Distribution."

Coach Mike Vrabel gave Simmons permission to leave Tuesday's walkthrough early so he could attend an event for his Give Em A Reason Foundation, and cars lined up outside of Nissan Stadium for the drive-thru turkey delivery.

Simmons partnered with Kroger to help feed families for the holidays.

"Being able to give back to the community means so much to me," Simmons said earlier this week. "This is a time of giving, and being in the position I am today … I always think about how I am thankful to play the game of football. I'm thankful to be able to give back to the community. I think, around this time, maybe someone didn't have the money, or whatever it might be, to buy a turkey? I think about those things."

Following the event, Second Harvest Food Bank of Middle Tennessee, FrankTown Open Hearts, and other local nonprofit organizations were able to use and distribute the remaining turkeys to additional recipients who were unable to attend.

"Just the excitement on their faces," Simmons said. "All the 'thank yous', the 'thank you for what you do for the community.' That's what it is all about. I don't look for the publicity on the outside, I do it because that is my heart. I do it for my community. … It meant a lot to be out there."

In honor of Simmons being named this week's Community MVP, the NFLPA is making a $10,000 contribution to his foundation or charity of choice. In turn, Simmons will take part in a virtual or in-person visit to a school or children's hospital. HOW TITANS' SIMMONS SAW FOOTBALL AS LIFE-CHANGING OPPORTUNITY

BY TURRON DAVENPORT
ESPN.COM
OCTOBER 18, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- The bye week couldn't have come at a better time for the Tennessee Titans.

A frustrating 24-16 loss to the Baltimore Ravens pushed the Titans (2-4) to the bottom of the division, causing team captain Jeffery Simmons to suggest his teammates do some soul-searching.

"We need to figure out the guys that want to be out there," the defensive tackle said. "We need to reevaluate our team and figure out who wants to play football for the Titans."

The pain shows on Simmons' face after every loss.

It's from the competitive spirit he developed from going against his older brother, Dylan Bradley, whose NFL aspirations were cut short due to injuries. They competed in everything from tackling drills to video games and more.

"He used to be so competitive," Simmons said. "I used to be mad at him. We used to fight each other every time he beat me."

During position meetings, Titans defensive line coach Terrell Williams pulls up clips of Simmons hustling to the football even when the play isn't near him as an example of how he wants the other players to compete.

"There's nothing better than showing guys that are at [Simmons'] status and still play hard," Williams said. "Not every Pro Bowler is running to the ball the way he is. If Jeff Simmons can run to the ball, the rest of the guys better get going, too."

Simmons and Bradley are only two years apart, so Simmons had to wait his turn to start playing when he was watching his big brother play at 5. The two used to practice tackling by putting their pads on so they could hit each other and by hitting a tree in their backyard.

"Tough" is how Simmons described it.

Bradley said he knew his little brother was built different when he had tightrope ankle surgery during his senior year in high school. The procedure normally has a four-to-six-week recovery time, but Simmons came back to play two weeks later.

As the oldest of five siblings (three sisters and Simmons), Bradley had to be "the man of the house." He quickly saw football as a way that he could make things better.

"Football gave me the opportunity to change my life and my family's life," Bradley said. "So, I had to put all my energy into football."

Simmons took on the same belief from a young age. Growing up they always talked about being able to make things better for the family.

That's why Simmons was emotional during his press conference after he signed a four-year, $94 million contract extension, making Simmons the second-highest paid defensive tackle in the NFL -- behind only the Los Angeles Rams' Aaron Donald. Simmons came a long way from when he had to share the bed with his brother.

"Every day I wake up and think about those hard times and how my mother didn't feel like it," Simmons said as he fought through tears. "Sometimes, I'll be like 'I'm hurt' and think about my mom. My family, that's my motivation."

Their uncle, Jason Hatcher, played defensive line for the Dallas Cowboys. Having played the same position, Simmons and Bradley wanted to follow in their uncle's footsteps.

Simmons remembers going to his uncle's house in Dallas and seeing the things that football provided.

"It was like me being around that made me love the game more because I know my uncle also came from a small town [in Louisiana]," Simmons said. "That motivated me, just knowing that I could do the same thing."

Meeting his uncle's teammate, Hall of Famer Demarcus Ware, was a huge moment for Bradley to push for the NFL.

Simmons was a freshman on the football team at Noxubee County High School in Mississippi when Bradley was starring on the team as a senior.

Ole Miss and Mississippi State recruited Bradley in high school, but he chose to play at Southern Miss from 2013 to 2016.

Bradley signed with the Minnesota Vikings as an undrafted free agent in 2017, but he was waived during the final roster cuts and re-signed to the practice squad. He had a good chance to make the roster in 2018, but an ankle and knee injury ended his dreams.

As for Simmons, he would also become a standout for Noxubee County before suiting up for Mississippi State, where he'd go on to be an All-American from 2016 to 2018.

Although it wasn't career-ending, Simmons had a devastating injury in February 2019 before the scouting combine. He thought he just hyperextended his knee, but Hatcher, who served as a pre-draft mentor, had to break the news he got from Simmons' trainer, Tony Villani of XPE Sports, that the injury was actually a torn ACL, according to Simmons.

Simmons told ESPN he called Bradley in tears and told him he considered going back to Mississippi State. Before the injury, Simmons was projected to be a top-10 pick.

But Bradley promised things would work out.

"You're the best defensive tackle in the draft," Bradley said. "You'll get picked in the first round."

The injury gave the brothers the opportunity to lean on one another as the draft approached and spend some time together.

Simmons almost joined the Vikings like his brother, as Minnesota considered taking him at No. 18. but they took center Garrett Bradbury instead.

The Titans gave Simmons the call of his life when they were on the clock at No. 19. The two brothers, who were wearing matching outfits, embraced as soon as Simmons got off the phone. They were on their way to Nashville.

Bradley worked for a framing company when he first got to the city. He got into training when the COVID-19 pandemic hit in 2020, first by helping his sister lose a significant amount of weight through workouts they did in Simmons' garage.

Bradley got the certification to be a trainer soon after that, which led to an offer to work at a sports training facility called D1 that opened in Spring Hill, Tennessee -- where he is now the head strength and conditioning coach.

Simmons approached Bradley last winter about being his trainer after he decided to stay in Nashville to train during the offseason. Bradley was honored to train his younger brother along with former Titans' and current Buffalo Bills defensive lineman DaQuan Jones.

"I could tell training is his passion," Simmons said. "This past offseason, I'm like, 'I'm going to give you a chance.' He did a hell of a job with that, helped me get stronger as well."

He was coming off a season where he had to push through an ankle injury for most of it. Simmons told ESPN he had to get shots in the ankle over the last eight weeks just to be able to play.

The emotions came spilling out after a loss to the Jacksonville Jaguars in Week 18, which made the Titans miss the playoffs, when Simmons was asked about playing through his injuries.

That loss also marked the first time that Simmons would miss the playoffs.

"As his older brother, I was like, 'Don't let them see you cry,'" Bradley said. "But that's him allowing himself to be vulnerable and showing his passion. If everyone on a given team had that much passion about football that team wouldn't lose."

With Simmons' passion comes belief. In himself and his team, and though the Titans haven't gotten off to the start they would have wanted, Simmons believes things can turn around.

"We have a long season ahead," Simmons said. "We have a bye week, and hopefully guys get healthy, hit that reset button and come back ready to roll."

Their next shot to start to turn the season around comes Week 8 when they host the Atlanta Falcons on Oct. 29 (1 p.m. ET, CBS).

KEY TO CITY PRESENTED JEFFERY SIMMONS DURING FUN DAY

BY GRANT MCLAUGHLIN DISPATCH
JULY 5, 2023

MACON – When Macon resident William Mitchell was looking for something to do with his daughter, Rachel, this weekend, he wasn't sure what would shake out.

After hearing that Tennessee Titan Defensive End and former Noxubee County High School football player Jeffery Simmons was hosting a community fun day, he knew just what to do.

"I watched (Simmons) play all four years of high school football," Mitchell said. "We were just at home and I really wanted to bring her out to this, and because she loves water games."

Mitchell was one of around 3,000 people who signed up to attend the Jeffery Simmons Fun Day event at the Noxubee County Sportsplex, featuring local food vendors, music and games for children, as well as a firework show that evening, Simmons said.

Simmons told The Dispatch he wanted to come home and host an event to pay homage to his hometown of Macon and bring people out for the Fourth of July holiday.

"(Events like this) motivate me," Simmons said. "This is where I started from. I am going to help people from all over, but right here in Noxubee County is what made me. I wanted to bring something back to where I came from."

Mayor of Macon, Buz McGuire, said the city provided fireworks for the event, and also presented Simmons a key to the city for his philanthropic efforts in Noxubee County.

"For me, the most important thing is he's willing to give back to his community," McGuire said. "I know he's done some work at (Noxubee County High School), and now he's putting on this day. I'm sure there'll be other things in the future too."

In 2021, Simmons provided free meals to Macon Electric workers and 4-County Electric Power Association linemen for their work following a severe winter storm, and funded a $50,000 renovation project for NCHS to revitalize its field house and weight room in 2022.

Simmons also donated $75,000 to the Starkville Parks and Recreation Department that same year to build a turf field at the Starkville Sportsplex.

Simmons said he plans to continue making trips back home to work with local high school students and put on more events, but could not comment on the nature of those future endeavors.

"Everything is not set in stone," he said. "I don't want to speak on anything just yet right now. But we want to grow this city. We don't have a lot here. So, I think that's where it starts."

Another attendee, Johnathan Morris, said he brought his whole family out to the event to support Simmons, but also to see the firework show and enjoy the holiday as a family.

"I'm a big fan of Tennessee Titan Jeffery Simmons, and we came out to support (him)," Morris said. "But it's also pretty nice because it has a lot of stuff for the kids."

FOUR YEARS LATER, TITANS DT JEFFERY SIMMONS STILL BUOYED BY CONTROLLING OWNER AMY ADAMS STRUNK'S TRUST IN HIM

TITANS ONLINE
APRIL 14, 2023

NASHVILLE – Four years ago, after being selected by the Titans in the first round of the 2019 NFL Draft, an emotional Jeffery Simmons vowed to reward controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk for having faith in him.

Simmons, sitting two seats down from Strunk at his introductory press conference, tucked his head and shed tears when Strunk spoke about her trust in him while welcoming him into the organization.

Simmons, who was recovering from an ACL injury at the time, had faced questions following an off-field incident he was involved in back in high school. The well-publicized incident resulted in heavy scrutiny over the pick, but Strunk spoke about second chances, and her faith in Simmons.

"Coming from a woman," Simmons, fighting back tears, said of Strunk at the time. "I'll tell her in front of you guys that she can trust me. I won't let her down."

Strunk was involved in the process that led to the Titans selecting Simmons.

"We are getting a great football player, that goes without saying, but we are getting a great man," Strunk said in April of 2019. "We are a nation that gives second chances, and this young man, Jeffery Simmons, he deserved that second chance."

On Wednesday, the Titans officially awarded Simmons with a second contract.

The big defensive lineman signed his long-term contract extension before another emotional press conference when he once again thanked Strunk for believing in him.

Simmons said he exchanged texts with Strunk after the two sides agreed to terms.

"From day one I told Miss Amy that I would never let her down," Simmons said. "I texted Miss Amy after we came to an agreement, and I told her how much I appreciated her trusting in me from day one. What she sent back to me, she told me: 'You promised me that you would never let me down and you haven't.' And that right there, it hit something inside.

"To have a female owner, a lady owner, in the NFL to trust in you so much, from the adversity I went through on my journey to get here, it means so much to me. Miss Amy, I appreciate you so much."

Simmons has held up his end of the bargain since the Titans selected him with the 19th overall pick on the 2019 NFL Draft out of Mississippi State.

Simmons has been named to two Pro Bowls in four years, and since joining the Titans he ranks second on the team with 21 sacks, trailing only outside linebacker Harold Landry III (26.5). His career totals also include 196 tackles, 19 passes defensed, two forced fumbles and three fumble recoveries.

After missing the first six games of his rookie season due to a pre-draft injury, Simmons played in 56 of the team's last 60 games (54 starts). He was a team captain in each of the last two campaigns.

Simmons said he's grown on and off the field over the past four years.

"I know for a fact I have grown," Simmons said. "If you don't grow, especially as a player in this league. From year one, I am going into year five now, I don't think I'd be standing at this podium right now.

"As a man, I try to be better than I was. …. That's been my motto forever: Be better than I was yesterday, on the field and off the field. Of course, I feel like I have grown as a man, and as a player."

ON HIS BIG DAY, TITANS DT JEFFERY SIMMONS IS SMILING THROUGH THE TEARS

TITANS ONLINE
APRIL 13, 2023

NASHVILLE – Jeffery Simmons had a lot of things on his mind when he stepped up to the podium on Wednesday.

Among his thoughts: "I'm going to try not to cry today."

Then the big defensive lineman looked at his mother, and the tears started streaming down his cheeks. At one point he paused for 12 seconds before gathering himself.

"My mom, single parent," Simmons said. "Just to see the journey we have been on as a family. It's crazy," Simmons said. "I think, man, from house to house, apartment to apartment. Sharing a bed with my brother. Now, we're good. … It's generational wealth, as we call it. It's who I do it for. Every day I wake up, I think about those hard times where I know my mom didn't feel like it. Sometimes I am hurting, but I think about my mom, having raised five kids on her own. For me to say, I don't want to do this. That's my motivation, my family."

Titans General Manager Ran Carthon, Coach Mike Vrabel and a big group of family members were on hand at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park on Wednesday for a press conference celebrating the long-term contract extension Simmons signed earlier in the day.

At the conclusion of the press conference, Simmons talked more about his mother, Brenda Bradley, and his upbringing.

Simmons said his mission since first stepping on the football field as a five-year-old – when he used to put on his shoulder pads and hit a big pear tree in the backyard – has always been to make his family proud.

And give them a better life.

"I didn't want to make too much eye contact with my mom today because I knew she'd be there crying, and then I'd cry, too," Simmons said with a smile. "But to think about that upbringing, and all the adversity we've been through. … I know she is proud of me."

Simmons said the family moved six or seven times when he was younger, including a move from Louisiana to Mississippi.

At most places, Simmons shared room with brother, and his two sisters also shared room. Simmons said his mom adopted his uncle's daughter, a cousin, who he also calls a sister.

With a household of five kids, Brenda Bradley had to work all kinds of jobs, from working at a convenience store to working at a prison. She did everything she could to make ends meet, Simmons said.

"But she never missed a birthday," Simmons said.

Simmons said he pulled weeds as a kid to make extra money, to keep her from having to pay for his football uniforms.

Not too long after signing his first NFL contract with the Titans in 2019, Simmons bought his mom a house in Spring Hill, Tennessee, so she could be close.

Now, after signing a mammoth deal with the Titans, the two-time Pro Bowler knows his family will be taken care of for years and years and years to come.

He's also now finally ready to reward himself – he plans to buy a new home, perhaps with a pool.

"I never picture myself wearing another color than two-tone blue, other than a gold jacket," Simmons said. "This is a great day. I hope I retire here, and I hope I can make this franchise happy."

IT'S BIGGER THAN FOOTBALL': TITANS' JEFFERY SIMMONS SPENDS WEEK GIVING BACK IN MISSISSIPPI

BY STEFAN KRAJISNIK
THE TENNESSEEAN - MISSISSIPPI CLARION LEDGER
JULY 9, 2022

STARKVILLE – Before he was an All-Pro and All-SEC defensive tackle, Tennessee Titans star Jeffery Simmons was a manager for his high school football team.

Simmons was in middle school but served as a varsity football manager when he walked through the weight room at Noxubee County High School and saw the rusty weights and bent bars.

It's a sight that stuck with him, particularly as he saw opponents such as West Point with better equipment to help build a "winning culture."

So Simmons made a promise. He wasn't a 6-foot-4, 300-pound menace yet, but his potential had always been apparent as a five-star prospect. Once he made it to the NFL, Simmons said, he'd ensure future Noxubee County athletes had access to better equipment.

The former Mississippi State standout fulfilled the promise Thursday as he stood outside newly named and renovated Jeffery B. Simmons Field House. The only thing more eye-popping than the shiny oversized scissors used in the ribbon cutting was his neon yellow shorts suit.

"I cannot really show my appreciation for Noxubee County enough," Simmons said.

Simmons' time in high school wasn't always as successful as his football career. As a senior in 2016, he was found guilty of malicious mischief and pleaded no contest to a simple assault charge. It came after he was helping break up a fight between his sister and another woman. Simmons was shown on video striking the woman before walking away.

Simmons said the donations and work he does for his high school are not an attempt to cover up for what happened.

"I moved on from all that," Simmons said. "I don't even talk about it anymore. I don't live in the past. My thing is, what I'm doing now is to make sure my name, my brand — the Jeffery Simmons brand — will leave a legacy not just for me but for my kids and their future.

"That's my biggest thing. I have nephews, nieces. What can I do to make sure they're good in their future and make sure they don't have to live off that – live off something that happened 20 years ago, 30 years ago."

NCHS athletics director Karen Dixon — who has known Simmons since he was in her fourth-grade class — says once the school was informed of Simmons' plan with the weight room, it was their idea to name the field house after him.

The unveiling in Macon, Mississippi, was only the start of an eventful week back home for Simmons. He made the short trek Friday to Starkville, where he signed a $75,000 check for Starkville Parks and Recreation toward a new turf field at the Starkville Sportsplex.

The field was also named in his honor and was used through the weekend for his third annual youth camp.

"It's bigger than football," Simmons said Saturday. "It's not all about just these young kids seeing us play on Thursdays, Monday nights and Sundays. These kids matter. The town of Starkville matters. The town of Macon matters."

Tennessee Titans defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons reacts after a play in the first half against the Cincinnati Bengals at Nissan Stadium.

Simmons was joined at his camp by NFL players Elgton Jenkins, Tyre Phillips, J.T. Gray and Gerri Green, among others. The group remains tight-knit as their careers have shifted away from Mississippi, and Simmons says there is never hesitation when they ask each other to help with events such as youth camps.

Mississippi State quarterback Will Rogers also received an invitation from Simmons. He remembers the angst of being a kid at a youth camp with successful football players around. Now he notes the commitment that comes with being on the adult side.

"They're pros, for sure," Rogers said. "The way they conduct themselves — not only on the field but also coming back and doing things like this for the community. Helping people that don't have as much … It's humbling to see and definitely something I'm going to learn from."

TITANS GUARD PETER SKORONSKI NOMINATED FOR ART ROONEY SPORTSMANSHIP AWARD

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
NOVEMBER 26, 2025

NASHVILLE – The Titans have nominated guard Peter Skoronski for the 12th annual Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award.

A first-round pick of the Titans in the 2023 NFL Draft, Skoronski has started 42 games for the team over the past three seasons, including starts in all 11 games this season.

During that time, Skoronski has built a strong reputation for his professional approach, and his work ethic.

He was informed of the news during a team meeting on Wednesday morning, when he was congratulated by his teammates.

"It was a surprise," Skoronski said. "They put it up on the (video) board. It's an honor, pretty cool. I try to play the game the right way."

The award, created in 2014 and named after the late founding owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Pro Football Hall of Famer Art Rooney Sr., recognizes players around the league who best demonstrate the qualities of on-field sportsmanship, including fair play, respect for the game and opponents and integrity in competition.

Over the past three seasons, Skoronski has averaged just 0.4 percent penalties per offensive snap (10 total accepted penalties on 2,494 offensive snaps). Skoronski has never been flagged for an unsportsmanlike penalty.

"I love the way he shows up every day to work. He's a true pro in every form," interim coach Mike McCoy said of Skoronski. "The mentality he approaches the game with and the respect he has for his teammates, opponents and the game itself is what we want our players to embody. He wants to be great and he leads by example."

A panel of former players from the NFL Legends Community, will select eight finalists (four in the AFC and four in the NFC) from the 32 nominees. The eight finalists will be listed on the Pro Bowl ballot under the Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award category when players vote in December.

The winner is determined by a vote of current NFL players and will be announced as part of the NFL Honors program the Thursday before Super Bowl LX.

"Sportsmanship is at the very the core of the game, the foundation of our values that are shared across all levels of the sport," said Troy Vincent, NFL executive vice president of football operations. "These Rooney Sportsmanship Award nominees demonstrate to the world how the game is played with respect and integrity at the highest level of competition."

TENNESSEE TITANS DRAFT PICK PETER SKORONSKI'S GRANDFATHER PLAYED FOR VINCE LOMBARDI: WHAT ELSE TO KNOW

BY MIKE ORGAN
THE TENNESSEAN
APRIL 28, 2023

The Tennessee Titans selected former Northwestern offensive tackle Peter Skoronski with the 11th pick in the first round of the 2023 NFL Draft Thursday.

Skronski was the third offensive lineman taken in the draft behind Ohio State's Paris Johnson Jr. to Arizona and Tennessee's Darnell Wright to Chicago.

Here are three things to know about Skoronski:

Grandfather played for Vince Lombardi

Skoronski's grandfather Bob Skoronski was an offensive tackle for the Green Bay Packers when Vince Lombardi was building a dynasty. He spent nine seasons with the franchise.

He was a rookie in 1956, spent two years in the U.S. Air Force, and returned to Green Bay from 1959-68.

Bob Skoronski, 84, played in two Super Bowls, was an All-Pro in 1966 and is in the Green Bay Packers Hall of Fame.

Peter Skoronski tweeted earlier Thursday that his grandfather served as his inspiration to make it to the NFL.

Nation's best pass blocker

Skoronski finished the 2022 season with Pro Football Focus' highest pass-blocking grade in the country at 93.0. That also is one of the highest ratings of all time.

The 6-foot-4, 315 pounder allowed only six pressures on 480 pass-blocking snaps.

Skoronski posted a 79.1 run-blocking grade, which was fifth among Power 5 offensive tackles.

Skoronski was Northwestern's first offensive lineman to earn the Rimington-Pace Big Ten Offensive Lineman of the Year. He also became only the third Wildcat offensive lineman to earn two All-Big Ten first team awards under Pat Fitzgerald.

He was a finalist for the 2022 Outland Trophy.

Didn't translate

Even with Skoronski anchoring the line, Northwestern was not among the top offensive teams in the Big 10.

The Wildcats finished 10th in the Big Ten and 94th nationally in passing (210.3 yards) and ninth in the Big Ten and 98th nationally in rushing (125.1 yards).

Northwestern scored only 10 passing touchdowns and 11 rushing.

FOR TENNESSEE TITANS 1ST-ROUNDER PETER SKORONSKI, CHICAGO HOMECOMING COMES WITH BIG CHANGE

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
AUGUST 11, 2023

Peter Skoronski isn't at the position he's used to, and isn't in the position to complain about it.

Skoronski's been starting at left guard for the Tennessee Titans since the day he arrived in Nashville after the Titans made him the No. 11 pick in the 2023 NFL Draft. The only problem? Skoronski isn't a guard. Never has been. He was an All-America left tackle at Northwestern and a five-star recruit as a left tackle before that.

He's always played the most premium position on the offensive line and he's always done it well. But now, in the days before his preseason debut as an NFL guard, Skoronski isn't caught up in where he's playing so long as he is, in fact, playing.

"My real goal is just to be a great NFL player," Skoronski said. "I'd love to just be on the field if at all. Beggars can't be choosers I guess in that sense."

The Titans' preseason opener against the Chicago Bears on Saturday (noon, News Channel 2) represents a big moment for Skoronski for a few reasons. One, it's his first opportunity to play in the NFL. Two, it's his first opportunity to play guard in the NFL. And three, he's playing in friendly confines. Skoronski grew up and played high school and college football in the Chicago area and says he's been coordinating ticket requests with friends and family for months.

It's hard to call this a grand homecoming for Skoronski. He hasn't been in Nashville long enough to miss a Windy City winter. He's only been with the Titans for about as long as a college freshman would spend in the dorms before packing a few loads of laundry in the car and heading home for Thanksgiving dinner.

Instead of laundry, Skoronski's bringing a bus-load of offensive linemen home with him. Skoronski says he's in charge of sating their Thanksgiving-sized appetites by picking the restaurant for the linemen dinner Friday night.

Whether it's picking the perfect eatery or sliding inside to guard for the first time in his life, Skoronski has the same mission.

"I'm trying to be a great teammate," Skoronski said.

Why guard matters

Titans offensive line coach Jason Houghtaling says it wasn't hard to project Skoronski's skills at guard.

"You watch that tape from his college days at Northwestern," Houghtaling said. "When he gets his hands on people he can control them. That's the name of the game there. Just his physicality. Any of their in-the-box runs, he looked really comfortable climbing to second-level defenders, redirecting and all those things."

There's a stigma in football circles that guards are less important than tackles. And it's not hard to see why. Defensive ends and outside linebackers have always been the biggest threats to quarterbacks. So tackles, naturally, are most important for protecting passers. This is especially true of left tackles, since most quarterbacks are right handed and left tackles are tasked with preventing rushers from sneaking up on quarterbacks from behind.

From 2000-20, there were 76 tackles picked in the first round versus 35 guards and centers combined. Six guards and centers make at least $15 million per year compared to 22 tackles. If an offensive lineman wants to be picked higher or paid more, he's better off on the outside.

But times are changing. For nearly a decade, the league's most fearsome pass rusher has been Aaron Donald, a defensive tackle. And as a new generation of interior pass rushers like the Titans' Jeffery Simmons, the New York Jets' Quinnen Williams, the Washington Commanders' Daron Payne and the New York Giants' Dexter Lawrence are approaching their prime and earning big pay days, guards are only going to become more vital.

"Guys like Jeff are some of the best in the league at getting to the quarterback and stopping the pass game," Skoronski said. "That makes your job important. If they're paying the guy across from you, you better be good at it too."

Making the most of the preseason

The Titans' other guard, Daniel Brunskill, knows a thing or two about changing positions. He was a tight end until his senior year of college when he moved to tackle, and he's played center, guard and tackle as a pro. Unlike Skoronski, Brunskill was undrafted. He made his pro debut as an Atlanta Falcon in a preseason game against the Miami Dolphins in 2017, mostly playing as a reserve tackle.

To Brunskill, the challenge of playing your first preseason game is the immediacy of it all.

"They had told us the ones were going to go a certain amount and then all of the sudden the ones went like one drive and it was like 'Hey, go!'" Brunskill remembers. "You've got to go from zero to 100 right now and just kind of go out there and perform."

That type of urgency is what Brunskill is telling Skoronski and the other rookies to be prepared for. Football moves fast. One second you're on the bench. Another there's been a turnover so you're scrambling to find your mouthpiece before running out onto the field. Preseason simulates that at warp speed, with units cycling through and players trying new positions on nearly every drive.

Not that Skoronski's teammates are concerned about the first-rounder acclimating. Titans tackle Nicholas Petit-Frere, who is suspended the first six games of 2023 for violating the NFL's gambling policy, was in Skoronski's position last year: a former five-star recruit from the Big Ten thrust into starting as a rookie Day 1.

But Petit-Frere doesn't consider his situation and Skoronski's equal.

"Peter’s in an even better position than me," Petit-Frere said. "He’s coming in and he’s really come out running."

BEHIND THE SCENES ON TITANS DRAFT NIGHT: HOW PETER SKORONSKI LANDED IN TENNESSEE

BY DAN POMPEI
THE ATHLETIC
MAY 4, 2023

CHICAGO — In an alcove of a cozy restaurant, Peter Skoronski, known for being impenetrable, is surrounded by hope.

His phone rings, Skoronski answers, and his eyes get wide.

He could have been at Kansas City's Union Station, hobnobbing with Roger Goodell, Mel Kiper Jr. and Bryce Young. He could have been bowing before 1,500 media members, 300,000 fans and 54 million who watched on ABC, ESPN or NFL Network.

Ever an offensive lineman, Skoronski preferred a dimly lit hideaway with family, friends, coaches and teammates, the people, he says, who helped him get here. So he invited about 75 of them to a private gathering — sorry ABC, ESPN and NFL Network.

