Meet Raiderette Jen: Passion, Purpose, and Pride

This season, we're excited to welcome rookie Raiderette Jen, a talented performer whose artistry, cultural heritage, and ambition make her a standout both on and off the field.

Originally from Los Angeles, California, Jen has dedicated her life to movement. In addition to being a Raiderette, she works as a dance teacher, choreographer, and Pilates instructor. Her extensive experience helps bring precision, energy, and professionalism to every performance.

For Jen, being a Raiderette is about more than dance; it's about creating meaningful connections. "What makes me 'me' is the way I bring my heritage and creativity into every aspect of life," she says. "I love making people feel celebrated and heard because we are all deserving of a life we can cherish." Her commitment to uplifting others inspires those around her and encourages young women to pursue their goals with confidence.

A key part of Jen's identity is her Brazilian heritage. "My Brazilian culture is one of the most important parts of who I am," she shares. "From our music and dance to our language and traditions, Brazil will always feel like home." She is proud to represent her culture and use her platform to share it with others.

Jen's ambitions extend beyond performance. She plans to attend law school and pursue a career in sports and entertainment law, combining her interests in advocacy, communication, and the arts. Through her journey, she hopes to inspire first-generation girls to dream big and embrace new opportunities.

When asked what she loves most about Las Vegas, Jen highlights the city's energy and diversity. As she embraces her rookie season, she lives by the motto, "Pressure is a privilege."

Be sure to watch for Jen at the Viva Los Raiders game as she brings her passion, heritage, and enthusiasm to the sidelines.
