- Landry enjoys traveling. One of his favorite getaways is Destin, Fla.
- He and his son, Greyson, share the same June 5 birthday.
- Landry's 26 career sacks at Boston College were exceeded in school history by only Mathias Kiwanuka (37.5 from 2002-05).

8 WILL LEVIS

QUARTERBACK • 6'4" • 229 LBS • COLLEGE: KENTUCKY

ACQUIRED: 2ND ROUND - 2023

NFL EXPERIENCE (NFL/TITANS): ROOKIE • HOMETOWN: MADISON, CONN.

GAMES PLAYED/GAMES STARTED: 9/9 (PLAYOFFS: 0/0)

PRO: The Titans selected Will Levis in the second round (33rd overall) of the 2023 NFL Draft. The 6-foot-4-inch, 229-pounder is a strong-armed signal caller that displays leadership under center, accuracy from the pocket and grit as a runner. A native of Madison, Conn., he spent two seasons at Kentucky, after transferring from Penn State. During his two seasons as the Wildcats' starting signal caller, he directed the program to 17 victories and a pair of bowl appearances. He was the fourth quarterback drafted in 2023 after the Titans traded up in the second round to select him.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

- Levis finished his career with a 17-7 record as a starter at Kentucky, tying Terry Wilson for the second-most quarterback wins since 1993.
- In two seasons at Kentucky, Levis completed 418 of 636 passes for 5,233 yards with 43 passing touchdowns and 11 rushing scores.
- Levis, a two-time team captain for the Wildcats, notched six 300-yard passing games at Kentucky, the fourth-most in school history.

TITANS TIDBITS:

- Levis comes from a family of athletes. His great grandfather, Alva Kelley, was an All-America football player at Cornell University and won a National Championship in 1939. His mother, Beth Kelley Levis, was two-time All-America soccer player at Yale and has been inducted into the Connecticut Girls' Soccer Association Hall of Fame. His father, Mike, was a tight end at Denison University. His uncle, David Kelley, also was an Academic All-America football player at Yale.
- Levis has used his platform to make a difference in the community. He set up a Cameo campaign to raise money for flood victims in eastern Kentucky in 2022 and organized an autograph signing with fellow teammates to gather funds for tornado victims in western Kentucky in 2021. He has also volunteered with Amachi, an organization that aims to assist children affected by incarceration.
- The best advice Levis has ever received is "never give up." His grandfather used to end every sentence he ever had with him with those words and it took him a while to realize how meaningful they are, but he now uses it as his personal mantra. It is the impetus behind the tattoo on his arm "2nd Chronicles 15:7." The verse says, "But as for you, stay strong and do not give up, for your effort will be rewarded."
- Levis grew up a fan of all the Boston-area sports teams and considers himself a diehard Red Sox supporter. As a Patriots fan growing up, he went to training camp and got an autograph from his current head coach and Patriots Hall of Famer Mike Vrabel.

Super Bowl: 2020

PRO: The Titans entered the 2023 offseason looking to add an experienced piece to their secondary. The club found just that when it signed Super Bowl Champion Sean Murphy-Bunting as an unrestricted free agent on March 21, 2023. The 6-foot, 195-pounder arrived in Tennessee having collected nine total interceptions, including three in the postseason, and 21 passes defended in four seasons (2019-22) with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Murphy-Bunting originally entered the league as a second-round pick of the Buccaneers out of Central Michigan.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

- In 2020, Murphy-Bunting won Super Bowl LV after starting all four postseason contests and collecting 19 tackles and a team-high three interceptions. He also set a career-high with 66 tackles in the regular season.
- Murphy-Bunting recorded an interception in each of his first three career playoff contests, joining Hall of Famers Aeneas Williams (four-consecutive games) and Ed Reed, as well as Jason Sehorn as the only four players in the Super Bowl era with an interception in each of their first three career postseason games.
- In 2019, Murphy-Bunting was selected to the PFWA All-Rookie team after tying for the lead among NFL rookies with three interceptions.

TITANS TIDBITS:

- In 2022, Murphy-Bunting hosted his SMB Champ Camp back home at Chippewa Valley High School. When greeting campers at midfield, Scott Merchant, the head coach at Chippewa Valley, surprised him by retiring his No. 1 jersey. It was the first number to be retired in the school's history.
- Murphy-Bunting attended Central Michigan on a grayshirt offer after receiving zero Division I offers. He made that offer pay off by shining on the field and being named All-Mid-American Conference first team and Central Michigan's Defensive Player of the Year in 2018.
- Murphy-Bunting teamed up with his mother, Kim Murphy, to found Successful Jocks, a non-profit organization dedicated to making a difference in the lives of student-athletes. In 2020, the organization donated $20,000 in scholarships to two recipients in Michigan and two in the Tampa area. Murphy-Bunting also pledged to donate money back to Successful Jocks for every interception and pass deflection during the 2020 season, and the Buccaneers matched his donation.

CAREER TRANSACTIONS:

- The Macomb, Mich., native was selected by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the second round (39th overall) of the 2019 NFL Draft.
- Signed by the Titans as an unrestricted free agent on March 21, 2023.

ACQUIRED: 4TH ROUND - 2021 • NFL EXPERIENCE (NFL/TITANS): 3/3
HOMETOWN: FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.
GAMES PLAYED/GAMES STARTED: 32/4 (PLAYOFFS: 0/0)

PRO: The Titans selected Rashad Weaver in the fourth round of the 2021 NFL Draft. The 6-foot-4-inch, 259-pound defender missed the majority of his rookie campaign after suffering a season-ending injury in the third game of the season. He bounced back in 2022, playing in 16 games and ranking third on the squad with 39 quarterback pressures and fourth on the club with 5.5 sacks. The University of Pittsburgh product is capable of causing disruption in both the run and pass game, and displays a high motor and good length at the position. The Fort Lauderdale, Fla., native was a consensus All-American, a Bednarik Award semifinalist, and earned first-team All-ACC honors as a senior with the Panthers in 2020 after totaling 35 tackles, 14.5 tackles for loss, 7.5 sacks, 12 quarterback pressures, three forced fumbles and a fumble recovery in nine games.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

- In 2022, Weaver appeared in 16 games with four starts. His 5.5 sacks ranked fourth on the team, while his 39 quarterback pressures ranked third.
- In 2020, Weaver was named a consensus All-American after garnering first-team All-America honors from four of the NCAA's recognized selectors: Associated Press, American Football Coaches Association, Football Writers Association of America and Walter Camp Football Foundation. He was the 52nd consensus All-American in school history and the first Pitt defensive player to earn that distinction since Aaron Donald in 2013.

TITANS TIDBITS:

- Weaver lists rehabbing a torn ACL during the pandemic as the biggest challenge he has had to overcome in his football career. He worked on 'staying focused even not knowing if there was going to be a season and even just finding locations to do my rehab work when everything shut down.'
- He was a member of Pitt's prestigious Blue & Gold Society, an undergraduate organization composed of top students who serve as ambassadors for the university and Pitt Alumni Association.
- Prior to the NFL Draft, Weaver trained in the martial art of Krav Maga.
- Weaver's grandmother has battled multiple sclerosis since he was in a middle school.

THE DEAL BEHIND THE DOME: AMY ADAMS STRUNK AND HER STADIUM-WINNING DRIVE

*BY JULIA MASTERS
NASHVILLE BUSINESS

According to those who know her, Amy Adams Strunk takes a small-business leader's approach to her role as controlling owner of the Tennessee Titans. She asks questions, identifies strong leaders and loves hanging out with fans enjoying a hot dog at a tailgate.

Since becoming controlling owner in 2015, her leadership style has seen six winning seasons, an AFC Championship appearance and contributed to Nashville playing host to the 2019 NFL Draft. In what may be the biggest accomplishment of her tenure, state and city leaders, after protracted debate, this year approved a $2.1 billion domed stadium for the team, which is expected to be completed in 2027.

Set to anchor Nashville's reimagined East Bank, the stadium is poised to become one of Music City's most transformative projects — prospects that are as concerning to some residents as they are exciting to others.

Adams Strunk made few public remarks throughout the approval process, allowing Titans president and CEO Burke Nihill to be the primary face of the project. Now, she shares her behind the scenes view of the deal in an email interview with the Business Journal. The following has been edited for length and clarity.

When the deal got approved, what was that feeling like, and where were you? Who was the first person you called? I was with my family, and Burke was keeping me updated throughout the evening. My first feeling when the stadium was approved was overwhelming gratitude. We moved here in the mid-1990s, and we're so humbled by the support this city and state has showed our team since day one. It's such a great feeling to know the Titans will be a part of this incredible community for another generation.

What excites you the most about bringing this deal to Nashville and Titans fans? What does it mean to the city? I'm thrilled that Titans fans will have a new home with the great fan experience they deserve. I'm also excited to see the biggest events in the world pass through Nashville's new stadium. But it has always been hard for me to think about this project without being most excited about what it means for Nashville as a whole. We've been a part of the conversations about the future of the East Bank for the past several years. While it won't be without its challenges, I've always supported the city's vision to transform the stadium property into something truly special for the city. Having seen the planning work, I truly believe the East Bank will be a celebrated area of Nashville for generations to come. To think the city's beautiful stadium building will be a part of that neighborhood ... it's all so exciting.

How will you evaluate the success of the new stadium? How should the public evaluate its success? There will be things we will track that I'm excited to see, like the success of our events and how many new jobs and opportunities the stadium will bring. But I'm also the kind of person who likes to go directly to the fans and hear what they think. I like visiting with them before our events and listening to their real, direct feedback. We've engaged a lot with fans during this process and are continuing to do that now, and their feedback has been really helpful in shaping our vision for the new stadium.

What do you hope the East Bank looks like in five years? The future of the East Bank makes me so excited for Nashville. I love that we'll have large, beautiful parks, especially on the riverfront. I love the idea that the former stadium site will be used for transportation. From everything I've seen, I think the East Bank will be a place where everyone in Nashville will want to spend time. We've said before that we want the area around the stadium to feel like a neighborhood with a stadium in it, and not a stadium with a neighborhood built around it, and we look forward to being partners in that vision.

Initial renderings for a proposed Tennessee Titans stadium show outdoor terraces.

What was the most important thing to you during this process? The most important thing to me during the process was finding a long-term answer, and not dedicate resources to a short-term one that we'd just have to address again in a few years.

Was there something you did compromise on? All of the groups involved — the mayor's office, the state of Tennessee and so many others — were such great partners through this whole process. Negotiating a 30-year agreement takes a lot of time, and there was compromise during negotiation from everyone. I'm so glad we landed on a solution that resulted in a win for all involved.

How do you see your job differently now? Did the process reveal anything or teach you anything new about the Titans' business? I'm focused on helping our football team and organization perform at our best, and that will never change. That's the great thing about our mission statement, "Win, Serve, Entertain," because it's our North Star regardless of what's right in front of us at the time. Stadium construction is new to most of us in the organization, but we have a great team of people with a lot of experience working to make sure we get it right.

What lesson from your dad [Bud Adams, the team's late founder] stuck with you throughout this process? My dad loved this city, and I thought about him often throughout this process. I know he would be proud to know the team he founded so many years ago will be a part of this community for decades to come. I want to honor his legacy and make this city proud.

What does it mean to you to be a female owner in the NFL, and how have you navigated that space? I talk with other female owners about how it would be amazing one day to have two female NFL owners playing against each other in the Super Bowl. At the end of the day, it's the same for any team owner, male or female — we just want to beat each other. It's important to me to support other women who are interested in getting involved in the NFL. We started the Amy Adams Strunk Women in Football internship a few years back, which is a program aimed at recruiting more women in sports operations roles. Our first two interns were so outstanding that we extended their time with us, then we eventually hired Mical Johnson full-time as a scouting assistant. We've also grown girls flag football here in several counties around Middle Tennessee, and this year the athletes from [Metro Nashville Public Schools] participated in a panel where they got to talk directly with some of our female leaders about different career paths in sports. We have nine women in vice president roles in our organization across a variety of departments, and I'm very proud of our progress in that area.

At what point did you feel the most confident in the deal? When were you most worried? Getting to a final agreement was a long, diligent process, but it needed to be to make sure we came to the right solution. We certainly encountered challenges along the way, but everyone involved recognized that old deal didn't make sense anymore and that we needed a new, long-term deal that made sense for all parties.

If you encounter a skeptic of the stadium, what is your message to them? I'm looking forward to making them proud of how we serve this community over the next 30 years and beyond. Again, this has always been bigger than just building a stadium. The new agreement secures our home in Nashville for the next several decades, and we take that commitment very seriously. We understand we have a platform here, and we're going to use it to make our community a better place and we're all partners in that.

THE STORY BEHIND THE TITANS UNVEILING OILERS THROWBACK UNIFORMS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 23, 2023

NASHVILLE – "Oilers history is Titans history."

Those are the words of Titans controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk from a year ago, when the organization was exploring the possibility of wearing Oilers throwback uniforms, with the classic oil derrick logo on the helmets.

The possibility has turned into reality, and now fans of the organization can see them for themselves.

The Titans will wear the same uniforms the Houston Oilers wore for nearly two decades in Houston, until 1998, when the franchise also wore them as the Tennessee Oilers. The uniforms represent the longest span of Oilers uniforms in franchise history, and arguably the most beloved uniform.

The uniforms will pay homage to the Luv Ya' Blue era.

"It allows us to honor as many players as we can, because it covers so much time," said Surf Melendez, Vice President and Executive Creative Director for the Titans. "It also represented our transition to Tennessee, because we wore these uniforms in Tennessee as well."

The Titans will wear the uniforms in two games this fall, both at home. The organization inquired about wearing them for a road game in Miami as well, but it doesn't appear that will come to fruition.

The light blue Oilers throwbacks will replace the light blue "Titans" jerseys as the third jersey, joining the navy and the white uniforms.

Amy Adams Strunk said last year the team wanted to continue paying homage to the franchise's history. The organization has honored Houston Oilers players at alumni events in years past, and a number of Oilers are in the franchise's Ring of Honor.

The Oilers left Houston for Tennessee after the 1996 season and played a year in Memphis, in 1997, before playing in Nashville at Vanderbilt Stadium in 1998. The Tennessee Oilers became the Tennessee Titans in time for the 1999 season.

"Oilers history is Titans history," Strunk said last year. "We know our fans feel passionately about showcasing that legacy on game day, and we're actively working on making throwback jerseys possible in the near future. Stay tuned!"

Those who stay tuned will see this:

- "Columbia Blue" jerseys with red around white on the numbers, and names on the back, with a red, white and light blue band on the sleeves.

- White helmets, with the famed oil derrick, with red facemasks and red stripes outside of a thicker light blue stripe on the top.

- White pants, or britches, with red stripes on each side of a thicker light blue stripe down the side.

- Red and white stripes on light blue and white socks.

The words 'Luv Ya Blue' will be on the back neckline of the jerseys.

Players will have the option of wearing red sleeves, red gloves, and red cleats to add to the look.

Current Titans Derrick Henry, safety Kevin Byard, defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons and quarterback Ryan Tannehill have already worn them – they took part in a photo shoot earlier this offseason.

"They loved them," Melendez said of the current Titans. "They really loved them."

Former Oilers have also seen them – Warren Moon, Robert Brazile and Elvin Bethea were given a sneak peek when they were in Nashville for an alumni event last year.

"They looooved them, and it took them back," Melendez said of the former Oilers. "The guys who wore the uniform, it took them back. And they were able to speak to the significance of wearing that uniform. This was an original AFL team, so there's a rich tradition there and now people are going to see this, and they are going to be reminded of this rich history."

Melendez knows fans are excited. The team has had Oilers merchandise available for two seasons and there has been an increased demand over the years.

Oilers jerseys are now on sale, and new merchandise will be available in the team store at Nissan Stadium.

"Amy is passionate about this, and we are lucky," Melendez said. "She loves Nashville, she loves Houston, and she loves those people. She lived it, and she's passionate about the Oilers history."

'EVERY DETAIL MATTERS': HOW AMY ADAMS STRUNK REINVENTED THE TENNESSEE TITANS

BY DENNIS FERRIER
FEBRUARY 1, 2022

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (WZTV) — When we think of what makes a pro football team great, we always talk about star players and coaches. But when it comes to the Tennessee Titans and their remarkable six-year streak of excellence, you have to leave the field to understand what has happened here.

It's 2015. The Tennessee Titans are the worst team in football. Their organization is small and, let's be nice here, not admired.

In walks Amy Adams Strunk—a woman with no experience in the NFL. The daughter of an eccentric billionaire. What are the chances she would be anything but more of the same old, same old?

"She took the first six months that she was in charge and just stayed in the back," said Titans announcer Mike Keith. "She wouldn't do interviews. She didn't get out in front with anything. She wanted to learn as much as she possibly could."

When she was ready, it was nothing short of a reinvention of the entire organization.

"Strip it down, challenge everything we value that just overhauled the culture both on the football team and on the business side of the organization," said Titans president Burke Nihill.

Nihill was one of her outside-of-the-box hires. A lawyer in retail and tech with no NFL background.

"I do think that professional sports lends itself to a wash, rinse, repeat cycle," said Nihill. "Every season you can kind of do the same things for a while and get away with it.

And her mentality is 'Let's act like a start up, let's challenge everything, let's expect our best in every category of the business.'"

Although he won't take credit, Nihill was the one who decided to let Waverly High School play at Nissan Stadium after devastated floods gripped the community. That was a decision beyond inconvenient—a bold, impulsive act of service.

"When do we do it, it's the weekend after the first game," Keith said. "We played the home opener, we are going to Seattle the next weekend so everybody is going to travel. You've got the home opener and then you are going to the west coast and the organization does this on that Thursday night, Waverly is playing at Nissan stadium and we are going to make it happen. And I don't know anybody in the organization that just didn't pitch it. It was just one of the proudest moments that I've ever had of this entire organization."

Keep in mind this would have been unthinkable in the old days, you would have been laughed right out of the meeting.

"The service piece is really what has increasingly defined the people who work in this organization," said Nihill. "It's our heartbeat. It may sound cheesy, but the people who have come to our doors for whatever reason, it matters to them on a deeper level. We have paid a lot more attention to how we can leverage our platform, our resources to make Nashville a better place to live," said Nihill.

There's a famous story told around here. At a big staff meeting, Amy Adams Strunk said, "We have ugly tickets, and we will never go to the Super Bowl with ugly tickets." It was dead quiet in the room, maybe some skepticism. But now they believe everything matters.

Of course, none of it matters if you don't win football games. If you lose, you are viewed as a failure whatever you do for the community.

That might not be fair, but it is an ugly truth.

Adams' first big hire was General Manager John Robinson. You know the winning streak started the same day as that hire.

And while it's pretty obvious he is a good judge of football players, their potential, what they have left in the tank, their value as a piece of the puzzle. What you don't know is his complete buy-in to the Titans culture.

"Everything matters, it's one of our mantras: everything matters," said Nihill. "Every bit of design around the stadium, our tickets, every detail matters. It also carries over to the football team. I have watched him walk around our practice field and pick up little pieces of athletic tape to make it so everything about everything we do is first class."

Even with the crushing loss to the Bengals. Even with a Super Bowl goal defeated for another year. The Titans will be back. Because it's just what they do.

"I tell people all the time, these are the good old days," added Keith. "Enjoy this because what you are seeing on and off the field from our organization, this is the best we have ever been in 23 years."

MEET TENNESSEE TITANS
OWNER AMY ADAMS
STRUNK—AND NINE OTHER WOMEN
CHANGING THE GAME IN THE NFL

BY AMY FELDMAN FORBES
SEPTEMBER 23, 2022

Most female owners inherit a team from a father, husband or brother. Now some are buying their way into football. The Titans' titan goes deep on what it all means for the league.

Before the Tennessee Titans kicked off their NFL season with a home game against the New York Giants on September 11, team owner Amy Adams Strunk spent nearly two hours with tailgaters outside Nashville's Nissan Stadium. "Omigod, it's her," one young woman shouted, before asking for the requisite photos.

The fans, Adams Strunk says, are her favorite part of owning the team, which her late father Bud Adams founded (as the Houston Oilers in 1960) and of which she has been the controlling shareholder since 2015. "Our fans, to me, are not a statistic," she says. "I'm going to be the owner that comes up to you and thanks you."

At 66, Adams Strunk is worth $1.6 billion from her 50% stake in the Titans and is one of a growing number of women who own NFL teams: 18 of the league's 32 franchises are at least partially female-owned, with 10 listing women as majority owners or co-owners. Most inherited teams from their fathers, brothers or husbands—or, like the Buffalo Bills' Kim Pegula and the Cleveland Browns' Dee Haslam, bought into them with their husbands.

But there are signs of change—this summer, Ariel Investments' Melody Hobson bought a 5.5% stake in the Denver Broncos for $245 million as part of the Waltons' ownership group that also brought in Carrie Walton Penner, granddaughter of Walmart founder Sam Walton, with a 30% stake.

"Fifty percent of our fans are women," says Adams Strunk, who is known as "Mom" to the Titans' faithful. "Even though we've never played the game, that doesn't mean we don't know the game. And we have some unique perspectives on reaching women that we can bring to the table."

While some female owners who inherited NFL teams are hands-off, Adams Strunk not only runs the Titans but has also delivered a stunning turnaround. Since 2016, the squad has had six winning seasons. More important, she helped bring the NFL draft to Nashville three years ago and has high hopes for the city to host a Super Bowl.

It's a vision her father could not have foreseen. Bud Adams, who died in 2013 at age 90, was a legend in professional football. A member of the Cherokee nation who made his fortune in oil, he was instrumental in founding the American Football League and started the Oilers for just $25,000. In 1997, when Houston wouldn't pony up cash to replace the aging Astrodome, he relocated the team to Nashville and its new 69,000-seat stadium.

"It was a game-changing moment for this city," recalls Butch Spyridon, CEO of the Nashville Convention & Visitors Corp. "It shocked the entire sports world, and Nashville started to believe in itself a little more."

But Bud Adams' death also led to a leadership struggle for the Titans as the team's losses piled up. Its ownership was split between his two daughters, Adams Strunk and Susie Adams Smith, and the wife and children of their brother, Kenneth Adams III, who died of suicide at 29 in 1987.

After a family scrum—which saw the ousting of her brother-in-law as CEO—Adams Strunk and her nephews wrested control of the team in 2015. "It was a hard decision," she says, "but my dad's legacy was very important to me and the boys."

Adams Strunk had grown up in football, but her father had never wanted his daughters working for the team. She had spent time as owner of a few of the family's car dealerships and oil interests, and raising horses (she still has a few dozen on the family ranch in Texas, along with plenty of rescue dogs). "I never thought—ever—that I would be running the football team," she says.

After she took over the Titans, she worked closely with her nephew, Kenneth Adams IV, who had worked for the team under her father since 2007, as well as with Steve Underwood, who she brought back from retirement as the team's top executive. Kenneth Adams, who is 38 and a Titans board member, says that having his aunt and other female owners running NFL teams makes a difference: "I think it's good for the NFL and we need it. It was a long time coming."

Adams Strunk brought in a new general manager, Jon Robinson, who was blunt about the team's problems on the field, and spent money on new facilities (including a new indoor training center) and new uniforms. "When you know you need to fix something you want someone telling you the brutal honest truth," Adams Strunk says. "Nothing is going to get solved if you don't know what needs to be done."

The willingness to spend money differentiated Adams Strunk from her frugal father. And while she could be tough when fixing problems, Jevon Kearse, the Titans' former defensive end, says it is her warmth that makes her a different kind of owner. "She's one of the first people to come up and give me a hug," he says. "Some of the owners come around for the money. She gives it a little bit more love.”

And all of that love has paid off. The value of the Titans’ has more than doubled since 2015, to $3.5 billion from $1.5 billion, as revenue reached $481 million, according to Forbes’ estimates. Even so, with the average NFL team now worth $4.5 billion and the Dallas Cowboys reaching a record $8 billion this year, the Titans remain No. 27 (of 32) on the list of most valuable NFL franchises.

Adams Strunk credits her success to having no preconceived notions about how to run a team. “Just because something has been done a certain way forever doesn’t make it the right way anymore,” she says, adding that it’s often easier to come in with big ideas as an outsider. “We talk a lot about being a 60-year-old startup,” says the team’s CEO, Burke Nihill, who took over two years ago. “Amy has encouraged us to challenge everything.”

Next up is the issue that vexed her father: a new stadium. While it is expected to cost more than $2 billion and the city has yet to sign off amid questions over taxpayer funding, Forbes has estimated that it could increase the Titans’ value by $300 million. To pay for their share of the new stadium—the team ownership and an NFL loan are expected to cover at least $700 million—the family will sell some of its other assets. Adams Strunk believes a new stadium, which would be fully enclosed, could host not only the Titans but also concerts and, yes, that big game with the $7 million commercials.

Super Bowl aside, Adams Strunk thinks her father would be a fan of the job she’s done. “I think if he was looking down now,” she says, “he’d be super proud.”

AZEEZ AL-SHAAIR, THE TENNESSEE TITANS'
'UNCONQUERABLE SOUL,'
NO LONGER HAS TO LIVE IN FEAR

BY PAUL SKRBINA
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
NOVEMBER 21, 2023

The tone of her voice alarmed the 9-year-old boy.

Azeez Al-Shaair's mother, Naadhirah Lennon, was spitting mad, yelling at every child in sight. And within earshot.

Lennon doesn't remember what she was yelling about. She doesn't remember who she was yelling at.

She remembers her son Azeez coming to a halt in the middle of the family's living room, though, momentarily paralyzed.

"I'm like, 'Boy, what are you doing?' " Lennon said to Al-Shaair, who 17 years later is a 26-year-old linebacker with the Tennessee Titans. "He's like, 'I'm being still.' "

But why? Why was he being still?

"Because if I'm still, then you don't see me," Al-Shaair said. "I'm invisible. I won't get in trouble."

Still.

Invisible.

Those two words struck Lennon hard, stuck with her. The son she called "goofy," the "class clown," the second oldest of her eight children who was "always smiling," was telling his mother something.

Tennessee Titans linebacker Azeez Al-Shaair (2) show his tongue as he warms up before an NFL football game against the Baltimore Ravens, Sunday, Oct. 15, 2023, at the Tottenham Hotspur stadium in London.

"It's funny on the surface," she said of his reasoning. "At the same time, if you look into it, it's kind of sad."

Still.

Invisible.

"That was kind of how he felt," Lennon said.

"He was overlooked."

Mostly because he was low maintenance, and the low-maintenance doesn't usually get a lot of attention on a daily basis.

'It's a smell you never forget'

The sound of a smoke detector startled the 15-year-old high school sophomore from his sleep.

Azeez Al-Shaair awoke around 6 that summer morning in 2012. An "orange and black glow" was overwhelming the narrow hallway outside the tiny bedroom where he and some of his brothers slept on the floor. There was no room — or money — for beds.

Al-Shaair crawled down the hallway into the living room. Through the smoke, he could see into the kitchen. Orange flames swallowed the stove. Two of his younger brothers and his infant niece were the only other people in the house.

Al-Shaair tried putting out the fire. He couldn't.

"The flames were just so big," he said. "Everything just started to fall down on the cabinets."

Al-Shaair turned his attention to his brothers and his niece. Rushed them to safety outside and then saw his own life flash before his eyes.

"I was just like, 'I have literally zero,' " Al-Shaair said. "I couldn't see past that."

One of Al-Shaair's sisters had been cooking chicken in a frying pan. She'd accidentally left the stove on when she left for work that morning.

The two-bedroom home in Tampa where the electricity was sometimes cut off and food often was scarce, was owned by Al-Shaair's grandmother.

Nonetheless, it was a home for Al-Shaair, his seven siblings and his mother.

Now it was gone. Now they had no home. Spent seemingly endless nights on friends' couches, in extended-stay motels.

The smell, the sights, they aren't gone. Never will be.

"I'm terrified of fire to this day," Al-Shaair said.

Eventually, Al-Shaair gathered some of his ash-encrusted hand-me-downs that had been spared.

"I remember washing them off, 30 to 40 times," he said. "The smell would literally not go away. It's a smell you never forget.

"Any time I smell it, even just a little bit, like when someone is cooking, I freak out."

'You don't need that much toothpaste'

A brush with a toothbrush is an everyday reminder Ruqayyah Al-Shaair Bragg has of her older brother.

She was 7 years old when 9-year-old Azeez happened into the bathroom one morning.

"I was over-squeezing, overloading toothpaste on my toothbrush," she said. "He popped me upside the head. 'You don't need that much toothpaste. There are people right now who don't have toothpaste and you're out here wasting all this toothpaste.' "

"He probably would be like, 'What? I don't remember that.' I think about that every single time I brush my teeth, like not to waste toothpaste."

On the morning of the same day she shared that story, Ruqayyah swore she scolded her husband for doing the very same thing while he was brushing their 2-year-old son's teeth.

"I literally went in there and took some toothpaste off," she said.

Her brother would have been proud.

'I lived a lot of my life in fear'

Azeez Al-Shaair is not much for wasting.

Not time.

Not money.

After he signed his first NFL contract as an undrafted free agent with the San Francisco 49ers in 2019 — three years, $1.77 million — Al-Shaair bought a silver bicycle.

He rode it to practice every day. He did most of his shopping at Walmart and Target. Not until his second season in the NFL did Al-Shaair buy his first car — a Jeep Grand Cherokee, which he had wrapped in matte black.

He has made nearly $9 million since his bicycle-riding days. He sometimes still shops at Walmart and Target.

"As a child I lived a lot of my life in fear," Al-Shaair said. "That was one of the biggest emotions I remember, is being afraid."

He has since been able to help his family. Help strangers. He doesn't worry as much about where tomorrow will take him, or if tomorrow will come.

Today he lives in the today.

His biggest vice, if he has one, is his game-day wardrobe collection. He doesn't skimp on that.

"The rest of time he's in sweatpants, stuff the team gave him," Lennon said. "He and I kind of had, I call it 'Broke B Syndrome,' and the B stands for not a nice word.

"You're still living your life like you don't have resources. I tried to encourage him to not always do that."

'Losing this attachment to being attached'

Azeez Al-Shaair doesn't ride a bike to work these days.

More than happiness, money has bought him peace of mind.

"I can make $100 million and one day I will die," he said. "Whether I kept the $100 million for myself or not is not the point."

It goes back to his Muslim faith.

"If I have to meet my maker, have to stand in front of God and say, 'Hey, you blessed me with $100 million and I put all of it in a savings account to save up for a moment I don't even know if I'm going to have.'

"I might die tomorrow, after this conversation. I have no clue what's going to happen five minutes from now. If I gave away $100,000, or a million dollars, nothing is being taken from me."

His faith has led him to believe in fate. That everything is predestined. Happens for a reason.

He appreciates the value of money but doesn't want it to define him.

"It's like losing this attachment to being attached to things," he said.

'Took me so long to remember'

The name Al-Shaair means "son of a poet" in Arabic.

When Al-Shaair's parents converted to Islam before he was born, they took on that name.

Al-Shaair's grandfather, James Tokley Sr., was the first poet laureate of Tampa and Hillsborough County, a position he has held for more than 30 years.

He befriended famed author, poet and civil rights activist Maya Angelou.

His words appear on landmarks throughout Tampa, including atop the Hillsborough County Courthouse.

He was something of an inspiration to Al-Shaair. He tried to be a male presence after Al-Shaair's father left. He'd encourage his grandson to recite "Invictus," a poem penned by William Ernest Henley. He'd give him $5 every time he did.

Out of the night that covers me, it begins.

Black as the pit from pole to pole,

I thank whatever gods may be

For my unconquerable soul.

"It took me so long to remember," Al-Shaair said.

It's something he'll never forget.

'It was very easy to connect with him'

Al-Shaair's parents divorced when he was in second grade.

His father was an English instructor whose job took the family to Jeddah, a city in Saudi Arabia, for two years. Al-Shaair said he hasn't talked to his dad, James Tokley Jr., since he was 13.

Still, he has remained a proud, accepting, sometimes outspoken Muslim who sometimes attends mosque with Nashville SC star Hany Mukhtar.

They met through a mutual friend.

"I know how it is to come to a new city, don't have friends here," Mukhtar said. "It was very easy to connect with him."

Al-Shaair's teammates feel the same way.

Tennessee Titans linebacker Azeez Al-Shaair (2) takes a selfie with fans as the team gets ready to face the Cleveland Browns in Cleveland, Ohio, Sunday, Sept. 24, 2023.

'I have no clue what somebody else is going through'

Embarrassment routinely startled the budding teenage football star.

Al-Shaair often wore dirty clothes to school. He didn't have many friends. He'd steal hot fries and Cheetos and Kit Kats from Dollar Tree "for dinner."

"I would be like, 'Well, I don't have anything and these big old companies have all this money,' " he said. " 'Walmart will be OK.' But it's the principle. Who am I to say that?"

"Who am I to say that, 'Oh, this person whose car I'm breaking into, they have a car, they have a house, they'll be OK?' I have no clue what somebody else is going through."

He knew what he and his family were going through. He was trying to survive, he told himself.

"Stealing bikes. Selling them to pawn shops," he said. "Stealing phones, whatever it might have been."

Sometimes he and his cousin would put on their football pads, stand in front of a local business and hold their helmets out for donations, as if they were raising money for the team.

"They really were raising money for themselves," Lennon said.

Before long he wanted to right his wrongs. Or at least stop excusing them.

The kid who felt "still" and "invisible" strived to be a man who is anything but.

He's in his fifth season in the NFL. He has played 2,000-plus more snaps there than he ever could have imagined. He's in the top 10 in the league in tackles.

He was a part of the 49ers team that made the Super Bowl in 2019.

All of that, after a torn ACL during his senior year at Florida Atlantic left him wondering whether the NFL would ever call.

That call never came.

Al-Shaair wept in his mother's arms. He apologized and thanked everyone who attended his draft party.

"He thought he had failed his family," Lennon said.

'My mom once told me something'

Every last 6 feet, 2 inches and 228 pounds of Azeez Al-Shaair overwhelmed a black, patterned chair inside a meeting room at the Titans' practice facility on a September midafternoon.

A torn-off-sleeves, ripped-down-to-his-stomach, Titans-blue tank top was draped over his neck. A matching bandana covered his head. Al-Shaair interlocked his fingers when he talked. He leaned forward. He was vulnerable. He was at ease.

The man who was undrafted out of Florida Atlantic, the man who rode a bicycle to practice his rookie year, was talking about what had shaped him.

The fire.

Saudi Arabia.

Friends' couches.

Extended-stay motels.

His grandmother's living room.

His mother and his brothers and sisters and his grandfather.

All of it.

"My mom once told me something," Al-Shaair said. "That which is for you shall not pass you by, and that which passes you by is not for you."

'Flash back to being 12'

Naadhirah Lennon grew up a dancer. Dreamed of being the next

Debbie Allen. Attended the Dance Theatre of Harlem and Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater in New York.

That dream passed her by.

So when a teary Azeez begged her to let him play football when he was 12, told her it was his dream, she relented. Even though she was dead set against the idea.

"I flash back to being 12," said Lennon, who works overnight shifts verifying identities for the IRS. "To my dream of being the next Debbie Allen . . . my parents didn't necessarily support that goal.

"I was like, 'I can't do that to him.' So I told him, 'I'll let you play, but if you get hurt I'm going to pull you out.' "

'He cares about everybody in the locker room'

Al-Shaair couldn't have in-home visits with college coaches because he didn't have a permanent home.

He was invisible to schools such as Alabama and Michigan and Notre Dame.

He became a legal guardian of two of his younger brothers, Abdul-Lateef and Abdur-Rahmaan, when he was at Florida Atlantic, moved them in with him and supported them with cost-of-attendance checks.

He turned into a man who was voted to be a Titans captain before he'd played a snap for the franchise.

That was no fluke. No coincidence. That goes beyond being a good football player.

"It shows everything you need to know about him, that he came in and was voted a captain in his first year," Titans linebacker Jack Gibbens said. "That speaks for itself."

"I think of someone who's very thoughtful, has a lot of wisdom," Titans linebacker and Al-Shaair's locker neighbor Luke Gifford said.

"He cares about everybody in the locker room. When you back that up with actions and the things you do on the field, it goes a long way."

Football fields are where Azeez Al-Shaair makes his living. Life is good.

Azeez Al-Shaair is no longer invisible. He's no longer still.

TITANS LINED UP FOR SPEED AT ILB WITH AZEEZ AL-SHAAIR

BY PAUL KUHARSKY
PAULKUHARSKY.COM
MARCH 15, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – David Long was replaced within 24 hours as the Titans agreed to terms with their first Ran Carthon connection, Azeez Al-Shaair, the inside linebacker who's been a piece of the 49ers' strong defense.

Dianna Russini reported the agreement.

Al-Shaair will bring excellent speed to Nashville – something Mike Vrabel has emphasized he wants upgraded throughout the roster. The new inside linebacker will be 26 this season. The 6-foot-2, 228-pounder was undrafted out of Florida Atlantic in 2019.

He should help the team cover tight ends and running backs. He could be paired with Monty Rice or the two could be mixed and matched with a player deemed more of a run-down player. Others on the roster now are Chance Campbell, Jack Gibbens and Luke Gifford another played they agreed to terms with Tuesday.

Pro Football Focus rated Long 14th among inside backers last season with Al-Shaair 18th. They were both weakest in coverage where Long graded out at 62.9 and Al-Shaair at 61.

In his final year with the 49ers, he only played 143 coverage snaps (compared to 446 for Long) but per Sports Info Solutions he allowed two completions on four targets for 18 yards.

Al-Shaair missed five games in 2022 with an MCL injury. Over four seasons he's played in 56 games and started 31.

"He has some upside to his game because of his limited starts," Blake Beddingfield said.

Al-Shaair overcame quite a bit to make it to the NFL and earn a second contract, the financial details of which remain unreported.

He's got seven siblings, and they all moved in with their grandmother in Tampa, Fla. in 2012 because of financial struggles. He led his family to safety one night after smelling smoke and they watched the house burn down. After shuffling around they wound up housed in a long-term motel, and he spent two hours a day on a bus to get to school and football practice, often eating just once a day.

The Titans are also in line to add Gifford, another inside linebacker who's got great athleticism.

TITANS DL DENICO
AUTRY PLANS TO ATTACK WITH A
"BULLDOG MENTALITY"

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEE TITANS
AUGUST 10, 2021

NASHVILLE – Kevin Byard has noticed teammate Denico Autry's hands, the same hands responsible for blocking eight kicks in his NFL career.

"The guy's hands are huge," Byard said on Tuesday while discussing the big defensive lineman, who spent four years with the Raiders and three with the Colts before signing with the Titans back in March.

"He was in Indy, always being disruptive, always in the backfield making plays," Byard continued. "Obviously watching a guy like him, a guy who has so much length. ... He is just a big guy, and I think he is going to be really disruptive up front with Jeff (Simmons) and those guys. I am excited to see him come out here and make some plays for us."

The 6-foot-5, 285-pound Autry has played in 96 games, with 56 starts, since entering the league as an undrafted free agent with the Raiders in 2014. In seven seasons, he's recorded 182 tackles and 30.5 sacks.

In 2020, while lining up primarily at defensive end, Autry tallied 33 tackles (20 solo), 9 tackles for loss, 7.5 sacks, and 35 total QB pressures during 14 games, with 13 starts, with the Colts.

Now, he's ready to create havoc with the Titans.

And he's fired up about the opportunity in Tennessee.

"If you come after me," Autry said of the Titans signing him, "I'm going to give you all I've got. I appreciate those guys for that, and I want to prove them right."

Autry plans to do it using a "Bulldog mentality," which he didn't hesitate to describe when asked what that meant after Tuesdays' practice.

Like Simmons, Autry played in college at Mississippi State.

As a senior for the Bulldogs in 2013, Autry started in all 13 games and collected 31 tackles (14 solo), 6.5 tackles for loss, 2.0 sacks, three passes defended and one forced fumble

"With Jeff, that Bulldog mentality goes a long way," Autry said. "Rugged, tough, hard-nosed, going to get after you every play, relentless. (It's) just a way of life."

Autry was a force all over the defensive line for the Colts, where he registered 20 sacks in 40 games over the past three seasons. Autry posted nine sacks in 2018, 3.5 sacks in 2019 and 7.5 sacks in 2020.

Autry's 20 sacks during the last three seasons ranks in the top 15 in the NFL for defensive linemen. Autry has also appeared in four career playoff games with three starts and collected 12 tackles, 2.5 sacks, five quarterback hits and a forced fumble in the postseason.

Titans defensive coordinator Shane Bowen is excited about the possibilities with Autry.

"He has a lot of versatility for us," Bowen said. "He can play inside or outside, and he is able to go in there on third down and do some things, he is able to go outside on third down and do some things. His multiplicity and his alignments – obviously being a bigger guy, which we really haven't had in there on third down at times. A bigger, longer, more powerful dude that will be able to just push the pocket a little bit, too, and keep those edges a little bit shorter for our guys."

Autry said he's felt good in camp, and he attributes it to his training this offseason.

Leading up to camp, Autry said he focused on building endurance and strength while doing more CrossFit training.

In Tennessee, he's already enjoying his time – and he's ready to make an impact on the field.

"I like everything about it here," Autry said. "(When I was in Indy), I saw where (the Titans) had good parts and pieces, and I wanted to be a part of it."

AS TENNESSEE TITANS' DENICO AUTRY RETURNS TO INDY, DON'T FORGET THE SMALL TOWN THAT MADE HIM

BY BEN ARTHUR
THE TENNESSEAN

Denico Autry made Patrick Mahomes feel him.

Facing a third-and-long deep in Tennessee Titans territory late in the third quarter last Sunday, and looking at a 24-point deficit, the Chiefs needed a touchdown to keep any hope of a comeback alive. But Autry ruined the chance. Mahomes dropped back and Autry, beating rookie right guard Trey Smith on the inside, wrapped him up for a sack before he could step up in the pocket.

Autry wasn't done, either.

In the fourth quarter, Kansas City was again deep in Tennessee territory, facing a third-and-long. And Autry again sacked Mahomes, wrapping him by the legs.

It was the punctuation to a thorough beating of the 2018 MVP by the Titans' pass rush.

At the heart of it was Autry.

"That was the number one key (against Kansas City), put pressure on the quarterback," Autry said postgame.

The 6-foot-5, 285-pound Autry, one of the Titans' marquee free-agent signings to fix a defense had been one of the league's worst, has been as advertised for Tennessee (5-2) entering its Week 8 showdown Sunday (noon CT, CBS) against Autry's former team: the rival Indianapolis Colts (3-4).

Autry leads the Titans in quarterback knockdowns (7) and ranks second in sacks (3.5), tackles for loss (5), hurries (8) and pressures (19).

He had his best game of the season in the signature victory over the Chiefs, with a team-leading two sacks and four quarterback hits.

"We're asking him to do some things and learn terminology and now you can see him kind of hit his comfort zone," said Titans defensive line coach Terrell Williams.

Autry's early years

Autry grew up an hour east of Charlotte in Albemarle, North Carolina, a small town of about 16,000 people. He lived in the neighborhood of Amhurst on the southeast part of town, a violent area during Autry's youth. There were drugs and gang violence. Gunshots were common at night.

Autry's mother, LaSonya, kept him off the streets. His football coaches at Albemarle High School and volunteer policemen who worked with the program kept an eye on him, too.

Anytime Autry – and his teammates – did anything outside of the house, they knew about it within 15 minutes. If Autry was hanging out on the corner at night, they'd pick him up and take him to get a burger. Whatever it took to keep him out of trouble.

"He probably had every opportunity in the world to go down the wrong road. And he ended up making right turns all the time," recalled Baxter Morris, Autry's football coach in high school. "You had to keep an eye because there was a lot of influence out there that they could fall victim to. He never did. He was always pretty much in the straight and narrow. He was never in trouble in school.

"He pulled back away from even some people that he always considered his friends in elementary school, middle school and stuff. He just didn't run with them in high school because some of them didn't make it. Some of them went the other way."

Sports kept Autry busy.

In addition to football, he played basketball and ran track all four years of high school. At 6-foot-5 and around 220 pounds, Autry did the 300-meter hurdles and 400-meter races in track. He had hands so big he could palm a basketball in both hands and wave them around. On the gridiron, he played defensive end, tight end, receiver and played on special teams.

"He could fly," recalled Morris. "He was a rocket ship."

Autry drew inspiration to commit to football from the Albemarle community.

"It's a big football town," said Autry. "Watching the guys before me coming up and seeing how they were doing things, where they were going to school. It made me want to be like those guys and go farther."

Versatility helps Autry

Autry's versatility translated as he climbed the football ranks.

Autry is officially listed as a defensive lineman for the Titans, but he plays outside linebacker too. He rushes inside and out. He can win with "multiple different moves," according to coach Mike Vrabel.

The 31-year-old veteran has averaged half a sack per game since 2018.

"It wasn't a hard decision for us to find a way for him to fit into our game," said outside linebackers coach Ryan Crow. "He showed up and we knew kind of knew what he was."

The Titans produced a stinker in their Week 4 loss to the Jets, but Autry gave them a chance to win in overtime, when he pushed Zach Wilson out of bounds on third-and-goal, forcing a field goal and giving the offense the ball back. In the Week 6 thriller against the Bills, it was Autry's hit on Josh Allen in the second quarter that led to a momentum-changing interception by safety Kevin Byard.

The Titans' four-man front of Autry, Jeffery Simmons, Harold Landry and a healthier Bud Dupree has flashed brilliance the last couple weeks.

"I think he's a big, long body in there who's able to get some push in the middle of the pocket," said defensive coordinator Shane Bowen. "You're not seeing quarterbacks being able to step up a lot. A lot of the sacks are happening pretty deep, right? So guys aren't really able to step up, which kind of bodes well for us.

"Then he's athletic for a big dude. He's quick, he's able to get on edges. He's got some quick twitch to him, where he's able to work side to side and find ways off of blockers late in the down to get to the quarterback."

Facing the Colts, his old team

Autry won't forget the Colts let him walk.

That's what he made clear at his Titans introductory press conference in March. The soft-spoken Autry recorded 20 sacks in three seasons with Indianapolis (2018-20), including a team-high nine in 2018.

"That makes it real personal," Autry said at the time. "They knew what they had. It is what it is."

Autry on Sunday will face the Colts for the second time this season, but for the first time Indianapolis, a critical game for the Titans to gain separation in the AFC South standings.

Vrabel acknowledged that players going up against their former team can be emotional games, but expressed confidence in Autry's ability to deliver.

"I trust that Denico and everybody else for that matter, I think everybody is going to be pretty tuned up whether they played for the Colts previously or not," said

Vrabel. "Denico has done everything we have asked him to do, and I am excited to watch him prepare this week and ultimately play on Sunday."

Perform is what he's always done.

Autry had poor grades coming out of high school, but he attended East Mississippi Community College, where he was an NJCAA All-American and helped lead the school to a state and national title at the JUCO level.

He went undrafted out of Mississippi State, but he's had a productive NFL career, with 34 sacks and 55 tackles for loss across seven seasons and counting with the Raiders, Colts and Titans.

Tennessee appreciates Autry's approach to the game.

"He's a business guy," said Crow. "He brings his lunch pail. Goes really, really hard. If he needs to lead, he'll lead.

"That's what guys look up to: guys who've done it and can lead by example, but also speak up when they have to."

A DAY TRE AVERY WON'T FORGET

BY JOHN GLENNON
SI.COM
AUGUST 31, 2022

NASHVILLE – In the midst of spending time with his one-day-old son on Tuesday, Tre Avery got a phone call that made him a little nervous.

Tennessee Titans general manager Jon Robinson and coach Mike Vrabel were on the other end of the line, and this was the day NFL teams were cutting rosters from 80 to 53 players.

Who could blame Avery, an undrafted free-agent cornerback out of Rutgers, for thinking his time with the team might be up?

“When they called me, I was kind of shook,” Avery said Wednesday. “But then they said, ‘Congratulations.’”

It was actually a double dose of congratulations. Robinson and Vrabel first acknowledged the birth of Avery’s baby boy – Riley – and then delivered the news he’d made the team’s 53-man roster.

In so doing, he beat out a pair of more experienced cornerbacks, Chris Jackson and Greg Mabin, among other competitors. A seventh-round draft pick of the Titans in 2020, Jackson had played 23 games for the team and made six starts. Mabin had played 39 NFL games and started seven, including two for the Titans last season.

Who would have guessed Avery would eventually emerge the winner in that group?

“As far as my odds coming into camp, I didn’t really think about it,” Avery said. “I just wanted a chance. I was grateful for the opportunity.

“Every time I got to step on the field, I just (thought) it could be my last game. So I just wanted to play, have fun. I love playing football, so I just wanted to enjoy it. That’s all.”

Avery first piqued the interest of NFL teams at Rutgers’ Pro Day last March, when he put up some impressive numbers. The 5-foot-11, 181-pounder ran a 4.43 40-yard dash, posted a 38-inch vertical jump and ran the 20-yard shuttle in a swift 3.95 seconds.

Just over a month later, the Titans signed Avery.

He was more steady than spectacular during training camp, but Avery took advantage of the growing opportunity. In the Titans’ preseason finale against Arizona, he played all 71 defensive snaps, recording five tackles. Avery finished the preseason with eight tackles (one for loss) and one pass defended.

“He was kind of seventh or eighth in the race (at cornerback) about midway through camp,” Titans general manager Jon Robinson said. “(But) it seemed like once he got to turn four, he just hitched up and kept running, kept passing guys up.

“He’s competitive at the line of scrimmage. He’s really sticky in coverage. He’s got play speed. He’s got good instincts. He doesn’t play the position like a rookie. He’s not intimidated. He gets up there and lines up on his guy, and he’s reactive. He’s really done a nice job.”

The birth of his first child one day. A berth on the 53-man roster the next.

It’s been a pretty good week for Avery.

“I just tried to do whatever they asked of me, the best I could,” Avery said. “I just tried to have fun, fly around, go as hard as I could. I guess it worked.”

BOWEN SEES MANY BENEFITS TO BEING COORDINATOR

BY DAVID BOCLAIR
SI.COM
AUGUST 4, 2021

NASHVILLE – The questions were raised often throughout the 2020 season.

Who is in charge of the Tennessee Titans defense? Was it coach Mike Vrabel? Was it outside linebackers coach Shane Bowen, who was designated the in-game play caller? Was anyone actually in command?

That is not problem in 2021. Bowen was promoted to defensive coordinator early in the offseason, and despite the many denials about any confusion that came in response to those questions last year, he now says clarity has made things better.

“I think it has helped with everybody, with the coaching staff, the players,” Bowen, a 34-year-old, first-time coordinator said Tuesday. “I think that it has been good up to this point. (The players) kind of understand where the bus stops and it is what it is.

“I am excited for the opportunity, I really am. I am excited for the ways these guys are going about working right now and kind of what we are trying to get accomplished on defense.”

The issues began a day after the Titans lost to the Kansas City Chiefs in the AFC Championship game ahead of Super Bowl LIV. That is when Dean Pees, a long-time defensive coordinator who directed Tennessee’s unit for two seasons retired.

Head coach Mike Vrabel ultimately chose not to hire a replacement. Instead, he said he planned to be more involved with the defense (he has one season of experience as a coordinator) and said Bowen, a position coach, would call the plays.

Over the course of 16 games in the regular season that defense struggled to find any consistency or productivity. It allowed opponents to convert more third-down opportunities (113) than it stopped (111). Seven teams scored 30 or more points against the Titans, who ranked near the bottom of the league in sacks, first downs allowed and yards allowed.

With the title of defensive coordinator, Bowen says he has more freedom to choose where he wants to be when, whether it is during meetings or during practice. That ability to move around apparently has created a greater focus among the various entities that make up the defense.

“Now, if the (defensive backs) see something one way, I can immediately walk into the linebacker room and say, ‘Hey man, this is what we are thinking, this is how they see it,’” Bowen said. “That way everybody sees things the same way, we are communicating things the same way. I think that has been a tremendous asset, being able to bounce room to room.”

It also has allowed all of the players on that side of the ball to get to know him in a way only the outside linebackers did previously. No longer is he just one of the coaches who happens to call the plays. He is the guy in the front of the room during defense meetings. He is the guy in an office who is available to safeties and linemen and cornerbacks, if they want to talk. And he is the one who will get the blame or the credit this season, based on how things go.

“I have enjoyed it and I think it goes back to building relationships too,” Bowen said. “Making sure they see me, see me watching them, seeing me out there and it is not just me in a meeting room telling them, ‘Hey, on this play you do this.’ There is a lot more that goes into it.

“... I think building the relationships with the guys, that is a big part of it. That last year I don’t think was there, whereas this year it is growing, and it is becoming a bigger piece for me.”

SHANE BOWEN WITH 'FINAL VOICE' OF
TENNESSEE TITANS'
DEFENSE AS DEFENSIVE

BY BEN ARTHUR
THE TENNESSEAN
JUNE 2, 2021

Tennessee Titans defensive coordinator Shane Bowen said there's definitely change that has come with his offseason promotion from outside linebackers.

"Having control of the whole unit," Bowen explained to reporters. "My perspective on everything. Making sure we're all on the same page, seeing things the same way. Ultimately, being a final voice, right? So (my responsibility) has changed in that regard."

Bowen spoke to local media Wednesday for the first time since being given the title of defensive coordinator in January, after serving in that role in a de facto capacity last season.

Titans coach Mike Vrabel didn't name a defensive coordinator for 2020 after Dean Pees' retirement following the 2019 season. As the outside linebackers coach last season, Bowen led the defensive meetings during the week and was the play caller on game days.

But Bowen's formal promotion this offseason symbolized a vote of confidence from Vrabel, even after the Titans' defensive struggles last season. Tennessee allowed a league-worst 51.9% conversion rate of third down last season and ranked third-worst in sacks (19) and red zone conversion rate allowed (69.2%). It's why Vrabel's decision to elevate Bowen didn't resonate well with some fans.

"I think he's kind of coached me in this deal," Bowen said of Vrabel. "He's brought me up through this profession in some regard. I think just looking back at the position groups, when I had them, what I realized is that some of the things we've done in the past here – last year, some of the good and some of the bad stuff – there's stuff obviously we've got to get corrected. But I appreciate (Vrabel's) confidence in me.

Bowen enters the 2021 season with clarity on his role, new personnel and a traditional offseason program – OTAs and minicamp – to install his defense after a season rattled by COVID-19 and the departures of free-agent busts Jadeveon Clowney and Vic Beasley.

"We're all in this together to do whatever we see fit and whatever is needed to find ways to win games in whatever fashion we got to do it," he said. "We've got to play better defensively. We do. I'm excited. I'm encouraged about where this thing is going right now."

To improve the defense in 2021, Bowen said the Titans are looking to put their personnel in better positions to be successful.

Tennessee will have many of the same schematic principles, but he stressed there's "a lot of ways to skin the cat" with their players, many of whom are new after the defensive overhaul this offseason.

"We're trying new things," Bowen said. "Like a lot of the same scheme stuff, don't get me wrong. But there's a lot of ways to skin a cat. You can do things a lot of different ways. Just trying to find what fits with these players and what they most relate to. That's the beauty of bringing guys in from other teams."

Despite the defensive woes, the Titans last season ranked eighth in the NFL with 23 takeaways. Bowen said that's something to build upon as they put their 2020 struggles behind them.

"I think that's a foundation piece for us," Bowen said. "Finding ways to turn the ball over and give the ball back to our offense has got to continue. We can't let that waver with any of the other stuff. It's still going to be a core belief that we have."

As far as that abysmal pass rush from a year ago, Bowen is confident it will improve. He is excited about the additions of outside linebacker Bud Dupree and defensive lineman Denico Autry, to pair with returning starters Jeffery Simmons and Harold Landry. The Titans are banking on developing a few more players, too.

Bowen is eager for the pass rush – like the rest of the defense – to show its worth when the season starts.

"I can't speak for anybody outside of this building, but I got confidence in them," Bowen said. "I do. I can't wait until we get to the fall and get to kind of put this thing together and see what it looks like."

was a daily sight. Folks in the organization who paid close attention were impressed by Brewer's ability to hang. Including Simmons.

"Their mindset is the same," Simmons said of Brewer and Saffold. "And when I say that, I really mean it. He has that mindset like a bigger guy, no matter how small he is. We had some great battles this camp. He got me some days, especially one-on-one blocking. And I got him some days. That's just props to him. He came each and every day to want to get better. I'd beat him and he'd say, 'Jeff, I want another rep.' That's what we look for from guys on our team, guys who want to compete."

He'll get his chance now, each week in this league, after encountering no serious threat to his starting position in camp. Brewer has done mostly good things with the Titans, but he has not yet been through a full-season rotation of dominant defensive tackles in this league nor worked to keep his weight up and his health strong amid that weekly grind. If he is what the Titans think he is, a brighter outlook for this offense line can at least be argued.

Rookie and third-round pick Nicholas Petit-Frere will still be a question at starting right tackle, but David Quessenberry gave up 11 sacks at that spot last season, per Pro Football Focus, the most among offensive tackles. Right guard Nate Davis has declared better health and expectations of a return to his 2020 form. Ben Jones keeps on trucking and leading the offense. Lewan is coming off a healthy offseason of work, not an offseason of ACL rehabilitation like a year ago, and he and Brewer can both move like few offensive linemen.

"We both have a lot of the same skill traits — both athletic, both twitchy — so us working together and putting it together, it's poetry," Brewer said. "It's gonna work every time. This whole camp, getting together and getting on the same page, when it's on all cylinders, it's teach tape."

It may not be must-see TV for Titans fans. But it's important. And if the Titans happen to score a touchdown or two Sunday, that's when fans should find No. 55. He said he is still completing the trick that got him noticed, with ease, in full pads.

"You might see something," Brewer said. "And you might be a little surprised."

AARON BREWER PREPARING TO ANCHOR
THE TITANS OFFENSIVE LINE IN 2023

BY JIM WYATT
TITANS ONLINE
MAY 5, 2023

NASHVILLE – Since 2016 – Marcus Mariota's second year in the NFL – one man has been a fixture in the middle of the Titans offensive line.

The gritty and durable Ben Jones anchored the line at center the last seven years, rarely missing a game.

Jones, however, is no longer with the team.

Aaron Brewer knows what that means for him.

"I have been working at center right now," Brewer said this week. "And I would say that is the goal for the team right now – for me to move into the center spot and take over that role."

Brewer, who started 17 games for the Titans in 2023, said he's up for the challenge after playing guard last season.

"Center fits me well, because I'm in the middle and I'm facing those big noses, and I'm quick and I'm athletic and have natural leverage, so that's a good spot for me.

"Since I've been here, I've been in that guard/center role. In my second year, I came in a couple of games at center. Ben has just been that certified center, but I've been for sure next up at that spot."