Piece Pizza in Wicker Park was where his family celebrated his baptism to Christianity 21 years ago, and the place they celebrate his baptism to the NFL today.

Among the people in that alcove eating New Haven-style pizza are his grandmother Ruth, wife of the late Bob Skoronski, his sister Elizabeth and brother Robbie, a contingent from Connecticut where his family's roots grew, and many Northwestern teammates and classmates.

With the phone to his ear, Peter bounds up a few stairs to the back of the restaurant as if he is hunting linebacker. Just past a board listing the eight beers brewed on-site, he covers one ear and talks on his phone.

Skoronski removes a cap with a question mark on it. He and his family had the question mark caps made for a Christmas party. He will be wearing another hat soon.

He puts the phone down, turns to the crowd and yells, "Tennessee!"

Cheers, raised fists.

Chants, "Pete! Pete! Pete!"

As it should be, mom Anne gets the first hug, then his father, Bob Jr.

Next is his agent, Tommy Condon. Robbie and Elizabeth give him a group hug.

Kurt Anderson, his offensive line coach at Northwestern, gives his special salutation — the "too sweet high five" inspired by professional wrestlers with only the middle fingers and thumbs pinched together.

Then Anderson gives him an embrace that would break a lesser man's ribs. Northwestern head coach Pat Fitzgerald wraps his arms around Skoronski next. Skoronski makes his way around the room, hug after hug after hug.

His father addresses the group. "He's earned every single thing he's gotten," he says. "He took zero shortcuts. Ever. His teammates know. So do his coaches. No shortcuts. We should all be like that."

Peter's grandfather Bob, a stalwart of the Lombardi dynasty as the left tackle for the Packers for 11 years, loved custard. Peter loves custard, so much, in fact, that his brother and sister call him "Custard." So now, it's time for some celebratory custard, distributed in small plastic containers.

And Peter is ready — more than ready — for that first beer of the evening — a Miller Lite.

"Very relieved, very happy," he says in a private moment between sips. "I couldn't be happier with the destination. I knew when the process started that the Titans were a great option. I'm ready to be a Titan."

He could have been a Packer like his grandfather — he was always a Packers fan. Or a Bear in his hometown. He could have been an Eagle or a Jet or who knows what.

The hope was only for a place he would belong.

At Maine South High School in Park Ridge, Ill., Skoronski received his first college scholarship offer as a sophomore. Among his many suitors were Michigan, Notre Dame and Stanford. The reality is he would have been given a football scholarship any place he wanted. Well, almost any place.

Intrigued by Vanderbilt's academic reputation and the thought of calling Nashville home, he visited the university his junior year. And he might have chosen Vanderbilt, but Vanderbilt did not offer him a scholarship. Perhaps that explains why the Commodores were everyone's favorite opponent back then.

At Northwestern, he was a day-one starter at left tackle. Over three seasons, his consistency, fastidiousness and brute force made the case that he was the best blocker in the college game. Skoronski was voted Big Ten offensive lineman of the year and a consensus All-American.

To train for the combine after his final college season, he hired offensive line savant Duke Manyweather and trained at Sports Academy at The Star in Frisco, Texas.

Early in the year, Skoronski's arm length — or lack of it — became a talking point. Manyweather recommended Skoronski hang from a pullup bar daily to stretch the muscles and tendons, potentially lengthening his arms by as much as a half-inch. Skoronski tried it, but his arms still measured 32 1/4 at the combine in March. Over the past two decades, that put him in the fourth percentile of NFL tackles.

So began the narrative that Skoronski would have to play guard, which could have diminished his stock for two reasons — it was a new position for him, and guards aren't valued as much as tackles. Other than hanging from a pullup bar, there wasn't anything he could do about it.

At the combine, Skoronski was interviewed by most of the teams in the league, including 14 formally — the Cardinals, Chargers, Commanders, Giants, Falcons, Jaguars, Jets, Lions, Packers, Raiders, Seahawks, Steelers, Texans and Titans.

None of the interviewers brought up his arm length, but most asked him what position he saw himself playing. His answer to them all was, "I think I can play tackle. But I'm more than happy to move inside or play anywhere."

Still, Skoronski was irked by the idea that he couldn't be a tackle because his arms were too short.

"I sort of let them know that I didn't like being reduced to a measurement like that," he says. "And most teams were pretty open to understanding. No one really put me in the box of 'you can't play tackle.' So I was encouraged by that."

A few of the interviews were memorable. He enjoyed time with Steelers coach Mike Tomlin and seemed to connect with Titans coach Mike Vrabel. "I liked his energy," Skoronski says.

The conversation was a little less comfortable with the Falcons — undoubtedly by design. Skoronski had been told that some interviewers are purposely abrasive in an attempt to see how prospects react. He was prepared.

"The head coach was on me the second I got in there," Skoronski says of Arthur Smith. "I was giving them generic answers to their questions, and he said, 'You're really boring me right now. Your answers are so boring.' The whole meeting, he kept looking at his computer. I was kind of laughing to myself and said, 'Sorry, I don't know what you want me to do. I'm answering you honestly.'"

The combine is known for testing participants' physical skills and mental acumen. It is less known for testing endurance, but that is absolutely a part of the process. Twelve of Skoronski's formal combine interviews came rapid-fire one morning over four hours.

It didn't help that he had a sore throat and congestion that required a box of tissue nearby. His combine numbers still were impressive — his vertical jump of 34 1/2 inches was the best among offensive linemen, and his 30 bench-press reps of 225 pounds were second most among offensive tackles. Skoronski was disappointed with his 40-yard dash time of 5.12 because he had run faster in training.

For Northwestern's pro day two weeks later, Skoronski still was not feeling himself. His conditioning was off, and it showed in positional drills. "I felt pretty gassed," he says. "A few things were sloppy, in my opinion. I wasn't pleased."

At the pro day, Skoronski met individually with offensive line coaches of the Bears, Bills, Jets, Raiders, Steelers and Titans. Each of them did a sample installation for him, then asked him to repeat back to them what he had learned.

About nine more offensive line coaches asked him to talk offense with them in video conferences in the following weeks. Among them were coaches from the Bucs, Cardinals, Chiefs, Cowboys, Packers and Ravens.

Between the combine and the draft, Skoronski moved back to his Evanston apartment and trained with Bears great Olin Kreutz, who has worked with numerous prospects and NFL offensive linemen.

Only the Eagles and Jets invited Skoronski for top-30 visits.

In Philadelphia, he spent significant time with general manager Howie Roseman, head coach Nick Sirianni and offensive line coach Jeff Stoutland. The Eagles made it clear they thought he could play tackle in the NFL. He came away impressed with the organization and how they treat people, thinking it would be an excellent place to play.

After talking with Jets general manager Joe Douglas, offensive coordinator Nathaniel Hackett and offensive line coach Keith Carter, Skoronski thought the Jets were on the right track. He was intrigued by the opportunities there.

The Bears and Packers also invited him to their facilities on their local prospect days. In about two hours at Halas Hall, Skoronski spent most of his time with offensive line coach Chris Morgan and never met with general manager Ryan Poles — perhaps a tipoff about how the team felt about him.

His visit to Lambeau Field also did not encourage him about a future with the team. He underwent medical testing and met with offensive line coach Luke Butkus — that was it.

"If I hadn't been a Packers fan," he says, "I probably would have considered it a waste of time."

A little over three months ago, Ran Carthon was introduced as the Titans' general manager. He came from the 49ers, where, as their player personnel director, he helped the team draft offensive tackle Mike McGlinchey in the first round and trade for offensive tackle Trent Williams.

Carthon played running back for the Colts and Lions. He is the son of Maurice Carthon, who played fullback for Bill Parcells and later coached on his staff. As much as anyone, Ran understands the value of a domineering blocker. And he understands the Titans didn't have enough of them last season when they gave up the fifth most sacks in the league.

In the offseason, two of the pillars of the Titans' offense, tackle Taylor Lewan and center Ben Jones, became casualties of time and were released. Another starter, guard Nate Davis, went to Chicago as a free agent.

They needed replacements, and they needed upgrades. So when Carthon watched the tape of Skoronski, he was desirous.

"I thought he was a complete offensive lineman," Carthon says. "You like the efficiency he plays with. He's one of those guys who just knows how to block his man and does it at a high level. The number one word I think of when I think about the way he plays is efficient."

Nobody respects commanding blockers more than Vrabel, the former Super Bowl champion linebacker who has presided over four rushing offenses that finished in the top five of the league in five seasons as the head coach in Tennessee.

Vrabel did his own research on Skoronski, including making a call to Fitzgerald. He had a thorough understanding of the player and person before he shook his hand and interviewed him at the combine.

"There wasn't a whole lot of concern with him," Vrabel says. "The reason you have to interview some of these players is you have to figure out if they are a fit. It was easy to see he'd be an easy fit. It was an easy conversation."

The comfort level with Vrabel and the organization was such that the Titans didn't think it was necessary to bring Skoronski to Nashville for a top-30 visit.

"He was just clean," Carthon says. "After our meetings with the scouts and meeting with him at the combine, we didn't have any further questions we wanted to dig on. It was easy for us."

The evaluation was made easier, Vrabel says, by watching tape of Skoronski back-to-back with tape of other top tackle prospects. Carthon added that they separated the tackles in part by who fit their scheme best.

Analytics for blocking efficiency broken down by run and pass confirmed what the eyes attested, Carthon says, as did blocking win percentages in man and zone concepts.

And so Carthon chuckled at the arm-length discussion.

"He's played at a high level against some high-round draft picks, NFL players with arm length," he says. "Although it doesn't check a box you typically would want, he knows how to play the game within the confines of what he has."

The Titans are not typecasting Skoronski as a guard. Or tackle. Carthon is impressed that he has the physical capability to play either, as well as the willingness. Vrabel says he will not even rule out center.

"I would not put a restriction on where I felt he could play," he says. "When he starts working here, we will do drills that are conducive to overall offensive line fundamentals. Then when we put him in team reps in training camp, we'll figure out where he can help the team."

Before the draft, the Titans, picking 11th, thought Skoronski was beyond their reach. Carthon suspected the Raiders might take him with the seventh selection. It turned out their reach was long enough.

When the Titans chose him, Carthon's phone buzzed. And buzzed and buzzed. About nine texts came in from his friends around the NFL.

"Loved him."

"He was one of our top guys."

"Had he been there for us, we were taking him."

And then there was one from John Lynch, his former boss with the 49ers.

"Great pick," it said.

The next day, Skoronski and his parents were flown to Nashville on a private G2 jet, courtesy of the Titans.

The Titans could have selected quarterback Will Levis with the 11th pick. Instead, they picked Skoronski and chose Levis in the second round. That's interesting because Levis' grandfather Dave Kelly was the defensive line coach at Yale when Skoronski's father was a defensive lineman for the Bulldogs. Bob Skoronski has known Levis' mother, Beth, since she was a little girl.

Peter is where he should be, in Nashville, after all.

At the indoor practice facility at Saint Thomas Sports Park, the first-round pick smiled easily and held up a jersey with his name and the number 1 on it.

On his right was Carthon. On his left, Vrabel.

He wore a Titans cap, and the team photographer captured the moment, this time for the world to share.

There was Peter Skoronski, once again surrounded by hope.

PETER SKORONSKI WAS THE ONLY PLAYER TO DECLINE NFL DRAFT INVITE. HIS LIFE STORY EXPLAINS WHY

BY PAUL SKRBINA
THE TENNESSEAN
MAY 1, 2023

Long before the NFL became a reality, little Peter Skoronski dreamed big about being a lot of things — a lifeguard, a crossing guard, an airport worker.

And a musher. Wait, a musher?

The Tennessee Titans' first-round draft pick, an offensive lineman out of Northwestern who stands 6-foot-4 and weighs 313 pounds, wanted to be the guy who controls the dogs from a sled in the Iditarod.

"One year we found someone that had the Huskies and the sleds ... " Skoronski's father, Bob, said Friday after watching his son's introductory press conference at the Titans' practice facility.

"His uncle actually gave him that for his birthday," Skoronski's mother, Anne, added.

"He was standing on the back of one of the sleds and did the mushing," his father continued. "He was a small, little boy but he was really into that."

While those dreams of being pulled across the Alaska wilderness grew smaller as Skoronski grew larger, he still is an avid follower of the famous sled dog race.

Skoronski's parents didn't allow him to play football until he was a 12-year-old sixth-grader playing against seventh- and eighth-graders. They couldn't remember exactly how big their son was then, but he was big enough that he had a stripe on his helmet, signifying he wasn't allowed to carry the ball.

"I had to play O-line," Skoronski said. "So there wasn't really much of a question about it. I was an O-lineman right off the bat."

What type of offensive lineman Skoronski will be for the Titans — a tackle, which he played in college, or a guard — remains to be seen. But one thing is for sure: the kid who received a tackling dummy as a birthday gift when he was younger, the not-so-little kid who would sit in his backyard and draw up football plays, is in the NFL now, the 11th overall pick of the 2023 NFL Draft.

The pomp and circumstance of the draft wasn't Skoronski's jam, which is part of the reason he respectfully declined the offer to be there. He also wanted to share the moment with those close to him, at a place close to his heart.

With around 100 family, friends and former coaches in attendance, including a "busload" who flew in from Connecticut, Skoronski took the call he's been waiting a long time for Thursday night from new Titans general manager Ran Carthon, owner Amy Adams Strunk and coach Mike Vrabel.

"We knew somebody was going to call at some point," Skoronski's father said. "We kind of mentally eliminated the Titans because everyone said they were going to trade up for a quarterback. Even though this was a destination that we were very much hoping for, I did everything I could to not pay attention to what was going on just because of the nervous aspect of it."

Those nerves settled after Skoronski was picked. By Friday, a smiling Peter Skoronski was plastered on the Titans' Twitter profile.

Though he wasn't in Kansas City for the draft, Skoronski made it a point to go there for another reason. Leading up to the draft, Skoronski and fellow draftee Bijan Robinson took part in a "day in the life" experience at Whiteman Air Force Base. The trip included a flight over the site of the NFL draft in a National Guard UH-60 Black Hawk helicopter.

Skoronski did it, in part, to honor his grandfather, who missed two seasons after his rookie year in the NFL to serve in the Air Force.

"He's as humble as the day is long," Skoronski's college coach Pat Fitzgerald said.

'Look at the bloodlines for this kid'

Fitzgerald was at Maine South evaluating another player when the school's football coach, Dave Inserra, suggested that Fitzgerald remember the name of an eighth-grader who was coming in the next school year. The name was Peter Skoronski.

"I'm like 'Dave, whatever. Come on, man,'" Fitzgerald said. "He's like, 'You won't forget (his name).'"

Curious, Fitzgerald went home and googled the name. What he found was a surprise. What he found was that Skoronski's grandfather, also named Bob Skoronski, was a Pro Bowl tackle and captain under Vince Lombardi with the Green Bay Packers, whom he helped to five NFL championships and two Super Bowl champions in his 11 seasons with the team. He died in 2018.

Fitzgerald also found that Skoronski's father was a defensive lineman at Yale.

"'Oh, wow. Look at the bloodlines for this kid,'" Fitzgerald thought to himself. "'It will be interesting to see if he ends up being a player.'"

Fitzgerald found out for himself after Skoronski chose Northwestern over Notre Dame and Stanford.

Skoronski had the highest pass-blocking grade in the nation (93.0) and allowed just six pressures on 480 pass-blocking snaps. He was the Big Ten offensive lineman of the year last season, a first in Northwestern history. Twice he was named All-Big Ten first team. He was a unanimous first-team All-American in 2022, another Northwestern first. He also was a finalist for the 2022 Outland Trophy, awarded to the nation's best interior lineman on both offense and defense.

Inserra's premonition wasn't the first about Skoronski. When he was 4, his father told Inserra he had his next offensive lineman.

"His dad looked at me and said ‘I’ve got a tackle for you,’" Inserra said. "It’s a very athletic family. He wasn’t saying ‘I’ve got a QB, I’ve got a receiver, I’ve got a RB.’ He straight up said, 'I’ve got a tackle for you,' when he was 4 years old."

'That's unheard of'

Skoronski chose not to graduate early from high school, like some college football players do. Instead he wanted to chase down another goal — being his school's valedictorian in a class of 630. Mission accomplished.

Staying for his full senior year of high school also allowed Skoronski to participate in track and field, in which he also was an all-state selection, and spend some more precious time with his friends and family.

Staying also meant Skoronski reported to college on Father's Day, giving the high school All-American and three-time all-state selection just 15 install practices and two weeks to prepare for his first college season. No matter, Skoronski started as a true freshman and went on to start 33 games in his three seasons with the Wildcats.

"That's unheard of," Fitzgerald said.

There will be an NFL learning curve, of course. But if Skoronski's past is indicative of his future, which includes blocking for Derrick Henry, that curve will be short.

"Peter has an ability to move people against their will in an era of football where it's all high school 7-on-7 and throwing the rock all over the place," Fitzgerald said. "Peter's fundamentals and his functional strength, he's got unbelievable strength numbers. ... It's a perfect fit for what the Titans do."

Skoronski showed up in Nashville on Friday wearing a simple blue suit, a simple blue tie, brown dress shoes and a big smile, his parents by his side, the future he's dreamed about right in front of him. He held up a blue Titans jersey with his last name and the number 1 on the back as he stood quietly between Vrabel and Carthan.

"Peter is exactly who he is. He's not going to be the loud guy boasting walking down the hallway," Inserra said. "He’s not going to overtake a room. But when it’s time for business, heads up, because he’s all business.

"The Rams were asking me and they were like, 'It's been easy for him. How’s he going to deal with a challenge?' I was like, 'It hasn’t been easy for him. Everything behind the scenes, you can't understand how hard he's worked. He's prepared to the utmost for everything.' "

Including the Iditarod, which he follows closely to this day.

DRAFT DIARIES: SAC STATE GUARD EMBRACES THE CALM BEFORE THE STORM OF NFL DRAFT NIGHT

BY JACK FREEMAN
THE STATE HORNET
APRIL 23, 2025

Editor's Note: This article is part of a larger series, Draft Diaries, which will chronicle Jackson Slater's journey to the NFL Draft.

With the NFL Draft right around the corner, Sacramento State offensive lineman Jackson Slater has had some time to reflect on his pre-draft whirlwind.

Looking back, his trip to the Senior Bowl sticks out as the moment he felt a switch flip. When Slater was at Sac State, he always tried to play with inhuman perfection.

However, in Mobile, Alabama, Slater said his mindset changed completely.

"The growth for me was understanding how imperfect football really is at times," Slater said. "Being able to accept the good and the bad… that's a huge part of my game I haven't been able to perfect."

Slater said that week showed him how football remains the same despite its different levels. He also said the switch in mindset has made it easier to learn, as he's less focused on his shortcomings.

"You don't have this stuff going through your mind anymore like 'Okay, I can't give up a pressure on this play' or 'If I do this, a scout is going to see it and I'm not going to have a shot anymore,'" Slater said. "I got my shot, I've proved I belong along the way."

Since his pro day, Slater went on two top-30 visits to NFL teams' facilities, the Indianapolis Colts and Chicago Bears. He also went on a local day visit with the Seattle Seahawks, on top of Zoom interviews with around 60% of the teams in the league.

"I didn't have a ton of them, but I'm glad I didn't have a bunch of them," Slater said of his top-30 visits. "The travel and not being able to work out piece would have made me crazy a little bit."

Slater said each team did their visits differently. His meeting with the Colts was more of a personal interview with their offensive line coach, while the Bears had him meet with the main decision-makers of the organization.

In an interview with TheSFNiners podcast, Slater said that his visit with the Seahawks was a full circle moment for him as he played Little League with the son of current Seahawks General Manager John Schneider.

Slater said that during his visits, he heard a range of grades on him. They varied from the third to the fifth round, which he said lined up with his expectations of what teams would think of him.

"Coming from a small school, that impacts it," Slater said. "I wouldn't say I think too much into it, but I feel like the team that's going to draft me is the team that feels the best about what I've been able to show."

Slater has repeatedly said he thinks teams evaluate him differently coming from the FCS, and said he thought about transferring at the end of his junior season. Ultimately, he stayed put, citing the feeling of being wanted at Sac State, especially by o-line coach Kris Richardson.

"I wouldn't say I ever wanted to leave," Slater said. "Leaving a legacy at a place where I could call home means a lot more than a few hundred thousand (dollars) to go play at a Big 10 school."

Slater said he feels confident heading into the draft process, but he hopes wherever he lands has a plan to at least develop him, if not to start him. He said he's also looking for an o-line coach who's a teacher and veterans he can learn from.

Going into the draft process, Slater made the move from guard, where he played all four years at Sac State, to center. After meeting with teams, Slater said that most teams viewed him as a swing guard and center.

Now, after two weeks of cross-country flights and Zoom interviews, Slater has made it through the pre-draft marathon. All that's left for him to do is wait.

"In my football career, I've gotten really lucky that even if it might not be the best situation starting out, it usually ends up being a good place for me," Slater said. "I'm ready to accept however it shakes out."

The NFL Draft's first round kicks off Thursday at 5 p.m. PST, with the second and third on Saturday and the remaining seven on Sunday.

TITANS KICKER JOEY SLYE HONORING LEGACY OF LOST BIG BROTHER, A.J., WITH EACH KICK, AND CONVERSATION

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 28, 2025

NASHVILLE – Joey Slye is living his dream – kicking in the National Football League.

Yet for Slye, there will always be something, or someone, missing.

Slye's childhood dream always included his older brother being with him. Slye lost his brother, A.J., to leukemia, back in 2014.

His mission today is to carry on his legacy with each kick, and conversation.

"Everything I do I try to bring honor and glory back to him and continue his legacy, which I feel like was cut short," Slye said. "We grew up playing sports our entire life, and my brother never got to watch me play in the NFL… I thought it would be incredible for him to witness, and have an opportunity to experience, with me. But I never had that with him. So, I try to do as much as I can to make it feel like he is still here. And I want to spread the word about him.

"He's the reason I do what I do. When people see me, I want them to see my brother, and I want them to know my brother's story."

The Titans signed Slye, who kicked for the Patriots in 2024, back in March to replace veteran Nick Folk. In his first six NFL seasons, while playing with the Panthers, Texans, 49ers, Commanders and Patriots, he's made 147-of-180 (81.7 percent) field goals. He made a 63-yarder, the fourth longest in NFL history, last season in New England.

Slye made his Nissan Stadium debut on Saturday, when he made all seven of his field goals – including a 66-yarder – during the team's open practice.

Slye, 29, said his mission this season is to put together the most complete season of his career, and he believes his chances are enhanced by being around new special teams coordinator John Fassel, and fellow specialists Johhny Hekker, the team's punter and holder, and long snapper Morgan Cox.

Also, one of his big priorities: Getting involved in the community in Tennessee.

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis is especially close to his heart – it's where A.J. bravely fought acute myeloid leukemia before passing away on Thursday, Feb. 27, 2014.

During his career, Slye has regularly visited hospitals to spend time with patients dealing with cancer. While with the Patriots, Slye went to Boston Children's Hospital, and was connected with One Mission, a Massachusetts-based pediatric cancer foundation for kids fighting cancer. While in Washington D.C., he went to Children's National Hospital.

Slye remembers well what his brother went through during his battle with cancer, when he went through chemotherapy, radiation, surgeries, and a bone marrow transplant.

"He battled for 14 months through one of the most hellish circumstances you could ever imagine, and did it with a smile on his face," Slye said. "The perspective it gave me as a young kid, and the life I wanted to live, is why I do what I do."

A.J. Slye was 2 ½ years older than Joey, and they did everything together.

While they were growing up, Slye's father worked for the United States Army, so the family moved around a lot, living in California, Montana, New Mexico before settling in Virginia.

It made the brothers even closer.

A.J. was in his first year at Salisbury University in Maryland when he began having some neck and back pain. After undergoing tests, he was diagnosed with acute myeloid leukemia, a rare form of blood cell cancer.

The battle took a toll on A.J.'s body, but not his spirit.

A.J. Slye was 20 years old when he died, less than two months before Joey turned 18, and about to graduate from high school.

Little brother will never forget any of it.

"I'm not sure there's a day that goes by that Joey doesn't bring up his brother, and his brother growing up," Hekker said. "It's definitely molded him into the man that he is today. Joey is a hard-working dude that is detail-oriented. The relationship he had with his brother growing up definitely made him a tougher person, which you have to be to be an NFL kicker.

"I love that he is using his platform now to raise awareness and funds for leukemia research, and for supporting families going through similar things that he did. I love seeing the heart he has for that community."

Slye has a tattoo on his right shoulder that shows a picture of he and A.J. the last time they played football together in high school at North Stafford. After successful kicks, Slye has raised six fingers skyward to honor his brother, who wore No.6 when they played together in high school.

The Slye family started the SlyeStrong#6 Foundation in honor of A.J, and every year, the foundation hosts a handful of events and charity drive to benefit hospitals and families navigating a cancer diagnoses. The Foundation also gives out six $2,000 scholarships.

This year A.J. would've turned 31 and in honor of that, Slye is working to raise $310,000 for the Leukemia Lymphoma Society.

Slye has used the NFL's My Cause My Cleats Initiative to highlight his brother's legacy.

"Any opportunity that I have to put a spotlight on cancer, cancer research, especially childhood cancer is something I want to get behind," Slye said.

Slye never hesitates to bring his brother up in conversations, and he never will.

When Slye and his wife, Brittaney, had a new baby girl in November, they named her Palmer Memphis Slye in tribute to her uncle A.J., and his time at St. Jude in Memphis, Tennessee.

"Whenever a tragedy happens, everyone has an introspective look, like, 'that could have been me'," Slye said. "A car accident happens, and people might think, 'that could have been me.' To me, it's made me think more like: 'What am I doing with the days that I am given? The things I go through, I think: What would my brother be doing in this instance?"

"What I try to do is have a lot of success throughout my career, and with that success I want it to follow with having the opportunity to have conversations about my brother, and the life that he lived and the fight that he had to endure."

NEW TITANS CB L'JARIUS SNEED THANKFUL TO BE VESSEL OF GOD FOR HIS FAMILY

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
APRIL 4, 2024

NASHVILLE – L'Jarius Sneed walked the hallways at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park for the first time on Tuesday, and he was beaming with pride.

After agreeing to a whopping new contract with the Titans following the team's trade with the Chiefs, Sneed couldn't help but think of his good fortune.

And, about how far he'd come.

"It is a feeling that I can't explain," said Sneed, his six-year-old son and his mother by his side for the experience. "I've tried not to shed tears, but I was just thinking about how blessed I am. To be able to give my kids this experience, that I wish I had when I was little. I am glad God made me a vessel to show my kids."

Sneed arrives in Tennessee after experiencing big success with the Chiefs.

In Kansas City, he won two Super Bowl rings, and developed into one of the NFL's top young cornerbacks.

It's where he was first able to begin giving back to those around him after going through tough times growing up, when nothing came easy. Sneed managed to fight through it all, a childhood when both his parents were imprisoned, and times were hard as he tried to find his own way, his brothers leading the way then.

After being introduced as the newest Titan on Tuesday, Sneed reflected on his life's experiences, and how much he wanted to change things moving forward.

"I want things different," Sneed said. "I even sat down with my family, and I have meetings with my family, on how I want to be better at this. 'I want this, I want that. I don't want things done this way.' It is cycle breaking. I want to break the cycle for my family, for generation curses. And I thank God for letting me be that person to change their lives."

Sneed is doing that by the way he lives, with perseverance, and faith.

After playing football at Minden High School (Louisiana), Sneed didn't have offers from big schools as he looked to play at the next level.

"Louisiana Tech, Grambling, Southern, Alabama State, Nichols State," Sneed said, "and that was it."

Sneed picked Louisiana Tech, where he made the transition from receiver to defensive back.

"My first year of college, 2016, I could say it was hell," Sneed said with a chuckle. "We had two-a-days, it was my first time playing defense. It was a whole lot of new stuff. But I found my way."

After playing at Louisiana Tech, Sneed wasn't sure what would come next, but he had the NFL on his mind.

Sneed said he got a "late invite" to the NFL Combine, where he had a chance to put his talents on display.

The Chiefs ended up drafting him in the fourth round of the 2020 NFL Draft, and he earned All-Rookie honors from the Pro Football Writers Association of America his first NFL season.

In 57 games (54 starts) over four seasons (2020-23) with the City Chiefs, Sneed totaled 303 tackles, 19 tackles for loss, 6.5 sacks, 10 interceptions, 40 passes defensed, four forced fumbles, three fumble recoveries. He developed a reputation for being one of the league's rising defensive standouts.

When the Chiefs placed the franchise tag on him last month, the Titans targeted, and eventually traded, for him.

"I am definitely living proof that if you put the work in, it doesn't matter where you are from or what school you went to," Sneed said. "If you stay close to God, things will work out, with His will."

In addition to his accomplishments on the field, Sneed did some pretty cool things off it in Kansas City as well.

After his rookie season, he bought his mother, Jane, a four-bedroom house in Minden, Louisiana.

A year ago, he surprised her with a new car – a black Audi.

Since his second year in the NFL, Sneed has also raised more than $35,000 for Big Brothers Big Sisters.

"Kids with needs, foster kids," he explained. "If they need prom dresses, other things. I wish I had that when I was little, someone to help me, because my mother and father weren't there when I was young.

"For me, it is such a blessing, being the baby boy of the family, to be able to take care of your family and put them in a better position, and to be able to help others who need it."

On the field, Sneed plans to pay off for the Titans with his aggressive style of play.

The 6-foot-1, 192-pounder is talented, and confident.

"Confidence, resiliency, relentless," Sneed said of what he brings to the Titans. "I am a hell of a player. I love my game. I don't fear anything. I am not afraid to lose, but I am going to win most of my reps."

Off the field, he plans to continue leading the way for his family.

In addition to his son, Kyson, Sneed also has a two-month-old daughter, Kaimira.

Young Kyson gave a thumbs up when asked about his dad's new team as he bounced through the Titans facility this week, after giving his dad some comic relief through the trade process.

"He tells me: Dad, why did (the Chiefs) get rid of you?," Sneed said with a laugh. "To be six years old, he knows what's going on. But he likes the (Titans') logo, the colors. He has a new team now, a new family."

So, too, does dad.

And he's ready to get started on his new chapter, in Tennessee.

"A new team, a new city to raise my kids," Sneed said. "I can't wait to see what Nashville brings me and my family."

FROM SUPER BOWL LIX: TITANS RB TYJAE SPEARS CELEBRATED FOR HIS SUCCESS ON A DAY WHEN A GIANT MURAL OF HIM WAS ON DISPLAY IN NEW ORLEANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
FEBRUARY 9, 2025

NEW ORLEANS – Tyjae Spears is a success story from these parts, a Ponchatoula native who starred at Tulane and then was drafted into the NFL.

Here on Saturday, the running back was celebrated on a day when a massive mural of him in his Titans uniform was put on display.

It was all part of a community event at City Gear in Gentilly, La., and part of a thank you to Spears for all he does to support his home and community.

"I have to shout it out to God for this special opportunity," Spears said. "I've been blessed."

A third-round draft pick of the Titans in the 2023 NFL Draft, Spears just finished his second season with the club. Spears ran 312 yards and four touchdowns in 2024, while also catching 30 passes for 224 yards and another score.

Spears spends a good chunk of his offseasons back home in the New Orleans area, and with Super Bowl LIX in town this weekend, it turned into a celebration.

Spears was part of a panel in front of high schoolers, when he discussed how sports helped him achieve his dreams.

The mural inspired by was created by Jay McKay, a local NOLA artist.

"What an honor," Spears said as he admired the work. "It's amazing."

The organizers of the event said Super Bowl week provided the perfect time to close out what's been a long journey with the On the Rise content for Spears.

"City Gear and Nike are collaborating to tell my story, called On the Rise," Spears said. "They're telling my story, the timeline of my story, from when I started in high school all the way to the NFL.

"They've been showing a lot of love to me."

Jets linebacker Quincy Williams and Giants linebacker Kayvon Thibodeaux were also part of the panel for high schoolers from St. Mary's Academy, St. Augustine High School and Frederick A Douglass High School.

In addition to the panel, the high schoolers participates in skills and drills games, created their own Mardi Gras beads, and played Madden. They also customized their Fanatics Super Bowl LIX shirts, and sampled local food trucks.

Spears mingled with the kids, and had fun himself.

What was his biggest message to them?

"Talk to them and tell them how my life has turned out pretty good," Spears said, "but you have to make good decisions and have a mindset that you want to do something big.

"And, if I can do it, you can do it."

TITANS RB TYJAE SPEARS: "I HAVE THE GREATEST GIFT IN THE WORLD, AND THAT'S MY DAD"

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 15, 2024

NASHVILLE – Margene Spears was cooped up inside his Louisiana home, recovering from a knee scope after a staph infection.

While he recovered, those around him went on with their daily lives.

Spears remembers one day when his older children raced to go outside.

One child stayed behind.

"Two-year-old Tyjae," Margene Spears recalled with a smile. "He didn't want to leave me. As a two-year-old kid, with his older brothers wanting to go outside and play, he was barely able to talk and was like, "Daddy, can I do anything for you?" He wanted to get me water. He wanted to help me.

"Ever since then I just noticed he was different."

Roughly 20 years later, Titans running back Tyjae Spears smiled when hearing his father had retold that story.

Spears, set to begin his second NFL season, said his father has looked out for him since the day he was born.

And, on Father's Day weekend, he thinks about how lucky he's been.

"In my life, I look at a lot of different things, and sometimes I think I don't have this or that," Tyjae Spears said. "But I have the greatest gift in the world, and that's my dad."

Tyjae Spears was born in 2001 in Hammond, Louisiana. He was raised in Ponchatoula, in a big family with five brothers and three sisters. Tyjae was the baby for a long time, until one of his sisters was born.

Even at a young age, Margene Spears said there was something special about his son, as a youngster, and as an athlete. After Spears first began playing in Pop Warner, in fact, some used to tell the elder Spears his young son would be playing on Sundays one day.

"They were right," he said with a smile.

Margene Spears said he did his best to steer Tyjae out of trouble, and keep him involved in sports, football in particular.

While other kids in the neighborhood lost their way in the streets, Margene kept Tyjae focused, and he became a star at Ponchatoula High School.

"Football is what kept him calm," Margene Spears said. "When football was going on, he was good. When football season stopped, I had my hands full."

Tyjae Spears ended up playing college football at Tulane University, not too far away.

It allowed Margene Spears to continue going to all his games.

But as young Tyjae emerged as a star, things weren't always easy. After suffering a torn ACL in high school, Spears suffered another torn ACL in college.

A part of him wanted to give up football. Margene Spears wouldn't let him.

Along the way, dad got to repay his son for his good deed as a kid.

"After my (ACL) surgeries, my dad was the one making sure I had pillows under my leg, had ice in my ice machine," Tyjae Spears said. "He was the one helping me out of the bathroom, making sure I wash off. He's always been there."

Their relationship today is as strong as ever. Tyjae Spears said he talks to his dad every day, sometimes five times a day. Margene Spears went to 18 of 20 Titans games last season, including preseason. He made the drive 8 ½ each way to Nashville for home games.

When talking about his son, Margene Spears beams when thinking about the young man he has become, then about the player he is on the football field. This fall, Tyjae Spears is expected to have a much bigger role alongside running back Tony Pollard on a team looking for production following the departure of Henry. During his rookie season, Spears showed flashes of stardom.

Margene Spears also smiles when thinking about the adversity his son has faced in his life, and that he's been able overcome it.

"I'm so proud of him," he said.

He laughed when telling a story about teen-aged Tyjae and one on of his brothers joining him for work one day. Margene Spears does carpentry work, remodeling houses in Louisiana.

"He went with me, and I tried to get him to hold sheetrock over head," Margene recalled. "He'd be complaining, whining. I told them both of you play football, taking hits. But you can't hold a piece of sheetrock over your head?"

Tyjae Spears remembers that day.

"It was after a heavy squat day," Tyjae recalled. "Do you know how heavy sheetrock is? It's heavy, plus you're holding it over your head."

Margene Spears said he hopes his son knows how proud of him, so tells him daily.

Tyjae Spears said he can tell from the look on his dad's face. He knows his dad changed some things in his own life to be more present in his.

He wants to repay him every day of his life, and as he grows older.

"My relationship with my dad, it makes me see what real love, genuine love is," Tyjae Spears said. "And as days go on, I always wish I could be a better son to him in different ways.

"When I have kids in the future, I'm going to try to be the same, but it's going to be hard with the great example he's set in my life."

HOW TYJAE SPEARS, REPAIRED KNEE AND ALL, IS SPRINTING TO STARDOM WITH TENNESSEE TITANS | ESTES

BY GENTRY ESTES
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
SEPTEMBER 7, 2023

When the topic comes up, rookie running back Tyjae Spears extends his right leg instinctively, stretching out across the steps on which he's seated. As he does, a large scar becomes visible.

"Some dark times," he says, thinking back. "… I've been through a lot."

That scar says more than Spears will — or needs to — about his knee.

It's a part of his story that's already well-known. It's why some NFL teams reportedly removed him from their draft boards. It's why Spears felt the need to warn attendees at his event on Day 2 of the draft: "Pump the brakes. I don't want to see long faces at the end of the night if I don't get picked."

The knee is also why Spears once considered giving up football, the sport in which he's so immensely gifted that the Tennessee Titans took him in the third round anyway, turning Spears' draft gathering into a party that the bayou town of Ponchatoula, Louisiana (population just shy of 8,000) won't soon forget.

Now that Spears has made it out, he doesn't plan on going back.

"I guess what people consider their chip (on their shoulder), my chip is where I come from," Spears says. "I just can't go back to it."

He doesn't mean that as a slight on his upbringing or where he's from. He speaks with pride about his family, his eight siblings – five brothers, three sisters – and his parents who worked hard to make ends meet. And also about his hometown. Did you know, for instance, that Ponchatoula is the Strawberry Capital of the World? "We got the best strawberries in the world, man," Spears says.

It's not just the small town or "humble" beginnings (an adjective that can be a cliché, though Spears agrees with it). His ambition runs a lot deeper than that. Through the parts of his story that aren't as well-known, ones that collectively molded him into someone who understands how special the opportunity he has.

But, yeah, it's the knee, too.

"I didn't come from the worst place," Spears says, "but I didn't come from the best place. There's a lot of things that I went without. I just don't want to have those same feelings recycled again. As I get older in my life, I just don't want to go without anymore, and I don't want my kids to go without. … I'm depending on myself, and I've got a dad and a mom depending on me, too. Also nephews and little cousins and nieces and all looking up to me.

"So if I stop now, if I quit now, I'm quitting not just on myself. I'm quitting on all of them."

Early steps with Tennessee Titans, Derrick Henry

Two ACL surgeries. Arthritis. After the Titans took Spears, NFL Network's Ian Rapoport told viewers that Spears lacked an ACL, leaving questions about whether he'd last past his first NFL contract. Colleague Daniel Jeremiah echoed, "He was not on every draft board, but nobody disputes how talented he is."

You can imagine, of course, how this struck Titans fans. A running back with a bum knee? In the third round? For the Titans? Who already had Derrick Henry? Who badly needed a wide receiver or tight end? And who, above all, had their roster obliterated by injuries for two seasons in a row?

The Titans did draft Spears out of Tulane as a complement to Henry – for now. Long-term, it's not reaching to believe that Spears is earmarked as Henry's replacement.

"Oh, he's a three-down runner," Titans general manager Ran Carthon assured during the draft. "He can run between the tackles. He's elusive. He can make guys miss as well as contribute in the passing game."

It's not unprecedented for a running back to excel with knee trouble. In 1991, the great Peter King documented for Sports Illustrated how most teams were scared of drafting Thurman Thomas before the Buffalo Bills took the risk in the second round, their owner Ralph Wilson telling GM Bill Polian, "Life's a gamble. Go ahead."

Thomas ran for 12,074 yards, caught 472 passes and totaled 88 touchdowns in 13 NFL regular seasons, and he did it – he said years later – with a torn ACL, according to NewYorkUpstate.com.

Obviously, it's way too early to compare Spears with a legend like Thomas. But this preseason showed Carthon's initial assessment to be correct, just as it has replaced concern about Spears' knee with anticipation for the explosiveness he'll add to the Titans' offense.

Spears ran for 117 yards on 22 carries (5.32 average) in three preseason games. That included an impressive 33-yard touchdown against the Vikings in which he leaped over a defender near the line of scrimmage and somehow never broke stride, sprinting untouched into the end zone.

"I know I can't do nothing like that," Henry said. "It's great to have a change-up and have a back that can be explosive. I know when he hit the ground, he took off."

After offseason practices this summer, Spears could often be seen catching passes from a machine.

He proved his toughness, too, with his willingness to pick up blocks in pass protection.

“A lot of times these fast, speed backs don’t want to really stick their face up in there on pass protection,” Titans quarterback Ryan Tannehill said, “and he’s proven on multiple occasions that he’s willing and able to step up in there against a linebacker. … I love Tyjae, man. I’m excited to have him on our team.”

That job at Wal-Mart

The first time Spears hurt his knee was in high school. The second time, it was while scoring a touchdown early in the 2020 season for Tulane. And he realized it instantly. NOLA.com wrote that he crawled and tossed “his helmet off in frustration” before trainers made it to him.

Facing another lengthy ACL recovery, Spears started wondering whether he’d make it back to football.

“It was very difficult for him. It was difficult for all of us,” said Nicole Hart, Spears’ mother.

About that time, during the COVID-19 pandemic, he worked at Wal-Mart to make some extra money. The job entailed unloading delivery trucks. An 18-wheeler would arrive with, say, up to 3,000 items and “we had to take off every single piece,” he remembers. “That humbled me so much. I said, ‘Man, I’m going to do whatever I’ve got to do in football, because I do not want to work a real job.’”

“I think that job may have lasted a week, a week-and-a-half,” said Hart with a laugh.

“We don’t really realize that a lot of things really do happen for a reason,” she added. “In the midst of him going to get a job at Wal-Mart, maybe that was during a time when he was battling with, ‘Do I really want to play football? I just want to give up. I want to quit.’ Maybe he had to have that moment to see, ‘Man, this is not what I really want to do.’”

Spears made it back and rushed for 863 yards in 2021. Then in 2022, he had 1,581 rushing yards and 19 touchdowns in his final 14 games for the Green Wave, who went 12-2.

A stellar season for Spears was punctuated by an MVP performance in a Cotton Bowl victory over Southern Cal. He ran for 205 yards against the Trojans, making eight consecutive 100-yard performances for a player who’d jumped well on the radar entering the NFL draft.

There was one team in particular that Spears hoped was interested in him.

Back home for Titans-Saints

As fortune has it, Spears’ first regular-season game for the Titans will be Sunday against the New Orleans Saints.

In the Superdome. About 45 minutes from his hometown.

Yes, Spears grew up a Saints fan.

That made for a punch in the gut when, during the draft’s third round, the Saints had the No. 71 pick and used it to take a running back: Kendre Miller from TCU.

Spears had held up well in public all night. But after that, he went off to collect himself, and “in the middle of that is when he actually got the call” 10 picks later from the Titans, said Hart.

“The whole world could have put two and two together and figured out I wanted to go to the Saints,” Spears says. “I’m here in Tennessee, and I love it. I feel like things happen for a reason.”

Plenty of friends and family from Ponchatoula will be on hand for Sunday’s opener, but it still probably won't be enough. So many want to be there that Spears jokes, “I’m putting a limit on it. I’m buying 10 tickets. That’s all I’m buying. If I’m feeling good, I might get 15.”

It’s the first real taste of NFL stardom for Spears. There hasn't been much to this point. Spears says he’s still able to go around Nashville without being bothered or noticed — and he knows enough to appreciate that. He once went to an event with Henry and saw how many people approached the Titans’ star for pictures and autographs. “Man, how do you do it?” Spears asked him. “That’s just what comes with it,” replied Henry.

“People still don’t know who I am,” Spears says. “So I can go and have fun with my family and friends and whoever else I want to take out, because nobody knows me. But is it going to be the same in six, seven months or a year?

“I don’t think it’s going to be the same.”

ROOKIE RB TYJAE SPEARS THANKFUL FOR HIS NFL OPPORTUNITY WITH THE TITANS

TITANS ONLINE
MAY 22, 2023

NASHVILLE – The day after the NFL Draft, Tyjae Spears drove through the streets of New Orleans looking for Titans jerseys.

Spears had been selected by the team less than 24 hours earlier, and he wanted to represent his new squad at a party celebrating the development.

This week, Spears had his own team-issued jersey.

The former Tulane running back took part in rookie minicamp last weekend before joining veterans in the offseason program this week.

The Titans are scheduled to begin OTAs next week.

The 5-foot-11, 195-pound Spears looked good in the open rookie minicamp, catching a number of balls out of the backfield, and then showing off his speed – and moves – in space. He also had some nice runs after taking handoffs.

"It felt good," Spears said. "It's just a blessing to be a part of the team. It feels good, coming from where I came from. I am on an NFL team, and I am super-excited.

"All the guys I've encountered, they've been great. Every coach, they demand a lot out of you. It's a great organization, great people."

Spears, selected in the third round of the NFL Draft, ran for 1,581 yards and 19 touchdowns in 2022 for the Green Wave, averaging 6.9 yards per carry. He also caught 22 passes for 256 yards and two touchdowns. Spears had a big game in the Cotton Bowl against USC, when he ran for 202 yards and four touchdowns. He was named the Cotton Bowl MVP after the team's win.

In four college seasons, Spears ran for 2,910 yards and 31 touchdowns while also catching 48 passes for 564 yards and three scores. Spears was the 2022 American Athletic Conference Offensive Player of the Year, when he tied for the FBS lead with 21 scrimmage touchdowns.

Spears, whose locker is located right next to veteran running back Derrick Henry's locker, brushed off a number of questions about his health, specifically one his knees.

He made one thing clear:

"I feel perfectly fine – there ain't nothing wrong with me," Spears said. "I am healthy.

"I guess (my health) is a question that's always going to pop up, but I am here. And (the Titans) had a lot of faith in me to get me where they got me at. So, I am healthy and they know I am healthy."

Spears, who is from Ponchatoula, La., is fully aware he'll get to head back home to Louisiana when the Titans open the season on September 10 against the Saints.

He also knows a lot of work needs to be down between now and then, and he's just getting started.

"That is so far away," Spears said with a smile. "I am just taking it one day at a time."

Spears also knows he's thankful for the opportunity.

"Lately, I have been praying a lot," Spears added. "And the main thing I try to start and finish with is how thankful I am for being here, being a part of an NFL organization. Because I think back, and only two or three people where I am from got that opportunity. So, I am super blessed, and super appreciative."

TITANS DL T'VONDRE SWEAT FEELING "GREAT", READY TO ATTACK YEAR 2 IN NFL

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 3, 2025

NASHVILLE – T'Vondre Sweat focused on the little things this offseason, like they're big things.

His plan was to strengthen his shoulders, and improve his mobility by targeting his hips.

The Titans defensive lineman, whose weight was a topic of conversation this time last year, said he's also feeling lighter and quicker, although he wouldn't get into scale specifics.

"Ask coach Callahan," Sweat said with a smile.

As far as Sweat is concerned, this is all anybody needs to know:

"I feel great," Sweat said after Tuesday's OTA.

Heading into the 2025 season, Sweat said his goal is to be better than last year.

"I am very excited going into my second year," he said. "I feel a lot more comfortable playing this game, especially my second year in this league.

"I am ready, and it's going to be good, man."

A second-round draft pick by the Titans in the 2024 NFL Draft, Sweat played in all 17 games during his rookie season in 2024. He finished with 51 tackles, 23 quarterback pressures, and a sack. Sweat also had a memorable fumble recovery, stiff-arm and run late in the season, a year when he also tallied four tackles for a loss.

Callahan didn't divulge Sweat's size – he's listed at 6-foot-4, 366 pounds. But he did rave about the big man's potential.

"He's a supremely talented person," Callahan said of Sweat. "There's not a lot of people on the planet that can do what he does at his size. And it's more about the consistency of performance. I'd like to see more from the pass rush game. He's got ability to rush for a man his size and that's a point of emphasis for him is affecting the quarterback more. He's a tremendous run defender, that was a strength of his already from last year. Part of it's going to be just improving the detail and then improving the ability to help affect the quarterback. So I think those are the things we're looking for progression wise from him. And he has the ability to be a full three-down player. He's not necessarily your explosive interior pass rushers that are out there. But he's got great ability to push the pocket too. So, looking for more of that from him and I think he had a solid start to his career, and I think there's a whole lot more meat on that bone for him."

Defensive line coach Tracy Rocker said he's pushing Sweat every day.

"What's improved is he walks out here, and he's seen the speed of the game before, it is not new to him," Rocker said of Sweat. "And, he has a better feel for his mates next to him.

"I have no doubts he wants to be good. … I want him to be the best player in the NFL, that is my goal for him. But he has to take the bull by the horns… He just has to keep working to make his imprint in this league."

Sweat said he's willing to put in the work, just as long as it doesn't include Pilates.

Sweat tried that this offseason, and he's not a fan.

Sweat said he is willing to work to be the best he can be.

"What I learned (last year) is take care of your body," he said. "Your body is everything, and if you don't feel good, you can't be performing at a high level."

TITANS' SWEAT EARNS SPOT ON PFWAS ALL-ROOKIE TEAM

BY JOHN GLENNON
NASHVILLE POST
JANUARY 21, 2025

T'Vondre Sweat's strong first NFL season has earned him a spot on the Pro Football Writers of America's All-Rookie team.

A nose tackle, Sweat was one of four defensive linemen selected for the team, along with Denver's Jonah Elliss, the L.A. Rams' Braden Fiske and Indianapolis' Laiatu Latu.

Sweat was only the third Titans rookie in the last five years to make the PFWA All-Rookie team, joining tight end Chig Okonkwo (2022) and punter Ryan Stonehouse (2022).

The Titans selected Sweat in the second round, the 38th overall pick, of the NFL Draft.

Titans coach Brian Callahan had high praise for Sweat near the end of the team's season.

"I just think you see his power in the run game and you see his ability to stuff the run," Callahan said. "He keeps the linebackers clean so [that] they can float, scrape, make tackles. That part's been really good. It's probably been his biggest strength. He eats up double teams.

"He's shown the ability to push the pocket as a rusher. I think he's got some room to improve as a rusher, too. But for a guy his size to be able to still have some effect on the rush has been positive."

The 6-4, 366-pound Sweat posted a 76.2 overall defensive grade from Pro Football Focus, which ranked first among all rookie defensive linemen. His 75.0 grade against the run was also first among rookie linemen, and his 64.7 pass-rush grade ranked fourth among rookie linemen.

Sweat played all 17 games for the Titans, finishing with 51 tackles (seventh on the team), 23 quarterback pressures (fourth on the team), one sack, four tackles for loss, one pass defended, one forced fumble and one fumble recovery.

"His stamina to play has been incredibly impressive," Callahan said. "I mean he's played a ton of snaps over the course of the season ... As a person, he's a phenomenal personality. I mean the team loves him, the room loves him. He's got a way about him that you just enjoy being around. Those are the kind of guys we want as many of as we can get."

The Titans' first-round pick, left tackle JC Latham (No. 7 overall), did not make the all-rookie squad, as the two tackle spots were taken by the Los Angeles Chargers' Joe Alt and Baltimore's Roger Rosengarten.

TITANS ROOKIE DL T'VONDRE SWEAT SURPRISES HIS MOM WITH HER "DREAM HOUSE"

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
AUGUST 2, 2024

NASHVILLE – Titans rookie defensive lineman T'Vondre Sweat is a self-proclaimed "mama's boy."

And, for good reason.

Sweat said his mom has sacrificed a lot for him over the years, regularly working three jobs to make ends meet so her three sons could be more comfortable. There were times, Sweat said, when she didn't eat, just so her young boys could.

"Without my mom," Sweat said, "I wouldn't be here today. I can't say in words how much I appreciate her."

Sweat offered his mother, Lashunda Ross, more proof on Friday.

He surprised her with her "dream house."

It all unfolded this morning in Houston, when Ross was handed flowers as she walked into the house her youngest son bought for her.

She then watched a video with this message:

"I just want to thank you a lot for all you have done for me," Sweat, wearing a Titans shirt, said from Nashville, where he's in the middle of training camp. "I can't be more thankful for a mom like you. Everyone in the world already knows you're special to me. I just want to say: I love you, I love you, I love you. I want to thank you for everything you've done for me since I was a little kid with my other two brothers."

And…

"Mom, I just want to say: I finally got the house you wanted. Dreams do come true. I can't appreciate you more. And, I hope you love your new home."

Sweat beamed with pride the day before, when he talked about his mother, and the opportunity he was getting to purchase her a home in Houston, Texas.

Sweat said his mom had been living in an apartment, but they began looking for homes for her in recent months, after he signed his rookie contract.

Growing up, Sweat said the family didn't have things easy. There was a point when his mom, himself, and his two brothers had to move into his aunt's apartment.

"There were six kids in one apartment," Sweat recalled. "And that's hard."

Lashunda Ross worked at a hospital, at a Foot Locker, and at other jobs to make ends meet.

Through it all, she attended all of Sweat's games, from his Pop Warner days to his high school playing days to his years at the University of Texas.

"She's always been my No.1 fan," Sweat said of his mom. "She's always been by my side."

Now, she has a new home, thanks to her youngest son, the baby of the family.

Sweat, selected in the second round of the 2024 NFL Draft, said he's thankful for having the chance to repay his mom for all she's done.

"I have to say, I appreciate the Titans, Miss Amy, Ran Carthon and everyone for believing in me and helping me with this opportunity. Without them believing in me, I wouldn't have the opportunity to help my mom like this," Sweat said.

"My mom, she's special. I love her to death, and I respect her so much. She's a very, very, very strong woman, and she's sacrificed so much. I can't say in words how much I appreciate my mom being in my life, so I'm happy I can do this for her. And, for all the guys out there: Love your moms, man, because you only get one."

NO SWEAT? TITANS NT T'VONDRE SWEAT MAKES NICE FIRST IMPRESSION IN ROOKIE MINICAMP

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 12, 2024

NASHVILLE – Titans rookie T'Vondre Sweat looked like a dancing bear as he maneuvered his way through the stand up dummies at rookie minicamp over the weekend.

The 6-foot-4, 366-pound defensive lineman showed off some pretty nifty footwork and agility as he raced around the pads.

On another drill, Sweat exploded out of his stance, pushed past another pad, and then leveled a red dummy at the conclusion of a practice rep in individual drills.

Eyes of nearby spectators lit up, about the same way Sweat did when he heard a question from a trainer during a break in the action: Need some water?

"Hell yeah!," Sweat said before dousing his mouth.

Rookie minicamp is on the books for Sweat and the team's other first-year players.

Two practices down and many more to go as the team's second-round pick does his best to get up to speed as quickly as possible in the NFL.

"I felt great," Sweat said. "Just being here, in Nashville, it's amazing. It was awesome to be out there. … Anyone, when you haven't played football in a minute, of course you're going to come out with a little rust. But once you're going, you're going."

Sweat said he worked with other Texas Longhorns from the time the NFL Draft took place, and minicamp, to prepare himself.

This week, he'll be incorporated into work with the veterans in the offseason program, with OTAs and a minicamp, on the horizon.

Titans Coach Brian Callahan said he was impressed with what he saw from Sweat right out of the gate.

"He looked good," Callahan said of Sweat. "I thought he moved well. You never know when guys get here, what they're going to look like. And I thought he did a nice job. Looked like the guy we saw on tape, which was good to see."