Brewer said he learned a lot from watching Jones, a Pro Bowler in 2022 who was waived earlier this offseason.

From 2016 through 2021 with the Titans, Jones was one of one of only eight offensive linemen to start at least 96 of a possible 97 games. Jones missed five games a year ago because of a pair of concussions.

"I learned a lot from Ben," Brewer said. "Ben, he's been in the league 10-plus years, so his knowledge of the game is on another level, just going into practice, going into games. He sees defenses, and defensive coordinator's schemes – everything from pre-snap to the snap. His whole mentality about everything, how he goes about things, how he prepares, I took all that in."

Brewer, who initially joined the Titans as an undrafted free agent in 2020, has plenty of experience. Over the past three seasons, Brewer has played in 41 games, with 23 starts. In 2022, Brewer started 15 games at left guard and two at center in place of Jones.

Since 2020, Brewer has started 18 games at left guard, three games at right guard, and two games at center.

Brewer believes he's sturdy enough to anchor the line.

"I am pretty sure I'll be playing around the same weight I've been – I'm now really too light," Brewer said with a smile. "I know the media would probably say I'm about 240, 250. But I've been this weight for a minute now – 290."

The Titans will have a new-look offensive line in 2023.

Not only is Jones gone, but tackle Taylor Lewan and guard Nate Davis are no longer with the team either.

The Titans signed tackle Andre Dillard and guard Daniel Brunskill in free agency, and then drafted offensive linemen Peter Skoronski and Jaelyn Duncan last weekend.

Brewer said he's ready to do his part on the field, and as a leader.

"I was a leader coming out of college," Brewer said. "I, myself, I lead by example. So, I am going to work hard, I am going to put in the work, and if something needs to be said I'm going to be saying it."

"The culture is going to be the culture – we are built on effort and finish. That's us, and that's not going to change."

THE TITANS NEW NOT AWFUL OFFENSIVE LINE AND THE BACK FLIP THAT HELPED REBUILD
IT

BY JOE REXRODE
THE ATHLETIC
SEPTEMBER 8, 2022

Just five teams gave up fewer than the 25 sacks the Titans allowed in 2020. Just six teams gave up more than the 47 they allowed in 2021. And just about everyone who thinks this team won't make the postseason in 2022 points to that troubled group up front.

The Titans were sacked 8.79 percent of the time they dropped back last season, which also ranked 26th in the NFL, and that's right around where you'll find them in your favorite football site's preseason offensive line rankings for 2022. Pick an advanced stat, any advanced stat — how about an average of 2.59 seconds to throw in 2021, per TruMedia, which ranked 30th in the NFL? — and the conclusion is the same. The Titans addressed this issue by swapping out a veteran for a rookie at right tackle and one of the best run blockers in the game for an undersized, undrafted 2020 free agent out of Texas State at left guard.

That last point is the external assessment of Aaron Brewer, anyway. Internally, he's part of the case for a better offensive line in 2022, a surprisingly effective offense, the avoidance of the plummet most of the NFL seems to expect from the Titans after they earned the AFC's No. 1 seed last season. Left guard play may not be top of mind for fans when Tennessee hosts the Giants in Sunday's season opener, but it's a big deal. And this is the first opportunity for Brewer to really start validating the murmurs that have been coming out of Titans headquarters for a while.

As tough as anyone we've got ...

Incredible quickness ...

He and Taylor Lewan are going to be lethal together ...

This guy's our center of the future ...

I don't care how big he is ...

For as long as Brewer starts in the NFL, be it a fraction of this season or the next 10 with some Pro Bowls sprinkled in, that's going to come up. He's listed at 6-foot-1, 295, or 21 pounds more than when the Titans signed him after the 2020 draft. It almost kept him out of the NFL. It made him consider trying to be a tight end in the NFL. It almost cost him an opportunity to play in the FBS. It kept Power 5 programs from paying any mind to him amid all the superstars at Dallas Skyline High. And if it wasn't for an eye-popping stunt he performed as a high school senior shortly before signing day in 2016, he probably wouldn't be a Tennessee Titan today.

Brewer was committed to Sam Houston State, an FCS program that will transition to FBS starting in 2023. He was known for his athletic feats, including the ability to pull off a standing back flip — impressive for anyone that size, let alone someone that size in full pads. One of Brewer's teammates took a video of him doing a flip. Brewer shared it on social media.

"I wasn't even thinking about doing anything like that, but I did it, I posted it and it just blew up," Brewer said. "Like 30 minutes later, Texas State called."

Texas State offensive line coach Adrian Mayes, in particular. He had been on the job a few days, hired by new head coach Everett Withers. Withers was brought in after a successful head coaching tenure at James Madison, which followed up his stint as Urban Meyer's co-defensive coordinator at Ohio State — sharing that title with Luke Fickell, working closely with defensive line coach Mike Vrabel.

Withers' staff had missed some official visit weekends and was scrambling to put together any kind of 2016 recruiting class. The flip wasn't the only endorsement of Brewer. Withers interviewed a student intern at Sam Houston State named Clayton Barnes for an offensive intern position with the Bobcats and asked if any of the committed Sam Houston State players might be worth a look. Barnes mentioned Brewer right away — very athletic, undersized, but also under-recruited because an injury caused him to miss the camp circuit in the summer before his senior season. Texas State got Brewer in on the last weekend for official visits before signing day.

"He did a back flip for us in the end zone," said John "Stretch" Streicher, then Withers' director of football operations and now the Titans' football development coordinator.

And pretty much from the start, Brewer was one of Texas State's best players. He started at all five offensive line positions in his four-year career — he was far better-suited to work on the interior, but he also happened to be the Bobcats' best tackle.

"Nasty disposition, phenomenal athlete, can bend, can move, can run, it was really shocking he was available to us at Texas State," said Withers, who is now chief of staff for Temple head coach Stan Drayton, another member of that Ohio State staff under Meyer. "His explosive power is as good as any big man I've ever been around. And he was just one of those guys — there wasn't a defensive lineman in the country he thought could whup his ass. Playing Arkansas, Houston, didn't matter, his competitive spirit was unquestionable. I'm trying to remember how many times I watched the tape and he actually just got beat."

Withers was fired after three seasons with a 7-28 record, though

Brewer credited him in those three years with doing exactly what a coach is supposed to do from an individual development standpoint.

“His mentality and his foundation on everything he had done and been through, it was really good for me as a young man,” Brewer said of Withers. “He helped me grow as a man and as a player in every aspect of the game. That respect, that discipline he taught me, that has taken me very far.”

When it was time to find out how far that might be in football, Brewer knew he probably wouldn’t be chosen in the 2020 NFL Draft. He had three opportunities as an undrafted free agent. The Titans, Patriots and Falcons had done homework on him and wanted to sign him.

“Stretch having been there with Everett and those coaches that we knew, it was a no-brainer really for us, to try to add him to our roster after the draft,” Vrabel said of Brewer.

The Titans and Patriots were interested in Brewer as an interior offensive lineman. The Falcons told him they wanted to look at him as a tight end after he ran a 4.79 at the Texas State pro day. And this admittedly intrigued him.

“I was real close to going there,” Brewer said of the Falcons, whose new tight end coach at the time, Ben Steele, told Brewer he thought he could make the transition to that position.

And this is where Streicher — whom Vrabel had hired away from Texas State when he got the Titans job in 2018 — gave the Titans an edge.

“Stretch’s relationship with Aaron was key,” Titans GM Jon Robinson told The Athletic. “That always helps when the draft is over and you’re in the recruiting process of trying to get guys to come here. In this case, it was advantageous to us.”

Streicher talked up the organization, the opportunity at hand and Vrabel — whom Brewer now says reminds him a lot of Withers as a head coach. Streicher also told Brewer he believed offensive line was his best bet in the NFL and that perhaps he could be a starting center in the league someday.

So the Titans got him. Withers texted Vrabel this message: “You’ve got yourself a tough son of a bitch.”

Now the Titans will find out how much that means.

“In terms of the projection of where we thought he could be, I will say that when he first got here his actual play strength was better than I gave him credit for,” Robinson said. “Once he grips a guy, he has the ability to control him. You never know what trajectory, what path a player will take. But he was a guy who really took to heart all the things we thought were important from a technique standpoint. He’s worked on them. He’s a good teammate. He’s smart, all of that.”

Brewer, 24, has seen action in 24 games in his first two seasons, including six starts — three at left guard and three at right guard. He has acquitted himself well as a quality backup. That alone makes the finding and landing of him in the spring of 2020 a success. And the possibility that he could eventually succeed Ben Jones at center, whenever the 33-year-old Jones decides to hang it up, means this could be one of the memorable recruitments of Robinson’s tenure.

“When he lines up at center, you get a different look,” Titans defensive tackle Naquan Jones said of Brewer. “He’s able to put a lot of different things into his game, add a new speed aspect. He’s very quick off the ball, very good leverage, and he just makes sure everything is polished as far as technique and fundamentals. Being so quick off the ball, being so powerful with it, he’s not one of those guys you can just bull rush, just because he has a very strong lower body. It forces you to come off the ball and think quick, because he’s gonna get on you pretty fast.”

But the question right now is what Brewer can be to the 2022 team, trying for its third straight AFC South title, at left guard. He’s replacing an elite NFL run blocker, the 6-5, 325-pound Rodger Saffold, which is like a scatback replacing Derrick Henry. For as bad as the Titans were at pass blocking last season, they continued to mash in the run-blocking department, even when Henry wasn’t running the ball.

The preseason is a time for accolades, especially for new players or new starters whose play can’t yet contradict such accolades. Brewer has received plenty, including from the compliment-stingy Vrabel, who called him “tougher than a $2 steak.”

“That’s exactly what he is,” Lewan said of the new guy to his right, after three strong seasons of partnering with Saffold. “The guy comes to practice every single day, gives 100 percent effort and goes. He and Rodger have a lot of similarities in their game. Obviously their sizes are different, but Brew does a lot of great things, and I’m excited to play next to him.”

Brewer is also bendy like one would assume a steak at that price would be, Ben Jones saying of him: “He’s by far our most athletic guy. He’s special.”

“He’s a dog,” said Titans inside linebacker David Long Jr., another undersized find who has ascended to starting status for the Titans. “He has that mentality.”

Perhaps the strongest endorsement comes from the star player who battled Brewer all through camp. Jeffery Simmons and Saffold had some legendary encounters in preseasons past, some of them resulting in lost tempers. That wasn’t the dynamic with Simmons and Brewer, but heated competition

TITANS BECOMING 49ERS SOUTHEAST? ARDEN KEY,
DANIEL BRUNSKILL CONTINUE RAN'S RUN

BY JOE REXRODE
THE ATHLETIC
MARCH 16, 2023

The Titans are going for it in 2023. "It" can only realistically be considered the AFC South, but if you win that you get a home playoff game and then who knows?

You don't have to beat all the teams in the AFC with better quarterbacks than you. You have to be good enough around your good quarterback to beat three of them. Based on how the Titans have approached free agency this week, that's what they're thinking. Based on their actions in the first offseason for new GM Ran Carthon, that good quarterback, Ryan Tannehill, will be back playing out the final year of his deal. Same thing for the great running back, Derrick Henry.

(Unless the Titans trade Tannehill and move up from No. 11 to grab Kentucky's Will Levis, though it's hard anymore to find Tannehill trade partners who make sense).

Speaking of the AFC South, I doubt Duval County is fretting that edge Arden Key has moved on from the defending champion Jaguars to the Titans. But there was another Titans signing a few years ago from a divisional rival, of a guy who could play outside linebacker and defensive end, that didn't get a ton of attention at the time but has had a not insignificant impact on the Titans' handling of the Indianapolis Colts since then. Key is not Denico Autry. But Key with Autry, Harold Landry and Jeffery Simmons? It's intriguing.

Agreements with Key — who was with the 49ers in 2021 — and 49ers offensive guard Daniel Brunskill, both confirmed by a team source to The Athletic, continue the run on guys who have history with Carthon. And bolster the Titans in their area of biggest need (offensive line) and potential area of biggest strength (pass rush).

How they fit: Key is a situational pass rusher and should be the same with the Titans unless he can carve out a bigger role than that. But that's his value and that is what Bud Dupree was supposed to be for the Titans — and was at times, especially in 2021, when Dupree, Landry, Simmons and Autry overwhelmed quarterbacks for stretches like few groups in the league. The Titans needed an add like this after losing DeMarcus Walker, who signed with the Bears. The 6-5, 240-pound Key had 4 1/2 sacks in his season with the Jaguars, but he also had a pressure rate of 14.4 percent, 20th in the NFL among players with 200 or more snaps. That rate was 15 percent in 2021 with the 49ers.

Brunskill has played all over the offensive line but is a right guard by trade and figures to step in there and replace Nate Davis, who also signed with the Bears. He was the 49ers' backup center, though, and the Titans cut longtime center Ben Jones, so that's also a possibility.

2023 impact: Landry is coming off a torn ACL. Rashad Weaver will be a third-year pro and is a solid player, but the Titans need more across from Landry. Autry is in the final year of his deal and Simmons should be getting a massive extension before the season. If Key can mesh with that group and be a force in the Titans' sub package — and those other guys can maintain or elevate their impact — this could be a terrific signing. Brunskill, meanwhile, is going to have an opportunity to start somewhere for the Titans on their rebuilt offensive line.

If he does work out at right guard and Nicholas Petit-Frere can take a step in his second season at right tackle, and if Aaron Brewer is ready to take over at center (his ideal position), and Andre Dillard is up to his potential opportunity as the starting left tackle ... well, things are starting to look less grim. But that's a lot of uncertainty. And the Titans would still need to draft another tackle, possibly at No. 11, and a left guard.

History: A key part of the history of both players, of course, is that Carthon knows them well. The new GM is putting his stamp on this team immediately with players he believes can add to the Titans' talent and chemistry. A bigger part of the history of both players is that they've been relatively healthy. Key, a 2018 third-round pick of the Raiders out of LSU, played in all 17 games the past two seasons. Brunskill, an undrafted player out of San Diego State who originally signed with the Falcons in 2017, did miss the first three games last season with a hamstring injury but played in all 17 in 2021.

Cap update: Key signed a three-year, $21 million deal with $13 million guaranteed, according to NFL Network. That's a significant investment in a player who has bounced around, but if he works out as hoped, that's strong value, especially relative to the contract former GM Jon Robinson gave Dupree. Brunskill's contract details are not yet available.

Outlook: Will the Titans significantly revamp the offensive line after a terrible 2022? That remains a huge question. But the vision is coming into focus. The Niners and Eagles were loaded, and now some of their depth guys are getting bigger opportunities. The Titans have bolstered what could be another salty defense in 2023 without spending a ton. Now, the next question: What are they going to do at receiver?

TITANS' TREYLON BURKS STARTING 2023 WITH NEWFOUND CONFIDENCE AND JOYFUL APPROACH.
HERE'S WHY

BY JULIAN BASENA

Treyton Burks is having fun playing football again. Growing into his role in year two with the Tennessee Titans, Burks is focusing more on enjoying himself and playing confidently after an up-and-down rookie season.

"I'm out there just having fun, playing with my teammates, just doing my job," Burks said after Wednesday's minicamp practice.

According to Burks, Rob Moore, the Titans wide receiver coach, has been key to his shift in attitude. Out of everything he's learned from the former All-Pro wideout, Burks said Moore has improved his confidence most.

Playing fast, having fun and worrying less about mistakes are areas Burks has seen significant growth. In his rookie year, Burks said he never truly grasped the approach until the end of the season.

"I was just like, 'if it happens, it happens — just move on,'" Burks said.

To start 2023, Burks has recaptured a more aggressive style of play, hunting for contested passes under duress. He's shown some of his ability during minicamp this week.

"That's just stuff that I've grown up (doing) before getting here," Burks said. "It just took time for me to relax and get back to myself and now I'm able to do that."

"It comes from confidence," Burks said, " ... me having confidence going up making those balls and not thinking too much during the route. Just running the route, having fun, going up and making a play for the team."

His early improvements in 2023 are in contrast to his struggles throughout his rookie season.

Burks, a first-round draft selection in 2022, was thrust into a major receiving role at the start of his career and endured several setbacks. Billed as the replacement for A.J. Brown, Burks missed the majority of his first minicamp and OTAs because of asthma-induced breathing issues.

Due to other ailments, Burks appeared in 11 games (six starts) and recorded 33 catches for 444 yards. He suffered a toe injury that sidelined him for multiple weeks and was also subject to the Titans' quarterback turnover after Ryan Tannehill went down with injury.

Burks' best performances came when quarterback play and attitude were at their best. With Tannehill healthy in Week 11, Burks caught seven balls for 111 yards.

Burks believes Tannehill and additional veteran guidance can build his confidence further.

"That helps out a lot just because (Tannehill) knows what he's talking about so I listen," Burks said. "I haven't been in the league as long as he has just hearing from him and hearing from all the older guys has helped me."

IMPROVEMENT

Whether it was by land, air or sea, Treylon Burks was going to arrive on time for Tennessee Titans organized team activities earlier this week.

Due to the domino effect of a delayed flight, Burks was forced to make alternate arrangements in the form of flying into Tennessee via a small Cessna.

It was an example of Burks' dedication, but an uneasy journey nonetheless for the 2022 first-round pick who has arrived at OTAs ahead of a season in which he aims to arrive as a viable No. 1 WR for Tennessee.

"That was kind of crazy though," Burks said, via PaulKuharsky.com. "It was real crazy. But I mean, you got to do what you got to do."

The 6-foot-3, 225-pound Burks had his flight from Dallas to Arkansas delayed, thereby meaning his connection to Nashville would be missed, Kuharsky reported. So, after much ado attempting to find a private pilot, Burks landed with Zach Davis. However, it was a tight squeeze of a flight for the big-bodied wideout.

"It was actually the day before where my agent called the guy, but I didn't know the plane was that little," Burks said. "I just thought it was maybe like a little jet or something. Then when we get there, it's just crazy, you know? Everything was alright."

All's well that lands safely, though, and Burks has hit the OTA practice field running ahead of a pivotal season.

Tennessee has a dearth of talent in the WR corps and Burks will need to make some strides in Year 2 after a disappointing rookie campaign.

Though it's merely the spring, so far so optimistic for Burks in the eyes of his quarterback Ryan Tannehill.

"Treylon's grown a lot," Tannehill said this week. "I'm really excited about what I've seen from him. He's flying around."

There was no pun intended by Tannehill, but flying around has been a theme for Burks so far, and that's promising for the Titans.

Burks was selected by the Titans after they traded A.J. Brown to the Philadelphia Eagles.

Following a trade that was largely panned and hoisted undo pressure upon Burks' shoulders, the Arkansas product struggled along with the rest of the 2022 Titans offense. Burks, who deals with asthma and was sidelined with a concussion last year, played in 11 games as a rookie and finished with just one touchdown off 33 catches for 444 yards.

With a year under his belt, though, Burks is impressing early in the offseason.

"He's moving fast," Tannehill said. "He's moving efficiently. He's coming out and he's working. He's in shape. All great things obviously. He's been able to catch the ball and get open his whole time here, but all the little things that go along with playing the position, being able to see the field, understand the full concept, as opposed to just a route. How he fits in the whole picture. All those things."

"I think he's playing with a lot of confidence right now. So, just want to keep him going, keep him growing. He's doing a lot of really, really good things right now. I'm really happy with his growth and want to keep pushing forward."

Burks is flying high so far in 2023, but just how high won't be seen until the season kicks off in September.

NEW TITANS WR TREYLON BURKS PUTS HIS BOOTS ON THE GROUND IN NASHVILLE, READY TO WORK

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
APRIL 29, 2022

NASHVILLE – Decked out in cowboy boots, jeans and a dapper white sports coat, new Titans receiver Trelon Burks stepped off the team's private jet on Friday looking – and sounding – the part.

The boots, by the way, weren't just for show for his trip to Music City. Burks, in fact, has several pairs, including ostrich, lizard and snake skin boots.

"I'm just a boots guy," a smiling Burks, who likes to hunt hogs as a hobby, said as he walked through the Titans locker room. "I like my boots."

After being drafted 18th overall by the Titans in Thursday night's NFL Draft, the former Arkansas receiver arrived in town today and said ready to get to work.

"Honestly, words can't explain the feeling I have right now," Burks said. "I am thankful to be here, and for having the chance to live my dream. I just want to do everything God has put in front of me, and attack it like I am."

"I'm happy to be here. I knew that (the Titans) liked me, just from the one-on-one visit that I had with them. But I just played it as: I am just going to let God take care of everything and wherever I go, I am going to be blessed to go there. Now, I feel like I'm blessed to be here, and I'm ready to get to work."

A 6-foot-3, 225-pounder, Burks caught 66 passes for 1,104 yards and 11 touchdowns for the Razorbacks in 2021 to earn first-team All-SEC honors – and get the attention of NFL teams.

During the pre-draft process, Burks said he visited 14 different teams, including the Titans.

"I went three weeks straight flying," Burks said. "I was all over the place, going from one place to the next. I racked up a lot of flying hours."

Burks felt like there was something special in Tennessee, who traded up from the 26th pick – while dealing receiver A.J. Brown to the Eagles in the process – to get him.

As Burks walked the hallways at Saint Thomas Sports Park on Friday, he said he felt comfortable. He was on his way to Nissan Stadium, set to return to the facility for a press conference later today.

"Just how Coach (Mike) Vrabel runs things, and everybody else in the organization, the mentality in the locker room and on the field and practices, I like it," Burks said. "It's about business, going about your business the right way and everything else will take care of itself."

"Just walking around the facility today, being a part of it now, it is a lot different. I am not uptight, all of that. I am comfortable that I am finally here, and I'm ready to get to work."

Titans controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk sent the team's private jet – complete with a Titans logo – to Searcy, Arkansas, this morning to pick up Burks at 11 a.m.

He landed in Nashville around 11:45.

"Just being on that jet, and coming here, that was pretty cool," Burks said. "I am so thankful."

"I am going to go to work every day and take care of my business. I am going to be that team player that is going to motivate everyone around me, that's just who've I've always been. As a young boy playing pee-wee ball, I feel like I tried to establish myself as a hard worker."

Before heading to Nissan Stadium, Burks tackled one more topic during a quick interview on Friday: Hog hunting, as mentioned previously.

Yes, it's true.

"My favorite hobby is hog hunting," Burks said with a smile. "When I was like six years old, we would go out and hunt hogs with my uncle's friends and I just fell in love with it and have been doing it ever since."

"We use dogs, and a knife," Burks continued. "The dogs go out there and bait them, and we come in behind them and catch the hog – and depending on how big it is – we decide whether we kill it or not."

Burks smiled when asked the size of the biggest hog he's ever battled.

"450 (pounds)," he said.

"There was one time when (a hog came after us), but we got up the tree, so it couldn't get us," Burks said, smiling bigger. "It was an adrenaline rush for sure."

Kind of like landing in the NFL.

HOW TITANS GM RAN CARTHON GOT HIS DREAM JOB

*BY TURRON DAVENPORT
ESPN
SEPTEMBER 4, 2023*

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- As Ran Carthon was being introduced as Tennessee Titans general manager in January, his mind flashed back to 2003.

The thought brought a smile to his face. Carthon was a senior at Florida when his then-girlfriend, Heaven, asked him what he wanted to do for a living.

"I told her, 'One day I want to be a GM of an NFL football team,'" Carthon said. "She later told me that she almost stopped dating me because she never met somebody that lived in la-la land."

Carthon thanked myriad people during his speech before he smiled at Heaven, who's now his wife, and said "Honey, today that dream comes true."

Carthon became the fifth GM of the Titans since the franchise moved to Nashville in 1997, achieving a goal dating back to childhood. It was an arduous process. He employed unconventional methods to get his foot in the door after spending 2004 to 2006 as a running back with the Indianapolis Colts before finishing the second half of his third and final season with the Detroit Lions.

"He can connect with anyone," Houston Texans coach DeMeco Ryans said of Carthon, whom he worked with in San Francisco. "Everybody is Ran's best friend. He's ... very relatable, very personable."

Former Colts running back Ran Carthon rushes for a game-winning touchdown in the fourth quarter against the Jacksonville Jaguars in 2005. John Harrell/AP

CARTHON'S PASSION FOR scouting started in 1995, when he was 14 years old and studying draft previews. When draft day came, he and his younger brother would record the all-day event on their VCR. Carthon watched each selection, rewinding and scribbling the picks on his "little legal pad."

That passion only grew in Indianapolis.

Future Hall of Famers like quarterback Peyton Manning and running back Edgerrin James were pivotal for his development on and off the field. He had to be ready for Manning's famous "Omaha" calls at the line of scrimmage, constant audibling and knowing everyone's job on any given play.

"You can't just know your spot when playing with a guy like that," Carthon said. "You have to know what everybody is doing."

"It opens up your eyes from the vantage point of being a talent evaluator, being able to understand who is making the mistake, who is right, who is wrong."

Even as a player, he scoured advanced scouting reports. James was impressed with the way Carthon read every report and evaluated film, calling his former teammate "a student of the game."

"Ran, he was going a little bit deeper," James said. "He's studying the sheets and really knew everything when he didn't have to."

Carthon was first exposed to the NFL personnel world when he was in college. The New York Jets staff visited Florida for pro days, and his father, Maurice -- a former NFL fullback -- was a member of the Jets' coaching staff. They ended up putting Ran to work as he timed the 40-yard dash and tabulated results. He also would meet with the coaches and watch film.

"That was my introduction to the business side of it and not just be a fan of the draft," Carthon said.

As Carthon's playing career was ending, he knew he had to create connections that would help him take steps toward becoming a GM -- including taking workouts to network to set -- but little did he know, it would be the key to his future.

THE WORKOUT CARTHON took with the Atlanta Falcons might have been the most valuable. He was able to establish a relationship with then-general manager Thomas Dimitroff, and that led to a scouting job in 2008.

He spent four seasons attending games, practice sessions and studying prospects' tapes.

Carthon's next job was director of player personnel with the Rams from 2012 to 2016. He was still a scout, but he was also in charge of pulling together reports from other scouts and coaches to present to the general manager and head coach.

The most pivotal move came in 2017 after he joined the San Francisco 49ers as director of pro personnel. Carthon was required to have extensive knowledge of all 32 NFL rosters.

"I came from a good situation in San Francisco," Carthon said. "It was a really great building with a lot of strong relationships there."

Carthon went on to become the director of player personnel in 2021, a move that put him on track to become a GM.

"Ran's had a tremendous amount of experience in a variety of roles," 49ers general manager John Lynch said. "He did a tremendous job in our pro department. Then we wanted him involved in more than just the pro department because he was worthy of that. So Ran got involved in our college process."

The 49ers selected former Louisiana running back Elijah Mitchell in the sixth round of the 2021 draft, in part, because Carthon pushed for it. The football research and development manager, Demetrius Washington, came to Carthon saying his numbers were telling him Mitchell was the best outside zone running back in the draft, but he wanted Carthon to watch the game film.

Carthon agreed with Washington, and they took their findings to 49ers coach Kyle Shanahan. DeMeco Ryans, who was the defensive coordinator at the time, agreed as well, and the 49ers selected Mitchell instead of a linebacker they originally focused on selecting.

Injuries to running backs Raheem Mostert and Jeff Wilson Jr. thrust Mitchell into duty in 2021, where he rushed for 963 yards and five touchdowns as a rookie in 11 games and helped push the 49ers to the NFC Championship Game.

San Francisco's success in the draft and free agency led to a Super Bowl appearance in 2019 and back-to-back NFC Championship Game appearances in 2021 and 2022. The 49ers' winning ways landed Carthon in the conversation for multiple general manager roles.

CARTHON INTERVIEWED FOR the general manager position with the Chicago Bears, New York Giants and Pittsburgh Steelers in 2022.

The opportunity to become the Titans' general manager may not have been possible if Carthon didn't attend The NFL Front Office Accelerator program in December. The program is designed to enhance opportunities for diverse front office prospects to strengthen relationships with club ownership and executives.

"The goal of our accelerator program is to foster relationships between owners and potential candidates for front office positions," said Steelers president Art Rooney II, chairman of the NFL Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Committee. "Both the clubs and the accelerator participants understand the importance of the exposure, professional development and networking opportunities."

The accelerator program put candidates like Carthon in a meetand-greet setting with NFL team leadership groups.

"I am extremely appreciative to commissioner [Roger] Goodell, [NFL chief diversity and inclusion officer] Jonathan Beane and all those beautiful people at the league office there that spearheaded the program," Carthon said.

"It works. I'm here in part because of it, so it works."

During the program, Carthon was encouraged to meet with the Titans leadership panel that included controlling owner Amy Adams-Strunk, president/CEO Burk Nihill and chief external and league affairs officer Adolpho Birch III.

"What impressed me the most was his growth mindset and clear vision," Adams-Strunk said of Carthon.

Adams-Strunk was also struck by Carthon's "ability to connect" with the Titans' leadership group.

Developing relationships has always been one of Carthon's strengths, going all the way back to his time in Gainesville, Florida, where he was nicknamed, "The Mayor."

"He gets to know people in a really authentic way," Lynch said. "I can't tell you how many times I was like, 'Ran, I need you to go find this out.' He'd always deliver because people connect with Ran."

When Carthon landed his first scouting job, there were three Black general managers (Ozzie Newsome, Baltimore Ravens; Rick Smith, Texans; Jerry Reese, Giants) in NFL history.

Now he's one of eight in the NFL.

"There have been plenty of men that have come before me that have laid this foundation," Carthon said. "It is paramount in my mind to do the work and be successful in order to leave the door open for other young Black men that are coming behind me."

Titans general manager Ran Carthon has made several key additions in Tennessee since taking over the role in January. George Walker IV/USA TODAY Network

CARTHON WAS TESTED immediately in his new role. The Titans entered the offseason with multiple holes to fill -- including retooling the offensive line, adding playmakers to an anemic offense and replacing free agents that went on to other teams -- with limited cap space.

Under Carthon's leadership, the Titans added low-cost starters for a franchise with approximately $14.4 million left of a possible $224.8 million salary cap for 2023.

"He's a guy that's motivated for the right reasons to do what he does best, evaluate football players," Miami Dolphins coach Mike McDaniel said of Carthon, who he knows from his days as 49ers offensive coordinator. "He has a great scope of what it takes for a team to win and all the different variables that are encompassed in that."

Carthon opened the line of communication with defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons' agent, Paul DeRousselle, about a contract extension soon after he got the job. Simmons had already made it clear after the 2022 season finale that he wanted a new deal to stay with the Titans and didn't want to play on the franchise tag.

"When I first met Ran, he told me I would be here in Tennessee," Simmons said. "I would say Ran kept his word."

The two parties kept the communication going through free agency and brokered a deal that made Simmons the highest-paid player at his position at the time with a four-year, $96 million extension through the 2027 season.

"[Negotiations were] collaborative and never combative," DeRousselle said. "We never got away from the purpose. We didn't negotiate through the media. We just did good, clean business."

Then the focus turned to the draft in April where the Titans held the No. 11 pick. Carthon said he woke up at 3 a.m. and struggled to go back to sleep one of the nights leading up to the draft because he wondered who would be there when the Titans were on the clock.

That No. 11 pick ended up being Northwestern offensive lineman Peter Skoronski, a player they thought would be gone.

Carthon was excited when they were put on the clock. He likened the moment to when a player scores their first touchdown and does a dance to celebrate before the coach tells him to act like he's been there before.

"I told Ran, you never forget your first [pick]," Titans coach Mike Vrabel said.

The Titans still needed to address the wide receiver position after finishing 30th in receiving yards last season. Carthon decided to play the long game, trusting his belief an option would open as teams continued to churn their rosters.

Then the Arizona Cardinals released two-time All-Pro receiver DeAndre Hopkins in late May. Tennessee moved in quickly by hosting Hopkins on his first free agent visit in June. As Hopkins waited to make his decision, Carthon had to free up cash.

Five-time captain Kevin Byard was asked to take a pay cut earlier in the offseason but he refused. Carthon and the Titans went back to Byard in July about restructuring his deal.

This time it was a success.

The Titans were able to sign Hopkins to a two-year deal worth $26 million a little over a month after they first brought him to Nashville.

Carthon breathed a sigh of relief before speaking to the media on Day 1 of training camp. He called the process of signing Hopkins "a long date."

The ever evolving roster construction process came to an end as the Titans released their initial 53-man roster. There's still more work to be done but after seven months into the job, Carthon is comfortable with the group he has in place.

"I'm in a lucky spot to come into a place that's pretty much established and has a culture." Carthon said. "Myself, [assistant general managers] Chad [Brinker] and [Anthony Robinson], we get to come in and add our flavor, bring it all together. It's a collaborative effort."

Ran Carthon became the Tennessee Titan franchise's 14th general manager in January.

Previously, he served for two seasons as director of player personnel with the 49ers after handling five seasons as the director of pro personnel in San Francisco.

Ran, 42, was one of seven candidates to interview for the position with the Titans. "I want us to build the best team possible – a competitive, sound football team that Nashville and other surrounding areas are proud of," he says.

"We're excited to add Ran to our organization," Titans Controlling Owner Amy Adams Strunk states. "He brings a variety of valuable experiences to our team. I was impressed with his natural leadership qualities and ability to connect with people. With talent evaluation being critical to this role, the roster they've built in San Francisco stands out. He played an important role there constructing one of our league's best teams."

Ran's father, Maurice, also played in the NFL with the New York Giants and Indianapolis Colts.

Ran himself played running back for University of Florida and signed as an undrafted free agent with the Indianapolis Colts in 2004. He played for three NFL seasons with the Colts and Detroit Lions.

This new Titans' leader says he doesn't miss playing as much as he misses locker room camaraderie. "In my new role, I have to leave the locker room more to the guys and let it be their personal space."

So far, he says one of the toughest parts of his new job is being away from his family. "In terms of the job, I've been doing this for a while, but I knew things would come up that I had no experience with. In those cases, you lean on your mentors and people who've been there."

Football executives and former players Martin Mayhew and John Lynch Jr. are a couple of the advisers with whom Ran says he's fortunately collaborated.

Regarding Ran's main considerations heading into the NFL draft as a first-year general manager, he says, "The cool thing about this experience was having a partner in Mike Vrabel. He's done it all before. Of course, there was pressure because this was my first time facilitating an NFL Draft as a general manager, but I had a lot of experience around me to lean on and bounce ideas off of."

We also had to just trust our board, and not allow outside circumstances dictate our plan. I think we did that well."

Ran says he's looking forward to exploring Nashville. "I've found a few places I already frequent, so I'm excited to keep growing that list."

Regarding hobbies, Ran quips, "If you ask my wife, she'll tell you I have no hobbies. I have no life outside of my family and football. I do like music, though. I'm not musically inclined myself, but I appreciate it."

He says he relishes being around creators, so when he goes to Miami in the summers, he joins studio artists to just watch them create their music. "I'm looking for a studio in Nashville to engage with and spend time drawing inspiration from artists and musicians," he announces.

Ran's charitable interests lie in taking action on things that touch his heart. "I always want to lend a hand and show up for things that make an impact," he adds.

A good example of Ran's idea of support is the "Fatherhood Ticket Program" he created in Atlanta, which gives two tickets and two sideline passes to a deserving father.

"Usually kids write-in and tell us why their dad deserves it. We hear those stories about single parent households where dad wasn't really involved, but you rarely hear the stories about where dad was involved and played a big role. It's a great way to celebrate the men who are stepping up to fill such an important role in a kid's life. I definitely want to bring the Fatherhood Ticket Program to Nashville. I think the community will love it," he says.

Regarding how his family's brood is getting acclimated, he says, "Our daughter is going off to college this year. I also have an assistant general manager in my house. My oldest son, at 6 years old, critiques every signing we do and every draft pick. My kids are amazing. I love spending time with them. Our house is always busy, and no one is short on opinions."

He shares that he met his wife, Heaven, during college in a Haitian-Creole class.

Ran's Father's Day tradition? "It's the best. I like to just chill out for the day. The kids will bring me breakfast and then I just have a relaxing day for myself."

FROM THE SENIOR BOWL: TITANS GM RAN CARTHON LIVING HIS CHILDHOOD DREAM WHILE KEEPING HIS FOCUS ON THE "MAIN THING"

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JANUARY 31, 2023

MOBILE, Ala. – Way back in middle school, Ran Carthon did his homework leading up to NFL drafts.

The son of an NFL player, Carthon used to go to the local convenience stores and buy all the magazines – Athlon Sports, Street & Smith, etc. He researched the prospects, and the teams.

And then on draft nights, he'd get out a legal pad and try to predict the NFL landing spots for players.

"I didn't know what I was doing at the time," a smiling Carthon said from the Senior Bowl on Tuesday. "I didn't realize there was a career based on this when I was doing it. Back then, it was just something I liked doing. I think I recorded every draft from '95 or '96 up until the year I came out in '04."

Later, after his own college and NFL playing career, Carthon began taking things even more seriously. When he went back to the University of Florida to get his degree, he got his big break.

He credits former Gators coach Urban Meyer for giving him a chance to help out with the staff, and after one Florida Pro Day, he met with some NFL scouts, and he began to make connections.

All of that helped lead Carthon to where he is today – general manager of the Tennessee Titans.

On Tuesday, Carthon was on hand for his first Senior Bowl as a GM.

The Titans hire Carthon, who spent the previous six seasons with the 49ers and prior to that worked with the Rams and Falcons, two weeks ago.

His world has been a whirlwind since.

Here at the Mobile Convention Center and at Hancock Whitney Stadium on the campus at the University of South Alabama, it's included a lot of handshakes and hugs from those wishing him congratulations.

"I think it goes back to the moment the news broke," Carthon said. "From the moment the news broke to the time I boarded my flight back to San Jose – a matter of maybe an hour-and-a-half – when I got on the plane, I had 600 text messages. It's just a testament to the relationships I've build around the league. Everyone knows my nature is to be low-key, off the grid. One of my buddies from another team told me: Those days are over. But I know it's coming from a good place. People are generally happy for me and happy for me to get this opportunity and it's been coming from guys I look up to in the industry to guys I have mentored.

"It has been great, but you'll hear me say constantly: I just want to keep the main thing the main thing. So being out here on the football field, being around talent, being around the staff, that is getting back to the main thing for me."

Carthon, who spent the previous two seasons as Director of Player Personnel for the 49ers, had traveled to Mobile in the past to scout players.

On Tuesday, Carthon said he feels like he's made great progress in getting more familiar and comfortable, and on the same page, with those he's now working with, from head coach Mike Vrabel and members of the team's scouting staff, who also made the trip here from Nashville.

He's also learning the prospects better as well.

So, what's Carthon looking for in future Titans?

"From a physical attributes standpoint, you want guys that are tough and physical," Carthon said. "But more than anything you want guys that love football. You want guys who are passionate about it, that football is life, and that is what they live for – they live to play this game.

"I'll give you an example: Fred Warner, who is one of the elite players in our league, he is never not in the building. And even after he got paid, he is never not in the (49ers) building. We have guys like that who are currently on our team. We just want to add more guys like that."

Carthon, who has spent time with prospects in interviews, is quick to point out he's just part of the team, despite his big title.

He's made that clear at Saint Thomas Sports Park from the day controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk hired him to replace Jon Robinson.

"One of the young guys in the office said to me: I'm excited to work for you," Carthon said. "And I stopped him and said, 'No, work with.' We are in this together. I am in this position, yes, and I embrace it. But this is a collective thing. I don't have all the answers and I am not going to always be right just because of the title I have. It is going to be collaborative – I want to hear what the scouts have to say. They have the most exposure to (the players), so I want these guys to feel very much a part of it. We're going to be a partnership."

After this week's Senior Bowl, the Titans will continue the work leading up to April's NFL Draft. The NFL Combine in Indianapolis is a month away, and Pro Days are on the horizon.

The team has some tough decisions to make regarding current players, and new additions, in free agency.

Carthon wants to do his part to help take the Titans to the next level.

"It has been a good team here, a competitive team, a winning team," Carthon said. "I have been brought in to help elevate that and bring another component to it. So, I am here to partner with Mike and partner with Ms. Amy and work with these scouts and do our part in taking the Tennessee Titans to the next step."

TITANS' 1ST BLACK GM SAYS HE STANDS ON 'SHOULDERS OF GIANTS'

BY TERESA M. WALKER
ASSOCIATED PRESS
JANUARY 20, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ran Carthon looked up, pausing before answering a question his aunt warned would come.

He is the first Black general manager in the history of the Tennessee Titans, a franchise founded in 1960 as the then-Houston Oilers in the original American Football League.

“I understand I’m standing on the shoulders of giants, and there have been plenty of men that have come before me that have laid this foundation that allowed me to be in this spot,” Carthon said Friday at his introductory news conference.

Carthon, who turns 42 in February, has been too busy putting himself in this position and hadn’t had time to contemplate the history of the moment. Not after a whirlwind week of interviews, a wild-card playoff victory with the San Francisco 49ers and accepting his new job.

Becoming an NFL GM had been Carthon's only goal after he went from undrafted rookie running back out of Florida to a brief playing career before front-office jobs in Atlanta and with the Rams and the 49ers.

“It’s paramount in my mind to do the work and be successful to leave the door open for other Black men that are coming behind me because there are a lot of talented young Black men who can do the job,” Carthon said. “They just need the opportunity.”

The Titans made Carthon the sixth person of color among the past eight GMs hired, and he now is the NFL's eighth Black general manager and ninth person of color overall.

The NFL has held two accelerator programs since late May to promote more minority candidates for front-office jobs. Carthon said he met Titans controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk and Burke Nihill, the team's president and CEO, during the owners' winter meetings in December.

For Strunk, the hiring moved quickly starting Jan. 12. The Titans interviewed two internal candidates, and Arizona hired their director of player personnel, Monti Ossenfort, on Monday.

Carthon interviewed with the Titans on Jan. 13 in Nashville, flew back for the 49ers' wild-card win over Seattle, then returned to Nashville for a second interview Tuesday. He learned he was being offered the job while at the airport.

He replaces Jon Robinson, fired Dec. 6 in his seventh season in the midst of what wound up a seven-game skid as Tennessee finished 7-10. The Titans missed a third straight AFC South title with a loss in the regular season finale in Jacksonville.

Strunk said Carthon stood out as the clear choice with his background as a former player who grew up around the game. Carthon's father, Maurice, not only played in the NFL but also coached with seven different teams.

The Titans also liked Carthon's record of success evaluating talent as a pro scout for the Atlanta Falcons starting in 2008, as director of pro personnel for the Rams between 2012 and 2016 and his last six seasons with the 49ers, the last two as director of player personnel.

“We called as many potential references as we could find to learn more about Ran as a person, talent evaluator and leader,” Strunk said. “Whether current and former colleagues, the scouting community, the former teammates, the feedback was unanimous. Ran is exceptional.”

Carthon, who also interviewed last year for general manager jobs with Chicago and the New York Giants, said his vision for the franchise includes lifting trophies and holding parades in Nashville. Strunk said she has those same high expectations despite how this last season ended.

“We have some big questions to answer offseason, but I’m excited for what the future brings,” she said.

The Titans are projected to be $23.3 million over the 2023 salary cap by Spotrac.com. Both quarterback Ryan Tannehill and two-time NFL rushing champ Derrick Henry, who finished second in the league in rushing in 2022, are going into the final seasons of their current contracts.

Two-time Pro Bowl defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons has made clear he wants an extension. The Titans also hold the No. 11 overall pick in the April draft.

Carthon and coach Mike Vrabel, 48-34 in his five seasons in Tennessee, both emphasized their plans to collaborate on roster building down to position coaches working with scouts to identify talent.

“We got a lot of work to do,” Vrabel said. “We’re excited to get to work on that.”

AFTER A GRAND ENTRANCE, NEW TITANS
GM RAN CARTHON READY TO GET TO WORK

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JANUARY 19, 2023

NASHVILLE — Ran Carthon made a memorable entrance on his first day on the job.

After being named general manager of the Titans earlier in the week, Carthon received a rousing, celebratory welcome to Saint Thomas Sports Park when he walked through the doors on Thursday afternoon.

"I've never had a party this big," Carthon said as he flashed a big smile.

Titans controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk then officially introduced Carthon, formerly director of player personnel with the San Francisco 49ers, to employees of the team.

Carthon, accompanied by his wife and children, seemed to be taken by surprise by the gathering, as members of the organization filled the lobby and lined the staircases of the recently renovated MetroCenter facility.

Carthon then addressed the crowd, and said he's ready to get to work.

"We are all here, rowing in the same direction," Carthon said, "and we all want to hoist the Lombardi (Trophy) one day. All of us play a part in that. So, I am here to do the work. I am willing to do the work. And I look forward to working with everybody."

Strunk, who led interviews with seven candidates since the end of the 2022 season, informed Carthon earlier this week he'd been chosen as the team's next GM.

"How do you feel about being the Titans general manager?," Strunk asked Carthon when delivering the news. "Well, we'd love to have you."

Carthon flew to California after his second interview in Nashville, and he returned with his family on Thursday.

After making a grand entrance, Carthon made the rounds in the building, going from the locker room to the team's indoor practice facility to the C.O. Brocato Draft room to his new office.

"The welcome, walking in," Carthon said. "It just makes everything that I thought when I met (for the interview) real, and it confirms this is a great place, and we're going to do some great things together here. I am excited."

Carthon will be introduced to Nashville media at his introductory press conference at noon Friday at STSP.

PERSEVERANCE PAYS OFF: TITANS DB SHYHEIM
CARTER SHED TEARS OF JOY AFTER MAKING HIS LONG-AWAITED NFL DEBUT

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
OCTOBER 5, 2023

NASHVILLE – Shyheim Carter admits his emotions got the best of him on Sunday.

But who could blame him?

After four teams, after three seasons on and off practice squads, and after being waived eight times in his career, the Titans defensive back made his NFL debut on Sunday at Nissan Stadium against the Bengals.

Carter took a moment to let it soak in.

"A few tears were shed," Carter said with a smile. "It was so surreal. ... Honestly, just watching God work, seeing Him unfold everything. It was able to bring me tears of joy and put a big smile on my face."

Carter played 11 snaps at safety against the Bengals, and 11 more on special teams, where he was credited with a tackle.

Carter is currently a member of the team's practice squad, but he was a gameday elevation for the Cincinnati game.

Carter initially joined the NFL in 2020 as an undrafted free agent with the New York Jets. He's spent time on practice squads with the Jets, Falcons, Texans and Titans over the past four seasons. He's been with the Titans since the end of the 2021 season, but he's been on and off the practice squad during that stretch.

Carter never gave up, which is why his coaches and teammates were so happy for him on Sunday.

"All the credit goes to him, the time and perseverance," Titans safeties coach Scott Booker said of Carter.

"He's a guy who is always very positive in meetings, a professional as far as coming and working and learning multiple positions. Myself, his teammates, everybody was really happy to see him out there. It was a very big deal for him, personally, to be out there, and it was great to see as his coach."

Titans cornerback Sean Murphy-Bunting said he talked to Carter about his accomplishment before the game. Carter was officially elevated on Saturday, and he reverted to the practice squad after the game.

"I didn't realize the journey he went through," Murphy-Bunting said. "He showed me all the teams (he's been with). ... I felt excited for him, because I know how hard he works day in and day out. ... He shows up to work like he's starting every day. It's definitely a great feeling, a grateful feeling."

Carter was a star in both high school and college.

At Kentwood (La.) High School, where he played both quarterback and cornerback, he was named class 1A Offensive MVP by the Louisiana Sports Writers Association and the Louisiana Football Coaches Association in 2014 and 2015. As a senior, recorded 57 tackles and five interceptions, while adding 2,443 passing yards, 1,648 rushing yards and 30 total touchdowns on offense.

In four seasons at the University of Alabama, Carter appeared in 50 games with 23 starts and tallied 101 tackles, six tackles for loss, three interceptions with two returned for touchdowns, 21 passes defended and two forced fumbles.

Prior to being signed by the Texans in 2021, after previous practice squad stints with the Jets and Falcons, Carter spent the spring working as a graduate assistant at Alabama under his former head coach, Nick Saban.

"I think Shyheim Carter would fit in probably one of the top two or three players on the team from a knowledge standpoint," Saban said prior to Carter's last season at Alabama. "He can answer every question in a meeting about every position...I think that's what creates a lot of diversity for him as a player, to be able to play multiple positions because he's very smart and it means something to him."

Carter has proven that with the Titans.

After getting his first taste of regular season action on Sunday – before then his game action came in the preseason – Carter is as hungry as ever.

His plan: Keep working.

"I come in (every day) not knowing if I'm going to be elevated, if I'm going to be on the practice squad, or if I'm going to be released," Carter said. "I come in with the mindset that I'm going to be evaluated every day, in everything I do. I just keep my head down and work."

"It was a great experience (on Sunday), a great opportunity. For it to be my NFL debut, it was fun. ... I just want to do whatever I can to create a role, and keep going."

TITANS LONG SNAPPER
MORGAN COX
NOMINATED FOR ART
ROONEY SPORTSMANSHIP AWARD

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
NOVEMBER 22, 2023

NASHVILLE – Titans long snapper Morgan Cox has been nominated for the Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award.

The award is presented each year to an NFL player who best demonstrates the qualities of on-field sportsmanship, including fair play, respect for the game and opponents, and integrity in competition.

On Wednesday, the NFL announced the 32 player nominees for the ninth annual award. Each NFL team nominated one of its players for the award, which recognizes players around the league who exemplify outstanding sportsmanship on the field.

Created in 2014, the award honors the late founding owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Pro Football Hall of Famer Art Rooney Sr.

Cox, who played at the University of Tennessee, joined the Titans in 2021 after playing 11 seasons with the Baltimore Ravens. The Collierville, Tenn., native has been named to five Pro Bowls, and he's one of the team's captains this season.

After every game, Cox identifies a player or two from the opposing team's special teams unit, and he offers words of encouragement and support, while praising them for their work and commitment.

Cox also regularly brings together the two teams in postgame for an on-field prayer.

"I could not be more excited and prouder to hear that Morgan has been nominated for the Art Rooney award," Titans special teams coordinator Craig Aukerman said. "Morgan has demonstrated excellence in competition and sportsmanship both on and off the field. His respect of the game and to his opponents is second to none. As a team captain, Morgan's leadership qualities and willingness to mentor younger players have helped them achieve a high level of integrity to succeed in the National Football League."

A panel of former players from the NFL Legends Community — Warrick Dunn, 2014 Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award recipient Larry Fitzgerald, Pro Football Hall of Famer Curtis Martin and Leonard Wheeler — will select eight finalists (four in the AFC and four in the NFC) from the 32 nominees.

The eight finalists will be listed on the Pro Bowl ballot under the NFL Sportsmanship Award category when players vote in December.

"Sportsmanship is the core of the game, the vanguard of public confidence, the keeper of game integrity," said Troy Vincent, NFL executive vice president of football operations. "These Rooney Sportsmanship Award nominees exemplify the spirit of fair play and the values of respect, integrity, commitment to team and resiliency at the highest level of competition."

The winner of the Art Rooney Sportsmanship Award is determined by a vote of current NFL players. From the eight finalists, each team's players will submit a consensus vote of their choice for the winner. As in Pro Bowl voting, a team cannot vote for its own player.

The winner will be announced as part of NFL Honors. He will receive a $25,000 donation from the NFL Foundation to a charity of his choice.

FROM THE PRO BOWL: LONG SNAPPER MORGAN
COX REFLECTS ON LIFE'S BLESSINGS, AND HIS JOURNEY TO THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT

TENNESSEETITANS.COM

FEBRUARY 2, 2023

LAS VEGAS – Morgan Cox has experienced a lot during his 13-year playing career.

The Titans long snapper has played in a Super Bowl and been named to five Pro Bowls. He's played in over 200 career games, in stadiums all over the country. He's made lifelong friends, and countless memories.

As Cox took a helicopter ride on Thursday morning into the Grand Canyon, over Lake Mead and the Hoover Dam, and then over the Las Vegas strip, Cox reflected on his journey, and the blessings that have come with it.

"I've seen God's hands on a lot of things as I kind of reflect on my career," Cox said. "I am grateful for the opportunities I have been given, and the unique experiences I have gotten to have because of this game."

Cox is in Las Vegas for the 2023 Pro Bowl Games. It's his first trip as a Titan after being named a Pro Bowler on four earlier occasions during his playing days with the Ravens, where he won a Super Bowl ring during the 2012 season.

Cox, who just finished his second season in Tennessee, admits this one is special. A Collierville native who played at the University of Tennessee, Cox is representing his home state – and the team he grew up cheering for as a youngster.

While overlooking the Las Vegas Strip on Thursday, Cox told a story about the time he traveled to a Titans game his senior year in high school with his buddies.

They took his mom's Suburban, and they painted "Titans" on it. They also painted letters on their chests, spelling out T-I-T-A-N-S.

"It was a memorable trip," Cox said with a smile.

Long before that, Cox remembers watching the Titans play in Super Bowl XXXIV, at his aunt and uncle's house in Memphis. The Titans-Rams game was projected on a bed sheet.

"I remember (Kevin) Dyson stretching out the ball," Cox said, "and being heartbroken."

Cox never dreamed he'd end up playing in the NFL himself.

It started with a childhood competition, and it's continued because of a lot of hard work.

As an 11-year-old, Cox went out for a football team called the 'Buccaneers' in the Collierville Youth Athletic Association. The coach was his dentist, Bill Burriss.

On the first day of practice, Burriss brought all the players up and said they needed to fill the position of 'long snapper'. Everyone got in line, and they all got a chance to snap.

"My first shot at it was really pretty bad," Cox recalled. "So, they moved onto the next person."

But Cox said his father, who happened to be at practice that day, encouraged him to try it again, so he went to the side and practiced. He started to get the hang of it, and he got back in line.

The following year he was back in the mix, as a seventh grader, for the long snapping position at Evangelical Christian School.

"Over time," Cox said, "I got better and better."

Cox played in high school at ECS, got recruited by the University of Tennessee, and after paying his dues for a few years at the school – and learning from FG snapper Adam Miles and punt snapper Ryan West – he got his chance.

Cox ended up playing in 38 games in three seasons at Tennessee, and was then signed by the Ravens as an undrafted free agent in 2010.

As they say, the rest is history.

Cox is humbled to be at the Pro Bowl again.

"It's an honor for me to be here, being a part of the Titans now," Cox said. "To be in my 13th year and to be able to experience the Pro Bowl again, it is truly an amazing honor and tough to put into words what it means to me."

Along the way, Cox said the backing from family and friends has made it even more special.

"The support from my home state has been amazing," he said. "No shortage of ticket requests, but that's been great as well. It's awesome to be able to play in front of people I've been around my whole life. I grew up in Memphis, went to school in Knoxville and everybody converging in Nashville is pretty cool."

Cox plans to enjoy the events surrounding the Pro Bowl Games this week.

He's scheduled to take part in a "Kick-Tac-Toe" event, and has other things planned as well.

"This isn't my kind of town to be honest," he said. "I'm a big saver, not much of a spender."

As he looks ahead, Cox plans to keep working to sharpen his craft.

Even after 13 years, he believes there's always room for improvement.

"I've put in a lot of time and work in kind of honing the craft," he said. "I can never say I have perfected it. I don't think there is such a thing. You're constantly want to chase perfection and find ways to improve your game, whether it be snapping, blocking, covering. I can always improve."

Cox is already looking forward to Year 14.

He's hoping it will be with the Titans.

"God has a plan, and I certainly hope to be back with the Titans next year," he said. "I am going to play as long as I possibly can. I love what I get to do, and I am grateful. I feel like I am still playing at a high level, and I am going to keep playing as long as I can."

TITANS AGREE TO TERMS WITH FORMER EAGLES TACKLE ANDRE DILLARD

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MARCH 20, 2023

NASHVILLE – The Titans have officially agreed to terms with former Eagles tackle Andre Dillard.

Dillard, selected with the 22nd overall pick in the 2019 NFL Draft, joins an offensive line in Tennessee that's currently under construction.

Dillard (6-5, 315) has played in 43 games over four seasons with the Eagles, with nine starts. Dillard started four games in 2019 and five games in 2021, but he was sidelined for all of the 2020 season because of a biceps tear.

In college, Dillard appeared in 42 career games at Washington State, including starts at left tackle in each of his last 39 contests. He was a two-time All-Pac-12 honoree who started all 13 games as a senior in 2018, when he allowed just one sack and 13 pressures in 722 pass-blocking snaps while receiving All-America honors as well as first-team All-Pac-12 recognition.

The Titans recently released left tackle Taylor Lewan and center Ben Jones, and guard Nate Davis reached a deal with the Chicago Bears.

LEBANON'S COLTON DOWELL ALL SMILES AS HE BEGINS HIS NFL JOURNEY WITH THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM

MAY 16, 2023

NASHVILLE – Colton Dowell took his rookie mishap in stride.

While working on a footwork drill over the weekend, the Titans receiver stumbled and fell to the ground during the team's rookie minicamp.

It happened right in front of a big group of reporters on hand to cover the debut of the team's first-year players – and also, directly in front of Titans coach Mike Vrabel.

"My body was moving faster than my mind," Dowell said with a smile. "I had a lot of adrenalin going. ... I'd be lying if I said that was the first time I've ever done that, and I'm sure that's not going to be the last time.

"But it's a great thing I can look at it and know I'm not where I need to be at yet. And I can just keep getting better."

So, what did his new head coach say?

"Coach Vrabel, he just kind of looked at me and just moved on," Dowell said, smiling even bigger. "He knows it happens – I am a rookie. So, it is what it is."

Dowell, a seventh-round draft pick of the team, settled in and made some plays – including some nice catches – over the weekend.

The 6-foot-3, 212-pounder sure looked the part as he lined up across from defenders, and in a group of other receivers added by the team since the draft. Two others in his position group over the weekend were undrafted free agents, while two others were in town for a tryout.

The Titans saw something in Dowell that led the team to pick him in the draft, and on Monday he'll join the veterans on the field for the first time in the offseason program. Organized team activities start next week.

This start of this experience is special for Dowell, who grew up in Lebanon, Tennessee, attended Wilson Central High School, and played at Tennessee-Martin.

Growing up, Dowell attended training camp practices at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park, and he went to Titans games at Nissan Stadium.

Over the weekend he put in a Titans helmet for the first time.

"I'd like to say he'd be happy," Dowell responded when asked what a younger version of himself would be thinking right now. "And he'd realize this is a dream come true. This is just the start, and I want to continue to make that younger self happy as I keep going."

Dowell said the support from those back home has been great.

"It's been awesome," he said. "I've said it a couple of times, but when you are wanted and you are supported by people you don't even know, it is really great, and I cherish that. It is really a blessing to have that in my life right now because I know as quick as it came it can leave, so I am thankful for that and really enjoying it."

Dowell smiled when asked if he was able to commute from home.