Sweat, who said during a conference call after being selected he wanted to play in the 350- to 355-pound range this fall, has already been in communication with team nutritionist Lauren Silvio about his diet.

Sweat said he'll work with Silvio and the team's coaching staff to find "that perfect weight for me," but he's not sure what it will be at this point.

Already, Sweat said he's already gotten a pretty good feel for defensive line coach Tracy Rocker, a coach he plans to bust his rear end for on a daily basis. Rocker worked with Sweat on his technique on the practice field during rookie camp, stressing the importance of keeping his feet going forward in drills.

"As far as skill set, he's a big man and this is a big man's league," Rocker said of Sweat. "And, I think that definitely helps us up front. Hopefully this guy develops into what we all want him to be. It's going to take time ... but he wants to (be great)."

After his first weekend in Nashville, Sweat is even more excited to get going.

"I'm not here to prove anything," he said. "It's a blessing to be here, in this organization. Just getting to come out here, competing with my teammates, being the best for the team. It's pretty exciting.

"I have a lot to work on. I am not a perfect person, no one here is perfect. There's a lot of stuff I have to work on, and I just have to come out here, get better at my craft, and take it day by day."

THE TWO SIDES OF TEXAS SUPERSTAR T'VONDRE SWEAT

BY DAVE WILSON
ESPN.COM
DECEMBER 30, 2023

YOU CAN'T MISS T'Vondre Sweat. It's not just that he's 6-foot-4 and 362 pounds, although it has something to do with that.

But then you add the chain. It has a dinner-plate sized, diamond-encrusted medallion that says "MAKE 'EM SWEAT." He doesn't know how much it weighs, only that it sometimes hurts his neck.

"He's about 380 with that big chain on," said Jay Oliphant, Sweat's high school basketball coach.

Sweat loves the chain, which is inspired by the giant clocks Public Enemy rapper Flavor Flav wears. It's big, it's flashy.

It was also his mom's idea.

That makes sense because if you talk to anybody who knows Sweat, the first thing they'll tell you is that he's a mama's boy.

"You get out there and make 'em sweat," Lashunda Ross, his mom, said of the inspiration for the medallion. "They're nervous when they see you. They always have two people double-teaming you."

The medallion has a second side, though. One that people rarely see. And that was all Sweat's work. The back is covered with photos of his mom, his great uncle, his grandmother and great-grandmother.

This is the duality of T'Vondre Sweat, the wrecking ball who is the physical embodiment of Texas' climb to its first College Football Playoff appearance. The goofy, fun-loving mama's boy is also the Big 12 Defensive Player of the Year and weeks ago claimed Texas' first Outland Trophy, given to the best interior lineman in the country, since 1977.

He'll play a key role for the Longhorns on Monday when No. 3 Texas faces No. 2 Washington in the College Football Playoff at the Allstate Sugar Bowl (8:45 p.m. ET, ESPN/ESPN App) with the Longhorns looking to free up defenders to slow down the Huskies' dangerous passing attack.

"He is hard to move," Texas defensive coordinator Pete Kwiatkowski said Thursday. "He takes up a lot of space. Takes multiple blockers, and so that frees up the linebackers. Gives us a little bit more luxury to play with lighter boxes."

And Sweat has already served notice to the Huskies that he's ready.

"Let me see how I can say this ... They're a great group of guys, the O-line," Sweat said. "I mean, they won awards. They're just awards to me. You know what I mean? And they've got to face guys like us, so we'll see how it goes down."

He has made 'em sweat all year, following four years of unheralded dirty work on the D-line, with his highest accolade being named honorable mention All-Big 12 last year. He has managed to break out despite arriving as one of the lowest-ranked recruits on Texas' roster, a 3-star on a team that has long underachieved with superstar prospects.

He did it by putting on 100 pounds since leaving high school in Huntsville, a town of about 45,000 in East Texas about 70 miles north of Houston. He did it by smothering defenders -- Texas allowed just 80.9 rushing yards per game, fourth best nationally -- flexing and mean-mugging all over the field.

None of this surprised his coach at Huntsville High, Rodney Southern, who told Sweat when he played for him that he'd eventually be an NFL player. But Southern is surprised at just how giant Sweat has become.

"The last time he came to my office, he walked in the door, stood in the doorway and I mean, he filled up the entire doorway," he said. "What you see now is just a bigger, happier version of what I had."

LIKE THE CHAIN, there are also two sides to T'Vondre Sweat.

"He plays like a bully," Texas nickelback Jahdae Barron said. "A bully, in my eyes, is somebody that wants something and takes things from whoever they want. That's who Sweat is as a player."

"Violent," linebacker Jaylan Ford said. "He makes big people look small. This dude's a beast. He's literally making people move out of his way."

When he's not on the field?

"Goofy," Barron said.

"I know everyone on the team," Ford said. "I'd say [Sweat's] probably the easiest person to talk to, honestly. He just talks to anybody and everybody. It doesn't really matter. He'll probably have a 30-minute conversation with the guy. He's probably the nicest, softest, down-to-earth guy."

He didn't even want to play football to begin with -- "I was a coward, I can't lie," he said of his early years in the sport -- but his mom and his aunt Lisa concocted a plan to help him get excited. Lisa would make cookies, and it was clear to five-year-old T'Vondre that if he scored, he'd get one.

"He'd look over to see if she had the cookies, then he'd take off running and make a touchdown," Ross said. "He was greedy, and he can eat." The reward system worked.

"Maybe that's why I'm so big," Sweat said.

Now, as a fifth-year senior, he's the second-biggest player on Texas' best team since 2009.

Not that he wasn't big at Huntsville. He was 6-4, 280, so athletic that he played at defensive end, once racking up 4.5 sacks in a game. He also starred on the basketball team, where he was named the district's defensive player of the year.

Sweat brags about how nice he was on the court, saying he could play any position from point guard to center.

"I've had a couple of good bigs at Huntsville, but he's the only big that I've had that could actually go out there at 260-plus pounds and he could guard a point guard, he can handle the ball, he can do a little of it all," Oliphant said. "He was telling you the truth on that."

Even while reminiscing and hyperbolizing, Sweat is humble. "I shoulda gone D-III in basketball," he said.

Basketball spotlighted his athleticism, kept him in shape and showed how light he was on his feet, making him more attractive to Texas, where former defensive line coach Oscar Giles took a shine to Sweat. He started racking up offers, about 17 in all. But Texas made the most serious push to get Sweat to sign.

"We wondered why not many people were on him," said Bryan Carrington, the cornerbacks coach at Arizona State, who was one of Sweat's main recruiters at Texas when he was the Longhorns' director of recruiting. "He got offered by Texas A&M, Alabama, TCU, Missouri. But we didn't feel like those schools recruited him hard enough."

Sweat agreed, saying there was only one consistent school in his ear. "I really felt like they didn't want me," Sweat said. "Nobody was recruiting me hard but Texas and Coach Giles."

It might not have mattered anyway. Texas' location made all the difference for his priorities.

"I'm a mama's boy," Sweat said. "I didn't want to be so far but I didn't want to be so close."

And Sweat joked that growing up as a huge fan of Kevin Durant held a little sway, too.

"Honestly, the reason I came to Texas was because I thought I was going to meet KD," Sweat said.

Sweat gained over 100 pounds after getting to Texas and turned himself into the nation's top interior lineman.

SWEAT ARRIVED IN Austin and embraced his new home. He says he started connecting with people outside of football, but was getting a chance to get early playing time as well. Then, he went all-in, and fell in love with country music.

"I'd love to be buddies with Luke Combs," he said, saying "Crazy Beautiful" is his favorite song, adding he also is a huge fan of Morgan Wallen and Brett Young.

"Some of my teammates don't even like riding in the car with me," Sweat said. "Ride with me, you leave me alone. You're gonna listen to this."

And then he got to work in the weight room -- and at the dining table. "When you play at the University of Texas, one thing they do is make sure you eat," Sweat said. "You don't have to worry about food."

By 2021, Sweat packed on those 100 pounds and looked the part, but was uncertain of his future when Tom Herman was fired and Steve Sarkisian replaced him. But Sarkisian hired former Longhorns (and Alabama and NFL) defensive line coach Bo Davis back, and he brought with him a reputation as a molder of NFL talent.

That fall, Texas was blown out at Iowa State, 30-7, and Davis got on the bus after the game and heard laughing. A recording of Davis' reaction was leaked to social media, and it wasn't pretty.

"This s--- ain't a game to me," Davis screamed. "If you think it's a game, get the f--- off this bus. I got my ass kicked and you motherf---ers were laughing."

It became an inflection point in the Longhorns' turnaround, something Sarkisian discussed this season after Texas went back to Ames and won, 26-16.

"I think you could feel the passion in Bo's voice," Sarkisian said. "Bo made it very clear that we're here to win championships and we're here to compete for championships and that's day in and day out ... The fact that people remember that, I think, is a good thing."

Last month, Sweat was on a podcast and said he was the player laughing, joking that he thought maybe the statute of limitations was up on it.

Davis didn't say if he knew, but the two have come a long way since that moment. Sweat says that Davis forged a brotherhood among the defensive linemen that has made all of them better, with Sweat and Byron Murphy becoming perhaps the best pair of tackles in the country.

"It's been fun coaching him because he's got some humor with him and you enjoy that," Davis said. "But he is serious about when it's time to go to work."

Davis' handiwork has been evident in Sweat's breakout season, which came in his fifth year after he decided to bypass the NFL for one last year at Texas.

"He added several zeros to the dollar amount he's gonna get and maybe a couple of commas," Southern said.

But the NFL will have its own assessment of his size.

"Some will question the value of a 360-pound defensive tackle in the first round, but I just really like the player and think he could help an NFL defense in any situation," Mel Kiper Jr. wrote in his most recent Big Board, where he has Sweat ranked as his No. 21 overall prospect.

In 2015, Alabama coach Nick Saban told ESPN that behemoth tackles like 6-5, 349-pound Terrence Cody, a two-time consensus All-American, were going out of style.

"Cody couldn't play for us now," Saban said. "It would be hard to put him in the game, the way it is now, and he was a great player for us. Five or six years ago, nobody could block the guy."

Davis was also Cody's D-line coach. But he said that doesn't hold true for Sweat.

With Sweat in the game, Texas gets pressure on opposing quarterbacks 38% of the time, compared to 31% when he's not, according to ESPN Stats & Info. Opposing quarterbacks complete 58% of their passes to 62% when he's out, and are off-target on passes 16% of the time compared to 7% when he's not on the field.

"A lot of guys are big, but they don't have any hip flexibility," Davis said. "[Sweat] can move like a 290-pound guy. He can turn and get skinny. That's the amazing part you see when you watch him and see the things he does."

Sweat said he's aware of the discussions, saying Davis let him know how to end them.

"If you don't want the weight to be an issue, go be a dawg," Davis told him. "Don't come to me, try to come out two or three plays. Go be you."

Sweat has been himself all year. And he and the Longhorns have reaped the rewards.

"His level of maturity and growth as a teammate has been awesome to watch," Kwiatkowski said. "He's a very influential guy in that locker room."

Sweat has piled up awards, helped lead Texas to the CFP and even got to catch a touchdown pass and strike a premeditated Heisman pose in the Big 12 championship game against Oklahoma State. "Scoring a touchdown in my first Big 12 championship game, and winning it was just amazing," he said. "I mean, it can't be a better feeling than that."

The big man has made 'em sweat all year.

TEXAS LONGHORNS: T'VONDRE SWEAT'S PATH TO COLLEGE FOOTBALL STARDOM

BY JOSH CRISWELL
HOUSTON CHORNICLE
DEC 14, 2023

T'Vondre Sweat has evolved into arguably the most-feared defensive lineman in college football over the course of his five years at the University of Texas. He's also a self-described mama's boy, something that shined through as the Big 12 Defensive Player of the Year accepted the Outland Trophy—awarded to the top interior lineman in the sport—late last week.

"I give all the shout out to my mom, man," Sweat said on the ESPN broadcast, donning a chain containing a photo of his mother, Lashunda Ross. "Without that woman, I wouldn't be able to do a lot of things. That woman just stayed on my neck 24/7, and all I can say is I love that woman to death."

Ross admits her son's words almost brought her to tears on national television, as her reaction was displayed on the screen in real time via a video feed.

"Aw man, I wanted to cry," Ross said. "I really wanted to cry when he was saying those words. I got very emotional when he was talking and saying that in front of the whole [country]. Everybody is watching, but it felt really good, and he tells me all the time.

"When he sees me or we're on the phone or before the game, he always tells me, 'Mom, I appreciate you. Thank you so much for everything and thank you for being there.'"

With a laugh, Ross credits herself for the light-hearted, fun-loving nature of Sweat's personality, something UT fans have become well-acquainted with. This was on full display during the Longhorns' Big 12 title game win over Oklahoma State—a victory that helped secure the program's first College Football Playoff appearance—when Sweat checked in at tight end and caught a touchdown pass, which he celebrated by striking a Heisman pose that almost instantly went viral. "I spilled my whole drink," Ross recalled, failing to contain her laughter.

Hearing from these two paints the picture of a loving mother-son bond, but in terms of Sweat's ascent to college football stardom, the driving force behind his success goes deeper. In a time when high-level youth athletics is littered with helicopter parents constantly questioning coaches, Ross took a different approach—and one that's paid obvious dividends.

In Sweat's early football-playing years, Ross "used to be that mom that was like, 'Don't yell at my baby.'" But as she raised her sons, an understanding was developed that "dealing with boys, you have to be hard on them, you have to keep your foot on their neck." In Huntsville High School football coach Rodney Southern and basketball coach Jay Oliphant, Ross found partners who were more than willing to embrace this type of mentality.

"She's been very valuable in his life," Southern said. "She stayed on him, and she told me way back that she wanted me to stay on him. Obviously, that was easy for me. He's talented, he's a great kid, he's so fun-loving and happy, it wasn't hard to stay on a guy like that."

In Southern's 22 years as a head coach, he's told three players that they have an opportunity to play on Sundays in the NFL. The first two—Miami Dolphins tight end Durham Smythe and former Texas quarterback David Ash—were from his time at Belton High School in Central Texas, with Sweat being the third.

Between Southern and Ross, the pair ensured that Sweat attended as many college camps as possible. He ended up with roughly 17 Division I offers, ultimately choosing the Longhorns over the likes of Alabama and other powerhouse programs.

"[Southern] came to me and told me that T is a special kid and he sees something in him, and he doesn't want him to go the wrong way," Ross said of a conversation they had nearly a decade ago. "I agreed with him, so if somebody is coming and telling me something about my kid, I'm not going to get mad. I'm going to help them. ... If he's not listening, not doing what he's supposed to do, get on him. I give you this permission, because you don't find that too much.

"That's what's wrong with a lot of parents now. They don't want nobody else to discipline their kids when they're in the wrong. I'm not that type."

Recently named the top interior lineman in college football, Sweat played on the edge throughout his entire high school career, in addition to lining up at tight end during his freshman season. He arrived at Huntsville around 220 pounds and gradually grew into his body frame, playing his final two seasons at roughly 285 pounds. He's now listed at 6-foot-4, 362 pounds, yet hasn't lost the quickness and agility that—combined with his overpowering strength and size—terrorized high school opponents.

Sweat was a similarly dominant force on the hardwood, with double-digit rebound, three-plus block performances becoming the norm by his junior year. He contemplated skipping his senior season to focus on lifting weights, before coming to an agreement with Oliphant that both parties would be better off by him returning to the team. Huntsville proceeded to win the District 20-5A title, with Sweat being named the league's Defensive MVP.

"He was extremely quick on his feet," Oliphant said. "He could guard guards, he could guard wings, he was just an extension of talent. What he's doing now doesn't really surprise me at all because he's always been a good, superior athlete. ... Sometimes he would get a rebound and dribble it coast-to-coast. He could do almost anything he wanted to, and it speaks volumes on his talent and athletic ability."

Sweat found himself pondering another decision a couple years later, one that would've had significant ramifications had he followed through.

Ross remembers her son being "scared and nervous" around the time the COVID-19 pandemic hit during his sophomore year of college, and says he contemplated giving up at UT. Her message was direct, reminding Sweat that he didn't come this far to let it all slip away.

"My thing is we don't give up, we don't quit," Ross added. "I said, 'You've got this. We're in this together. Me and you are going to figure it out, and we're going to get through it together.'"

According to Ross, Sweat responded, "Yes ma'am, I'm going to stick it out. I'm not going to give up," to which Ross noted, "That's the attitude I like to hear.'" Then Sweat added a promise, alluding to his likely future in the NFL.

"He said, 'One day, you're not going to have to work—and I'm going to make that promise to you,'" Ross said. "He's sticking by what he said to me, and I'm going to hold him to his word."

EXCLUSIVE LOOK INTO ROOKIE CAM WARD'S DEVELOPMENT AS TITANS QB

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
DECEMBER 5, 2025

The question: Is Cam Ward getting better?

The answer: That's the wrong question.

Ward, the Tennessee Titans rookie quarterback and No. 1 selection in the 2025 NFL Draft, has arguably been the league's least effective quarterback this season. He ranks either worst or second-worst in the NFL in passer rating, yards per attempt, success rate and touchdown rate. And, crucially, he's 1-11 as a starter, condemned to languishing through his rookie year atop the league's least competitive roster.

Is he getting better as the weeks go on? Broadly, yes. But again, that's not the right question. The important things to ask are about how much Ward is growing and what ways the Titans are fostering that growth.

The Tennessean sat down with quarterbacks coach and offensive play caller Bo Hardegree to talk through Ward's development, the behind-the-scenes strategies being deployed and the progress being made. From the ground up, here's the inside look at Ward's development before his 13th start of the season against the Cleveland Browns (3-9) at Huntington Bank Field on Dec. 7 (noon CT, CBS).

Need a news break? Check out the all new PLAY hub with puzzles, games and more!

The lower body: Cam Ward's feet and pocket presence

Coming out of college, Hardegree says, Ward had a tendency to play a little "hoppy." His feet would get underneath him at the top of a dropback and, rather than plant, he'd bounce around. A bouncy quarterback is a less-accurate passer and an off-time passer. So the Titans have put Ward through pocket comfortability drills to tie his feet to his eyes and firm up his base. Less constant movement, more intentional movement.

Hardegree has seen Ward improve at setting his base in clean pockets, and now more of the focus is on how to return his feet to base alignment in dirtier pockets. Hardegree mentions a "transfer drill" the Titans run most practices that requires Ward to reach the top of his drop, step up and move right or left before throwing.

"There’s been some good examples of him doing that where he used to be a little bit jumpy and hoppy," Hardegree says. "That’s helped him. That’s just stuff for his career to keep building off of."

The torso: Cam Ward's arm and the Patrick Mahomes effect

Hardegree and Ward watch a lot of Kansas City quarterback Patrick Mahomes. Ward respects and looks up to Mahomes, the three-time Super Bowl winner and two-time MVP, and sees some similarities in their games. For Hardegree, this creates a useful learning opportunity.

Ward's gotten better at layering throws, Hardegree said. This means Ward is less reliant now on throwing as powerfully as possible every dropback. The RPMs and torque are still there, as are the wacky arm angles that allow Ward to thrive off platform and out of structure. The Titans aren't interested in changing Ward's release or throwing motion, but Mahomes can be used as a useful tool to learn about adapting situationally.

"Sometimes Pat can get his arm angle up a little bit higher when he’s in the pocket to eliminate some batted balls," Hardegree offered as an example. "That’s stuff (Ward's) shown ... It’s just making him aware. He’s seen it. Sometimes he’s throwing to a halfback on a screen or something and he’ll get up on top of it. He can do that."

The eyes: Is Cam Ward seeing what he needs to see?

Seven-time Super Bowl winner Tom Brady couldn't see the future. He wasn't a psychic. His superpower revolved less around knowing what was about to happen and more around knowing what wouldn't happen.

"He eliminated so much before the ball was snapped to be able to get the ball out," said Hardegree, a disciple of Brady's long-time coordinator Josh McDaniels. "... It makes you play faster and you can take a little bit of the post-snap out of it and you’re already knowing where to go with the ball."

Ward's not there yet, but he's in the early stages. He knows where to fix his eyes before a snap. He knows how to recognize coverage families. He knows who's covering whom. He doesn't see everything yet, but he's seeing the base elements, putting them in buckets and crafting an understanding of how to take advantage of defenses.

The brain: Is Cam Ward handling in-game situations like an NFL QB?

Ward didn't light up the scoreboard on Nov. 30 against the Jacksonville Jaguars. His offense never even found the end zone. But Hardegree came away impressed with the way Ward handled pressures and changed protections as needed. The Titans were in a dropback game facing a big deficit early, and Ward navigated schemes smoothly. If there's one thing Hardegree is confident Ward will be able to do as a pro, it's "fix problems."

The next developmental steps come from stacking reps. Hardegree remembers from his time in Denver when Peyton Manning was the quarterback and how future Hall of Famer kept detailed logs on defensive coordinators and what they've done that's flummoxed him dating back to his time as a Super Bowl champion with the Indianapolis Colts. Ward's been encouraged to do the same.

Experience comes when it comes. As early as Week 1, Ward was confronted with difficult football situations, ranging from the harm of taking sacks on the edge of field goal range to taking snaps in his own end zone to how to handle sprintout passes with the sideline approaching. Moments like those are bankable. The best quarterbacks absorb knowledge and don't repeat mistakes.

Because if Ward grows in those areas, the Titans are confident his other strengths will start to show through.

"He maintains that consistent level of just calmness, quiet confidence," Hardegree said. "When things are good, he’s in the same spot. When things are bad, same spot. He’s very coachable. My number one mindset is just continue to help him, coach him, get him to improve at certain things. He’s been great. I’ve enjoyed it."

TITANS' CAM WARD REFLECTS ON DAD'S IMPACT FOR FATHER'S DAY

TURRON DAVENPORT
ESPN.COM
JUNE 15, 2025

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- The smile on Cameron Ward's face said it all when asked what he wanted to get his dad, Calvin, for Father's Day.

"Shopping for Father's Day, that's the hardest shopping to do," Ward told ESPN. "I mean what do you get for someone who already has everything? I don't know what I'm going to get him, because he ain't really ask for s---."

Having already paid to have his parents' house built last year when he was in college at Miami, Ward struggled to come up with a physical gift for his dad. He laughed as he recalled gifting his dad an ATV for Christmas years ago, when his mom, Patrice, had gotten him a mini NASCAR race track.

Then the perfect idea came to mind.

"I just really want to spend time with him," Ward said.

Time. That's the best gift he could give.

The Tennessee Titans made Ward the No. 1 pick in April, hoping he could become the answer at quarterback that they had been searching for. He attributes his journey to his parents, with sports being a staple in their household.

"I just always had sports around me," Ward said. "I come from a sports background with my dad and my mom. I just always wanted to play professional sports. I think that was just my calling."

The Ward family, a close-knit group of five, has bonded on many trips -- loading up the SUV and hitting the road to attend various sports camps. They started by going to camps at IMG Academy in Bradenton, Florida, when Cameron was in fourth grade. He tagged along with his two older sisters, Aaliyah and Chantel, who were basketball players.

Calvin supported his son as he played various sports such as basketball, football, baseball and even golf, but having been a former walk-on college quarterback at Houston, Calvin taught his son the sport he knew best when Cameron was 8 years old -- setting up nets in the backyard to throw into.

"Cameron fell in love with the workouts," Calvin said. "From a young age he was always like, 'I want to be a professional athlete in something.' My philosophy was always to play as many sports as you want. The road would eventually narrow on its own."

THE PROCESS OF getting noticed by colleges wasn't easy, but Cameron leaned on his dad throughout his playing days at West Columbia High School, which is about an hour outside of Houston.

Playing in a run-heavy Wing T offense limited his passing opportunities, as he attempted 267 passes for 2,261 yards in three years. To put that into perspective, Hudson Card -- the No. 1-ranked quarterback in the state for the 2020 class according to the ESPN 300 (No. 40 overall) -- attempted 216 passes in nine games during his senior year, according to Max Preps, and 369 passes in 15 games as a junior.

Calvin emailed college coaches during his son's junior year in hopes of getting the zero-star recruit his first offer. He sought out other parents whose kids went to the NFL for advice on how to get more exposure.

He did not want to be a parent who felt his son was better than everyone else, so he focused on getting feedback to make his son better.

"I trusted the parents that I talked to that might have had kids that been through [this]," Calvin said, "[telling them], 'I need you to be realistic about my son. He wants to play on a higher level. I don't need you to sugarcoat anything with me.'"

Some of the feedback was to work on his footwork by incorporating jump ropes into his drills. They also worked on agility.

"It wasn't so much about chasing a scholarship per se, it was just chasing improvement," Calvin said.

They also took road trips to football camps in hopes of getting Cameron on the radar of colleges. One of those trips called for a 3 a.m. wake-up to leave by 5 a.m. for a six-hour ride to East Texas Baptist University, only to return home the same day.

"That's impressive dedication to helping his son," Titans coach Brian Callahan said of Calvin chauffeuring his son across Texas just to give him a chance to be noticed.

During those road trips, they talked about more than just life. Even though they didn't like the same music genres, they found common ground by listening to local radio stations. The trips provided opportunities for Cameron to ask about his grandparents and what life was like growing up for his dad, so Calvin shared his insight.

"My parents was like, 'Hey, we don't care about football, basketball or whatever. You better get them grades,'" Calvin said.

"These are things I want to put in your life because these are things I wanted to do as a kid that I didn't get to do."

That's one reason why it was important for Calvin to make sure his son got to attend as many camps as possible.

"I'm going to knock on every door, and you know, eventually one of these doors going to open," Calvin said.

An eye-opening weekend came when they drove just over two hours to College Station for Texas A&M's camp. A&M was Cameron's preferred school, so his dad made sure to get him there.

He got to compete with several high-profile quarterbacks -- including four-star prospect Haynes King from Longview High School in Texas, who was ranked No. 46 in the ESPN 300 for the 2020 class. He would go on to commit to the Aggies.

"Everyone knew that Cameron out-threw all of those guys," Calvin said. "But King won state championship his junior year and then you had Cameron Ward that don't nobody knew of and you got one scholarship. So who do you think a scholarship's going to go to?"

The journey continued the next day when they drove to San Antonio for Incarnate Word's satellite camp. According to Calvin, the camp started at 1 p.m. but the coaching staff "shut it down at 2 p.m." because the school's offensive coordinator, Mack Leftwich, wanted to hide his future quarterback from other schools that had access to the camp.

"I'm like, 'What the heck is going on?'" Calvin recalled. "It took us three and a half hours to drive there. They didn't want no other schools to see Cameron because they picked up how his arm talent was different."

The final straw came when Cameron drove a pass from the opposite hash marks to a receiver running a comeback route toward the sideline. Leftwich told the Ward family they ended the camp because they were nervous that he "wouldn't be available" after other schools saw him throw.

"Cameron looked at me and was like, 'What is he talking about? We're not hearing from anyone,'" Calvin said with a laugh.

The trip was worth it. Cameron got an offer from Incarnate Word head coach Eric Morris, and he would end up there for the 2020 season to begin his college career.

CAMERON SHOWED PROMISE early at Incarnate Word, where he won the Jerry Rice Award given to the most outstanding freshman in the NCAA Division I Football Championship Subdivision. He followed that up with 4,648 passing yards, 47 touchdowns and 10 interceptions as a sophomore and was named the Southland Conference Offensive Player of the Year.

Now schools that ignored him coming out of high school were showing interest.

"OK, dude, we have options we ain't had before," Calvin told his son. "Let's be patient and check some of these out."

But they remained loyal, and Cameron followed Morris to Washington State for his junior year in 2022 before eventually ending up at Miami for his final season.

It was a big decision given that Incarnate Word was within driving distance from the Ward family's home.

Now, Calvin had to drive a little over an hour to Houston Hobby Airport before even hopping on a plane to see his son play, but Cameron's parents never missed seeing him play.

"All 57 games," Calvin said when asked how many of Cameron's games they attended, which included 25 with Washington State and 13 more with Miami.

Calvin feels one of Cameron's biggest tests came before the 2023 season when Morris left Washington State to take over as the head coach at North Texas.

"That was the year that made him," Calvin said. "Because the whole narrative was that he was a product of Eric Morris' system."

Without Morris, Cameron wanted to prove he was a premier quarterback regardless of what offense he was playing in.

"OK, guess what? Morris is gone now," Calvin said. "Your system is gone now. Now it's Cameron Ward."

The future No. 1 pick completed 66% of his passes for 3,736 yards, 25 touchdowns and 7 interceptions, which set up another big decision: declare for the NFL draft or play another season of college football?

WITNESSING NFL COMMISSIONER Roger Goodell calling his son's name on draft day was easily Calvin's proudest moment.

"Cameron going No. 1, that's still surreal to me, knowing how he got there," Calvin said. "It was like a dream knowing your son is the No. 1 quarterback."

It also sets up what Cameron said is the best advice he has gotten from his dad who told him this is his one opportunity to play in the NFL and "not to f--- it up."

"[My dad] wouldn't let me take no for an answer," Cameron said. "That's what kept me steady throughout the whole process knowing that I'll eventually get an offer, but he just constantly motivated me. He constantly told me the journey is never going to be easy."

When Cameron contemplated going pro after his fourth year in college, he leaned on his dad -- who advised him to not hire an agent so there was no confusion concerning his eligibility.

"My parents really let me make my own decisions," Cameron said. "But they give me different angles to look at it. They see it from their point of view then they also got to see it from the other person's point of view as well."

He decided to forego the draft to better his stock for 2025 before transferring to Miami.

He made a big statement in his debut with the Hurricanes, throwing for 385 yards and three touchdowns in a 41-17 win over one of their biggest rivals, and Calvin loved every bit of it.

"That Florida game," Calvin said, "all the talk -- 'Oh, he hasn't played in this size of a stadium' -- they didn't know what was [about] to hit them because they didn't know him. He doesn't care about all of that. Cameron just wants to go play football."

Cameron passed for 4,313 yards and 39 touchdowns last season -- both Miami single-season records. He also won the Davey O'Brien Award, given to the nation's top quarterback, and finished fourth in voting for the Heisman Trophy. He set the career combined FCS (71) and FBS (87) record with 158 touchdown passes. The performance helped cement him as the top quarterback in the draft.

"His journey I think is really unique and cool," Callahan said. "A lot of it comes from how he was raised. All the things you see from his parents trying to pour into him and give him all the opportunities to succeed I think is admirable, and I think it paid off for him."

Fast-forward, and the first impression the rookie has made with the Titans is a good one. Whether it's having the rookie pass catchers meet with him for film study at 5 a.m. or pulling a veteran aside after a missed rep, Cameron has already started to have an impact.

If Cameron's career for the Titans is as successful as his college career was, Tennessee's quest to find its franchise quarterback will be fulfilled.

Armed with a newly signed contract worth $48.7 million, Cameron can give his dad whatever he wants for Father's Day. But above all else, Cameron just wants to give him thanks.

"Thank you for all the time you put in for me and my siblings," he said when asked about his Father's Day message. "The money that you put in and all the behind-the-scenes stuff from the emailing coaches to put my face out there and get me a chance to be who I am today. Just know that I'm trying to do my part and create a legacy for our last name."

CAM WARD WASN'T ALONE ON HIS LONG JOURNEY TO THE NFL, AND THE TITANS, AND HE'LL FOREVER BE THANKFUL FOR SUPPORT FROM PARENTS

BY JIM WYATT

MAY 2, 2025

NASHVILLE – Cam Ward played in 57 games in college, at Incarnate Word, Washington State and the University of Miami.

How many games did his parents attend?

"57 of 57," Calvin Ward, Cam's father, said with a smile.

It wasn't easy, especially those two seasons when Ward was quarterback at Washington State, located in Pullman, Washington.

Those years it took Calvin and Patrice Ward, who live in West Columbia, Texas, roughly nine hours to get to one of their son's home games. A typical travel weekend those days looked like this: Driving an hour to Houston Hobby Airport, catching a flight from Houston to Denver (layover) and then flying to Spokane, Wash., getting a rental car, and driving another 1 ½ hours to Pullman.

After the game, and a quick visit with Cam, they'd retrace their steps back to Texas.

"In Cam's two years at Washington State," said Calvin Ward, "the closest games were at USC and UCLA (in Los Angeles)."

But for the Wards, it was all worth it.

They saw their son blossom from a zero-star recruit coming out of high school to one of the nation's top quarterbacks, and the first overall pick of the 2025 NFL Draft, by the Titans.

"It's been a long journey, but it's been worth it," Calvin Ward said. "Every curve we've had to go through, every stop sign we've had to stop at, it led us to this, and it's all been worth it."

Calvin Ward, a fuel buyer for a nuclear power plant, and Patrice Ward, a longtime high school special education teacher and basketball coach who has since retired, both had adjust their work schedules, and life, to it happen.

Seeing their son get drafted, and then following him to Tennessee, has been one of their life's highlights so far.

"We've prayed about this," Patrice Ward said. "Tennessee is the right place for Cameron. I prayed about it, and started manifesting on it. God always leads us in the right direction, and he led us to Tennessee. And we're all so happy about it.

"Cam knows without God none of this is possible, and he has that faith and believes in God."

Calvin Ward said Cam Ward never gave up on his dream, despite dealing with adversity, and doubters.

"I am very proud, because I think the average athlete would have stopped," Calvin Ward said. "In high school, you're told you're not good enough to play college football. Then, in order to get a chance, you have to go to this FCS school (and prove yourself).

"A lot of kids would have been like, I'm good. But he was like: Let's go."

Surrounded by family at the NFL Draft, and on the trip to Nashville last week after he was selected, Cam Ward said he'll never be able to repay his parents for what they've invested in him.

Ward has always appreciated their support.

"Just what they sacrificed since I was a kid all the way to high school, to where I am now," he said. "They sacrificed financially for me. Time-wise, there's days my dad would wake up at 5:00 a.m., we'd drive halfway across Texas to get to camps. I'll never be able to repay them. But I just hope me being able to repay them one way is just by putting on for them and the family on the field.

"But financially, time-wise, since I was a kid, they've sacrificed so much. And I just think everything they did for me is starting to pay off for them as well."

The Wards are looking forward to non-stop flights to Nashville, where they already have friends in town.

A former next-door neighbor, in fact, moved to Nashville.

Ward has already rewarded his mother once recently, when he stepped on the stage with the NFL Commissioner.

"My mom wanted a nice picture of me and Mr. Roger Goodell in her living room," Ward said. "My mom told me: Just make sure you and Mr. Goodell are smiling in the picture. So, I gave my mom what she wanted."

OILERS LEGEND WARREN MOON GIVES NEW TITANS QB CAM WARD PERMISSION TO WEAR HIS PREVIOUSLY RETIRED NO 1 JERSEY

BY JIM WYATT

APRIL 25, 2025

NASHVILLE – A special guest showed up at Cam Ward's introductory press conference on Friday, and presented him with a surprise.

It was Oilers great Warren Moon, who told Ward that he could wear his retired No. 1 jersey with the Titans.

"I have a lot of respect for this young man right here," said Moon, a Hall of Famer who threw for 49,325 yards in 17 NFL seasons (1984-2000) with the Oilers, Vikings, Seahawks and Chiefs after first playing for the Edmonton Eskimos in the CFL. "A lot of our journey is similar as far as all the things he was told throughout the journey about not being good enough, nobody wanted to give him that great opportunity. But he just kept fighting, kept working, kept showing leadership, perseverance, and here he is today, the No. 1 overall pick in the National Football League draft. So that's the reason why I wanted to be here to let him know how proud of him I am.

"As far as the number and everything is concerned. I wore the No. 1 for a lot of different reasons, and I wore it for a long time, starting back to 1976 when I was in college. I think I wore it very honorably for the Houston Oilers organization to the point to where I created a Hall of Fame career for myself. Now, I'm part of the Tennessee Titans family. My Houston Oilers jersey will probably never be worn again, I hope it won't. But the Tennessee Titans jersey is going to be worn by Cam, and Cam will be starting a new freshness in this organization to kind of revitalize it and get it back to where it was a number of years ago, one of the more successful organizations in the league. So I am excited to see what he is going to do with his legacy wearing this number, and I am proud of the things I did to establish my legacy with the time I wore that number."

Moon told Ward, who wore No.1 at the University of Miami, he'll be available for him with anything he needs.

Ward acknowledged he called Moon to ask him for permission, and was honored it was granted.

"I've got a lot of respect (for Warren)," Ward said. "I am excited that Mr. Moon was able to bless me by giving me this number. … I didn't know much about him until the draft was really getting started. Before I called him, I made sure I watched his highlights to make sure he was legit. He was, he was legit. I'm trying to get up to his level one day."

THE NIGHT HOPE RETURNED TO NASHVILLE: ‘CAM WARD IS A GAME CHANGER’

BY BEN ARTHUR
FOXSPORTS.COM
APRIL 25, 2025

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell barely got through the announcement of the No. 1 overall pick. Watching Round 1 of the 2025 NFL Draft unfold from the field at Nissan Stadium, Titans fans heard "Cameron …" and erupted.

Screams of "let’s go!" filled the air. Screeches pierced the sky. Fireworks were set off and Johnny Cash’s "Ring of Fire" blared through the speakers, just like when the Titans scored a touchdown at home games during the 2024 season. A group of young boys jumped up and down. One of them, wearing a Tony Pollard jersey, spotted a TV camera. He let out a big smile and flexed. He ushered a friend into the shot.

"Cam Ward is a game changer," said Joshua Wilson, 46, who became a Titans fan after moving to Nashville from Boston five years ago.

Despite the current state of their team, several Titans fans who spoke to FOX Sports are choosing hope as Cam Ward arrives as their potential franchise quarterback. They showed up in force Thursday night for Tennessee’s draft party, which featured team legends and current players. A massive inflatable obstacle course and tour of the home locker room, plus several stations — a vertical jump test, field-goal kick, cornhole and 40-yard dash — were part of the family-friendly event.

Love for Ward was too, apparently.

Before the draft officially began, Titans public address announcer Matt Rogers received a unanimous vote of approval for the former Miami quarterback when he asked fans to scream who they wanted the Titans to pick. One teenager wore a Will Levis jersey that had "Levis" and the No. 8 crossed out with tape in favor of "Ward" and No. 1 (Ward’s number at Miami and Washington State).

Wilson and his neighbor, 42-year-old Randy Harries, came to the draft party sporting "Luv Ya Cam" shirts, a nod to the "Luv Ya Blue" slogan of the Houston Oilers era of the franchise. The shirts were Wilson’s idea. He produced them through his Nashville-based company, Hickory Brand House, which creates print-on-demand merchandise.

"I think we’re two years away," Wilson said. "You got an all-star QB on a rookie deal. You’ve got that three-, four-, five-year window where you’ve got him on a team-friendly deal that you can really surround him with building blocks before he gets that big, big QB1 money."

Hatcher Morris, 25, said he loves Ward’s underdog story. The most exciting parts for him are the QB's leadership skills and the way he carries himself off the field.

A Dallas native, Morris moved to Tennessee in 2004. With his dad being a season ticket holder, he estimates that he’s been to "at least" 60 Titans home games in his life.

"I remember Jake Locker and Marcus Mariota. I’ve seen this kind of play out before in ways I haven’t been entirely appreciative. The hype has been the same each time," said Morris. "I feel a little bit more confident with this pick. I basically spent the latter half of my work day watching film [of Ward] in anticipation."

Lawrence Haywood sees a quarterback who can bring the "old-school magic" back to Nashville. A local high school basketball coach, the 51-year-old remembers watching the "Music City Miracle," the Titans’ legendary kickoff return touchdown that sent the franchise to the 1993 AFC divisional round.

"He seems like the kid that can handle [the spotlight]," Haywood said of Ward. "I like to compare it to taking a test in school: If you’re not really prepared, you feel like you have to cheat a little bit, look on someone else’s paper. But those nights you really studied, you ready to go. I see [Ward] in that light."

RELATED: How Cam Ward’s unorthodox rise shaped him: ‘I’m not worried about no spotlight’

Despite being hopeful about Ward, fans who spoke to FOX Sports aren't oblivious to the recent dysfunction of the Titans, who are coming off three wins in 2024, their third straight losing season. Owner Amy Adams Strunk has fired two general managers in the past two-and-a-half years.

Caleb Hoffman, 20, admits that he’s felt "up and down recently" about the team. He hasn’t been totally content with how the organization has been run, including the firing of Mike Vrabel as coach after the 2023 season and how the dismissal of former general manager Ran Carthon was handled in January.

"And now having the pairing of [coach Brian] Callahan and [GM Mike] Borgonzi together, it’s an odd set-up," Hoffman said. "I’m hoping for the best out of it. … I think we have a chance to get on the right path if Cam Ward turns out like we all hope he does.

"I think it’s a high-risk move," he added. "I definitely recognize that it’s not the safest No. 1 overall pick. We’re not getting Joe Burrow tonight or anything like that. But I’m looking on the bright side and I’m trusting in Borgonzi, trusting in Callahan, the work that they’ve done. They rebuffed trade offers from New York that we’ve heard about and that kind of stuff. If this is their guy, I trust them and I trust that we’ll be moving in the right direction here soon."

Is Cam Ward a franchise-changing QB?

With how bad Tennessee has been in recent years, Harries sees a "silver lining" with the team getting the top overall selection.

"Everybody is zero-zero. Everybody is tied for first," he said. "It’s one of those things where you’ve seen other franchises get turned around with a single pick. Kansas City Chiefs, for instance. Those are the examples you kind of have to hang on to and hope that’s what happens here."

So, what is Ward’s arrival the start of?

"I’d say, hopefully, like a cold glass of water on the face," Morris said. "A little refreshment, not only for the fans, but maybe the coaching staff having a little more to work with. I was optimistic of what we could do with Levis, but hopefully some of the character and the athletic traits that Ward has will allow our staff to kind of develop him into something that we couldn’t with Levis.

"So overall," he said, "optimistic for that."

FROM THE NFL DRAFT: QB CAM WARD HAPPY THE TITANS PICKED HIM, NOW HE'S READY TO GET TO WORK

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
APRIL 24, 2025

GREEN BAY – Cam Ward had waited for this moment his entire life.

At the NFL Draft here on Thursday night, Ward heard his name called by NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell, along with the news he'd been hoping to hear.

Yes, the Titans picked the former Miami quarterback with the first overall pick.

"It's special," Ward said after holding up a Titans jersey, and putting on a Titans hat. "I am excited for the opportunity the organization has blessed me with, and I'm ready to get to work with my teammates.

"I was hoping (the Titans) would pick me for real, especially when I got to learn more about Coach (Brian) Callahan's offense, the new General Manager Mr. Mike (Borgonzi) and President Mr. Chad (Brinker). Miss Amy (Adams Strunk) is a great owner, and they have a great organization. So, I am excited. It all worked out in the long run, and I am grateful for it."

Ward said he got word the Titans were officially picking him from Borgonzi, who then passed the phone to Strunk, Brinker and Callahan.

"They (told me) they were ready to get to work," Ward said of the Titans contingent. "They are proud of what I did to this point of my career, and they're excited to see where I can take the franchise."

The Titans reportedly turned down trade offers during the process to select Ward.

Borgonzi said earlier in the week the organization had reached a consensus on the pick, and planned to pick at No.1 to get the player the Titans wanted.

Ward was asked how much he wants to prove the Titans right.

"It's really proving myself right," Ward said. "They know they made the right choice in getting me. But at the end of the day, I am just trying to be with my teammates, have command of the huddle, and at the end of the day, try and win games, that is our main goal."

A zero star recruit, Ward never gave up on his dream while playing at Incarnate Word, Washington State and eventually Miami.

Ward blossomed as a player, and he turned himself into a top draft pick while ignoring skeptics, and doubters.

"I never let opinions get to me," Ward said. "The only opinion that matters to me is myself. And then also, just believing in God. I had those two things going for me, and it worked out in the long run."

In Tennessee, Ward said he wants to let his new teammates and coaches know when he meets him that he's about business, and winning games.

Ward feels like knows the team relatively well, but he's looking forward to learning more when he arrives in Nashville on Friday, and in the months ahead as preparation begins for the 2025 season.

His message to Titans fans, who cheered his selection at a draft party at Nissan Stadium on Thursday night:

"They are getting a dog, somebody who is willing to do anything to put the team and themselves in situations to win," Ward said. "And the ultimate goal is to win championships, whether that is this year, next year or down the road. That is our dream to accomplish, and I don't plan on stopping until hopefully get one of those things."

HOW CAM WARD'S UNORTHODOX RISE SHAPED HIM: 'I'M NOT WORRIED ABOUT NO SPOTLIGHT'

BY BEN ARTHUR
FOXSPORTS.COM
MARCH 1, 2025

INDIANAPOLIS — Cam Ward took questions about the myriad of teams he could land with at the top of the draft next month. On the Titans, who have the No. 1 pick, the Miami quarterback said he'd be "plug and play." With the Browns, who have the second selection, he thinks it would "work out [well]." He mentioned he'd be "lucky" to go to the Raiders and play for Pete Carroll, whom he views as a legendary coach. Ward also noted that it would be "elite" to land with the Jets, a team he views as just a couple pieces away from contention.

But when asked about the Giants, who Ward said he had a great meeting with at the NFL Combine, a reporter took it a step further: How would you handle the spotlight that comes with being in New York?

His response spoke to his unconventional journey to get to this point.

"I'm not worried about no spotlight," Ward said Friday. "There was one time in my life where I wasn't in the spotlight. It's crazy to see how everything can change."

Of the top quarterbacks in this year's draft class, Ward is the only one who was not ranked coming out of high school. At Columbia High in West Columbia, Texas, he played in a Wing-T offense, which limited his throwing opportunities. His only scholarship offer was from the University of the Incarnate Word, an FCS school in San Antonio.

He was named the Southland Conference offensive player of the year in his second and final season at UIW, where he was also a finalist for the Walter Payton Award, given to the most outstanding player in the FCS. Ward then posted 61 total touchdowns in two seasons at Washington State. This past year at Miami, he set single-season program records for passing yards (4,313) and touchdowns (39) en route to winning the 2024 Davey O'Brien Award, given annually to the best quarterback in college football.

Ward broke the Division I record — FBS and FCS — with 158 career touchdown passes. His 18,819 career passing yards rank third in NCAA history.

"Coming from my journey, not a lot of people can do that," Ward said, "so I just think it shows the work that I'm willing to put in whether I go first round or second round. At the end of the day, that draft pick don't mean nothing. It's all about establishing yourself once you get the opportunity.

"I just think me getting to experience different culture changes, different atmospheres, traveling across the country, it's going to end up helping me in the long run," he added. "At the end of the day, you never know where football will take you."

Ward pointed to his private quarterback coach, Darrell Colbert Jr., as being instrumental in his development over the past several years, helping to fine-tune his process in the pocket. Also working with fellow top quarterback prospect Shedeur Sanders, Colbert began training Ward after his freshman season at Incarnate Word.

The quarterback's knack for throwing from various arm slots jumped out from the beginning.

"He's different. He's not the normal guy," Colbert told FOX Sports last month. "I was like, 'S---, that's what makes him him. That's who he is.' So I'm like, 'Hell nah, I'm not changing [anything]. … We're going to perfect how you throw. We're going to perfect the ways you do everything with all the different arm angles.'

"That's what kind of helped our relationship grow as well," he continued, "me not trying to be a guy who completely changes who he is. We were able to build off that."

Ward has progressed to the point where many in league circles believe he's the top passer in this year's draft.

"At the end of the day, the camera is going to find you if you're the franchise quarterback somewhere," Ward said. "So I just put my head down and I work every day. In the long run, it's going to pay off."

The spotlight is just now catching up.

ONE OF A KIND

BY CHRISTY CABRERA
CHIRINOS

NOVEMBER 15, 2024

That sense of determination, that drive, it's seemingly always been there.

Calvin Ward still remembers the conversation he had with his youngest son, Cameron, when the then-second grader wanted to add football to his ever-growing list of activities.

At the time, the Wards were a basketball family, fully immersed in AAU hoops, with mom, Patrice, even coaching the sport herself. So, Calvin did his best to try and encourage his son to focus on the hardwood, and not the gridiron.

It didn't take long for him to realize his son wasn't about to give up on his football dreams.

"I was like, 'Well, why don't you wait a year?' and I was just trying to push it off, thinking maybe he'll forget about football and just stay focused on basketball," Calvin Ward recalled. "But then he came to me the next year, when he was in third grade, with this form and said, 'I need you to fill this out.' When I asked what it was, he said 'It's for me to play youth football … remember you told me I had to wait until next year? Well, it's next year.'"

Calvin Ward filled out the form and took his young son to his first football practice.

Not long after, those first practices were followed by extra workouts and training sessions as Cam Ward discovered he had not just a knack for the game, but a love for it, too.

It wasn't uncommon for him to drag his father out of bed on Saturday mornings, after playing the night before, to go get some throwing sessions in. And Sundays were all about faith, family and football, with father and son often working together – again – after church.

Today, Cam Ward is a record-breaking quarterback who has emerged as a Heisman Trophy candidate while leading the Miami Hurricanes through a memorable, magical season that he and his teammates hope isn't anywhere close to being finished any time soon.

And for much of his football journey, determination and grit have been the story.

As a high schooler at Columbia High School in West Columbia, Texas, Ward played in a Wing-T offense that, sure, helped the Roughnecks win games, but sure didn't showcase Ward's skills as a quarterback who could sling the ball in a way many of his peers couldn't.

"A lot of small-town Texas teams, they live and die by it," Ward shrugged. "But we were 9-2 my senior year, so if you're a head coach, you're thinking 'If it ain't broke, don't fix it.'"

Colleges didn't pay attention. Recruiting services didn't think much of Ward either, saddling him with the dreaded "zero star" ranking and putting him in a largely ignored category for prospects who have little to no chance of making an impact at the college level, let alone the NFL.

Ward, though, was determined to make someone, some coach, some program, take note, even as the proverbial chip on his shoulder grew larger and larger.

"It was hard, especially me being 16, 17 and seeing some of my peers who I would play against in 7-on-7 [tournaments], go to camps with and compete against knowing I was better than them," Ward said. "And it was visual, you could see how I was throwing the ball versus them. But at the end of the day, that just wasn't what God had planned for me."

Through the disappointment, Ward continued pushing forward. He continued playing both football and basketball at Columbia High School, even becoming the school's all-time basketball scoring leader.

But he was determined to make a future for himself in football, so the training sessions and the workouts and the extra practices continued.

Finally, in January 2020 – just months before he was set to graduate – an opportunity surfaced.

Incarnate Word, an FCS program located in San Antonio, scheduled an in-home visit with Ward and his family and invited the quarterback to come to campus himself.

Ward did exactly that and that same week, committed to the program.

He was still miffed it had taken so long for even the coaches at Incarnate Word to give him a chance, especially given that he'd been at one of their camps months earlier.

But with a scholarship offer now in hand, Ward set out to prove the doubters wrong.

Still, there was a problem. After years of playing in the run-heavy Wing-T, Ward had to learn how to be a college quarterback.

That proved a challenge he hadn't quite expected.

"When I got there, it was just a different world for me in regard to football and learning the game," Ward said. "I didn't know anything, really, about football. I didn't know how to go through progressions or the right pocket movements, those attributes you have to have as a quarterback. It was a learning curve for me, but the coaching staff that I had there really helped me. The quarterback who was above me at the time helped me. I went in as a third stringer, but I actually got more reps than the ones and twos, so I think that kind of helped me, eventually, get to the starter position. I just tried to play the hand that I was dealt."

He played that hand masterfully.

Ward spent as much time as possible studying film, learning from coaches and teammates and as a freshman, became Incarnate Word's starter during a season that was pushed from the fall to the spring because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

He played in six games of that modified season, completed 60 percent of his passes and threw for 2,260 yards and 24 touchdowns, setting a new school record for scoring passes in a single season in the process.

Ward was later named the Southland Conference Spring Freshman of the Year and recognized as the 2021 recipient of the Jerry Rice Award, which is presented annually to the top FCS freshman.

While some of the throws he made raised eyebrows, his quick rise to starter, and eventual award winner, came as no surprise to those who knew him best.

"He's a student of the game," said his mother, Patrice Ward. "If they had football degrees, believe me, Cameron would be at the top of his class. He's always studying. He wants to be good. But he knows that to be good, you have to know what you're doing. So, he studies. He's off the charts. He's always been determined."

Ward's success continued that fall when, as a sophomore, he completed 65 percent of his passes and threw for 4,648 yards and 47 touchdowns. He led the Cardinals to the Southland Conference Championship and was named the Southland Conference Offensive Player of the Year.

Outside of Texas, people were starting to notice the quarterback who, for so long, had been unnoticed.

Then came another opportunity.

Eric Morris – the head coach who'd given Ward his chance at Incarnate Word and who, during his time at Texas Tech mentored Kansas City Chiefs quarterback Patrick Mahomes – left San Antonio to join the staff at Washington State as offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach.

And he wanted Ward with him in Pullman.

Ward, for his part, felt ready to play on a bigger stage, even if that stage came was far from home.

"I was ready to play big-time football. It was something I wanted to do out of high school. I couldn't do it right away, but I finally got my shot," Ward said. "I just felt like I was leaving UIW at the right time. I'd won games there. I was the Jerry Rice Award winner. I was just ready for that next step. I really don't think I had anything left to prove at the FCS level. …

"But Washington State, I remember when I first went there, me and my parents, it was December, I believe, and we were on this little airplane flying over mountains and hills. You don't see any roads, everything was just covered in snow, and I was like, 'Where am I?' … It was a culture change, for sure. But I knew what I was getting myself into. … I knew I was going to get a chance to play football and that's all I ever wanted. [Head] coach [Jake] Dicker and Coach Morris gave me an opportunity and I ran with it."

That may be an understatement.

In his two years at Washington State, Ward started 25 games, completed 66 percent of his passes and totaled 6,963 passing yards and 48 touchdowns. He rushed for another 13 scores and established himself as one of the most electrifying players in college football with the ability to extend plays and elude defenders.

And Patrice and Calvin Ward were there for every step of their youngest son's journey, making the 2,220-mile trek from West Columbia to Pullman every time the Cougars played a game.

For them, there was no other option. They weren't about to miss watching Ward live his dream.

"I know the growth that he's made. I've seen the sacrifice that he's made. I saw the times when he was in high school, feeling like he wasn't getting the chance he wanted," Patrice Ward said. "There's the disappointment a mother can feel about that, but seeing him not giving up, you know, that makes me feel so proud."

As much as his game grew, though, Ward said being at Washington State taught him something else: how to lead a locker room.

It's a trait he's carried with him and one he believes has helped make him the quarterback he is today.

"I think those two years shaped me into learning more about my teammates and being more of a team player than just wanting to go out there and throw for a lot of touchdowns," Ward said. "I went through a lot of adversity out there, record-wise, and personal-wise. But I would say the best thing about being there is that it really allowed me to focus on football. It really made me love the game even more. It made me cherish every opportunity when I was there, because I was 3,000 miles away from Texas. The flights my parents had to go through to get there, they were going on 10-hour days every time they'd see me come play. So, I knew if they could do that for me, I can do the little things that's just doing my job and playing football."

After two seasons of learning and growing at Washington State, Ward had another decision to make.

Had he done enough there to put himself in position to make his lifelong dream of playing in the NFL a reality, or was there still more for him to achieve in the world of college football?

There were heart-to-heart conversations with his parents, particularly with his father, the man who'd been one of his first coaches and who taught him to love the game.

And there were heart-to-heart conversations with himself.

Physically, Ward felt ready to take the next step. The skill set to succeed in the NFL, he believed, was there. The toughness, he believed, was there. The ability, he believed, was there.