He's actually staying at a nearby hotel with the team's other rookies, rooming with quarterback Will Levis.

Dowell is beginning his new life, as a pro.

"It's been awesome," Dowell said. "I've had a really good time being able to dive completely into football, and not have to worry about classes or anything else coming up. I don't even have to worry about where I am going to eat at – we eat right in there (pointing inside), so it is really awesome to see the level of professionalism that can come with playing this game. I've had a great time."

UNPACKING THE 'UPSIDE' TENNESSEE TITANS HOPE TO FIND IN DRAFT PICK JAELYN DUNCAN

BY PAUL SKRBINA
THE TENNESSEAN
APRIL 30, 2023

The weight of the wait didn't weigh Jaelyn Duncan down.

Duncan, the Tennessee Titans' sixth-round pick in the 2023 NFL Draft, has a history of waiting.

Duncan didn't start playing football until he was 14 years old.

For the next four of five years, the 6-foot-6, 306-pound tackle who played at the University of Maryland, had little idea about what he was doing.

"It probably took me until my redshirt freshman year, maybe even a year after that," Duncan said. "Throughout high school I was just out there moving people and just being a bigger body, not really using a lot of techniques. So when I got to college, that was one of the main focuses.

"It probably took me until my redshirt freshman year, maybe even a year after that."

Duncan was a three-time All-Big Ten honorable mention selection in five seasons with Maryland, where he allowed 58 quarterback hurries, 15 quarterback hits and 19 sacks in 2,551 snaps spanning 43 games, including 39 starts. He also was selected to play in the East-West Shrine Bowl.

He knows the learning will be accelerated come training camp.

"Just technique things, hand timing, punch timing, hand placement, just keeping great balance, stuff like that," Duncan said of areas where he needs to improve. "You don't want to lean and stuff. Just being more consistent and finishing, just continuing to drive and get it done every play."

Duncan's relationship with football began late, he said, because "some life stuff was going on. It wasn't the right circumstances at a young age."

Duncan won't be walking into completely unfamiliar company when he joins the Titans. He and Titans first-round pick Peter Skoronski, who faced off in the Big Ten, worked out together and shared the same trainer. He also will reconnect with Titans tight end Chigoziem Okonkwo and defensive tackle Sam Okuayinonu, with whom he played at Maryland.

"He's a guy we envision having a ton of upside," Titans general manager Ran Carthon said. "He's really, really athletic. He has some high-end traits we'd love to work with and develop. We look forward to working with him."

The weight of the wait of being picked didn't discourage Duncan, even though he said he thought he would have been picked Friday during the second or third round.

"You just sit around the house, wait for your phone to ring," he said. "I've been a little bit anxious and a little bit nervous, but God has a plan, so I've just been waiting."

He had three meetings with the Titans before the draft, including one at the combine and one at the Senior Bowl.

His next stop will be rookie minicamp, which for Duncan, can't come soon enough.

DOUBT TENNESSEE TITANS' CALEB FARLEY AT YOUR OWN RISK. HIS MOTIVATION COMES FROM LATE MOTHER

BY GEORGE ROBINSON
THE TENNESSEAN
APRIL 30, 2021

It doesn't take long to realize the kind of player the Tennessee Titans selected with the 22nd pick in the 2021 NFL Draft on Thursday.

Caleb Farley isn't interested in talking about the injuries he has suffered, including his two back surgeries and a knee injury before college. His recent positive COVID-19 test result is of no mind, and his decision to opt out of the 2020 college football season at Virginia Tech has already been discussed ad nauseam.

Farley is a Titan. And that's enough for him.

Would have been enough for his late mother, too.

"I was telling my mother I was going to be a first-round draft pick when I was like 7 years old," he said. "I hope she's smiling down on me from the sky."

Any physical obstacles Farley has faced through football pale in comparison to the loss of his mother, Robin, to breast cancer in 2018.

The memories of conversations he had with her as a child are still fresh, and his thoughts drifted to her when the Hickory, North Carolina, native heard his name called Thursday.

"She always believed in me," he said.

Robin was diagnosed with cancer in 2009 and endured two years of chemotherapy and radiation. For a while it looked like she had beaten the disease. But the cancer returned aggressively and invaded her bones.

"After some time it started to wear on her," Caleb's father, Robert Farley, told The Tennessean. "I think Caleb accepted what happened because he knew that his mother had faithfully lived the life she wanted to live. She didn't die in regret."

Robin died without seeing her son play college football.

She attended every game from the time he began playing little league at 7 through his high school career at Maiden High School in North Carolina, where he starred as a quarterback.

Caleb tore the ACL and MCL ligaments in one of his knees prior to arriving at Virginia Tech in 2017. He took a redshirt his first year on campus, and was moved to wide receiver. Months later, in January 2018, Robin died with her family, including Caleb, by her side.

"He never once thought about not playing football after his mother's death," Robert said. "He's always been committed to it. His mom encouraged that commitment. I mean it was difficult on all of us and it took some time to adjust but Caleb pours himself into football. He loves it that much."

Football is Caleb's love, but family has been the foundation. It's the reason why he decided to opt out last fall despite coming off a 2019 year in which he led the ACC in passes defended (16) and finished with four interceptions as a converted cornerback.

It was a risky move. He was the first high-profile college football player to make that decision, and some questioned whether it would hurt his rising draft stock.

"Yeah, it's just frustrating," Farley said about having to answer questions about his health. "It gets to the point where you want a team to draft you, that believes in you, and if you don't believe in me, then play against me."

"Caleb opted out because of his concern with COVID," Robert said. "It was as simple as that. It had nothing to do with his injuries. He wasn't hurt. You have to understand, we were still learning about the short- and long-term effects of this virus. He didn't want to risk his health or possibly the health of his family members."

Caleb maintained a strength and conditioning schedule last fall. Despite not seeing the field in 2020, his instincts and ability in man coverage were enough to convince NFL scouts. The Titans felt his 6-foot-2, 207-pound frame and athletic skillset at cornerback — a position of need — were too good to pass up.

"He's long and I think (man coverage) is something they did a lot of at Virginia Tech," Titans coach Mike Vrabel said. "Those guys were manned up outside without a whole lot of help. He's coming from a very aggressive scheme that puts a lot of pressure on those guys on the outside."

Farley was invited to attend the draft in Cleveland on Thursday, but a positive COVID-19 test result earlier in the week prevented him from attending.

Farley was tested again Thursday and that result came back negative, he said. But the questions about his health remain. And so will the memories of his late mother, and the motivation she gave him to overcome any obstacles en route to the NFL.

"When coach called me to tell me I was going to be a Tennessee Titans, the first thing out of my mouth was 'When can I get the playbook?'," Caleb said. "I'm extremely excited to get back on the field and rep these colors."

WHAT I'VE LEARNED*BY PETER KING*NBC SPORTS*NOVEMBER 12, 2023

Tennessee kicker Nick Folk, 39, is on an all-time streak for aging kickers—for all kickers, really. Since his age-36 season in 2020, Folk has made 91.3 percent of his field goals (115 of 126), including all 65 from inside of 40 yards. The one recent kicker in the Hall of Fame, Morten Anderson, made 79 percent of his field goals from age 36 to 39; the one looming Hall of Famer, Adam Vinatieri, hit 85.4 percent of his kicks in the same four-year span. Only three much younger kickers—Younghoe Koo, Matt Gay and Daniel Carlson—have been more accurate, and none by more than a percentage point, since 2020.

Folk's a fascinating story—out of football as recently as 2018—and when you understand his family background, you can better understand why he can step up to big kicks and be a relative flat-liner. What Nick Folk has learned about how to succeed as an NFL kicker:

“I think the biggest thing is perseverance. You look at my career and it's full of ups and downs. Keep focusing on the journey and persevere through the journey. Results come with the work. How much work are you willing to put in? Good example is what happened in New England. I had an appendectomy Thanksgiving week in 2019, then got re-signed. Next year they draft a kicker and I get COVID. I'm on the COVID practice squad, but I end up winning the job. On the practice squad again to start '21, kick that season. I signed a two-year deal in March of '22. They draft a kicker in April of '23. I get traded here to Tennessee. The whole time, all I can control is my kicking. That's what I do—focus on the journey. Perseverance is what I'd tell any young kicker.

“So many people in my family were in the medical field. They dealt with high levels of pressure. My mom, Dr. Lorraine Stiles, was a pediatrician. My grandfather, Dr. Quentin Stiles, was a cardiac surgeon, and he and his team pioneered a lot of the bypass stuff way back. He used to tell me stories of holding beating hearts in his hands. He's dealing with life and death on a daily basis. My grandmother, Dr. Claire Stiles, was an anesthesiologist, in the first or second class with women at Harvard Medical School. My aunt, Lorraine Stiles, was a high-risk OB-GYN. She told us a story once of a woman who wasn't feeling well and she examined her and figured out they had almost no time to save the baby and the mom, and they got rushed into surgery and it was almost bite down on a stick and here we go. They both made it, I believe.

“Pressure was part of their daily lives. I would say that's part of how I was raised by my family all the way from my parents to grandparents and everyone in between. They understood what life really is about. One of the things I've learned in my job is there's a lot greater things happening in the world. We're playing a game. It's very serious to everyone in the locker room, everyone on each team, but at the end of the day, there's a lot more important things out there.

“I just try to live in the moment with everything I do. When I'm out there trying to make a kick, the reality is we're just a big team and my job happens to be the guy kicking. I just try to do my job the same way the other 10 guys out there try to do their jobs. There's not really what I would call extra pressure on it. I've kicked a million footballs in my life. What's one more?

“[Kicking so well now], I think a lot of it is experience. You're able to glean information from good years, good kicks and bad years, bad kicks. I think my teammates know I've done everything I can to prepare so that I can perform at the best level for them.

“One other thing: The most important kick is the next kick.”

WHAT TO KNOW ABOUT TENNESSEE TITANS KICKER NICK FOLK

BY NICK GRAY
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
SEPTEMBER 17, 2023

Nick Folk began Year 16 of his NFL career on Sept. 10 when the Tennessee Titans faced the New Orleans Saints in Week 1.

Folk, 38, was acquired by the Titans from the New England Patriots for a 2025 seventh-round pick after the team ran through three kickers in the preseason and was looking for stability.

The ex-Arizona Wildcats player has stayed in the NFL with his dependability and consistency inside 50 yards.

Here's what to know about the Titans' new kicker:

Nick Folk goes from Dallas to the New York Jets

The Dallas Cowboys took Folk in the sixth round of the 2007 NFL Draft. He earned a Pro Bowl nod after a good rookie season (26 of 31 field goals made) that included the winning 53-yard field goal against the Buffalo Bills on Oct. 8 on "Monday Night Football."

Folk was even better the next season, making 20-of-22 field goals, including both attempts from more than 50 yards., but he missed 10 attempts in 2009. He was released before the end of the season, and signed with the Jets in 2010.

During the next seven seasons, Folk was good enough (making 82.2% of his field goal tries) to entrench himself as the Jets kicker. He is second on the Jets' all-time points scored list and is the most accurate kicker in team history (minimum 100 field goal attempts). He was released in a salary-cap move after the 2016 season.

Tampa Bay struggles

The lowest point of Folk's career came with Tampa Bay in 2017 — specifically, in a 19-14 loss to New England on "Thursday Night Football" on Oct. 5.

Folk replaced the struggling Roberto Aguayo to start the season but missed five field goals and two extra points in the first four games. Against the Patriots, Folk missed from 56, 49 and 31 yards in the five-point loss. He was placed on injured reserve shortly after the game, ending his season. The Bucs released Folk in the offseason.

Nick Folk's revival with the New England Patriots

Folk did not kick in the 2018 NFL season, spending time in the Alliance of American Football league in spring 2019.

He was not on any NFL team to start the 2019 season until October, when the Patriots signed him to replace the injured Stephen Gostkowski.

Folk kicked well enough: 14 of 17 on field goals and 12-for-12 on extra points, even after missing a week because of an appendectomy. The Patriots attempted to replace him with a younger option in Justin Rohwasser, but re-signed Folk before the 2020 season.

He was a consistent and accurate kicker for the Patriots during the next three seasons, making 89.3% of his field goal attempts and 91.3% of his extra point tries.

Nick Folk off to good start with Tennessee Titans

Folk was 5-for-5 on field goals, accounting for all of the Titans' points, in the 16-15 loss to the Saints. He already has gained the trust of the Titans coaching staff, as evidenced by a decision to attempt a 29-yard field goal with 2:20 left and Tennessee down by four points.

"Find a way to get (the ball) inside the 40 and kick a field goal to win the game, that's what I believed," Titans coach Mike Vrabel said about the decision to kick at that point.

Not the biggest leg at this stage of his career

Folk made a 50-yard field goal in Week 1, which may be toward the edge of his range at this point of his career.

He career long is 55 yards, made with the Jets in 2015. As accurate as he has been from inside 50 yards, don't expect the Titans to try many 60 yarders in 2023.

Folk also had one touchback in six kickoffs against the Saints, which is in line with his recent history. Last season with New England, he had three touchbacks on 33 kickoffs. He was never the full-time kickoff player for the Patriots, with 49 in four seasons.

STARTING ILB JACK GIBBENS MAKING THE MOST OF HIS SECOND CHANCE WITH THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
SEPTEMBER 21, 2023

NASHVILLE – Jack Gibbrens put in the work last offseason, doing everything he could to make the Titans roster out of training camp.

Yet when the Titans made their cuts at the end of last August, the Titans rookie linebacker was informed he was being waived by the team.

"After training camp, I got sent home," Gibbrens, who initially joined the team as an undrafted free agent in May 2022, recalled earlier this week. "So, I drove back to Texas."

A week later, however, Gibbrens got another call from the Titans.

The team wanted to sign him back to the practice squad, and that's where he spent most of the 2022 season, before ending the year on the team's 53-man roster.

"When I got back out here, I just kind of said: I am going to make the most of this opportunity," Gibbrens said. "They gave me a second chance and I just kind of took the mindset of: 'I have to get better every day. I have to fight to earn every day.' And that's the same mindset I am trying to have right now."

"Everybody is trying to earn their job every day; nothing is guaranteed in this league. So, just make the most of every opportunity you get every time you get to step on the field."

A year later, things are much different for Gibbrens.

Gibbrens isn't just on the team – he's one of the team's starters, at inside linebacker, next to Azeez Al-Shaair.

Gibbrens has recorded 11 tackles in the first two games, including a tackle for a loss. Gibbrens played in 45 of the team's 68 defensive snaps (66%) against the Chargers, along with 12 snaps on special teams.

Titans Coach Mike Vrabel, who nicknamed Gibbrens "Dr. Gibby" last year because of his smarts, said the inside backer has improved over the past year.

"I just think he's a tall, linear, lengthy player," Vrabel said of Gibbrens. "And I think he worked extremely hard to improve his lower body strength. (Gibbrens) was running just as well (this year), was running better than he ran last year. Just from a tracking standpoint. Not that that's the end all, be all. But, he knows what to do. He communicates. He's a good communicator and he's where he's supposed to be."

The 6-foot-3, 242-pound Gibbrens didn't take the easy path to the NFL.

Gibbrens played four seasons at Abilene Christian (2017-2020) before transferring to Minnesota, where he played his final college season in 2021. Gibbrens spent time working as a financial analysis intern while also serving as a teaching and research assistant in college.

But he never stopped chasing his NFL dream, even after going undrafted.

Gibbrens ended up appearing in five games with two starts a year ago for the Titans, registering 27 tackles, an interception, and a special teams stop. He spent 11 games on the team's practice squad in 2022.

Now, he wants to keep doing his part on the Titans.

"Coach Vrabel always preaches: It doesn't matter how you got here, it's just what you do when you get here," Gibbrens said. "It's been a journey, obviously last year getting cut, being on the practice squad and then finally getting an opportunity to play, and this year in a completely different role.

"I'm just trying to keep the same process that I've had since I got here: Just get better every day, keep my head down and keep working."

HOW TITANS HUBBARD DEALT WITH MONEY
ISSUES MENTAL HEALTH AND LOSING LOVED ONES

BY TURRON DAVENPORT
ESPN.COM
SEPTEMBER 30, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- For players in the NFL, signing a multimillion-dollar contract is one of the marquee signs of success. For Tennessee Titans right tackle Chris Hubbard, that moment finally came in 2018, when he signed a five-year, $36.5 million deal with the Cleveland Browns at the age of 26.

But the pressure he experienced off the football field because of it was nothing he had anticipated.

"I'm from the east side of Columbus, Georgia, man," Hubbard said. "I ain't never experienced that amount of pressure, never seen that type of money ever in my life. We lived check to check [growing up], tried to scrape up whatever we could to make ends meet."

With his new contract, Hubbard felt the need to help everyone, and he was soon fielding requests to help relatives, some he had never met, with money.

"They were coming out of the woodworks," he said.

The pressure of dealing with the responsibilities that came with financial success was so overwhelming that he contemplated quitting football.

As a result, Hubbard was "all over the place mentally." He lost 20 pounds. His calm, welcoming demeanor soured, causing him to have a different attitude toward people.

Hubbard started going to counseling to learn coping mechanisms that would help him get back on track. He also talked to his uncles, Ed King, who played for the New Orleans Saints, and Brentson Buckner, who played for the

Buckner praised his nephew and told him how others could look at him for motivation to do the same.

"You're not doing it for yourself, you're doing it for somebody after you," Buckner told him.

That was the direction Hubbard needed as he dealt with all the financial requests he was fielding.

"A lot of trials and tribulation, man," Hubbard said. "It took me probably like two years after all that stuff happened, I started to seek therapy and everything, and I started to feel like myself again."

Hubbard met with a counselor on the Browns' staff to help with the pressure he felt from signing the high-value contract. Cleveland was ahead of the curve in that it employed a team therapist before the NFL instituted a support system in 2019 for players to seek help with their mental health.

"Back then when I was playing, it was almost taboo to speak of [mental health issues] because we was considered these big, physical human beings and nothing can hurt us," Buckner said. "Now guys are more open to speaking about it and realizing it is a problem for anybody whether you're an athlete or not."

Hubbard's first recognized the importance of mental health in high school. One of his close friends died by suicide, which later inspired him to use his platform to advocate for mental health.

"He felt like he couldn't handle everything ... by himself," Hubbard said. "So that's one of my reasons why I wanted to bring awareness towards it."

Hubbard used his personal experience and platform to promote mental health awareness, especially during September, which is National Suicide Prevention Month.

During his freshman year in 2009 at UAB, tragedy struck again when he received a call one month into the season telling him his best friend, his grandfather, had died from prostate cancer.

"I struggled really hard, man, with that because he really taught me a lot about life and how to carry myself as a man and what I should stand on," Hubbard said.

Hubbard found himself in a dark place. He wasn't paying attention in class and ended up on academic probation. He wasn't getting enough sleep, and he turned to alcohol to cope with the pain.

During that time, Hubbard decided to take a short break and went back to Columbus to be around family. That was when Hubbard was first exposed to the value of talking through things instead of trying to work through them on his own.

"I now know who I need to talk to," Hubbard said. "To somebody like a therapist or just talk to someone to get it off my chest, man."

In this case, Hubbard turned to his mother, Angela Jones, who reminded him that UAB gave him a scholarship because the program believed in him.

"I told him he had a choice," Jones said. "Either come back where there was nothing for him in Columbus or change his mindset and make a name for himself."

She also stressed that Hubbard needed to get himself together and go back to school to serve his purpose.

"That just motivated me to take it to the next level, dive deep," Hubbard said. "To really just push myself to the limits."

Hubbard is now in his 11th season in the NFL with 52 starts under his belt -- including three with Tennessee (1-2).

Hubbard signed a one-year deal with the Titans three days after training camp started as a free agent and has become the veteran in the offensive line room. Coach Mike Vrabel called Hubbard a "great addition" and said he has "great respect for how he came in and earned a position."

Hubbard now also works with the National Alliance on Mental Illness, which raises awareness and provides support and education to communities across the country.

He has spoken to students at his former school (George Washington Carver High School) in Columbus, done many interviews on the topic and used the NFL's "My Cause, My Cleats" initiative to call attention to mental health.

"Chris always has great energy," right guard Daniel Brunskill said. "Always helping out young guys. He's a great leader and does a great job of bringing the same energy every day. He always comes into the building with a smile, and it starts there."

TITANS AGREE TO TERMS WITH VETERAN OL CHRIS HUBBARD

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 28, 2023

NASHVILLE – The Titans have agreed to terms with veteran offensive lineman Chris Hubbard.

Also, the Titans have waived offensive lineman James Empey.

Hubbard adds to the competition at right tackle, where the team is looking for depth and a starter to at least begin the season following Nicholas Petit-Frere's six-game suspension. Petit-Frere started 16 games for the Titans at right tackle in 2022.

A nine-year veteran, Hubbard has played in 85 career games, with 49 starts, while playing for the Steelers and Browns.

A 6-foot-4, 295-pounder, Hubbard has played the past five seasons in Cleveland. He played in four games in 2022, with one start. Hubbard played in college at Alabama-Birmingham, and he was signed as an undrafted free agent by the Steelers in 2014. Hubbard started 16 games at right tackle for the Browns in 2018, and he started 13 games at right tackle in 2019.

During the course of his career, Hubbard has started games at guard and tackle.

The Titans are back on the field Friday morning at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park for another training camp practice.

TITANS' FULTON HOPES CHANGE IN TRAINING MAKES SIGNIFICANT DIFFERENCE

BY JOHN GLENNON
NASHVILLE POST

AUGUST 8, 2023

Not long after suffering a major groin injury in last season's loss to Philadelphia, Titans cornerback Kristian Fulton made a decision: It was time to make a training change.

Instead of spending the 2023 offseason in Nashville, going through workouts and voluntary OTAs with many of his teammates, Fulton would follow a more solitary path, grinding through individual workouts with a hand-picked personal trainer in Miami.

It was a move that came with some risk: Titans coaches typically want as many players as possible — especially younger players — to train with the team during the offseason. Second, Fulton was heading into a contract year in 2023, meaning every decision made would impact his future finances.

The full results of Fulton's decision won't be evident until later this season, when we see how many games that Fulton — who's missed 20 of a possible 50 regular-season games over his three-year career — is able to play in 2023, not to mention how well he performs.

But the early returns in training camp are promising for Fulton, a second-round pick in the 2020 NFL Draft and a starter when healthy.

"I think he came back [for training camp] ready to go," Titans defensive coordinator Shane Bowen said. "I think this is probably the best shape he's been in since he's been here. He looks stronger, looks more physical, looks in condition.

"He's off to a great start right now. It's a big year for him. He knows that. We know that. So hopefully it continues."

The groin injury Fulton suffered last year, on a play that wound up being a touchdown pass to former Titans wide receiver A.J. Brown, kept him out of the team's next four games. He'd already missed two contests in 2022 with a hamstring injury. It was also a hamstring injury that sidelined him for four games in 2021, a knee injury that knocked him out of all but six games during his rookie season of 2020.

Throw in a shoulder surgery following the 2022 season and it's easy to see why Fulton figured it couldn't hurt to change his offseason approach heading into 2023. He added some muscle weight in the offseason — he's now up to 195 pounds — and said he began this year's camp feeling far better than he had heading into the 2022 camp.

"Yeah, I mean it was a lot, a big difference," Fulton, 24, said. "I came off surgery for my shoulder last year, so I wasn't really able to do anything physically on the field. I was able to do a little footwork, but I was still limited. Even when I was at OTAs, I was getting my weight back up from being sick last offseason.

"So that was the difference from last year to this year. Once you [find] the right trainer, you feel great. You come into confident and knowing your body, and the work you put in from your reps."

A healthy, confident Fulton could be a significant difference maker for the Titans.

The former LSU standout showed some signs of being a shutdown corner in 2021, when he made two interceptions, posted 11 pass break-ups and held opposing quarterbacks to a rating of 67.8 when throwing in his direction, per Pro Football Focus.

But Fulton took a step back in 2022, when he surrendered five touchdown passes and allowed opposing quarterbacks to post a 102.4 rating when throwing in his direction.

Bowen said one of the keys to Fulton regaining his previous level is maintaining more consistency — keeping his focus, execution and competitive level high on every play.

"I can't skip days," Fulton said. "I can't take a week off. I gotta do what I gotta do day to day to make sure I'm ready. That's just my mentality, focusing on the day I'm in. Being present ... just so I can be as detailed as I can."

The Titans' offseason addition of wide receiver DeAndre Hopkins should help Fulton maintain that focus, as Fulton hasn't faced a player with such a decorated pass-catching resume in the past at practice.

"He has so much experience, and I know he's playing the game within the game — pre-snap, during the snap," Fulton said. "We have some of those conversations where [he'll tell me] what he's seeing from me, and I get to ask him what he's seeing. He's an All Pro veteran, so he knows what he's doing out there. It's good to get those looks day in and day out."

Those are just the kind of on-field challenges Fulton hopes to embrace this season, in a year so critical to his future.

TITANS RB DERRICK HENRY INSPIRED BY COURAGEOUS CANCER
FIGHT OF TEENAGER FROM HIS HOMETOWN

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
NOVEMBER 23, 2023

NASHVILLE – Derrick Henry hasn't forgotten where he came from.

During Thanksgiving Week, the Titans running back has provided yet another example of his desire to lift the spirits of others with a good deed for a high school junior in his hometown of Yulee, Florida.

Henry recently ran across the story of 16-year-old Sammy Macaulay, who was diagnosed with Ewing sarcoma, a rare form of cancer last October.

Since her diagnosis, Macaulay has gone through 14 rounds of chemotherapy, and 36 rounds of radiation for a tumor that formed on her pelvic bone. A Jacksonville television station did a story on a fundraiser on the softball player, called "Strike Out for Sammy", during her cancer fight.

It prompted Henry to reach out to the 16-year-old Macaulay. He was able to get her contact information, and he first sent her a video, encouraging her.

"It was so nice to see the smile that brought to her face," said Kellie Macauley, Sammy's mom.

Henry, a prep star at Yulee High before playing at the University of Alabama, didn't stop there. He wanted to do more, and the second part comes this weekend when the Titans face the Carolina Panthers at Nissan Stadium.

Henry has invited Sammy, along with her mom, dad and sister, to Nashville for Sunday's game. He's paying for their airfare and lodging, along with their tickets. The family will get sideline passes for the game, and they'll get a chance to meet Henry in pregame.

"For somebody who grew up in the same hometown, who left and became such a beast," Sammy Macaulay said of Henry, "for him to reach out to me when I'm going through a hard time, to try to lift up my spirits, it means a lot.

"Our whole school is Derrick Henry. Everything is Derrick Henry around here."

Henry said it will bring him joy to meet Macaulay.

"I saw her story, and I was inspired by it," Henry said. "I just wanted to shed any light on her situation in any way possible. I'm glad I was able to get in touch with her to get something worked out.

"Somebody that is going through that and living life to the fullest. Her courage, fighting, I just think it is something special. I want to let her know I am praying for her, thinking about her, and I'm looking forward to meeting her."

Kellie Macauley said her daughter's attitude has been great during the past year, through the treatments, her hair loss, and the uncertainty.

The family is thankful for all the support it has received, from fundraisers to friends helping out in the community. Sammy's most recent tests have given the family optimism – she had her last round of chemotherapy in July, and scans taken during two follow-up visits have been clean.

Maccauley is now dealing with a fracture in her back, which presumably happened when she returned to sports too quickly.

"She's had her up and down days, but her attitude has been great," Kellie said of her daughter. "She's definitely my hero, that's for sure. ... And all the amazing support she has received, including Derrick, it's been great."

With a smile, Sammy admits she's grown up a Jaguars fan, which is understandable, considering Yulee is located just 24 miles north of Jacksonville. Her parents are originally from Knoxville, and Tennessee Vols fans, so Henry has always played on the rival team in their minds.

"I'll always cheer for Derrick Henry," Sammy said.

Henry is hoping he can convince her to change her AFC South allegiances when the two meet on Sunday.

"Hopefully we put on a good show for her, and she switches to the two-tone blue," Henry said with a smile. "But hopefully she has great memories, and it will give her something she can remember me by.

"I want to be a blessing any way I can."

DERRICK HENRY

BIJAN ROBINSON AND DERRICK HENRY'S RACE TO THE HALL OF FAME

BY TURRON DAVENPORT
ESPN.COM
OCTOBER 28, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- From 2019 to 2021, Derrick Henry's run with the Tennessee Titans put him firmly in the Pro Football Hall of Fame discussion.

Henry was first in rushing yards (4,504), rushing touchdowns (59) and carries of 40 or more yards (14) over that span.

This year, Henry's 425 yards in six games is below his typical pace, but he's one of the league's few remaining feature backs, like rookie Bijan Robinson, who will be on the field Sunday with Henry when the Atlanta Falcons travel to the Titans (1 p.m. ET, CBS) at Nissan Stadium. While Henry is in the back end of an illustrious career, could Robinson be the next great candidate to make a run at the Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, and be a perennial threat to win the rushing crown?

"What he's done on the field, that dude has been one of the top five most dominant running backs in the decade," Robinson told ESPN. "Ever since I was in middle school, high school, he's been the guy."

In Year 4, Henry led the NFL in rushing for the first time when he gained 1,540 yards in 2019. He followed that up with 2,025 yards in 2020, the fifth-best single-season rushing total ever.

Henry's contract with Tennessee expires after the season. His 8,574 yards ranks behind Eddie George's franchise-leading 10,009 and makes him the leading active rusher in the league. If Henry continues at his current pace next season, he could be the 32nd running back to reach 10,000 rushing yards and become Tennessee's all-time leading rusher - if he reaches a deal to remain with the Titans.

George, who is now the coach at nearby Tennessee State, was one of 26 semifinalists in 2022 to be inducted into the Hall of Fame. He has 10,441 career rushing yards and ranks 28th all time.

The 1995 Heisman Trophy winner first met Henry when he won the Heisman in 2015 at Alabama. The two remained in contact when Henry was drafted by the Titans with the No. 45 pick in 2016. Henry credits a conversation with George in 2018 as a catalyst for his career takeoff.

George said that stretch has led to a Hall of Fame-worthy career.

"Look at his body of work," George said. "He's an ambassador of the league, led the NFL in rushing. In a passing league, he's had an impact. It's not a running back league anymore, but the Titans' offense ran through him. When you think about his era, who else can you say from his era belongs in the conversation?"

HEADING INTO THE draft, Robinson was considered a generational talent because of his ability to impact games by more than just running the ball.

"Robinson does everything," ESPN senior draft analyst Mel Kiper Jr. said before the draft. "He runs inside, he runs outside, he catches passes and scores a lot of touchdowns."

The Falcons selected Robinson with the No. 8 pick and immediately made him the focal point of the rushing attack despite Tyler Allgeier's emergence as a rookie last season. Robinson was the highest running back selection since 2018, when the New York Giants picked Saquon Barkley at No. 2.

Through the first six games, Robinson had 401 rushing yards and was averaging 5.0 yards per carry. In Week 7, he was suffering from headaches and was limited to 11 snaps and one touch -- a 3-yard run.

The Falcons have taken advantage of Robinson's versatility by getting him the ball in the passing game. Robinson has caught 26 passes, including two touchdown receptions, this season.

"God willing, I can be in the Hall of Fame one day," Robinson told ESPN. "You got to be in the right system and they got to use you the right way to be in those talks and those categories, and your team has to trust you to do a lot of different things in order to be in that caliber."

Robinson has a coach in Arthur Smith, who was offensive coordinator for the Titans during Henry's run to dominance, who can help his cause.

"He's a special running back that can do it all," Henry said Tuesday. "He was a great player in college. He's as good as advertised, if not even better."

As for Henry, he has led the NFL in rushing attempts in three of the past four seasons, but he has had 20 rushing attempts just twice this season and ranks eighth overall, as the Titans are searching for ways to also get rookie Tyjae Spears touches.

"We have to continue to work Tyjae in there," coach Mike Vrabel said, "and he has to have touches because when he gets it and catches it or we hand it to him, he's been able to do some really good things with it."

DESPITE 3,095 YARDS after contact, the most among running backs since 2019 according to ESPN Stats & Information, Henry doesn't like to shine light on himself; instead, he deflects all credit for his accomplishments to the offensive line.

"They're the reason why I have success," Henry said. "Without them, we don't get the play started - - those guys up front with the tight ends, fullbacks and receivers blocking -- and I have no success."

Former Titans center Ben Jones called Henry the nucleus of the teams that won AFC South division titles in 2020 and 2021.

"Everyone knew we wanted to run the ball," Jones told ESPN. "We got him to the second level and he did the rest. He is the best back in the NFL, especially in the latter part of the season. He wants to be perfect on everything. He cares so much. When you have a running back who cares that much, you do everything possible. It makes you better as an offensive lineman."

In 2021, Henry was on pace to win a third consecutive rushing title and record his second 2,000-yard season, but he suffered a Jones fracture in his right foot that forced him to miss the last nine games of the regular season. Henry's 937 yards still ranked ninth for the season, and he bounced back by finishing second last season with 1,538 rushing yards.

Gaining 2,000 or more rushing yards in one season would seem like it's a qualifier for the Hall of Fame, and no one has done it more than once. Only eight running backs have hit that mark, but is that enough to get voted in?

Of the eight, O.J. Simpson, Eric Dickerson, Barry Sanders and Terrell Davis have been inducted. Chris Johnson and Jamal Lewis are eligible but have yet to make it. Henry and Adrian Peterson are the other two, but they won't be eligible until they are five years removed from playing.

| Eric Dickerson  | 2,105 | 1984 | 16  | 14  |
| Adrian Peterson | 2,097 | 2012 | 16  | 12  |

When asked which active running back has the best chance to make the Hall of Fame, Lewis -- who played for the Cleveland Browns and Baltimore Ravens -- acknowledged Henry. But he pointed out that Spears' increasing role this season, especially on third downs, could continue to cut into Henry's production.

San Francisco 49ers running back Christian McCaffrey, who leads the NFL in rushing with 598 yards, is another player Lewis pointed to.

"There's more opportunity for him to make plays," Lewis told ESPN. "He's not coming off for third down. He's still going to be in the game for first, second down. The Hall of Fame is all about a person that changes the game, and I think that McCaffrey is one of those game-changers in just his style and how he operates."

At 27 years old, McCaffrey hasn't shown any signs of slowing down outside of injuries. In 2019, McCaffrey joined former 49ers running back Roger Craig and Rams Hall of Famer Marshall Faulk as the only running backs to post 1,000-yard receiving seasons. But despite how dynamic he is in the passing game (3,984 receiving yards), he has only 5,324 rushing yards.

When asked about Robinson, Lewis described him as a "very elusive back" who could have opportunities in Atlanta if the Falcons continue to feature him.

"He's going to be a force to be reckoned with," Lewis told ESPN. "One of those guys that I look at and say, 'He's a game-changer, and he'll have a bright future.'"

Vrabel praised Robinson's receiving ability and has taken notice of how the Falcons have built in concepts to showcase his talent.

"Sometimes he'll run a one-step dart route and run through the catch and keep going," Vrabel said. "That isn't easy for anybody, let alone a running back. He's really explosive and smooth, got great balance and good vision."

HENRY TURNS 30 during the final week of the season in January, but when given the opportunity he still has shown flashes of dominance.

At 6-foot-3, 247 pounds, Henry has reached 20 mph when running the ball this season, including during a 63-yard run against the Ravens on which he almost hit 21 mph.

According to ESPN Stats & Information, there are 52 players in the Hall of Fame listed as halfback, fullback, tailback or running back. Of those players, 16 have rushed for 10,000 or more yards -- which includes all four 2,000-yard rushers -- and the average career yardage for Hall of Fame running backs is 10,991 yards.

Henry is tied for 19th all-time in rushing touchdowns at 81, and the average for Hall of Fame running backs is 86. At his current pace (three touchdowns in six games), he would finish the season ranked 15th with 87.

Seattle Seahawks running back Shaun Alexander's 100 rushing touchdowns leads all running backs who are not in the Hall of Fame and are eligible. Given Henry's pace, he could eclipse that, but he knows there's more to accomplish.

He said it's a blessing to be considered one of the best running backs of his era and flashed a big smile Tuesday when told Robinson thinks he's one the game's best.

"I want to be the greatest ever to play my position," Henry said during training camp. "One of the best to ever play the game, hopefully, a Hall of Famer."

SHOCKA? TRACTORCITO? HERE'S WHY TENNESSEE TITANS' DERRICK HENRY REALLY IS 'KING HENRY'

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
OCTOBER 11, 2023

With all due respect to Charles III, he won't be the longest tenured King in England this week. Not even close.

Tennessee Titans running back Derrick Henry's "King Henry" nickname predates Charles' coronation by more than a decade. It predates his two All-Pro honors, three Pro Bowl nods, the 2020 NFL Offensive Player of the Year award and the 2,000-yard season with the Titans, not to mention his Heisman Trophy and national championship at Alabama — even before he set the national high school record for rushing yards in 2012.

The nickname shouldn't require explanation. His surname is Henry. England had a few famous kings named Henry. Word association does its job.

But there's more to this story. Quite a bit more, actually. As Henry's Titans (2-3) get ready to face the Baltimore Ravens (3-2) at 8:30 a.m. CT Sunday at Tottenham Hotspur Stadium in London, it's time to tell the story of why Derrick Henry is the King.

Mufasa . . . Simba . . . Derrick?

Parade Magazine named Henry its high school football player of the year in 2013. At the time, he told Parade the nickname sprouted from his love of "The Lion King," the Disney animated classic released in 1994, about six months after Henry was born.

That story has never been disputed. Bobby Ramsay, Henry's coach at Yulee High School in Florida, told The Tennessean he remembers Henry making references to characters like Mufasa and Simba all the time, and Henry told Parade it still made him sad every time he saw Mufasa die.

Well, a decade later, it might be time to retire that story to the night sky with Mufasa and all of the great kings of the past. The Tennessean recently asked Henry if this story was true.

Not only did he say no, he doesn't even remember telling it.

Still, like Simba, Henry couldn't outrun becoming king. The title was always going to find him eventually.

A brief history of Derrick Henry's nicknames

Before Henry was King Henry, he was Shocka. Henry's grandmother Gladys coined the nickname because her grandson's birth was a shock to the whole family. Zac Camp, one of Henry's close friends and high school teammates, says pretty much everyone in Nassau County, Florida, knows who Shocka is, and that's what close friends and family still call him.

The King Henry moniker started gaining traction about the time he started chasing the high school rushing record. Ramsay said he remembers the name on banners and signs in the students' section at home games. It was used in local TV news graphics. By the time national media outlets started covering Henry's chase to break Ken Hall's 59-year-old record, the name had stuck.

And somewhere in the middle of the hullabaloo, Henry embraced it.

When he first joined Twitter, now known as X, in 2010, his account name was @ShockaFlocka. Shortly thereafter, he changed it to @ShockaFlocka_2, getting his jersey number in there. But sometime between March and April 2012, in his junior year, he rebranded the account to @KingHenry_2, the online alias he still holds today.

Titans supporters know Henry today as a quiet, humble, workmanlike figure. Not exactly the kind of personality who would brand himself The King. But according to Ramsay, Henry was a talkative, outgoing kid. The first time he won a local award as a ninth grader, Ramsay remembers, Henry went up on stage to give a speech and "you couldn't shut him up."

"He used to have a lot of fun with those things," Ramsay said. "And then over time, by the time he was at the end of high school, he had been interviewed so much that he kind of changed a little bit. And then he went to Alabama where they teach you to hate the media. But when you'd see him in the locker room, he really was just one of the guys."

Henry briefly added a third nickname while at Alabama. At the 2014 Sugar Bowl, Spanish-language commentator Pablo Viruega dubbed Henry "El Tractorcito," meaning "the little tractor." That followed him for a little while, especially on his quest for the 2015 Heisman Trophy.

But when he emerged as one of the best running backs in the NFL, King Henry eclipsed El Tractorcito.

The gravity of the nickname

People don't get royal nicknames just because they share a name with a royal. No one remembers Titans legend Eddie George as "King George." Hall of Famer Earl Campbell was nicknamed The Tyler Rose, not "The Duke of Earl."

There's a small collection of kings who've survived the nickname in American sports: LeBron James, Richard Petty and Felix Hernandez come to mind. You have to be larger than life for people to call you The King and for them to mean it.

However prematurely the nickname was deployed, Henry has backed it up. No one has more rushing yards or touchdowns than Henry since he got to the NFL, and he's also the NFL's leader in playoff carries and rushing yards in that span.

There's no reason for him not to be called The King. With every one of the 3,905 carries he has since the start of high school, Henry has justified his throne.

HENRY COUNTING HIS BLESSINGS AT THE START OF HIS EIGHTH NFL SEASON

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
SEPTEMBER 7, 2023

NASHVILLE – Titans running back Derrick Henry is fired up about the start of a new season.

Again.

"I love football – I have been playing since I was five years old," Henry said. "Any time you are getting ready for a game, it's always exciting.

"It's game week – football is back. I'm looking forward to it."

Henry, heading into his eighth NFL season, ranked 2nd in NFL with 1,936 scrimmage yards and 1,538 rush yards in 2022. He also ranked tied-2nd with 13 rushing touchdowns, becoming 5th player all-time with 10-plus rushing touchdowns in five straight seasons.

Henry had 125-plus scrimmage yards in each of final four games of season.

On Sunday, he'll be facing the Saints for the first time in his career.

"The big thing is about watching film on (the Saints), seeing the things they like to do," said Henry, who leads active players with 8,335 rush yards and 78 rushing touchdowns. "But it is Week One – they are going to run stuff we haven't seen, and that's how it goes in the league. But they are a great defense – they have great experience over there, they're disruptive, they have guys that fly around and get to the ball."

Henry, who is headed into the final year of his contract, was asked if this could be his "last hurrah" with the Titans.

Henry playfully laughed at the topic, before turning more serious.

"I am just taking it one day at a time, and not getting too caught up in it," Henry said. "I'm thankful that I am able to make it to Year 8, and be playing for this organization as long as I have. I'm just trying to be the best player I can be each and every week, and come out here and be a great leader for this team, and try and help everybody get better in any way possible.

"I am just taking it one game at a time. Fortunately, I am living my dream playing in the NFL. I am not trying to get too caught up in that – I'm just being thankful for what I have right now."

DERRICK HENRY'S
'TRAVELING ROAD SHOW' AND THE GREATEST HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL SEASON EVER

BY CHAD GRAFF

THE ATHLETIC

JUNE 15, 2023

Bobby Ramsey was 28 when he was hired as the high school football coach in Yulee, Fla., a town of 36,000 people that sits 25 miles north of Jacksonville and 15 miles south of the Georgia state line. Yulee High wanted a young, energetic guy. They knew how tough the job would be.

The Hornets were upstarts, a new school with just one year as a varsity team in a state that churns out some of the nation's top players. They were ill-prepared. The facilities were tiny. The players were, too.

"I'll never forget meeting the team at the time and walking into the room and looking at the kids like, 'Where are the real players?'" Ramsey said. "After a couple weeks, I was like, 'I want to call my old school and see if they still have my old teaching job. I don't know if I want to do this.'

"There was not an area of the program that didn't need work. It was just ... a lot."

In spring 2008, as Ramsey scrambled to field enough players, build a playbook and instill a culture in his team, he was visited by Pat Dunlap, one of the town's middle school football coaches. Dunlap was an institution in Yulee, had been there for decades. He saw an overwhelmed Ramsey and told him to relax.

"You know, Coach, in a year we'll get Derrick Henry up here and we'll be fine," Ramsey recalled Dunlap telling him in his deep, gruff voice.

"Sure, there's some seventh-grader who you think is pretty good,"

Ramsey thought. "Look at this team right now. We're going to go 0-10 next year."

A few days later, Ramsey was leading one of his first spring practices at the high school, which borders the middle school field. "We looked horrible," Ramsey recalled. "We were soft. I'm just really down." As he walked off the field, he looked over at the middle school football practice. Players were lined up at the 25-yard line, standing shoulder to shoulder. The kids mostly looked the same: 5-foot-5, 5-foot-7, 5-foot-6, all in a row.

"Then it was, boom, 6-foot-2," Ramsey said. "I was like, Ohhhh, that's Derrick. Yeah, let's get through Year 1, then we've got a shot."

"He was about the same size in middle school as he is now," said assistant Charles Richards.

Prior to winning a Heisman Trophy and a national championship, two NFL rushing titles and the league's Offensive Player of the Year award in 2020, the legend of Derrick Henry began even before he played his first high school game. But it was what he did as a Yulee High School Hornet that still has locals sharing stories.

The high school coaches knew all about Henry well before their first preseason together — the 14-year-old Henry was so dominant the county instituted a new policy: "When it got to a 28-point lead, they had to take him out," Ramsey said — but it's still a big jump from middle school to high school, from towering over opponents to facing five-star linebacker recruits.

At Henry's first practice with varsity, he ran an iso — "and we didn't block a soul on this play," Ramsey said. Henry was crushed at the line of scrimmage. "I always remember it looked like Optimus Prime falling down."

Coaches looked at each other nervously. Henry never got hit like that in middle school. How would he react? Would he yell at the offensive line? Storm off and transfer to a school with a more established football program?

"He went back to the huddle, and I took a deep breath," Ramsey said. "And then we ran the same play again, and this time he busted right through the middle for a 75-yard touchdown. ... So it took two plays until we were like, 'Yep, he's gonna start.'"

As a freshman, Henry ran for 2,465 yards (224.1 per game) and 26 touchdowns. The next year, coaches started using him sporadically on defense as a pass rusher. He was only allowed to do it if the game was close late, but if they needed a sack, Henry went in as a blitzing outside linebacker.

In Henry's sophomore season, Yulee had a chance to clinch its first-ever playoff berth in a late-October game against University Christian. But the Hornets played their worst first half of the season and trailed 21-3 at the break. "Coach Ramsey came into halftime and chewed us out," said Zac Camp, a wide receiver and defensive back.

The coach changed the plan. Henry was to barely leave the field. He carried the ball 33 times. He played defense. And for the first time, he played special teams, too.

In the 38-34 come-from-behind win that sent the Hornets into the playoffs, Henry ran for 288 yards and three touchdowns, sacked the opposing quarterback and blocked a punt. "I'm not sure that he ever practiced it," assistant Scott Jones said of Henry's punt block. "Before that or since."

"The second half of that game was the closest you'd see to a basketball player taking a game over," Ramsey said.

It didn't matter that teams knew Henry was the star. They still couldn't stop him.

Henry's defensive prowess had college scouts fascinated. Many thought Henry projected better on that side of the ball, or maybe at tight end. “They said at the college level he was going to be an easy target as a running back since he’s so big,” said Larry Blustein, a recruiting expert in Florida for the last five decades.

Ramsey met with Henry after his sophomore year to discuss his recruitment. Henry was adamant that he was a running back. He told Ramsey he didn’t want to talk to any colleges that were considering moving him to a different position.

“Some schools would giggle when I would say he wanted to play running back,” Ramsey said. They would tell Ramsey that players who look like Henry needed to rush the passer. “And I get all that,” Ramsey said. “But there are always outliers. I would always compare it to Magic Johnson. Magic was 6-foot-9 and played point guard.”

After that season, Ramsey put assistant Bryan Libby in charge of putting together the team’s schedule for the next season, but when Libby called coaches to set up games, their only question was about Henry.

“They were like, ‘Yeah, man, that’s great, when’s your running back graduate?’ I was like, ‘In two years,’” Libby said. “They said, ‘Great, call us back once he leaves.’”

“You try to schedule games with Derrick Henry on your team,” Ramsey said. “It was like we were selling cancer.”

Yulee had to schedule games against far superior teams, and Henry’s junior season was a gauntlet. Gainesville, a powerhouse with several Division I recruits on its roster, beat Yulee in the season opener. But afterward, the discussion was about how Henry ran for 181 yards and two touchdowns against arguably the best defense in the state with an undermanned offensive line and few rushing lanes. “Coming off the field, everyone was like, ‘This dude is for real,’” Ramsey said. “It was weird because we lost this game by 15, but everyone was just caught up in him.”

Over the team’s final 10 games, Henry averaged 231 rushing yards and three touchdowns per game. “At that point, it became a traveling road show,” Libby said. “The circus was coming to town.”

In some ways, Henry made play calling difficult. You can’t give him the ball every play. Or can you?

“It was kind of a joke being the offensive coordinator,” Jones said. “Like, ‘Gee, what play am I going to call now? Oh, give it to Derrick.’”

In Henry’s junior year, Jones learned the hard way what happens when you didn’t give him the ball. On a second-and-long, he called for a play-action pass, hoping to take a shot down the field. Instead, it ended with a sack. Yulee now faced third-and-39.

“Ramsey is chewing me out after that. He’s yelling at me like, ‘Don’t overcoach it!’” Jones said. “And I was like, ‘Damn it, Ramsey. Fine, here you go. Blast left, Derrick. Go ahead, see if you can get us 39.’”

“And sure enough, he gets us 40 yards.”

Henry ran for 2,610 rushing yards and 34 touchdowns his junior year, prompting what felt like daily offseason visits from college coaches. No school, Yulee coaches said, recruited Henry harder than Tennessee. One day in the spring before Henry’s senior season, Vols running backs coach Jay Graham came to visit Henry at 9 a.m. — even though Henry wouldn’t get out of classes until 3. So he sat in the coaches’ office for six hours waiting.

Graham told Ramsey about working with Jim Harbaugh at the University of San Diego in 2007, using the power offense that Harbaugh loved and running the same play out of dozens of formations. They started watching film of Harbaugh’s games at Stanford. Before Andrew Luck arrived, the Cardinal had a good offensive line, a great running back and a struggling quarterback. They used a lot of power running and wildcat formations.

“And I was like, this is us!” Ramsey said. “This was what we have.”

Ramsey had his assistants study Harbaugh’s offense. They loved that Harbaugh ran the same plays and didn’t care if the opponent knew what was coming. Make them stop it. “We were like, hey let’s adopt that philosophy,” said Libby, who had become the offensive coordinator that season. The change in offensive scheme set the stage for arguably the greatest individual high school football season of all time.

In the fourth game of that 2012 season, Henry broke the national single-game rushing record, piling up 510 yards and six touchdowns. He carried the ball 45 times that night, one of six games that season where he touched it at least 40 times.

“I remember the first time he had more than 40. I was like, oh man, I’m gonna get arrested for child endangerment or something,” Ramsey said. “I always tell people who get so caught up in his carries, well, when we were in the middle of it, we were just trying to win games. And that’s how we were going to win. And he didn’t really get fatigued. And he never got hurt.”

Yulee coaches heard some opponents knock their system for leaning on Henry so much.

“A lot of people were like, ‘The offense is dependent on Derrick,’” Libby said. “Well, duh. We’ve got a kid in the backfield that you’re never going to see again.”

The Henry experience peaked after that record-breaking game. ESPN came to town the following week to broadcast a matchup against Glades Day — with Fred Taylor’s son, Kelvin at running back — in what had been billed as a showdown between the best backs in the nation. Scouts were split on who was the better prospect. The younger Taylor had already broken Emmitt Smith's Florida rushing record, and ESPN ranked Taylor higher than Henry.

Henry announced his commitment to Alabama the day of the game. The stadium was full two hours before kickoff. Fred Taylor stood in a roped-off section behind one of the end zones with some players from the Jacksonville Jaguars. Kelvin had 34 carries, while Henry had 35. Kelvin finished with 222 yards and a touchdown.

Henry finished with 362 yards and six touchdowns.

"That was a good situation for him because it pitted him up against another guy," said Camp, his teammate. "They always talk about how Michael Jordan played better whenever someone talked trash to him. Derrick did that, too."

After that game, Henry set his sights on chasing down Taylor's state rushing record, even with Taylor still playing. Kelvin had played varsity since eighth grade, so Henry figured he needed about 2,000 yards in the final six games to break the record. He totaled 455 yards and five touchdowns against West Nassau, then 404 yards and six touchdowns (on 21 carries) two weeks later.

"People thought we were running the score up, but when you have the ball on your own 13-yard line and he breaks into the open field on a run play, what do you expect him to do?" Ramsey asked.

Henry had at least three touchdowns in all but one game his senior season, including six games with five touchdowns. He ran for 200 yards or more in 12 of 13 games. Before the regular-season finale, with Henry averaging 33 carries a game, Ramsey told him to get some rest. Henry initially pushed back, but Ramsey said it wasn't an option. Henry would only watch at practice that Monday.

"So he's out there in street clothes," Ramsey said. "We split up into offense-defense. I ran the defense, so I'm down on the other end of the field. About 45 minutes later, I look over and he's in shells taking reps.

"I run over and I'm like, 'What are you doing?' And he's like, 'Man, I got bored.'"

Yulee entered the first-round playoff matchup against the Taylor County Bulldogs with Henry roughly 180 yards from the all-time national rushing record. Ryan Smith, then the head coach at Taylor County, called a friend who had already coached against Yulee for a scouting report. Smith was determined that one player wasn't going to beat him — "and (my friend) was like, 'Yeah, this one man is,'" Smith said.

Yulee knew Taylor County was going to sell out to stop the run, so Libby walked his young quarterback through a play-action pass in that week's game plan. During the game, the Bulldogs' defense showed the perfect look for the play, but the Hornets' quarterback held onto the ball too long and threw an interception. Taylor County scored on the next play.

"(Ramsey) wasn't happy about the play call," Libby said. "We went back and forth on that deal. And I said, 'Fine, we're not going to throw it the rest of the night, I promise you that.'"

"We get the ball back after that, put Derrick in the wildcat, and said, 'This is you now. Go. You better be ready to carry the load.' He said, 'OK.'"

There was no limit to Henry's workload. He broke the all-time national high school rushing record in the first half. Ramsey even put him back as the team's kick and punt returner. When Smith saw that, he sprinted down the field to get his kicker's attention.

"Don't even think about kicking it to him," Smith told him. "And he looked at me like, 'Yeah, no sh—, Coach.'"

Yulee threw two passes that night. Both were interceptions. Henry carried the ball 57 times, finishing with 485 yards and six touchdowns in the 41-26 victory. "And the crazy thing about that was we didn't have the ball for most of the fourth quarter," Libby said. "He could've gotten 600 yards that night."

"He was the greatest high school player I've ever seen," Smith said. "My D-coordinator was all upset. And I was like, 'What are you mad about? There wasn't anything you could do about that.' We knew when he walked out to warm up pregame."

"We watched it the whole next day over and over and over on 'SportsCenter,'" Smith said. "And I wasn't even mad about it. He was pretty unbelievable."

Smith later coached at Alabama when Henry was there, and the two joked about that game and how Henry never seemed to tire. After Henry won the Heisman in 2015, Smith said he realized why. "The day after he won the Heisman," Smith said, "he was back in the weight room doing squats."

In the next round of the playoffs, the Yulee coaches knew they were going to be outmanned. Their opponent, Gadsden County, was bigger, faster and stronger, one of the few teams capable of slowing Henry. So Yulee installed a running back pass. Henry faked a sweep to the outside, then pulled up and threw it 30 yards for a touchdown. Henry's total of 189 rushing yards was his lowest in a full calendar year and he still did enough to help Yulee notch the upset, 16-13.

"The newspaper had a headline the next day that Derrick was slowed down," Libby said. "And he still almost had 200 yards."

Yulee's dream run ended the next week, but not before Henry added another 317 rushing yards and four touchdowns. He finished his career with 12,124 yards and 153 touchdowns. He never had a game with fewer than 100 yards. In his senior season alone, Henry ran for 4,261 yards — averaging 9.2 yards per carry — and 55 touchdowns in 13 games.

“You’ll never see a season like that again,” Libby said. “I mean, who does that?”

DERRICK HENRY HELPS SEND VETERAN TO SUPER BOWL LVII

BY DAVID BOCLAIR
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JANUARY 26, 2023

Derrick Henry is sending a military veteran to the Super Bowl.

The Tennessee Titans running back is one of several NFL players who teamed up with USAA and the Veterans of Foreign Wars to honor those who have served across the globe.

John Lambert, a native and resident of Fairview, Tenn., and his wife Patricia will be in Glendale, Ariz. On Feb. 12. The two are long-time Titans fans, and Lambert's military career was recognized by Henry via Twitter on Thursday.

"Men and women who bravely serve our country at sea like Navy veteran and Titans fan John Lambert allow Americans like me to keep my feet on solid ground," Henry said in a release. "Working with USAA and the VFW to send John Lambert to the Super Bowl is just a small way say thank you for his service and I look forward to meeting him in Phoenix."

Lambert spent six years in active duty (2006-08) with the United States Navy and three more in the Naval Reserves (2006-08). During that time, he earned three Navy Achievement Medals, a National Defense Medal, a Global War on Terrorism Expeditionary Medal, a Global War on Terrorism Service Medal, two Sea Service Deployment Ribbons, and an Expert Pistol Medal. He was twice deployed to the Persian Gulf, where he was involved in counterterrorism, piracy and drug operations, as an Aegis Fire Controlman aboard the USS Philippine Sea.

He currently works as a technical sales manager.

Super Bowl LVII will take place at State Farm Stadium, home of the Arizona Cardinals. Participating teams will be determined Sunday when the Philadelphia Eagles host the San Francisco 49ers, and the Kansas City Chiefs host the Cincinnati Bengals in the conference championship games.

TITANS' DERRICK HENRY TIES RECORD WITH 6TH 200-YARD RUSHING GAME

OCTOBER 31, 2022

HOUSTON -- Tennessee Titans running back Derrick Henry continued his dominance against the Houston Texans in a 17-10 win Sunday and in doing so tied a record held by O.J. Simpson and Adrian Peterson.

Henry carried the ball 32 times for 219 yards and two touchdowns. He has now rushed for 200 or more yards in six games, tying him with Simpson and Peterson for the most career 200-yard rushing performances.

It was also Henry's fourth consecutive 200-yard rushing game against the Texans, setting a record for the most such games against a single team in NFL history.

Henry's second score of the day gave him 75 touchdowns for his career, breaking a tie with Eddie George for the most TDs scored in Titans/Oilers franchise history. Henry reached that mark in 93 games, with George doing so in 128.

Henry was the one toting the football, but he was sure to point to the offensive line as the reason for his success.

"I give all the credit to them," Henry said. "They were the ones that made it happen. Without them, I wouldn't have half the success that I've had."

Henry has now posted four consecutive 100-yard rushing performances for Tennessee this season. The Titans have leaned heavily on Henry during their five-game win streak, with Henry leading the league in carries (132) and rushing yards (654) while tying for the most rushing touchdowns (6) over that span.

FUELED BY HIGH SCHOOL HATERS, TITANS' DERRICK HENRY BACK AMONG RUSHING LEADERS

BY TURRON DAVENPORT
ESPN
NOVEMBER 16, 2022

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- A quick search can yield viral footage of Tennessee Titans running back Derrick Henry from his Yulee High School days, running through defenders like the Incredible Hulk plowing through bad guys.