So, he decided to enter the NFL Draft.

But hearts and minds change, and Ward's did.

The quarterback realized he hadn't accomplished all he wanted to do in college and an intriguing opportunity presented itself in Miami under head coach Mario Cristobal and offensive coordinator Shannon Dawson.

"I think that was the biggest thing that me and my dad talked about during that time. The NFL isn't going anywhere any time soon. You only get a certain [number] of opportunities to play in college," Ward said. "I bet some guys who went out early probably would've wished they stayed another year … So, I just based my decision on what I really wanted to do and that was help this team and help myself become a better person and then ultimately win, win a lot of football games at the Power [Four] level, which I haven't done in my past."

Ward arrived in Coral Gables in January and just as he did at Incarnate Word and Washington State, immediately got to work.

One of the first goals on his agenda? Getting to know his new coaches and teammates, particularly the receivers he'd be throwing to on a daily basis and the offensive linemen who'd be protecting him.

His efforts weren't limited to workouts and meetings in the Carol Soffer Indoor Practice Facility – though there were plenty of both.

Ward also invited his new teammates to his house to watch the Super Bowl. He treated Miami's offensive linemen to dinner on multiple occasions. He went fishing with several Hurricanes.

"He's earned the trust of the people around him because of his time invested and the fact that he's an alpha..."

Hurricanes head coach Mario Cristobal

And once spring practice began, he made a quick impression and showed, yet again, why underestimating him was a mistake.

"The first day, I wanted to test him out. He was throwing the ball on the field, and I was by the exit, and I told him to throw me the ball. I was like 60 yards away and he threw it on the dot," defensive lineman Rueben Bain Jr. laughed during the spring. "That's the thing that stuck out to me. … There have been a couple of times where I've tried to make an inside move and he's made me regret it. He's real swift on his feet."

Added Cristobal, "He earned trust, and he earned trust by the fact that he's up there in the office every waking free moment that he has. He gets there early, and he leaves late. He pulls aside the receivers and the tight ends, and he watches film with them, and he takes the linemen out to eat. He spends time with the running backs, and then he waits after practice and does some more stuff with other guys that maybe were off a little bit. …

"Trust and confidence [are] earned. It's not just given away. What he has done, he has earned. He's earned the trust of the people around him because of his time invested and the fact that he's an alpha and your quarterback needs to be an alpha."

Seven months later, Ward remains every bit the leader and playmaker he showed himself to be during spring drills on Greentree.

He's emerged as a national leader in both passing yards and touchdowns, throwing for 3,494 yards and 32 touchdowns in Miami's first 10 games.

He has rewritten the school's single-season record book, becoming the first Hurricane to ever put together seven consecutive 300-yard performances.

With Ward under center, Miami opened the 2024 season with nine straight wins, including an epic, 25-point comeback victory against California in Berkeley in October.

On that memorable night, Ward scored on a 24-yard scramble, completed 35 of 53 passes and threw for 437 yards and two touchdowns.

One of those touchdowns was a 5-yard scoring pass to Elijah Arroyo with 26 seconds left that helped Miami clinch an improbable 39-38 win.

"Week in and week out, when [No.] 1 has the ball in his hands, you know the game's never over," wide receiver Xavier Restrepo said that night.

And from the stands at California Memorial Stadium, all Patrice and Calvin Ward could do was smile knowingly.

The rest of America may have been surprised to see their son's cool demeanor when faced with a near-impossible, second-half deficit, but for the two of them it was typical Cameron.

Their son has never given up on himself, never given up on a play, and never given up on a game.

He wasn't about to start then.

"Ever since he's been playing especially football and basketball, we've always taught him the mindset that you play until the clock goes to zero," Calvin Ward said. "And when the clock goes to zero, if you want to feel sorry for yourself, you feel sorry for yourself. But the game isn't over until the clock says zero. So, he's always had that as his mindset. And at the quarterback position, I always taught him that regardless of what the score is, unless someone is looking at the scoreboard, they should never be able to know what the score is by looking at you. In other words, don't get too high, don't get too low, just keep battling until the clock goes to zero. And he's done that, ever since he was a little kid."

Said Patrice Ward, "We're proud of him because he's confident in himself. … If you're not confident in yourself and you don't believe in yourself, who's going to believe in you? We're proud of him because we've instilled that in him. … Some kids could just hang it up and say, 'Hey, things didn't go my way.' But Cameron, he's a fighter. He's going to fight until the end like Calvin said, until the clock is at zero."

Zero. It marks the end of a game, like the one Ward helped the Hurricanes win in California. Or the comeback game he helped Miami win this season against Virginia Tech. And again, against Duke.

It's also a number that will always hold significance.

Zero stars. A reminder that before he earned that one invaluable scholarship offer, before he won national awards, and before he found himself at the center of the Heisman Trophy conversation during his final year of college football, not many coaches paid him much attention.

Despite the success that's come in recent years, Ward has never forgotten that disappointment.

It continues to drive him to this day – and may drive him for years to come.

"It's really on my mind a lot. I really don't think I'll ever be able to leave it just because it's permanent," Ward said. "It makes me have a lot of hate in my heart, makes me hate a lot of things. I don't know if that's good for me, but I just try to pray about it. I'm not free yet. Maybe later in life I will be."

As to how he'd like to see the next few weeks play out, Ward says he's not finished making headlines.

There are still things he wants for himself and goals he's set.

But more importantly, there are things he wants for the Miami Hurricanes.

"Hopefully, [there's] a couple trophies. A couple individual trophies … a lot of team trophies and most importantly, helping every guy on this team have those memories. Cherish them forever. Even Coach Cristobal tells us a lot of people on this team won't be on a team like this [again]. The talent like this, the camaraderie that we have, you don't get this chance every season. So, we're all just trying to take advantage of the moment and hopefully, it ends with us holding up that trophy at the end of the year."

TITANS LB JAMES WILLIAMS "STARVING" FOR MORE AS HE HEADS INTO YEAR 2, NOW WITH SR. ON THE BACK OF HIS JERSEY

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 23, 2025

NASHVILLE – James Williams was at Cam Ward's Pro Day in Miami.

The Titans linebacker, who also played at the U, was there supporting the quarterback the Titans would ultimately pick first overall in April's NFL Draft.

"But the first time I met Cam was here with the Titans," Williams said. "It was great to see us pick him. I could have played with him last year (at Miami but turned pro). And now, going into his rookie year, I am his teammate, and have a chance to play with him. It's a blessing. God put us together, and God is going to let us shine together."

Williams, headed into his second NFL season, has a chance to earn a bigger role at inside linebacker in 2025 after playing primarily on special teams for the Titans in his first year.

He's competing with Cedric Gray, Otis Reese II and several others to earn a starting spot alongside veteran Cody Barton in Tennessee defense.

Williams, by the way, is known as James Williams Sr. now, after becoming a dad to a baby boy at the start of his rookie year. His son will turn one at the end of next month.

"(He) gives me something to play for, the name on my back, and the name on my front," Williams said of his son. "The Sr. stands out, and it makes me want to go harder to take care of him and make sure he is good in life."

Williams has worked hard to make sure he's in a position to compete when camp begins.

After making the transition from a college safety to an NFL linebacker, Williams is more comfortable now, and he feels like he's learned a lot. He's in better shape physically, and hungry. He said he cut weight and added more muscle, which makes him feel "more stout, stronger, and faster."

He believes his flexibility, and mobility, have improved as well.

Williams said he learned a lot about being patient last year as a rookie, when he played in 13 games, with one start, and tallied 19 tackles on defense, in addition to seven more on special teams.

Wiliams said coaches have told him "a lot of things are coming for me," as it relates to having a chance to move around, and be more effective in the defense.

"When your time comes, it should allow you to be who you want to be when your time gets here," Williams said. "Going into my second year I feel like I am stronger, faster, smarter, and I feel like the game has slowed down for me. I am understanding things at a new position, and I'm ready to compete.

"I feel like I came in here last year and did the little things, and showed them I am capable of being a pro. I am willing to change my position, and understand the things that come with being a pro. Now, I am ready to continue to put work in to be who I want to be. I want to get the job done."

Asked about his hunger level to be good, Williams replied:

"I'm starving. I'm starving right now," he said. "I've got to go eat."

JAMES WILLIAMS WATCHED EVERY NFL DRAFT PICK BEFORE TEARS STARTED WHEN TENNESSEE TITANS CALLED AT NO. 242

BY GEORGE ROBINSON
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
APRIL 27, 2024

James Williams never turned away from the television.

Miami's 6-foot-4, 228-pound football star sat through three days of the 2024 NFL Draft waiting with friends and family who didn't say much as names flew off draft boards and landed with the league's 32 teams. And Williams waited patiently.

When the Tennessee Titans called toward the end of the draft, Williams was so emotional, he broke down, realizing his dream wouldn't have to be delayed as the Titans made him the 22nd pick of the seventh round (242nd overall) on Saturday.

"It was very emotional for me," Williams said. "Waiting to see my name called, to be the first one of my family to hear my name called. It was a blessing and I thank God for that, most importantly. It was a amazing phone call and it broke me down."

A hard hitter from Fort Lauderdale, Florida, Williams started 12 games last fall as a safety with the Hurricanes and had a career-high 73 tackles. He had four interceptions and 13 pass break-ups in his career. But he'll make the switch to linebacker with the Titans.

"It's a great adjustment, I just have to do some learning but I'm ready for it and embrace it," Williams said.

Despite being chosen 15 spots from the final selection of the draft, Williams wasn't fazed. He talked about his eagerness to arrive in Nashville, a city he's never been to and knows very little about but is also anxious to start the process of transitioning to linebacker.

"It's a whole new position for me," he said. "I've got to learn a whole new thing from square one so I'm embracing it, I'm open, I'm willing to do it. I'm dying to do it. I can't wait to get up there."

Williams had more than 30 offers that included Tennessee, Alabama, LSU, Georgia, Michigan, Vanderbilt and Ohio State. He was a five-star prospect by 247Sports, ranked as the No. 1 safety and No. 13 overall prospect in the 2021 class.

The Hurricanes put him at safety but quickly found out he could shift down into the box as an extra linebacker. The Titans' made Williams the fourth of five defensive players chosen in this draft, including Texas defensive tackle T'Vondre Sweat (second round), North Carolina's Cedric Gray (fourth), Louisville's Jarvis Brownlee (fifth) and Michigan's Jaylen Harrell (seventh).

Williams said Gray was one of the Titans' best picks and Williams is already familiar with Brownlee, a Miami native.

"He's somebody I always competed with and helped me be the best version of James, so I appreciate him for that," Williams said about Brownlee. "And getting to be on the same team (with him) is amazing."

"Tennessee is on to something," Williams added. "They really want something, and they got something. For sure."

TITANS DEFENSE TRANSFORMED INSIDE THE MIND OF 'CUT MAN' DENNARD WILSON

BY PAUL KUHARSKY
PAULKUHARSKY.COM
AUGUST 18, 2024

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – As the older brother by about two years, Rashad Wilson always got the front seat in the blue Jeep Grand Cherokee when he and Dennard rode with their dad, Tyrone.

With one exception.

When the three Wilson men drove home from Dennard's DeMatha High School football games, Dennard got shotgun.

Dad had wisdom to impart.

The Titans' first-year defensive coordinator was a strong two-way player at DeMatha, a place where he returned to coach between his two tries at playing in the NFL and discovered what he would do for a living.

Many who have worked with him in the past, or are with him now, identify Wilson as a spectacular motivator and teacher of aggressive football with a high-energy way of identifying with his players and instilling accountability.

A good share of the team's hopes rest on his ability to turn around a unit infused with new players, many with question marks regarding age and injury history, into an effective group that can move the Titans well up from 28th in expected yards per play.

"My dad never allowed me to say the word 'can't,'" Wilson said. "I would get in trouble for saying 'can't.' He would say, 'You can do anything you set your mind and you work at, so you can't say the word can't when you're talking about yourself.' He was a former football coach, a former player. He used to show me tough love. He always wanted me to do the little things correct, never skip steps. You've got to go from A to B. If you get it, now you can move to C.

So Wilson grew up staying on the course, determined to conquer the small stuff and win dad's approval following his methods and then those of DeMatha coach Bill McGregor, who still runs the program.

Tyrone Wilson would watch practice and games from afar, never interfering with McGregor, but always with an eye on those details.

The rides home after the games ranging from 15 to 35 minutes became some of the biggest schoolings of the week. Sometimes agonizing ones.

"This was the only time I could sit in the front seat," Dennard Wilson said. "From wherever we played until we got home, he was teaching me a lesson. 'You scored three touchdowns, but you didn't run to the ball on these couple plays.' 'You gave up a play because you weren't looking at the right things.'

"It was always the little things that he just harped on, over and over and over again. To the point where I couldn't stand the rides home. But once we got to the house, it was done. He was always teaching me something and creating this drive to do the little things right. He created this thing where if I attack it the right way, I can accomplish it."

Now when he's got something he needs to sort out he leans on his dad along with his wife, his brother and an older cousin -- Damon Wilson, head coach at Morgan State – sounding boards with different perspectives.

Wilson played four years at Maryland, appearing in 40 games, starting 32 and earning honorable mention All-ACC as a senior.

The Terrapins won the conference in 2001 and lost the Orange Bowl to Florida. Coach Ralph Friedgen then interviewed for the head job with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, and his college roster was very upset.

The players were doing winter workouts in the gym in February and Friedgen's future was all the talk.

Guys came into my suite and they said, 'Do you see this about Ralph leaving?' Because it's 'All about Maryland,'" Wilson recalled. "We just had success and Maryland was a place that wasn't winning."

Wilson hatched a plan: The players would show up for their 5 am workout, but once they got to the gym, no one would change into their workout clothes. When Friedgen came in, Wilson would confront him.

"Ralph came in there with his cup of coffee and a couple other coaches and I told the boys, 'Let's go,'" Wilson said. "Some of them probably didn't believe I was going to do it. Then they were nervous. I walked up to him and I asked him, I said 'Ralph man, you talk about Maryland being all in, us building something, but we saw you interview. I got one question: Are you in or are you out?'

"He looked at me with this look and said 'I'm in.'"

It came naturally and easily to Wilson. He and his teammates were sold that Maryland was a special place. Was it special to the guy who did the selling?

In an AP report, Friedgen said it was something he had to look into from a monetary standpoint.

"We have a long way to go here," he said of Maryland. "I know what I have here. Sometimes you don't know what you'll have in other places."

The Bucs wound up trading for Jon Gruden.

Wilson thought he'd be a late-round draft pick, but never heard his name called.

Every undrafted player comes into the league via a patron, a scout or coach who saw something.

Wilson's was Steve Jackson, the defensive back who was a third-round draft pick by Houston out of Purdue in 1991 and played for the franchise through the Super Bowl season as the Titans in 1999. Jackson is now in his second stint as a Titans' coach, overseeing the safeties. He coached in Washington from 2004-11.

"We drafted Sean Taylor, same year, and then Dennard was an undrafted free agent," Jackson said. "Once they got out on the field, you couldn't tell which one was which. You would have thought that it was Dennard who was the fifth pick in the draft versus Sean.

"He took control out there, he got everybody lined up. The same piss and vinegar you see in him now was the same way he was back then as a little chubby undrafted free agent. He ended up getting hurt, but he never missed a day, he wanted to learn. When someone puts that much in, they do it for a reason, because there is something in them, a burning desire to be great. It's just who he is and he hasn't changed."

A few weeks into camp right before Washington's first preseason game against Baltimore, Taylor hit a receiver in practice and Wilson went up for an interception of the tipped ball. He came down and his foot got stuck on the turf. His body went the other way, breaking his fibula.

He caught the ball – Jason Campbell threw it, he thinks -- but he couldn't walk. A pin was inserted in his left leg that had to be taken out later, during seven months of rehabilitation.

"He was really doing a great job competing for a great spot," said Gregg Williams, who was Washington's defensive coordinator and assistant head coach when Wilson arrived.

In 2005, Wilson was out of the league, taking his first turn at DeMatha where he coached DBs including Rodney McLoud, who is about to play his 13th NFL season and Kenny Tate, who played at Maryland.

"That's when I really fell in love with coaching," he said. "…That's where the passion for coaching really came."

The kids responded to him.

"Whatever he said was gospel," said McGregor, the DeMatha coach.

A year later Wilson took one more crack at the NFL, back with Washington, but he tore the MCL in his right knee.

He returned to DeMatha for three seasons, was a grad assistant at Maryland, scouted for the Bears for two seasons and then started his NFL coaching path: Five years with the Rams that came with a reunion with Williams, four years with the Jets that started with another big mentor in Todd Bowles, two with the Eagles, one with the Ravens.

Bowles remembers his interview with Wilson in 2017, after Jeff Fisher's Rams' staff was blown up.

"My first impression was how he knew more than just the secondary upon the first meeting and how detailed he was in all of his position work, not just the secondary," the Buccaneers coach said. "He knew where everybody was supposed to be. I knew he was going to be more than a DB coach.

"It's very uncommon. You get a lot of people who are very good at their position and that's that. But then you get a few guys who can see the entire defense and understand what the offense is trying to do to them and can explain it, and can teach it and can coach it. And he can do all of that."

Titans players quickly took to the new vibe Wilson brought from Baltimore, where he was defensive backs coach in 2023.

Wilson coached Jamal Adams for the defensive back's first three seasons in the league, which culminated with two Pro Bowls and a First-Team All-Pro appearance.

"He's a unique guy in the way he attacks – and when I say attacks, not in a vicious way – but attacks players to bring out the best in them," Adams said. "He definitely challenges each and every player, he doesn't sugar coat anything, he keeps everything straightforward. He's all about accountability. What makes him very, very special is how smart he is and how much game he gives to a player, younger players, how he develops them through years of being with them.

"You have to be around him to really understand where he's coming from. I feel like if you don't have a tough coach, how are you going to get better? And obviously all the great players want to be coached hard. He's one of those guys that's going to bring it out in you."

Callahan said it's "cool" to watch Wilson work. Because Callahan is a play-calling head coach his defensive coordinator has an extra degree of power. It's the most-coveted sort of coordinator job, basically a "head coach, defense" role.

"He's a great presenter in the meeting room, his energy, his entertainment value I think is exceptional," Callahan said.

Wilson said he likes to build a meeting to the point where he gets guys on the edge of their seats.

He's also helped reshape a roster that's often been thin in the defensive backfield to one that's strong on the back end and has a blitzing mentality formed under Williams and Bowles.

"All players at this high, high level want to be the toughest, most physical, most aggressive that they can be," Williams said. "When you're the same as a coach, it's an easy buy in both ways. Then on top of that, being that way can hide some deficiencies too."

Coaches talking about players feeling ownership can feel like lip service.

It's still early to tell about some of the Titans' early judgments. The two-year $15.5 million contract with $5 million guaranteed for Kenneth Murray was hardly an outrageous deal. The big role as the team's primary inside linebacker was a surprise, however. With the Chargers, Murray didn't appear to be an instinctive player.

But the Titans are asking him to think less, just believe what he sees and go play, and so far it seems to be a philosophy that is freeing him.

"Coach Dennard is a tremendous leader of men, he empowers players," Murray said. "He's definitely done that with me and I'm extremely grateful for that. It means a lot to me and I'm trying to go out there and be the best version of myself for him."

Wilson is hard and demanding on his players, just as his dad was on him. He looks to stress players in practice, then be calm during games, allowing them to play and be free.

"I look at myself as their cut man in the ring," he said.

He's the driver now, his players riding shotgun, getting the wisdom. It may be hard to hear at the time. But it's well-intentioned and the payoff should be worth it.

"When you look back at it, you still remember it," Wilson said. "I think I made my dad the happiest when I went to Maryland. My dad was at every practice. He was nowhere near the field. Even at the game, he'd go sit up the hill by himself. He's not going to interrupt the coaches; he allowed the coaches to coach. He was all about the hustle, the effort stuff.

"When I was at Maryland, I remember having a conversation with my dad. I told him, 'You don't have to come up here no more, I got it.' It was like, 'I know what you were doing, I got the message, I can go up here and I can handle it on my own. I think that made him extremely happy because he knew I learned from what he was doing."

NEW TITANS DC DENNARD WILSON AIMS TO COACH WITH "ENTHUSIASM UNKNOWN TO MANKIND"

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
APRIL 11, 2024

NASHVILLE – Since Dennard Wilson was hired as defensive coordinator of the Titans, the team has made some key additions to bolster the defense.

Former Bengals cornerback Chidobe Awuzie was acquired in free agency, and then the team traded for former Chiefs cornerback L'Jarius Sneed.

Linebacker Kenneth Murray Jr. (Chargers) and defensive lineman Sebastian Joseph-Day (49ers) are intriguing new pieces, and the coaching staff will work to get the most out of them following the departure of starters Azeez Al-Shaair and Denico Autry.

At the same time, teams across the division have gotten better. The Texans, the defending AFC South champs, for instance, recently acquired former All-Pro wide receiver Stefon Diggs. He'll join what was already a formidable offensive unit.

Wilson, hired by head coach Brian Callahan back in February, said he's focused on the Titans.

"Really, I don't focus on what other teams have," Wilson said. "To me, they're nameless faces. We are going to play a certain style. We are going to play with confidence. So, it doesn't matter who they have on (the other) team. It's 11 versus 11, and in terms of the defense, it's 11 versus 1 – it's 11 versus the ball.

"So, you can get a whole lot of receivers, a whole lot of weapons. But there's only one ball. And it's our job to surround the football and take it away."

Wilson, who has 12 years of NFL coaching experience, arrived in Tennessee with an impressive resume.

He spent one season (2023) in Baltimore as Defensive Backs coach, and prior to joining the Ravens, Wilson spent two seasons with the Eagles, first as Defensive Backs coach (2021) and then as Defensive Passing Game Coordinator/DB's (2022). Before that, Wilson spent four seasons (2017-20) with the Jets as Defensive Backs coach (2017-18) and Passing Game Coordinator/DBs (2019-20).

Wilson entered the NFL as a coach in 2012 with the St. Louis Rams as a Defensive Quality Control coach. In 2015 he was elevated to Defensive Backs coach. Prior to joining the NFL coaching ranks, he spent four years (2008-11) as a pro scout for the Bears.

On Wednesday, during the first week of the team's offseason program, Wilson smiled big when discussing some of the team's new players, and the returning ones.

He knows the defense is a work in progress, on paper, and ultimately, on the field. New players will be added via the draft, and free agency.

Earlier this week, the first slide he showed his new players on power point read: Opportunity is now here.

Wilson said he plans to "coach the hell out of is players."

He's loves the early interaction as the process begins.

"It's been outstanding. It's been great," Wilson said. "The first couple of things, this week, it's about a building block, it's about creating a foundation, it's about establishing culture. It's about setting a precedent about where we are going, what we need to get there, and how we are going to get there. And have been extremely receptive. As a coaching staff, myself included, we come out here and try to have enthusiasm unknown to mankind, to get these guys to come back and want to be coached, and want to be around us. So it has been very receptive. Guys are buying in, guys are learning every day, and we're just stacking bricks and stacking bricks until we build a wall that is strong."

TITANS DC DENNARD WILSON TO TAKE PART IN THE NFL'S COACH ACCELERATOR PROGRAM AT THE LEAGUE MEETINGS NEXT WEEK IN NASHVILLE

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 16, 2024

NASHVILLE – First-year Titans defensive coordinator Dennard Wilson will be among the coaches taking part in the 2024 Coach Accelerator Program at the NFL meetings next week in Music City.

The Springs Meetings are scheduled for May 20-22 in Nashville.

The Accelerator program is part of the league's efforts to strengthen the pipeline of diverse coaching candidates. It serves as a platform for clubs and owners to engage with qualified coaching candidates from diverse backgrounds.

Candidates can build relationships with club owners and executives and further develop and hone their leadership skills. To date, the program has successfully contributed to an increase in diverse candidates being interviewed for open positions, and many past participants have been promoted and hired into more senior coaching positions.

While with the San Francisco 49ers, Ran Carthon took part in the NFL's Front Office Accelerator Program prior to be hired as General Manager by the Titans.

"Developing diverse coaching talent through the Accelerator program is a key priority," said NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell. "In its fifth iteration, this program continues to be an effective avenue for club owners and executives to be exposed to the skillset and unique backgrounds of highly qualified coaching candidates, and for the program's participants to network with one another and engage in professional development sessions."

Wilson, who joined the Titans earlier this this offseason, has 12 years of NFL coaching experience, including nine seasons coaching defensive backs.

Wilson spent one season (2023) with the Baltimore Ravens as Defensive Backs coach. Prior to joining the Ravens, Wilson spent two seasons with the Philadelphia Eagles, first as Defensive Backs coach (2021) and then as Defensive Passing Game Coordinator/DB's (2022).

Wilson spent four seasons (2017-20) with the New York Jets as Defensive Backs coach (2017-18) and Passing Game Coordinator/DB's (2019-20). Wilson entered the NFL as a coach in 2012 with the St. Louis Rams as a Defensive Quality Control coach. In 2015 he was elevated to Defensive Backs coach. Prior to joining the NFL coaching ranks, he spent four years (2008-11) as a pro scout for the Chicago Bears. He originally entered coaching as a Defensive Backs coach for his high school alma mater, DeMatha Catholic (MD) from 2004-06. He also spent two seasons (2007-09) at the University of Maryland as a graduate assistant.

In addition to networking and personal development programming, the league will provide coaches with insight to future initiatives, both on and off the field, to contextualize how the game will continue to develop and where the NFL is evolving.

"Since its inception, the Coaching Accelerator has prepared candidates to succeed in various coaching roles while cultivating relationships with executives and key decision makers," said Mark Wilf, Minnesota Vikings owner and president. "The program proves to be mutually beneficial for participants and clubs as it breaks down barriers to access and educational tools vital for success. I am proud of the progress already made and look forward to seeing the continuous growth of the Accelerator."

ONCE FEARFUL TO TACKLE, KJ WINSTON IS NOW A BEDROCK OF THE PENN STATE DEFENSE

BY RICH SCARCELLA
READING EAGLE
AUGUST 25, 2024

Kevin Winston Jr. was 7 years old and in his first season of playing tackle football with one slight problem – he was afraid to tackle.

KJ would let ball carriers run past him and then jump on their backs to try to bring them down. One year later, his father and coach offered him stern advice.

Kevin Sr. told his son to run through somebody and tackle him as hard as he could. His son finally did.

“He said, ‘Dad, it didn’t hurt,’ ” his father recalled. “From that point, he was knocking people’s helmets off and doing very well.”

KJ Winston has gone on to become one of the surest tacklers in the country and one of the bedrocks of the vaunted Penn State defense.

At 6-2 and 205 pounds, Winston is the only Nittany Lion ranked among the top 50 players in the country by Pro Football Focus, He’s been projected as a first- or second-round draft pick next year.

The guy who was fearful as a child is a fierce tackler who led Penn State in that category last year. He’s especially effective against the run.

“That’s just something I’ve been good at since I was a little kid playing for my father,” Winston said. “He told me, ‘Hit ’em in the mouth and they won’t come back.’ Stuff like that.

“He’s always talked about physicality. Having that at a young age, then through high school and now in college, it’s just how I play football.”

Winston is one of six starters returning from a defense that allowed the fewest rushing yards in the country and the second-fewest total yards. He accounted for 61 tackles, three takeaways and five pass breakups.

Defensive coordinator Tom Allen was on the opposing sideline last year as the Indiana head coach when the Lions rallied to beat the Hoosiers 33-24 and held them to 80 rushing yards on 34 attempts.

“The thing that stuck out to me was his size and his speed, which creates range,” Allen said. “He’s one of those guys who I thought was a really good player on film. Then you watch him warm up and you’re like, ‘Dang, he’s a good looking dude.’

“He’s big. He’s well-proportioned. He’s twitchy for his length. He can flat out burst and close.”