Despite rushing for more yards (12,124) than any other high school football player to that point, Henry remembers something most people would want to forget.

"I still get motivated from stuff back in high school," Henry said. "They said I wouldn't make it this far at this position. Usually, guys who are big and play running back in high school turn into edge rushers or get put on defense."

But not the 6-foot-3, 247 pound Henry.

That's what makes 28-year-old so great. He's always looking for something to give him that extra motivation.

It's also a big reason he has made a tremendous comeback from a Jones fracture in his right foot that caused him to miss the final nine regular-season games last year.

Henry was leading the NFL with 937 rushing yards when he suffered the injury in a Week 8 road win over the Indianapolis Colts. He made it back for the divisional playoff loss to the Cincinnati Bengals -- when he rushed for 62 yards on 20 carries.

Entering the season, there were doubts that Henry could return to his league-leading form. And Henry, who won the rushing title in 2019 (1,540 yards) and 2020 (2,027 yards), normally doesn't bother with outside noise.

But this time it was different, as Henry reported to training camp with a chip on his shoulder.

"Someone could motivate me and wouldn't even know it," Henry said at the start of camp. "The doubters, whatever they want to be, I am definitely motivated. I'm ready to go. So we going to see."

Henry and the Titans (6-3) will get their next test on the road against the Green Bay Packers (4-6) on Thursday (8:15 p.m. ET, Prime Video) at Lambeau Field.

If Henry can have the rushing success others have against the Packers' defense, whose 140.6 yards allowed per game on the ground ranks 27th, it could help the AFC South-leading Titans win their seventh out of the past eight games.

"You just don't find guys that are that big and that fast, and if he gets going, it's going to be a long day," said Packers coach Matt LaFleur, who worked with Henry as the Titans offensive coordinator in 2018 before taking over in Green Bay in 2019. "Derrick is one of a kind. He is a guy that can wear you down, and a lot of times, he gets stronger as the game goes on."

Given the results Henry has generated this season, he should have old-school hip-hop artist Kool Moe Dee's "How Ya Like Me Now" playing whenever he takes the field.

Despite a slow start, where Henry rushed for 107 yards in the Titans' 0-2 start to open the season, Henry's 923 total rushing yards are second to New York Giants running back Saquon Barkley's 931 heading into Week 11, and his nine rushing touchdowns are tied for second with Jamaal Williams behind Nick Chubb's 11.

Henry turned back the clock in Week 8 when he rushed for 219 yards against the Houston Texans. It was the fourth consecutive game in which he rushed for 200 or more yards against Houston, setting an NFL record for most 200-yard rushing games by one player against a single team.

The Houston game was a classic heavy-workload performance by Henry. Veteran quarterback Ryan Tannehill injured his ankle the week before, so rookie backup Malik Willis was thrust into the starting role. Willis attempted 10 passes while Henry carried the ball a season-high 32 times.

Henry already has 202 carries and is on pace for his third 300-plus carry season in the last four years.

"His physical stature probably helps," Titans coach Mike Vrabel said. "He works extremely hard. He trains hard and prepares. Mentally he is ready for it as well. He wants it. [Running backs coach] Tony [Dews] does a good job of trying to manage him and where he is at. He is an important part of what we do. He knows that going in. He gets himself ready to go."

Granted, Henry got caught from behind by Texans cornerback Steven Nelson on a 41-yard run, and Kansas City Chiefs defensive backs L'Jarius Sneed and Trent McDuffie tracked him down on a 56-yard run two weeks ago.

"In Houston I got caught because he tapped my foot and that broke my stride," Henry explained. "In Kansas City, I had to re-catch my balance. Me getting caught, don't worry about that. I'm fine."

It should be noted that Henry reached 20.6 mph, according to NFL Next Gen Stats, on the 56-yard run and 20.1 mph on the 41-yarder.

Last week saw a different formula in a 17-10 win over the Denver

Broncos, as Tannehill had a season high in passing attempts (36), while Henry's eight carries in the first half marked the second time he had eight or fewer carries in a half this season.

"The first-down production wasn't [there like it had been] in the previous weeks -- which caused us to be in more throwing situations," offensive coordinator Todd Downing said. "Not converting some of those early third downs took away from getting into a rhythm in those drives.

"The more carries you give him in a drive, the stronger he gets. So that's why it's more important to pick up those third downs to get him more opportunities within those drives."

Although Henry was fueled by the doubters in the offseason, he is not concerned with personal statistics. His 53 yards rushing against the Broncos were the fewest he's gained in a win in the last four seasons.

"Me playing at a high level and having efficiency affecting the game the way I play -- [whether] I have the ball or I don't have the ball -- [it's about] being the best teammate I can be," Henry said last week. "It's about us being just tied together, having the will and wanting to dominate in each game."

That team mindset is one of the things that Vrabel loves about Henry.

"The difference between this league and our team is we got Derrick Henry," Vrabel said in his postgame locker speech after beating the Texans.

Every team isn't lucky enough to have a team player in Year 7 still motivating himself in a Marvel superhero-like fashion with hate from high school.

HOW MANY 5-YEAR-OLDS WOULD IT TAKE TO TACKLE THE TITANS' DERRICK HENRY?

BY PAUL KUHARSKY
PAULKUHARSKY.COM
JULY 31, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – The premise began with a recent mailbag question and sent me on an early training camp quest.

There are many variables at play here, of course.

Is Henry at full speed? Is he angry or is he worried about hurting 5-year-olds? How eager are the 5-year-olds?

But as I asked around, I left these constraints to the people answering the question.

How many Mike Vrabel?

"A shit ton," he said.

"I don't even know if they could. How many kids would die in the process? Do I need to give you a number, like a legitimate number?"

I said it would be good if he did.

"What's the area? Is it confined space?"

Maybe standing, starting to move, you create the parameters.

"Ok, so let's say he's got a 10-yard wide space. It would probably take 35. You want to try it? Test it out."

He said we could as long as I was one of the 5-year-olds.

The trouble is, I weigh about 185 and according to CDC growth charts, 5-year-olds should weigh between 34 and 52 pounds.

(Also I'm unavailable.)

I called on another high-ranking Titans official, Ran Carthon, but he pointed me to his wife, Heaven Carthon who was visiting training camp with her kids, one of whom happened to be 5-year-old Reese. Heaven Carthon has first-hand, daily insight into what sort of damage a 5-year-old can do.

She looked at Ran, who's listed as 6 feet tall and 208 pounds on the Pro Football Reference page connected to his 2005-06 seasons as a running back with the Colts, and then converted him up to Henry's 6-3, 247 in her head.

"He can fling 10 5-year-olds," she said of Henry. "If 32 worked together, they could probably take him down.

Rhea Carthon, 15, said that it would take 55 Reeses.

Roman, Reese's older brother said he could coach up Reese on the proper technique.

"Go for his legs!" he said.

Azeez Al-Shaair, the inside linebacker the Titans imported from the 49ers, set aside the specific age requirement but said he'd bet on his 14 little rug-rat nieces and nephews to get the job done.

"They do it to me, so they'll get him down," he said.

Arden Key went even lower than that.

"I mean if two of them get the ankles, then he's going down," he said, laughing. "He can't move without his legs."

I really liked guard Jordan Roos' thinking as he considered the equation.

"I think the problem is, Derrick's going to make an example of the first one and just deter all the rest of them," Roos said. "I think he makes a real example of the first one and it's just over after that. There is not a number.

Said Elijah Molden: "I saw some number in the thousands, I saw 75. Realistically, I'll probably say 60. Wait, hold on. Yeah, I'm going to stick with 60. I think they build a wall and then go after his legs."

I found an online, clickbait quiz titled "How many five year olds can you fight?"

It's not tackling Derrick Henry, but it's not too far off.

I answered for Henry, saying he had long arms, was gigantic, had the balance of a slackliner, had won 100 percent of his fights and is highly skilled in self-defense.

Asked if he'd stay calm and let them attack him first or be aggressive and terminate them one by one, I said it'd be a mix of both.

Given a choice between fighting clean or doing anything in his power to win, I said he'd fight a little bit dirty.

And the quiz said 44 5-year-olds would beat him in a fight.

Tackling him is less than beating him in a fight and I think Heaven Carthon is in the suitable range. I go a bit higher than she did and say 36.

"I don't know if there is enough," Daniel Brunskill said. "I mean they might get lucky, he trips over one. But it'd take a lot. I'd say at least a few hundred."

TENNESSEE TITANS'
DEANDRE HOPKINS HAS POST-NFL PLAN, AND IT'S ALL ABOUT COUNTRY MUSIC

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
OCTOBER 5, 2023

DeAndre Hopkins' plan in life means going from 'Put me in, Coach' to Coachella, from being pressed to CMA Fest.

Hopkins, the Tennessee Titans' star receiver, re-enrolled this semester at Clemson, taking online classes to pursue a degree in parks, recreation and tourism management. He wants to organize country music festivals once his playing days are done — a fitting desire for a South Carolina boy who calls Nashville home.

More importantly, he says, he wants to get his degree to fulfill a promise to his parents.

"My father died when I was 6 months," he said. "When I went to school, it was kind of something that I promised my mom. My mom and obviously my father, I kind of vowed that I would make both of them proud and graduate."

Juggling a college course load with an NFL schedule isn't easy. But neither is Hopkins' profession of choice after he's done with football.

DeAndre Hopkins the country music fan

Music festivals are integral to why Hopkins signed with the Titans in the first place. Titans general manager Ran Carthon took Hopkins and his girlfriend to CMA Fest in June when the veteran receiver was a free agent the team was wooing. As part of the visit, the Titans had country superstar Tim McGraw reach out and send Hopkins a personalized message.

"Believe it or not, he's a big Tim McGraw fan," Carthon said. "I'm thankful to Tim and his team because they reached out and let him know that we wanted him here in this city."

Hopkins told The Tennessean he grew up listening to stars like McGraw and Kenny Chesney. He's a lifelong fan who took a class on country music history during his first stint at Clemson from 2010 to 2012. His passions have converged since coming to Nashville; just last week, he posted a TikTok video featuring a cameo from country star Kane Brown.

Hearing from McGraw during CMA Fest was a big deal for Hopkins. They mostly talked business, Hopkins says, which isn't much of a surprise given what McGraw's responsibilities were that weekend.

So you want to organize music festivals?

Tiffany Kerns is the senior vice president of industry relations and philanthropy for the Country Music Association. One of her responsibilities is overseeing CMA Fest, which she says she has to work on and think about year-round.

It's not just booking talent and locations. It's communicating with managers and publicists. It's concocting weather contingency plans and making deals with vendors and ensuring large crowds can stay safe in crowded spaces. It's understanding the difference between how to court an emerging artist with three people in her camp and how to approach a legacy act with 30 or 40 employees on the bankroll. It's about being intimately familiar with every corner and crevasse of the music industry and structuring a four-day event so that the only people who feel any burden or stress are those planning everything.

Her best example actually relates back to McGraw. At about the same time McGraw was palling around with Hopkins, he also was preparing to sing "Humble and Kind" with a chorus of schoolchildren on the final day of the festival. During rehearsals, one of the children passed out from low blood sugar.

Staff had to find a way to cool him down in the sweltering Nashville summer, get some food in his system and make sure he was able to perform without scaring the other kids.

The boy rebounded and sang that night. McGraw went off-book and started talking about the CMA Foundation "as if he were a staff member," Kerns said, as he went beyond what anyone behind the scenes could have imagined to help raise awareness for the organization's charitable causes.

"I got to see both the, 'Oh man, we couldn't have expected that' and the, 'Man, it couldn't have been planned better,'" Kerns said. "It all happened in the same day in the same performance."

Student life and festival life

Prior to the Titans' Week 3 game against the Cleveland Browns, a clip of Hopkins walking around the Titans' practice facility while attending a Zoom class went viral on social media. His classmates were just as gobsmacked to see him as the general public.

According to Mack, the class is a junior-level parks, recreation and tourism management course. Between undergraduate and graduate students, Clemson has about 600 people pursuing PRM degrees. Mack says a lot of class time is spent on perfecting résumés and giving students tools to be able to succeed in their chosen field. It's not exactly a group project kind of class, so Hopkins shouldn't have to worry about skipping practice to help his classmates design PowerPoint slides.

"It was kind of crazy," said R.J. Mack, one of Hopkins' classmates. "I'm just used to having all the football players in my class. That's nothing out of the normal. But seeing him in my class, it was like, 'Oh, snap.' He's doing the same thing I'm doing but he's already made it in life."

When asked about the rigors of going back to college in the middle of an NFL season, Hopkins pointed out it's not like he's going to law school. His professor understands his schedule and Hopkins says his grasp of the playbook is strong enough now that he isn't splitting his study time between football and school.

Festival season mainly lives in the summer. Kerns says the best way to crack into the music festival industry is to observe and learn as much as one can about what's going on behind the scenes, so he'll have opportunities to do that once the season is done.

Kerns is quick to warn, however, that the job isn't for everyone.

"The first thing that I say to anyone is let's make sure that there's due diligence in finding out what programs that are out there that pour into you as you go on this journey," she said. "Don't try to figure this out on your own."

Hopkins probably doesn't need to worry about that part. He's already hanging out with Brown and talking shop with McGraw. Nashville is his playground and he's taking advantage of it to get closer to pursuing another passion of his.

But he's not losing sight of his promises, either.

"I don't think I do it for the support or the validation of anyone but myself and my father and my mom," he said.

TITANS WR DEANDRE HOPKINS VOWS TO KEEP COLLEGE GRADUATION PROMISE TO HIS MOM

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
SEPTEMBER 22, 2023

NASHVILLE – Receiver DeAndre Hopkins is committed to winning, and doing his part to help the Titans win in any way possible.

But the 11-year pro also made a commitment to his mother years ago, and he plans to follow through on that promise as well.

Hopkins is attending online, and virtual, classes at Clemson University after he recently re-enrolled in school as a student.

"It's important because I come from a family where not a lot of people graduated," Hopkins said on Friday. "My father died when I was six months (old), and when I went to school that is something I promised my mom. ... I vowed that I'd make both of them proud, and graduate, and that's something I promised my mom that I would do, knowing that my father would want me to graduate college."

Hopkins left Clemson after the 2012 season to enter the NFL, and he was a first-round pick of the Houston Texans in the 2013 NFL Draft.

Recently, Hopkins decided to pick up where he left off.

Hopkins is working toward a degree in parks, recreation and tourism management.

"I always was interested in managing facilities," Hopkins said. "Before I came to Nashville, I always wanted to put on music festivals and country music festivals, growing up on country music. That was my interest, going into that degree."

Hopkins said his teacher is very understanding of his NFL schedule, so that helps.

A five-time Pro Bowler, Hopkins also has a pretty understanding NFL coach in Mike Vrabel.

Titans coaches and trainers are working with Hopkins as he does his best to recover from the ankle injury he suffered in the season opener at New Orleans.

Hopkins didn't practice on Friday after being limited in Thursday's practice. Hopkins was a full participant in Wednesday's practice.

Hopkins didn't practice at all last week, but he ended up playing against the Chargers.

The Titans face the Browns in Cleveland on Sunday.

"I feel good," Hopkins said. "I feel good about everything going into this week. ... Me being, as you guys say, an old veteran player, I am just taking some time to kind of get healthy all the way. I wouldn't say it's the same as last week. I would just say Vrabel, (I'm) just trusting in Vrabel's plan."

Hopkins said the plan is for him to make the trip to Cleveland.

His status for Sunday is to be determined. Hopkins is officially listed as QUESTIONABLE for Sunday's game.

In two games this season, Hopkins has 11 catches for 105 yards.

"I've played a lot of ball, and missed very few games," Hopkins said. "I'm just trusting the plan, and just be ready to go out when my number is called."

DEANDRE HOPKINS WILL LET HIS HANDS DO THE TALKING

BY CLAY SKIPPER
GQ.COM
SEPTEMBER 7, 2023

It's just past 8:00 AM on a Sunday in August when DeAndre Hopkins glides into a meeting room at the Tennessee Titans' practice facility. He's cheerful, if a bit tired: the star wide receiver and his new teammates were in Minnesota last night for a preseason game, and didn't get back to Nashville until 2:30 AM. Coffee is summoned, along with cinnamon and honey. The honey comes in one of those adorable bear-shaped bottles, and all but disappears into the 10-inch vacuums that are Hopkins's hands. Once caffeinated, he ties his dreadlocks back behind his head, and begins to talk about the last several months. "This is probably one of the more exciting offseasons I've had," he says.

It has certainly been eventful, and for good reason: Entering his 11th season, Hopkins finds himself at perhaps the most critical point in his career. In May, the Arizona Cardinals, his former team, released him. He hit the NFL job market with one of the league's most dazzling LinkedIn pages: first among all active receivers in yards and receptions, and third in touchdowns. And there are those hands, hovering up anything that gets even remotely close. Over the last three seasons, he has dropped just three of the 315 balls fired his way.

And yet, finding his next team was a protracted process. Hopkins is 31 now, entering his second decade in a league where the average career lasts about three years. On top of that, he's spent a good chunk of the last two seasons on the sideline, for injuries and for a suspension after failing a test for performance enhancing drugs. That left some teams a bit lukewarm on the idea of signing a free agent that, just a couple years ago, was one of the hottest receivers in the NFL. "There were some teams that I had on my list that I gave them calls and they didn't give a call back," he says.

Don't get him wrong, he's happy to be in Tennessee—he just landed with a bit of extra motivation. "I'm very grateful for where I am, I think I made the best decision," he says. "But when you're a player and some people feel like they're great without you, and then you see what they have on paper, or you see what they do, you mark those games down, as a competitor. I can't wait to play 'em and, honestly, try my best to crush they ass."

I ask if he'd like to be a bit more specific which teams he's talking about. He takes a long pause and a sip of his honeyed coffee, before repeating the question—as if he doesn't have the list memorized, or perhaps weighing whether or not he wants to stir things up.

"Detroit Lions, they didn't want me," he says, finally. "Dallas Cowboys didn't want me. Giants didn't want me. Shit. Who else ain't want me? San Fran ain't want me."

He relays this with a chuckle that carries more equanimity than bitterness. His words come low and slow in a slightly Southern lilt from his days growing up in the South Carolina country. Maybe it's because he's dressed down—white T-shirt, bright Titan-blue shorts, black socks, and navy blue slides—and a bit underslept, but Hopkins exudes calm. It's been hard-earned. His father died in a car accident when Hopkins was a baby. About ten years later, his mom was attacked by a woman who threw acid on her, an assault that put her in a coma and ultimately left her blind. That's always provided him a measure of perspective. Now he's rounding it out with experience. He has the benefit of having already played with something to prove after years spent already proving it. In 2020, he was traded by the Houston Texans, the team that drafted him in 2013. He was one of the best receivers in the NFL, and still seemed to be on his way up. The Texans sent him to the Cardinals anyway, in exchange for a running back most considered to be on his way down. "It didn't hurt me, as much as it hurt them," Hopkins says, when I ask if that stung. (He's not wrong: the Texans have failed to win more than four games in any of the three seasons since they've traded Hopkins away.)

So today, he comes off as a guy not easily bothered, even in the midst of what was an uncertain—or, as he says, exciting—offseason. "I've never really been a person who got up or down too much about what's going on around me, like with football, because I know once I get on the field, my play is going to speak for itself," he says.

Be that as it may, sitting here, before the season, he has some things he'd like to say anyway: about what went wrong in Arizona, why he decided to join the Titans, and a message for the teams that he can't seem to reach by phone.

"I don't look at age, but it's some of the reason some teams might've passed up on me. Their #1 DB would have a hard time against me on the island," he says. What teams might've seen as age, Hopkins sees as experience, a backlog of routes run and balls caught that has him feeling pretty good about what he still has left in the tank: "It ain't too many people out there that can say honestly that they can lock me down, guard me for a full four quarters."

DeAndre Hopkins's hands have always stood out. As a kid, when people would shake his hand, they would comment on how big it was. In fifth or sixth grade, his aunt had to explain to him that he needed to be a bit gentler with the passes he was throwing to his rec basketball teammates—he had such a strong grip on the ball that his teammates couldn't catch the frozen ropes he was whipping their way. Eventually, of course, he turned to catching instead of throwing. Rob Moore, his new wide receivers coach at the Titans, said the first thing he noticed about him was how those hands "attack the football," giving

Hopkins a much larger range of reception than is available to most other people. “You see why he’s a security blanket for a lot of quarterbacks,” says Moore. “Because he has that knack for getting his hands on the football and completing the catch. Some guys can get to it but can’t finish it.”

That Hopkins does finish it is not just because of the whirlpools on the end of his arms. It’s knowing how to properly deploy them, combining deft timing, elite body control, and fearless competitiveness. “We always felt like the tighter the coverage, the more open he was,” says Mike Vrabel, who, in addition to being Hopkins’s new coach at the Tennessee Titans, was defensive coordinator for the Houston Texans in 2017 and 2018, and so faced Hopkins in practice. “That didn’t bother him. Guys on body, just hanging on him or close to him, is something that he would almost rather have. He would rather feel and know where they were, it felt like.” Ryan Tannehill, the Titans quarterback, says the first pass he threw to his new teammate was a go-ball down the sideline in tight coverage. “I put the ball kind of high so he can go up and get it, and sure enough, he goes up and makes the play,” he says. “He’s a guy who can always create a little bit of space.”

One of the other major attributes that helped separate Hopkins from more mortal receivers was his durability: he played in 132 of his first 134 career games. But in 2021, his second year in Arizona, that changed. First, an aggravated hamstring forced him to sit out three games in the middle of the season. In his second game back, he tore his MCL and missed the rest of the year. They were the first significant injuries of Hopkins’s career. Then, ahead of last season, the league announced that Hopkins failed a test for performance enhancing drugs, which resulted in him being suspended for the first six games of 2022. (Hopkins maintains that he has no idea how ostarine, the substance he says he tested positive for, got into his system. “I didn’t take the shit,” he tells me.)

When he returned in the middle of last year, he played the remainder of the year and averaged nearly 80 yards per game, making him, once again, one of the top 10 receivers, production-wise. But all the time missed had done damage to Hopkins’s reputation. Was his body breaking down? In 2021’s annual NFL Top 100 preseason poll, a ranking of the top 100 players as voted on by fellow players, Hopkins was number eight, and the second receiver on the list. Ahead of this season, he had fallen to number ninety.

Hopkins has heard this talk, particularly with regard to his torn MCL. He points out that the tear happened not because his knee gave out, but because two guys landed on his leg. A “freakish accident,” he calls it. “Of course you hear all the rumors, like, Oh, he’s getting old, and stuff like that, but those injuries happen to people who are 20 or 21.” Of course, it’s easier to bounce back when you’re 21 than when you’re 31. Which is why Hopkins has grown newly obsessed with taking care of his body. In fact, he goes as far as calling his injuries a blessing. “I don’t look at anything as a mistake,” he says. “Obviously, God is telling me I need to do something different. That’s just how I look at stuff, on a spiritual level.” In this case, what God was telling him was that he needed to supplement what was partially God-given—his hands, his durability—with a better fitness and nutrition plan. For instance, he says it wasn’t until Arizona that he got a chef, who started helping him rethink a pregame meal routine that, back when he was with the Texans, was not always as stellar as his play.

“Being in Houston, there’s so much food and it’s so accessible,” he says. “If you don’t really have a strong will, or a chef, how would you know not to go to Mastro’s and get you whatever steak you wanted?” He remembers one game day morning in particular when, feeling like shit after taking down a Texas-sized serving of red meat the night before, he went to stadium early to try and sweat it out in the steam room. All that did was give him cramps when the game started. “I didn’t understand you can’t just drink water when you get out of the steam, you gotta drink salt and potassium,” he says. Though he laughs at the memory, his point is a powerful one: Hopkins has always been elite because of his in-game ability to control his body in tight spaces, but he’s learning more and more about how to take care of it before he even puts on his pads.

So he applied the same logic to his training. After his MCL surgery, he looked for the best trainer he could find, and got connected to Nicholas Hill at Exos, a strength and speed coach who has worked closely with other NFL stars like Odell Beckham, Jr., and Saquon Barkley. Up until then, Hopkins says he relied mostly on his natural athleticism. “I’m from the country, so I go run some hills and lift some weights, and I’m good, you know?” he says. Hill introduced him to track-based work, incorporating exercises that taught Hopkins new things about acceleration, mechanics, and body positions and angles. Think about that for a second: Hopkins racked up more than 11,000 receiving yards before he knew how to train for speed. “He’s building strength that he didn’t have before,” says Hill. “He’s getting better at 31 years old, which is a scary thought.”

Hopkins agrees. “This is probably the best shape I’ve been in physically since I’ve been playing, since I came into the NFL from college,” he says, before acknowledging that most older players tend to say that. “But I feel like my training and my body has—not changed, but adjusted to my training routine and my eating habits. I feel healthier after practice.” On top of that, he has the type of veteran savvy that only comes through experience. Last year, he performed well in a rather disappointing situation in Arizona, playing for a team that cycled through four quarterbacks, and finished the season on a serious losing skid. “I still thrived in the offense with a lot going on outside the game of football,” he says. “That’s not just being smart or good. That’s being mentally strong as well.”

A testament to this mental strength: Hopkins’s NFL-topping 11,298 career receiving yards have come while playing for thirteen different starting quarterbacks. The fact that he has thrived in an 11-year game of quarterback musical chairs speaks to Hopkins’s mindset, a balance of acceptance and positivity, and an ability to find opportunity no matter the external circumstance. It’s something Hill saw early on during his work with Hopkins, when the PED suspension came down. “He was like, I want to use this time, I don’t want to waste it,” he remembers. “He was very positive about it: It is what it is, there’s nothing we can do about it, let’s take advantage of this additional time.” It’s that type of ease that anchored Hopkins during a chaotic offseason, and that has him feeling confident in learning yet another offensive system. “I didn’t mind not knowing where I would land up,” he says. “To me, I was like, that’s longer I can be in the gym. That’s longer I can go work and craft. I don’t mind at all, cause I know the work I put in the offseason, it’ll show anywhere I go.”

When Hopkins was released by the Cardinals, he immediately became one of the more intriguing stories of the NFL offseason. Because he had been stuck on those mostly underperforming teams with that carousel of mediocre quarterbacks, people couldn’t help but wonder: Would we see an all-time receiver land at a place where he might run down a Super Bowl ring before his career is over?

Hopkins believes that the 2021 Cardinals team he was on, during the season he got injured, had a shot, referring to that year as “our Super Bowl year in Arizona.” They were 7-1 when the hamstring first sidelined him. They lost five of their next nine games, and then lost in the first round of the playoffs. Then came the 4-13 finish last year and Hopkins’s release from the team. I ask him what went wrong. He takes a long pause, considering. “I feel like we stopped having faith in each other, as a team,” he says. “I feel like if the trust isn’t there, it’s hard to win games.”

Hopkins says that as soon as he saw the Titans practice, he recognized a different kind of work ethic, one he hadn’t seen on past teams. “I wouldn’t say it’s because of Arizona, the reason I came here, to have that 360 switch, but I would say it was definitely part of my decision to be somewhere that did have a winning culture, or a fighting culture.”

One of the big reasons for that type of culture is head coach Mike Vrabel, who spent eight of his 14 NFL seasons playing linebacker at the New England Patriots for the ultimate culture-builder Bill Belichick (the two won three Super Bowls together).

“What I love about Vrabel is that he keeps it real with you,” Hopkins says. “He doesn’t care who you are.”

Case in point: After Vrabel left his defensive coordinator position at the Texans to take the Titans head coaching job after the 2018 season, he saw a clip of Hopkins dropping a pass against the Colts. Hopkins received a postgame text from his former coach. Why didn’t you catch that? That ain’t you, Hopkins remembers it saying. Or take a more recent example. “From the second day I got here, he called me out in a team meeting about a play that I fucked up on,” says Hopkins. “I was like, damn, it’s only been one day. I’m over here thinking I’m good, I made a couple plays. We get in the team meeting, and he called me out.” Hopkins can’t remember that happening since the very beginning of his career. “I was like, okay, this is a different standard of football, and I like this,” he says. “This is how you win.”

Except, last year, the Titans struggled to win, losing their last seven games to finish 7-10. If his motivation was only about winning, it might’ve made more sense for Hopkins to sign with the Kansas City Chiefs or the Buffalo Bills, two of the other three teams (along with the New England Patriots) that he says did call him. The Chiefs won the Super Bowl last year, the Bills are a serious threat to make it there this year, and both teams have generationally good quarterbacks.

But those teams wouldn’t pay Hopkins what he thought he was worth. “You have to know your value and have some level of respect for who you are as a human being,” he says. “Is the possibility of you going somewhere who is a Super Bowl-caliber team, on paper, is that worth you being paid minimum? It doesn’t add up.”

So he signed a two-year, $26 million deal with a team that he feels is, like him, being overlooked. He points to the fact that the Titans, reduced to using their third-string quarterback, were still one game away from making the playoffs last year. Plus, every other year during Vrabel’s five-year tenure has been a winning one, and includes two division titles and one AFC championship appearance. “I feel like the Titans have a chance to win the Super Bowl, and they’ve shown that, over the past couple years,” he says. “There’s not many teams that can say that they just ran over the Titans.” Though, as Hopkins has learned, NFL fans tend to have a short memory, particularly when recent struggles cloud past success. “A lot of people have written them off, like they’ve written me off,” he says.

If Hopkins has played long enough to know his worth, he’s also played long enough to know not to tie all of it up in football. “You cannot just try to be a football player,” says Hopkins. “You can’t let that consume who you are, because you’ll get lost.”

Look no further than the ink on his body to spot the symbols for some of the other things he cares about deeply: a peace symbol on the back of his left hand; a Buddha on the inside of his right forearm; the hieroglyphic symbols for “family” on the side of his head; a portrait of his mom and dad on the inside of his biceps. His family and his spirituality have managed to give him a measure of peace: “I do understand that life is like a cycle, and you choose your happiness,” he says. “Even as a kid, I always took a positive aspect to certain negative things.”

He points to his father’s death and his mom’s assault.

“Was I mad before? As a kid? Yeah, I used to be very angry, because I used to be very confused about not having a father,” he says. He used to struggle with the fact that other kids would have their mom and dad at their games, and Hopkins might only have an aunt. “As I got older, I just realized my mom is working two jobs, trying to take care of four kids. What happened to my dad, it’s like, shit, I can’t do nothing about it. I can only try to, as I got older, be the man in the household that he’d want me to be.”

This is the mentality that allows Hopkins to see his injuries as a blessing, his suspension as an opportunity, and, this offseason, to let go of any grudges. “My mom forgave the woman who threw acid on her and left her blind. Me seeing that and having someone like that in my life, it’s hard for me to sit there and be mad about a football team trading me, or someone not wanting me for my abilities. It’s like, do I care? Yeah. But, shit is that like the end-all, be-all? No, life goes on.”

The next big chapter of that life officially starts this weekend, in New Orleans, when Hopkins will first take the field as a Titan and answer the questions that have been following him the last couple of years. The league will be paying close attention, especially, perhaps, those teams that weren’t sure if he still has the juice. I ask Hopkins what the teams that passed on him should know. What did the Titans get that they all missed out on?

“Man, shit, you ask the people around this building, since I been here, what they got?” he says. “That’s a wolf. Not a dog. Wolves eat dogs. You feel me? They got a wolf.”

DEANDRE HOPKINS IS HAPPY TO MAKE THE SPECTACULAR FEEL NORMAL FOR TENNESSEE TITANS FOOTBALL

BY NICK SUSS

NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN

JULY 29, 2023

Just because it's new for the Tennessee Titans doesn't mean it's new for DeAndre Hopkins.

Hopkins generated headlines and fanfare with a highlight catch over cornerback Kristian Fulton at Titans training camp Friday, picking a contested ball out of the air and muscling his way to the ground through Fulton. To Titans fans, it's the kind of play that energizes an offense that desperately needed a top-tier pass catching threat.

To Hopkins, it's a weekday.

"I've been doing that since I've been at Clemson, so obviously now you guys get to see it," Hopkins said Saturday. "It's what I've been doing since I've been playing football. Obviously Ryan (Tannehill) trusts me to just put the ball up in the air and for me to come down with it. Hopefully we can keep doing that to build that rapport."

Hopkins said he hasn't had a problem feeling like himself through three days of practice, even after a bizarre offseason that saw him released by the Arizona Cardinals in May and unsigned into July. He didn't officially sign with the Titans until two days before training camp opened, but that didn't stop him from staying in shape and honing his skills; Titans coach Mike Vrabel said he has been pleased with Hopkins' conditioning.

Heading into his 11th year as a pro, Hopkins is once again adjusting to life with a new quarterback. He said he and Tannehill still have things to work on but they have been able to "put a lot together" in their quest to build chemistry. That manifested early, with Tannehill completing passes to Hopkins in team periods on both of the first two practice days.

Hopkins has been impressed with second-year receiver Treylon Burks, complimenting him for his willingness to seek out and even demand extra practice reps to work specific routes. And he said he thinks backup quarterbacks Malik Willis and Will Levis are getting better and putting the work in to be NFL passers.

But mostly, Hopkins is just sliding into his new role. He's wearing No. 10, just as he did in Houston and Arizona. Not that there was any conflict about that. He said he didn't have to petition or give any huge payout to get the number, which he says he has always worn in honor of an unlikely idol of his.

"(Lionel) Messi was one of my favorite athletes," Hopkins said. "Just being a soccer fan, I always felt like if I had a chance, I wanted to put some respect to Messi."

HOPKINS SAYS HENRY PLAYED BIG FACTOR IN CHOOSING TITANS

BY JOHN GLENNON
NASHVILLE POST

JULY 25, 2023

The value of an NFL running back may be falling these days.

But Titans wide receiver DeAndre Hopkins said the team's prized back, Derrick Henry, proved quite a draw in Hopkins' decision to sign with Tennessee.

Hopkins envisions his role in the passing game, combined with the threat of Henry on the ground, as playing complementary roles in helping to improve a Titans offense that finished 30th in average yards per game and 28th in average points per game last season.

"Derrick played a big factor in me coming here," said Hopkins, who signed a two-year, $26 million deal with the team. "I always wanted to be part of an offense that had a great run game. I know that helps my job, and I know it's going to help his job having someone like me out there, I think. We'll see."

Arizona had a top-10 run offense in each of Hopkins' first two seasons there, but the Cardinals tailed off in 2022, finishing 22nd at just 110.2 yards per contest.

The Titans, of course, have been one of the NFL's most run-heavy teams under Titans coach Mike Vrabel, who has made extensive use of Henry. The three-time Pro Bowl back has totaled 4,657 yards and 56 touchdowns over the past four seasons.

Henry's topped 1,000 yards in four of his last five seasons, falling just 63 yards short of the mark in 2021 when he played only eight games.

Hopkins has played on the same team as three runners, all in Houston, who've topped 1,000 yards in the past — Carlos Hyde (1,070 yards in 2019), Lamar Miller (1,073 yards in 2016) and Arian Foster (1,246 in 2014).

He spoke of Henry in a different light.

"I've played with Arian Foster," Hopkins said. "I've played with some great running backs, but Derrick Henry is definitely by far one of the best running backs that I will be able to have a chance to play with. I think that won't just help us, but the team as well. So Derrick Henry being here played a very big part in me coming here."

The value of an NFL running back is a hot topic these days.

One of the league's top backs, Dalvin Cook, was cut by Minnesota during the offseason. Another, Cincinnati's Joe Mixon, took a pay cut. Three other high-quality backs — the New York Giants' Saquon Barkley, Dallas' Tony Pollard and Las Vegas' Josh Jacobs — were stymied in their efforts to get long-term deals.

Hopkins doesn't agree with the trend, which could affect Henry, who is going into the final year of his contract.

"Without a great running back, or without a good running back, the pass game is very hard to establish," Hopkins said. "I've played a lot of football. You've got to establish the run first. I think those guys are very important to the game of football."

"Obviously I see what's going on, not a fan of it. But you know, that's not my decision. Only thing I can do is go out there and do my job. But having a good running back on the team, it definitely helps win games, for sure."

“That’s one of the guys that I’m excited to work with and to see and know how he plays.”

As he prepares for his fourth NFL season, Adoreé Jackson remains connected to track and field. He said he is disappointed that he won’t get to see some of his former teammates compete at the Olympics this summer (in March, the 2020 Games were postponed a year due to the COVID-19 pandemic).

But he knows he has at least one new teammate with whom he can commiserate, and about whom he already has drawn conclusions.

“I know it’s not easy to run track,” Adoreé Jackson said. “So, for him to do that and play football, I understand what type of player and where he is.”

AMANI HOOKER

TITANS SAFETY AMANI HOOKER THANKFUL FOR CONTRACT EXTENSION WITH THE TEAM

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
SEPTEMBER 9, 2022

NASHVILLE – The Titans on Friday agreed to terms on a multi-year contract extension with safety Amani Hooker.

After practice on Friday, Hooker said he's thankful for several reasons.

"It means a lot," Hooker said. "It shows how much the Titans believe in me and trust me, and I have that same trust and confidence in them. I am just going to do my job to make sure I can help this team win and help them win a Super Bowl."

Hooker said he called his parents when the deal became official.

Growing up, Hooker recalled cutting grass, walking dogs, and working a construction job to make money. Hooker said he knew after two days the construction job wasn't for him.

The NFL has worked out well for Hooker and his family.

"My parents, they were with me when I was in little league and they knew my dream when I was in kindergarten," Hooker said. "For them to see where I am at today, I know they are very proud of me, and I wouldn't be here without them."

"Growing up, the dream was for me to get to the NFL, and it was also my dream to stay in the NFL and be able to provide for my family. Being able to do that is a blessing from God."

Hooker, heading into his fourth season, has played in 44 games, with 15 starts, for the Titans since being picked in the fourth round of the 2019 NFL Draft.

Over the years, Hooker has developed into a key player on the team's defense.

In 2021, Hooker started 12 games and finished the year with 62 tackles, and an interception. Hooker also added an interception on the team's playoff contest against the Bengals.

Hooker had a team-high four interceptions in 2020.

In three seasons, Hooker has recorded 119 tackles, five interceptions, 12 passes defended and a forced fumble.

With five career interceptions, Hooker is tied with Juan Thornhill for the third-most among safeties from the 2019 draft class, behind only Darnell Savage Jr. (eight) and Taylor Rapp (seven). From 2020 to 2021, only 11 NFL safeties had more interceptions than Hooker.

Hooker, whose contract was set to expire after the 2022 season before the extension, said the thought of playing alongside veteran safety Kevin Byard long-term is key.

"It is definitely a blessing," Hooker said of Byard. "Watching KB and how he is around the building, I wanted to mimic that because I've seen the success that he had off the field, and on the field as well."

"We have been together for four years, and we're about to be together for another four right now. So we're going to be able to be on the same page and be able to make plays and we'll be the best we can be."

The Titans kick off the 2022 season against the New York Giants on Sunday at Nissan Stadium.

BYARD SAYS HOOKER HAS FOLLOWED PROPER PATH TO LEADERSHIP

BY MICHAEL HOGAN
SI.COM
JUNE 3, 2021

Amani Hooker figures to make a bigger impact in more than one way this season.

First, the Tennessee Titans safety figures to be a full-time starter for the first time in his career after the team released veteran Kenny Vaccaro as part of a secondary overhaul in March.

He also hopes to be more of a leader for the defensive unit.

And nobody knows how to properly establish leadership than the man he will be playing beside in the defensive backfield this season, Kevin Byard, who has been a team captain in each of the past two seasons.

In order to become a good leader, Byard said, one must first be a good follower. And Hooker has done that well over his first two NFL seasons.

“I think Amani has been a great follower since he’s been here,” Byard said. “Watching me and (Vaccaro), or just watching any of the veteran guys and learning from them, learning how to be a pro.”

A third-round pick out of Middle Tennessee State in 2016, that’s exactly how Byard became one of the Titans’ most prominent voices in the locker room, for both on and off-field matters.

The Pro Bowler and All-Pro observed and learned from the likes of defensive back Jason McCourty and linebacker Brian Orapko.

Not only would Byard listen to what veterans had to say on a daily basis, but he paid close attention to the smallest of details. In the NFL, of course, doing the “little things” matters most.

“One thing that I did when I first got into the league was I looked at the parking lot,” Byard said. “When I got there in the morning, I was looking at cars ... what car is here early in the morning? Okay, this guy here. I was asking Jason, ‘Hey, what time are you getting here in the morning? Why are you coming here so early?’ They were getting rehab or doing the little things.”

A fourth-round pick out of Iowa in 2019, Hooker’s ascension to a more significant role on the defense started last season. His snaps with the defense increased, and when Vaccaro missed three games due to a lingering concussion, Hooker was called upon to start.

He finished tied for the team lead in interceptions with four and second in passes defended eight while also making 51 total tackles. All of those marks are career-highs.

Entering the 2021 season, Hooker is in a position to evolve as a leader for many reasons. Many younger players will fill the secondary after numerous moves in free agency and the NFL Draft.

But most importantly, he’s taken after many veterans over his first two seasons, including Byard.

“He’s into that role where he’s out there playing, he’s out there being more vocal, making calls and checks. That’s the start of it,” Byard said. “Going out there being sure of yourself, knowing what you need to do. When you assure yourself and know what you need to do, you can coach another guy up. I think he’s been doing pretty great at that.

“I think we’re going to be pretty good running mates this year.”

TIM KELLY IS TITANS’
HOPE FOR A BETTER 2023,
BUT IT’S KATIE KELLY WHO IS ‘TOUGH AS HELL’

BY JOE REXRODE
THE ATHLETIC
SEPTEMBER 7, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Tim Kelly’s office at Tennessee Titans headquarters is one big dry-erase board, a multi-wall collection of scribbled plays in various colors of marker, as expected as telescopes in the office of an astronomer.

Most of those doodles will come and go, but one will remain untouched. It’s to the far left, by the window that looks onto the practice fields at St. Thomas Sports Park. “One In Take A Win” is the name of this play, and the squiggly lines indicate an inside run. The key to success, though, is rooted in something any offensive coordinator will tell you: This is a numbers game.

Aspiring OC Norah Kelly, age 8, made a salient point to her father as she was putting it on the board. If you can smuggle one extra player onto the field than your opponent has, how can you be stopped? When Norah watches the sport, as she does voraciously, and a team gets a penalty for too many men on the field ...

“She says, ‘They’re trying my play but they aren’t sneaky enough,’” said Kelly, whose family includes wife Katie and 6-year-old daughter Quinn.

Quinn is the art enthusiast, an intricate Titans helmet among her contributions to Dad’s dry-erase board. The Kelly girls are all over this workspace. And a big part of why it’s in Nashville.

The Titans are counting on the 37-year-old Kelly to revive what was one of the worst offenses in the NFL in 2022. If he does, this could be a surprise team in 2023. He might have taken the controls much earlier, but the Houston Texans blocked Mike Vrabel’s attempt to interview Kelly for the OC job in January of 2021 after Arthur Smith left Tennessee to become head coach of the Atlanta Falcons.

The Texans wanted to keep Kelly even though they were between head coaches. They fired the next head coach, David Culley, Kelly and the rest of the staff after the 4-13 season of 2021. Kelly soon had job offers, including one to be the Titans’ pass game coordinator under OC Todd Downing. And this is where family dictated a football decision.

“Two other teams were on the table and I was like, ‘No, I want to go be with Vrabel,’” Katie said. “This was very intentional, to be around people you trust and care about year-round. This is a bottom-line business, but at the end of the day, it’s about who you’re battling with. And these people, they know our story. They know my issues.”

The Vrabels were right there with the Kellys in 2017 in Houston.

“The year I almost died,” Katie said.

‘This offense gives you the answers’

Shane McGregor had seen Bill O’Brien once, on TV, engaged in a screaming match with Tom Brady. That was a few weeks before Penn State announced O’Brien as its head football coach in January of 2012, replacing Joe Paterno, who was fired amid the Jerry Sandusky child sex abuse scandal. McGregor and his Penn State teammates who remained with the program were about to transition from months of unrest to an immersive football education.

The Patriots offense, even the scaled-down version O’Brien was installing, was a revelation.

“I mean, that spring we learned an offense by watching Tom Brady and the Pats,” said McGregor, a senior walk-on and third-string quarterback for those Nittany Lions. “Football had been a game I played, but that made it more like an art or science to study. It was almost, like, liberating. It was fascinating, especially for a quarterback. Realizing how you can use your mind to control a game.”

O’Brien liked to tell his players that he was “addicted to football” — that while they were home playing video games or out with their friends or girlfriends, he was home thinking about what to dial up on a third-and-8.

“That happened for me,” said McGregor, to the point that he was hired as head football coach of his high school alma mater, Central Cambria High in Ebensburg, Pa., at age 27.

It happened for Charles London, who had worked with O’Brien at Duke, coached running backs for him at Penn State and with the Houston Texans, and is now Titans pass game coordinator/quarterbacks coach.

It happened for Kelly, too. His arrival in State College in 2012 as a 25-year-old grad assistant for the defensive line transformed his career.

“A football addict? Yeah,” Kelly said. “That would be accurate. It’s a gift and a curse.”

He grew up in Chicago Heights, Ill., about 30 miles south of Chicago. Younger brother Dennis, an 11-year NFL offensive tackle — including a stint with the Titans from 2016 to 2020 — recalled Tim’s initiative (cold-calling a travel baseball coach to get a tryout at age 10) and extreme competitiveness (turning off video games and running upstairs if he was losing).

Mike and Geri Kelly had four kids, one girl and three boys, with Tim and Dennis in the middle. This was a football family with big gatherings on Sundays for Bears games. Mike painted the field — he once tried the Vols checkerboard look in the end zones — and worked the chains for the boys' little league games. All excelled in high school.

Tim Kelly did not have NFL talent, but he was a four-year starter at defensive tackle, two-time academic all-district honoree and senior captain for the Eastern Illinois Panthers. He volunteered as a coach during the spring of his senior year, loved it and went from there to a GA post at Illinois Wesleyan. Then he got a paying gig, in 2010 as defensive coordinator at Division II Minnesota State Moorhead.

It did not go well.

“We were awful,” Kelly said, but that’s where he met Katie Anderson.

A nursing student at the University of North Dakota, Katie had played volleyball at Minnesota State Moorhead. Her brother was the football team’s strength coach and her mother was an assistant athletic director. Katie had also worked as a nanny for one of the coaches and wondered how his wife tolerated the hours of a football coach.

She would soon know that life. She dated Kelly long distance after the staff was let go — he still likes to joke that his mother-in-law fired him — and he moved on to be a GA at Ball State. Ball State’s offensive line coach was John Strollo. He had worked with O’Brien years earlier at Duke, was hired by O’Brien to be Penn State’s tight ends coach after the 2011 season, and recommended Kelly to O’Brien as a GA candidate.

ADVERTISEMENT

Ball State offensive coordinator Joey Lynch, now Vanderbilt’s offensive coordinator, did an all-night cram session with Kelly on offensive line and tight end techniques before his interview at Penn State, because Kelly thought he was going to be on the offensive side of the ball. When he found out he’d be a GA for defensive line coach Larry Johnson, he sighed in relief.

But after two seasons of those crazy GA hours and a small stipend in return — living with Katie, who was supporting the couple with her nursing job — Kelly got his break, on the other side of the ball. He had become fascinated with an offense that was dictated by the skills of the players running it and gave those players more control on the field than any other he had seen.

O’Brien was leaving for the Houston Texans. He was putting together a staff that would include Vrabel as linebackers coach. He wanted Kelly to come along as an offensive quality control coach. O’Brien told Kelly that, the way he saw the game, he had a future on offense. This meant a salary of six figures. And crazier hours.

“I walked in and there was a playbook and it was about this big,” Kelly said, holding his hands apart to suggest a publication right around a foot thick. “And it was like, ‘Good luck.’ It sucked. It was the hardest thing I’ve ever done. But it kind of Mr. Miyagi’d you. You’re sitting there and have to go back and see what that run concept is, see what that run is, that protection. By the end of the season, you’re like, ‘Oh. I know this entire offense.’”

He and Katie also were married in 2014, though the new gig did not leave him much time to help with that.

As Kelly sat in his office Friday afternoon, reflecting on those times, Vrabel walked in and said: “Let’s wrap it up.”

He was talking about the workday for Titans coaches, and in Vrabel’s terms, Kelly is the head coach of the offense. Kelly sent texts to the offensive coaches telling them to head home to their families.

Football coaching is an enemy of work/life balance — McGregor resigned after last season, he said, because he still wants to travel and have time for other things in his life — but Vrabel tries to find some. His offensive coordinator’s family helps illustrate why.

A turn for the worse

The inherent absence of balance in this world explains why so many people were downplaying the way Katie was feeling in 2017. Of course, she was exhausted. She had baby Quinn and 2-year-old Norah at home.

Quinn had been born prematurely and had underdeveloped lungs, so she was in intensive care for a week after birth. O’Brien sent Kelly — who had moved up to Texans tight ends coach by then — away from work and to the hospital until she was able to come home. Mike and Jen Vrabel watched Norah. That meant a lot to the family.

Quinn got stronger quickly. Katie kept feeling worse. This was a college athlete, a runner — London recalled running a half-marathon with Katie and Tim in Beaumont, Texas, and Katie “kicking our butts” — who had no energy.

But that can be the life of a coach’s spouse with young kids. Even the bloody stools could be explained away by post-partum hemorrhoids.

“Everyone had an answer of why this was normal,” she said. “So I just kept going. You tell yourself, ‘This is just what we do, keep going, keep going.’”

The exhaustion, headaches and weight loss were concerning. The bloody stools got thicker while the family was in Fargo, N.D., visiting her parents. Tim insisted they go to an urgent care facility. She was told she had “something major going on,” and colon cancer was feared initially.

Weeks later, in August back in Houston, she finally got a diagnosis of severe ulcerative colitis, a bowel disease that causes inflammation and ulcers in the digestive tract. There was no telling if it was newly developed or had just been dormant in Katie. There's no cure, but it can be managed with treatment.

That got started in tandem with the 2017 football season. Katie would need to remove gluten and alcohol from her diet. She would need a regular concoction of medicine. There was comfort in a diagnosis and plan as the grind of fall got going.

But Katie wasn't feeling better. She was so visibly miserable one day that two of her friends insisted on taking her to an urgent care in Houston. She resisted at first, then relented. Moments after arriving, she was being rushed by ambulance to the hospital. Tim raced from the Texans facility to join her.

"They couldn't break her fever," he said.

"I had no blood pressure," Katie said. "I was given epinephrine in the ambulance to keep me alive."

She had experienced a "cytokine storm," doctors would tell her later, the result of her immune system responding too aggressively to her condition. Weeks in the hospital and a stool transplant would follow. One medication gave her drug-induced Lupus and had to be discontinued. The trial and error perpetuated the exhaustion.

"She's tough as hell," Kelly said of his wife.

"It was all very scary," Geri Kelly said. "But Katie, she dealt with it like a champ."

Infusions of Entyvio, an antibody medication, started to restore Katie's health. That's a permanent solution, every six weeks, with a couple of days of fatigue after each infusion as the primary drawback. The Kellys got through the crisis OK, with help from their football family. Then came another.

In August of 2018, Mike Kelly went in for a knee replacement and was given a clean bill of health otherwise. In October, he wasn't feeling well and went in. A scan showed cancer spreading aggressively in his bones, liver and lungs. He had weeks to live. He was 68.

Those were the years of the boys opposing each other as AFC South rivals. Mike and Gerry just rooted for each team's offense when the Texans and Titans played. Tim had his usual postgame FaceTime call with his dad after a Dec. 9 loss to the Colts, knowing his father wasn't doing well.

He got a call around 11 p.m. that an ambulance had taken Mike to the hospital. He got a call around 3 a.m. that he had passed away. He walked into the Texans facility at 5 a.m., as usual on a Monday.

"If you're here this afternoon," O'Brien said to Kelly, "I'm going to fire you."

Vrabel dispatched Dennis to Chicago as well, and the brothers and their families were on hand for Mike's wake and funeral. Then it was back to Houston and Nashville to prepare for the Jets and Giants, respectively. Both teams played in New Jersey that weekend. Both won.

"Right back to work for both of them," Geri said. "That's exactly what Mike would have wanted."

A few weeks later, O'Brien promoted Kelly to offensive coordinator, making him one of the youngest in the league at 33. O'Brien told reporters of the move: "Timmy's had a lot of input into what we do. He's had a big part of the process and he's ready for the challenge."

Family time

Grandpa Mike's spaghetti is the favorite dish in the Kelly household these days, and it has undergone changes since Mike Kelly used to make it for his kids — amid jokes about an Irish family going with spaghetti as a staple. Tim weaved in mushrooms to the recipe at some point, despite complaints from his father about "adding a fungus." And it is, of course, gluten-free now.

"Take some yellow onions and dice them, chop the mushrooms, add butter, olive oil, tomato paste, tomato puree," Kelly said. "Salt, pepper, fresh green peppers. Simmer that. Then the meatballs. Then the Italian sausage. And then we're rolling."

It's a tribute to a man Norah has some very early memories of, and it's far from the only play in Kelly's playbook. Cooking is something he loves and has embraced as a family duty, especially because he likes to find new things that Katie can eat and actually likes. He won't be making any of Norah's softball games this fall. But it's about being "totally present" when he is home, a common refrain among coaches.

"I know coaches work," he said, "but ... what about how much she works? When does she get to turn it off?"

Starting Sunday at New Orleans, Kelly will try to fry up some offense for a team that finished 28th in scoring and 30th in total offense last season, firing Downing when it was over. That led to the promotion of Kelly, with Vrabel calling him "the perfect fit" and saying of an offense that was fourth in scoring and second in total offense in 2020 under Smith: "I don't think everything is broken."

It's different now, though. This is the Erhardt-Perkins offense, named after Ron Erhardt and Ray Perkins from when they were offensive assistants with the Patriots in the 1970s. But the only thing that's passed down from that time is the nomenclature. Kelly pointed to the Bill Belichick era, transitioning to a three-wide offense with Air Raid concepts and Randy Moss at receiver, then to a two-tight end base when Rob Gronkowski and Aaron Hernandez were added. That's the point.

One of the most impactful football meetings of Kelly's career was early in his time at Penn State when O'Brien said it's not about plugging players into specific plays, it's about figuring out what your specific guys do well and designing to that.

"That was the first time it was like, 'Oh,'" Kelly said.

More than the modern West Coast offense that was in place in Vrabel's first five seasons, this offense is "totally quarterback-driven," London said. The quarterback, not the center, calls protections. The quarterback doesn't just have one alternative play he can check into, he has a large menu.

"Some new concepts, new protections, new ideas we haven't had in the past," Tannehill said Wednesday.

"It's more players' decisions, we're getting to react to defenses and make high-speed decisions on the field," said receiver Chris Moore, who was with Kelly in Houston in 2021. "Whereas some offenses I've been in, like, you just run the route, run it the way it is on paper. This is much more reacting to what you see."

Kelly said he has changed, too. His largely successful tenure in Houston saw O'Brien give him play-calling duties in 2020, and he said a 42-36 overtime loss at Tennessee — with Jeff Simmons batting away a two-point pass that would have sealed the game — gave him confidence. He's better at not letting bad plays fester, he said. And at delegating.

"Hands down the biggest change I've made over the past couple years is, like, it's OK to let guys do their jobs," Kelly said. "They don't need me in front of the room every single day, talking about every single subject. I presented everything in '21, and I'm not doing that this year."

London has third downs. Tight ends coach Tony Dews has the red zone. Run game coordinator/running backs coach Justin Outten — Denver's OC last season — has added run concepts to Kelly's scheme. Between that and last season working in the previous offense, Kelly said it's fair to call this a "hybrid offense." He wanted to retain the physical, Derrick Henry-led identity that he saw beat the Texans so many times.

Titans center Aaron Brewer said Kelly is "like a guru back there" calling plays. Right guard Daniel Brunskill called him "Kyle-esque" — as in, Kyle Shanahan, play-calling whiz and coach of the 49ers teams that included Brunskill from 2019-22. By that, he meant Kelly's ability to explain plays to the Titans from a global perspective. And his work ethic.

"That's what makes Kyle a genius," Brunskill said. "The hard work."

That eats at the time in a day. But Kelly finds it when he can. The whole family attended the preseason game at Minnesota, and Vrabel came to the sideline and found Norah and Quinn.

Titans coach Mike Vrabel has a big hug for Quinn Kelly at the Aug. 19 preseason game in Minnesota. (Courtesy of the Kelly family)

"He made Norah feel like she's seen, like she's a part of it," Katie said. "I can't tell you how much of a difference that makes."

It doesn't mean Vrabel will be approving "One In Take A Win" anytime soon. But there's a comfort, a history, that made Nashville the right choice for the Kellys. That matters. As does the first thing Norah told Grandma Geri about Vrabel when she found out she'd be rejoining him: "Coach Mike, he gives out the big candy bars on Halloween."

TITANS ELEVATE TIM KELLY TO OFFENSIVE COORDINATOR WHILE MAKING SEVERAL NEW ADDITIONS, AND CHANGES

BY JIM WYATT
TITANS ONLINE
FEBRUARY 8, 2023

Titans head coach Mike Vrabel has made a number of moves on his coaching staff, including promotions and new hires.

Among them: Tim Kelly has been elevated to Offensive Coordinator, a year after joining the staff as the team's Passing Game Coordinator.

Also on Tuesday, the team announced these additions to the coaching staff:

-Charles London has been hired as Pass Game Coordinator/Quarterbacks.

-Chris Harris has been hired as Defensive Pass Game Coordinator/Cornerbacks.

-Lori Locust has been hired as Defensive Quality Control.

-Justin Hamilton has been hired as Defensive Quality Control.

The following coaches remain on the staff with new responsibilities:

-Jason Houghtaling is now the team's new offensive line coach. He replaces Keith Carter, who was not retained.

-Luke Steckel is now the team's Run Game Analyst. Steckel previously served as tight ends coach.

-Pat O'Hara is now the team's Pass Game Analyst. O'Hara previously served as quarterbacks coach.

-Tony Dews is now the team's Tight Ends coach. Dews served previously as Running Backs coach, and that position still needs to be filled.

Vrabel is expected to be available via zoom later today to discuss the new additions/changes on his staff.

The most notable one is Vrabel's decision to promote Kelly to offensive coordinator, where he replaces Todd Downing, who was not retained after last season.

Prior to joining the Titans as Passing Game Coordinator last year, Kelly spent eight seasons (2014-21) with the Houston Texans in a variety of roles, including Offensive Coordinator (2019-21), Tight Ends (2017-18), Assistant Offensive Line (2016) and Offensive Quality Control (2014-16).

As the Texans Offensive Coordinator in 2021, Kelly guided quarterback Davis Mills to a franchise rookie record for passing yards, ranked second among NFL rookies in passer rating and led all NFL quarterbacks in red zone passer rating (116.8). Wide receiver Brandon Cooks also set a career high with 90 receptions. In 2020, quarterback Deshaun Watson led the NFL in passing yards (4,823) and yards per attempt (8.9), while ranking second in passer rating (112.4) and third in completion percentage (70.2%). While with the Texans, the team captured four AFC South division titles.

London joins the Titans after two seasons (2021-22) with the Falcons as their Quarterback coach. Last year, London worked with rookie quarterback Desmond Ridder, who started the final four games of the season and posted a quarterback rating of 86.4 with each game seeing a higher rating than the previous game. As an offense, the Falcons ranked 10th on third down and 14th in the red zone.

Prior to joining the Falcons, London spent three seasons (2018-20) as the Running Backs Coach for Chicago. During his time with the Bears, he worked with a trio of running backs who reached 1,000 scrimmage yards in at least one season – Jordan Howard (2018), Tarik Cohen (2018) and David Montgomery (2019 and 2020). Cohen and Montgomery posted career-high rushing totals under his tutelage. London spent four seasons (2014-17) with Houston as their Running Backs Coach.

London spent two seasons (2012-13) as the Running Back coach/Recruiting Coordinator at Penn State under Head Coach Bill O'Brien. In 2011, London served as an Offensive Assistant/Quality Control coach for the Titans in Mike Munchak's first season as head coach. He was a pro scout for Philadelphia in 2010 and was a Quality Control coach on offense for Chicago from 2007-09. He entered the coaching profession as a graduate assistant (2004-05) and then running back coach (2006) at his alma mater, Duke.

Harris brings 17 years of NFL experience, nine as a coach and eight as a player, to the Titans. He joins the team after spending three seasons (2020-22) as the Defensive Backs coach for the Washington Commanders. Anthony Midget previously served as secondary coach with the Titans, but he was not retained after last season.

At Washington, Harris contributed to one of the best defenses in the NFL over the last three seasons. The Commanders ended the 2022 season in the top ten in a number of categories, including total defense (third), passing yards allowed (fourth), points allowed (seventh), 3rd down defense (first) and red zone defense (eighth). From 2020-22, the Commanders defense ranked eighth in the NFL in passing yards allowed (213.1 yards per game) and fourth in total yards allowed (323.4 yards per game).

Prior to joining Washington, Harris spent four seasons (2016-19) with the Los Angeles Chargers as the assistant defensive backs coach. In his final season with the Chargers, the defense ranked fifth in the NFL in passing yards allowed (200.3) and sixth in total yards (313.1). Harris began his coaching career as a quality control coach on defense with Chicago for two seasons 2013-14.

As an NFL player, Harris played eight seasons at safety with Chicago (2005-06, 10-11), Carolina (2007-08), Detroit (2011) and Jacksonville (2012). He earned second-team All-Pro honors by The Associated Press in 2010 with the Bears. Over his NFL career, he totaled 439 tackles, 16 interceptions, 14 forced fumbles, nine fumble recoveries and one sack in 101 games (88 starts).

Locust becomes the first female to join the coaching staff on a full-time basis. Locust served the past four seasons (2019-22) as the Assistant Defensive Line coach for Tampa Bay.

During her tenure with the Bucs, they led the NFL in rushing defense, allowing only 92.3 yards per game. Additionally, the team ranked fifth in sacks (187), third in tackles for loss (348), first in quarterback hits (452) and fifth in takeaways (102). Nose tackle Vita Vea earned his first Pro Bowl selection, while totaling 15 sacks between 2019 and 2022, a total that led all nose tackles. Locust joined fellow Buccaneers assistant Maral Javadifar in becoming the first women on an NFL coaching staff to win a Super Bowl (LV).

Prior to joining Tampa Bay, Locust was the assistant defensive line coach for the Birmingham Iron of the Alliance of American Football and served as a coaching intern with the Baltimore Ravens during their 2018 training camp.

Locust held a variety of coaching roles leading up to her entry into the NFL coaching ranks, including time with the Lehigh Valley Steelhawks (National Arena League), Central Penn Capitals (NAL) and the York Capitals (American Indoor Football). She also served as a coach for the Central Penn Pairanha (semi-professional) and her high school alma mater, Susquehanna Township H.S. She attended Temple University and also played football (2004-08) for the Central Penn Vipers in the Independent Women's Football League.

Hamilton joins the Titans after 11 seasons coaching in the college ranks, including two seasons (2020-21) as the Defensive Coordinator at Virginia Tech. He joined Virginia Tech in 2018, as Director of Player Development - Defense and was promoted to Safeties coach in 2019. Prior to his time in Blacksburg, he coached for four seasons at VMI, first as outside linebackers/co-special teams (2014-16) and one season (2017) as inside linebackers/co-special teams coach. He started his coaching career Virginia – Wise for three seasons (2011-13).

Info on the returning coaches with new roles:

Tony Dews, Tight Ends

Dews joined the Titans coaching staff in 2018, as the running back coach. He guided running back Derrick Henry to four 1,000-yard seasons, including a career-high 2,027 yards in 2020. Over the past five seasons, Henry leads all NFL running backs with 7,101 yards and 68 touchdowns. Prior to joining the Titans, Dews spent 20 seasons coaching in the college ranks, including 10 seasons coaching wide receivers or tight ends.

Jason Houghtaling, Offensive Line

Houghtaling joined the Titans in 2021 as Offensive Line Assistant. Prior to his time in Tennessee, he spent 14 seasons in college coaching, including five years as the Head Coach at Wagner. The majority of coaching experience on the collegiate level was on the offensive line or as offensive coordinator.

Pat O'Hara, Passing Game Analyst

O'Hara joined the Titans coaching staff in 2018 as the Quarterback coach. During his time with the Titans, quarterback Ryan Tannehill has become the franchise's leader in passer rating (100.5), career completion percentage (66.9%) and sixth in passing yards (12,831). He joined the team after three seasons (2015-17) with the Houston Texans.

Prior to Texans, O'Hara spent many years in the Arena Football League as a player, assistant coach and head coach.

Luke Steckel, Run Game Analyst

Steckel has been with the Titans since 2013 in a variety of roles, including tight ends coach for the last two seasons (2021-22). Last season, the Titans tight ends accounted for 85 receptions and rookie Chig Okonkwo led all NFL rookie tight ends with 450 receiving yards. Over the last two years, the Titans have ranked fifth (2021) and 13th (2022) in rushing offense in the NFL.

3 THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT TENNESSEE
TITANS OFFENSIVE COORDINATOR TIM KELLY

BY DANI MOHR
THE TENNESSEAN
FEBRUARY 8, 2023

The Tennessee Titans officially hired Tim Kelly as the team's new offensive coordinator Tuesday.

Kelly, 36, takes over the position in Nashville after spending 2022 as the Titans' passing game coordinator. He was promoted along with several other coaching changes that the Titans announced Tuesday. He'll replace former offensive coordinator Todd Downing, who was fired after Tennessee missed the playoffs this season.

Here's everything to know about the Titans' new offensive coordinator.

Before spending a year with the Titans as the passing game coordinator, Kelly came to Nashville after spending eight years in Houston.

Kelly previously worked in quality control with the Houston Texans, and assisted with the offensive line and coaching tight ends. After about four seasons, he got promoted as the offensive coordinator in 2019 and was credited with Deshaun Watson's success.

However, he was also credited with the Texans' offensive downfall in 2021 when Tyrod Taylor and Davis Mills took over as quarterbacks. Kelly was fired after leading Houston to a losing record (4-14) with no hope in sight.

Kelly's brother is a former Tennessee Titan

Kelly's brother Dennis, who is currently an offensive tackle for the Indianapolis Colts, played for the Titans from 2016-2020.

College coaching experience

Before following former Texans and Penn State coach Bill O'Brien to Houston, Kelly jumped around the Midwest as a college coaching assistant.

He played in college at Eastern Illinois at defensive tackle and went into coaching as an assistant graduate at Illinois Wesleyan in 2008. He was a graduate assistant in 2010 at Minnesota State-Moorhead and moved on to Ball State in 2011.

Kelly worked under O'Brien from 2012-2013 at Penn State in the same role, and followed him to coach the Texans in 2014. They spent another several years together in Houston before O'Brien was fired in 2020.

ARDEN KEY IS SET TO PLAY CRITICAL ROLE FOR TITANS' DEFENSE, WRITES MIKE HERNDON

BY MIKE HERNDON,
COLUMNIST
PAULKUHARSKY.COM
AUGUST 2, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- It has been impossible not to notice Arden Key early in Titans' training camp.

When the free agent addition isn't popping up in the backfield again... and again... and again, he's – loudly – rooting on his defensive teammates and chirping at the offense. His energy level is intense and unrivaled among players on both the current Titans squad and any other version of the team that I've covered over the past six years.

Key brings an easy smile, a big personality, and a loud voice to a team that has sometimes lacked that type of presence. Defensive coordinator Shane Bowen talked on Tuesday about him being able to bring some teammates along, which can be an asset for a team over the grind of a 17-game season.

Of course, being loud and energetic means nothing if there isn't production to go along with it. Practice sacks don't count, but if they did, Key would probably already be ready to renegotiate his contract. His current running total – as estimated by Key and Austin Stanley of AtoZ Sports – is now at 14 through his first five training camp practices in Tennessee, including a seven-sack day last Friday.

Speaking of Key's contract, it's worth noting that he received the most guaranteed money ($13 million) of any of the Titans' veteran additions this offseason, including DeAndre Hopkins ($10.98 million) and the man often tasked with blocking him in camp, Andre Dillard ($10 million). That's a pretty clear indication of how Ran Carthon and Mike Vrabel viewed him as a free agent and it makes him one of a very short list of Titans players who are virtually guaranteed to be on the roster in 2024.

Key was the first name I mentioned back in February when I previewed the market for edge rushers. As I wrote then:

“The best options aren't big names, but could be good investments, starting with Arden Key, who saw his career get revived in San Francisco in 2021 and then provided good value as a rotational rusher for the Jaguars last season.

His 18.1 percent win rate was 15th among 49 edge rushers with at least 325 pass rush snaps last season, sandwiched between Montez Sweat and teammate Josh Allen. He'll be 27 next season and seems to still be ascending as a player at the NFL level after a slow start to his career.”

Key's career has become quite a redemption story. After breaking out with 11 sacks as a sophomore at LSU, he was largely viewed as a future first-round pick. Injuries and off-field issues, which included him checking into rehab for marijuana addiction, dropped his draft stock in 2017, leading to him being selected by the Raiders in the third round with the 87th overall pick.

In Oakland, he was thrown directly into the fire, playing more than 50 percent of snaps in 13 of 16 games as a rookie for the league's worst defense. Key struggled to produce, notching just one sack despite heavy playing time.

He was reduced to a rotational role in 2019 and had his season ended early by a foot fracture, producing no sacks and just 12 total pressures by PFF charting. After getting healthy before the start of the 2020 season, Key remained in a depth role, contributing two sacks in over 14 games. Before the start of the 2021 NFL draft, Key was released by the Raiders.

Key's time with the Raiders was clearly a failure, but there are some advanced numbers that suggested the career rebirth that we've seen over the past two years was coming. His pass rush win rate, again as charted by PFF, went from 9.1 percent in 2018 (60th among 109 qualified edge rushers) to 11.2 percent in 2019 (38th out of 118) to 11.6 percent in 2020 (36th out of 117).

Next came an extremely smart move by Key.

He signed a one-year, $1 million contract to go play under defensive line guru Kris Kocurek in San Francisco, a man widely viewed as the best in the business at developing young pass rushers. Despite playing just 35 percent of defensive snaps on a loaded defensive line that also featured Nick Bosa, Arik Armstead, Samson Ebukam, and D.J. Jones, Key produced career highs in sacks (6.5), total pressures (39), QB hits (14), and pass rush win rate (11.8 percent) while lining up all over the 49ers' defensive front.

That breakout season earned him a pay raise, and he signed a one-year, $4 million contract in Jacksonville, where again, he found himself in a rotational role behind Josh Allen and first overall pick Travon Walker. Like in San Francisco, Jaguars defensive coordinator Mike Caldwell deployed Key all over the defensive line, giving him almost 100 snaps as an interior rusher as well as his rotational spot on the edge. Key's performance continued to improve, setting yet another career-best mark in pass rush win rate at 13.8 percent to go along with 51 total pressures and 13 QB hits.

While in Jacksonville, Key also produced the highest PFF run defense grade that he's earned in his career at 75.1, good for 17th among edge rushers, something that the Titans will want to see expanded as he transitions into more of a full-time role.

There is good reason to believe that Key's best football may be ahead of him as well. He's still just 27 years old, and by his own self-admission, has grown a lot over the course of his five-year NFL career.

While talking to the media – and teammate Azeez Al-Shaair – on Tuesday, Key claimed that he “used to be fat” during his time in San Francisco, something he’s focused on during training over the last two offseasons. His performance in training camp to this point indicates that the increased focus on conditioning has paid off for the talented edge rusher.

What will be fascinating to watch as the season begins is how the Titans choose to deploy their pass rush pieces. Both Denico Autry and Key have inside-outside versatility from a rush standpoint as Key has primarily lined up as a defensive tackle on third downs for both the 49ers and Jaguars the last two seasons. That’s something Autry has done frequently since signing with Tennessee in 2021. In fact, Key mentioned Autry last week as a guy who he’s studied and modeled some of his game after even before joining him with the Titans.

That versatility should allow Bowen to hunt matchups throughout the season and keep defenses from knowing where any of the Titans’ top pass rushers might be lining up consistently.

To get a feel for Key as a player, let’s look at some snaps from last season in Jacksonville, starting with his usage as an interior pass rusher. This first clip features Key lined up in as a three-technique in the gap between the left guard and left tackle. He uses an impressive chop-swim combo to beat Dalton Risner and sack Russell Wilson.

Here is another similar rep.

Key’s positioning is even wider here as he’s lined up outside of Titans’ right tackle Nicholas Petit-Frere, but he quickly jumps inside and uses another swim move to beat Jordan

Roos and flush Josh Dobbs from the pocket. Key was a menace in both matchups against Tennessee last year.

While I think he’s most effective rushing from inside, Key can also create pressure as a traditional edge rusher. Here, he beats Broncos left tackle Calvin Anderson with a nice cross-chop move, forcing a rushed throw from Wilson.

And here, he uses his hands to get inside leverage against Cowboys left tackle Tyler Smith and pushes his way all the way to a sack of Dak Prescott.

As I mentioned above, Key scored highly as a run defender last season and the tape backs it up. He only played limited snaps on early downs, but when he was out there, he was effective at setting the edge as he does here against Tyler Smith. This is textbook from Key here.

I’ll finish with something that was a bit of a surprise for me when I really cut on the Key tape... his motor and instincts are outstanding. Here, he flashes high-level awareness as he notices the back leaking out for a screen during his pass rush, redirects, and breaks up the play, nearly grabbing a one-handed interception in the process.

Key’s motor was non-stop on tape, constantly making plays like the one below where he chases down a screen from the backside of the play and puts a massive hit on Chargers running back Joshua Kelly.

Key’s fit into this defense is excellent, especially from a pass-rush standpoint. No team likes to use games and stunts up front more than the Titans and Key should thrive in that scheme with his athleticism benefitting from playing with two of the best “pickers” in the NFL in Jeffery Simmons and Autry.

I’d describe Key’s game as a mash-up of Landry and Autry, bringing some elements of Landry’s athleticism and Autry’s length and power to the table for a unique blend of skills.

The Titans’ ability to mix and match where Simmons, Autry, Landry, and Key all line up along with the talent level of those four players give Mike Vrabel’s defense one of the best fronts in the NFL heading into 2023, and early returns on Key suggest that we all may be underrating what this group could be.

KINSEY SET TO MAKE NFL DEBUT

BY DAVID BOCLAIR
SI.COM
OCTOBER 23, 2021

NASHVILLE – Mason Kinsey is in line to make his NFL debut Sunday.

The Tennessee Titans designated the groundbreaking wide receiver as a standard elevation to the active roster off their practice squad Saturday, one day before they face the Kansas City Chiefs at Nissan Stadium.

“A lot of early mornings and late nights for this,” he wrote on Twitter. “I trusted his plan. Thank you God.”

The move means he will automatically revert to the practice squad on Monday, but he should get the chance to show what he can do on Sunday.

Cornerback Chris Jones also was named a standard elevation from the practice squad.

It is likely that Kinsey’s primary responsibility will be as punt returner given that Chester Rogers has been ruled out for the game with a groin injury. Rogers is the only player who has returned punts for the Titans this season, and he ranks fourth in the league with an average of 12.0 yards per return.

However, there also should be plenty of opportunity for Kinsey, 23, to play on offense as well. Rogers and Cameron Batson, who was placed on injured reserve Monday with a season-ending knee injury, have been the Titans’ primary slot receivers this season, and that is a position at which Kinsey got plenty of work during the preseason.

Kinsey was the first player from Division III Berry College to sign an NFL contract when he joined the Titans as an undrafted free agent in 2020. He did two stints on New England’s practice squad during that season before he returned to Tennessee during the offseason.

He was the Titans’ leading receiver in the preseason with 14 catches for 131 yards and one touchdown (no one else caught more than six passes). He also returned one punt for 11 yards.

“I never really lost focus. I knew I was at a D-III school and it was going to take a lot,” Kinsey said during the preseason. “I just stayed laser-focused on that. I knew what it was going to take, and I knew kind of how I had to approach it. That was my mindset.

“... I’ve grown a lot. It’s been exciting, man. It’s been everything I’ve dreamed of. I love this place. I love this team.”

HAROLD LANDRY
"ECSTATIC" TO BE BACK ON THE FIELD FOR TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 28, 2023

NASHVILLE – Harold Landry stepped up to the podium on Friday after practice, and the big smile on his face said it all.

"I'm excited to be here for sure," the Titans edge rusher said. "It's been awesome. Being away from the game as long as I have, missing all of last year, obviously you miss making plays in front of fans at the games because, you know, that feeling is euphoric.

"But honestly, being away for that long, you start to appreciate it and miss it even more, just like coming out on the practice field and hearing Jeff (Simmons) talk (trash), or just hearing your guys joking around. But everybody is just out here grinding and having a good time. ... I'm ecstatic to be back."

Landry, who tore his ACL leading up to last season, didn't take part in OTAs or the minicamp during the offseason.

But on the first day of training camp, Landry was on the field with his teammates, without a knee brace.

And, he feels great.

"What happened was I tore it a while ago," Landry said of the knee. "And now it's damn near perfect."

A second-round pick of the Titans in the 2018 NFL Draft out of Boston College, Landry made it to his first Pro Bowl in 2021 after racking up 12 sacks and 49 quarterback pressures.

The sack total ranked 10th in the NFL and led the team, and it finished off a four-year stretch in which Landry accumulated a team-high 31 sacks, the second-highest total by a Titans/Oilers player in his first four NFL seasons since 1982, when individual sacks became an official NFL statistic 1982 (37 by Jevon Kearse).

He was looking forward to picking up where he left off before the injury.

A year later, he's champing at the bit for the 2023 season to begin.

Landry still has time to work, but the worst is behind him.

"It's a long process, and throughout it you're definitely frustrated a little bit because there's times you're doing everything you can and you feel like you're kind of staying the same," Landry said. "Then out of nowhere, you just stick to the plan, trust the people you're working with and you make those jumps.

"Now, being where I'm at, it feels great. I don't even think about it when I'm out on the field. It's awesome, so kudos to all the people I've been working with and all the time and energy because it feels great."

Is there a chance he could come back better than ever?

Landry said he's been motivated by seeing others return in grand fashion after an ACL injury.

"I'm definitely stronger, more explosive for sure, faster," Landry said. "I mean, I would say I'm most definitely just more strict on my diet because I'm into that stuff and I was doing everything possible to make my knee feel better the next day.

"... Expectations are high, you know what I am saying? I worked my ass off to get to this point, and the people here have helped me so much. I feel great."

ON THE DAY HAROLD LANDRY SIGNED HIS LUCRATIVE NEW CONTRACT, THE TITANS
OLB SAID HE'S INDEBTED TO THOSE WHO HELPED HIM REACH SUCCESS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MARCH 10, 2022

NASHVILLE – Harold Landry III strolled down the hallway at Saint Thomas Sports Park on Thursday, his two young boys on the move in front of him, his wife doing her best to keep them under control, and happy.

Landry, on the day he signed his lucrative contract extension with the Titans, had plenty of reasons to be thankful.

He started with his wife, Danielle, for helping him reach success.

"I wouldn't be here signing this contract today without her," Landry said of his wife. "Everything she does for me, it is incredible, really, how she raises our kids, how she makes sacrifice after sacrifice to make sure I am able to handle my business with football. I am extremely thankful for her, and what she has done for me.

"She deserves so much credit for me being here today."

Landry, a second-round pick of the Titans in the 2018 NFL Draft out of Boston College, inked his new deal on Thursday before holding a press conference at the team's training facility. The outside linebacker earned his new deal with the team after racking up 12 sacks and 49 quarterback pressures in 2021.

The sack total ranked 10th in the NFL and led the team, and it finished off a four-year stretch in which Landry accumulated a team-high 31 sacks, the second-highest total by a Titans/Oilers player in his first four NFL seasons since 1982, when individual sacks became an official NFL statistic 1982 (37 by Jevon Kearse).

On the day he signed his contract, Landry reflected on his path to the NFL, while thanking those around him.

Born and raised in Spring Lake, N.C., just down the road from Fort Bragg U.S. Army military base, Landry said his parents, Doreen and Harold Landry, sacrificed back then just like his wife does now to give him a chance to be successful.

Landry's dad was a FedEx driver, his mother worked in IT support. Landry said his parents sometimes worked multiple jobs so he and his sister had everything they needed.

"I'll be honest: I've never had a job my whole life besides football," Landry said with a smile. "I am so grateful to the parents that I have, because they did everything they had to do to make sure I could just focus on sports and football.

"As a kid growing up, every day, as soon as the sun came up, we were outside playing sports, and we didn't come home until the street lights came on. It was sports, sports, sports."

Landry's goal back then?

"I always wanted to make my parents proud, whether it was football, baseball or basketball," Landry said. "I just always wanted to put smiles on their faces. As I got older and got to high school it was the same thing.

"My motivation, it was simple: I wanted to be the best."

Landry earned All-America and all-state honors at Pine Forest (Fayetteville, N.C.) High School, and he also earned a scholarship to Boston College.

Once there, Landry said he got really serious about putting himself in a position to have an NFL career.

Landry recorded 26 sacks while at Boston College, which put him on the radar of NFL teams. The Titans picked him 41st overall in 2018.

And then, over the past four years with the Titans, Landry has emerged as one of the NFL's best pass rushers. At the same time, his family has grown as well. Harold and Danielle, who met while at Boston College, have two sons – Greyson (4) and Ollie (2).

"I feel like these past four years, they have been amazing, to be honest," Landry said. "Obviously there's ups and downs – you play this game long enough you are going to experience a whole bunch of different things. And I feel like I have experienced a lot in my four years here, and it's done nothing but take me to the next level, and make me a better player for it.

"I feel like I have grown so much as a player, and as a man, the past four years."

From 2018 to 2021, Landry joined Pittsburgh's Cameron Heyward as the NFL's only players to be credited with at least 250 tackles, 30 sacks and two interceptions. His 12-sack season in 2021 was the highest total by a Titans player since Jason Babin reached 12.5 sacks in 2010. Landry also tied for second on the squad with 75 tackles, ranked second with a career-high 49 quarterback pressures, led the team with 14 tackles for loss, and added a forced fumble. He joined Micah Parsons, Aaron Donald and Heyward as the only NFL players in 2021 to post at least 75 tackles and 10 sacks.

Landry said he won't let up now.

Money, he said, won't change him.

He's thrilled to remain in Nashville, because he said it's where his family is happy.

The Titans, of course, are sure happy to have him.

"My motivation," Landry said, "is when I step on the field, I want to be considered the best player on the field. So, that is the motivation. The money, I am extremely blessed and grateful that this organization believes in me, and gave me this contract. But I feel like the money is a byproduct of the work that I put in to achieve the goal of being considered one of the best players in the NFL.

"All of this, I am just feeling so blessed and grateful and thankful for the life that I get to live and experience, with the awesome family that I have. ... And I am so thankful that this organization has the faith and trust they have in me. I am just extremely grateful and thankful for all of this."

TITANS AGREE TO TERMS WITH OL COREY LEVIN
ON A ONE-YEAR DEAL

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MARCH 31, 2023

NASHVILLE – The Titans have agreed to terms with versatile offensive lineman Corey Levin on a one-year deal.

Levin, originally selected by the Titans in the sixth round of the 2017 NFL Draft from Chattanooga, has played in 45 games, with four starts, in his NFL career.

Levin played in all 17 games for the Titans in 2022 while starting the final three contests at center.

Levin, who has also spent time with the Broncos, Bears, Jets and Patriots in the NFL, has also started at game at left guard. He's been a contributor on special teams as well.

Earlier this offseason the team released center Ben Jones, while guard Nate Davis signed with the Bears.

Meanwhile, the Titans tendered center/guard Aaron Brewer, a restricted free agent, while signing former 49ers lineman Daniel Brunskill, who is expected to compete for a starting spot on the team's interior line as well.

Levin's return will add to the competition, and it gives the team more quality depth.

HOW WILL LEVIS EARNED LIFETIME SUPPLY OF HELLMANN'S, AND HOW THE 'MAYO MOCHA' RECIPE WAS BORN

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
NOVEMBER 22, 2023

The leaves are changing. There's a chill in the air. Every day gets dark a little earlier. And there's a creamy dollop of Hellmann's mayonnaise plopped in your coffee mug.

You know, football weather.

Long before rookie Will Levis was the Tennessee Titans' quarterback of the future, he was the man who drank coffee with mayonnaise in it. Now he has the pleasure of being both. Back in August, Levis secured a lifetime endorsement deal with Hellmann's, America's biggest mayo brand, to be the condiment's athletic spokesperson. Hellmann's announced the partnership with a faux press conference, in which Levis proudly advocated on behalf of the Mayo Mocha, sipped his signature drink and even ate a mayo-topped muffin for good measure.

"It's hard to articulate, but people love talking about him," said Chris Symmes, director of marketing for Hellmann's. "He has this charisma that I don't think you see too often with athletes. He's clearly very comfortable in front of a camera. He likes to have fun. He's clearly a very gifted athlete. And people love talking about him. He does stuff that makes people want to talk about him."

The story behind Will Levis' lifetime mayonnaise endorsement

Levis had been on Hellmann's radar as a potential spokesperson since his culinary quirk started going viral on social media when he was still in college at Kentucky. In addition to his coffee experiment, he also gained notoriety for eating bananas, peel and all. The stunts were what they were: stunts. He's since said he doesn't actually drink coffee with mayonnaise on the regular (he's a one-cream, one-sugar guy), but he knows gimmicks attract attention and get people talking.

Brands salivate at the value of charismatic athletes who are game to get silly. Hellmann's sent Levis a care package in February complete with a Letterman's jacket and bucket hat to rep the brand as well as a panini maker and recipes. Still, in the process of preparing for the NFL draft with a cadre of aspiring quarterbacks, Levis said the care package provided him, Max Duggan, Clayton Tune and Dorian Thompson-Robinson roughly a week's worth of meals.

Levis took to TikTok to thank Hellmann's for the haul. Symmes' courtship only intensified from there, culminating in the press conference ad in August.

"I think there's always some doubts like 'mayonnaise and coffee, it's a little peculiar,'" Symmes said. "But that wasn't really the intent. The key part of this was how Hellmann's can be used as a versatile ingredient."

Titans quarterback Will Levis squirts mayo onto a muffin in an advertisement for Hellmann's, the company he's a spokesman for.

Versatile for Will Levis, and for Nashville

Ahead of Levis' NFL debut in October, Hellmann's partnered with Humphrey's Street, a nonprofit South Nashville coffee shop with two locations, to make the Mayo Mocha available to curious Titans fans with adventurous palates. Humphrey's Street's baristas competed to perfect the recipe, going through several rounds of drink creation and taste testing, before landing on a concoction that's been described as having a brownie batter or chocolate ganache taste.

The drink was only supposed to be available from Oct. 25-31, but thanks to Levis' four-touchdown debut; positive press for Humphrey's Street's business model of providing job training for teenagers in national outlets such as Axios and BuzzFeed; and customers actually liking the product, the Mayo Mocha has twice returned to menus.

"I personally wish we had done a blind taste test with customers so they didn't know," said Camille Cannada, senior director of development for Harvest Hands CDC, the nonprofit arm of Humphrey's Street. "Because I don't think they would've known."

For enterprising roasters, Hellmann's recipe for an at-home Mayo Mocha is simple to replicate:

Pour 1 ¼ cups of hot milk into a bowl and whisk vigorously for 1-2 minutes until frothy.

Pour two hot espresso shots into another bowl. Whisk in one tablespoon of Hellmann's REAL mayonnaise and one tablespoon of chocolate or mocha flavored syrup until smooth and well-blended.

Pour into a large coffee mug and top with frothed milk. If desired, add a sprinkle of cinnamon.

'It Must Be The Mayo'

As part of his sponsorship deal, Levis gets a "lifetime supply" of Hellmann's. The average consumer, Hellmann's says, goes through three 30-ounce jars per year. Since Levis' passion for the product outpaces the average consumer, Hellmann's is starting him off with six jars per year and he can request more whenever he's running low.

Levis says he's already on his second shipment.

After Levis threw for 238 yards and four touchdowns in his NFL debut, Titans fans online started rallying together with the cry "it must be the mayo." Symmes jokes that he didn't coin the phrase but he supports the idea.

Hellmann's can't comment on whether there are more projects planned with Levis or how the partnership has helped sales or boosted their profile. But Symmes says the goal is to get people to use more mayonnaise, and targeting tailgaters and Super Bowl party hosts is part of the plan.

"As a marketer, it's fantastic to have an athlete/celebrity that is game to do fun stuff," Symmes said. "I think that was evident before he even joined the NFL or the Titans. So I think it gives us, as we think about what the future holds, I think it gives us a lot of freedom to think about ways to partner with him in the future. It's fun to have different ideas floating around given his willingness to not take himself too seriously and also just have a good time with things."

TO UNDERSTAND HOW WILL LEVIS' DRAFT SLIDE COULD TURN INTO ROCKET FUEL, START IN HIGH SCHOOL

BY NICK SUSS
THE TENNESSEAN
MAY 10, 2023

Will Levis has a big mouth.

That's not a figure of speech.

When it comes to food, the Tennessee Titans' second-round pick and potential quarterback of the future is less Julia Child and more a child dipping his hot dog in chocolate milk to test his mom's patience.

Culinary experiments made Levis famous on social media. Long before he was the lightning-rod prospect NFL draft pundits compared to everyone from Josh Allen to Blake Bortles, he was the Kentucky passer who went viral for stirring mayonnaise into his coffee and eating bananas without peeling them.

He doesn't do these things because he likes the taste. He does them because he can. It's audacious. And people react to his audacity.

Like when Levis was at Xavier High School in Middletown, Connecticut. He and some teammates were eating McDonald's. Levis told his friends he could down a Big Mac in five seconds. No one dared him. He just wanted to do it.

So he did.

"A lot of people wouldn't do that because it's weird," said Kyle MacGillis, Levis' high school receiver and close friend. "But he's funny like that. He doesn't really care what a lot of people actually do think about him. He's genuine. I think he's just like 'I bet I can do this.' And then he goes and does it. It's not like he's trying to prove anyone wrong or something."

Now Levis actually does have people to prove wrong. Twenty-six NFL teams passed on Levis before the Titans traded up to pick him 33rd in the 2023 NFL Draft. Levis languished backstage for 31 picks across the four-hour first round, drawing sympathy from some and mockery from others.

Levis has never much cared about being laughed at, though. He's the mayonnaise-in-his-coffee guy. He's the don't-peel-your-bananas guy. He's the guy who doesn't mind swallowing two all-beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onion and three sesame seed buns whole.

A few draft-night memes won't hurt him.

"Regardless of where I got picked I feel like it's not going to change my work ethic," Levis said. "Regardless of if I went first overall or 33rd. You can't let the circumstances dictate your preparation and the level of intensity you bring every day."

Meet Will Levis

The first impression of Levis often elicits the same reaction: That guy looks like a quarterback.

He's 6-foot-4 and 229 pounds with biceps that look like they belong in a 1980s action movie. Every time he throws, he flashes the tattoo on his billboard of a right arm. It reads "2nd Chronicles 15:7" a verse seemingly written for a quarterback: Be strong and do not give up, for your work will be rewarded.

Levis' work wasn't instantly rewarded. Because of injuries, he didn't emerge as a star high school talent until his junior year. He went to Penn State and backed up Trace McSorley and Sean Clifford for three years before transferring to Kentucky. He led the Wildcats to a 10-3 season his first year as a starter but regressed as a senior.

Still, Levis arrived at the NFL Scouting Combine in February a projected top-10 pick. Along with quarterbacks Bryce Young, C.J.

Stroud and Anthony Richardson, Levis was in the conversation to go first overall.

Former Titans quarterback Matt Hasselbeck was one of Levis' league-assigned mentors at the combine and was instantly impressed.

"They said, 'What does Will Levis look like,' and I said 'He looks like a create-a-player on Madden,'" Hasselbeck said. "He's got everything you'd be looking for physically."

But Levis' self-described cannon arm wasn't what stuck with Hasselbeck. The subtle and not-so-subtle quirks of Levis' personality impressed the retired 18-year NFL veteran. Like the way Levis was always the guy who broke down the huddle before and after drills. And how Levis was vocally and emphatically cheering on receivers he'd just met doing their bench presses as if he was, as Hasselbeck puts it, "a tag-team partner at WWE WrestleMania."

The morning of the quarterback and receiver workouts, the NFL tweaked what brand of shoes players were allowed to wear because of a partnership with apparel brand NOBULL. Hours before the biggest workouts of their lives, players were told they couldn't wear the cleats they'd brought.

"Guys freaked out," Hasselbeck remembered. "A lot of guys really freaked out. Will, he didn't even blink. He was like 'Alright, no problem.' He was kind of like 'Can I just put tape on it? Let's find solutions. Let's not gripe.' That was probably the first time I noticed him other than his physical stature."

The joker becomes the butt of the joke

Food-based material isn't the only way Levis knows how to provoke a laugh.

"He does a great Borat imitation. He'll probably kill me for saying that," said Andy Guyon, Levis' coach at Xavier. "That would always make us laugh."

"Me and him actually quote a lot of different comedy movies together," MacGillis added. "Like 'Step Brothers' all the time. Borat I think is honestly his favorite. But he knows a lot of funny movies."

Levis was 7 when Borat hit theaters. He wasn't exactly doing timely material in high school.

But it's obvious something Levis did in high school resonated with his peers, because he wasn't the only one who weathered four hours of NFL draft coverage on what was supposed to be a celebratory night.

MacGillis and some of Levis' teammates watched at a nearby house. Guyon hosted a draft party at Xavier that began with around 150 people in the building. Instead of showcasing celebrations, a local news station ran footage of Guyon sitting by himself, dejectedly watching the draft on his phone.

"If you looked at NFL Memes on Twitter and stuff they were getting him pretty good," Guyon said. "It hurt a little bit. I definitely felt for the family. But they're strong people. They're good people. That which doesn't kill you makes you stronger."

Why Will Levis?

The Titans were cagey on draft night about why they drafted Levis. Coach Mike Vrabel and general manager Ran Carthon labeled Levis the Titans' third-string quarterback behind Ryan Tannehill and Malik Willis. When asked who Levis reminds him of, Carthon said the only player he wants to compare Levis to is Levis.

Discussions about Levis' talent and projectability divide football experts. Some point to Levis' impressive stature, bountiful physical tools and experience in pro-style offenses as a reason why he should've been a top-five pick. Others saw Levis as a Day 2 prospect because his Kentucky tape leaves much to be desired. He's been erratic, inconsistent and turnover-prone, and his play was significantly worse against Power Five competition than it was against softer opponents.

One of the common criticisms hurled Levis' way is he played a lot worse in 2022 than in 2021. The numbers don't exactly bear that out (he averaged more yards per attempt and had a better passer efficiency rating as a senior while his completion percentage, touchdown percentage and interception percentage all essentially stayed the same), but something was different.

His Pro Football Focus grade dipped from 90.6 to 68.6. His passer rating on throws targeted 20 yards downfield or longer fell by nearly 12 points. Adjusting for sacks, he went from averaging 5.98 yards per carry with nine rushing touchdowns to averaging 4.24 yards per carry with two rushing touchdowns while battling a toe injury.

Everyone from Levis to Vrabel to Hasselbeck tells the same story on why Levis regressed. A new offensive coordinator changed the playbook to an offense less suited for Levis' strengths, particularly one that de-emphasized play-action passes, and two of the Wildcats' starting offensive lineman and Levis' favorite receiver turned pro.

"It's kind of tough for all 11 guys to be on that same page," former Kentucky cornerback Keidron Smith said. "Not everybody's maturity level is at the same point and not everybody's able to comprehend the playbook at the same time. It's difficulties when it comes to playing offense, having a new offense and having the expectations of doing well and the season that we had. It was a lot of built-up things that people had on their shoulders."

Smith said Levis wore the pressure well. Levis battled through injuries when he could've packed up and prepared for the draft. He describes Levis as the kind of person who leads without needing a push.

"For him, it comes easy," Smith said. "Him being comfortable up there and speaking in front of a whole bunch of guys and reaching them, that's one thing. And he knows how to speak to people. He's not going to cuss anybody out or anything. He finds a way to reach his players and his teammates and the coaches really like that about him."

Levis and the Titans: A perfect match?

The Titans called Levis to tell him they were picking him as he was walking through the door into his family home in Connecticut. He left Kansas City after his long wait on Day 1, but travel holdups meant the family barely made it home to hear his name called.

Levis couldn't control his tears when Carthon, Vrabel and Titans controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk called with the news.

The next night, Levis' loved ones gathered for a proper party. Friends, family, coaches and teammates celebrated Levis, and he responded with a speech thanking everyone for standing by him.

"His underlying message was his journey wasn't easy," MacGillis said. "A lot of weird stuff happened. So obviously why would the draft be any easier? But he ended up exactly where he knew he needed to be."

Being an NFL quarterback means weaponizing adversity into triumph. Hasselbeck was a sixth-round pick who worked his way up from a practice squad to starting in a Super Bowl. Tom Brady, Levis' childhood hero, also was a sixth-round pick. NFL MVPs Aaron Rodgers and Lamar Jackson had to withstand similar long waits backstage at the draft before hearing their names called.

Hasselbeck brings up another example of a quarterback he feels is analogous to Levis: Donovan McNabb, the Philadelphia Eagles' all-time leader in passing yards, touchdowns and wins, who was booed relentlessly by Eagles fans on draft night.

“The reaction Eagles fans had when he got drafted, they didn’t trust Andy Reid,” Hasselbeck said. “Sorry, I think they were wrong. In this case, if anyone’s not trusting Ran Carthon and Mike Vrabel, you probably know how I feel.”

NASHVILLE – The Titans have agreed to terms with quarterback Will Levis on his rookie deal.

All of the team's 2023 draft picks are now under contract.

The Titans traded up to get Levis in the second round of the NFL Draft, with the 33rd overall selection.

Levis (6-4, 229) played in 24 games over two seasons at Kentucky, starting all 24 games. In 2022, Levis threw for 2,406 yards and 19 touchdowns, with 10 interceptions, as the Wildcats finished 7-4.

Levis threw for 2,827 yards and 24 touchdowns in 2021 for Kentucky, with 13 interceptions, as the Wildcats finished 10-3.

In four college seasons, Levis threw for 5,877 yards and 46 touchdowns, with 25 interceptions. Levis began his collegiate career at Penn State, and he played in 15 games in two seasons at the school.

With the Titans, Levis worked with the team in offseason workouts along with fellow quarterbacks Ryan Tannehill and Malik Willis.

The Titans kick off training camp with a practice on July 26.

TK MCLENDON MAKING IMPACT AS TITANS

AGENT, TIGHT END TO DEFENSIVE LINE CONVERT

Azeez Al-Shaair celebrates a defensive play with rookie defensive end TK McLendon. By Angie Flatt

The last five years of TK McLendon's football career took him through three different colleges, an offense-to-defense position change and an undrafted rookie contract with the Tennessee Titans.

It also offered him his first NFL start last week.

Four years removed from catching gauntlets at tight end for Copiah-Lincoln Community College and LSU, McLendon is making his impact on defense for the Titans.

"I'm just here to do whatever I can," McLendon said after Sunday's overtime loss to the Colts. "Starting off on the practice squad to making the active roster, it's a hard job. But I'm just here to do whatever they want me to do."

McLendon has played in every game since being elevated to the 53-man roster in early November. He logged 15 defensive end snaps at Tampa Bay and Jacksonville before picking up his first career start against Carolina.

But coming out of junior college in 2018 as one of the nation's top transfer tight ends – and far before that, growing up playing the position – McLendon likened himself to NFL stars Antonio Gates and Travis Kelce.

He signed and transferred to LSU as a junior, appearing in three games and catching one ball against Georgia Southern during the Tigers' national championship season.

McLendon made the switch from tight end to defensive line one year after LSU's title run. A few months following a redshirt season he entered the transfer portal and landed at FCS Eastern Kentucky.

"Here's a guy who's played tight end his whole life," ECU head coach and Nashville native Walt Wells said. "In high school everybody plays everything, but if you're playing everything you're not learning anything."

The Colonels targeted him through defensive line coach Jeremy Hawkins, who recruited McLendon to LSU when serving as assistant director of player personnel.

McLendon said Hawkins was one of the first people to call once he hit the transfer portal, and the two created a plan for his success at a still-new position.

"We were looking for transfer defensive linemen, so (Hawkins) brought the film in," said Wells, who took a chance on the 6-foot-3, 270-pound project.

"Because of (Hawkins') connections we were able to get practice film, which was huge because he didn't have any game film from playing on the defensive line."

Wells said the position change wasn't much of a challenge once McLendon arrived in Richmond – the staff saw pro potential through his size, movement and power at the line of scrimmage.

McLendon grew an inch and gained 30 pounds to start his first season at ECU.

"When you watch him just naturally run, obviously he was a tight end so he's a gifted athlete," Wells said. "Probably not just flat-line fast that you want in a tight end, which makes him fast for a defensive lineman."

As a senior McLendon racked up a team-leading 11.5 tackles for loss and six sacks, five of which came in five different games.

"I just stuck with the plan," he said, "and look where I'm at now."

Those figures – plus some of Hawkins and ECU's coaching connections with the Titans – helped garner NFL interest for him and fellow undrafted free agent Matthew Jackson, a Hillsboro High School alum and Colonels teammate.

Hawkins was part of the Titans' Bill Walsh Diversity Coaching Fellowship in training camp last season. Wells worked alongside recently fired special teams coordinator Craig Aukerman at Western Kentucky in the early 2000s.

Jackson underwent a position change at the pro level too, moving from linebacker to safety. He's played in over half of Tennessee's special-teams snaps in seven of his nine appearances this season.

McLendon, who signed with the Titans over Kansas City as a UDFA, may see his ever-increasing role grow with two-time All-Pro Jeffery Simmons sidelined. He recorded two tackles and played a career-high 21 snaps (11 defense, 10 special teams) against Indianapolis.

"They continue to grow and take pride in the fact that the Titans took a chance on them, both as undrafted free agents," Wells said of McLendon and Jackson. "And they continue to be thankful and work their tails off to be the best player they can be for them."

TO UNDERSTAND ROGER MCCREARY'S PATH TO
TENNESSEE TITANS,
START WITH THE STERN WORDS OF A COACH

BY BEN ARTHUR
THE TENNESSEAN
JUNE 12, 2022

In 2017, at a Williamson High School football practice in Mobile, Alabama, Antonio Coleman chewed out Roger McCreary.

The defensive coordinator, Coleman felt his star senior was going through the motions. McCreary's activity level looked lackadaisical, so Coleman reminded him that next for him was Power Five football, where lagging could cost his team a touchdown. Lagging in the NFL could cost him his job.

"Do it right all the time!" Coleman told McCreary. "Do it right every time!"

McCreary didn't talk back or pout.

He cried.

"Coach, I apologize," he said through tears. "I get exactly what you're saying."

As Coleman tells it now, "That really let me know that the game of football and what I was saying to him really meant something to him."

Nearly five years later, McCreary is beginning his NFL career with the Tennessee Titans. A second-round draft pick, he'll compete for starting snaps at cornerback and nickelback during his rookie season.

In the offseason program, McCreary already is impressing his new coaches with his mindset.

"He wants to have the right answers all the time and that's unrealistic as a rookie," defensive coordinator Shane Bowen said.

It's an approach molded by his upbringing.

'We often said he had ice water in his veins'

Felicia James, McCreary's mother, ingrained a routine in her son from the time he was a toddler.

She had delivered him before starting 10th grade. By 2 years old, he accompanied her to her high school basketball practices and games, and they always went outside. A single mother, she taught him how to catch a football and baseball. How to dribble and shoot a basketball. He played soccer, too.

James shuttled him between practices and the park as he grew older. If work kept her from taking him to the next sport or activity, she had somebody waiting to do it for her.

Keeping McCreary busy and his mind focused was a priority for James. Free time increased his chances of drifting into the streets of their Mobile neighborhood, where shootings and stabbings were commonplace. The bad influences landed a nephew who grew up with McCreary in jail.

So she automated her son's schedule. If he wasn't at school or playing sports, he was at home getting ready for bed or waking up getting ready for the day.

"Just trying to keep his head going right instead of going left," James said.

Tennessee Titans cornerback Roger McCreary tracks down wide receiver Kyle Phillips (18) during practice at Saint Thomas Sports Park Tuesday, May 24, 2022, in Nashville, Tenn.

James played football growing up. She was a nose tackle and linebacker, playing on organized teams in Mobile with boys. She built a reputation as hard hitter, according to Coleman.

A strict disciplinarian, a vocal James could speak with authority on football, where her son starred at multiple positions in all three phases for Williamson.

"She was one of those parents who'd cuss me out if I didn't do (well) in the game. She would cuss the coach out," McCreary said. "That's the kind of strong, tough love she would always give."

It fueled his drive.

Since high school, he's made off days work days. At Williamson, McCreary called Coleman to open the weight room on Saturdays and Sundays. On Mondays at Auburn, McCreary came to the football offices eager to find a competitive advantage against the elite receivers the Tigers faced weekly in the SEC.

McCreary could take a piece of information once and be able to absorb and apply it, Auburn defensive backs coach Zac Etheridge said. If there's something he's unsure about, he'll ask about it, preferring to pull the coach off to the side for a one-on-one conversation.

"He understands formations and splits and alignment on the field and what that tells him is coming," said Miami defensive coordinator Kevin Steele, McCreary's defensive coordinator at Auburn from 2018-20. "He's not just out there covering routes and guarding people. He's a smart guy that studies the game, that understands concepts and what people are trying to do to him."

Despite his smaller frame — the Titans list him at 5-foot-11 and 190 pounds — McCreary excelled as an outside cornerback at Auburn, where he led the SEC and tied for seventh in the FBS in passes defended last season. His former coaches point to his strength being a key part of his success in single coverage.

Coleman recalled McCreary benching 355 pounds when he weighed around 170 pounds in high school.

"I wasn't benching that much and I was a defensive lineman," said Coleman, who played two NFL seasons after a career of his own at Auburn. “So you could tell there was something special about him.”

McCreary’s demeanor is unwavering on the field, according to his former coaches. He stays emotionally neutral after good or bad plays.

“We often said he had ice water in his veins,” Steele said. “Nothing bothered him.”

‘I always tell him to stay in the moment’

At the end of every season, on the Friday night before the final game, Etheridge honors his senior defensive backs departing the program. They go bowling. Expectations for the final game are discussed.

For the 2021 rendition, at the team hotel, McCreary got up to speak. The clarity and delivery of his message about the next day’s Iron Bowl against Alabama floored Etheridge. It fired up the entire room, he said. McCreary had never talked like that before.

He proceeded to have perhaps the best game of his career in the quadruple overtime thriller, a loss for Auburn. McCreary posted four of the Tigers’ seven pass breakups. He locked up future first-rounder Jameson Williams and second-rounder John Metchie III.

The performance cemented his status as a top cornerback in the 2022 draft.

“Everything that (we had) worked on since the time I got (to Auburn) to one of the biggest games of his career and facing those top receivers, he was just in a different mode and you could just tell that it paid off in that game,” Etheridge said.

It meant Coleman’s message four years prior – when he ripped into McCreary at practice – had paid off.

He took nothing for granted before and during the game of his life.

“Our relationship will always be great because it’s about Roger succeeding at whatever he wants to do at the highest level and enjoying life and working hard because he earned every moment that he’s having right now,” Coleman said.

“I always tell him to stay in the moment.”

TENNESSEE TITANS'
ROGER MCCREARY
WILLING TO SACRIFICE
BAKED BEANS TO IMPROVE

BY MARK INABINETT
AL.COM
MAY 5, 2023

During his rookie season, Tennessee Titans cornerback Roger McCreary played more defensive snaps than any player in the NFL. Despite his ironman status, the former Auburn All-American wants to go into the 2023 campaign even better prepared physically for the rigors of an NFL season.

“You can’t get much faster than what you are now, really,” McCreary said on Wednesday, “so really I was just focusing more on my body – being more professional, being more healthy, and all that stuff because the season is long and I learned that guys are just going down, so I feel like that’s what I need to focus on, just being more healthy and just trying to focus more on my body.”

How serious is McCreary about his preparation? A player whose scouting report said “likes cereal and bologna sandwiches and baked beans” made changes to his diet.

“I’ll admit diet, I still need to work on that,” McCreary said. “That’s something I still need to work on. I’m getting better. ...

“I’ve been trying. I’ve been doing good. I haven’t had baked beans in a while.”

While at Auburn, McCreary ate a bowl of baked beans topped with sugar for his Friday night meal before games.

McCreary is hoping the changes lead to improved performance on the field.

Among the NFL’s cornerbacks in 2022, McCreary ranked fifth in total tackles and second in solo tackles. But only one defensive player was thrown at more by opposing quarterbacks, and he gave up six touchdowns in coverage last season as he spent much of 2022 as the nickel or slot corner for the Titans.

“I spent a lot on just watching over the last games – the bad plays, the good plays,” McCreary said. “First starting out with the bad plays. I pay attention mostly to that. Playing that slot, that was something different for me, so I feel like that was something I needed to focus on and look to see what I need to improve on the most, and I noticed what I needed to work on in the offseason. ...

“I feel like I wasn’t at the top of my game at the nickel, so I feel like it would be great just to get back from Day 1 to how they want me to play the nickel, literally everything from off to press to knowing the plays to better reaction to knowing how the game speed goes and everything, so I felt it was just great seeing myself on tape.”

The Titans have started their offseason program after posting a 7-10 record in 2022. Seven consecutive losses to close the season ended a three-year playoff streak for Tennessee that included the AFC South title the previous two seasons.

McCreary is experiencing his first full NFL offseason.

“It’s been great just to have that little down time just to get your body back right after a long season, after the rookie season and everything,” the former Williamson High School star said. “It was all great, and coming back here, meeting the new people that have come on the team, new coaches and stuff, it’s just great, again, how we’ve started to find a foundation here, and I feel like the stuff we got going on now in the offseason is going to be great. ...

“Last year, I did a lot. I feel like I did a lot. Now I feel like I know a lot. I feel like I know what’s coming at me now, so just coming out there, going over the plays, I just feel confident, I just feel comfortable that I know what I’m doing. I did it before.”

TITANS ROOKIE ELIJAH MOLDEN'S GOAL? PROVE HIS NFL VETERAN DAD'S HARD WORK PAID OFF

TURRON DAVENPORT
ESPN
JUNE 20, 2021

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- Elijah Molden was still in high school when then-University of Washington defensive coordinator Jimmy Lake started teaching him the Huskies' scheme. Lake received a call from Molden's mother, Christin, saying the young defensive back had sketched out pictures of the defense he had learned and covered his bedroom wall with them like posters.

"This guy means business," Lake thought to himself.

That's the impression Elijah, who was taken by the Tennessee Titans in the third round of the 2021 NFL draft, often leaves on those when talking about football. After all, playing cornerback is the family business. His father, Alex, was selected by the New Orleans Saints with the 11th pick in the 1996 draft and went on to play eight seasons with the San Diego Chargers and Detroit Lions.

"It wasn't like, 'You're going to get to the NFL or else.' But it was kind of just assumed that I would get here," Elijah said.

Elijah's path to the NFL was created in part by a great understanding of football passed along from his dad, who spent countless hours breaking down film and coaching his son from a young age.

Growing up Molden

Elijah is the second oldest of Alex and Christin's eight children. Each of them was given a development plan. It started with gymnastics to learn balance. Then they transitioned to soccer to work on foot quickness and changing speeds.

After that, the Molden kids were allowed to play whatever they wanted -- not just football.

"Just because Daddy played doesn't mean you have to," Alex told his children. "But if you do, I got the playbook."

Elijah's love for football was sparked early when he was able to go into the Chargers' locker room with his dad. He got to hang out with greats such as running back LaDainian Tomlinson, linebacker Junior Seau and safety Rodney Harrison.

Watching his father run out of the tunnel before games to blaring hype music made Elijah want to follow in Alex's footsteps.

"There wasn't a day where I woke up and didn't want to be a football player," Elijah said.

He started asking detailed questions about football in the fourth grade. Alex wasn't surprised because he could see Elijah's passion and competitive spirit growing.

The next year, Alex and Christin allowed Elijah to play tackle football a year earlier than they had planned because Elijah needed that physical aspect of the game. His speed and strength stood out.

"I would get giddy," Alex said. "[Elijah] was using stiff-arms, blowing kids up. He was having so much fun. When he put on the pads, it was just like me when I played. It gave him so much freedom."

Breaking down film with Dad

Elijah initially wanted to play running back because he loved Adrian Peterson. But Alex encouraged him to play defensive back once he got to the eighth grade, knowing he could begin to share his knowledge and experience.

"I had to approach him," Elijah said of Alex. "He'd never just show me. He was hands-off until I showed him I wanted to know."

Alex wanted his son to think like an eight-year NFL veteran rather than an eighth-grader. Unlike typical fans, the two didn't take in a football game in a few hours. Watching games turned into a four- or five-hour session.

"I would pause it after a big play and ask him if he knew why it happened," Alex said of their film study. "I'd explain to him what the DB's read was. You have to learn the reads and the keys. I would break things down like route patterns.

"When [opposing offenses] get to the 50-yard line, what are you thinking? I'm telling him, 'They're going to take their shot.' When you get 3-on-1, what are you thinking depending on what receiver is on the field side? They're trying to isolate. That really helped with football IQ, having him watch film and break down what the receiver or offensive coordinator was thinking. It's all about tendencies."

This is where the foundation of Elijah's football knowledge was built, which impressed the Titans in pre-draft interviews.

"I think he's been raised well. He was just really intelligent," GM Jon Robinson said after the Titans selected Elijah in the draft. "He knew about our football team. He had prepared for the interview by watching our football team. He spoke highly of how we played and the effort and the finish with which we play."

How Elijah ended up in Lake's hands

Alex got to coach Elijah as his position coach at West Linn High School in Oregon. One of his proudest memories came when Elijah was only 14 and locked down an opposing team's wide receiver who had been offered a scholarship to Arizona. When Elijah was a freshman, he got his own scholarship offer from Oregon, his father's alma mater, after attending one of the school's football camps.

Other offers followed.

When he was a junior, Elijah was offered a chance to visit the University of Washington and watch spring ball on an unofficial visit. Alex didn't think the long drive to the Seattle area was worth it -- especially since the school was a Pac-12 rival of Oregon's. So Elijah and his mother took the three-hour drive without him.

They were blown away by the campus and the program, so they arranged another visit, with Alex this time. Everything changed for Alex after he met Lake. Suddenly, the idea of turning over the keys to Elijah's success to his alma mater's rival wasn't such a bad idea.

"[Lake] broke down film, and the attention to detail was on another level," Alex said. "Also, the success he had with defensive backs made me realize this was the perfect breeding ground. He coached in the NFL. That set off bells with me. Yeah, I would have loved for [Elijah] to be a Duck, but it was a perfect scenario for him to go there."

Lake, who coached defensive backs in the NFL for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (2006-07, 2010-11) and Detroit (2008), sold them on Washington's track record with defensive backs, such as NFL first-rounders Kevin King and Desmond Trufant.

"There was already proof in how we developed those guys, how they moved on and were successful in the NFL," Lake said. "Alex knew a lot of the guys that I had coached in the NFL and those guys being All-Pros, one of which was a future Hall of Famer in Ronde Barber, so he respected the process."

Lake, who's now the head coach at Washington, said Elijah was one of his favorite recruits to watch on film. He loved Elijah's physical ability and leadership, noting how the team would "sway with however Elijah was playing."

Elijah's inquisitive side came out as well. He asked detailed questions about the Huskies' techniques and scheme. Lake was impressed that Elijah wanted to know what everyone around him was doing in addition to what his own duties were.

"He prides himself on learning every detail of the defense," Lake said. "You could see that he was a football junkie. When you got him on the phone, you could tell that he had a passion for playing."

Another Molden's NFL journey begins

Elijah developed into a top NFL prospect, finishing with 153 tackles (seven for a loss), five interceptions, 19 passes defended and four forced fumbles in 36 games at Washington.

"With what I taught him and what Coach Lake taught him at UW, he was seeing things at a totally different rate of speed," Alex said.

NFL scouts saw Elijah as one of the best nickel defenders in the 2021 draft class.

ESPN NFL analyst Louis Riddick jokingly referred to Elijah as the "Jedi of the slot" because of how well he played the nickel position.

"It's Luke Skywalker-type stuff. He can see all of these things, but there's never any panic," Riddick said. "There's a lot of chaos around him, but he's in control. That to me signifies a guy who's really dialed in to the game at another level. He comes from great bloodlines, and that stuff transfers. He'll quickly adapt to the pro game."

Making it to the NFL was always Elijah's goal, but the rookie said he isn't satisfied. For him, it's time to make sure all of the hard work his father poured into him pays off.

Elijah's message to his dad for Father's Day shows how much all of the lessons mean to him.

"Thank you for letting me live out my dreams and always giving me advice, keeping things in perspective," Elijah said. "When I step on the field, I can do what I do because of you, and when I'm off the field too. I appreciate that, and I love you!"

HEADING INTO YEAR THREE, VERSATILE
TITANS DB ELIJAH
MOLDEN READY TO DO MORE

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 22, 2023

NASHVILLE – Elijah Molden first walked in the doors at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park in 2021 as a third-round draft pick of the team.