His father describes Winston as “cut from a different cloth.” He knew he wanted to attend DeMatha Catholic High School in Hyattsville, Md., when he was in fifth grade. He knew he wanted to go to Penn State when he was in seventh or eighth grade after playing in an all-star game there.

Rated a consensus four-star prospect, he played in 12 games as a freshman in 2022 before he became a starter last season. He made seven tackles against Ohio State and 12 against Michigan and received All-Big Ten honorable mention.

Winston begins this season as a team captain and a candidate for the All-Big Ten first team and All-American teams.

“He’s a man, he really is,” Penn State coach James Franklin said. “He’s so mature. He really knows how to practice, how to prepare. He’s totally locked in. He’s totally focused. Football is really important to him.

“I don’t have enough adjectives for him. You look at him physically, he’s beautiful. He has a great relationship with the coaches. He’s kind of an extension to the coaching staff. I could go on and on and on.”

Winston will be on the field often with his two buddies, Jaylen Reed and Zakee Wheatley. Winston and Wheatley likely will be at safety and Reed at the Lion, a hybrid position combining linebacker and defensive back.

“We’re all just natural, smart athletes,” Winston said. “We work off each other in a great way. I’d say our relationships off the field allow us to go out there and be that way.

“We’re so connected that when we go out on the field we’re talking to each other like we’re sitting at dinner communicating plays to each other. It doesn’t feel awkward.”

Winston has emerged as one of the most vocal leaders on the defense, if not the team. He holds his teammates to the same high standard he holds himself.

“He might be the most impressive guy that I’ve seen,” Allen said, “in terms of understanding, taking care of his body, how he approaches every walk-through, how he approaches every jog-through, how he practices every single day.

According to Pro Football Focus, Winston missed just 2% of his possible tackles, which was second among all safeties last season. He finished as the only safety to earn 85-plus grades as a run defender and in pass coverage. Yet he’s not satisfied.

“There’s so much to improve in my game,” he said. “I really want to be way better in man coverage. I wasn’t bad, but I want to be even better. I want to be able to play dudes like I’m a corner.

“Then I’d just say getting some turnovers out there. Making plays on the ball. That starts in practice.”

Kevin Winston Sr. was an All-American defensive end at James Madison. He underwent back surgery before his senior year, which kept him from playing in the NFL. He’s hoping his only son can play at a level he didn’t.

“It’s amazing,” the elder Winston said. “There’s still a season that has to be played at a high level. If you are that first- or second-round draft pick, the expectations don’t get lower. The competition doesn’t get easier.

“I just know how much he sacrificed and how much he loves the game, how much he studies the game. He’s a way better person than a football player. That’s all I can ask for.”

PENN STATE'S KEVIN WINSTON JR. 'BLESSED' BY LIFE-ALTERING INJURY, MENTALLY READY FOR NFL SUCCESS

BY SETH ENGLE
STATECOLLEGE.COM
FEBRUARY 28, 2025

INDIANAPOLIS — Kevin Winston Jr. was on a path toward superstardom. He was a preseason All-American safety, a projected first-round NFL Draft pick and a Penn State team captain. Winston was named the Big Ten's Defensive Player of the Week in the Nittany Lions' first game of 2024. And then, suddenly, the path ventured sideways into a world of introspection and recovery.

Winston thought it was just a "tweak," something he could play through against Bowling Green on Sept. 7. But a few plays into that game, he sidelined himself. After further testing, it was revealed that Winston had partially torn his ACL. A month later, he had surgery. Winston's junior year, which began with overwhelming anticipation, was over just after it began.

It's been six months since Winston embarked on the most difficult journey of his career. It was understandably challenging at first, purely in accepting the reality of his situation. But Winston quickly pivoted. He began to focus on what he could control, attacking his rehab as hard as he would his game preparation. And if he had it his way, Winston wouldn't change a thing.

"I'm blessed that it happened to me," Winston said at the NFL Scouting Combine on Thursday. "I don't regret anything that happened and I don't wish anything different, because I think throughout this process, I've learned a lot about myself. I appreciate things more than I ever had, and I'm actually blessed that it happened to me."

Winston told fellow safety Ji'Ayir Brown on his first day of workouts that he'd be in his right pocket throughout every rep and every workout. He handled his craft like a professional and wanted to look after a veteran who did, as well. Brown eventually entered the NFL, where he's now a staple of the San Francisco 49er's defense. Winston has been waiting to follow in his footsteps since they met.

But what exactly makes an NFL player? The dream is alive in the heart of every young football player, but only so few actually achieve it. Even fewer make the dream last over the course of a career. It's not talent alone. It's something else, something Winston has searched for since the day he first held the pigskin. Now, through challenging circumstances, he's found it.

"I had to mentally make sure I was ready for the NFL. If you're not mentally strong and mentally ready for the NFL, you won't last," Winston said. "The guys who are mentally weak, they won't last in the league, and I had to make sure that I was there. I've been preparing my mental and my habits and my routine since I was a freshman in college."

Winston won't participate in on-field drills at the combine, but plans to run the 40-yard dash at Penn State's Pro Day on March 28. He's yet not fully healthy, but projects to be 100% by the start of NFL training camp. Winston is not likely to hear his name called in the first round of April's draft, as many had projected last summer. But that hardly matters to him.

There's no one with more confidence in Winston than himself. He's battled through adversity, and grown from it. At 6-foot-1 and 215 pounds, Winston possesses the physical tangibles to make an immediate impact at the next level. But the skill he's developed within his own mind is the one that may separate him from his peers. His path is leading him back to the light.

"The injury doesn't change a thing. If I was playing this junior season, I would've shown exactly what I was supposed to show and there would have been no doubt in anybody's mind I was a first-round talent," Winston said. "When I come back, you guys will see everything and more of that. And there's no doubt in my mind, I'll make sure that everybody sees it. The injury is not changing anything."

PENN STATE SAFETY KEVIN WINSTON JR. COMMITTED TO LEAD WHILE SIDELINED AFTER INJURY

BY LYLE ALENSTEIN
THE DAILY COLLEGIAN
JANUARY 3, 2025

Penn State's postgame celebration was filled with joy, as players lit cigars, posed for pictures with each other and shouted in excitement after knocking off Boise State in the Fiesta Bowl.

While the cries of victory echoed as players prepared to hit the showers, safety Kevin Winston Jr. sat next to his position coach Anthony Poindexter. He remained calm, cool and collected with his eyes hidden behind his Louis Vuitton sunglasses, but the victory looked a little bit different from his point of view.

"I would love to go out there and put the work in with the guys," Winston said. "The blood, sweat and tears with them, like I always have since my time here."

The junior suffered what James Franklin called a "long-term" injury, following his exit early in the second quarter in Week 2 against Bowling Green. It was a promising start to the season, as he tallied 12 tackles and a forced fumble in the opener against West Virginia, where he won the Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week.

After entering the 2024 season with a first- or second-round draft grade, expectations were high for Winston. While his season was cut short when Franklin confirmed the safety wouldn't be back this season, Winston couldn't be prouder of his teammates and the postseason run that is currently taking shape.

"I can't help but to be super happy for everybody," Winston said. "I love this team, and seeing them happy, and seeing them win. Everybody all over, the guys making plays just makes me so happy. That's the biggest thing for me. And being here and being able to have an effect on everybody. I have enjoyed this time with them. I don't take that for granted."

Winston suffered his injury leading up to the game against the Falcons. He tried giving it a go, but following a quarter of play he knew he couldn't carry on.

"When it happened, it didn't feel right," Winston said. "I'm very in-tune with my body, and when I tried to keep going, it wasn't feeling right. In that Bowling Green Game, I tried to play through it, and I was like, I knew something wasn't right. And then we took the procedures, got X-rays and everything."

Winston didn't disclose the nature of his injury, though it was reported by Adam Schefter of ESPN that he had a partially-torn ACL. He was seen wearing a brace over his right leg throughout the season, though he stepped away from the program early in the process to recover and be with family.

Winston also didn't comment on why he opted to go to the NFL Draft instead of returning for the 2025 season, but once his procedure was done it eliminated the chance of returning for the year.

"It was so hard for me," Winston said. "I never expected to play my first game and then the next week in practice I was going to get hurt."

While he knew he wasn't going to suit up again this season, Winston came back to be with his teammates. He was named a captain for a reason and was committed to helping the team from a leadership role.

"The energy is low — I got to be there to lift it up," Winston said. "And that's what I owe to them. I love these guys and they love me back, and I feel that genuine love all the time. And that's what they deserve as well."

His leadership has been on display from the sideline ever since he returned to the program. It started following the loss to Ohio State, where he immediately grabbed a disappointed and fellow safety Jaylen Reed on the field postgame, putting his arm around him to calm him down as they walked toward the alma mater.

It happened again in the Fiesta Bowl, as he approached quarterback Drew Allar on the sideline, getting him to stay composed.

"Kid's a calming presence. He's just got a great ability to coach guys coming off the field," defensive coordinator Tom Allen said. "He knows what we're doing. He's just so mature and everything, I'm just glad he's still a big part of it."

The impact Winston made on the field hasn't been present in 2024, but his leadership off it has paid dividends and he'll continue to stick by his teammates' sides as Penn State chases a national championship.

"I had to come back," Winston said. "Started this season off, my motivation was to be there for my teammates and be a leader on this team, no matter whether I'm on the field or not. I had to commit to that and make sure I'm here."

COUNTDOWN TO KICKOFF
BY ED ATLAS
NASHVILLE LIFESTYLE

When he was in his 20s, Taylor Zarzour attended a camp in Los Angeles where aspiring sportscasters would learn tricks of the trade from industry professionals. ,

One of the more revealing activities was a session where 'campers' would call the action of old football or basketball games that were played on video screens in their makeshift press box. It was there that Zarzour's engaging and energetic delivery caught the attention of veteran broadcasters.

"My style leans into enthusiasm," Zarzour says. "I try to be as descriptive as I can be, and I bring a ton of passion. That's who I am as a person. And the [instructors] were sort of laughing at my enthusiasm. I asked, 'is that bad?' and they said, 'no, don't ever lose that. There was refining to do but they leaned into what makes me [who I am] and started coaching me up."

Since then, Zarzour has embarked on a career path that has taken him from ESPN to SiriusXM with stints in local markets from the Gulf Coast to the Carolinas, including a brief stop in Nashville some 20 years ago.

Earlier this year, that path led him back to Middle Tennessee when he became the new play-by-play announcer for the Tennessee Titans. Zarzour has been on the job since April, but he steps up to the mic for his first regular season game when the Titans kick off the 2025 campaign on September 7 on the road against the Denver Broncos.

"There are only 32 of these [NFL] jobs in the whole world, and I am so blessed to have this opportunity," Zarzour said at the time of his hiring. "I'm proud of all the twists-and-turns my broadcasting career has taken. I've been fortunate to do a lot of national work. But there's nothing better or more fulfilling than being with a team. You become an extension of the organization. It's the greatest thing to happen in my professional career."

It's common for youngsters to emulate their favorite athletes. But when he was growing up in Mobile, Alabama, Zarzour's heroes were the top-tier announcers of the day. "I would watch Keith Jackson (ABC/college football) and Vin Scully (MLB/Los Angeles Dodgers) and Bob Costas (NBC) and Pat Summerall (CBS/NFL) and I would be more interested in what they were doing than the players," Zarzour says. "I was struck by their ability to be a conduit between the fan and the field. I was always obsessed with that and I still am."

Even though he's the voice of the Titans, calling play-by-play is not his only job with the team. As a de facto Titans PR rep, Zarzour is a daily presence at practices and frequently represents the organization at local events. He also serves as host for Titans head coach Brian Callahan's weekly radio and television shows.

"I take time each day to prep for games; cramming is not something that is going to produce the best version of me on the air," say Zarzour. "As soon as the game is over, I'm beginning my prep for the next week."

Zarzour says that he spends about 10 hours prepping for every hour on air. Throughout the week this entails meeting with Callahan, watching film and scanning media accounts of both the Titans and their opponent. By Thursday he's assembling his boards–charts that help identify players, along with notes for quick recall during the live broadcast. Production meetings are held on Friday while Saturday is a review day where Zarzour makes sure that all systems are go.

While he's best known as the voice of the Titans, he finds being the public face of the franchise to be just as rewarding. "That part of the job, where I'm an extension of the team, fulfills me as much as calling the game," he says. "I lived in Nashville and did sports radio here before I started concentrating on golf and SiriusXM and college football, and I'm grateful for those opportunities. But I missed being an extension of the community.

"Connecting with fans, emceeing events and representing the team in a town that I love is very meaningful to me. I knew what I was signing up for, and I did it happily."

You can catch Tennessee Titans action all season long on WGFX 104.5 The Zone with Taylor Zarzour (play-by-play), Dave McGinnis (analyst), and Will Boling and Amie Wells (sideline reporters). Additional programming information and a mobile app are available at TennesseeTitans.com.

MEET NEW TENNESSEE TITANS RADIO ANNOUNCER TAYLOR ZARZOUR, A FAMILY MAN AND A MATCHMAKER

BY PAUL SKRBINA
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
SEPTEMBER 4, 2025

Taylor Zarzour is the new radio play-by-play announcer for the Tennessee Titans.

He was inspired to become a sports broadcaster at age seven while watching the 1985 Iron Bowl.

Zarzour has previously called games for the SEC and The Masters, jobs he will continue to hold.

Seven years, 11 months and two days is all the time Taylor Zarzour needed to figure out what he wanted to be when he grew up.

Zarzour was sitting on the couch in the den of his family's home in Mobile, Ala., on Nov. 30, 1985, the day he was that exact age. It was the day the new "Voice of the Tennessee Titans" discovered he wanted to be a sports broadcaster.

His eyes might as well have been sewn to the television that flickered in front of him, a television that was tuned into ABC's broadcast of the Iron Bowl between Alabama and Auburn.

Zarzour's ears, though, veered toward the voices he heard coming from the TV, voices belonging to Keith Jackson, Frank Broyles, and Tim Brant.

The kick is up ...

Jackson paused as the ball Alabama's Van Tiffin had just struck with his right foot floated toward the goalpost 42 yards away as the game clock struck 00:00.

It's long enough. ...

Another pause.

It's good! He made it!

"I was like, 'Wow, who gets to do that job?' " said Zarzour, who will call his first regular-season Titans game Sept. 7, when the team opens 2025 in Denver against the Broncos. "It just created this addiction, fascination that I have with broadcasting."

An "addiction, fascination" that has landed him with the Tennessee Titans as the team's new radio play-by-play announcer, a role he's taken over from Mike Keith, who, along with Jim Nantz, endorsed him for the job.

Color Zarzour's mother, Katherine, the opposite of surprised.

'Every little boy wants to be a sportscaster'

The eldest of Katherine and Dr. Robert Zarzour's six children, Taylor Zarzour was "no older than 7 or 8" when he began turning down the volume on the TV and talking into a hairbrush, which he used as a makeshift microphone.

"He would do football games or baseball games or whatever was on," Katherine said. "My husband would sometimes say, 'Taylor, that's really great. Can I turn it back up?' "

The answer was always the same: "No, dad."

"He would say, 'I'm going to be a sportscaster,' " Katherine continued. "We would say, 'Well, that's great. Every little boy wants to be a sportscaster.' "

Turns out, Taylor Zarzour was far from "every little boy."

Evidence of that showed itself again when he was "waiting forever" at the DMV with his mother, who was there to renew her driver's license.

"He's bored to death," Katherine said. "There's this cross-section of the world there.'

Including several men who began peppering the 7- or 8-year-old boy with baseball trivia.

"He starts answering all of them, and I'm sitting there going, 'Dang, he really is going to do this. Oh, my God. How is he going to do this?' " Katherine said.

That is the same question she asked herself after he was hired by the Titans. Zarzour's voice, you see, isn't unfamiliar to SEC football and baseball fans. He calls games for the conference, which he will continue to do.

He's also one of the voices of The Masters for SiriusXM, another job he will continue to do.

"His poor wife," Katherine said with a laugh. "All those W2s."

The Zarzour siblings at home before Easter in 1994. From left to right, Gaines, Grant, Taylor, Matt, Ryan and Mary Katherine (Taylor's lap).

'What's going to happen to me?'

Taylor Zarzour was 4 years, 9 months and six days old when he met his little sister, Katie.

He was 5 years, four months and eight days old when he said goodbye to her.

Katie was seven months old when she died of a heart condition, on May 5, 1983.

That was Taylor's first brush with devastation, an experience he later turned into a tribute when he named his first-born daughter after her.

"My Katie is wired very similarly (to me)," Taylor said. "She's a huge sports fan, and she knows what I'm doing all the time. She's always connected. My other daughter, Grace, she has the rest of us wrapped around her little finger ... but she has no idea what game I'm doing each weekend."

Taylor remembers the game he was doing Sept. 10, 2016. How could he forget?

Tennessee faced Virginia Tech in a football game that night at Bristol Motor Speedway. There were 156,990 fans there, an NCAA single-game attendance record.

Dr. Robert Zarzour was in a Mobile, Ala., hospital that night, dying of spinal cord cancer just two months after he was diagnosed. He was gone the next day.

That was Taylor Zarzour's second brush with devastation.

"My sister passed away when I was 5," he said. "I was terrified the same thing was going to happen to me. 'What's going to happen to me?' I found myself sleeping at the foot of my parents' bed a lot after that happened, and my dad said something to me that has stuck with me forever.

"He's like, 'I wish I could put a mailbox here in this room for you, at the foot of the bed, so you could stay here forever. But I know that's not what's best for you. I want you to dream as big as you can possibly can about whatever it is you want to be.' "

And so Taylor did.

Taylor Zarzour the matchmaker

Taylor Zarzour is part Cupid, and part announcer.

He's also all family.

Exhibit A: "Intern" Davis Williams.

That's who drove Taylor through the night to the Charlotte airport the day of the Tennessee-Virginia Tech football game, so the former could catch a flight home to see his father.

That's who followed Taylor from job to job as an intern. That's who married Taylor's other sister, Mary Katherine, who is 14 years her brother's junior.

"When we were growing up, I'd lie about (Taylor's) age because I was embarrassed at how old he was," Mary Katherine said.

And while she knew "Intern Davis" was her age and shared a passion for sports like her brother, it wasn't until he showed up at her father's funeral service that she began to fancy him.

"So I introduced myself and just said, 'This means so much to Taylor,' " Mary Katherine continued.

The two then began exchanging emails, and Mary Katherine soon learned that Intern Davis' father had died when he was in high school, that he'd been a confidant for Taylor while his own father was sick.

"Lo and behold, here we are," she said.

'I hit the wrong button'

Lo and behold, here Taylor Zarzour is, in Nashville.

Again.

The golf-obsessed man who once walked a pro-am round with Tiger Woods, who once accidentally played a song containing explicit lyrics by Dr. Dre and Snoop Dog on the air when he worked at Nashville's WNSR Sports Radio 560 − "I hit the wrong button," he said. "I was so mad at myself." − who counts Vin Scully as the "greatest broadcaster ever," still references the same thick blue binder he studied 26 years ago while attending a sportscasters camp in Los Angeles to spruce up his vocal cords.

He still chuckles at the memory of having his brother, Grant, call into his radio show as "Joe from Raleigh" after North Carolina men's basketball games because nobody else was calling.

He'd pose as a mad-as-hell Tar Heels fan, help his brother "stir the pot a little," then hang up and listen.

"He would send me a picture of the phone bank blowing up," said Grant, who would call from outside the science library at the University of South Alabama, having not watched one second of the game.

Taylor still cherishes having another of his brothers, Matt, spot for him during broadcasts.

He's very much looking forward to what his future holds with the Titans. But he already has a perfect scenario in mind.

"That is making the final call in the Super Bowl," he said. "And making it for the team I love, in the community I live in, and sharing that moment for all the people who have thought about that since the Titans came to Nashville.

"That's the biggest dream I've ever had."

Again.

The golf-obsessed man who once walked a pro-am round with Tiger Woods, who once accidentally played a song containing explicit lyrics by Dr. Dre and Snoop Dog on the air when he worked at Nashville's WNSR Sports Radio 560 − "I hit the wrong button," he said. "I was so mad at myself." − who counts Vin Scully as the "greatest broadcaster ever," still references the same thick blue binder he studied 26 years ago while attending a sportscasters camp in Los Angeles to spruce up his vocal cords.

He still chuckles at the memory of having his brother, Grant, call into his radio show as "Joe from Raleigh" after North Carolina men's basketball games because nobody else was calling.

He'd pose as a mad-as-hell Tar Heels fan, help his brother "stir the pot a little," then hang up and listen.

"He would send me a picture of the phone bank blowing up," said Grant, who would call from outside the science library at the University of South Alabama, having not watched one second of the game.

Taylor still cherishes having another of his brothers, Matt, spot for him during broadcasts.

He's very much looking forward to what his future holds with the Titans. But he already has a perfect scenario in mind.

"That is making the final call in the Super Bowl," he said. "And making it for the team I love, in the community I live in, and sharing that moment for all the people who have thought about that since the Titans came to Nashville.

"That's the biggest dream I've ever had."

TITANS/OILERS HALL OF FAME & RING OF HONOR

In recognition of the 40th season of the Houston Oilers/Tennessee Titans organization in 1999, the team's late owner K.S. "Bud" Adams, Jr. created an official team Hall of Fame, featuring players and staff from the past, while creating a special place for Titans stars of the future to be recognized.

On Sept. 7, 2008, the same day Titans owner K.S. "Bud" Adams, Jr. was added to the Titans/Oilers Hall of Fame, he unveiled the Ring of Honor at Nissan Stadium during the team's season opener. The Ring of Honor would feature the same players inducted into the team Hall of Fame. The initial members of the Ring of Honor included Adams, Elvin Bethea, George Blanda, Earl Campbell, Mike Holovak, Ken Houston, Mike Munchak, Jim Norton, Warren Moon and Bruce Matthews.

Through 2025, 19 individuals were named to the franchise's Hall of Fame and Ring of Honor. Most recently, the franchise added radio play-by-play announcer and "Voice of the Titans" Mike Keith to the Ring of Honor in 2025.

GEORGE BLANDA
QUARTERBACK/KICKER • 6'2" • 215 lbs • COLLEGE: KENTUCKY
NFL SEASONS: 26 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 7 (1960-66)
HOMETOWN: YOUNGWOOD, PA. • BORN: SEPT. 27, 1927
GAMES PLAYED: 340 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 1981

George Blanda, who came out of retirement with the emergence of the American Football League in 1960, was the offensive catalyst for the explosive Oiler squads of the early 1960s. He played quarterback and handled the placekicking chores in Columbia blue for seven of his NFL-record 26 seasons in the league. Blanda was the team's leading passer and scorer in each of those seven seasons and still owns franchise records for most extra points (299), most touchdown passes in a season (36) and most touchdown passes in a game (7). He is also third in points scored with 596. The 36 scoring tosses stood as an NFL record for an astounding 23 years. Blanda's NFL career records included most games (340), most points (2,002) and most extra points (943). He also passed for 236 touchdowns. Blanda captained the Oilers to two consecutive AFL titles in 1960 and 1961, earning AFL Player of the Year honors in 1961. Blanda's career was divided into three distinct parts, 10 years with the Chicago Bears, seven seasons with the Houston Oilers and nine years with the Oakland Raiders. In 1970, he became the oldest quarterback to play in a title game. He was just a month shy of his 49th birthday when he retired before the 1976 season. Blanda passed away at age 83 on Sept. 27, 2010.

KEN HOUSTON
SAFETY • 6'3" • 197 lbs • COLLEGE: PRAIRIE VIEW A&M
NFL SEASONS: 14 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 6 (1967-72)
HOMETOWN: LUFKIN, TEXAS • BORN: NOV. 12, 1944
GAMES PLAYED: 196 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 1986

Considered one of the best safeties in football history, Ken Houston picked off 49 passes (898 yards), recovered 21 fumbles and scored 12 touchdowns over his 14-season NFL career, earning Pro Bowl honors 12 consecutive times (1968-69 AFL, 1970-79 NFL). Houston returned an NFL-record nine interceptions for a touchdown in his six seasons as an Oiler. Four of those scores came in 1971, tying an NFL record. He returned two in one game against San Diego in the 1971 season finale, which also ties an NFL mark. His other three touchdowns came on a punt return, a fumble return and a blocked field goal return. Houston also holds the Oilers record for most career interception return yards with 650. With a long, fluid stride, Houston had excellent speed and quickness. His 6-3, 197-pound frame made him an ideal pass defender. Yet his lean, muscular body helped him to become a punishing tackler. Originally a ninth-round draft choice out of Prairie View A&M, Houston earned a starter's role by the third game of his rookie season. Two weeks later in a game against the New York Jets, he scored two touchdowns, one on a 71-yard blocked field goal attempt, and the other on a 43-yard interception return. After excelling for six years with the Oilers, Ken was traded to the Redskins for five veteran players in 1973. The Redskins once referred to Houston as "pro football's most underrated superstar," but his capabilities were widely recognized. He won all-league acclaim with the Oilers in 1969 and 1971, and then was either All-Pro or All-NFC with the Redskins every year from 1973 to 1979. He was selected for either the AFL All-Star game or the AFC-NFC Pro Bowl 12 straight seasons from 1968 through 1979. He played in 183 consecutive games before suffering a broken arm against the New York Giants Nov. 25, 1979.

EARL CAMPBELL
RUNNING BACK • 5'11" • 232 lbs • COLLEGE: TEXAS
NFL SEASONS: 8 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 7 (1978-84)
HOMETOWN: TYLER, TEXAS • BORN: MARCH 29, 1955
GAMES PLAYED: 115 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 1991

Earl Campbell, a 5-11, 232-pound ball-carrying dynamo from the University of Texas, joined the Houston Oilers as the first player taken in the 1978 National Football League Draft. The first player to earn All-Southwest Conference honors four years, Campbell was a consensus All-America and the Heisman Trophy winner in 1977. Campbell took the NFL by storm from the outset. In 1978, he was named the NFL's Most Valuable Player, All-Pro, and Rookie of the Year. He won the league rushing championship with a club-record 1,450 yards and was named to the AFC Pro Bowl squad. It was more of the same the next two years with NFL rushing titles, MVP honors, and consensus All-Pro acclaim each season. He followed his rookie campaign with 1,697 yards in 1979, but his finest year came in 1980 when he rushed for 1,934 yards, which at the time was second only to 0. J. Simpson's 2,003 yards gained in 1973. That year, Campbell gained over 200 yards in four games. In 1981, he won his fourth straight AFC rushing title with 1,376 yards. A sensational runner, Campbell was picked for the Pro Bowl five of his first six NFL seasons (1978-81, 1983). In his eight-year career, which finished in New Orleans, Campbell rushed 2,187 times for 9,407 yards, and 74 touchdowns, retiring as the NFL's seventh all-time leading rusher. He also gained 806 yards on 121 receptions to bring his career combined net yards total to 10,213. He set Oilers records for most career yards (8,574), most career attempts (1,979), most touchdown runs (73) and most consecutive games with a rushing touchdown (5). His most famous performance came in a Monday night game against Miami in his rookie season. That night, he rushed for 199 yards and four touchdowns to lead the Oilers to a spectacular 35-30 victory. In spite of the constant pounding he took from opposing defenders, Earl missed only six games out of 115 because of injuries. Midway into his seventh season, he was traded by the Oilers to the New Orleans Saints for a first-round draft pick. He played a season and a half with the Saints before retiring after the 1985 campaign. Campbell is one of just four people officially designated a Texas Legend by the Texas State Legislature. The others are Davy Crockett, Sam Houston and Stephen F. Austin. Campbell was the only designee of the 20th century.