In a snap, the Titans defensive back is already in year three, and he can hardly believe it.

"It doesn't feel it," said Molden, shaking his head.

With the experience, Molden has a better understanding of what to expect heading into the 2023 season.

But he's hardly comfortable, and he doesn't want to be.

"There is (a comfort level), but at the same time I am trying to elevate my game," Molden said. "I don't ever really want to come in and be lackadaisical or too comfortable. So, what that means to me is learning a new position and testing the limits every day."

The versatile Molden has worked at a number of spots during his first few years with the team on defense and on special teams, and when he's played, he's performed well.

Unfortunately, Molden has also dealt with injuries, including a persistent groin injury that nearly sidelined him for all of the 2022 season. A year ago, Molden played in just two games, with one start, playing in 16 games, with seven starts, in his rookie season in 2021.

Molden said he's feeling better physically, but he admitted it's been tough mentally with the adversity, and setbacks.

"It's been really tough," said Molden, who tallied 60 tackles and an interception as a rookie. "It's hard to explain. I feel like my family and a couple of other people really know what was going in and the deal behind everything. I just want to put it behind me, really. I am feeling a lot better now and I am definitely on the up-and-coming, and the Titans have been really helpful in the transition from rehab to action and now back on the field practicing."

This offseason, Molden has worked some at safety.

It's something Molden's coaches spoke to him about at the end of last season, and head coach Mike Vrabel discussed it with reporters during OTAs.

"We've actually played him in the back part of the field a little bit," Vrabel said of Molden. "I think that will be good for him. It will help him expand that role and expand his versatility. So, he can easily come down and play nickel. He was our [punt protector] on the punt team (in OTAs). So those are three valuable roles for a young defensive player. We need every player we can get out there healthy and being able to use that versatility.

"We talked about it in the offseason and just where we may need some depth," Vrabel continued when discussing giving Molden some experience at safety. "It's more or less to try and give guys another role outside of just a nickel, or maybe we're in a game and we're playing a lot of defense and you need a safety. So instead of having him always just being a corner conversation, [we] figured it would translate from the nickel back to safety."

Molden said he's willing to do whatever is asked of him.

Molden ended the offseason work on a high note, making an interception on the final day of OTAs.

"In this league," Molden said, "it's like the more versatile you are, the more you're able to help out and be able to play anywhere."

The countdown to year three is ticking.

"I'm just really happy to be out here and have some fun again," Molden said. "Starting to feel healthy and all those things ... I'm starting to come back and feel like myself again."

TITANS WR CHRIS MOORE AIMS TO HELP OTHER FAMILIES WHO'VE LOST A CHILD TO STILLBIRTH WITH MY CAUSE, MY CLEATS CAMPAIGN

TENNESSEETITANS.COM
NOVEMBER 30, 2023

NASHVILLE – Titans receiver Chris Moore and his wife, Toria, have a growing family.

Daughter Nyla Ann is now 2 ½ years old, and she now has a baby sister, Mia, who is a month old.

"It's fun," Moore said in the locker room on Wednesday. "The wife is not getting much sleep, but it's all been a blessing."

During the NFL's My Cause My Cleats campaign, Moore is sharing the story of his late son, CJ, who was lost to stillbirth in July 2020.

And he's chosen "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep" as his cause. The organization takes remembrance photographs for families as part of their healing journey following their loss.

Moore will wear special cleats this Sunday against the Colts.

"I just want to bring awareness, and continue to help fund a program like that," said Moore, an eight-year veteran who is in his first year with the Titans. "During that time (when we lost our son to stillbirth), the last thing you are thinking about is encapsulating that memory and getting a picture of your child. The fact that they come in there and do it for you, it makes it easier."

Moore was with the Ravens back in July 2020 when his son was born.

Looking back, he still admires his wife's strength through the heartbreaking experience.

"My wife, she is amazing," Moore said. "She had to give birth, and to go through that situation as a mother, and it is tough. She was very strong."

The Moore family, however, keeps CJ's memory alive.

In fact, Moore's background on his phone is the "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep" portrait of his son.

Moore said CJ remains a part of the family.

"We usually tell people we have three (children)," Moore said. "It is our way of honoring him. Even sharing it with people. Any way I can, to keep that memory going.

"There's not a day that goes by when we don't think about him, or remember him."

VETERAN WR CHRIS MOORE READY TO DO HIS PART – IN NO. 11 – WITH THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 24, 2023

NASHVILLE – Chris Moore had a lot on his mind when he signed with the Titans last month.

The veteran receiver was on a new team, with new coaches and teammates around him.

It was time to learn a new playbook, and city.

Picking a jersey number wasn't something he'd thought a lot about.

So, he picked No.11 after previously wearing No.15 with the Texans.

"I'm not going to lie – at first, I didn't even think about that," Moore said with a smile. "Nick Westbrook-Ikhine had No.15, and I (thought), 'I need another number' and 11 looked smooth on me. So, I was like, that's what I am going to pick.

"And then I realized after, what I did..."

What Moore did, of course, was pick the number that was once worn in Tennessee by A.J. Brown, a fan favorite who was traded from the Titans to the Eagles during the 2022 NFL Draft. Others have also worn the number, of course, but Brown has worn in better than anyone with the Titans.

"I still like it," a smiling Moore said. "It is what it is."

Moore wasn't signed to take Brown's place, and he wasn't signed to replace veteran Robert Woods either. In the offseason, Woods was waived – and he's since signed with the Texans, Moore's old club.

Chris Moore knows his role with the Titans is to do his part to help the team win, and that's what he plans to do.

He's coming off the best season of his NFL career.

"I can do whatever they need me to do," Moore said. "First, I am a football player, and then I'm a receiver. Whatever they want me to do, I'm going to do it."

A fourth-round pick of the Baltimore Ravens in 2016, Moore spent the past two seasons with the Texans after spending his first five seasons in Baltimore.

In 2022, the 6-foot-1, 200-pound Moore hauled in 48 catches for 548 yards and two touchdowns while playing in 16 games, with seven starts.

In a Week 14 game at Dallas, Moore caught 10 passes for 124 yards. Moore also had a 100-yard game in 2021 against the Patriots, when he caught five passes for 109 yards, including a 67-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Davis Mills.

In six NFL seasons, Moore has 116 catches for 1,286 yards and eight touchdowns. Moore also has experience on special teams, including work as a kick returner. Moore has returned 46 kickoffs for a 23.5-yard average in his career.

Moore, who spent a year with new Titans OC Tim Kelly in Houston, said he feels comfortable in Tennessee and thinks he's found a good fit.

And, we're not just talking about his uniform.

"I just want my teammates to know that they can rely on me on the field," Moore said. "I'm going to be out there doing whatever they need me to do to help them win. It is always fun going into a new building, learning new faces. This is actually a very welcoming organization, people really get to know you, they are interested in who you are as a person. So, it has been a great time.

"At the end of the day personally, it is not really about the numbers, but it's about being with an organization that (wants) to win games. I just love the game of football and that's what I want to do."

DEANDRE HOPKINS IS NOT THE ONLY NEW SOURCE OF WISDOM FOR YOUNG TITANS' RECEIVERS

BY PAUL KUHARSKY
PAULKUHARSKY.COM
AUGUST 6, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Young Titans' receivers will undoubtedly learn a lot watching and listening to DeAndre Hopkins, who ranks seventh all-time in yards per game with 77.9.

But they've also got a more relatable veteran resource who's new to the locker room, who's earned rave reviews from Mike Vrabel. Chris Moore came into the league as a fourth-round pick by Baltimore in 2016 and made his way as a special teamer who maxed out with 21 catches through his first six seasons.

Only in Year 7, last year with the Texans, did he post notable numbers on offense, with 48 catches for 548 yards to go with two scores. That receiving yardage would have led the anemic 2022 Titans offense.

Vrabel said Moore carries himself "very, very professionally."

"I haven't been doing this so long, but you always kind of look at guys on other teams or you coach against them, watch them," Vrabel said. "I would have loved to have him a few years ago. I'm glad that we got him now. Professional, knows a bunch of spots. He's always over there on special teams, he runs, doesn't appear to get tired, jumps in there every opportunity and just a real professional and somebody that I've enjoyed coaching and having around here."

Said seventh-rounder Colton Dowell: He's been a tremendous influence to me personally. (In his early years) he's been a special teams guy who helps out on offense and that's how I kind of see myself. His wisdom is invaluable cause he's been there and he's done that and he's stuck around in the league and he's been a great mentor for all of us."

Perhaps the most distinct of the compliments that Vrabel gave Moore was about not getting tired.

I'd imagine that would be an expectation for most receivers. But set one free on a couple long routes in a row and he generally gets a play off. It seems Moore doesn't require such rest.

He ran a 4.53 at his scouting combine – not the 4.4 that is the mark that generally earns a guy a "fast receiver" label, though there have been plenty of wideouts around his number who have played fast and had good success.

He certainly regards himself as having good speed.

"I'm fast, I would say I run every play, I don't get tired, I'm running full speed every play," he said when I asked about strengths and weaknesses. "I'm strong, I'm big (6-foot-1, 200 pounds), I don't know too many weaknesses that I can tell you. I just continue to train every day.

"I love to run, that's one of my favorite things, I ran track growing up. I take great care of my body."

Said Ryan Tannehill: "Chris is the Energizer Bunny, he just keeps going all day."

During the time between OTAs and the start of training camp, he said his workouts included shuttle runs: 5 yards and back, 10 yards and back, 15 yards and back, as many as six at a time. However long that took, he'd never rest for longer than twice that time.

As he's grown up in the game he's become a far better eater. He used to drink a lot of Mountain Dew. Now he doesn't eat sugar and tries to eat clean. He relies on meals – Pasta Bolognese is a favorite – and hardly snacks.

Right now I'd guess that after Hopkins and Treyton Burks, Kyle

Philips will be the primary option in the slot, but Moore is in line as the fourth option and Nick Westbrook-Ikhine the fifth, though he's a lot like Moore.

Racey McMath and Reggie Roberson would be next in a fight for a sixth spot.

Like NWI, Moore is a devout special teamer. He's been working as a gunner on the punt coverage unit, a position of great value. That can chop into the value of a player like McMath.

"He's been a great influence," Westbrook-Ikhine said. "He's got a lot of speed, people have seen him make plays. He's a veteran who knows how to operate as a pro and I feel like it's been huge for a lot of the young guys and me, just watching him work, take care of his body and come out every day with energy and focus.

"He's always rolling, always running and he's fast. He's a good guy to try to compete with and stay up there with."

TITANS ROOKIE EDGE RUSHER CALEB MURPHY
WORKING TO MAKE A NAME FOR HIMSELF IN THE NFL

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JUNE 26, 2023

NASHVILLE – Caleb Murphy wasn't drafted, but the edge rusher arrived in the NFL after a decorated collegiate career which saw him post some pretty mind-boggling stats.

Murphy, who played at Ferris State, set the single-season sacks record for all NCAA divisions with 25.5 in 2022, one year after tallying 14.5 sacks at the school.

Murphy also led all divisions a year ago with 39 tackles for loss, which matched the all-time, single-season record at any NCAA level.

Yet with the Titans, where he signed as an undrafted free agent after the NFL Draft, Murphy is just another rookie trying to make a name for himself.

Case in point: After offseason practices, Murphy could oftentimes be seen carrying extra helmets and gear of his veteran teammates.

"You have to do rookie duties," Murphy said with a smile. "You have get them things they need in the meeting rooms, making sure we're on top of our jobs and they lead us the right way. Little things like that, carrying helmets, it's not a problem at all."

Murphy, who received interest from a number of teams leading up to the draft, said he's doing everything he can to stick out for teammates and coaches in Tennessee.

"I felt like Tennessee was a good spot for me – they work hard, and I think there's an opportunity for me here," Murphy said. "I have to do my part which is to work hard myself – Coach (Mike) Vrabel prides himself in working hard, so that is what I am going to do.

"It is definitely different coming in as a rookie, and you have to stay in the books."

A 6-foot-3, 254-pounder, Murphy looks the part in practices.

He's also done his part to put in extra work, and his teammates are noticing.

"I love Caleb," veteran Arden Key said. "He's a young guy who is willing to learn. He is always asking questions, coming up to me or Harold (Landry). He is a guy who is seeking knowledge. He is doing what coaches ask of him, and he is taking what he learned off the field and putting it to use on the field."

Titans outside linebackers coach Ryan Crow said Murphy just needs to keep working.

"Like all rookies, the first thing is he has to learn what to do, and be able to do it at a high level, and execute at a high level," Crow said. "I think for Caleb, special teams is important as well – find a way to get on special teams and continue to earn more roles as we continue to develop.

"The thing I love about Caleb is he came from a place where they won two national championships, and regardless of the level that's an awesome thing to have is a winning background. I am excited that he is here, and I'm excited to see him grow."

Murphy said he's working daily to improve his technique so he can add to his craft, and ability.

Murphy, who transferred to Ferris State from Grand Valley State, was an All-America performer in college. Nearly half of Murphy's tackles last season were for negative yards as Ferris State dominated their opponents on the way to their second consecutive NCAA Division II championship.

Murphy said it's too early to even start thinking about what he needs to do to stick on the team's active roster for the 2023 season.

Right now, he focused on one thing.

"For me, myself, I just have to work hard, and worry about myself, and do what I can to help the team," Murphy said. "I've been watching the veterans – Harold Landry, Arden Key, Rashad Weaver, Sam (Okuyinonu), too. Watching those guys work, I'm hoping that makes me better and helps me craft myself into what I need to be to be a Titan.

"I just have to push myself as hard as I can."

SEAN MURPHY-BUNTING EXCITED ABOUT HIS NEW JOURNEY WITH THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TITANS ONLINE
MAY 17, 2023

NASHVILLE – Sean Murphy-Bunting is preparing for his fifth NFL season.

He has a Super Bowl ring and 53 games of experience, not counting postseason play.

When the veteran cornerback joined the Titans earlier this offseason, however, he wanted to create a clean slate.

It started by picking a new number – No. 0.

"I wouldn't even say it was as important being No. 0," Murphy-Bunting said. "I think more so for me is just a new opportunity, to have a different journey. I've been through a lot throughout my years, and I've only been in the league for four full seasons.

"It was just a different journey for me, and a different opportunity. So, I just wanted a fresh start."

A second-round pick in the 2019 NFL Draft by Tampa Bay, Murphy-Bunting signed with the Titans back in March.

He's been working with his new teammates during the offseason program, practicing alongside a lot of younger teammates he's looking forward to mentoring while on the team.

Murphy-Bunting has plenty of moxie – he's started 36 of his 53 games in the NFL, all four years with the Buccaneers. He's been credited with 139 tackles, six interceptions, and 21 passes defended in his career, along with four forced fumbles.

He's also proven to be a gamer. In 2020, Murphy-Bunting became the first player with an interception in each of his first three playoff games since Hall of Famer Ed Reed while playing a key role in Tampa Bay's run to winning a Super Bowl trophy.

He thinks his versatility made him attractive to the Titans.

"I'm an athlete," he said. "I feel like I can honestly play any position in the secondary. I know pretty much every position in the secondary, and that's pretty much how I've always been. ... I've never looked at football as just knowing one thing, because at the end of the game you can be put in different situations, different positions and it doesn't really matter how you look at it. And the end of the day you have to do your job, or whatever coach needs of you."

Murphy-Bunting (6-0, 195) played in 12 games in 2022, with five starts, and he intercepted a pair of passes while tallying 27 tackles, one tackle for a loss, seven passes defended and one forced fumble. He was one of eight Tampa Bay defenders to log at least 400 defensive snaps last season. He also played 120 snaps on special teams and made four kick-coverage stops.

His season was cut short in 2021 because of a dislocated elbow.

With the Titans, Murphy-Bunting said he's doing his best to fit in.

He likes the culture he's seen so far.

"I think it's more so being myself," he said. "I show up every day ready to work. If (teammates) have any questions for me, I am free to answer them. If there's anything they want to know from the past, what I have been through, how I have dealt with certain situations, I am always there to lend advice.

"I just want to build relationship with guys."

TITANS ADD TE THOMAS ODUKOYA OF THE NETHERLANDS AS PART OF THE 2022 INTERNATIONAL PLAYER PATHWAY PROGRAM

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 3, 2022

NASHVILLE – The Titans have added tight end Thomas Odukoya to the team's roster as part of the 2022 International Player Pathway program.

Odukoya, who is from the Netherlands, is one of four players league-wide to join an NFL club through the program, which is part of the league's efforts to strengthen the pipeline of international players while aiming to provide elite international athletes the opportunity to compete at the NFL level, improve their skills, and ultimately earn a spot on an NFL roster.

Titans GM Jon Robinson informed Odukoya of the news during a Zoom call. He's expected to be in Nashville next weekend for the team's rookie minicamp.

Odukoya, who played college football at Eastern Michigan University, started playing football at age 16 in the Netherlands where he was named the Dutch National MVP. He was a team captain for two seasons and received Academic All-MAC.

Odukoya (6-6, 263) played in 40 career games at Eastern Michigan, where he caught 21 passes for 194 yards and four touchdowns. Odukoya played in 13 games in 2021, when he tallied 13 catches for 130 yards and two scores.

In addition to Odukoya, three other players joined AFC South clubs as part of the program.

This year's participants are:

Player/Position/Country/NFL Club

Marcel
Dabo/DB/Germany/Indianapolis
Colts

Adedayo Odeleye/DL/United Kingdom/Houston Texans

Thomas
Odukoya/TE/Netherlands/Tennessee
Titans

Ayo Oyelola/DB/United Kingdom/Jacksonville Jaguars

The four AFC South clubs will carry these players on their roster until the end of training camp. At that time, the players are eligible for an international player practice squad exemption, granting the team an extra practice squad member. Clubs have the opportunity to elevate the player to the active roster during the season.

‘JUST A FINAL SHOVE, MAN.’ A DAY IN THE TRAINING CAMP LIFE OF TITANS TE CHIG
OKONKWO

BY JOE REXRODE
THE ATHLETIC
AUGUST 2, 2023

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Chig Okonkwo emerged from the Tennessee Titans locker room at 9:25 a.m. Tuesday, the second day in full pads for a team and player pursuing the same objective — block better.

Okonkwo showed as a rookie fourth-round pick out of Maryland last season that he can run, change speeds, nail routes, win downfield and make plays in the passing game. Fellow second-year pro Treylon Burks has been the early standout of camp, and that in tandem with the addition of DeAndre Hopkins makes the Titans look a lot more dangerous on the outside than anyone would have guessed as of mid-July. Add Okonkwo and healthy second-year slot receiver Kyle Philips to the equation and Ryan Tannehill has intriguing options at hand when he’s not handing to Derrick Henry.

And when he has enough time to throw behind a highly unproven offensive line. One thing that can help this offense is Okonkwo getting to the point where he can more effectively help that front when needed, which will also get him on the field more often. Which will remove his presence as any sort of tell for defenses. The Athletic watched Tuesday’s practice from the perspective of Okonkwo as he continues to work on blocking, special teams and the skills that should allow him to improve on last year’s 32 catches for 450 yards and three touchdowns — 24 of those catches, 278 yards and two touchdowns in the final seven games.

Titans tight end Chig Okonkwo celebrates after scoring against

Indianapolis last season. (Jenna Watson / IndyStar / USA Today)

Okonkwo guzzled a bottled water and started jogging toward Field 3, the most distant of three grass practice fields at St. Thomas Sports Park. He gave a “Shhhh” sign with his right index finger into the filming camera of social media coordinator Katie Moseley, then did some head bobs into the filming camera of social video producer Troy Wisneski. Team stretch ended at 9:40, at which point Vrabel gathered the entire team close for a few words that could not be picked up by observing media or fans.

Then it was time for individual drills. The first two for Okonkwo were special teams drills on Field 2, and Vrabel was front and center for the first, stopping it often to give technique instructions as would-be blockers tried to hold up would-be tacklers. Most of the participants were receivers, but Okonkwo, rookie tight end Josh Whyle and rookie linebacker Thomas Rush took turns engaging each other.

Then it was a kickoff return drill for Okonkwo, with special teams coordinator Craig Aukerman running the show. The point was to “flatten your guy out so he can’t cut across your face and make the tackle,” Okonkwo said later, and he did his best to stay in front of receiver Nick Westbrook-Ikhine and redirect him. Then Rush did the same with Okonkwo sprinting toward him.

At 9:51, it was time for Okonkwo to leave the skill group on Field 2 and get with the big uglies on Field 1. Combination blocks were the order of the day. Okonkwo and Jamarco Jones — who is trying to earn the starting right tackle spot for the first six games while Nicholas Petit-Frere sits out a gambling suspension — lined up next to each other and fired forward when offensive line coach Jason Houghtaling barked, “Turbo!”

Petit-Frere was waiting for them with a blocking pad, and they combined to drive him backward.

Players rotated spots often, Okonkwo holding the pad for a rep and combining on another rep with Chris Hubbard, the primary competitor with Jones to fill Petit-Frere’s spot.

“Pad level! Pad level!” Houghtaling reminded one and all, and it’s leverage and precision that have occupied Okonkwo’s focus in an offseason of trying to become a more well-rounded player.

“And you can feel it too, when you’re going, if you can stick a guy versus not quite getting it right,” he said. “Technique is a lot more important than strength. Strength doesn’t matter. Everybody’s strong.”

At 9:57, Okonkwo got back into skill mode on Field 1. A Titans practice tradition is a gathering of the entire team and Vrabel in the center. An offensive player and defensive player face each other. At Vrabel’s whistle, the offensive player circles back and is flipped the football, the defensive player circles back the other way, and they meet in the middle to see if the ball carrier can elude the defender. There’s no tackling to the ground, but there’s an “Oooooooooohhhhhh!” every time a defender is juiced and left grasping air.

Okonkwo elicited no such reaction, but he made a nice move on linebacker Chance Campbell, getting past him going left with Campbell getting a touch on Okonkwo. The 6-3, 238-pound Okonkwo got a defensive rep too — he may not play as much on special teams this season, but he has to be ready — and that was more impressive. He was all over one of the shiftiest players in camp, 5-11, 196-pound rookie receiver Kearis Jackson.

At 10:04, it was time for a 25-minute team period on Field 3. The closest thing the Titans have to real football in practice. No tackling to the ground. No hitting quarterbacks. But serious hitting all the same. And the first play of the team period illustrated the work Okonkwo is trying to get done.

He lined up as an in-line tight end, on the left side of the line. In front of him was new outside linebacker Arden Key, whose energy, voice and playmaking have been constants throughout camp. Key has been trouble at times for new left tackle Andre Dillard. On this play, it was Okonkwo who engaged him with a big pop on a handoff to Derrick Henry, and Henry cut left off the block to reach the second level.

To the naked eye, it also looked like Okonkwo may have given Key's jersey a tug. Key said later it was not holding, and Okonkwo said of the finish to the block: "A shove. Just a final shove, man."

But the fact that it looked like it might have been speaks to the details Okonkwo and the Titans are pursuing.

"I think the biggest thing for Chig is going to continue to be his hand placement," Vrabel said. "I don't think we're going to make him any bigger, he's not going to be a 260-pound player. But I think we have to just continue to focus on his hands and making sure that they're inside, that they're strong and they're powerful. (He's) not going to be able to sustain against Arden or any player with your hands outside. You just don't have enough power. He's willing. I just think that the technique has to improve."

So ... holding then?

"No, I felt like on the first glance ... like he let go when Arden broke the framework of his body, and tried to give him a shove, as what we coached to," Vrabel said. "I looked at it with a critical eye and I didn't see restriction at the point of attack. But again, I'm not an official. I just try to look and see what they call. I felt like he did let go and he did try to give him a shove. Then we'll see if that guy, in that case, Arden, can tackle Derrick. So again, I think it could have been better. I thought that it was smart not to grab him and tug him. It was smart to give him a shove at the end like we teach. So started off not so well and probably then finished OK."

That's the level of analysis that can go into one rep. For the rest of the team period when the first-team offense was on the field, Okonkwo was in the lineup more often than not. He moved all around, did some more blocking — including a good pass protection rep on a completion to Hopkins — and ran several types of routes downfield. Tannehill targeted him on a short pass over the middle, but Amani Hooker read it perfectly and broke up the pass.

Okonkwo got open with sharp routes against Kristian Fulton, Sean Murphy-Bunting and Kevin Byard, but the ball went elsewhere each time. When the twos and threes hit the field, he mostly stood close to Tony Dews, who has switched this season from running backs coach to tight ends coach. Dews' instruction, for Okonkwo and other tight ends, was frequent.

More special teams drills followed the team period, with Okonkwo and others getting low to bat a large blue ball back toward Dews three times while shuffling from left to right — a drill designed to work on lateral quickness. After that, Okonkwo and Whyte were back at each other, one trying to block and the other trying to slip past. At 10:47, it was time for another long team drill. But this time, as planned before practice, just the twos and threes would go.

Okonkwo and other starters ran 10 sprints on Field 2 while it got started. Then they jogged over and cheered on their teammates. The horn sounded at 11:12 after a series of plays run by Malik Willis and Will Levis. Vrabel gathered the team close in the middle of Field 3. And at 11:16, it was time to break — some players heading to fans to sign autographs, some doing media interviews, some getting in individual work such as catching passes from the Jugs machines.

Okonkwo and Dews stood by those machines for several minutes, Dews grabbing Okonkwo's arms and getting into some technique intricacies. Reporters gathered around Okonkwo a few minutes later and he was asked about playing for Dews.

"It's been fun, it's been interesting," Okonkwo said. "The man's loud. A loud guy, man, he likes to coach you really hard. It's a different coaching style, you just have to understand it, and you just have to get used to it. He just coaches you hard and that's how I wanted to be coached."

And that was after a light day. Heavier ones are on the way.

TITANS TE CHIG
OKONKWO, P RYAN
STONEHOUSE NAMED TO PFWA'S ALL-ROOKIE TEAM

BY JIM WYATT

NASHVILLE – A pair of Titans have been named to the Pro Football Writers Association's All-Rookie team – tight end Chig Okonkwo and punter Ryan Stonehouse.

Okonkwo, a fourth round draft pick of the team from Maryland, finished the 2022 season with 32 catches for 450 yards and three touchdowns.

Stonehouse, signed as an undrafted free agent from Colorado State, finished the 2022 season with a gross average of 53.10 yards per punt (90 punts for 4,779 yards). Stonehouse broke Sammy Baugh's single-season NFL record of 51.40 yards per punt, which was established in 1940 and was never matched among qualifiers (2.5 punts per team game) until Stonehouse's rookie campaign.

The rookie team was chosen in voting conducted by the Professional Football Writers of America (PFWA).

CHIG OKONKWO'S CREW: TITANS REMIND HIM OF HOME, REFLECT NFL'S AFRICA PUSH

BY JOE REXRODE
THE ATHLETIC
AUGUST 22, 2022

Titans rookie tight end Chigoziem Okonkwo got the football bug in second grade, his first year of playing and the first year he realized he could make some money off it.

So obsessed was young Okonkwo with the sport that he made sure it was on any TV he was around in his hometown of Powder Springs, Ga. He read whatever he could read, memorized every stat, every player, every bit of analysis he could find. He so impressed his classmates at the lunch table that he started charging them $1 apiece — or an ice cream cup, their choice — for his commentary. They paid it, until the principal found out, halted the operation and called Okonkwo's parents.

"I told (the principal) it would never happen again," Okonkwo's mother, Isioma, recalled of a conversation from 15 years ago. "But I was so proud of that boy. He came home and thought he was in trouble, but I said, 'That's a very, very good thought, that is our culture, and maybe some time in the future you can bring that out. For now, allow your friends to come listen to you talk about the football for free.'"

Entrepreneurship is a staple of the Igbo people of Nigeria, Isioma said, and that's the first thing that came to mind for her and her husband, Charlton, when they heard of their youngest child's exploits. Nigerian culture is something they talked about throughout the raising of Okonkwo and his two older sisters. It is something Okonkwo became more aware of at 15 when his father tragically passed away of a heart attack while out to dinner with his mother. And it is something he celebrates daily now.

Saturday, a night that saw Okonkwo catch a touchdown pass from Malik Willis in a 13-3 preseason win over Tampa Bay at Nissan Stadium, could be the last time a group of Titans who have bonded over their shared heritage are all in uniform together. Tuesday is another roster cut day, to get it down to 80. The Titans waived four players Monday, so one more must go. Okonkwo and four Nigerian teammates have very different stories and football trajectories.

Okonkwo, a promising fourth-round tight end out of Maryland, will be on the team and potentially a handy addition to the passing game. Ola Adeniyi, born in Nigeria, raised mostly in Houston and a Nashville revelation last season, should again provide quality outside linebacker depth. David Anenih, born in Dallas to parents who had recently moved from Nigeria, has been a pass-rushing standout in two preseason games, and the rookie looks like a practice squad candidate at least. Rookie tight end Thomas Odukoya, born in Amsterdam to a Dutch mother and Nigerian father, can occupy that practice squad without costing the Titans a spot — that's the advantage of the NFL's International Player Pathway program, which got Odukoya to Nashville.

"But I feel like I've got to come out every day and prove I deserve that spot," said the 6-foot-6, 253-pound Odukoya, who dominated club football in the Netherlands, sent highlight tapes to coaches all over the United States, played for two junior colleges and finally found success at Eastern Michigan.

The guy to watch Tuesday is defensive tackle Sam Okuayinonu. "Sam O.," as they call him around Titans camp, is a popular figure around the team. He's close with Okonkwo, his Maryland teammate, and that relationship is part of why Okuayinonu signed with the Titans after going undrafted. He was a captain at Maryland and he's doing all he can to add his name to an NFL trend and pursuit — the league is pouring resources into outreach efforts in Africa. Last season it reported more than 100 players on active rosters who were either born in Africa or whose parents were born in Africa.

Okuayinonu also is quite undersized for an NFL defensive tackle at 6-1, 269, and based on his opportunities and play in camp he's an active roster long shot, a practice squad hopeful and a Tuesday cut candidate. Ask Okonkwo about Okuayinonu and he'll tell you he's "an inspiration to me" and someone who shouldn't be underestimated. He's certainly been through more than most, seeing things as a young child that no one should have to see.

Born in Monrovia, Liberia, to a Liberian mother and Nigerian father, Okuayinonu was raised there by his mother, Clara, and was attending her college graduation party as a 5-year-old in 2003 when gunfire turned the celebration into chaos. The Second Liberian Civil War, which had been raging since 1999, had reached the doorstep of Monrovia. He ended up separated from his mother, fleeing with his aunt and cousin.

"The gunfire was so heavy, we couldn't turn around," said Okuayinonu, who ended up south of a primary bridge near the city, hiding in an uncle's house, protected from becoming a child soldier but not from seeing dead bodies floating in the water or starving people resorting to cannibalism.

He found out his mother was still alive when her first shipment of food — delivered by clandestine kayak — arrived. They could not speak or communicate for months, until the August 2003 ceasefire resulted in the reopening of the bridge and thousands of people streaming across to find their loved ones. That's a memory seared into Okuayinonu's brain.

"An incredible moment, a blessing," he said. "My mom's my everything. I got to reunite with her, and a lot of kids didn't get that privilege."

They moved together a few years later to Lowell, Mass., where some of their family members had already relocated. That's where he fell in love with American football. That's how it usually goes for kids from other parts of the world with a sport that dominates American culture but does not have the global pull of sports such as soccer or basketball, and that's what the NFL wants to change. That's how it went for Chic Ejiasi, too.

Ejiasi was born in Houston to parents who had recently emigrated from Nigeria. The family moved a few years later to Iowa, where Ejiasi's parents worked as nurses and he became an Iowa Hawkeyes enthusiast. He eventually walked on to Kirk Ferentz's program, lettering all four seasons as a defensive back and contributing to Big Ten championship teams in 2002 and 2004. He graduated with a health and sports studies degree in 2005, tried coaching briefly but ultimately returned as the program's first director of player development — helping players transition from high school to college, helping them excel in college, helping them find internships and employment.

The Titans hired him away from Iowa in 2016 to be their director of player engagement. He has been with the franchise since and he and his wife, Ellie, have a 2-year-old son named Obi — officially Miles Obioma, Obioma translating to "kind hearted." Ejiasi's job is much the same, helping Titans transition to this life. He loves serving and seeing young professionals benefit from and give to their community. He might be having as much fun during this preseason camp as he's had in this job.

"Taking over the league," Ejiasi said with a smile of the increase of African players in the league and with the Titans, which has meant in recent weeks a lot of sharing of stories, conversations about culture and even discovering others on the team with African heritage — such as receiver Nick Westbrook-Ikhine and safety Josh Kalu.

"It's like we kind of all have that understanding of how we grew up," Ejiasi said, and they all have strong feelings on how that culture led them here.

Ejiasi: "For me it was, we were very academically focused in our family. All about giving our best and trying and being the best we could be, especially academically."

Anenih: "I would say it's a pretty big difference from American culture. In terms of how to live, maturity. Like my parents, they've done a really good job of teaching me how to live and good habits to have. ... Respect. Respect for your elders, that's probably the biggest thing I would say."

Adeniyi: "We see our elderly, we respect them. We respect everybody we come around. Coaches, custodians, cafeteria ladies. That's what it is."

Okuayinonu: "To me it's like there's a little bit more pressure to go harder, knowing the sacrifices my mom made to make this possible for me."

Odukoya: "Obviously there's the genetic component of being big and strong, and I'm proud of that, but I also think Nigerians are known for their hard work and work ethic, which you need in the NFL. That shared culture, we definitely take pride in that."

Okonkwo: "Relentless hard work. That's the only way you're going to get anything in life."

Okonkwo also realized he had misperceptions of Nigeria until he visited for the first time. This was in 2017, three years after the tragic passing of his father, to visit extended family and celebrate the life of his father with them.

"People obviously have a negative perception of Africa. They think it's like dirt, everything is poor. That's not the case. It's literally like anywhere else," Okonkwo said. "If you see my uncles' houses over there, they're bigger than multi-million dollar houses here. That's a big thing I took away, the perception and reality. Everything isn't dirt and poverty."

Okonkwo would like to go back soon to get involved in outreach efforts, NFL-devised or otherwise. Adeniyi is committed to doing so next offseason, as part of NFL Africa. Former Giants star defensive end Osi Umenyiora, who was born in London to Nigerian parents, brought the idea to NFL commissioner Roger Goodell years ago and led in June in Ghana an event called NFL Africa: The Touchdown.

It included a combine-like development camp, a flag football clinic and fan events. The idea is to find and develop talent but also to increase international exposure to the game. The Philadelphia Eagles, for example, are marketing in Ghana as part of an effort to create regional fandom for various teams in different parts of the continent. This had to make business sense for the league to happen. The NFL reports 85 foreign-born players took at least one snap in the 2021 season — compared with 62 in 2014 — and that Nigeria, Canada and Australia are driving the growth.

But for Umenyiora and others with African roots who took part and will continue to take part, it's personal and about providing opportunities. The NFL isn't the only pathway for football to change a life. College football can open many more doors for kids with ability. Foreign-born FBS players more than doubled from 2014 to 2020, from 162 to 325. Roman Oben, the NFL's vice president of football development and the first Cameroon-born player drafted into the NFL, said he got emotional on the trip to Ghana.

"The school kids, the genuine passion and excitement they had, the appreciation, it takes you back," said Oben, a 12-year offensive tackle who won a Super Bowl with the Bucs. "It makes you think about where you came from."

And sometimes that's best explained with a story. Second-grade Okonkwo was surprised that day he came home from school and his parents weren't mad about his entrepreneurial efforts. A couple years later, he came home proudly showing them a 93 he got on a math test.

"A 93?" Isioma Okonkwo said to her son. "Did somebody get 100? Why weren't you the one who got 100?"

NASHVILLE – The second edition of Music City Football takes a look into the NFL journey for second-year Titans teammates Chig Okonkwo and Sam Okuayinonu, two players with African lineage.

The 11-minute feature, titled "Afrobeat", went live on Thursday night on Tennessee Titans YouTube channel.

WATCH IT: HERE.

There are more than 125 African-born or first-generation players in the NFL, including Okonkwo and Okuayinonu.

At the start of the episode, Okonkwo and Okuayinonu sit down with Director of Player Engagement Chic Ejiasi, whose parents are from Nigeria, for a dinner, and it spawns into a deeper dive into the personal lives of the two Titans.

Okonkwo, a tight end, discussed the impact his father's death had on him at a young age. Okonkwo was just 15 when his father died of a heart attack.

"In the Nigerian culture, I became the man of the house right then, at 15," Okonkwo said. "All I wanted to do was make sure my family was straight. ... When my dad died, it opened my eyes to, Man, the world is real."

Okuayinonu, a native of Liberia, lived in the country until he was 12 years old, when he escaped the country's civil war.

"Growing up in Liberia, it was great," Okuayinonu said. "My mom and my grandmom, my grandmom worked really hard to get us into a comfortable place in Liberia. (Then) in 2003, the civil war broke out in my country, and it was a really tough time. A lot of kids didn't get to see their parents again.

"Me and my mom ended up getting separated during the war, and that was a tough time for me, because my mom is my best friend. She's my everything."

Okuayinonu and his mom reunited after the war. Okuayinonu returned to Liberia in 2021.

Music City Football, which will air exclusively on YouTube, will include roughly four to six stories that will air into the fall.

The premier episode, which debuted in May, featured new Titans General Manager Ran Carthon.

"We have incredible access, and we feel like with that access, there's another level to the layer we can tell," said Surf Melendez, Vice President and Executive Creative Director for the Titans. "We're trying to create a closer connection with our fans, with our team, so they see things they don't normally get to see. We want to be close with our fans."

Also in the works:

-A feature on new Titans linebacker Azeez Al-Shaair and his road to the NFL. A crew went to Tampa, Fla., to visit with Al-Shaair and his mother, showing his long journey, which included a time when he was homeless.

-A feature on Titans fan Colin Jones, a drummer in Circa Waves with a Middle Tennessee connection. Jones, who lives in London, is a big Titans fans who even named his son "Tennessee."

All the episodes will be roughly eight to 12 minutes.

"Every episode has its own story," said Michael Fertig, Producer, Video Content with the Titans. "We're trying to humanize our players, coaches, and members of the organization. We're trying to go beyond the podium, beyond what people see on a Sunday. We're trying to show these are real people with real lives, and they struggle with real things just like everybody else, but they're a part of this great organization."

TITANS DL KYLE PEKO DRAWS INSPIRATION FROM WIFE'S
COURAGEOUS CANCER FIGHT

BY JIM WYATT

SEPTEMBER 28, 2023

NASHVILLE – Before the start of the 2019 season, the countdown was on for defensive lineman Kyle Peko.

Two big events were on the horizon:

-The start of Peko's fourth NFL season, and the birth of Peko's second child.

Then came some sobering news: Peko's wife, Giuliana, had been diagnosed with Hodgkin's Lymphoma.

The cancer diagnosis came not long after daughter Evangeline was born.

"It was a lot for our family," said Peko, who was with the Buffalo Bills at the time. "A lot was weighing on our hearts as far as me going back (to play football) or not."

Doctors discovered two lumps on Giuliana's neck, and she decided to get it checked out. Since her earlier cancer symptoms mirrored those of pregnancy, doctors said Giuliani had been dealing with the cancer in her body for a while without even knowing it. At her diagnosis, she had Stage 3 Hodgkin's Lymphoma, type of cancer that affects the lymphatic system.

The Bills gave Peko some time at the start of training camp to spend time with his wife as she began chemotherapy.

The plan was for 12 rounds of treatments in all.

While Peko questioned whether he should return to football, his wife gave him a pep talk he'll never forget.

"She basically told me: Go and make the team. Go kick ass in camp, and I'll hold it down here and kick ass during treatments," Peko said with a smile. "And that's what she did."

This week, as players across the NFL pay tribute to those affected by cancer, Peko will have his wife on his mind, as always.

Entering its 15th season, the NFL's Crucial Catch initiative supports the American Cancer Society (ACS) and addresses early detection and risk reduction for multiple types of cancers.

After the 12 rounds of chemotherapy, Giuliana Peko said is wife is now four years cancer-free.

"God is good," he said. "Five years is the official remission time, so praying and hoping to get to that fifth year."

Now in his eighth NFL season, after spending time with the Broncos, Bills, Raiders and Titans, Kyle Peko is still representing his family on football fields. He's paid his dues and stuck with it, despite dealing with adversity along the way, bouncing on and off rosters, and practice squads.

Peko, promoted to the Titans' active roster earlier this month, has played in all three games for the team in 2023. Since initially entering the NFL as an undrafted free agent in 2016, Peko has been waived 15 times in his career.

It turns out perseverance runs in the family.

"People ask, Why do you play?," Peko said. "(My wife) is one of the main reasons, and obviously my kids.

"It's a special week for the league (with Crucial Catch). It is awesome the NFL highlights this weekend for those (who've battled cancer)."

3 THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT OHIO STATE OL
NICHOLAS PETIT-FRERE,
A TENNESSEE TITANS THIRD-ROUND PICK

BY MIKE ORGAN
THE TENNESSEAN
APRIL 29, 2022

Ohio State offensive tackle Nicholas Petit-Frere was taken by the Tennessee Titans in the third round with the No. 69 pick of the 2022 NFL Draft on Friday.

Petit-Frere comes from Titans coach Mike Vrabel's alma mater where he got a wealth of experience in his college career.

Here's what to know about Petit-Frere:

As versatile as he is large

Ohio State's Nicholas Petit-Frere addresses media before Maryland game

Petit-Frere is huge at 6-foot-5, 316 pounds and he's also flexible with the ability to play either tackle position on the offensive line.

His wide base gives allows him to cover a lot of space when he moves laterally.

Petit-Frere's footwork is exceptional for his size and the main reason he was used at right and left tackle. He is better at right tackle, which is where he is expected to begin his NFL career.

Lofty expectations

Petit-Frere grew up in grew up in Tampa, Florida, and played football and basketball at Berkeley Preparatory School.

He quickly became a better football player than basketball and developed into one of the nation's top offensive line prospects by the time he was a senior. He was a consensus five-star recruit who also received offers from Alabama, Florida and several other Power

Five programs before choosing Ohio State.

After redshirting his freshman year at Ohio State, Petit-Frere earned the starting right tackle position heading into the 2020 season. He played in 35 games between 2018-21 and started in 20.

Petit-Frere earned All-America first-team honors in 2021 by the Football Writers Association of America and CBS Sports. He was also on the 2021 Outland Trophy Watch List.

Improvement needed

Quarterback Ryan Tannehill was sacked 47 times last season so it's easy to see why the Titans went after an offensive lineman.

The problem, however, is that Petit-Frere was a better run blocker in college than pass protector.

He'll need to work on his pass blocking to become the valuable asset the Titans hope he will become.

PHILIPS EAGER TO RETURN AFTER FRUSTRATING ROOKIE SEASON

BY TERRY MCCORMICK
TITANINSIDER.COM
JULY 29, 2023

Kyle Philips' rookie season was derailed by a shoulder injury.
TERRY MCCORMICK

Kyle Philips' rookie season didn't go exactly as planned.

The slot receiver started out strong, catching six passes for 66 yards, including one that set up a last-second field goal (missed by Randy Bullock) in the season opener against the New York Giants.

He even added a 46-yard punt return in that game to provide plenty of excitement and hope for Titans fans for the fifth-round pick from UCLA.

From there, Philips' train derailed. He had just two more catches for 12 yards and even muffed a couple of punts before landing on injured reserve after week five with a AC joint problem in his shoulder.

"It was real frustrating. You want to be a part of the team and help the team out. It sucks," Philips said of missing three-fourths of the season." You see your guys going in every day and putting in a lot of work and not being able to do that with them. It kind of eats at you a little bit."

Like so many others on the 2022 Titans, his season was lost to rehab in the trainers room. Philips kept working each week to get back to finish his rookie year, but it didn't happen.

"I didn't really (know I couldn't get back) until the end of the season. Each week I was coming in, trying to get better, trying to get back and I really didn't know until the last game and season was over at that point," he said..

While Philips didn't actually play much as a rookie, it doesn't mean he still feels like one in this camp.

"I wasn't able to play, but I was still able to meet with the coaches, learn offenses, learn defenses, watch a lot of film and seeing how guys run certain routes, certain stems they make and all that stuff, I was able to learn a lot," he said.

Healthy again, and having added a few pounds, Philips is excited for what could be for him this season. He figures to be the team's slot receiver, serving as a chains mover and complement to DeAndre Hopkins and Treylon Burks..

"It feels night and day. Coming in as a rookie, you never know how things are going to go. Having that year under me, knowing what to expect, what these practices are going to be like, it gives me a lot of confidence going into it," Philips said.

He also figures to be a good fit for Tim Kelly's up-tempo offense that features a lot more shorter, quicker throws..

"I feel like Tim has done a great job implementing this offense, putting it in in very great details, so we know what to do and can go out there and play fast," he said.

Saturday's camp action

Quarterback Malik Willis continues to learn and Saturday was no exception. Willis had a pass picked off in team drills when outside linebacker Rashad Weaver dipped back into the passing lanes and corralled the ball well before it reached its intended target.

But Willis showed his growth on the next play. He dialed up a perfect strike about 50 yards downfield to Chris Moore for a touchdown.

"I think that's the life of any player. As an o-lineman, if you lose a rep to a great defensive lineman, you can't come back the next play and not play as hard as you can," Willis said of his redemption.

Willis later had an even better throw to Colton Dowell deep on the left sideline. The ball hit Dowell in the hands, but safety Mike Brown raked it out for an incomplection before he could put it away.

Play of the day

In one-on-ones, Kristian Fulton was draped all over Treylon Burks on a go route, but Ryan Tannehill put the ball in a perfect spot and Burks made a diving catch in the end zone. Also in contention, was Weaver's interception off Willis. Also, had Dowell been able to hold on to Willis' sideline throw in the bucket, that might have been a winner.

Right tackle revolving door

Jamarco Jones and Chris Hubbard alternated reps at right tackle on Saturday, after Jones was out on Friday. Rookie Jaelyn Duncan, who got the first-team reps on Friday, worked with the second team on Saturday.

Inside linebacker battle

The Titans have a battle at inside linebacker to play opposite Azeez Al-Shaair between Monty Rice and Jack Gibbens. Rice got the first-team work on Wednesday and Saturday, while Gibbens worked with the first unit on Friday.

Out of practice

Tight end Josh Whyle has not done anything much beyond stretch the past two days. He was not on the field at all in Wednesday's work.

HOW TITANS ROOKIE WR EARNED THE NICKNAME ‘THE PROFESSOR’

BY MICHAEL GALLAGHER
THE NASHVILLE POST
AUGUST 15, 2022

Thirteen practices into his rookie season, and Tennessee Titans receiver Kyle Philips has already earned a reputation for being deceptively difficult to cover.

But Philips' uncanny ability to seemingly always have the right answer during team meetings has also earned him a nickname from the Titans coaching staff.

“He’s a bit of a know-it-all, but that’s why I call him ‘The Professor’ because there’s nothing he doesn’t know,” Titans wide receivers coach Rob Moore said on Monday. “His passion for the game shows up a lot. When you talk to him about it, he really does have a good mind for the game. You can make adjustments [for him] in a quick moment, and he can adjust to it.”

Added Philips: “It definitely makes me feel good. But it also puts a little bit of a target on my back. He’ll throw some trick questions out there to try and catch me. When he does, he doesn’t let me live it down. So, it goes both ways.”

From terminology to route running, Philips spends most of his free time breaking down film — of himself, of his teammates and of any receiver who happens to have a highlight reel on YouTube.

“I started [studying receivers] in middle school,” Philips admitted, adding he will watch a video on YouTube and say to himself, “I want to try and add that to my game.”

Although Tennessee’s WR group is relatively young and inexperienced, Robert Woods notwithstanding, Philips disclosed there is plenty to learn from the group of fellow pass catchers.

The Titans have a solid mix of physical, speed and possession receivers. That eclectic mix of size, quickness, strength, route running and elusiveness is what Philips credits for helping him round out his skillset.

“I study every receiver I can,” Philips said. “Just being out here, I’d say [I study] a lot of Robert Woods, Mason Kinsey and Nick Westbrook-Ikhine. I like to take an aspect of every little bit of their game — with Robert just how good he is with his hands, Nick his releases, and Mason just how explosive he is in and out of his cuts.”

WHO IS DILLON RADUNZ AND WHY DID THE TITANS DRAFT HIM IN ROUND 2?

*BY MICHAEL HOGAN
SI.COM
MAY 2, 2021*

The right tackle competition for the Tennessee Titans got much more interesting on day two of the NFL Draft.

A few weeks ago, coach Mike Vrabel, when asked about the position, said there was no predetermined depth chart. Those with a chance to end up on top include free agent Kendall Lamm, the recently re-signed Ty Sambrailo and David Quessenberry.

Dillon Radunz, Tennessee's second-round pick, will add some youth to the battle. While the 6-foot-6, 298-pound North Dakota State product knows he will be the least experienced player compared to the three veterans, but he also has every intention of winning the job. Because that's just who he is.

"I'm always going to want to start. I'm not going to speak it into existence that I won't be (the starter), if that for some reason happens," Radunz said. "I'm always going to be competitive. I'm always going to want teams to win. I'm always going to want my team to win, so I'll push the guys in front of me and make sure they're on their P's and Q's about that. It's going to be a competitive atmosphere."

What to know about the newest candidate to be the Titans' right tackle:

He prides himself on versatility. A few days before the NFL Draft, ESPN's Jeremy Fowler reported that Radunz's stock was rising because some people around the league believed he could play all five offensive line spots.

Radunz said he focused on making himself versatile throughout the draft process. That will be important because he primarily played left tackle in college. He will be shuffling over to the other side in the NFL, at least early on, and may also be expected to play other positions.

"I've been working on it in the offseason, doing drills and stuff with the right tackle if that is the position they want me to be at," he said. "So, I've been working on both sides of the ball, switching up my stance like that, so that is probably the biggest challenge and then making sure everything you're dotting your I's and crossing your T's when you switch over."

He has plenty of experience with NFL players and coaches. Leading up to the NFL Draft, Radunz trained with one of the best offensive tackles in recent league history, Joe Staley, the former San Francisco 49er who made six Pro Bowl appearances and made the Pro Football Hall of Fame All-2010s team. He has also worked with former NFL offensive line coach Paul Alexander.

"I flew out to California immediately after that game, went to train with Joe Staley, ex-49er, future Hall of Famer, so he was super good in my development," Radunz said "He was a huge testament to that, so shout out to him. I did that a lot with previous NFL players. I worked out with Paul Alexander. He was a previous NFL coach."

And of course, he has played with some NFL players at NDSU, including the No. 3 overall pick in this year's draft, quarterback Trey Lance, and 2016 No. 1 overall pick, quarterback Carson Wentz.

He feels like his stock rose at Senior Bowl. Radunz played in just two games in the past several months due to COVID-19, and only one of those was for the NDSU Bison due to COVID-19. The other was at the Reese's Senior Bowl, where he was named player of the week after a strong showing throughout.

"You can always lift weights, stuff like that, but there's something different about hitting guys," he said. "So, being able to just hit pads, being able to train with other offensive linemen, they understand the physicality of the game, so having them hold pads for you and stuff. It's been difficult, but at the same time, I think I did a good job at it. Things showed at the Senior Bowl, and we'll continue to do that through OTAs and rookie minicamp."

Titans general manager Jon Robinson agreed.

"Their season was shortened obviously. That Senior Bowl exposure was really good for him to go against some of the best of the best in college football," Robinson said. "Got a chance to spend some time down there with him, get to know him. He's about what we're about, you know, football-wise and makeup and commitment to being a good football player."

He's durable. After redshirting as a freshman, he entered the 2017 season with a much large role. However, he tore his ACL after playing 15 snaps in NDSU's season-opener the following season and went on to miss the entire season.

After that, though, he went on to start 32 consecutive games for the Bison. He enters the NFL about as healthy as could be.

"My body is super fresh," he said. "I literally have no injuries at all, no nicks and bruises. I was able to gain a lot of strength too through that because I wasn't playing in the season, so my body's in tip-top shape. It's just a matter of getting back into or I should say coasting into that football shape that I was talking about since I haven't played football, but I'd say there's a lot of positives about only playing one game."

LIKE A PRO, AND HE

TO JDRF AS PART OF 'MY CAUSE, MY CLEATS' CAMPAIGN

BY JIM WYATT

DECEMBER 01, 2022

NASHVILLE – Kevin Rader was a freshman in high school when he was first diagnosed with Type 1 diabetes.

It was a shock to the system, leaving him with many unknowns.

Reality hit when doctors checked his blood sugar, and it was 786.

"I lost 30 pounds in 3 or 4 days," said the Titans tight end. "No one in my family ever had diabetes, so no one knew what was wrong with me. It wasn't easy at first – it was definitely a learning curve for me. But you adjust. And now, I think I manage it great."

Rader, in his first season with the Titans after playing the previous two seasons with the Steelers, now wants to do his part to help bring awareness to the disease while encouraging others.

As part of the NFL's 'My Cause, My Cleats' campaign, Rader plans to wear cleats that bring attention to JDRF (Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation). The words "Improving Lives Curing Type 1 Diabetes" also decorate the colorful shoes.

The annual 'My Cause, My Cleats' initiative empowers players to showcase their commitment to the causes they support through creative artwork and custom designs on their game cleats.

Rader is among a group of roughly 16-18 Titans who plan to take part in the initiative, starting on Sunday against the Eagles and then again next week against the Jaguars.

Rader said he plans to auction off the cleats at some point to raise money for JDRF.

"I want to bring awareness," said Rader, who has played in eight of the team's 11 games this season after being promoted from the practice squad in September. "The biggest thing (I tell young people) is: 'Don't take no for an answer. Some people think when you get diabetes you can't do things, but it's like any other adversity, you can overcome it.'"

Type 1 diabetes is often diagnosed in children and young adults but can occur at any age. Since the immune system destroys the body's ability to produce insulin, those with the disease are required to take shots or use an insulin pump, in addition to regularly monitoring their blood sugar.

Rader, who is 27, regularly takes shots to keep his blood sugars in check.

Rader, who has worked at tight end, fullback and on special teams this season, said he takes six to eight injections of insulin a day, depending on his activity. He wears a FreeStyle Libre glucose monitoring system on his upper leg that lets him know his blood sugars, and it helps him deal with the highs and lows.

Rader said he also leans on Titans nutrition coordinator Lauren Silvio to help him with his blood sugars, and his diet is important, he said.

"In games (my blood sugar) goes high because the adrenalin spikes the sugars," Rader said. "(As for my diet), it was a learning curve at first, but once you understand carbs, and what foods make you spike quick vs. late, like pasta versus a normal chicken dish, things like that, it's pretty easy to manage."

Rader said teammates are sometimes curious when they see him checking his blood sugars or taking injections.

"Usually when someone finds out they are shocked I'm a diabetic," he said. "And then I tell them, and they're like, What? And they'll see the sensor on my leg and it will start a conversation."

Rader, a Pittsburgh native who played in college at Youngstown State and initially signed with the Packers as an undrafted free agent back in 2018, is happy to spread the word about how he deals with diabetes because it allows him to encourage others.

When Rader was with the Steelers, he talked with kids through JDRF about his personal experiences with diabetes.

"I was a walk-on in college, and I had to overcome that," Rader said at the time. "Same thing, undrafted going into the NFL. Really diabetes, as long as you manage it, take ownership and make it part of your lifestyle, it won't hold you back at all."

TITANS DL JEFFERY
SIMMONS NAMED WEEK
12 NFLPA COMMUNITY MVP

NOVEMBER 24, 2023

NASHVILLE – Titans defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons has been named the Week 12 NFLPA Community MVP after providing turkeys to more than 500 Nashville families for the Thanksgiving holiday.

"The Bible says in Luke 12:48 that 'To whom much is given, much will be required.' Growing up in Noxubee County, Mississippi, I watched my mother make countless sacrifices for me and my four siblings, especially during the holidays," Simmons said in a release provided by NFLPA. "Knowing that God has put me in a position to be a blessing to others means the world to me, and I realize there is still so much work for me to do in the community. I want to sincerely thank everyone for helping with the Give Em A Reason Foundation Turkey Distribution."

Coach Mike Vrabel gave Simmons permission to leave Tuesday's walkthrough early so he could attend an event for his Give Em A Reason Foundation, and cars lined up outside of Nissan Stadium for the drive-thru turkey delivery.

Simmons partnered with Kroger to help feed families for the holidays.

"Being able to give back to the community means so much to me," Simmons said earlier this week. "This is a time of giving, and being in the position I am today ... I always think about how I am thankful to play the game of football. I'm thankful to be able to give back to the community. I think, around this time, maybe someone didn't have the money, or whatever it might be, to buy a turkey? I think about those things."

Following the event, Second Harvest Food Bank of Middle Tennessee, FrankTown Open Hearts, and other local nonprofit organizations were able to use and distribute the remaining turkeys to additional recipients who were unable to attend.

"Just the excitement on their faces," Simmons said. "All the 'thank you's', the 'thank you for what you do for the community.' That's what it is all about. I don't look for the publicity on the outside, I do it because that is my heart. I do it for my community. ... It meant a lot to be out there."

In honor of Simmons being named this week's Community MVP, the NFLPA is making a $10,000 contribution to his foundation or charity of choice. In turn, Simmons will take part in a virtual or in-person visit to a school or children's hospital. Along with the other 2023-24 Community MVPs, he will also become eligible for this year's Alan Page Community Award, which is the highest honor that the NFLPA can bestow upon a player.

Now in its 10th season, the Community MVP campaign is part of the NFLPA's continued efforts to support the year-round, civic outreach and engagement of its player members. Please visit the NFLPA Community MVP website to learn more about the program.

HOW TITANS' SIMMONS SAW FOOTBALL AS LIFE-CHANGING OPPORTUNITY

*BY TURRON DAVENPORT
ESPN.COM
OCTOBER 18, 2023*

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- The bye week couldn't have come at a better time for the Tennessee Titans.

A frustrating 24-16 loss to the Baltimore Ravens pushed the Titans (2-4) to the bottom of the division, causing team captain Jeffery Simmons to suggest his teammates do some soul-searching.

"We need to figure out the guys that want to be out there," the defensive tackle said. "We need to reevaluate our team and figure out who wants to play football for the Titans."

The pain shows on Simmons' face after every loss.

It's from the competitive spirit he developed from going against his older brother, Dylan Bradley, whose NFL aspirations were cut short due to injuries. They competed in everything from tackling drills to video games and more.

"He used to be so competitive," Simmons said. "I used to be mad at him. We used to fight each other every time he beat me."

During position meetings, Titans defensive line coach Terrell Williams pulls up clips of Simmons hustling to the football even when the play isn't near him as an example of how he wants the other players to compete.

"There's nothing better than showing guys that are at [Simmons'] status and still play hard," Williams said. "Not every Pro Bowler is running to the ball the way he is. If Jeff Simmons can run to the ball, the rest of the guys better get going, too."

Simmons and Bradley are only two years apart, so Simmons had to wait his turn to start playing when he was watching his big brother play at 5. The two used to practice tackling by putting their pads on so they could hit each other and by hitting a tree in their backyard.

"Tough" is how Simmons described it.

Bradley said he knew his little brother was built different when he had tigtrope ankle surgery during his senior year in high school. The procedure normally has a four-to-six-week recovery time, but Simmons came back to play two weeks later.

As the oldest of five siblings (three sisters and Simmons), Bradley had to be "the man of the house." He quickly saw football as a way that he could make things better.

"Football gave me the opportunity to change my life and my family's life," Bradley said. "So, I had to put all my energy into football."

Simmons took on the same belief from a young age. Growing up they always talked about being able to make things better for the family.

That's why Simmons was emotional during his press conference after he signed a four-year, $94 million contract extension, making Simmons the second-highest paid defensive tackle in the NFL -- behind only the Los Angeles Rams' Aaron Donald. Simmons came a long way from when he had to share the bed with his brother.

"Every day I wake up and think about those hard times and how my mother didn't feel like it," Simmons said as he fought through tears. "Sometimes, I'll be like 'I'm hurt' and think about my mom. My family, that's my motivation."

Tennessee Titans defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons is hoping for a reset after the team's bye in Week 7. Peter van den Berg/USA TODAY Sports

Their uncle, Jason Hatcher, played defensive line for the Dallas

Cowboys. Having played the same position, Simmons and Bradley wanted to follow in their uncle's footsteps.

Simmons remembers going to his uncle's house in Dallas and seeing the things that football provided.

"It was like me being around that made me love the game more because I know my uncle also came from a small town [in Louisiana]," Simmons said. "That motivated me, just knowing that I could do the same thing."

Meeting his uncle's teammate, Hall of Famer Demarcus Ware, was a huge moment for Bradley to push for the NFL.

Simmons was a freshman on the football team at Noxubee County High School in Mississippi when Bradley was starring on the team as a senior.

Ole Miss and Mississippi State recruited Bradley in high school, but he chose to play at Southern Miss from 2013 to 2016.

Bradley signed with the Minnesota Vikings as an undrafted free agent in 2017, but he was waived during the final roster cuts and re-signed to the practice squad. He had a good chance to make the roster in 2018, but an ankle and knee injury ended his dreams.

As for Simmons, he would also become a standout for Noxubee County before suiting up for Mississippi State, where he'd go on to be an All-American from 2016 to 2018.

Although it wasn't career-ending, Simmons had a devastating injury in February 2019 before the scouting combine. He thought he just hyperextended his knee, but Hatcher, who served as a pre-draft mentor, had to break the news he got from Simmons' trainer, Tony Villani of XPE Sports, that the injury was actually a torn ACL, according to Simmons.

Simmons told ESPN he called Bradley in tears and told him he considered going back to Mississippi State. Before the injury, Simmons was projected to be a top-10 pick.

But Bradley promised things would work out.

"You're the best defensive tackle in the draft," Bradley said. "You'll get picked in the first round."

The injury gave the brothers the opportunity to lean on one another as the draft approached and spend some time together.

Simmons almost joined the Vikings like his brother, as Minnesota considered taking him at No. 18. but they took center Garrett Bradbury instead.

The Titans gave Simmons the call of his life when they were on the clock at No. 19. The two brothers, who were wearing matching outfits, embraced as soon as Simmons got off the phone. They were on their way to Nashville.

Bradley worked for a framing company when he first got to the city. He got into training when the COVID-19 pandemic hit in 2020, first by helping his sister lose a significant amount of weight through workouts they did in Simmons' garage.

Bradley got the certification to be a trainer soon after that, which led to an offer to work at a sports training facility called D1 that opened in Spring Hill, Tennessee -- where he is now the head strength and conditioning coach.

Simmons approached Bradley last winter about being his trainer after he decided to stay in Nashville to train during the offseason. Bradley was honored to train his younger brother along with former Titans' and current Buffalo Bills defensive lineman DaQuan Jones.

"I could tell training is his passion," Simmons said. "This past offseason, I'm like, 'I'm going to give you a chance.' He did a hell of a job with that, helped me get stronger as well."

He was coming off a season where he had to push through an ankle injury for most of it. Simmons told ESPN he had to get shots in the ankle over the last eight weeks just to be able to play.

The emotions came spilling out after a loss to the Jacksonville Jaguars in Week 18, which made the Titans miss the playoffs, when Simmons was asked about playing through his injuries.

That loss also marked the first time that Simmons would miss the playoffs.

"As his older brother, I was like, 'Don't let them see you cry,'" Bradley said. "But that's him allowing himself to be vulnerable and showing his passion. If everyone on a given team had that much passion about football that team wouldn't lose."

With Simmons' passion comes belief. In himself and his team, and though the Titans haven't gotten off to the start they would have wanted, Simmons believes things can turn around.

"We have a long season ahead," Simmons said. "We have a bye week, and hopefully guys get healthy, hit that reset button and come back ready to roll."

Their next shot to start to turn the season around comes Week 8 when they host the Atlanta Falcons on Oct. 29 (1 p.m. ET, CBS).

KEY TO CITY PRESENTED

Key to city presented Jeffery Simmons during 'fun day'

Mayor of Macon Buz McGuire hands Tennessee Titans and former Noxubee County High school football player Jeffery Simmons the key to the city Saturday at the Jeffery Simmons Fun Day celebration at the Noxubee County Sportsplex. Since joining the Titans in 2019, Simmons has donated free meals to electrical workers after a severe storm in 2021 and donated $50,000 to renovate athletic facilities at NCHS in 2022. Simmons said he put on the event to continue giving back to his hometown. (Grant McLaughlin/Dispatch Staff)

MACON – When Macon resident William Mitchell was looking for something to do with his daughter, Rachel, this weekend, he wasn't sure what would shake out.

After hearing that Tennessee Titan Defensive End and former Noxubee County High School football player Jeffery Simmons was hosting a community fun day, he knew just what to do.

"I watched (Simmons) play all four years of high school football," Mitchell said. "We were just at home and I really wanted to bring her out to this, and because she loves water games."

area since joining the NFL in 2019. (Grant McLaughlin/Dispatch Staff)

Mitchell was one of around 3,000 people who signed up to attend the Jeffery Simmons Fun Day event at the Noxubee County Sportsplex, featuring local food vendors, music and games for children, as well as a firework show that evening, Simmons said.

Simmons told The Dispatch he wanted to come home and host an event to pay homage to his hometown of Macon and bring people out for the Fourth of July holiday.

"(Events like this) motivate me," Simmons said. "This is where I started from. I am going to help people from all over, but right here in Noxubee County is what made me. I wanted to bring something back to where I came from."

Mayor of Macon, Buz McGuire, said the city provided fireworks for the event, and also presented Simmons a key to the city for his philanthropic efforts in Noxubee County.

"For me, the most important thing is he's willing to give back to his community," McGuire said. "I know he's done some work at (Noxubee County High School), and now he's putting on this day. I'm sure there'll be other things in the future too."

In 2021, Simmons provided free meals to Macon Electric workers and 4-County Electric Power Association linemen for their work following a severe winter storm, and funded a $50,000 renovation project for NCHS to revitalize its field house and weight room in 2022.

Simmons also donated $75,000 to the Starkville Parks and Recreation Department that same year to build a turf field at the Starkville Sportsplex.

Simmons said he plans to continue making trips back home to work with local high school students and put on more events, but could not comment on the nature of those future endeavors.

"Everything is not set in stone," he said. "I don't want to speak on anything just yet right now. But we want to grow this city. We don't have a lot here. So, I think that's where it starts."

Another attendee, Johnathan Morris, said he brought his whole family out to the event to support Simmons, but also to see the firework show and enjoy the holiday as a family.

"I'm a big fan of Tennessee Titan Jeffery Simmons, and we came out to support (him)," Morris said. "But it's also pretty nice because it has a lot of stuff for the kids."

FOUR YEARS LATER,
TITANS DT JEFFERY
SIMMONS STILL BUOYED
BY CONTROLLING
OWNER AMY ADAMS
STRUNK'S TRUST IN HIM

BY JIM WYATT
TITANS ONLINE
APRIL 14, 2023

NASHVILLE – Four years ago, after being selected by the Titans in the first round of the 2019 NFL Draft, an emotional Jeffery Simmons vowed to reward controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk for having faith in him.

Simmons, sitting two seats down from Strunk at his introductory press conference, tucked his head and shed tears when Strunk spoke about her trust in him while welcoming him into the organization.

Simmons, who was recovering from an ACL injury at the time, had faced questions following an off-field incident he was involved in back in high school. The well-publicized incident resulted in heavy scrutiny over the pick, but Strunk spoke about second chances, and her faith in Simmons.

"Coming from a woman," Simmons, fighting back tears, said of Strunk at the time. "I'll tell her in front of you guys that she can trust me. I won't let her down."

Strunk was involved in the process that led to the Titans selecting Simmons.

"We are getting a great football player, that goes without saying, but we are getting a great man," Strunk said in April of 2019. "We are a nation that gives second chances, and this young man, Jeffery Simmons, he deserved that second chance."

On Wednesday, the Titans officially awarded Simmons with a second contract.

The big defensive lineman signed his long-term contract extension before another emotional press conference when he once again thanked Strunk for believing in him.

Simmons said he exchanged texts with Strunk after the two sides agreed to terms.

"From day one I told Miss Amy that I would never let her down," Simmons said. "I texted Miss Amy after we came to an agreement, and I told her how much I appreciated her trusting in me from day one. What she sent back to me, she told me: 'You promised me that you would never let me down and you haven't.' And that right there, it hit something inside.

"To have a female owner, a lady owner, in the NFL to trust in you so much, from the adversity I went through on my journey to get here, it means so much to me. Miss Amy, I appreciate you so much."

Simmons has held up his end of the bargain since the Titans selected him with the 19th overall pick on the 2019 NFL Draft out of Mississippi State.

Simmons has been named to two Pro Bowls in four years, and since joining the Titans he ranks second on the team with 21 sacks, trailing only outside linebacker Harold Landry III (26.5). His career totals also include 196 tackles, 19 passes defended, two forced fumbles and three fumble recoveries.

After missing the first six games of his rookie season due to a pre-draft injury, Simmons played in 56 of the team's last 60 games (54 starts). He was a team captain in each of the last two campaigns.

Simmons said he's grown on and off the field over the past four years.

"I know for a fact I have grown," Simmons said. "If you don't grow, especially as a player in this league. From year one, I am going into year five now, I don't think I'd be standing at this podium right now.

"As a man, I try to be better than I was. .... That's been my motto forever: Be better than I was yesterday, on the field and off the field. Of course, I feel like I have grown as a man, and as a player."

ON HIS BIG DAY, TITANS DT JEFFERY SIMMONS IS SMILING THROUGH THE TEARS

BY JIM WYATT
TITANS ONLINE
APRIL 13, 2023

NASHVILLE – Jeffery Simmons had a lot of things on his mind when he stepped up to the podium on Wednesday.

Among his thoughts: "I'm going to try not to cry today."

Then the big defensive lineman looked at his mother, and the tears started streaming down his cheeks. At one point he paused for 12 seconds before gathering himself.

"My mom, single parent," Simmons said. "Just to see the journey we have been on as a family. It's crazy," Simmons said. "I think, man, from house to house, apartment to apartment. Sharing a bed with my brother. Now, we're good. ... It's generational wealth, as we call it. It's who I do it for. Every day I wake up, I think about those hard times where I know my mom didn't feel like it. Sometimes I am hurting, but I think about my mom, having raised five kids on her own. For me to say, I don't want to do this. That's my motivation, my family."

Titans General Manager Ran Carthon, Coach Mike Vrabel and a big group of family members were on hand at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park on Wednesday for a press conference celebrating the long-term contract extension Simmons signed earlier in the day.

At the conclusion of the press conference, Simmons talked more about his mother, Brenda Bradley, and his upbringing.

Simmons said his mission since first stepping on the football field as a five-year-old – when he used to put on his shoulder pads and hit a big pear tree in the backyard – has always been to make his family proud.

And give them a better life.

"I didn't want to make too much eye contact with my mom today because I knew she'd be there crying, and then I'd cry, too," Simmons said with a smile. "But to think about that upbringing, and all the adversity we've been through. ... I know she is proud of me."

Simmons said the family moved six or seven times when he was younger, including a move from Louisiana to Mississippi.

At most places, Simmons shared room with brother, and his two sisters also shared room. Simmons said his mom adopted his uncle's daughter, a cousin, who he also calls a sister.

With a household of five kids, Brenda Bradley had to work all kinds of jobs, from working at a convenience store to working at a prison. She did everything she could to make ends meet, Simmons said.

"But she never missed a birthday," Simmons said.

Simmons said he pulled weeds as a kid to make extra money, to keep her from having to pay for his football uniforms.

Not too long after signing his first NFL contract with the Titans in 2019, Simmons bought his mom a house in Spring Hill, Tennessee, so she could be close.

Now, after signing a mammoth deal with the Titans, the two-time Pro Bowler knows his family will be taken care of for years and years and years to come.

He's also now finally ready to reward himself – he plans to buy a new home, perhaps with a pool.

"I never picture myself wearing another color than two-tone blue, other than a gold jacket," Simmons said. "This is a great day. I hope I retire here, and I hope I can make this franchise happy."

IT'S BIGGER THAN FOOTBALL': TITANS' JEFFERY SIMMONS SPENDS WEEK GIVING BACK IN MISSISSIPPI

BY STEFAN KRAJISNIK
THE TENNESSEAN - MISSISSIPPI CLARION LEDGER
JULY 9, 2022

STARKVILLE – Before he was an All-Pro and All-SEC defensive tackle, Tennessee Titans star Jeffery Simmons was a manager for his high school football team.

Simmons was in middle school but served as a varsity football manager when he walked through the weight room at Noxubee County High School and saw the rusty weights and bent bars.

It's a sight that stuck with him, particularly as he saw opponents such as West Point with better equipment to help build a "winning culture."

So Simmons made a promise. He wasn't a 6-foot-4, 300-pound menace yet, but his potential had always been apparent as a five-star prospect. Once he made it to the NFL, Simmons said, he'd ensure future Noxubee County athletes had access to better equipment.

The former Mississippi State standout fulfilled the promise Thursday as he stood outside newly named and renovated Jeffery B. Simmons Field House. The only thing more eye-popping than the shiny oversized scissors used in the ribbon cutting was his neon yellow shorts suit.

"I cannot really show my appreciation for Noxubee County enough," Simmons said.

Simmons' time in high school wasn't always as successful as his football career. As a senior in 2016, he was found guilty of malicious mischief and pleaded no contest to a simple assault charge. It came after he was helping break up a fight between his sister and another woman. Simmons was shown on video striking the woman before walking away.

Simmons said the donations and work he does for his high school are not an attempt to cover up for what happened.

"I moved on from all that," Simmons said. "I don't even talk about it anymore. I don't live in the past. My thing is, what I'm doing now is to make sure my name, my brand — the Jeffery Simmons brand — will leave a legacy not just for me but for my kids and their future.

"That's my biggest thing. I have nephews, nieces. What can I do to make sure they're good in their future and make sure they don't have to live off that — live off something that happened 20 years ago, 30 years ago."

NCHS athletics director Karen Dixon — who has known Simmons since he was in her fourth-grade class — says once the school was informed of Simmons' plan with the weight room, it was their idea to name the field house after him.

The unveiling in Macon, Mississippi, was only the start of an eventful week back home for Simmons. He made the short trek Friday to Starkville, where he signed a $75,000 check for Starkville Parks and Recreation toward a new turf field at the Starkville Sportsplex.

The field was also named in his honor and was used through the weekend for his third annual youth camp.

"It's bigger than football," Simmons said Saturday. "It's not all about just these young kids seeing us play on Thursdays, Monday nights and Sundays. These kids matter. The town of Starkville matters. The town of Macon matters."

Tennessee Titans defensive lineman Jeffery Simmons reacts after a play in the first half against the Cincinnati Bengals at Nissan Stadium.

Simmons was joined at his camp by NFL players Elgton Jenkins, Tyre Phillips, J.T. Gray and Gerri Green, among others. The group remains tight-knit as their careers have shifted away from Mississippi, and Simmons says there is never hesitation when they ask each other to help with events such as youth camps.

Mississippi State quarterback Will Rogers also received an invitation from Simmons. He remembers the angst of being a kid at a youth camp with successful football players around. Now he notes the commitment that comes with being on the adult side.

"They're pros, for sure," Rogers said. "The way they conduct themselves — not only on the field but also coming back and doing things like this for the community. Helping people that don't have as much ... It's humbling to see and definitely something I'm going to learn from."

TENNESSEE TITANS
DRAFT PICK PETER
SKORONSKI'S GRANDFATHER PLAYED FOR VINCE LOMBARDI:
WHAT ELSE TO KNOW

BY MIKE ORGAN
THE TENNESSEAN
APRIL 28, 2023

The Tennessee Titans selected former Northwestern offensive tackle Peter Skoronski with the 11th pick in the first round of the 2023 NFL Draft Thursday.

Skoronski was the third offensive lineman taken in the draft behind Ohio State's Paris Johnson Jr. to Arizona and Tennessee's Darnell Wright to Chicago.

Here are three things to know about Skoronski:

Grandfather played for Vince Lombardi

Skoronski's grandfather Bob Skoronski was an offensive tackle for the Green Bay Packers when Vince Lombardi was building a dynasty. He spent nine seasons with the franchise.

He was a rookie in 1956, spent two years in the U.S. Air Force, and returned to Green Bay from 1959-68.

Bob Skoronski, 84, played in two Super Bowls, was an All-Pro in 1966 and is in the Green Bay Packers Hall of Fame.

Peter Skoronski tweeted earlier Thursday that his grandfather served as his inspiration to make it to the NFL.

Nation's best pass blocker

Skoronski finished the 2022 season with Pro Football Focus' highest pass-blocking grade in the country at 93.0. That also is one of the highest ratings of all time.

The 6-foot-4, 315 pounder allowed only six pressures on 480 pass-blocking snaps.

Skoronski posted a 79.1 run-blocking grade, which was fifth among Power 5 offensive tackles.

Skoronski was Northwestern's first offensive lineman to earn the Rimington-Pace Big Ten Offensive Lineman of the Year. He also became only the third Wildcat offensive lineman to earn two All-Big Ten first team awards under Pat Fitzgerald.

He was a finalist for the 2022 Outland Trophy.

Didn't translate

Even with Skoronski anchoring the line, Northwestern was not among the top offensive teams in the Big 10.

The Wildcats finished 10th in the Big Ten and 94th nationally in passing (210.3 yards) and ninth in the Big Ten and 98th nationally in rushing (125.1 yards).

Northwestern scored only 10 passing touchdowns and 11 rushing.

FOR TENNESSEE TITANS
1ST-ROUNDER PETER
SKORONSKI, CHICAGO
HOMECOMING COMES WITH BIG CHANGE

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
AUGUST 11, 2023

Peter Skoronski isn't at the position he's used to, and isn't in the position to complain about it.

Skoronski's been starting at left guard for the Tennessee Titans since the day he arrived in Nashville after the Titans made him the No. 11 pick in the 2023 NFL Draft. The only problem? Skoronski isn't a guard. Never has been. He was an All-America left tackle at Northwestern and a five-star recruit as a left tackle before that.

He's always played the most premium position on the offensive line and he's always done it well. But now, in the days before his preseason debut as an NFL guard, Skoronski isn't caught up in where he's playing so long as he is, in fact, playing.

"My real goal is just to be a great NFL player," Skoronski said. "I'd love to just be on the field if at all. Beggars can't be choosers I guess in that sense."

The Titans' preseason opener against the Chicago Bears on Saturday (noon, News Channel 2) represents a big moment for Skoronski for a few reasons. One, it's his first opportunity to play in the NFL. Two, it's his first opportunity to play guard in the NFL. And three, he's playing in friendly confines. Skoronski grew up and played high school and college football in the Chicago area and says he's been coordinating ticket requests with friends and family for months.

It's hard to call this a grand homecoming for Skoronski. He hasn't been in Nashville long enough to miss a Windy City winter. He's only been with the Titans for about as long as a college freshman would spend in the dorms before packing a few loads of laundry in the car and heading home for Thanksgiving dinner.

Instead of laundry, Skoronski's bringing a bus-load of offensive linemen home with him. Skoronski says he's in charge of sating their Thanksgiving-sized appetites by picking the restaurant for the linemen dinner Friday night.

Whether it's picking the perfect eatery or sliding inside to guard for the first time in his life, Skoronski has the same mission.

"I'm trying to be a great teammate," Skoronski said.

Why guard matters

Titans offensive line coach Jason Houghtaling says it wasn't hard to project Skoronski's skills at guard.

"You watch that tape from his college days at Northwestern," Houghtaling said. "When he gets his hands on people he can control them. That's the name of the game there. Just his physicality. Any of their in-the-box runs, he looked really comfortable climbing to second-level defenders, redirecting and all those things."

There's a stigma in football circles that guards are less important than tackles. And it's not hard to see why. Defensive ends and outside linebackers have always been the biggest threats to quarterbacks. So tackles, naturally, are most important for protecting passers. This is especially true of left tackles, since most quarterbacks are right handed and left tackles are tasked with preventing rushers from sneaking up on quarterbacks from behind.

From 2000-20, there were 76 tackles picked in the first round versus 35 guards and centers combined. Six guards and centers make at least $15 million per year compared to 22 tackles. If an offensive lineman wants to be picked higher or paid more, he's better off on the outside.

But times are changing. For nearly a decade, the league's most fearsome pass rusher has been Aaron Donald, a defensive tackle. And as a new generation of interior pass rushers like the Titans' Jeffery Simmons, the New York Jets' Quinnen Williams, the Washington Commanders' Daron Payne and the New York Giants' Dexter Lawrence are approaching their prime and earning big pay days, guards are only going to become more vital.

"Guys like Jeff are some of the best in the league at getting to the quarterback and stopping the pass game," Skoronski said. "That makes your job important. If they're paying the guy across from you, you better be good at it too."

Making the most of the preseason

The Titans' other guard, Daniel Brunskill, knows a thing or two about changing positions. He was a tight end until his senior year of college when he moved to tackle, and he's played center, guard and tackle as a pro. Unlike Skoronski, Brunskill was undrafted. He made his pro debut as an Atlanta Falcon in a preseason game against the Miami Dolphins in 2017, mostly playing as a reserve tackle.

To Brunskill, the challenge of playing your first preseason game is the immediacy of it all.

"They had told us the ones were going to go a certain amount and then all of the sudden the ones went like one drive and it was like 'Hey, go!'" Brunskill remembers. "You've got to go from zero to 100 right now and just kind of go out there and perform."

That type of urgency is what Brunskill is telling Skoronski and the other rookies to be prepared for. Football moves fast. One second you're on the bench. Another there's been a turnover so you're scrambling to find your mouthpiece before running out onto the field. Preseason simulates that at warp speed, with units cycling through and players trying new positions on nearly every drive.

Not that Skoronski's teammates are concerned about the first-rounder acclimating. Titans tackle Nicholas Petit-Frere, who is suspended the first six games of 2023 for violating the NFL's gambling policy, was in Skoronski's position last year: a former five-star recruit from the Big Ten thrust into starting as a rookie Day 1.

But Petit-Frere doesn't consider his situation and Skoronski's equal.

"Peter's in an even better position than me," Petit-Frere said. "He's coming in and he's really come out running."

HOW TYJAE SPEARS, REPAIRED KNEE AND
ALL, IS SPRINTING TO STARDOM WITH
TENNESSEE TITANS |
ESTES

BY GENTRY ESTES
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
SEPTEMBER 7, 2023

When the topic comes up, rookie running back Tyjae Spears extends his right leg instinctively, stretching out across the steps on which he's seated. As he does, a large scar becomes visible.

"Some dark times," he says, thinking back. "... I've been through a lot."

That scar says more than Spears will — or needs to — about his knee.

It's a part of his story that's already well-known. It's why some NFL teams reportedly removed him from their draft boards. It's why Spears felt the need to warn attendees at his event on Day 2 of the draft: "Pump the brakes. I don't want to see long faces at the end of the night if I don't get picked."

The knee is also why Spears once considered giving up football, the sport in which he's so immensely gifted that the Tennessee Titans took him in the third round anyway, turning Spears' draft gathering into a party that the bayou town of Ponchatoula, Louisiana (population just shy of 8,000) won't soon forget.

Now that Spears has made it out, he doesn't plan on going back.

"I guess what people consider their chip (on their shoulder), my chip is where I come from," Spears says. "I just can't go back to it."

He doesn't mean that as a slight on his upbringing or where he's from. He speaks with pride about his family, his eight siblings — five brothers, three sisters — and his parents who worked hard to make ends meet. And also about his hometown. Did you know, for instance, that Ponchatoula is the Strawberry Capital of the World? "We got the best strawberries in the world, man," Spears says.

It's not just the small town or "humble" beginnings (an adjective that can be a cliché, though Spears agrees with it). His ambition runs a lot deeper than that. Through the parts of his story that aren't as well-known, ones that collectively molded him into someone who understands how special the opportunity he has.

But, yeah, it's the knee, too.

"I didn't come from the worst place," Spears says, "but I didn't come from the best place. There's a lot of things that I went without. I just don't want to have those same feelings recycled again. As I get older in my life, I just don't want to go without anymore, and I don't want my kids to go without. ... I'm depending on myself, and I've got a dad and a mom depending on me, too. Also nephews and little cousins and nieces and all looking up to me.

"So if I stop now, if I quit now, I'm quitting not just on myself. I'm quitting on all of them."

Early steps with Tennessee Titans, Derrick Henry

Two ACL surgeries. Arthritis. After the Titans took Spears, NFL Network's Ian Rapoport told viewers that Spears lacked an ACL, leaving questions about whether he'd last past his first NFL contract. Colleague Daniel Jeremiah echoed, "He was not on every draft board, but nobody disputes how talented he is."

You can imagine, of course, how this struck Titans fans. A running back with a bum knee? In the third round? For the Titans? Who already had Derrick Henry? Who badly needed a wide receiver or tight end? And who, above all, had their roster obliterated by injuries for two seasons in a row?

The Titans did draft Spears out of Tulane as a complement to Henry — for now. Long-term, it's not reaching to believe that Spears is earmarked as Henry's replacement.

"Oh, he's a three-down runner," Titans general manager Ran Carthon assured during the draft. "He can run between the tackles. He's elusive. He can make guys miss as well as contribute in the passing game."

It's not unprecedented for a running back to excel with knee trouble. In 1991, the great Peter King documented for Sports Illustrated how most teams were scared of drafting Thurman Thomas before the Buffalo Bills took the risk in the second round, their owner Ralph Wilson telling GM Bill Polian, "Life's a gamble. Go ahead."

Thomas ran for 12,074 yards, caught 472 passes and totaled 88 touchdowns in 13 NFL regular seasons, and he did it — he said years later — with a torn ACL, according to NewYorkUpstate.com.

Obviously, it's way too early to compare Spears with a legend like Thomas. But this preseason showed Carthon's initial assessment to be correct, just as it has replaced concern about Spears' knee with anticipation for the explosiveness he'll add to the Titans' offense.

Spears ran for 117 yards on 22 carries (5.32 average) in three preseason games. That included an impressive 33-yard touchdown against the Vikings in which he leaped over a defender near the line of scrimmage and somehow never broke stride, sprinting untouched into the end zone.

"I know I can't do nothing like that," Henry said. "It's great to have a change-up and have a back that can be explosive. I know when he hit the ground, he took off."

After offseason practices this summer, Spears could often be seen catching passes from a machine.

He proved his toughness, too, with his willingness to pick up blocks in pass protection.

“A lot of times these fast, speed backs don’t want to really stick their face up in there on pass protection,” Titans quarterback Ryan Tannehill said, “and he’s proven on multiple occasions that he’s willing and able to step up in there against a linebacker. ... I love Tyjae, man. I’m excited to have him on our team.”

That job at Wal-Mart

Tennessee Titans running back Tyjae Spears (32) chat with teammates during a joint practice with the Minnesota Vikings in Eagan, Minn., Thursday, Aug. 17, 2023.

The first time Spears hurt his knee was in high school. The second time, it was while scoring a touchdown early in the 2020 season for Tulane. And he realized it instantly. NOLA.com wrote that he crawled and tossed “his helmet off in frustration” before trainers made it to him.

Facing another lengthy ACL recovery, Spears started wondering whether he’d make it back to football.

“It was very difficult for him. It was difficult for all of us,” said Nicole Hart, Spears’ mother.

About that time, during the COVID-19 pandemic, he worked at Wal-Mart to make some extra money. The job entailed unloading delivery trucks. An 18-wheeler would arrive with, say, up to 3,000 items and “we had to take off every single piece,” he remembers. “That humbled me so much. I said, ‘Man, I’m going to do whatever I’ve got to do in football, because I do not want to work a real job.’”

“I think that job may have lasted a week, a week-and-a-half,” said Hart with a laugh.

“We don’t really realize that a lot of things really do happen for a reason,” she added. “In the midst of him going to get a job at Wal-Mart, maybe that was during a time when he was battling with, ‘Do I really want to play football? I just want to give up. I want to quit.’ Maybe he had to have that moment to see, ‘Man, this is not what I really want to do.’”

Spears made it back and rushed for 863 yards in 2021. Then in 2022, he had 1,581 rushing yards and 19 touchdowns in his final 14 games for the Green Wave, who went 12-2.

A stellar season for Spears was punctuated by an MVP performance in a Cotton Bowl victory over Southern Cal. He ran for 205 yards against the Trojans, making eight consecutive 100-yard performances for a player who’d jumped well on the radar entering the NFL draft.

There was one team in particular that Spears hoped was interested in him.

Back home for Titans-Saints

As fortune has it, Spears’ first regular-season game for the Titans will be Sunday against the New Orleans Saints.

In the Superdome. About 45 minutes from his hometown.

Yes, Spears grew up a Saints fan.

That made for a punch in the gut when, during the draft’s third round, the Saints had the No. 71 pick and used it to take a running back: Kendre Miller from TCU.

Spears had held up well in public all night. But after that, he went off to collect himself, and “in the middle of that is when he actually got the call” 10 picks later from the Titans, said Hart.

“The whole world could have put two and two together and figured out I wanted to go to the Saints,” Spears says. “I’m here in Tennessee, and I love it. I feel like things happen for a reason.”

Plenty of friends and family from Ponchatoula will be on hand for Sunday’s opener, but it still probably won’t be enough. So many want to be there that Spears jokes,

“I’m putting a limit on it. I’m buying 10 tickets. That’s all I’m buying. If I’m feeling good, I might get 15.”

It’s the first real taste of NFL stardom for Spears. There hasn’t been much to this point. Spears says he’s still able to go around Nashville without being bothered or noticed — and he knows enough to appreciate that. He once went to an event with Henry and saw how many people approached the Titans’ star for pictures and autographs. “Man, how do you do it?” Spears asked him. “That’s just what comes with it,” replied Henry.

“People still don’t know who I am,” Spears says. “So I can go and have fun with my family and friends and whoever else I want to take out, because nobody knows me. But is it going to be the same in six, seven months or a year?”

“I don’t think it’s going to be the same.”

ROOKIE RB TYJAE
SPEARS THANKFUL FOR HIS NFL OPPORTUNITY WITH THE TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TITANS ONLINE
MAY 22, 2023

NASHVILLE – The day after the NFL Draft, Tyjae Spears drove through the streets of New Orleans looking for Titans jerseys.

Spears had been selected by the team less than 24 hours earlier, and he wanted to represent his new squad at a party celebrating the development.

This week, Spears had his own team-issued jersey.

The former Tulane running back took part in rookie minicamp last weekend before joining veterans in the offseason program this week.

The Titans are scheduled to begin OTAs next week.

The 5-foot-11, 195-pound Spears looked good in the open rookie minicamp, catching a number of balls out of the backfield, and then showing off his speed – and moves – in space. He also had some nice runs after taking handoffs.

"It felt good," Spears said. "It's just a blessing to be a part of the team. It feels good, coming from where I came from. I am on an NFL team, and I am super-excited.

"All the guys I've encountered, they've been great. Every coach, they demand a lot out of you. It's a great organization, great people."

Spears, selected in the third round of the NFL Draft, ran for 1,581 yards and 19 touchdowns in 2022 for the Green Wave, averaging 6.9 yards per carry. He also caught 22 passes for 256 yards and two touchdowns. Spears had a big game in the Cotton Bowl against USC, when he ran for 202 yards and four touchdowns. He was named the Cotton Bowl MVP after the team's win.

In four college seasons, Spears ran for 2,910 yards and 31 touchdowns while also catching 48 passes for 564 yards and three scores. Spears was the 2022 American Athletic Conference Offensive Player of the Year, when he tied for the FBS lead with 21 scrimmage touchdowns.

Spears, whose locker is located right next to veteran running back Derrick Henry's locker, brushed off a number of questions about his health, specifically one his knees.

He made one thing clear:

"I feel perfectly fine – there ain't nothing wrong with me," Spears said. "I am healthy.

"I guess (my health) is a question that's always going to pop up, but I am here. And (the Titans) had a lot of faith in me to get me where they got me at. So, I am healthy and they know I am healthy."

Spears, who is from Ponchatoula, La., is fully aware he'll get to head back home to Louisiana when the Titans open the season on September 10 against the Saints.

He also knows a lot of work needs to be done between now and then, and he's just getting started.

"That is so far away," Spears said with a smile. "I am just taking it one day at a time."

Spears also knows he's thankful for the opportunity.

"Lately, I have been praying a lot," Spears added. "And the main thing I try to start and finish with is how thankful I am for being here, being a part of an NFL organization. Because I think back, and only two or three people where I am from got that opportunity. So, I am super blessed, and super appreciative."

TITANS PUNTER RYAN STONEHOUSE'S JERSEY AND CLEATS HEADED TO THE PRO FOOTBALL HALL OF FAME AFTER RECORD-BREAKING ROOKIE SEASON

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JANUARY 10, 2023

NASHVILLE – Titans punter Ryan Stonehouse set records during his rookie season.

Now, his jersey and cleats are set to make their way to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The Titans on Tuesday are in the process of mailing memorabilia to Canton, Ohio, for a display after Stonehouse finished the 2022 season with a gross average of 53.10 yards per punt (90 punts for 4,779 yards). Stonehouse broke Sammy Baugh's single-season NFL record of 51.40 yards per punt, which was established in 1940 and was never matched among qualifiers (2.5 punts per team game) until Stonehouse's rookie campaign.

The Pro Football Hall of Fame contacted the Titans requesting items to commemorate his record-breaking season.

"It's surreal, honestly," Stonehouse said on Tuesday. "It's the last thing I was expecting. But it's such a cool honor. Going undrafted, and kind of having the odds against you, to be able to do something that hasn't been done for 80-something years, it is such a big honor to me. And to break it from a guy like Sammy Baugh, it's special."

Stonehouse, who made the team as an undrafted free agent from Colorado State, finished the 2022 season with a net punting average of 44.03 yards per punt, establishing a new NFL record for the highest net average by a rookie punter. He broke the record set by Indianapolis' Rigoberto Sanchez, who averaged 42.64 net yards per punt as a rookie in 2017.

Stonehouse said he'll work this offseason to be even better in 2023.

"I think this season had some highs, and I think managing those highs and trying to remain consistent was my main goal the whole time," Stonehouse said. "I felt like I did that a lot with my gross. Heading into next year I want to improve on some of the things I need to keep up in those highs, like the inside the 20 or the net average. Similarly, with how the gross went this year, I'd love to build that consistency."

"I think overall it was such a long rookie year for me, with the draft prep, and competing with Brett (Kern) in the preseason games. It flew by so quick, now that you reminisce on it. But it was such a cool way to start my career."

HOW TITANS QB RYAN TANNEHILL CONQUERED
THE SKIES, FOUND
SERENITY IN SUMMER FLIGHT SCHOOL

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
SEPTEMBER 6, 2023

Titans QB Ryan Tannehill poses in front of plane in summer 2023, the summer he earned his private pilot's license.

Nick Retterer needed an excuse.

It didn't have to be believable. He could've said he had a charley horse or remembered he left the stove on or had just gotten the shocking news he'd been cast as Marvel's next Spiderman. Whatever it was, he knew Ryan Tannehill was going to see through it.

So Retterer settled on a classic: From 1,000 feet in the sky in a low pattern over Nashville, Retterer told Tannehill he needed a bathroom break. So they descended from the heavens to the boring, old ground.

They landed. Retterer, Tannehill's flight instructor at Harmony Air, got out of the plane. His not-so-subtle ruse was a success.

"I say, 'You know what you're doing,'" Retterer recalled to The Tennessean. "'Watch your crosswind. Watch your traffic. I'm going to be up in the tower with you.'"

Thus began Tennessee Titans quarterback Ryan Tannehill's first solo flight.

He sat on the runway for "probably like 20 minutes" before being cleared for takeoff. "You're kind of anxious at that point," Tannehill said. Retterer climbed the control tower, put on his headset and assumed the role of Tannehill's air traffic offensive coordinator. With his instructor in his ear, Tannehill soared.

It was just a couple of laps in a standard flight pattern. But for a veteran NFL quarterback trying to recapture prominence in 2023 — starting with Sunday's season-opener at the New Orleans Saints — Tannehill's first solo flight represented much more than a chance to see the earth from the perspective of the stars.

There, Tannehill found serenity.

How he became Flyin' Ryan Tannehill

Up, up the long, delirious burning blue

I've topped the wind-swept heights with easy grace

Where never lark or even eagle flew —

And, while with silent lifting mind I've trod

The untraversed sanctity of space

— Put out my hand, and touched the face of God

In those six lines from his 1941 poem "High Flight," Royal Canadian Air Force fighter pilot and poet John Gillespie Magee captured the exhilaration and peace of flying.

"You're enjoying beautiful scenery but at the same time you're kind of locked in on the task at hand," Tannehill explains. "So it's an escape in that regard. And I think an escape is important. Whether it's golf or flying or driving, everybody has something different. Especially if you want to be high-functioning at something, you have to have some sort of an escape to allow you to get away."

Ryan Tannehill poses with flight instructor Nick Retterer, who helped him earn his private pilot's license this summer.

Tannehill says he's always been interested in flight. For practical reasons. He and his wife Lauren like whisking their kids, Steele and Stella, on memorable vacations to remote locations. Flying to isolated Bahamian islands on small, so-called "puddle jumper" planes helped pique Tannehill's interest. So did a long conversation with the pilot who flew him to his surgery last winter.

Getting a private pilot's license became Tannehill's offseason project. Pro Football Hall of Famer and one-time Tennessee Titans offensive lineman Steve Hutchinson connected Tannehill with Retterer, who had handled Hutchinson's instrument training, an aviation certification that goes a step beyond getting a private license.

And in Tannehill, Retterer found the most willing and participative student he's ever taught.

"When this guy came in, he had an iPad with an Apple pencil, probably similar to what he's used to when he's playing, and he's just writing notes," Retterer said.

Retterer, who studied aviation at Middle Tennessee State, estimates it takes four hours of studying per night to zoom through flight school as quickly as Tannehill did.

The way Tannehill tells it, his first few months of 2023 were wall-to-wall booked. He'd go to the Titans facility in the mornings for rehab and physical therapy, followed by a weightlifting session. After that he'd head to John C. Tune Airport in Nashville and fly for a few hours, only to head home and hit the books again.

Coming off offseason ankle surgery — an injury had cut his 2022 season short — Tannehill had to pass a physical before he could start flying. Once he passed and got up in the air with Retterer in his SR22 Turbo Cirrus aircraft, though, he was gobsmacked.

"We get up in the air, a couple thousand feet off the ground, and he looks out the window and he said, 'Man, this is awesome!' " Retterer said. "He just started grinning and laughing like he just had a little kid get a toy or something like that."

The similarities are obvious

If anyone understands the similarities between football and flight, it's Chad Hennings. In the 1990s, Hennings won three Super Bowls as a defensive tackle for the Dallas Cowboys. Before that, he was a fighter pilot in the U.S. Air Force.

"Preparing for a mission, I would sit down with my wingmen," Hennings explained. "We would brief particular areas where we were going to deploy to. We would brief overall communications. We would brief how we were going to execute our specific mission which we were tasked with. What would happen if we were under emergency procedure? What our divert bases were. If the weather was bad. What if we had a mechanical malfunction, how were we going to communicate?"

"We would execute the mission and then when we would get back we would evaluate our bomb film or our film when we would be in the target area when we were executing and we would brief 'Hey, what did we do well, what did we not do well, how can we improve upon the mission?'"

The parallels between mission planning and game planning are so obvious they shouldn't need further explanation. It's teamwork. It's communication. It's being coachable and it's remembering your coaching. It's being so prepared for a pressure-packed situation that when the situation arrives the pressure doesn't even register.

Then there's the control tower aspect of it all. Tannehill likens the experience of talking to air traffic control to communicating with coaches, mixed with the added comfort of getting guidance from a trusted family member.

"I feel like sometimes you get on the tower at airports and it's kind of like the wild, wild west," Tannehill says. "You've got crop-dusters buzzing the tower and cutting the line and all that. But when you have ATC you feel kind of like you have a big brother looking out for you."

Retterer was happy to be Tannehill's play-caller, coach, big brother or whatever Tannehill needed. He's not a big sports fan himself. He knew who Tannehill was before they met but always looked at him like another student. Now he looks up at Tannehill's jerseys hanging in bars around town and casually tells his friends, "I know that guy." And his family.

Retterer was flying with Lauren, Tannehill's wife, recently. She described her husband as a beast. She said people like her husband don't get where they are by "going with the flow." His success is a product of his competitiveness, his drive, his precision. That's why Retterer says he has students who have spent 90% more time in the air than Tannehill who still haven't mastered flying the aircrafts Tannehill has.

And it's why Retterer says he thinks there's more to Tannehill's mastery of the skies than the similarities between flight and football let on.

"Aviation is a really rewarding experience because it's individual," Retterer says. "It's not a team experience. He's got that team experience and success. But (it's) the individual experience of when he gets up in the air he says, 'I can leave all that stuff behind and focus on the task at hand.'"

The quarterback in the skies

Derrick Henry might be Tannehill's wingman in the Titans' backfield. But he'll never be Tannehill's literal wingman.

"Oh no, I'm not going up there," Henry said. "I pray for him. I pray that he's safe. I feel like things are going well. But I won't be up there."

Titans quarterbacks coach Charles London has a little bit more of an open mind.

"He's supposed to be really good at it," London said. "He told me some of the flights that he's made. But I'm more of a ground guy."

Tannehill is decidedly not a ground guy. Not anymore. His longest voyage so far was a flight to Fort Lauderdale, Florida in a single-engine prop plane with an instructor at his side.

When it comes to speed, single-engine planes are more Tom Brady than Lamar Jackson. The flight spanned four-and-a-half hours. That's a long time for Tannehill to shrink his 6-foot-4 frame into a pilot's seat.

And an even longer time for something else.

"Kind of the limit is the bladder at that point," Tannehill said. "It's four-and-a-half hours. You can't stand up. You can't move. And there's no bathroom. So I was glad to finally land."

But what's a little bladder discomfort when Tannehill's achieved his goal? He was able to take Steele and Stella out on a few flights this summer. One trek was all it took for the kids to be as hooked as their old man.

Pilots-in-training are often taught a maneuver called the "steep turn." It goes like it sounds. In order to test how well a pilot can handle his or her plane in an emergency, steep turns involve turning the plane around at a 45-degree angle, often flipping the plane upside down like a loop-de-loop on a roller coaster so passengers can see straight down to the ground.

The Tannehill kids weren't fazed.

"I thought they might be a little scared of that, but they actually loved it," Tannehill said. "They were like, 'Do more steep turns! Do more steep turns!'"

The kids woke up the next morning with a simple request: "Daddy, can we go flying again?"

So the Tannehills kept adventuring. They went back out to The Bahamas this summer, this time with Tannehill able to fly to some of the remote islands himself. Retterer says he expects Tannehill to begin instrument training as soon as he has the time.

Tannehill has the bug. There's no cure for passion.

"He's out there now. He's got his license. He's flying places he probably never would've thought he would've flown in the beginning," Retterer said. "I think it's just as every pilot does. I don't look out and say, 'Man this is awesome,' just like I did the first time, but I'll tell you it never gets old. You're not supposed to be there. Human beings were never meant to fly. So I don't think it ever gets old."

RYAN TANNEHILL IS OLDEST OF FOOTBALL TENNESSEE TITANS, BUT HE 'DOESN'T HAVE A CANE YET'

*BY JULIAN BASENA
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
AUGUST 3, 2023*

In spite of his age and whatever concerns that came with his season-ending ankle injury in 2022, Ryan Tannehill feels great. In fact, he still feels young.

"I'm young at heart, I feel young and I don't have a cane yet," Tannehill said after Thursday's Titans practice — exactly a week after his 35th birthday.

For Tannehill, the Titans' oldest player, a youthful aura can be beneficial. The starting quarterback has reached a critical juncture in his career. Entering the final year of the four-year deal that brought him to Tennessee, he is at a point where his long-term future is in question.

While he is the presumptive starter for 2023, Tannehill is coming off a 2022 season that showed just how finite his time is as a Titan.

In just the second week of regular-season play, he threw two interceptions and was benched in favor of Malik Willis in the third quarter of a blowout against the Bills. Weeks later, he was sidelined again with an ankle injury that forced him to miss two consecutive games and the final three of the season.

When he was available, Tannehill didn't look his best, either, wavering through the season for a second straight year after resounding success in 2019 and 2020.

For the first time, age seemingly caught up to him, and it showed in his first losing season in Tennessee.

Willis and now Will Levis, who the Titans selected in April's draft, are poised to thrive as backups, but surely have their eyes on the starting spot if Tannehill regresses significantly or loses more time to injury.

Still, right now, Tannehill feels good. With a healthy body and a youthful spirit, he also seems self-assured that he will put together a strong contract year that will allow him to play beyond 2023.

"I feel really good," he said. "I'm thankful that I feel really good coming off of surgery last year ... I'm excited where I'm at physically."

DON'T LET THE SMILE FOOL YOU, TANNEHILL A SERIOUS COMPETITOR

THE TITANS QUARTERBACK LED THE NFL IN GAME-WINNING DRIVES AND FOURTH-QUARTER COMEBACKS DURING THE 2020 REGULAR SEASON.

BY IAN KAYANJA

JANUARY 5, 2021

Don't be fooled by quarterback Ryan Tannehill's even-keeled demeanor.

He's one of the fiercest competitors on any football field. Or so says his position coach.

"Make no mistake, he is ultra-competitive," Tennessee Titans quarterback coach Pat O'Hara said Tuesday. "Don't ever excuse his calm demeanor on the outside from being a fierce competitor. That is something about him that is very evident to me and his teammates."

Tannehill's competitive streak was on full display Sunday against the Houston Texans. With a division title at stake, he threw for 216 yards and tallied three touchdowns, two rushing and one passing.

With the game on the line, he connected with wide receiver A.J. Brown on a 51-yard pass that set up Sam Sloman's game-winning field goal as time expired.

"(It's) his calm demeanor on the outside and being a fierce competitor," O'Hara said. "He maintains that even-keel demeanor and that helps him in pressure situations like (Sunday)."

Tannehill is no stranger to the big moment. The events of this season leading up to the matchup with the Texans prepared him for his latest fourth-quarter flurry.

In the just-completed regular season, he led the NFL with five fourth-quarter comebacks and six game-winning drives in the fourth-quarter or overtime. In games decided by one possession, the Titans went 7-2.

The only Tennessee quarterback who has approached that level of late-game production was Vince Young. As a rookie in 2006, he led four fourth-quarter comebacks and five game-winning drives, both of which led the NFL that season.

Dating back to when Tannehill first took over as the starter, the Titans are 11-3 in games decided by one possession.

He's a closer. And much like a star relief pitcher in baseball, Tannehill looks forward to the high stakes moment where he can get his team out of a tight jam.

"I think it's fun," Tannehill said. "I get to do what I dreamed of doing as a kid. I love going out there on a Sunday and competing with guys that I love playing with. I love the competition of it

"... I love the game, all of it."

Tannehill's success can be attributed to his ability to avoid the emotional roller coaster that some ride throughout a game. He remains focused on the current task at hand, staying competitive.

And because of that, the Titans found ways to win in close games, in which the outcomes could have varied drastically.

"At the end of games, it's maintaining that calm demeanor, while also being ultra-competitive," O'Hara said.

With Tannehill under center last year, the Titans offense found a new life.

That unit went from being shut out by the Denver Broncos on Oct. 13, 2019 to scoring at least 20 points in the next 10 games and more than 30 in five of the final seven. That momentum carried over into the 2020 NFL season, which saw Tannehill throw for 3,819 yards and a career-high 33 touchdowns.

Tannehill and the Titans finished second in the NFL in average yards per game (396.4) and fourth in points per game average (30.7).

He's found freedom within Arthur Smith's system, and he's been seen smiling more on the field because of it.

"I've loved playing the game," Tannehill said. "I think about what I went through (with) injury, and then through what I went last year, I think I've grown a bigger appreciation for enjoying the moment."

A quarterback who isn't afraid of the big moments is a tremendous advantage in the NFL playoffs. Tannehill's late-game record proves that he can rise to the occasion, courtesy of an outsized competitive streak.

REXRODE: RYAN
TANNEHILL SHOWS HIMSELF TO BE AN NFL LEADER IN MORE THAN QB RATING

BY JOE REXRODE
THE ATHLETIC
JUNE 11, 2020

Ryan Tannehill talks and two notions cross the mind, first that there can't be many quarterbacks in the NFL talking about racism in America like this, and second that Tannehill must be elevating himself as a leader in the Tennessee Titans locker room.

Oh, and a third: Where's this guy when we ask about football?

They're all artificial and miss the point, of course. We don't need to rank NFL quarterback social commentary, though it is nice to hear declarations stronger than "I stand with my teammates" in this time. Leadership is a day-to-day thing that Tannehill demonstrated deftly last season — even with Marcus Mariota still in the room — and yes, reactions from some of his teammates indicate his voice is appreciated. But this dwarfs that. And Tannehill has earned the right to an eyeroll-free press corps every time he utters "control what we can control" or "it's about improving every day in practice" during the 2020 season because of the way he has stepped up to the 2020 story.

This is the white, professional quarterback in Nashville, Tennessee, and he has the ability to reach a lot of people and the conviction to try even though he knows he'll lose some.

"I think the unfortunate thing about it is, if you're a white person you don't have to deal with (racism) on a daily basis and you're not put in those situations," Tannehill said in a Zoom call Wednesday with reporters, the first scheduled interviews with Titans players since the May 25 death of George Floyd at the hands of a Minneapolis Police officer inspired worldwide protests.

"It's easy to just go about your life and not recognize it and not realize how big of a deal it is, how many people it affects on a daily basis. I think with this push, I think more and more people are having an awakening to the reality of the situation and how deep it really is, how many layers of injustice there are to it with the court system, and policing, and just on a day-to-day basis. Like I said, there's so many layers to it. I think that just this push was kind of like the straw that broke the camel's back, right? It's been happening for far too long and finally got to the point where enough is enough."

And as for those who don't like what he has to say: "If there's people that want to push back and go the other direction, that's on them. I'm going to fight for what I believe is right and whatever else happens, happens."

And as for Roger Goodell's improved response to the powerful "Black Lives Matter" video involving several NFL stars and some NFL employees: "I don't know. We'll see where it really goes once this fall starts and things are a little bit different. I hope to think that things are different this time, that guys are going to be heard, that the movement is going to be continued and supported and helped out, but only time will tell."

And as for the league's history on this matter: "Just going back to (2016), the league tried to shut it down because it's trying to protect itself. I think it's to the point where, this time there's so much support that they couldn't do anything from it. The fact that they weren't proactive is disappointing, that they didn't jump on board initially is disappointing, just because, like I said, it's a universal thing that so many guys are affected by. Seems to be there's so much momentum going that millions of people want change and want it now. A little disappointing that it took that, but I guess better late than never, and hopefully that it can continue when games kick off."

OK, so Tannehill's still polite in ripping the league. But how many guys with his job are doing that at all? These aren't "let's stick together while I dodge discomfort as much as possible" responses. These are things Tannehill would not have said a few years ago. He admitted that Wednesday, too.

"I feel like if I would have known now what I knew back then, I probably would have been more vocal and supportive back then," he said. "Do I feel great about that, that I didn't jump fully on board and support initially? No. Do I wish I would have known more and been more supportive back in 2016? Yes, 100 percent, but we all make mistakes. We all have to live and learn and experience to grow, and I feel like I've done a lot of growing over the past four or five years."

So let's go back there, to 2016. Colin Kaepernick is in San Francisco, creating a movement and the backlash that will push him out of the NFL by kneeling during the national anthem to protest social injustice and police brutality. Tannehill is in Miami, throwing to Kenny Stills. Talking to him, too. These are conversations that someone like, say ... let's pick a random NFL quarterback ... Drew Brees may have benefited from having.

Stills, now with the Texans, has been living this, outspoken about it, though he's the son of a retired Marine who asked him not to protest. He told The Undeclared of kneeling in 2016 and through the Donald Trump-inflamed 2017 responses and beyond: "I decided if the league has an issue with us speaking up for our people, it's not a brand I want to be a part of. I had conversations with my agents that said I should wait (to protest). I said if I can't express myself, then I'm OK with not playing."

Here's what should happen before games in 2020: Players who feel compelled to protest should do so, and people should respect it, and the NFL should back off and live with angry fans and consider the possibility of new ones, and the discussion around all of it from media and others should not overshadow the issues that inspired the protests. The only thing we can count on is that Stills will kneel. He's also likely to continue serving extensively in the community, going on police ride-alongs and educating white teammates who seek him. Tannehill said Stills told him of an incident in which Stills and his father were pulled over by police and had "everything stripped out of the car for no reason" and strewn along the road.

"I can't imagine being put in that situation and having to deal with that," Tannehill said. "You hear stories like that and then (Stills) gave me a bunch of resources, books that were written, "(The) New Jim Crow," systematic oppression, systematic injustices. Then I just started digging more and more into it as time went on. You go from kind of being naïve to the situation because of the privilege, and my eyes kind of got opened to it. It was really kind of a shock for me. ... A protest has to be able to get attention, spark conversation and inspire change. I had to get past the fact that it wasn't about the flag, it wasn't about the anthem, it wasn't about our country. It was about the injustice and raising awareness and getting people's attention."

He got there. Maybe he can help get others there. It's good to see more white athletes stepping out on this. It's also worth pointing out, not that it should be necessary, that black athletes don't all relish participation at the same level.

The Titans made Kevin Byard and Rashaan Evans available Wednesday as well, and Byard said he supports the protests; doesn't want the message hijacked by more obsession with kneeling; looks forward to a conversation some day with his daughter and hopes "whether it's police brutality or just growing up being black in America, that conversation is a lot better than what it is right now."

Byard also said he's "not trying to run for office, just playing football" when asked about Goodell's response and future decisions, and when he was asked about Tannehill's willingness to speak out, he said: "I've always respected him since I first met him. That's one thing about me, I don't look at guys as race and all that stuff. ... The fact that he's speaking and using his voice to uplift others, black, white or different, whatever, it speaks volumes for his character."

Byard talked about empathy and education, too, and the melting pot "beauty of sports." At the core of this conversation, there's right and there's wrong, but everyone doesn't have to have the same tone or say the exact same things. Tannehill and Byard shared realness Wednesday, and that's as important as anything when you're trying to lead 50 people or maybe a whole bunch more than that.

WHO'S NEXT UP IN THE TENNESSEE TITANS'
QUEST TO FIX THE O-
LINE? MEET 'DOC THROCK.'

BY NICK SUSS
NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
NOVEMBER 16, 2023

The next man up in the Tennessee Titans' continuing quest for consistency on the offensive line is "Doc Throck."

Remembering the name of every offensive lineman the Titans have signed or promoted from the practice squad since the start of training camp is a nearly impossible task. Chris Hubbard. Jimmy Murray. Justin Murray. Corey Levin. Justin Murray again. Lachavious Simmons. Andrew Rucpich. And now Calvin Throckmorton, whom the Titans added off waivers from the Carolina Panthers on Wednesday and who practiced with the Titans for the first time Thursday.

"I got here at 9:30 last night," he said. "Rolled in. Got a good night's sleep and came here ready to roll this morning. It's just kind of been the avalanche of things, trying to keep my head on straight and trying to stay locked into everything you're doing while at the same time trying to prepare for a game on Sunday."

Throckmorton, who earned the nickname "Doc Throck" in college because he was a human physiology major on a pre-med track, started seven games at guard for the Panthers this season before being waived. He started 20 games with the New Orleans Saints in the two years prior, all at guard as well.

At worst, he is an experienced depth piece on an offensive line struggling with numbers because of injuries to Nicholas Petit-Frere and Andre Dillard. At best, he's yet another blocker who has been brought in to help an offensive line that for the second straight year is one of the league's worst.

Heading into their game against the Jacksonville Jaguars (6-3) on Sunday (noon, CBS), the Titans are allowing quarterback pressures at the league's third-highest rate; are allowing sacks at the league's second-highest rate; and have allowed the second-most quarterback hits and fourth-most sacks despite ranking 30th in pass attempts.

Pass blocking was a huge issue last year, too, so the Titans (3-6) spent the offseason rebuilding the front. Taylor Lewan, Nate Davis, Ben Jones and Dennis Daley were replaced with Dillard, Daniel Brunskill, Peter Skoronski and Hubbard. Aaron Brewer popped inside from guard to center. Dillon Radunz returned from a knee injury and Petit-Frere came back from suspension.

There've been new faces everywhere, but the results have been arguably worse. The Titans allowed 2.9 sacks and 3.1 quarterback hits per game last year but are allowing 3.7 sacks and five hits per game in 2023. Overall pressure rate is down just 0.7% and sack rate is up 1.4%. And the run holes aren't all that much bigger either, with the Titans' rushing yards gained before contact up only 1/10th of a yard per carry.

Offensive coordinator Tim Kelly says he doesn't have much of an idea of how he'll deploy Throckmorton yet. Throckmorton said he thinks the Titans signed him because of his versatility and ability to play on the left and right sides. He didn't allow a sack and surrendered just three pressures across his seven starts in Carolina, but he did give up 12 quarterback hurries. Per Pro Football Focus, he is graded as the fourth-worst run blocking guard in the NFL this season.