CHARLIE JOINER
WIDE RECEIVER • 5'11" • 188 lbs • COLLEGE: GRAMBLING
NFL SEASONS: 18 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 4 (1969-72)
HOMETOWN: MANY, LA. • BORN: OCT. 14, 1947
GAMES PLAYED: 239 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 1996

Charlie Joiner played 18 seasons in the NFL, including his first four with the Houston Oilers. One of the league's most prolific receivers, he amassed 750 career receptions for 12,146 yards and 65 touchdowns, ranking as the league's leading receiver of all-time when he retired at the age of 39 in 1986. His 18 seasons played were longer than any other wide receiver in history at the time of his retirement. The Oilers originally targeted Joiner for the defensive backfield when they picked the 5-11, 180-pounder from Grambling in the fourth round of the 1969 AFL-NFL Draft. Joiner played briefly on defense and the kickoff return team but soon became established as a premier pass catcher. Joiner caught 82 of his 750 career passes as an Oiler, totaling 1,480 yards and 12 touchdowns. He paced the squad with 681 yards and seven touchdown grabs in 1971. In his fourth season in 1972, Houston sent him to the Cincinnati Bengals in a four-player swap. Four years later in 1976, he was traded to San Diego. With the Chargers, Joiner blossomed into super-stardom. He and quarterback Dan Fouts formed a lethal pass-catch team that accounted for the preponderance of his 586 receptions as a Charger. During his 11 years in San Diego, Joiner caught 50 or more passes seven times and had 70 or more receptions three seasons. Injuries cut into his playing time at the beginning, but in a 193-game span over his final 13 seasons, Joiner missed only one game. He was an All-NFL pick in 1980 and a Pro Bowl choice three times. In the 1980 AFC title game, he led the Chargers with six receptions for 130 yards and two touchdowns. Blessed with excellent speed and tantalizing moves, Joiner averaged 16.2 yards per catch and accounted for 12,146 yards and 65 touchdowns. When he was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1996, Joiner ranked fifth in receptions and sixth in receiving yardage on the NFL's all-time list. Joiner was once described by San Francisco 49ers coaching great Bill Walsh as "the most intelligent, the smartest, the most calculating receiver the game has ever known."

MIKE MUNCHAK
GUARD • 6'3" • 281 lbs • COLLEGE: PENN STATE
NFL SEASONS: 12 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 12 (1982-93)
HOMETOWN: SCRANTON, PA. • BORN: MARCH 5, 1960
GAMES PLAYED: 159 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 2001

Mike Munchak was the eighth player overall and the first offensive lineman chosen in the 1982 National Football League draft. Selected by the Oilers, the former Penn State standout was an immediate success with the Houston club, earning the starting left guard spot in his first training camp. The 6-3, 281-pound lineman wasted little time establishing himself as one of the premier guards in the NFL. In 1984, in just his third year in the league, he was named to the first of seven All-AFC teams. That same year he received the first of nine Pro Bowl invitations. Not coincidentally, the Oilers' on-the-field successes increased as Munchak's development and experience increased. From their dismal 1-8 record in the strike-shortened 1982 season, the Oilers improved nearly every year that Munchak played. Along the way, the team advanced to the playoffs seven consecutive years (1987-1993) and captured the 1991 and 1993 AFC Central Divisional crowns. Munchak was a devastating blocker and considered the key to an offensive line that kept the Oilers at or near the top of the NFL's offensive statistical categories. In 1988 he led the Oilers' offensive line that gave up just 24 quarterback sacks which was third in the NFL. It was also the fewest sacks allowed by the team in 10 seasons. The following season the offensive line held opponents to no sacks in six games. In 1991, the Oilers offensive line finished second in the AFC and fourth in the NFL in the fewest quarterback sacks allowed. Behind the Munchak-led line, Houston led the NFL in total offense in 1990 and passing offense in 1990 and 1991. The Oilers finished second in points scored in 1990 and second in total offense in 1991. Equally effective as a run blocker, Munchak led the Oilers offensive charge in 1993 as the team finished fourth in the NFL in both average gain per rushing play (4.4) and average gain per offensive play (5.3). Although he suffered from chronic knee problems, Munchak played in 159 regular season games. His 12 seasons with the Oilers tied him for second longest in the franchise's history at the time of his retirement. He became the first player inducted into the Hall of Fame who played his entire career with the Oilers. Long-time teammate Bruce Matthews presented Munchak for induction.

ELVIN BETHEA
DEFENSIVE END • 6'2" • 260 lbs • COLLEGE: NORTH CAROLINA A&T
NFL SEASONS: 16 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 16 (1968-83)
HOMETOWN: TRENTON, N.J. • BORN: MARCH 1, 1946
GAMES PLAYED: 210 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 2003

Defensive end Elvin Bethea, an eight-time Pro Bowl selection during his outstanding career with the Houston Oilers, was named to the five-man class of the 2003 Pro Football Hall of Fame that included running back Marcus Allen, guard Joe DeLamielleure, wide receiver James Lofton, and coach Hank Stram. A third-round draft pick in 1968 (77th player overall) Bethea played in 210 games over 16 seasons, never missing a game until breaking his arm on Nov. 13, 1977. He was considered a "steal" in a draft class that produced three future Hall of Fame players in Larry Csonka, Art Shell, and Ron Yary. When he retired, he held three team records relating to career service: most seasons (16), most career regular season games played (210), and most consecutive regular season games played (135). Having led the team in sacks in six seasons, Bethea's unofficial 105-career sack total still ranks first in franchise history, including his team-best 17 sacks in 1973. He recorded four sacks and a fumble recovery in his best single game performance against San Diego in 1976. He played in eight playoff games and posted 691 career tackles. Bethea also played in eight Pro Bowls (1970, 1972-1976, 1979, 1980) and earned All-Pro second-team honors in 1973, 1975, 1978, and 1979. More than just a pass rusher, Bethea was also effective against the run. Eventhough 1974 was the first year such statistics were compiled by the Oilers, his 691 career tackles, are still among the best in franchise history, even excluding the first six years of his career. "When people ask me who the best guy I ever played against was I always tell them Elvin Bethea and Lyle Alzado because both of them were complete ballplayers," said Art Shell, Hall of Fame member of the Oakland Raiders. "Elvin was one of the quickest guys I've ever been around. We always had to double-team him. There were times when I was supposed to block him when he would get by me so quick. And then Gene Upshaw was supposed to pick him up and he also got by him so quick that we would get back to the huddle and Upshaw would say, 'Did you see that?' and I'd say, 'Yeah, I saw that. He just beat the heck out of me too!' Elvin was just a great player."

WARREN MOON
QUARTERBACK • 6'3" • 212 lbs • COLLEGE: WASHINGTON
NFL SEASONS: 17 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 10 (1984-93)
HOMETOWN: LOS ANGELES, CALIF. • BORN: NOVEMBER 18, 1956
GAMES PLAYED: 208 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 2006

Warren Moon, the fourth leading passer in NFL history, was inducted into the 2006 class of the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Moon played 10 years (1984-93) with the Oilers/Titans organization and holds the franchise records for passing yards (33,685) and touchdowns (196), while leading the Oilers to seven consecutive playoff appearances from 1987-93. During a 17-year NFL career, Moon played for the Houston Oilers, Minnesota Vikings, Seattle Seahawks and Kansas City Chiefs and amassed 49,325 passing yards, 291 touchdowns and 102 wins. He earned nine Pro Bowl invitations (tied for the most by a quarterback with John Elway and Dan Marino), posted nine 3,000 yard seasons, 49 300-yard games and led his team to nine playoff appearances. His eight consecutive playoff berths matched a feat accomplished by Terry Bradshaw and Joe Montana. At the time of his retirement, he held the single-season passing yardage record for three different franchises: Oilers (4,367 in 1991), Vikings (4,364 in 1994) and Seahawks (3,678 in 1997). Moon tallied many accomplishments during his Oiler career. His finest season came in 1990, throwing for 4,689 yards (363 for 584) and 33 touchdowns in only 15 games. He earned AP NFL Offensive Player of the Year for his efforts and his third of nine Pro Bowl invitations. Against Kansas City in 1990, Moon threw for 527 yards, which ranks as the second highest single-game total in NFL history (Norm Van Brocklin, 554 yards in 1951). In 1991, he surpassed the previous season's yardage total with 4,690 yards and became just the third player (Marino, Fouts) in NFL history to produce consecutive 4,000 yard passing seasons. Moon joined the Oilers and the NFL in 1984, after six seasons in the Canadian Football League, where he led his team to five Grey Cups (League Champions). In the CFL, Moon threw for 21,228 yards and 144 touchdowns. Moon was driven to play in the CFL after drawing little interest from the NFL as a starting quarterback following his senior season at the University of Washington. Moon became the first African-American quarterback to be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame and his legacy as a minority quarterback cannot be underestimated. At the time of his arrival in the NFL only two black quarterbacks had been significant starters for their NFL teams (Shack Harris, Rams; Doug Williams, Tampa Bay).

BRUCE MATTHEWS
GUARD/TACKLE/CENTER • 6'5" • 305 lbs • COLLEGE: USC
NFL SEASONS: 19 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 19 (1983-2001)
HOMETOWN: ARCADIA, CALIF. • BORN: AUGUST 8, 1961
GAMES PLAYED: 296 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 2007

Arguably one of the best offensive linemen to ever play the game, Bruce Matthews became the first Tennessee Titan to be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame. At the time of his retirement, Matthews played in more NFL games (296) than any non-kicker in the league's history. Longevity and durability were his hallmarks, but that coupled with his unparalleled play, earning a league record 14 consecutive Pro Bowl (9 at guard and 6 at center) selections (tied with Merlin Olsen) and seven times named AP All-Pro, made him one of the all-time greats. He rose to the challenges presented to him in starting at every position on the offensive line during his NFL career (87 C, 99 LG, 67 RG, 22 RT, 17 LT). He becomes the first Hall of Fame offensive lineman to play significant time at all five offensive line positions. A constant for the Oilers/Titans franchise, Matthews started in a team record 229 consecutive games (streak started at Indianapolis, Nov. 29, 1987) and never missed a game because of injury. His 19 seasons also are a team record and he ranks second in NFL history for years with one team behind Jackie Slater, who spent 20 seasons with the Rams. Matthews and G Randall McDaniel (Vikings) were the only two NFL players to play in every game during the decade of the 90's. Matthews was a part of nearly one-half of the franchise's first 42-years of history and helped the team win 146 games, make the playoffs nine times, earn the only three AFC Central titles in team history, earn an AFC Championship and the franchise's only Super Bowl appearance. He blocked for 15 quarterbacks and 27 running backs, including five different 1,000-yard rushers (Earl Campbell, Mike Rozier, Lorenzo White, Gary Brown and Eddie George). During his career, he played in offenses that produced nine 1,000-yard rushing seasons and eight 3,000-yard passers. Additionally, he played in 42 different stadiums during his NFL career. During his career, Matthews blocked on a line that helped produce 65 100-yard rushing performances and 48 300-yard passing performances. Originally drafted by the Houston Oilers in the first round (ninth overall) of the 1983 NFL Draft, Matthews earned All-America honors at the University of Southern California. Matthews and his brother, Clay, each played 19 NFL seasons and the duo set an NFL record for games played by a pair of brothers with 574 games. Clay Matthews played in 278 games during his NFL career. Matthews had his number 74 jersey retired by the team and was inducted into the organization's Hall of Fame during a December, 2002 ceremony. Matthews joined a 2007 Hall of Fame class that included Dallas Cowboys WR Michael Irvin, Buffalo Bills RB Thurman Thomas, Detroit Lions TE Charlie Sanders, Cleveland Browns G Gene Hickerson, and St. Louis CB Roger Wehrli.

CURLEY CULP

DEFENSIVE TACKLE • 6'2" • 265 lbs • COLLEGE: ARIZONA STATE
NFL SEASONS: 14 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 7 (1974-1980)
HOMETOWN: YUMA, ARIZ. • BORN: MARCH 10, 1946
GAMES PLAYED: 179 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 2013

Curley Culp was voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 2013. A six-time Pro Bowl selection, Culp played in 179 games during his NFL career with the Kansas City Chiefs (1968-1974), Houston Oilers (1974-1980) and Detroit Lions (1980-81). He was considered the prototypical nose tackle and helped pioneer the 3-4 defense. Hailing from Arizona State, where he was an All-American in both football and wrestling, Culp was selected in the second round of the 1968 NFL Draft by the Denver Broncos, who intended to use him as an offensive guard. However, his brief stint in Denver ended when he was traded to the Chiefs, who inserted him permanently on the defensive side. In 1969, the Chiefs won Super Bowl IV, and Culp was an instrumental member of one of the league's top defenses. He helped the Chiefs defeat the Oakland Raiders in the AFL Championship Game and the Minnesota Vikings in the Super Bowl. In 1974, during his seventh campaign in Kansas City, Culp was traded to the Oilers along with a first-round draft pick (used to select Robert Brazile) in exchange for John Matuszak. The move paid almost immediate dividends for the Oilers, who previously suffered through 1-13 records in both 1972 and 1973. In 1975, Culp's first full season in Houston, he helped the Oilers to a record of 10-4, the first winning mark for the club in eight years. With Culp anchoring the defense, the Oilers finished with the AFC's top-ranked run defense (third in the NFL). Individually, Culp produced arguably the finest season of his career, recording 11.5 sacks and earning NFL Defensive Player honors by the Newspaper Enterprise Association. Culp continued as a leader of the Oilers defense that culminated in back-to-back appearances in the AFC championship games in 1978 and 1979. He was named to one AFL All-Star Game and five Pro Bowls during his career. Culp also was picked as a first-team All-Pro in 1975 and a second-team selection in 1971, 1977, 1978, and 1979. He was selected first- or second-team All-AFC five times. "Curley Culp was perhaps the strongest man I ever lined up against," said Raiders Hall of Fame center Jim Otto. Culp used his strong wrestling background to create havoc for opposing guards and centers. He was the 1968 NCAA heavyweight wrestling champion and was named to the U.S. Olympic wrestling team that year. Culp joined a 2013 Hall of Fame class that included offensive linemen Larry Allen and Jonathan Ogden, wide receiver Cris Carter, coach Bill Parcells, linebacker Dave Robinson and defensive lineman Warren Sapp.

ROBERT BRAZILE

LINEBACKER • 6'4" • 241 lbs • COLLEGE: JACKSON STATE
NFL SEASONS: 10 • YEARS WITH OILERS: 10 (1975-84)
HOMETOWN: MOBILE, ALA. • BORN: FEB. 7, 1953
GAMES PLAYED: 147 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 2018

Robert Brazile was voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 2018. As a rookie in 1975, he made an instant impact as he helped Houston notch the franchise's first winning season in eight years with a 10-4 record. He went on to win Defensive Rookie of the Year in 1975. With his speed, strength, tackling and coverage ability, Brazile helped revolutionize the outside linebacker position in a 3-4 defense. Nicknamed 'Dr. Doom,' Brazile started all 147 regular season games during his career and made seven postseason starts, including back-to-back AFC Championship Games (1978-79). He recorded nine tackles and one fumble recovery in the 1978 AFC Championship game. He was elected to seven career Pro Bowls and named All-Pro for five consecutive seasons (1976-80). Brazile registered a career-best 185 tackles in 1978 on his way to helping the Oilers secure three consecutive 10-win seasons and three consecutive playoff berths (1987-80). His career statistics include 13 interceptions, 14 fumble recoveries and 6.5 sacks in both 1976 and 1980. Brazile was named to the NFL's All-Decade Team of the 1970s.

KEVIN MAWAE

CENTER • 6'4" • 289 lbs • COLLEGE: LOUISIANA STATE
NFL SEASONS: 16 • YEARS WITH TITANS: 4 (2005-09)
HOMETOWN: LEEVILLE, LA. • BORN: JAN. 23, 1971
GAMES PLAYED: 241 • HALL OF FAME INDUCTION: 2019

Kevin Mawae was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame Class of 2019 and became the first established Titan without connections to the Houston Oilers to receive the honor. He played four seasons (2006-09) in Tennessee. Mawae entered the NFL as a second-round pick of the Seattle Seahawks in the 1994 NFL Draft. He began his career at right guard before being moved to center at the start of the 1996 season and remained at that position for the rest of his NFL career. After four seasons (1994-97) in the Northwest, the Louisiana State product signed a free agent deal with the New York Jets in 1998. In his first season in New York, Mawae helped running back Curtis Martin rush for a Jets franchise record eight 100-yard rushing games en route to 1,287-yard season. In 1999, he was named to his first of eight Pro Bowls and paved the way for Martin's then franchise-record 1,464 rushing yards. The 6-foot-4-inch, 289-pounder played in an astounding 177 consecutive games before a serious triceps injury ended his 2005 campaign after six games. Mawae signed a free agent deal with the Titans in 2006. In his first season with Tennessee, he made an immediate impact and was a part of an offense that ranked third in the AFC and fifth in the NFL in rushing with 2,214 yards. Three seasons later, he helped Chris Johnson amass a franchise-best 2,006 rushing yards, becoming just the sixth player all-time to accomplish the feat. In 241 career games over 16 seasons, Mawae was extremely durable and known for his toughness in the trenches. He was a first-team, all-decade center for the 2000s and blocked for a 1,000-yard rusher in 13 of his 16 seasons. Running backs Chris Warren (1,545 yards in 1994), Martin (1,697 in 2004), LenDale White (1,110 in 2007) and Johnson (2,006 in 2009) had the highest season rushing totals of their careers with Mawae on the line. He played 90 games in which there was a 100-yard rusher, the most by any offensive lineman in NFL history.

RETIRED JERSEY NUMBERS

In the history of the Oilers/Titans franchise, only eight players have had the distinction of having their jersey number retired — Jim Norton (No. 43), Elvin Bethea (No. 65), Earl Campbell (No. 34), Mike Munchak (No. 63), Bruce Matthews (No. 74), Warren Moon (No. 1), Eddie George (No. 27) and Steve McNair (No. 9).

Jim Norton played nine seasons for the Oilers (1960-68) as a safety and as a punter, establishing team records at both positions. As a rookie from the University of Idaho, Norton was a member of the Oilers' 1960 AFL Championship team. A four-time league all-star, he holds the club record for most interceptions in a career with 45. Also an accomplished punter, Norton was tops in club history with 519 career punts for a 42.3-yard career average and a long kick of 79 yards (11/22/64 vs. Kansas City).

Elvin Bethea joined the Oilers in 1968 after an outstanding career at North Carolina A&T. He started at defensive end in the 1968 season opener and didn't miss a game until breaking his arm in November 1977. That streak of 135 consecutive games played stands third in team history. An eight-time Pro Bowler (1970, 1972-76, 1978-80), Bethea ranks second for most seasons played (16, 1968-83), while his 210 games played (1968-83) also stands second behind Bruce Matthews. Bethea led the team in sacks six times, including a career-best mark of 17 in 1973. The Oilers honored him with an "Elvin Bethea Appreciation Night" on Aug. 4, 1983. He became the sixth player in franchise history to be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Aug. 3, 2003.

Earl Campbell, the franchise's third leading rusher and a member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, was honored by having his number retired at ceremonies on Aug. 13, 1987. He set a single-season club record with a league-leading 1,450 yards his rookie season. Campbell followed that performance with 1,697 yards in 1979 and an astounding 1,934 yards in 1980. Both those totals led the NFL and the latter was second only to O.J. Simpson's 2,003 yards in 1973. Campbell was selected to five Pro Bowls (1978-81, 1983) and retired as the NFL's seventh all-time leading rusher (9,407). He ranks third in franchise history in career rushing yards (8,574) and attempts (1,979), second in touchdown runs (73) and first in most consecutive games with a rushing touchdown (5).

Mike Munchak joined the Oilers as a first-round draft pick in 1982 out of Penn State. He was the first offensive lineman selected in the draft and the eighth overall selection. Munchak won the starting left guard position as a rookie and went on to play in 12 campaigns (1982-93) and 159 games (156 starts) for the Oilers. He is tied for third on the team's all-time list for seasons played and ranks fifth in games played. Munchak became a fixture on an offensive line that helped the Oilers to seven consecutive playoff appearances (1987-93). One of the premier guards in the National Football League, Munchak was selected to NFL's "Team of the Decade" for the 1980s and was chosen in 1989 to Oilers' 30th Anniversary "Dream Team." He ranks second in club annals with nine Pro Bowl selections, seven as a starter. Munchak announced his retirement on July 21, 1994, and on the same day, K.S. "Bud" Adams, Jr,. announced that jersey No. 63 would be retired on "Mike Munchak Appreciation Day" on Nov. 6, 1994.

Bruce Matthews played in more games (296) than any non-kicker in NFL history. Longevity and durability were his hallmark. And that, coupled with his unparalleled play, in which he tied a league record with 14 Pro Bowl selections (tied with Merlin Olsen) and earned All-Pro honors six times, made him one of the all-time greats. He rose to the challenges presented to him in playing every position on the offensive line during his NFL career (87 at center, 99 at left guard, 67 at right guard, 22 at right tackle, and 17 at left tackle). His number was retired during a halftime ceremony in Nashville on Dec. 8, 2002.

Warren Moon, the fourth leading passer in NFL history at the time his number was retired, played 10 years (1984-93) with the organization and holds the franchise records for passing yards (33,685) and touchdowns (196), while leading the Oilers to seven consecutive playoff appearances from 1987-93. Moon's finest season came in 1990, throwing for 4,689 yards (363-for-584) and 33 touchdowns in only 15 games and becoming the third player in NFL history to produce consecutive 4,000-yard passing seasons. He earned AP NFL Offensive Player of the Year for his efforts and his third Pro Bowl berth. His jersey was retired in a halftime ceremony in Nashville on Oct. 1, 2006.

Eddie George became the organization's all-time leading rusher as well as its all-time scrimmage yards leader in eight seasons with the team. His 10,009 rushing yards from 1996–2003 ranked second in the NFL (Curtis Martin), while his 12,153 scrimmage yards in the same time frame were third (Marshall Faulk, Martin). His accolades included four Pro Bowl selections (1997–2000), AP All-Pro honors (2000) and the AP Rookie of the Year Award (1996). George also set franchise standards for career rushing attempts (2,733), career touchdowns (74), 1,000-yard rushing seasons (seven), seasons as the team's leading rusher (eight) and career playoff rushing yards (776). During his time with the Titans he amassed 36 100-yard rushing performances (second to Earl Campbell's 39), resulting in a 30-6 record in those contests. He established an NFL mark with 130 consecutive starts by a running back to begin a career—a total which ranked second in NFL history for consecutive starts by a running back at any point. His jersey was retired in a halftime ceremony in Nashville on Sept. 15, 2019.

Steve McNair played 11 seasons with the organization (1995–2005), becoming its second all-time leading passer (27,141 yards) and recording the most wins as a starting quarterback (76). At the time his jersey was retired, he trailed only Warren Moon on the franchise's all-time passing yards list and also ranked second for the organization in completions (2,305), completion percentage (59.5) and passer rating (83.3). He ranked third in touchdown passes (156). His 3,439 rushing yards and 36 touchdown runs were the most in team history by a quarterback. McNair earned three of his four career Pro Bowl berths with the Titans (2000, 2003 and 2005), and in 2003, he shared Associated Press NFL Most Valuable Player honors with Peyton Manning after leading the league with a 100.4 rating. He became the first African-American quarterback to win MVP honors. McNair was the third player in the history of the NFL to pass for 30,000 yards and rushed for 3,500 yards, along with Fran Tarkenton and Steve Young. Only Brett Favre and Manning started more combined NFL regular season and postseason games than McNair (134) from the time he became a full-time starter in 1997 through 2005. He was selected with the third overall draft pick in 1995. His jersey was retired in a halftime ceremony in Nashville on Sept. 15, 2019.

OILERS LOGO HISTORY

The original Oilers helmet, circa 1960, was blue with a white stripe down the middle. The oil derrick logo was also white. Although the derrick itself remained, many subtle changes were made to the helmets over the years. In 1964, two red stripes were added to the white striping on top of the helmet. Two years later, the helmet color was changed to silver with red and blue striping. The derrick, meanwhile, was changed to blue with a red outline and white background. In 1972, the helmet color was switched back to blue with red and white striping, while the derrick was changed to white with a red outline. Three years later, the helmet color was changed to its familiar white with red and blue striping. The derrick was then switched to blue with a red outline. The helmets boasted a gray facemask. In 1981, the facemask was switched to red. In 1997, the Oilers added the Tennessee logo to the back of their helmet upon their relocation to Nashville. In 1999, the franchise unveiled a new logo as the team was renamed the Tennessee Titans.

The original Houston Oilers helmet from 1960-65 was blue with a white stripe down the middle.

Tennessee opened the regular season with a come-from-behind 36-35 victory over Cincinnati. But the most memorable victory of the season came in a 22-16 Wild Card victory over Buffalo on Jan. 8, 2000. In that game, Kevin Dyson fielded a lateral pass from Frank Wycheck with 16 seconds left and raced 75 yards down the sideline for the winning score. That play, which propelled Tennessee into an AFC Divisional showdown at Indianapolis the following week, was immediately dubbed “The Music City Miracle” and will go down as one of the most memorable moments in NFL history. The Titans won 12 consecutive games to open their new stadium, breaking the NFL record. The Coliseum’s name was changed to LP Field in 2006. On June 25, 2015, Nissan and the Titans announced a 20-year stadium naming rights agreement.

HOUSTON OILERS TO TENNESSEE TITANS

After trying unsuccessfully for many years to construct a deal with the city of Houston for a new football or multi-use stadium, Oilers owner K.S. "Bud" Adams, Jr. decided that moving his franchise to another city might be the only solution left to keep the team financially competitive. In the spring of 1995, research was completed and several cities were identified as desirable for relocation and at the top of the list was Nashville, Tenn.

In the summer of 1995, Adams contacted Nashville's mayor, Phil Bredesen, to see if the city would be interested in having the team relocate to the region. A 70-day exclusive negotiating period was agreed to and in November the two had signed a relocation agreement that would bring the Oilers to Nashville. In April of 1996, the NFL approved the team's relocation and on May 7th, the voters of Davidson County approved a referendum on using public funding for the new downtown stadium.

Dec. 15, 1996 would mark the Oilers final home game at the Astrodome in Houston – a 21-13 loss to Cincinnati in front of 15,131 fans. In May of 1997, the team reached a settlement with the Astrodome that let them escape the final year of the contract and allowing the team to play the 1997 season in Tennessee.

With the new stadium in Nashville still two years from completion, the team decided to play at Memphis' Liberty Bowl until the stadium was complete. The Tennessee Oilers opened their inaugural season in the state of Tennessee with a 24-21 overtime win over the Oakland Raiders at the Liberty Bowl in front only 30,000 fans.

The Oilers struggled with low attendance throughout the 1997 season and by March of 1998, the Oilers reached an agreement to play the 1998 season at Vanderbilt Stadium in Nashville. Crowds at Vanderbilt Stadium were an improvement from the previous year, but the team could only muster a 3-5 home mark. During the 1998 season, Adams announced the Oilers name would be retired and the team would be renamed the Titans as they entered their new stadium for the 1999 season.

In April of 1999, the team unveiled their new Titans uniforms and in August the team played its first game at Nissan Stadium (named Adelphia Coliseum at the time. The 1999 season ended with the franchise's first Super Bowl berth in the team's 40-year history. A total of 20 players endured the entire odyssey of playing in Houston in 1996, Memphis in 1997, Vanderbilt in 1998 and LP Field in 1999.

HOME SWEET HOME

The newly-named Tennessee Titans opened their new stadium, Adelphia Coliseum (eventually to be named Nissan Stadium) with the regular season opener on Sept. 12, 1999 against the Cincinnati Bengals. The back and forth game would end with the Titans hanging on for a 36-35 win. The win would start a historic streak of 12 consecutive wins to open the new stadium. The 12 consecutive wins were the most in the modern era for a new stadium (Texas Stadium, 9 wins in 1971) and one short of the all-time record by the Buffalo Americans in 1920. The Titans first loss in their new home would come against the Baltimore Ravens on Nov. 12, 2000. The winning streak actually began in the spring of 1998, when a devastating tornado ripped through Nashville, but only gave a glancing blow to the under construction stadium and sparing it from destruction.

The win sends Tennessee to its first Super Bowl in franchise history and its first AFC/AFL Championship since 1961.