Throckmorton says he was surprised to be released, but his only choice is to move forward. That means figuring out how to contribute in the Titans' offense, a project he began first thing Thursday morning.

"Thankfully football is football, for the most part," he said. "You know how to run outside zone, inside zone, gap stuff, power stuff. That's all the same. It's just learning the verbiage and making sure that you're speaking the same language as everyone else in the building."

BLOODY NOSE, BROKEN BACK: MIKE VRABEL BRINGS TOUGHNESS TO HALLS OF FAME,
BROWNS VS. TITANS

BY NATE ULRICH
AKRON BEACON JOURNAL
SEPTEMBER 20, 2023

Mike Vrabel shares memories of a back injury creating a "pretty traumatic" experience and a proverbial fork in the road during his Walsh Jesuit High School football days

What is work like for members of the Tennessee Titans who play for Vrabel? Two guys with Browns connections, Jack Conklin and Joshua Dobbs, share insight about the NFL coach who was born in Akron

Former Walsh coach Gerry Rardin and former NFL defensive coordinator Dean Pees remember Vrabel as a player and how his behavior back then foreshadowed a future in coaching

Mike Vrabel jumped into a scuffle among Tennessee Titans players, pushing and shoving to prove a point as the franchise's new head coach.

"He's yelling at the same time, teaching them, 'You do this in the game, it's a penalty!' And as he's doing it, he's knocking them around. He's right in the middle of it," said Gerry Rardin, Vrabel's former Walsh Jesuit High School football coach.

"I'm thinking, 'Holy cow! He's not only teaching the lesson, but he's teaching them the lesson physically.' That's just the way he does it. He's going to be hands on. He's going to walk the walk."

The scene Rardin recalled from his visit to Titans organized team activities in 2018 wasn't a rare instance of Vrabel mixing it up with players as if he were still a famed New England Patriots defender, special teamer and part-time tight end.

"I remember from the first day of OTAs him coming in and jacking offensive linemen," said Browns right tackle Jack Conklin, a member of the Titans during Vrabel's first two seasons at the helm in Tennessee. "We're doing drills, and he's in there as the defender trying to give looks and in the middle of it all. I remember him getting bloody noses and him getting hit in the face."

Tennessee Titans coach Mike Vrabel tries to punch the ball out the hands of running back Hassan Haskins during the team's OTA practices May 23 in Nashville, Tenn.

It's not like Vrabel borrows a helmet when he does this.

"No, he'd just jump in there, flip his hat backwards and take a shot in the face," Conklin said. "But he didn't care. He'd tell you, 'Good.'"

This fall, Vrabel will bring his intense brand of toughness to two halls of fames and a matchup with the Browns.

The former NFL linebacker who's in his sixth season as Titans coach will be inducted into the Summit County Sports Hall of Fame on Oct. 3 and the Patriots Hall of Fame on Oct. 21.

"A lot of great people from Northeast Ohio, a lot of great athletes, so it's pretty cool," Vrabel told the Beacon Journal by phone last month.

Before Vrabel is honored, his Titans (1-1) will face the Browns (1-1) on Sunday in Cleveland.

Tennessee Titans coach Mike Vrabel attended last Cleveland Browns game before the team moved to Baltimore and became the Ravens

Vrabel's all-time record against the Browns is 9-4, including 4-1 in Cleveland. As a player, he went 6-3, including 2-1 at Cleveland Browns Stadium. As a coach, he's 3-1 versus the Browns, including 1-1 as Titans boss and 2-0 on Cleveland's lakefront.

Unlike some coaches who downplay the personal significance of a homecoming game, Vrabel said clashing with the Browns is indeed special to him.

"Yeah, I grew up a Browns fan," Vrabel said. "My first NFL game with my dad was in the Dawg Pound and was at Municipal Stadium for the last game [in 1995 before the team moved to Baltimore]."

"[Fans] were taking the rows of chairs off and throwing them onto the field. ... I grew up wearing the dog bones and all that other stuff, just because football was popular and important where I grew up."

Walsh Jesuit High School graduate Mike Vrabel holds up a name tag as he poses for a portrait on June 3, 1992.

Vrabel, 48, was born at Akron City Hospital and said he lived in Springfield Township until he moved in middle school to Stow with his parents, Chuck and Elaine.

At Walsh, Vrabel became a standout in football, basketball and track and field — he threw shot put and discus — before starring as a two-time All-America defensive end at Ohio State and playing 14 NFL seasons for the Pittsburgh Steelers (1997-2000), Patriots (2001-08) and Kansas City Chiefs (2009-10).

How a back injury Mike Vrabel suffered as a student at Walsh Jesuit High School threatened his football career

The journey wasn't always smooth. Vrabel encountered a proverbial fork in the road the summer before his junior year of high school.

Excruciating back pain sent Vrabel to two doctors who said his football career should have ended.

Determined to exhaust all options, Vrabel went to a third doctor, a back specialist at the Cleveland Clinic, who concluded he could continue to play if he wore a brace and rehabilitated the injury.

"I was like, 'Thank God!' Finally, I went to enough doctors," Vrabel said.

What was the issue? Vrabel said he had suffered "stress fractures in the fourth and fifth lumbar." He conceded the experience was "pretty traumatic" until the back specialist cleared him to play again.

"Then it was like, 'OK. It's not going to be the end of the world. This is what we're going to do — get fitted for a brace, go from there,'" Vrabel said. "The brace was crazy. It was from my upper chest down below my waistline, so they kept me literally straight up and down."

As a Walsh junior, Vrabel played defensive end, linebacker and tight end standing up. As a senior, he shed the brace and returned to a three-point stance.

"It just kind of shows the perseverance this guy has," Rardin said. "I think a lot of people could have given up at that time. But that [third] doctor gave him hope, and he said, 'I'm taking it.' He ran with it."

Vrabel's version of how he initially detected the back problem provides a glimpse into his ruthless sense of humor. The discovery occurred while he ran laps as punishment for arriving late to two-a-day practices with some of his teammates.

"Did Gerry tell you when he made me run around, made me run laps when I was like, 'My back's killing me?'" Vrabel said. "He was like, 'Keep running.'"

"Then I found out I had stress fractures, and poor Gerry wanted to, like, you know, kill himself because he felt terrible. I always hold it over his head. I was like, 'Remember when you tried to ruin my career by making me run for 40 minutes around the fields?'"

New England Patriots coach Bill Belichick isn't immune to Mike Vrabel jokes

Vrabel is almost always busting someone's chops. His players are frequent targets, and even Bill Belichick is not safe, according to a tale Rardin said he has heard about Vrabel unveiling an impersonation of Belichick during a Patriots practice and drawing laughter from the stern coaching legend.

"It's like cynical humor," said Arizona Cardinals quarterback Joshua Dobbs, a former member of the Browns who started two games for the Titans last season. "He's going to throw some jabs, but he expects you to throw some jabs back."

With Vrabel, Conklin said "you've got to be on your game" when it comes to trash talk.

"He'll either hit you with something you've got to improve on for practice and be all in your face, or it's a joke," Conklin added. "So you never know what you're going to get, but you've always got to be on guard because he's just full energy."

Conklin can't help but chuckle about Vrabel's wife, Jennifer, catching the youngest of the couple's two sons, Carter, chewing tobacco and then punishing the family patriarch because his habit had set the example.

"Vrabel had to quit chewing tobacco," Conklin said. "So he started smoking cigarettes outside the [Titans] training room every morning — every morning."

Rardin accepted an invitation from Vrabel to hang out at Titans headquarters shortly after the latter had secured his first head coaching job. Rardin observed Vrabel's knack for being personable but simultaneously commanding respect.

"He doesn't have to act like the hard ass every second, but everybody knows he is," Rardin said.

On another serious note, Vrabel revealed the back discomfort caused by the stress fractures he suffered in high school never vanished.

"It bothered me throughout my career," he said.

Mike Vrabel had the traits of a perfect NFL defender, former New England Patriots assistant coach Dean Pees says

Adversity shaping Vrabel as a teenager in Summit County is fitting because of what the area represents to many who hail from it.

"There's an importance on, I think, some toughness and hard work," Vrabel said.

Former Patriots assistant Dean Pees said Vrabel "was a perfect defensive player" because he possessed loads of the four ingredients Pees seeks in defenders: Physical toughness, mental toughness, intelligence and work ethic.

Those traits allowed Vrabel to become a three-time Super Bowl champion (2001, 2003, 2004 seasons) and a Pro Bowl and first-team All-Pro selection (2007) with the Patriots after he spent his first four professional seasons as a backup with the Steelers, who drafted him in the third round (91st overall) out of Ohio State in 1997.

Vrabel started 140 of his 206 career regular-season games and compiled 762 tackles with 57 sacks, 11 interceptions, 19 forced fumbles and nine fumble recoveries. He started 18 of his 20 playoff games, registering 88 tackles with nine sacks, three forced fumbles and two fumble recoveries.

As a tight end in goal-line situations, Vrabel established himself as a go-to target of former Patriots quarterback Tom Brady. In the regular season and postseason combined, Vrabel caught 12 passes — all for touchdowns. Ten were with the Patriots (he had TD receptions in back-to-back Super Bowl victories) and two others with the Chiefs.

“There is nobody that is better than Mike Vrabel,” Pees said. “He was tough — physically tough — and he was mentally tough. And the thing is, he was as hard a worker as I’ve ever seen. He’s in the top shelf of smartest players I have ever, ever coached.”

How Mike Vrabel playing with Ohio State Buckeyes, New England Patriots, Pittsburgh Steelers, Kansas City Chiefs translated to coaching

Pees has a long history with Vrabel. After serving as the head coach at Kent State University for six seasons, Pees entered the NFL in 2004 as a linebackers coach with the Patriots and became their defensive coordinator two years later.

Pees reunited with Vrabel by working for his former pupil as the Titans’ defensive coordinator from 2018-19. In the second of those two seasons, the Titans advanced to the AFC Championship Game.

Former Ohio State defensive end Mike Vrabel hits the sled one last time during the annual Senior Tackle pep rally on the eve of the Buckeye’s game against Michigan.

At the time, Vrabel was a second-year head coach who had ascended from an Ohio State assistant (2011-13) to a Houston Texans linebackers coach (2014-16) to the Texans’ defensive coordinator (2017).

From Pees’ vantage point, increased power and pressure didn’t affect Vrabel. Pees said he’s seen other coaches undergo personality changes with promotions.

“He’s the same guy, and so, to me, that’s what makes head coaches successful,” Pees said. “They are who they are. Belichick, [Steelers coach Mike] Tomlin, those guys are the same guys all the time.”

The leadership abilities Vrabel demonstrated as a player, Pees said, foreshadowed the coach he would become.

Pees explained Vrabel policed New England’s linebacking corps after a highly touted rookie repeatedly ignored a coaching tip and acted as if “he had a little bit of an attitude” during position group meetings.

“I’m ready to go after this guy, and so bottom line is I start in on him,” Pees said. “Vrabel stands up and says, ‘Coach, don’t worry about it. Go on with the meeting. Teach us what you need to teach us. We’ll take care of it.’”

“I don’t know what all the linebackers did, but that kid was a different kid after that day. I know they didn’t do anything physically to him, but I think they told him, ‘This is not how we’re going to do things here.’ But that told you right there about Mike Vrabel’s leadership.”

Rardin was stunned when former Ohio State assistant Fred Pagac visited a Walsh practice before Vrabel’s sophomore season and predicted he would become an NFL player. The declaration didn’t seem as bold by the time Vrabel was named the Beacon Journal Player of the Year after his senior season in 1992.

There was another notable revelation during Vrabel’s high school days. When Vrabel would sit in Rardin’s office with his feet atop a desk and discuss strategy for an upcoming game, everyone knew he was coaching material. Rardin visited Ohio State during Vrabel’s freshman season and saw the same routine unfold in coach John Cooper’s office.

Vrabel’s parents were administrators at several local schools. His father played basketball at Copley and the University of Akron before coaching hoops at Norton.

“I was always around the team,” Vrabel said. “I was an only child. I will always say this: When you’re an only child and your parents both work, you end up being spoiled — you had nice things. But I also was taught what the value of hard work was and also how important it was to be a part of a team.”

This is how Mike Vrabel has fared while coaching the Tennessee Titans against his hometown Cleveland Browns

As coach of the Titans, Vrabel’s record is 51-38, including 2-3 in the playoffs. He was voted the 2021 Associated Press NFL Coach of the Year a season after the Browns’ Kevin Stefanski received the same award. The last time the Titans and Browns met, Cleveland prevailed 41-35 on Dec. 6, 2020, in Nashville.

The previous season, the Titans had wrecked the head coaching debut of Freddie Kitchens by rolling to a 43-13 win on Sept. 8, 2019, in Cleveland. The Browns finished with 18 penalties for 182 yards and could have used a coach who would blast them with the dangers of lacking discipline.

The Titans meet during the season for what they call “mental Thursday,” Dobbs said. Vrabel calls out individuals from every part of the depth chart and quizzes them about their responsibilities on a given play.

Vrabel holds players accountable and dishes out tough love, but he celebrates and encourages them, too.

“He’ll be that guy in the middle of the circle hyping guys up, outside the locker room congratulating guys or picking up guys for support after a tough loss, which is very unique to see,” Dobbs said. “But I think it goes back to he’s been in those moments as a player.”

“Through all of his antics and everything, I think that’s just his way of showing that he does care about you,” Conklin added. “He wants to get the most out of guys, and he’s going to push you. But in his heart, it’s ‘cause he cares about you and he wants you to do well.”

Vrabel also wants his players to talk about being “great” when they are in the Titans’ training facility, no matter how they're feeling in the moment.

“There's something about speaking it into existence,” Conklin said.

Vrabel's greatness has granted him entry this year into two halls of fame, including one in a community where he was steeled for life in the NFL.

THE RINGER
AUGUST 31, 2023

In 2020, Ben Jones, the Tennessee Titans' longtime center, would wake up at 5:30 in the morning with a text already waiting for him. It'd be a screen grab of Peloton cycling stats and a message saying, "Beat that, fat boy."

There are hundreds of little reasons why players buy into Tennessee head coach Mike Vrabel—that's why I went to Nashville this summer to do a story on him. Jones, for instance, told me that Vrabel has long trusted him to be a leader in the locker room, challenging and empowering him to be one; that the veteran coach taught him that a nose tackle playing with more width can be a tell that the defense is in zone coverage. And also that Vrabel occasionally sends texts like "Beat that, fat boy." You can't tell one part of the story without the other. It's all connected. "You always have to make sure you are on top of your game, because he's an asshole," Rodney Harrison, Vrabel's former teammate and now an analyst at NBC, said. "He's a good asshole. I love him. He is one of the best assholes I know."

Vrabel is a 48-year-old former All-Pro defender who's entering his sixth season coaching in Tennessee. He has snagged an NFL Coach of the Year award, won nearly 60 percent of his games, and made the playoffs three times in five seasons—once getting all the way to the AFC championship—despite never having what most would consider an elite roster. He has traversed multiple eras of football—from brutal Steelers and Patriots training camps as a player in the late '90s and early 2000s, to more modern practice setups—and has blended that wide-ranging football education together to create his own style. He is equal parts hardass and empath. He cares deeply about his players, but he also cares deeply about getting his point across.

Longtime Titans tight end Delanie Walker played against Vrabel in 2010, during the then-linebacker's last year in the league, and he noticed something strange. Vrabel was coaching Walker—or some version of coaching. "He'd help you out," Walker said. "He'd say, 'You better change that stance up, I know it's a pass. You're giving away your technique,' or [talk about] the way I was looking at the line." So eight years later, Walker immediately bought in when Vrabel became his head coach on the Titans.

What Walker noticed first was that Vrabel would air him out in a way most coaches wouldn't to an established veteran. Walker dropped a pass in practice early into Vrabel's tenure and the video was replayed during a meeting. "We don't pay you that much money to drop passes, do we?" Vrabel said. This type of biting sarcasm propels most Vrabel meetings. Harrison remembers Vrabel deadpanning things like, "Still didn't know it was Cover 3, Asante? Still messing up that call, Willie?" to bust chops during Patriots defensive meetings, and he has not changed his approach in the two decades since. Walker learned to love this. "If a coach cusses you out, yells at you, that means he likes you. He wants you to be great," Walker said. "If you can't take coaching to be great, we don't need you."

Vrabel's lack of filter when it comes to football, and his habit of jumping into drills himself, creates a physical, intense practice where you can find basically the entire gamut of human emotions. "Mike is the guy manning a .50 caliber on top of a Humvee or a Bradley and still barking out competent orders," Falcons head coach Arthur Smith, a former Titans offensive coordinator, said of those practices. "That's what I love about him. There is no gray area. If you're sensitive, it is not for you."

I'd thought about doing a Vrabel story ever since I saw a clip from a Raw Room podcast in which Walker and former teammate Daren Bates told a story about ex-defensive lineman Kevin Dodd getting kicked out of a team meeting, and eventually off the team altogether, after an exchange with Vrabel. Walker's summary of Vrabel's intense approach to coaching his players was, it appears, spot-on: "Vrabel is the type of dude to be like, 'I'll fight you, I don't care if you play football; let's go. And I'll coach you right after I fight you.'"

Now let's be clear, Vrabel is not literally fighting players. It just seems like it at times because, well, things can get heated in practice. Then things calm down. "There are no fucking grudges," Vrabel told me. "There's a mistake, an argument, a disagreement, whatever happens. In relationships that I have, I'm moving on. We don't have time to sit there and dwell on what happened. I gotta do my job."

Vrabel believes that in order to get through to players, he needs to do two things: teach them correctly, and show them that what he's holding them accountable for is worth it. "Help them become a better player, which in turn is going to help their family make more money," Vrabel told me of his philosophy. "This is professional sports. We can all say we want to do it for the love of the game. But we also do it to support our families. It's a tough road to playing professional sports, especially football, so there's got to be some of that."

Vrabel said he'll get through to some players by reminding them that if they take care of their body, they'll have a better chance to eventually reach free agency and get a payday. The instructions are simple: This will be hard, but lucrative. "Work on your conditioning, which means you can play for snaps, and then make more plays, which in turn is going to mean someone—whether it's us or somebody else—is going to compensate you accordingly," Vrabel said.

Safety Amani Hooker said Vrabel will explain in granular detail how one shift in technique can change a career. “Everyone is athletic and can jump,” Hooker said of one of Vrabel’s lessons. “The difference between making a play and missing a play is, ‘Are you going to stab when the ball is coming, or are you going to swat and miss the ball?’”

Offensive lineman Aaron Brewer said he was struggling with the two-hand punch technique and driving down on opponents as a rookie, and that Vrabel practiced it with him, hand in the dirt, in the trenches, “many, many times. He got after my ass,” Brewer said. That’s his way, Brewer explained, of showing love.

Wide receiver Nick Westbrook-Ikhine said he was surprised the first time Vrabel jumped into a drill—a punt-block drill, to be exact. “He’s still got it,” Westbrook-Ikhine said. Westbrook-Ikhine was rushing off the edge. Vrabel was in protection. “I was not expecting that stout of a figure. I almost slipped,” Westbrook-Ikhine said.

Defensive tackle Teair Tart said that after his first Vrabel practice he felt: “Horrified.” Actually, maybe horrified isn’t the right word. “But it just felt intense. Direct. He knew what he wanted,” Tart said. Eventually Vrabel was in drills with Tart teaching him how to match his hands with the pad level or pushing from the inside out. Vrabel won him over, Tart said, by “being himself. Period.” That seems to be the whole point.

There is a cliché that great players do not become great coaches, that they lack the ability to teach what was innate to them. Vrabel cuts me off before I can even get the question out. “I don’t think I was a great player,” Vrabel said. “I think I was an above-average player that figured it out. I wasn’t a great, great player.” There is some evidence of this. The stories of future Hall of Fame tackle Orlando Pace dominating Vrabel during their Ohio State practices are legendary. “It was a fucking joke. There’s nobody been ever better than that guy. Fucking joke,” Vrabel said of those matchups. “I mean, just crazy.”

But the truth of the matter is Vrabel was an NFL All-Pro selection in 2007 and an anchor of some of the most successful defenses of all time in New England. His friend, Wisconsin head coach Luke Fickell, said he recently talked to his team about a “buddy who was not a great athlete but he was a great player.” Fickell believes there’s a threshold of talent needed for football intellect and preparation to be able to thrive on the biggest stage, and that Vrabel passed it. Then Vrabel took it from there. “I always say, God is fair, and when he gives you one thing he doesn’t give you the other,” Fickell said. “He made the ultimate balance when he gave Mike enough ability but with these unique attributes that will make you incredibly successful in whatever you do.” Vrabel has said that as a coach he doesn’t want to rely on talent, even if his teams have it—he wants to rely on fundamentals and technique to raise the team’s floor, which feels like an on-the-nose assessment of how his career played out.

Fickell said Vrabel has had the same ethos for at least three decades. “He was 18 years old and you’d say, ‘What did you think of that?’ and he’d say, ‘I think it sucks.’” This, Fickell said, was rare at an age when most people just agreed with their friends. “It wasn’t always popular, that’s why he wasn’t elected captain [at Ohio State]. But if you looked at it, he was the leader. If a guy couldn’t make his runs it wasn’t like, ‘Hey are you OK?’ It’s like, ‘No man, we’re counting on you, your ass is going.’”

Fickell believes we’re in an age when a lot of leaders just sort of steal the style of others. For instance, a lot of people watch The Last Dance and might say of Michael Jordan, “Oh, he was a leader and he was a prick and he would call people out and that’s what I’m gonna be,” Fickell says. “But no. You have to be yourself.” That, of course, is what’s happening in Tennessee.

It started with Jadeveon Clowney. Vrabel started coaching under Fickell at Ohio State in 2011. And there Vrabel figured out quickly that he needed to dramatically improve his teaching skills, doing less telling—look at how Tedy Bruschi or Tamba Hali played this, etc.—and doing more actual coaching. Then, when he started as the linebackers coach for the Texans in 2014, working with then-rookie pass rusher Clowney, he figured out that there are multiple ways to connect with players. “My first [camp] in New England, we did 10 straight two-a-days,” Vrabel said. “You didn’t have to have a week off, you didn’t have to have a day off of after the fucking fifth or sixth day. Two guys quit. Two starting guards quit on that Super Bowl team. It was different. That’s not a complaint. I’m trying to always adapt and adjust.”

When he started to coach Clowney, he realized Clowney wanted to be coached from home, and that Vrabel could coach from his office. “You wanted him to respond to a text message, send him a video clip and start explaining and coaching him whether it was good or bad or a little detail that needed to get fixed or he did something we had been working on,” Vrabel said. “You’d get an immediate response and it’s, ‘OK, this is what these guys like, they like to see themselves, they like to watch it on their phone or whatever it may be.’” This, along with having two young sons at the time, got the coach to adjust even more.

Vrabel starts his sixth, and perhaps his most interesting, season as a head coach in less than two weeks. So all of these adjustments and adaptations will be crucial. The Titans are working to develop new quarterbacks like 2023 second-round pick Will Levis and 2022 third-round pick Malik Willis. The team also has a younger than normal roster, and a new general manager in Ran Carthon. Vrabel will need every trick he’s ever learned.

Fortunately, one thing that comes up when you talk to players about Vrabel is his command of every position. He does not limit himself to one position of expertise or even one side of the ball. “He knows their checks and our checks,” safety Kevin Byard said of practices. Ben Jones said Vrabel has meetings on Fridays where he teaches football at large, maybe even a little history, instead of one scheme or focus. What Vrabel wants is the ability to have a functional conversation with every player on his team about what that player’s being taught. “So I can go into a receiver room and talk about a release or talk about a coverage from a defensive standpoint, or settling down versus a trap corner,” Vrabel said. “It’s about easy connections. I cannot have a 30-minute conversation with 90 guys in camp right now, right? But I can go into every meeting room, be seen and I can talk in front of the team meeting about all the plays that come up and some of the details that our position coaches are teaching.”

Vrabel’s journey to understand as many schemes as he could started by playing many roles and in many complicated defenses. As a rookie in Pittsburgh, “3-4, blitzing fucking everywhere,” Vrabel said. Defensive coordinator Jim Haslett would introduce a blitz and they’d be out practicing it two hours later. His time with Bill Belichick only accelerated that. Hell, Vrabel caught 10 touchdowns as a spare tight end with the Patriots. In New England, he also learned about preparation, and size and speed requirements at different positions. Because of his varied football education, he does not exclusively subscribe to any particular scheme. Smith said this is one of the major things he loved about working for Vrabel—how flexible his mind is.

Vrabel told me he believes there are a few non-negotiables to winning: You have to protect the football, affect the other team’s quarterback, and be efficient throwing the football. And be great in situational football: Almost 60 percent of games are decided by eight points or less, and a similar number are won in the last two minutes of the fourth quarter or in overtime. Beyond that, he’s up for more or less anything.

He also believes, Jones said, in individually motivating players. “I came to work every single day and being on that field, being in that locker room, being in a meeting meant something to me,” Jones explained. “So he knew all he had to say is, ‘Hey, you’re not in it, what’s going on?’ He’s questioning my all-in, where my mind was, [why] you’re not bringing the juice,’ because he knew how bad I wanted to win that championship.” All Vrabel needed to tell Jones—and he often did—was it was hot and Jones should pack it up as an old man. Jones was locked in from there.

“And once you’re one of his guys, he trusts you and then you can bring other guys along with you,” Jones said. “As a leader you had to earn it every day. We have a unique relationship. We would be in each other’s face because I don’t want to come out for a rep, then I’d hit him with a pie for his birthday.”

Jones told me the story behind a now-viral clip of a tunnel hug between the two last year in which Vrabel can be heard saying, “I’ve never seen anything like it,” while getting emotional. Jones said Vrabel knew how hurt Jones was—in that game alone he was battling a stomach flu, torn MCL, and a high ankle sprain. Jones badly wanted to stay in the game and let Derrick Henry finish things off by running out the clock in a four-minute drill. His reasoning was simple: Jones was in Year 11 and “the next oldest guy was in like Year 4. So I wanted to make sure those guys knew I wasn’t going to leave them out to dry. I’m here for you. So I was just trying to be that guy for him. And Mike knew how bad I was hurting and what I was going through that day. He was just—it’s just one of those moments where everything happened.”

But crying is the exception for Vrabel, not the norm. Normally, he’s talking shit to everyone on the practice field. “Saying, ‘We did this when we won a Super Bowl,’” Jones said to describe Vrabel’s mixture of humble brags and just outright brags. “He’ll say, ‘Oh I used to take all the defensive reps, then turn around and play scout team safety,’” and I’d say, ‘Did you take 100 snaps a day, old man? There’s no way you took all those reps.’”

Unfortunately for Jones and the other players who like to needle Vrabel back, his stories are mostly true. “He loved practicing on the scout team. He loved it. Loved it!” Harrison said. “He didn’t care if he had to be Ed Reed, the free safety, Ray Lewis, middle linebacker, or one of the great defensive ends, he would play that role. I was a great practice player and I’m like, ‘Look at this dude. He’s out running special teams, starting defense, nickel, goal line and he’s playing scout team defense. That is phenomenal.’” This simply didn’t happen in the NFL, Harrison said. “He’s running R3 [position] on kickoff running down and it’s 90 degrees, full speed, juking guys, tagging off on the runner inside the 20, and he’s celebrating like he had three sacks. It was just so important to him.”

It is still important to Vrabel, of course. But this season, he’s once again looking for the thing he’s always looking for. One time, he said, an opposing coach told him after a game that his team played their asses off. “It was the greatest feeling in the world,” Vrabel said. “It’ll be the best compliment I ever get. Not that we had a good play or a cool blitz. That we played our asses off. That’s all I need.” That and some Peloton wins, I guess

VRABEL VOTED INTO PATRIOTS HALL OF FAME

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MAY 4, 2023

NASHVILLE – Titans head coach Mike Vrabel has earned some pretty nice recognition for his playing career – on Wednesday, Vrabel was voted into the Patriots Hall of Fame.

A three-time Super Bowl champion with the Patriots, Vrabel was voted by fans as the franchise's 34th inductee. Vrabel joins Troy Brown (2012), Tedy Bruschi (2013), Kevin Faulk (2016), Ty Law (2014), Matt Light (2018), Willie McGinest (2015) and Richard Seymour (2022) as the eighth player to enter the Patriots Hall of Fame as a three-time Super Bowl Champion with the team.

The date and time for the 2023 Patriots Hall of Fame induction ceremony will be announced at a later date.

"It's my pleasure to announce Mike Vrabel as this year's selection to the Patriots Hall of Fame," Patriots Chairman and CEO Robert Kraft said. "Mike's leadership and versatility were principal to one of the most successful eras in franchise history, propelling the Patriots to three Super Bowl titles in four years and establishing multiple NFL records for consecutive-game win streaks. Many Patriots players have made contributions in all three phases of the game, but none more significantly than Mike. He was an eight-year starter on defense who also regularly contributed on special teams and is the only player in NFL history to score touchdowns on his first 10 career receptions, including touchdowns in back-to-back Super Bowl victories. He was respected for his football intellect and was destined to become a head coach in this league. I look forward to welcoming him back to New England, where his induction will preserve his legacy as one of the greatest players in franchise history."

Vrabel, who took over as head coach of the Titans in 2018, joined the Patriots before the 2001 season, following a four-year career with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

During his eight seasons in New England, Vrabel played a key role on defense on three Super Bowl championship teams (2001, 2003 and 2004). He also caught eight regular season passes and two more in the playoffs. All 10 of his receptions were for touchdowns, including receptions in back-to-back Super Bowl wins over the Carolina Panthers in Super Bowl XXXVIII and Philadelphia Eagles in Super Bowl XXXIX.

Vrabel earned Pro Bowl and first-team Associated Press All-Pro honors following the 2007 season.

Beginning in 2007, the Patriots started a new tradition, inducting one player or head coach into the team's Hall of Fame each year. The process for induction involves a panel of media, alumni and staff who collectively nominate the players or head coaches most deserving of induction. After the nominations are made, the committee votes and the top three tallies become that year's finalists. The Patriots then give fans the opportunity to vote online to select each year's hall of fame inductee. The Patriots are the only team in the NFL that allows their fans to make the final selection for enshrinement into the franchise's highest honor.

THERE'S ANOTHER SIDE OF TENNESSEE TITANS COACH MIKE VRABEL- JUST ASK LUKE FICKELL

BY GENTRY ESTES
THE TENNESSEAN
AUGUST 24, 2022

He was ready to roll. He'd found tickets. He'd be off work for once, and some of his kids could accompany him.

Luke Fickell was excited. So much so that he was set to throw on a little two-toned Tennessee Titans gear and cheer like any other home fan in Nissan Stadium during January's big playoff game against the Cincinnati Bengals.

But then, Fickell said, "It really started to hit me."

How would that look? Would people understand why?

The University of Cincinnati's celebrated football coach, after all, couldn't be like any other fan, and certainly not for that game. "Thank goodness," Fickell said, a basketball tournament with his kids kept him home and away from Nashville that day.

"I didn't want someone to see me and think, 'Whoa now, you're supposed to be a Cincinnati guy,'" Fickell said.

"But the roots are a little bit deeper than that."

Titans coach Mike Vrabel (left) and University of Cincinnati coach Luke Fickell catch up during the Bearcats' pro day in 2022. The two successful coaches have remained close friends since their days as roommates at Ohio State.

The idea that Fickell – who lives across the street, by the way, from the Brown family that owns the Bengals – would root against Cincy's other football team shows how close his friendship is with Titans coach Mike Vrabel.

And for how long it has lasted, two decades and counting.

A famous football friendship

They started as college roommates and teammates at Ohio State, became coaching colleagues three years later and have remained supportive sounding boards for each other – to talk football, family, whatever – as each has neared the pinnacle of a cutthroat profession.

Vrabel was the NFL's coach of the year last season for leading the Titans to a 12-5 record and the AFC's No. 1 seed.

Fickell, meanwhile, won at least eight different national coach of the year awards, taking the 2021 Bearcats to 13 wins and a spot in the College Football Playoff.

In the past four seasons, Fickell has gone 44-7 with a Cincy program that went 4-8 in 2017, his first season. Soon after, Vrabel took over the Titans in 2018, beginning his own run of four consecutive winning seasons.

It's tempting to think these two could become a more contemporary version of Bill Belichick and Nick Saban, football's greatest pro-college coaching friendship, with each having enjoyed historic success after working together previously.

But with Fickell and Vrabel, it's different. They are closer. They were friends first.

Fickell was the best man at Vrabel's wedding.

"I don't even look at us as head coaches," Vrabel said. "Like, I have a conversation with other head coaches and then I have a conversation with Luke, and it's far different."

As I'm witnessing the two coaches catch up on an early morning Zoom call between Nashville and Cincinnati, I quickly realize what Vrabel meant by that.

Cincinnati coach Luke Fickell looks over a play during a spring practice at Nippert Stadium in Cincinnati on March 24, 2022.

I sense that I'm privy to something most won't see. Once together, two famous coaches are oddly at ease. They'd just be normal buddies and dads – talking families, bringing up memories, ribbing each other – if the conversation didn't also delve into red-zone offense and how it differs in college and the pros.

Or how Fickell didn't make it to the start of the Titans' training camp as planned, because his wife showed up in his office with plane tickets to Marco Island, Florida.

"He called from the beach as the waves were crashing," says Vrabel.

"And he said, 'Good decision,'" Fickell adds.

Back at Ohio State

Of the two, Vrabel was the one who always saw himself coaching. Fickell used to want to be an eye doctor after he was done being a defensive lineman.

They met in the mid-1990s on Vrabel's recruiting visit to Ohio State. Fickell – who is a year older – hosted. Vrabel had previously visited Michigan and was leaning toward going there, he said, but ultimately "just felt much more comfortable with the players at Ohio State."

After Vrabel's first year, they ended up sharing an apartment. Fickell did most of the cleaning. Vrabel took care of the cooking, as he knew how.

"I didn't have a choice," Vrabel said. "I was an only child. I was fat and I wanted to eat, so I had to cook."

Fickell's brief try at the NFL was spoiled by a knee injury, leading him into college coaching – rather than optometry. Vrabel became a 14-year NFL veteran, and with each of his new contracts, Fickell would kid him about not needing to coach after all. Vrabel insisted anyway, and Fickell eventually took him up on it.

In May 2011, with Vrabel at the end of his playing career, Ohio State coach Jim Tressel resigned amid an NCAA infractions scandal. Fickell, a long-time Tressel assistant, became the Buckeyes' interim coach for the 2011 season, which was rapidly approaching. He reached out to Vrabel to join his coaching staff.

"If you're going to hire somebody for a unique situation like that," Fickell said, "you want to hire somebody that you trust and believe and is going to have your back. It was a no-brainer. I just didn't know if it was really something that he really, really wanted to do or he just wanted to help out."

The perception was that Fickell talked Vrabel into retiring as a player, but that wasn't necessarily the case, Vrabel said. Given that he wasn't under contract at the time, Vrabel said he had pretty much made up his mind already. He'd stopped training. Then came "a great opportunity" at his old college.

The 2011 season was rough for anyone associated with the Buckeyes, especially Fickell and Vrabel. They lost their final four games, including a bowl – all by one score or less – to finish with a 6-7 record. It remains Ohio State's only sub-.500 season since 1988.

"I remember how awful '11 was and how much Luke wanted to do well for Ohio State, for the kids," Vrabel said. "The program was just kind of in turmoil. I didn't know how to help him. I mean, I tried to listen a lot."

"It was unique," Fickell said. "There was only one guy who was probably there every night, whether it was 10:30, 11, 12 o'clock at night, to be able to sit and just kind of decompress and talk to about it. And it was him."

Ohio State defensive line coach Mike Vrabel and defensive coordinator Luke Fickell discuss strategy during the Big Ten Championship Game between Ohio State and the Michigan State at Lucas Oil Stadium on Dec. 7, 2013.

When Urban Meyer was hired by Ohio State after the season, he ended up retaining Fickell and Vrabel – which is rare in coaching. Fickell coached the Buckeyes' defense up until he took the Cincinnati job before the 2017 season.

Vrabel coached the D-Line for a couple of years before opting to leave for the NFL's Houston Texans.

"It was like, 'OK, I felt like I've learned enough,' and I wanted to move on," Vrabel said.

"After being down there at one OTA," Fickell said. "I kind of looked at him and said, 'I think you are in the right spot. If you want to do this and continue to move forward, I think that you can be a head coach in five years.' That was just my opinion just by watching his presence and how people reacted to him."

Friends first, coaches second

For what it's worth, Fickell believes Vrabel could have "no doubt" been successful in college, too.

Vrabel feels the same about his friend and the NFL.

"Yeah, Luke could coach in this league," Vrabel said. "We've talked about it. But the thing that I always respect about Luke is that whether he had opportunities to go to other places or not, he did what was best for him and his family — and not just chase every job that came up or that somebody called him about. I always respected that."

Fickell, who has six children, has been linked before to pro opportunities. NFL.com reported in December that he had spoken to the Detroit Lions the year before "and the expectation within the league is Fickell will be in the mix for NFL jobs again in the upcoming hiring cycle, if he's interested."

If he's interested.

That could be a big 'if,' sounds like.

"(Vrabel) talked to me when he was down in Houston about, 'Hey, you need to get in the NFL. You need to come do this,'" Fickell said. "I don't know. I don't see myself being able to maybe transition as well as he did. ... The ability to have that presence – because he played 14 years and because he has three Super Bowl rings – I think as an outsider sometimes that becomes a little bit more difficult."

When it comes to Vrabel, Fickell kept going back to that word: "Presence."

Mike Vrabel, the reigning NFL Coach of the Year, has guided the Tennessee Titans to four straight winning seasons, including a 12-5 finish and No. 1 seed in the AFC playoffs in 2021.

He always had that, Fickell said. It's why he says his pal has become one of the most respected coaches in the NFL.

But Vrabel is still his friend. So while he'll tell me those kind words, he's not saying them once Vrabel joins the Zoom call.

I ask, do they brag on each other?

"I try to help Luke recruit. I try to praise that program as much as I can," said Vrabel, joking that he'll listen to interviews and Fickell doesn't do the same.

He's wrong about that, though. I'd just heard it.

"There's not as many tight connections that are going to truly last in a lifetime,” Fickell said. “... I cherish the unique ones that you know won’t change no matter what, whether it’s 15, 20 years down the road.

“For me, he’s one of those guys.”

TITANS HC MIKE VRABEL NAMED AP 2021 NFL
COACH OF THE YEAR AT NFL HONORS BEFORE
SUPER BOWL LVI

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
FEBRUARY 10, 2022

LOS ANGELES – Titans head coach Mike Vrabel on Thursday night was named 2021 NFL Coach of the Year by the Associated Press.

Vrabel was recognized at the NFL Honors here in Los Angeles just three days before Super Bowl LVI.

"It is an honor and a privilege to play and coach in this league," Vrabel said on stage. "And having coached in the Pro Bowl (last week), I know our game is in good hands. My job and every coach's job is to teach, develop and to make a connection, and to make an impact.

"I want to thank our owner, Amy Adams Strunk, and I want to thank my family. I want to thank my wife Jen, I want to thank my sons Tyler and Carter. I want to thank my best friend – I want to thank (John Streicher) 'Stretch' (the team's Coordinator of Football Development). This is a reflection of our 91 players that helped us win 12 games, and our coaching staff. Thank you, and this is a pleasure."

Last month, Vrabel was also named 2021 Coach of the Year by the Professional Football Writers of America (PFWA).

Vrabel guided the Titans to a record of 12-5 during the regular season. Vrabel's Titans captured the AFC's No.1 seed for the first time since the 2008 season. The 12 wins in the regular season were the most for the franchise since 2008, when the Titans finished 13-3.

During a zoom interview after the presentation, Vrabel discussed the strong culture in Tennessee while working alongside General Manager Jon Robinson. The Titans announced on Tuesday they'd agreed to a contract extensions with Vrabel, who was hired before the 2018 season, and Robinson, the team's GM since 2016.

"I think it is about the people that we bring in, and it is also about our leaders," Vrabel said. "Everybody talks about culture, and the thing that I tell our football team is we are going to define our culture by what we look like when we are at our worst. Because it is easy to say everybody has a great culture when you are winning. But when you go through struggles and maybe you lose a couple of games in a row, that is maybe when I take a peek and see what our culture looks like. I am excited about it because we have had adversity and we've been able to persevere through that."

Vrabel said Amy Adams Strunk "demands the best of Jon and myself, but she let's us do our jobs."

"If there's things that she wants, she will tell us, and obviously we do it," Vrabel said. "But she allows Jon and I to do our jobs, she trusts us to work through things, to have conversations about personnel, and about the direction of the team. ... She's given us the resources to continue to build meeting rooms and classrooms (at the facility) to help team our players. I can't say enough about her and her family."

Vrabel's Titans won the AFC South for the second straight season in 2021, and the organization made its third consecutive postseason appearance in his four seasons as head coach.

The Titans used 91 players during the 2021 season, an NFL record for a non-strike season.

Vrabel's overall record since taking over as coach of the Titans is 44-27, including regular season and playoffs. In 2021, Vrabel tied Jack Pardee for the most total wins by a head coach in his first four seasons with the organization. In Pardee's first four seasons as head coach from 1990 through 1993, the Oilers were 43-26, including playoffs. Of all Titans/Oilers head coaches with at least four seasons with the franchise, Vrabel's career winning percentage ranks the highest.

On several occasions Thursday night, Vrabel thanked those around him.

He said coaching – and playing – is a commitment from everyone, so everyone shares in success.

"That goes for the coaching staff, and their families," Vrabel said. "And I always tell our players: Go back and look when we lost to the Jets, the number of people that texted you after that game. Because everybody texts you when you win, but nobody texts you when you lose and says, 'Hey, hang in there. You'll get them next week.' But that's what our families do, and that's what our kids do.

"So, I am always reminding that to our players: Not too many people remember you when you lose, or text you when you lose, and (the families) are in it for the long haul."

BIGGER STRONGER OLB
RASHAD WEAVER ANXIOUS TO SEE HIS HARD WORK PAY OFF ON FIELD FOR TITANS

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
JULY 5, 2023

NASHVILLE – Rashad Weaver chuckled when asked what he sees when he looks at his rookie photos.

"The boy looks a little frail," Weaver said with a smile. "He looks a little slender."

The Titans outside linebacker doesn't look that way now.

With some hard work – he spent a good chunk of his offseason working with a trainer known as "Monster Maker" – Weaver feels bigger and stronger than ever.

But it didn't come easy.

"That entails workouts for three hours in the weight room, where you lay on the ground and say: 'I hate this' every day," Weaver said. "And on the off days you go run hills, 50-yard sprints up the hills that's working your speed and your leg strength and your drive.

"But I know it's working, because I can feel the difference. And, the easiest way to know something is working is when you see the difference or other people see the difference in you and they make remarks about you.

"For someone like me, it just makes me want to keep going."

Weaver, a fourth-round draft pick by the Titans in 2021 who is now heading into his third NFL season, is looking to make a bigger difference for the team in 2023.

He plans to do it by taking advantage of the work he's put in away from the facility, combined with the work during the team's offseason program, including OTAs and minicamp.

A 6-foot-4, 259-pounder, Weaver played in 16 games for the Titans in 2022, and he totaled 5.5 sacks, 39 quarterback pressures, and 27 tackles. It came one season after his rookie year was cut short after just two regular season games because of a broken leg that had him getting around on a scooter for a long stretch.

When last season ended, Weaver said he went into "hibernation mode," sleeping for nearly two weeks to let his exhausted body recover.

He then went to work.

Weaver said most of his focus this offseason has been on his lower body strength, although he'd packed some muscle mass on his upper body as well while working at an old gym in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, before returning to Nashville to work at Ascension Saint Thomas Sports Park.

And when he watched film of himself this offseason, he took notes.

What he saw was a guy who wasn't always able to finish because of what he felt was a lack of lower body strength. Surgeries in recent years to repair a torn ACL and then the broken leg proved to be big hurdles.

"The biggest thing for me (to focus on) was strength, and that's where I put a lot of work in this offseason," Weaver said. "I'd never been a huge weight room guy, but coming off leg injuries in the past, those are things that knock your leg strength back.

"So now I can go out here and really bully guys and have play strength and play through contact and finish a lot of things that were really just right there last year, and really be better overall. ... These are grown men out there."

Weaver now feels like he's one of those grown men.

Heading into Year 3, he looks and feels more explosive.

He wants to see it play out on the field.

"I made it here for a reason," Weaver said. "So, it's up to me to do what I do with the opportunity."

TITANS AGREE TO TERMS WITH TE TREVON WESCO
ON A ONE-YEAR DEAL

BY JIM WYATT
TENNESSEETITANS.COM
MARCH 31, 2023

NASHVILLE – The Titans have agreed to terms with veteran tight end Trevon Wesco on a one-year deal.

Wesco, drafted in the fourth round of the 2019 NFL Draft by the Jets, has played in 54 games over the past four seasons, with 13 starts.

The 6-foot-3, 267-pounder played in 2022 for the Chicago Bears after playing his first three NFL seasons with the Jets.

Wesco, who played college football at Lackawanna College and West Virginia, has caught eight passes for 113 yards in the NFL. He caught two passes for 26 yards while playing in 14 games, with one start, last year with Chicago.

Wesco, regarded as a sturdy blocker, also has experience as a fullback.

During his final season as West Virginia, Wesco was an all-Big 12 first team selection after making 26 catches for 366 yards, averaging 14.1 yards per catch, and one touchdown. He overlapped with Titans assistant Tony Dews at West Virginia for a season. Dews is now tight ends coach with the Titans after previously serving as running backs coach under head coach Mike Vrabel.

THIS RECEIVER TOOK A DIFFERENT ROUTE

BY DAVID BOCLAIR
SI.COM
JANUARY 19, 2022

NASHVILLE – Nick Westbrook-Ikhine readily admits it. He had a Plan B.

His first choice was to play football for a living, but he was not convinced it would happen. It did not help that he was not selected in the 2020 NFL Draft following a productive career at Indiana University.

“There was a time I was interviewing for jobs while finishing up my senior year at IU where [I thought] I just have to have that backup,” he said. “You never know what is going to happen. But I knew I was going to have an opportunity and just figured I would make the best of what I have. That’s really all I could ask for – to have this opportunity.”

To say that he has made the most of it would be an understatement.

There were 35 wide receivers selected in the 2020 NFL Draft, and the Titans did not take any of them. Instead, franchise officials covered their bases with four undrafted players at that spot (they did not sign more than two at any other position). Krisitian Wilkerson (Southeast Missouri State) has appeared in four games with the New England Patriots, and Mason Kinsey (Berry College) made his NFL debut with the Titans this season but has not seen the field since. Kyle Williams (Arizona State) has never played in a game.

Westbrook-Ikhine, on the other hand, has played 30 out of a possible 33 games and has progressed from a special teams performer to a role player on offense to his current role as a significant contributor in the passing game. He was the Titans’ second-leading receiver this season with 38 receptions for 476 yards and four touchdowns. In the three games A.J. Brown spent on injured reserve, it was Westbrook-Ikhine who played more snaps than any of the team’s other wide receivers.

Only 19 of wide receivers drafted in 2020 have caught more passes through their first two seasons than Westbrook-Ikhine, who has 41 for 509 yards and four touchdowns. Just 14 have more touchdown passes.

“There’s definitely times I’m sitting at the house and I kind of realize the position I’m at and the blessing I have to be on this team (and) have a role – a solid role – on this team,” Westbrook-Ikhine said. “Yeah, I’m definitely proud of what I’ve been able to accomplish.”

That road from obscurity to importance makes Westbrook-Ikhine the exception Saturday when the Titans host the Cincinnati Bengals in a matchup that features a handful of sure-things – or as close to it as you can get.

Combined, the offenses include two wide receivers who were top 10 overall picks – Tennessee’s Julio Jones (sixth, 2011) and Cincinnati’s Ja’Marr Chase (fifth, 2021) – and three others who were second-round selections – Tennessee’s A.J. Brown (2019) and Cincinnati’s Tee Higgins (2020) and Tyler Boyd (2016).

All of them have lived up to expectations. Jones, Brown and Boyd have multiple 1,000-yard seasons to their credit, and Jones is one of the NFL’s all-time leading receivers. Higgins topped 1,000 receiving yards for the first time this year, and Chase set an NFL rookie record with 1,455 this season.

Westbrook-Ikhine won’t be mentioned in the same breath as any of them anytime soon, but – in the most literal sense – he absolutely is in their league.

“We have always had confidence in (Westbrook-Ikhine),” coach Mike Vrabel said. “I think he has developed. ... He blocks for us. He plays on special teams. He knows multiple positions. Those types of players are very valuable to a team.”

Even if they are not obvious choices from the outset.

Or, if they question whether they belong every now and then. Westbrook-Ikhine, for example, admits to occasional insecurity about his career choice.

“I feel like that’s just a natural human thing,” he said. “Doubt creeps in at times. I feel like it kind of shows its head when you play poorly because there’s doubt in your mind. I just have to kind of roll with those punches and realize what God put me on this earth to do – this gift and talent he gave me – and try to use it to the best of my ability.”

TITANS SELECT CINCINNATI TE JOSH
WHYLE IN FIFTH ROUND OF SATURDAY'S NFL DRAFT

BY JIM WYATT
TITANS ONLINE
APRIL 30, 2023

NASHVILLE – The Titans selected Cincinnati tight end Josh Whyle in the fifth round of Saturday's NFL Draft.

Whyle, selected with the 147th overall pick, is an athletic big man who proved in college he can make plays, scoring 15 touchdowns.

Whyle said he met Titans head coach Mike Vrabel several times in the past year, as Whyle's former college coach, Luke Fickell, was roommates with Vrabel at Ohio State.

"It was a good conversation (with Coach Vrabel)," Whyle said of his draft day call. "When that call came, I don't even know if he could understand what I was saying. My heart was pounding. It was a pretty cool moment. ... We're both just excited for me to get down there and contribute any way I can to the team.

"(The Titans) like the idea that I can do a little bit of both – I can be an in-line blocker, and they can spread me out to be able to catch the ball. Not only that, but I think I have good special teams value."

Whyle (6-6 ½, 248), a former receiver who switched to tight end, caught 32 passes for 326 yards and three touchdowns last season for the Bearcats. He caught 88 passes for 1,062 yards for 15 touchdowns in his college career. He was a first-team All-American Athletic Conference performer in 2022, when he played in 12 games, with 10 starts.

Whyle caught six touchdowns in both 2020 and 2021.

Whyle ranked 78th on Bruce Feldman's 2022 Freaks List for The Athletic (4.65 in the 40, 35.5" vertical, 10'3" broad, 20 mph on GPS, 16 reps of 225).

"I'm 6-6, 250 and I think I can move really well," Whyle said. "Growing up I played every sport you can imagine. My parents started me out in gymnastics when I was young, but I played basketball and football throughout high school. Football is something that I've always been good at, and it's something I've always found fun, which I think is really important.

"If you are going to play this game and make a career out of it, you have to have fun with it."

TO UNDERSTAND
TENNESSEE TITANS'
MALIK WILLIS, START WITH HUGH FREEZE'S
'OH MY GOSH' MOMENT

BY BEN ARTHUR
THE TENNESSEAN
MAY 22, 2022

Hugh Freeze wanted to pull his hair out.

The Liberty Flames football coach watched his team go through a red-zone drill during practice. That's when his star quarterback, Malik Willis, threw an interception. A defensive lineman tipped the pass and a defensive back scooped it up.

Freeze, fuming, saw Willis go over to the defense and congratulate the two players responsible for the turnover. He told them how great of a job they just did.

Then Willis came over to his frustrated coach. And like the countless other times Freeze has been angry, his quarterback just placed his arm around him:

We'll make the next one, coach. Well make the next one.

"While it may drive me crazy, it made everybody in that locker room want to follow him and want to be around him," Freeze said. "He has this attractive humility about him to where it was never really about him. It doesn't mean he's not competitive. ... He's just got that rare quality in today's time where he's not seeking others' approval."

Willis' former coaches and trainers who spoke to The Tennessean described the Tennessee Titans third-round rookie as joyful with a magnetic aura.

It offered a glimpse into the personality of the man the Titans drafted as their potential quarterback of the future. Willis will sit behind veteran incumbent Ryan Tannehill for at least a season.

'He sets the temperature for the room'

John Ford recalled the mornings during the 2016 high school football season.

The coach at Roswell High School in Georgia at the time, Ford and his staff would hold meetings, watch film and plan practice at the field house. And every day, no matter what, Willis stuck his head through the door, smiling and grinning ear-to-ear:

Hey, coaches. How are you doing?

"He had such a great demeanor at all times," said Ford. "Always smiling. Always connecting with others. Making others around him feel better.

"He's not a thermometer. He's a thermostat," added Ford. "He sets the temperature for the room and always does it with tremendous joy. ... If you have a bad day around Malik Willis, there's something wrong with you."

In college, Willis went on quarterback retreats during spring break. The group – which featured future first-round draft picks Dwayne Haskins, Justin Fields and Trey Lance – would spend a week in Los Angeles or Miami to train daily.

"Even amongst a group of peer, elite quarterbacks, he was always the one people gravitated to," said Sean McEvoy, a private quarterback coach who has worked with Willis since he was a junior in high school.

Willis is "mild-mannered" until you get him talking about something he's passionate about, McEvoy explained. Football, golf, music and video games are some of those passions.

On those topics, he'll go from just hanging out to leading the conversation.

"Very much likes to think through things," McEvoy said. "He likes to process. I think he's very thoughtful in opinions he expresses. Like he wants to feel he's wrapped his head around (a concept) before he'll give an opinion on a topic.

"I think it's very similar to the way he processes things on the football field."

Developing as a quarterback

When Willis arrived at Liberty in 2019, the NFL was the furthest thing from Freeze's mind when assessing his new quarterback.

The Flames knew he could run. They felt confident they could win games with him. But he attempted just 14 passes in two years before transferring from Auburn. His limited snaps focused on his running skills. The biggest unknown was whether Willis could be a functional passer.

He was on the scout team his first year at Liberty, ineligible to play as a transfer. By spring 2020, Willis was an "average" practice player still learning the offense and honing his mechanics, according to Freeze.

Then came the following season.

"We get to the fall and turn the lights on and five games in you're thinking, 'Oh my gosh,'" Freeze said. "'He's got something to him.'"

Freeze, a college coach for 13 years, including five seasons at Ole Miss in which he beat Alabama twice, said Willis can make "every throw" and has the best arm strength of any player he's ever coached. Coupled with his running ability, he said Willis has a skillset similar to Lamar Jackson and Josh Allen, though he prefaced with, "I'm certainly not saying he's ready to be in a sentence with those guys."

In two seasons at Liberty, Willis completed 62.4% of his passes for 5,117 yards, 47 touchdowns with 18 interceptions. He also had 338 carries for 1,822 yards and 27 TDs for the Flames.

"His arm is dynamic," said Quincy Avery, a top quarterback trainer who works with Willis. "He has an ability to extend plays and do so much with his legs that, as a young quarterback trying to figure things out, he's going to have the ability to do some things that are going to allow him to be successful, even if he doesn't understand every single defense you're throwing at him."

There's the potential that made Willis a potential first-round pick – and there's the concerns that caused him to fall to the Titans in the third round.

He took a lot of sacks at Liberty, finishing No. 1 in the FBS with 51 in 2021. The 18 interceptions came in 23 starts for the Flames.

Freeze said the sacks weren't Willis' fault, proclaiming his team "just didn't protect well" and if not for Willis, the sack numbers would've been "double."

As for the interceptions, Freeze said there were some "bad ones." But there were too many good reads and throws to be overly concerned, Freeze explained.

"You can take a cut-up of his two years (at Liberty) and you can pull those and certainly make your case to be negative with him," said Freeze, "but I guarantee you I can pull 10 times that many where you say, 'Oh, wow. What a throw.'"

Freeze described Willis' growth as a passer at Liberty "transformational." But his journey started at home in the Atlanta area, where he's worked with McEvoy since transferring from Westlake High School – where Cam Newton attended – to Roswell ahead of his senior year. Avery entered the picture early in his college career.

In high school, building consistency in Willis' throwing mechanics took priority. It was tightening up his upper-body arm motion. Tweaking his arm path to make it more efficient and free flowing. Making sure his full cleats were in the ground so he had a good base to generate consistent power.

In the pre-draft process, McEvoy and Avery built on the things he wasn't asked to do at Liberty. They dove into NFL concepts, studying coverages he'd face at the next level.

Avery said the knock on Willis for playing in Freeze's run-pass-option scheme is "overblown."

"There aren't a lot of guys in college who do necessarily the same things that they're going to be doing in the NFL," said Avery. "It's just, 'How quickly are they going to pick up the playbook?' And I think he is really smart and will be fine."

But Freeze said he'll need to speed up his reads, as he'll face faster and more athletic defenders at the NFL level. McEvoy wants to see his consistency as a pocket passer improve; knowing when to use his athleticism versus when to just check the ball down and take the yards he can get.

After operating primarily out of the shotgun at Liberty, Willis will play more under center for the Titans. He had exchange issues on the first day of rookie minicamp earlier this month, though it was clean the following day.

"I just expect myself to come to work every day as long as God wakes me up," Willis said at rookie minicamp. "Just come out here and enjoy myself and try to be the best player I can be. Fight through the mistakes, fight through the successes.

"Either way it goes, you got to stay calm, cool and collected."

'It's a game at the end of the day'

Willis backed up Jarrett Stidham for two seasons at Auburn. Then he was the odd-man out in the competition to replace him in spring 2019, leading him to the transfer portal.

A three-star recruit in the 2017 class, Willis was listed as an "athlete" by major recruiting sites. Virginia Tech, where he initially committed, wouldn't give him a chance to play quarterback, according to Ford. People constantly told him to try receiver and defensive back. He wasn't a quarterback full-time until his senior year of high school.

But Willis always knew he was a quarterback.

"You got somebody who plays receiver or plays safety or plays something (else) that you could put at quarterback and win. But I was the opposite," explained Willis. "I was a quarterback that could play (other positions). ... So it wasn't really a conviction. It's an identity. It's what I am."

What he is, too, is a "kid at heart," Freeze said.

Like how he maneuvered the question about his relationship with Tannehill, who had made headlines saying it's not his job to mentor Willis.

When first asked about Tannehill's comments, Willis said "what comment?" before laughing and saying "everything's cool," diffusing what had become a hot-button narrative in the NFL.

"It's a game at the end of the day," said Willis. "I mean, it's a very important game to a lot of people, but it's a game at the end of the day. You go through way worse stuff in life. You have to understand that and be resilient as a person outside of football. I feel like when it comes to football, you just have to be strong minded and understand it's not your identity.

"I feel like you're supposed to use this platform for something," he continued. "I use it for God."
